Klager Hatchery To Open Chelsea Branch

Announcement was made Wednesday by Klager Brothers, owners of the Klager Hatchery at Bridgewater, that they have leased the room above the Bulk Garage, corner of North Main and Jackson streets, and will open a branch hatchery here about December 1st.

The Klager Hatchery, owned by M. I. Klager and L. C. Klager, was started in Bridgewater 6 years ago. Capacity of the hatchery has been increased each year until now their capacity is 100,000 eggs.

Deliveries in this territory have increased each year until the volume of business here warrants opening of a branch hatchery to take care of Chelsea and vicinity, according to the Klagers. A 20,000 egg capacity machine will be installed here, and in addition to placing all breeds of chicks on the market, custom hatching will be done.

The task of getting the building in shape for installation of equipment will be started within a few days, and it is planned to start early hatching about December 1st. All early hatching will be done in the local plant and hatching at the Bridgewater plant will be started in February.

The Klagers expect to employ a local man to manage the branch hatchery.

Curbing Projects Are Completed By Village

Work has been completed on the curbing projects on Orchard, East and South streets, and, according to village officials, the total cost will not exceed $4,000.00. Of this amount, one-half of the actual cost of the curbing and gutter will be paid by adjacent property owners, so it is estimated that $2,000.00 will cover the cost to the village for their share of the curbing and the grading work.

The village has received $1,400.00 from Sylvan township road improvement fund, and about $1,300.00 is received each year from the state for highway maintenance within the village limits. These two funds alone more than cover expense of the curbing improvements. Village finances are in exceptionally good condition, in spite of the fact that taxes were reduced 25 percent this year.

The boys were taken to Ann Arbor by local deputies and when arraigned in justice court Bowler was fined $35 and Karcher $15.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our son, Lucien, who passed away 5 years ago, September 8, 1926:
The moon and stars are shining
On a lone and silent grave;
Beneath lies one we dearly loved
But who we could not save.
You left behind some broken hearts
That loved you most sincere;
We never can nor never will Forget you, Lucien dear.

Business Places May Close For Convention

An effort is being made by members of the local American Legion to induce business men to close on Tuesday, September 22, all day, so that all who care to can go to Detroit to witness the parade at the National American Legion convention.

A committee from the Legion attended the meeting of the common council Tuesday night and were promised the support of that body in the matter of trying to influence business men to close for the day.

A canvass of the business district will be made by Legion members during the next few days to determine if such action will be possible. The matter of closing the public schools on that day will be discussed at a meeting of the board of education next Tuesday evening.

The parade of Legionnaires will be a very elaborate affair and it is expected to last 5 or 6 hours. Forming at Belle Isle bridge, the line of march will be Jefferson to Woodward, to Vernon. More than 100,000 Legion men will participate, and three hundred bands will be included in the march. It is estimated more than 2,000,000 people will witness the parade.

It is expected that the convention will bring 125,000 delegates to Detroit. The opening sessions will be held Monday, September 21, lasting four days.

Mr. Lindauer and his hired man, Herman Lambarth, had just finished milking, and the former had stepped outside the barn. Mr. Lambarth received slight injuries when he was pinned under the horse.

Eighteen cows were in the barn, but nine were feeding with their heads down, and thus escaped the effects of the bolt.

Proved He Was No Pickpocket

By ROSE BENTLEY

(By McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

(WNU Service.)

ELEANOR saw the broken chain of her bag dangling from the pocket of a smartly tailored green topcoat. Buttoned inside the topcoat was a tall man, who seemed in a hurry.

She did not cry out—that was not the Bradley way. She simply left the crowded car and followed the man in the green coat. Eleanor's quick, patting feet stopped short as the man suddenly paused under a lamppost and whirled about. His right hand thrust into his pocket as if in search of a weapon, and then remained there. His other hand awkwardly went up to remove his hat at sight of the girl lingering timidly near by.

"What have I got to do with it?" she cried in sudden indignation. "You know it is in your coat pocket this very moment."

Then his right hand came out of his pocket and with it came Eleanor's pretty beaded bag with the cut and broken chain dangling. His face was a study in angry astonishment. She saw that his gray eyes flashed like steel as he faced her.

"I don't know who you are, madam," he said slowly, "but from what you say you seem to be the owner of this bag. Have you formed any idea of how it came to be in my pocket?"

Eleanor laughed sarcastically. "The car was crowded," she murmured remissively, "and it was easy for anyone who wanted to—pickpocket. I mean to cut the handle of the bag and put it into the side pocket of his overcoat. And when the owner discovered the loss of the bag, the car was stopping and she saw a man in a green overcoat alighting and she saw the handle of her bag hanging from his pocket—that is all."

