Cottages Are Entered At Cavanaugh Lake

During the past week a number of cottages at the south end of Cavanaugh Lake have been broken into. According to reports, very few, if any articles have been taken from the cottages, the damage being confined mostly to breaking windows so that they could be unlocked and raised.

Officers who have investigated the affair have secured no clue as to the identity of the pilferers. It is the belief of many that the mysterious burning of cottages at Cavanaugh and Crooked lakes within the past few weeks may have been the work of the same parties who are breaking and entering the cottages.

M. J. Dunkel reports that upon investigation at his summer home at Cavanaugh, he discovered a number of bullet holes in his garage and cottage. He is offering a reward of $100 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the guilty party.

N. Y. Attorney Seeks Former Resident

We are in receipt of a letter from an attorney in New York City who desires to locate Patrick Roche, or his children. Mr. Roche formerly resided in Kingsmountain, Kells, County Meath, Ireland. He came to this country more than forty years ago and was last heard of at Chelsea, according to the letter.

Mr. Roche, if living, or if dead, his children are entitled to a share in an estate of considerable value. Anyone who can furnish information concerning the whereabouts of Mr. Roche or his children are asked to communicate with The Standard at once.

Celebrate 50th Wedding Anniversary Saturday

Mr. and Mrs. John Riemenschneider celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Saturday by entertaining a company of immediate relatives at their home in Waterloo township.

A sumptuous dinner was served at 12 o'clock, a large wedding cake, attractively decorated with yellow roses, centering the table. During the afternoon, which was spent in a social way, Conrad Lehman, in behalf of the guests, presented Mr. and Mrs. Riemenschneider with a purse of gold.

Present at the gathering were Mrs. Ida Smith, Mrs. John Reul, Mrs. Fred Taylor and Mrs. Hulda Heydauff, of Jackson, and Mrs. Walter Moeckel, of Waterloo, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Riemenschneider; their sons, Lloyd Riemenschneider, of Jackson, and Ernest Riemenschneider and wife, of Detroit; Henry Lehman, of Waterloo; Conrad Lehman, of Chelsea, and Mrs. Ida Barth, of Ann Arbor, brothers and sister of Mrs. Riemenschneider; also twenty grandchildren.

Mr. Riemenschneider is a native of Germany, coming to America from Kurshensen when 14 years of age. Mrs. Riemenschneider was born in Sylvan township, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Lehman, Sr. For about ten months she has been confined to her home with a broken hip.

Mr. and Mrs. Riemenschneider have for thirty years resided on the farm in Waterloo township where they now reside.

St. Mary's Club Win Two Close Contests

St. Mary's came from behind to defeat the strong St. Alphonsus team of Detroit in an overtime game Sunday afternoon, with a score of 21-22. This was far the most thrilling game of the schedule this season. The club's last minute spirit was more than the St. Alphonsus could stop. The game was witnessed by a large crowd.

Monday night the St. Mary's Club took Detroit Edison of Ann Arbor into camp by the score of 15-16. This was another one of the thrilling games that the crowd enjoys—fast, and close. The club was forced to use all its skill and courage to defeat the Edison team.

Next Sunday the St. Mary's Club meets Mason Independents at St. Mary's gym, at 2:30.

SPECIAL ELECTION TO BE HELD NEXT MONDAY

Taxpayers Are Asked To Authorize Council To Borrow Funds For Sewer Completion.

At the special election to be held in the village next Monday, taxpayers will ratify or reject the proposition of authorizing the common council to borrow sufficient funds to complete the sanitary sewer system which was started last summer.

While it is a matter for personal decision, it is the desire of village officials that every voter who is qualified to vote at this special election give the matter serious consideration before going to the polls.

About $45,000.00 has been paid from the general fund to the contractors who are constructing the sewer system, and to complete the improvement and put the streets in good condition $50,000.00 must be raised. The common council decided that the logical thing to do would be to borrow the money and pay the debt from profits which result from operation of the Light and Water Department.

The object of the action taken by the council in asking taxpayers to authorize borrowing money to complete the sewer construction is, if possible, to prevent the necessity of a special assessment, which always carries with it many unpleasant situations. If the profit from operation of the municipal light plant would be decreased, the debt would no doubt be paid through an increase of the village tax rate.

Appearing on the ballots to be used at Monday's election will be the following question:

"Shall the action of the common council of the village of Chelsea in making two contracts for installing sanitary sewer system in said village and the action of said common council in paying to said contractors the sum of $45,020.86 out of the general funds of the village of Chelsea in partial payment of and to apply on said contracts be ratified and confirmed and shall a village loan of $50,000.00 on the faith and credit of the village of Chelsea to pay for the completion of said sanitary sewer system be authorized?"

Taxpayers of Chelsea—no matter how you vote, go to the polls Monday and vote!

Lima Home Is Scene Of Golden Wedding

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Leigh Luick of Lima was the scene of a charming event, Monday, when they entertained about forty relatives and friends in honor of the Golden Wedding anniversary of Mrs. Luick's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Gross, of Lima.

The rooms were decorated throughout in a golden color scheme. Mr. and Mrs. Gross were escorted to the dining table by their granddaughters, Miss Dorothy Gross and Miss Jean Luick. A beautifully decorated wedding cake, made by their daughter, Mrs. Clarence Eschelbach, centered the table. A sumptuous dinner was served.

A feature of the affair was the reading of the wedding service by Rev. P. H. Grabowski, with Mr. and Mrs. Gross as the bridal couple, and Mrs. Agatha Kirk as bridesmaid, who also acted in that capacity fifty years ago. Christian Fry was best man. He was also a guest at the wedding fifty years ago. The wedding march was played by Mrs. P. H. Grabowski. A poem, "A Golden Way to a Golden Day," sent by a friend, was read by Mr. Grabowski. Two songs, "Jesus Leads Me On" and "Take My Hands and Lead Me," were sung.

A purse of $50 in gold was presented Mr. and Mrs. Gross by their children and many other lovely gifts were received. Among those present were Mrs. Katherine Schable, Mrs. Carrie Rank and Christian Fry, sisters and brother of Mrs. Gross. A brother, Adam Fry of Grass Lake, and a sister, Mrs. Frederica Klingler of Chelsea, at whose home the wedding was held fifty years ago, were unable to attend on account of illness.

Mrs. Gross is 72 years of age and Mr. Gross is 82 years of age. All of their seven children and eight grandchildren were present.

$100 Reward

I will pay $100.00 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the party or parties who shot 12 rifle bullet holes through my garage and cottage at Cavanaugh Lake.

Farm Groups Gather
For Annual Meeting

Thirty-seven farmers' organizations will hold meetings at the Michigan State College during Farmers' Week, February 3 to 7.

Many of the groups choose this time to hold their annual meeting and to elect officers. Others schedule a meeting that week to take advantage of the fact that most of their members are on the campus, and it is possible to get a majority opinion on matters of organization policy.

The dairy interests of the state are now represented by six breeders' organizations. The Michigan Milk Goat Breeders' Association is the new member of the group, and its officers say that they represent a rapidly growing industry.

The only beef breed which has no state association meeting on the campus is the Galloway. The other breeds are represented by organizations which carry on campaigns of promotional and educational work. All of the cattle breeders' associations take an active interest in calf club work.

Even the earth has been divided into sections of which the upland soils are one part and mucks another. Both have individual problems, and there are sectional meetings for the men who grow crops on each kind of soil. Many of the organizations will have a banquet on Monday night or a luncheon during the week.

Entertainers To Amuse
Farmers Week Crowd

Music, drama, athletic events, military maneuvers, and after-dinner speakers are all included in the list of entertainment features which will be interspersed throughout the Farmers' Week program, February 3 to 7.

Three bands—the College Cadet Band, the State Vocational School Band, and the Swartz Creek Band—are scheduled to appear on the general program. A rural drama contest will be held in which groups of players from Ingham, Clinton and Eaton counties will compete.

College athletes and members of the Cadet Corps are listed to give exhibitions during the evening meetings. After-dinner speakers will find their opportunities at the twenty banquets.