"That is only the beginning," he laughed shortly, "for I did not know the bag was in my pocket until I heard footsteps behind me and turned to see who it was—putting my hand into my pocket as I did so—and voila! The bag!" He put it in her outstretched hand with a little bow. "I hope you will believe me."

"Thank you," murmured Eleanor, longing to flee and very much afraid to in the presence of this cool young criminal.

He stood aside so that she could pass on. They were near the corner, and just around the corner was the pretty row of bungalows where her brother lived. If she could only reach there in safety.

"I am afraid you did not believe my story, after all."

"It was a very—very nice story, indeed," she assured him as she hurried away. She did not go far. Before she reached the corner there was the sound of running feet.

The man in the green overcoat was still standing under the lamppost, and coming swiftly upon him from the rear was another man, also in an overcoat that looked green. There was something in his outstretched hand that he pointed at the first man, as he cried hoarsely:

"Give up that bag, see?"

"What bag?" asked the first youth.

"The dinky handbag—it's mine—it wasn't meant for you—no foolin'!" The hand that held the weapon descended upon the head of the victim.

Eleanor remembered that there was a police whistle in the pretty bag in her hand, and she blew it shrilly.

The man bending over the prostrate form uttered an oath and dashed across the street and straight into the arms of a policeman, who carried him away to jail. Eleanor told her story in a shaky tone, but she did not mention the matter of the beaded bag, and the prisoner was haled into court on a charge of assault.

The police whistle had summoned all the residents of Green terrace, and among the foremost was Eleanor's brother. He went into the crowd gathered about the unknown man. He helped bring him to consciousness, and when he was once more on his feet, the man in the green overcoat suddenly gripped John Bradley's arm.

"Hello, John Bradley! I was on my way to see you!"

"The dickens you were—is it Roger Lewis? Here, Nellie, this is Captain Lewis. You remember how he saved my life in France? Nellie is my sister."

Doctor John hustled his belated and damaged guest toward home, and Eleanor hovered demurely near by. Her thoughts were chaotic. That heroic friend of John's—and she had insulted him—called him a pickpocket!

In the living room Eleanor told her story, and Captain Lewis grinned foolishly as he described his feelings upon finding the strange bag in his pocket. Later in the evening he murmured to Eleanor, "What do you think of my story, Miss Bradley?"

"I still think it was a very good story—a true story, after all."

"Some day—but never mind—that is another story," he muttered, and it was another story indeed—the sweetest story ever told—and she believed that, too!

Try It, and See

"I don't see why having your car overhauled should be such a depressing experience."

"You don't, eh? Well, it was overhauled by a motor cycle cop."

Question And Answer Dept.

Ques.—I want to ask you why it is that a cat's eyes shine in the dark?

Ans.—A cat's eyes will not shine in the dark unless a light is thrown upon them. The reason they shine then is because the membrane layer beneath the retina reflects light much the same that a mirror does.

Ques.—How far back in one's life can they remember?

Ans.—We don't know. Some can remember when the women used to say: "I'll ask my husband about that."

Ques.—Will you kindly tell me if it is true that violin strings are made of cat gut? If so, where do they get all the cats?

Ans.—No. Violin strings are made from the intestines of sheep.

Ques.—I am told that rain can be forecasted by the position of the moon. Is there a dry and a wet moon?

Ans.—There is no such thing as a dry or wet moon. The moon does not exercise any control over the weather.

Ques.—Is the Indian head on the Buffalo nickel supposed to be Sitting Bull?

Ans.—No. The Indian head does not represent any particular Indian. It is a composite design.

Wadsworth Longfellow born, and in what year did he die?

Ans.—Longfellow was born in 1807 and died in 1882.

Ques.—What do the letters "a. m. and p. m." stand for when applied to the time of day?

Ans.—These are the initials of the Latin words "ante meridian" and "post meridian," meaning the former is before noon and the latter is after noon.

Ques.—What is John D. Rockefeller's middle name? Also can you tell me where he lives?

Ans.—"John Davison Rockefeller" is his full name. He lives in Cleveland, Ohio.

Ans.—It cost $52,540,800 to build the Erie canal, which extends from Albany to Buffalo in the state of New York only.

Ques.—What is the Colossus of Rhodes which is claimed to be one of the seven wonders of the world?

Ans.—The Colossus of Rhodes is a gigantic statue in commemoration of the successful defense of Rhodes in his battle with the enemy in 304 B. C. The statue represents the Rhodian sun-god Helios.

Ans.—According to United States statistics about 150,000 babies are born every day, while about 100,000 persons die daily.

Ques.—When a young man asks for a kiss what should I say?

Ans.—We can't imagine a young man who will be so timid as to ask.

Ques.—Can you answer in your question column if thunder is a myth?

Ans.—No. There is a popular belief that thunder will sour milk, but it is a myth.