Merrill, Lynch Co. Sell
Brokerage Business

Announcement was made in New York last Saturday that the brokerage business, retail sales organization, and all branch offices of Merrill, Lynch & Co., which maintains an office in Ann Arbor, will be transferred to E. A. Pierce & Co. on or about February 8, 1930.

Merrill, Lynch & Co. will give their main efforts to the continued development of their investment banking business, specializing in the financing of corporations, and devoting their attention intensively to the improvement of methods for the distribution of products and merchandise at retail.

This development, one of the most important in recent years, marks the expansion of E. A. Pierce & Co., one of the largest brokerage firms in the country, with branch offices in thirty-three cities, into an investment organization of national scope.

This merger in no way affects the customers of Merrill, Lynch, other than to offer them the utmost in both commission and investment services.

OUR NEIGHBORS

Pinkney—One of the ancient institutions of village life is passing from Pinkney probably for ever, in the razing of the old Pinkney livery barn. Mrs. Marion Pearson, of Howell, has purchased the building from its owner, Mrs. Amelia Wilcox, and Monday workmen began the work of wrecking it. The material in it will be used in the construction of a barn on the Thos. Clark farm, now owned by Mrs. Pearson.—Dispatch.

Milan—At least three new courses are being added to the subjects being offered in the Milan high school, and one is being outlined and if the interest is great enough among the upper classes in the course it will also be added. This week closes the first semester of the year, and students and teachers are planning the work for the coming semester which opens Monday morning.—Leader.

Grass Lake—A very pleasant event occurred Monday honoring another one of the older residents of the community, when Mrs. G. W. Gutekunst entertained a group of old friends and neighbors, to commemorate the 80th birthday of her mother, Mrs. Susan Murray.—News.

Brighton—Mr. and Mrs. I. S. Gilbert and Mrs. C. B. Satten enjoyed a very pleasant surprise Monday forenoon, when about ten feathered friends, Evening Grosbeaks, paid Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert a passing call. These interesting birds, which are only occasionally seen east of the Mississippi, are yellow with black tails, and have black wings with white coverts. Their heads are black with yellow over the eyes. The Evening Grosbeak is about the size of a robin, and has a robin-like whistle. It is a native of the mountains of British America, and the northwestern part of the United States, and are very rare.—Argus.

Webb Farm, Aurelius, Wildlife Sanctuary

Bert E. and Lawrence G. Webb, of Aurelius, have dedicated their 160-acre farm in Aurelius township to a wildlife sanctuary for a period of five years, according to information coming from the state department of conservation. When so dedicated and accepted by the state, proper signs are furnished the owners which are then posted on the boundary lines of the lands dedicated. When so posted it is unlawful for anyone at any time to enter upon the lands so dedicated with guns or dogs or for the purpose of hunting.

Sixteen such sanctuaries have been approved by the department during December. It is reported, all the lands included lying in eight southern counties. Among those listed, and among the largest areas, is that of E. Clement Jarvis, Lansing, who has set aside his 222 acres bordering along Grand River for a period of 25 years. — Muson News.

Manchester—It seems good to be shown aged documents, deeds, etc., and J. H. Kingsley brought in a number that belonged to his father the late Charles Kingsley. One was a deed of property executed in 1835, and signed by Andrew Jackson. 50 horsepower six cylinder engine

Not until you drive the new Chevrolet Six can you appreciate what a wonderful improvement has been made in its famous six-cylinder valve-in-head engine. With its capacity increased to 50 horsepower, it has great reserve energy for sweeping up the steepest hills—for swift acceleration —and for sustained high speeds. Its power flows evenly and smoothly. And it is extremely flexible in traffic. In fact—it does everything you could possibly want a motor to do. Yet it is remarkably economical in its use of gasoline and oil. Come in today for a demonstration.

Inland Lakes Are Private Owned Water

By J. C. Gilbert, in a recent issue of The Detroit Times:

"Sorry boys, but you'll have to pull your boat into shore and leave. This is private property," politely explains the caretaker of a Northern Michigan lake to three fishermen who have just pushed off and are about to start casting for bass in the lily pads.

"But the public highway touches this lake where we put the boat in," counters one of the trio.

"That may be boys, but the law says you cannot fish and that's all there is to it," replies the caretaker.

Hunters and fishermen have no right to go upon inland lakes without consent of the land owners, even though the lands are adjacent to and touched by public highways, it has been reaffirmed by the supreme court of Michigan in two recent decisions. Access by a public road gives the public no right. The highway is for highway purposes only.

An unmeasured body of water covering 100 acres, which has no inlet except small spring-fed streams, has an outlet connecting through various bodies of water with a large lake, and through which fish can pass and a small boat can be floated, has a highway around it extending to the low water mark, and most of the land underneath which, as well as the land bordering on it, is owned by one person, is not a public navigable body of water, but a privately-owned pond, according to the supreme court.

The fact that there may be fish in a privately-owned pond, which are not the private property of the owner of the pond or any one else, and that the state may control the taking of fish therefrom, does not warrant trespassing upon such property for fishing purposes. You cannot fish on a private lake, even though a public road touches it, unless you have the permission of the owner. In a recent case one of the defendants contended that, since he reached the water by means of a highway open to the public, he had not trespassed upon the property in question.

"An invasion of a home, a field or a store adjoining a highway could as well be justified," said the supreme court.

It has been settled conclusively that when a man owns a section of the shore he also owns the bed of the lake and the water over it as far as the middle, where his lot joins that of the owner opposite. So that the surface is theoretically parceled out like a subdivision of land. It is possible that each proprietor may even own the air above. The United States Supreme Court has clinched the matter by a decision that the ownership of a lake, stream or pond, if it is not navigable, is vested absolutely in the proprietor of the adjacent soil, who may regard the water and its bed as part of his real estate, and that he may even destroy a boat which a stranger persists in keeping on the lake against his wish.

Should you see a person struggling in the water beyond his depth in such a lake and about to drown, you have the right under the law of paramount necessity to proceed through any private property to effect a rescue.

The Michigan Supreme Court holds that hunting and fishing is a privilege growing out of the ownership of the land. This is known as profit pendere, and is some right growing out of the soil. This looks bad for the fisherman and duck hunter. There is but one solution and that is every sportsman who wants to continue fishing and hunting must buy into a club or association of some sort which will in turn purchase lands on waters such as inland lakes and streams.

I see the hand writing on the wall. Within the next five years the available lakes and waterways of northern Michigan will be in the hands of private owners and unless the fisherman and hunter of today wants to give up his sport he had better buy his bit of land bordering on the water or be disappointed. The lines are drawing closer.

Arthur Wright, Kalamazoo oil station attendant who worked six hours in the recent zero weather without relief, may lose his right leg as a result of freezing. He had not noticed the frost bite until he quit work, he said. Doctors in Borgess Hospital said infection has developed and there is only a bare chance to avoid amputation.

The basketball teams of the village of Pentwater, including high school, girls' team and independent teams use an old boat dock as their gymnasium. The gym has but one stove and there are no dressing facilities. When a home game is played, referee and spectators dress for a skating party or sliding party to ward off the cold.

Jesus our Saviour hated most of all sham, pretense, and unreality. As a church we share instinctively and by inheritance in that divine attitude toward unreality. As the heart panteth after the water brooks," so our hearts thirst for the realities of worship. You dear friends are invited to come and share in this union of effort. Faithfully yours, A. E. Automobile thefts in Michigan during 1929 numbered 7,446, according to figures compiled by H. E. McConnell, head of the title division of the secretary of state's office at Lansing. All but 618 cars were recovered. In 1928 only 5,887 automobiles were stolen, but 1,600 of them were not recovered.

No inquest was held necessary in the death of Irving Beach, 48-year-old farmer, whose body was found in a water tank of a farm six miles west of Jackson. Beach was subject to fainting spells and it is believed he fell into the tank during one of them.

An addition to the plant of Sparta Foundry company, said to be the world's largest manufacturer of piston rings, was announced following the annual meeting of stockholders there. Production will be increased to 200,000 rings daily, it was announced.