Ques.—Can you tell me in your question column what causes the Aurora Borealis? And also if it is the same as the "northern lights"?

Ans.—No satisfactory answer has yet been furnished as to the cause of these polar lights which are known as the Aurora Borealis, and sometimes known as "the northern lights." However, there is no doubt that they are the result of electricity in the upper regions of the atmosphere, but how produced we are unable to say.

SIX CYLINDER SENTENCES

By DR. JOHN W. HOLLAND

A friend is one who does better by us than we deserve. The most dangerous nation in which to live is prostration. The wise youth works to turn his vision into verity and victory.

It is only what we mean to do that gives much meaning to our lives.

There is no slavery so galling as the chains of a self-formed bad habit. If God had intended men to look and walk backward, He would have reversed our back-bones.

Get Up Nights?

Make This 25c Test

Use this easy bladder phytic to drive out impurities and excess acids which cause irritation that results in leg pains, backache, burning and getting up nights. BU-KETS, the bladder phytic, containing buchu, juniper oil, etc., works on the bladder pleasantly and effectively as castor oil on the bowels. Get a 25c box (5 grain size) from your druggist. After four days, if not relieved of getting up nights go back and get your money. You are bound to feel better after this cleansing and you get your regular sleep.

Obligation That Hurts

It is not a great misfortune to oblige ungrateful people, but it is an unportable one to be under an obligation to a vulgar man.—La Rochefoucauld.

OUR NEIGHBORS

MUNITH—A Sports Day celebration will be held in this village on Saturday, September 12. A good program of various games has been prepared for the event.

SALINE—Fire believed to have been started by tramps or chicken thieves Thursday night destroyed two large barns on the farm of A. E. Springer, about a mile south of this city. The damage was estimated between $10,000 and $12,000 and was covered only by about $3,000 insurance.

SALEM—Rev. J. J. Halliday, for many years pastor of the Federated church at Salem, preached his farewell sermon last Sunday morning. During the past three years, Rev. Halliday drove from his home in Delaware, Ohio, every week, a total of 350 miles, which somewhat impaired his health.

TECUMSEH—Fire, of undetermined origin, that started in a straw stack, destroyed a large barn, tool shed and granary on the Arthur Doye farm located two and three quarters miles southeast of Tipton, Saturday afternoon. The loss, partly covered by insurance, is estimated at $10,000.—Herald.

MANCHESTER—The attention of many drivers and others has been attracted the past week by the sight of something very rarely seen in this country, it being an Italian marble statue of a group representing the group after the crucifixion of our beloved savior Jesus Christ. They are erected on a mound in the cemetery just east of the chapel in the Irish Hills. The work was done by a celebrated sculptor in Italy for Rev. Fr. Joseph Pfeffer, the pastor of the church here. Hundreds of people have visited the cemetery and perhaps thousands have stopped their cars to view it. The date of its dedication has not been announced by the Bishop.—Enterprise.

BROOKLYN—With the departing of the other summer visitors, the flight of some of our bird friends is noted with regret.—Charles T. Greene who has been watching the martins, says that they took off on the 29th of August—this year, staying a little later than last year when they left on the 12th. The birds had been making quite a fuss for several days. They would band together, make short flights and return. It is possible that the cooler weather of last week cut down their food supply of bugs and insects which they take from the air. The birds are known to spend their winters in Brazil, taking their flight across the West Indies and gulf of Mexico.—Exponent.

How My Grandfather Tells Of Treeing Bear

We print herewith an adventurous story as told by the grandfather of Miss Almada Beach, a resident at the Methodist Old People's Home. The incident happened while the writer was a resident of Vermont. The story follows:

"I treed a bear once. It was in the deep woods, and in the night, almost literally as black as Egypt. I had been to the grist-mill and had the flour on my back which the miller had made from the two bushels of wheat. We had no horses in those days, there wasn't a horse within the limits of the township, and as for taking the oxen, there were no roads. If the grist went to the mill therefore I had to take it myself. But the distance was not more than four miles, and a weight of 120 lbs. upon such shoulders as mine were then, was not a serious matter. But several things hindered me that morning and I got a late start. When I reached the mill there were many grists ahead of mine and so it happened that night had come on before I could set out to return home. The ferryman noticed the darkness of the night when we were crossing the river and remarked to me as we parted: 'You will find it black as ink when you get down into the timber—what will you do if you meet a bear?' That question can be turned about," I replied. "What will a bear do if he meets me?" But I can't say that I felt as much confidence as my light reply indicated. We bears about, that I knew, and I had no weapon to defend myself against such an attack. I had an unfailing guide to keep me from getting lost and that was the noise of the Falls. I knew that if I kept down the river and within ear-shot of the rapids, I should come out after a while in my own clearing.