MISS IMOGENE BROWN

Miss Imogene Katherine Brown, former resident of Lima, died Monday afternoon, January 27, at the home of a close friend, Mrs. Elta I. Williamson, N. Hamilton street, Ypsilanti. She had been ill for several months and a few weeks ago went to make her home with Mrs. Williamson.

Miss Brown was the daughter of Earl and Louisa C. Brown and was born in Hastings, May 21, 1861. She was a direct descendant of the Chad Brown family, colonist of Rhode Island, who arrived in Boston in the early part of July, 1638, and who became associated with Roger Williams and was a signer of the famous compact which denied religious interference in civil affairs.

Chad Brown followed Roger Williams as the pastor of the first Baptist church in America.

Miss Brown's childhood was spent in Hastings. Later she accepted a position as furrier with a large fur shop in Chicago, where she spent the greater part of her life. Among her friends she numbered Addison C. Thomas, founder of the Associated Press, and served with him on the publicity committee of the convention of the American Association of Port Authorities held in Chicago in 1920, one of the first efforts made toward betterment of the shipping and transportation life of Chicago and other large cities. She was the only woman serving on this committee.

In 1926, Miss Brown came to Lima to make her home with her brother, Homer G. Brown. He preceded her in death 15 months ago. No near relatives survive, but she leaves a large number of friends.

Funeral services were held at 10:30 Wednesday forenoon at the Staffan funeral home here, Rev. A. E. Kurth, of Ann Arbor, officiating, with interment in Oak Grove cemetery.

Question And Answer Dept.

Ques.—Who was the first person in America who used a display advertisement in a newspaper, and when was it?

Ans.—John Mice, of Boston, was the first person in America to use the columns of a newspaper for newspaper advertising. His ad., which appeared in the Boston News-Letter on August 21, 1704, was as follows, and the words were displayed as shown by those in capital letters: "At Mr. John Mice, Merchant, his Warehouse upon the Dock in Boston, There is to be sold good Conglaze of all sizes, from a Spangard Cables of 13 inches, by wholesale or retail."

Ques.—Why is it that some people are always so eager for gossip?

Ans.—Because, with them, the supply never exceeds their demand.

Ques.—Do you know of any one who needs a monument?

Ans.—No. However, we know of a few who will be better off when they are eligible for monuments.

Ques.—My father was born on June 8, 1853, but we do not know the day of the week. Can you tell me in your question department?

Ans.—June 8, 1853, was on Friday.

Ques.—Why is Ash Wednesday, and where did it start?

Ans.—Ash Wednesday is the first Wednesday in Lent. It is so called from the ancient custom of sprinkling on the heads of priests and the congregation the ashes of the palms that were consecrated on the Palm Sunday of the preceding year. The custom dates back to Gregory the Great.

Ques.—Can you answer in your question column if Benedict Arnold had any children? If so, how many, and what became of them? Also what became of Arnold himself?

Ans.—Benedict Arnold, the American traitor, had six sons and one daughter. The eldest son, named Benedict, died in the British army as the result of a wound; Richard died in Canada; Henry died in New York; Edward died while serving in the Bengal cavalry; James became a lieutenant in the British army and died a soldier; Philip, the only daughter, married a British officer, and died in England. Arnold himself died in London in 1804.

Ques.—Can you tell me how the expression "bad letter day" got its origin?

Ans.—In the early prayer books and almanacs the saints' days and church festivals were printed in red ink. Now a bad letter day is any day we look forward to with great pleasure. The majority of the calendars still print the Sundays and holidays in red letters.

Ques.—Where is the Washington elm, and why is it so called?

Ans.—The Washington elm was in Cambridge, Mass., under which George Washington took command of the American army during the Revolutionary war. It was carefully guarded, and all possible efforts made to save it, but it began to decay, and it fell in 1829.

Ques.—I would like to ask in your interesting question department, what is the difference between white, green and yellow gold? And also, which is the most valuable?

Ans.—White and green gold are pure gold given an alloy to produce that color. Yellow gold is without the coloring alloy. There is no difference in the value unless the percentage of pure gold is greater in one than in another. All gold made into money or jewelry contains an alloy.

Ques.—I want to ask in your question department, what will give the most mileage from a gallon of gasoline in an automobile? Going fast or slow?

Ans.—That depends a great deal on the characteristics of the carburetor, which frequently is adjusted to furnish a mixture for different speeds. Eliminating this feature, more force is required to propel a car at great speed, chiefly because the wind resistance increases with the speed.

Ques.—How much would a 500-pound cannon ball weigh at the center of the earth?

Ans.—A 500-pound ball would weigh nothing directly at the center of the earth.

Ques.—Will you answer in your paper how U. S. Grant got those initials when he was not christened with them?

Ans.—It is true Grant was not christened "U. S." Grant's given names were Ulysses Hiram, but when he made application for appointment to West Point the congressman made an error by writing it Ulysses Simpson. "Simpson" was his mother's maiden name. Thus it went on the muster roll without the error being corrected. Then Grant adopted it because he thought Hiram too old-fashioned.

'NO MEDICINE IN THE WORLD LIKE KONJOLA'

Lady Was Told She Must Have Operation—New Medicine Scores Complete Victory

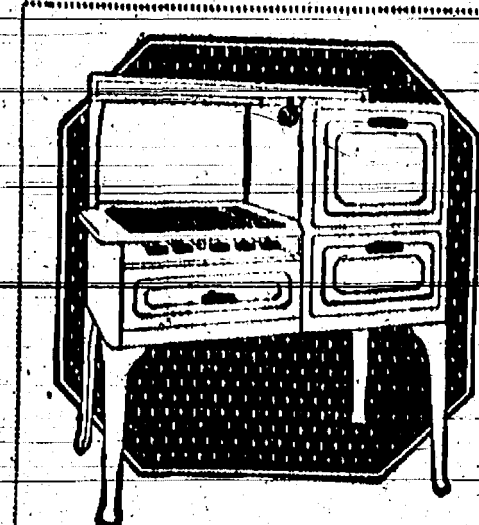

MRS. FRANK LOTSON

"In my estimation there is no medicine in the world like Konjola," said Mrs. Frank Lotson, 180 South Third street, Saginaw. "For a long time I suffered terribly from indigestion, and eventually my heart was affected. Then other troubles developed, and I was told that I would have to undergo an operation. I suffered such agony that I had to walk the floor. I dreaded the operation, and determined to keep on taking Konjola."

"This medicine had greatly relieved my indigestion, and I had a world of faith in it. Well, one day, after I had suffered an unusually bad attack of pain, I noticed a change. It seemed to be the turning point, and thereafter it improved rapidly. Day by day I got better, and today I am not only blessed with fine digestion, but the other trouble has disappeared. Is it any wonder I praise Konjola?"

Konjola is sold in Chelsea at Burg's drug store, and by all the best drug stores in all towns throughout this entire section.

The Kingdom Of Health Is Within You

By C. H. Moody

This is the sum and substance of osteopathy's message to the health seeker. Put the question, "How would you summarize the osteopathic idea in one phrase," and these words would come from an answer: "The Kingdom of Health is Within You."

This essentially osteopathic idea is scientific too. It is not Christian Science, nor any form of mental healing, although it logically includes the potent influence of the mind in healing. It means literally what the words suggest and imply. The teaching of Emerson in "Self-Reliance," of Samuel Smiles in "Self-Help," and of all the growing procession of efficiency and success, and of all the writers who follow in their train is the Kingdom of success is within you; teaching which receives marvelous confirmation in the annals of the men and women everywhere who venture and achieve, and nowhere more than in America, the land where every boy is a possible President.

But this personal potentiality of health is not another form of the self-reliance which plays so large a part in the making of what is generally known as success. It is something different. It is really Nature-reliance. Emerson says to the soul who would conquer, "Trust thyself." Osteopathy gives to the person who would be healthy his first great commandment:

Trust Nature

This great principle of trust in Nature dawned upon the mind of Andrew Taylor Still, the first osteopathic physician, after years of deepening dissatisfaction with the methods of doctoring then in vogue. He himself was a doctor of the old school.

Physicians and patients alike in the mid-Nineteenth Century placed their trust elsewhere. "Trust drugs" was perhaps the principal article in their creed of health and healing. Those who were well took drugs occasionally or regularly to keep them in the path of health. "I always take a dose of Something-Or-Other every Once-In-A-While. It keeps me up to the mark, you would hear one of them say. And when actual sickness occurred, the drug bottle was the first aid invoked. In many a home the medicine shelf or chest or cupboard was regarded by all the family with an almost superstitious awe. It was credited with the qualities of a sort of domestic fount of healing.

Another great article in this old-fashioned creed was "Trust the knife." Surgery was used far too often without adequate reason. Operations were performed with disastrous consequences, when rational treatment and good nursing would have saved the situation, or rather the patient. Surgery is used today with greater skill than ever, but it is not practiced with the recklessness of former days.

Dr. Still, however, discovered after years of study, research, experiment and practice, that Nature has provided, in the living body itself, the materials and powers necessary to maintain health, and to prevent, resist and conquer disease; also that Nature herself heals.

This discovery was right in line with the most progressive findings of modern science, which offers no greater marvel than its discovery of powers hitherto unsuspected in material objects. Radiology, which unfolds the wonders of the molecule, the atom and the electron, is another outstanding example of this.

"The human system is a perfect organism, a universe within itself," says Dr. C. P. McConnell, "and being complete has the recuperative power of Nature within it." In the restoration of health the osteopathic physician works entirely in harmony with Nature, correcting disorders of body and mind upon a physical basis through the application of his knowledge of the laws and principles of the human body, thereby looking upon disease as some disorder of the normal function of the body, and not as an entity to be attacked by some foreign force which would only alleviate, antagonize or overshadow the real trouble."

Help Nature

This is the second great commandment of osteopathy. It is the chief characteristic of all osteopathic effort, whether of the student concentrating all his powers to win the degree of Doctor of Osteopathy in one of the seven colleges of osteopathy, or the regular osteopathic physician practicing in his office or at the bedside, or the surgeons and specialists in our hospitals, sanitariums, clinics and other institutions. In all their great work of maintaining, restoring and improving health, the first and last ideal and duty of the members of the osteopathic profession is to help Nature.

The foundation of this aim is found in the deep-rooted conviction that human beings are built for health and not for sickness. So the initial purpose of all who would master the science and art of osteopathy is to study the body in health. They make it their business to know what a normally functioning human machine is or should be in every part, and how it should behave in all the ordinary activities of living.

It is the same principle as in learning a language. One can't master a foreign tongue by merely reading lists of mistakes and how to avoid them. Apart from actually trying to use the language in conversation, there is nothing like studying the masters of it. Get to know the language as it is at its best, and you will gradually learn how to use it well yourself. So the students of osteopathy, having learned about health in all its phases, turn to the study of disease or departure from health. From familiarity with the normal they pass on to the abnormal.

The training of the osteopathic physician requires at least four years of nine months each in one of the seven accredited colleges of osteopathy, located at Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, Kirksville, Mo., Kansas City, Mo., Des Moines, and Los Angeles. A high school diploma is the minimum requirement for entrance to any of these, except the College of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons, Los Angeles, which requires an extra year of pre-scientific work that must be taken before beginning the osteopathic course.

After graduation, most osteopathic physicians keep up the specially educated actively beginning college by taking postgraduate courses, which are regularly given in different osteopathic centers. Thus they keep in practical touch with the most recent advances in the science.

All this with one great object—not to fight Nature, or master Nature, but to help Nature. Osteopathy in action, or practice, or whatever you like to call it, is just cooperation with Nature. This is the true secret of its success, the sum secret which underlies the success of modern science in all departments.

Centuries ago, and among backward races even today, the general idea was that the forces of Nature were evil powers, at work to damage and destroy humanity. They had to be fought or humanity would go under. But today we are harnessing them, and they work for us, not against us. And this result has been gained by cooperation, rather than opposition.

And the old idea of diseases and sicknesses was that they were demons, alien and powerful, against whom we were little more than helpless. And this idea of disease in a more explicable and intelligent-looking form, still persists. "Fight it! Fight it!" is the thought when sickness or disability comes. But Nature, who worked to keep the body in health, begins the work of restoration and repair the moment trouble occurs. She has her forces right in the body itself, which rally to the "discased" or "damaged" quarter and start the good work right away, just as so many brave citizens of Chicago started to plan and rebuild before the flames of the great fire were extinguished.

This is why a larger and increasing multitude of people turn to osteopathy as a safe and sane method of healing, reliable and scientific, when something goes wrong with the human machine, because the osteopathic physician does not confront Nature with the glaring eye and clenched fist of the antagonist. He says to her, "Let us get together and work for health." And Nature is ready to respond.

Obey Nature

Osteopathy's third great commandment goes out to all health seekers; whether they are in the profession or outside of it, for it embodies another universal principle. Obedience to her laws is the price Nature asks for health.

And disease is the penalty she imposes for non-payment or drifting in to give.

There are many teachers in the field, ready to tell us all about how to obey Nature. Cuts multiply books pour out of the press, and some health magazines have a huge circulation. The very variety of teaching and advice might easily dismay us.

It is a sound principle, however, to seek guidance in this important matter from those whose success in helping Nature to restore health and normalcy to ailing and damaged bodies proves that they have a reliable working knowledge of the practice of health. It is only common sense to turn to those who understand the human machine as a skilled mechanic in the repair shop understands the automobile, for advice on how to run the machine.

The number of people who go regularly to osteopathic physicians for examination, for treatment and instructions on living, increases rapidly, from big leaders in the business and professional worlds who have to meet grave responsibilities and keep important engagements down to the most obscure toiler who realizes that health must be maintained if the family is to be clothed and fed. Athletes perhaps appreciate the effectiveness of osteopathy more than any other class, and the demand for osteopathic physicians among teams and clubs grows apace.

It is very easy for the health seeker to be misled, by reading health advertisements or by the advice of well-meaning friends, or perhaps by following old rules that do not suit his or her case.

The plain fact is that bodies are as varied and distinctive as minds. Each has its own individual structure and ways, its strong points or defects, and the most rational way to get into the best condition is to secure the help of an expert who can examine it, study it and then tell you how to handle it so as to conform to Nature's demands—in a word, to run it efficiently and obey Nature.

There is no magic or mystery about osteopathy. It is just scientific common-sense. Nature has endowed you with wonderful power of health, immunity to disease, of restoration, recuperation and repair when sickness or damage occurs. The kingdom of health is within you, and osteopathy is a splendid development of modern science, by seeking the aid of which you may come into your kingdom.

We were not born to be the slaves of our bodies, but to be masters of them. As in every other kingdom, misrule brings its own punishment. Rebellion and disintegration, revolt and decay, are possibilities. But Nature built them and equipped them with the means to run efficiently and serve us perfectly. She intends us to be healthy. Marion Davies Comedy Brings Storm of Laughs

When Marion Davies slips away and dons the uniform of a French officer in a hilarious scene in "Marianne" which will be seen at the Princess Theatre, Wednesday and Thursday, February 5 and 6, that's all we wanted to see to know that the picture will be cheered by her regiment of fans.

For the minute this vivacious little comedienne is allowed to clown in masculine masquerade, that is all you need to evoke howls of delight. There is nobody who knows how to mimic quite like Miss Davies and certainly, nobody would care to see them if they did—at least not after seeing her elish performance in this new feature.

Mario-Goldwyn-Mayer has given Miss Davies a perfect vehicle for her versatile talent in this new film and as the wistful little French mademoiselle who just can't help falling in love with an A. E. F. buck private she scores new triumphs. Her performance splendidly balanced and her negotiation of the sudden descent from comedy to tragic drama is nothing short of perfect.

Oscar Shaw, New York musical comedy star, is seen opposite Miss Davies as the doughboy sweetheart and he achieves a sparkling characterization behind which a magnetic personality shines glowingly. Robert