"So I groped my way along, step by step and got along better than anyone unfamiliar with the ground could have done. I had come at least two-thirds of the distance and was in my own woodlands not a mile from home, when a peculiar sound gave me notice that an animal of some kind was climbing a tree in my immediate vicinity. Instinctively I slipped my burden from my shoulders to the ground and without a moment's loss of time, I was at the foot of the tree. Then the full realization of the situation dawned upon me. I had treed a bear, for no other animal known to these woods could tear off and throw down upon me such a shower of bark and the size of the tree showed that he must be an unusually large one.

"And another thing was apparent—it was curiosity and not fear that had led him to climb the tree, for as soon as he made out by some process best known to bears what I was, he wanted to be on the ground again and started to come down. But I saw that this movement must be resisted by all the woodcraft I was master of. As has happened in many a great battle in the world's history, my chief advantage over him was one of position. I was standing on the ground while he was up a tree. I was right end up while he was wrong end down. For bears can't come down a tree as squirrels do, but must back down, stern foremost. He had to come at me with the end that couldn't bite, and was entirely defenceless and this utterly demoralized him and proved his ruin. For by belaboring the tree with such pieces of broken sticks as I could get my hands on in the darkness and by growling and shouting at him as often as he attempted to come down, I could drive him up again. It was plain that I had him. He was my bear.

"But in a different way he had me too. I could drive him up the tree but I could not make him go into the top and from time to time renewed his attempt to come down and the prospect of spending the night in that predicament was not a cheerful one and the idea of leaving the tree and getting out of the woods with a whole skin seemed preposterous. I would have to leave my flour at least and he might like meat better than meal.

"It seemed the most natural thing to halloo. It did not seem possible that anybody else could be out in the woods upon such a night but it gave me something to do and seemed to quiet the bear. I halloed and listened by turns and was most agreeably disappointed after a time to hear in the distance a faint answering call. The shouts came nearer and I had the satisfaction of recognizing the voices of two of my neighbors, who, returning from the bed-side of a settler who was sick, had, fortunately come within hearing distance and had turned out of their way to find out what I wanted. The bear hearing additional voices and recognizing the potency of numbers, crawled up into the treetop and became quiet.

"The newcomers, both of them experienced hunters, regarded the situation as a novel one. They were of the opinion that my footsteps had aroused the bear from sleep when I was close upon him, and if bears, as is likely, can see a little better in darkness, it is probably that he failed to make me out on account of the burden on my shoulders, and incautiously ascended the tree to get a better view, when my promptness in getting under him kept him there and saved my life.

"The greatest wonder was that the fierce brute did not force his way down the tree in spite of me. Indeed the idea that he would still do so, took such hold of the two men that they declined to take my place at the foot of the tree while I went to my house for supplies. As my experience had given me confidence that I could keep up the fight another hour it was arranged that they should go while I stayed in my old place. Upon their return with a blazing torch the adventure was virtually ended. The bear was thoroughly intimidated by the fire and hid himself away behind the large branches of the tree until morning when I shot him."

THE GOING TOERS

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE day has need of many a deed. The world has duties great and small.

There is not one, if promptly done, That does not help, and help us all.

But there are some to whom they come.

Who try to make a virtue, too. Of dreams they dream, of things they scheme. The things that they are going to do.

They proudly tell how wisely, well. They mean to live some later day. But every task that life may ask Is ours to do, and right away.

They like to boast of things almost. The work they never carry through. Things partly done, or not begun. The things that they are going to do.

Yet things unmade and things delayed Are not a virtue but a sin. There is no worth in things of earth We talk about, but not begin. And, at the last, when life is past, And heaven strikes a balance, too, The things we did will all be hid By things that we were going to do.

BETWEEN MEALS

EUROPEANS usually eat more meals a day than we do but Americans have won for themselves the reputation of eating between meals. The American can ask in amazement how the English woman can eat bread and butter sandwiches and tea every afternoon at four and then be ready for dinner at seven or half past, while the English woman can be justifiably amazed at American motorists who stop for ice cream in the course of a morning motor ride.

The habit of eating between meals is usually acquired in childhood and in many cases is due to insufficient or inadequate provision at regular meals. Some children crave between meals as a result of sheer boredom. The child whose vacation hours are occupied with congenial tasks or absorbing games will go from breakfast until lunch time without thinking about food. The child with nothing to do is pretty sure to appear in the kitchen by ten or eleven asking for bread and jelly, a piece of cake or something else that is sure to take off the edge of his midday appetite.

Doctors usually insist that for the child over five or six, three meals a day are adequate—insisting on no between meals. Actually three meals a day frequently fail to satisfy. When this is the case a definitely arranged snack at ten in the morning or a regular four o'clock "tea"—consisting of bread and butter and milk or fruit juice is far better than between meals taken at random.

THE GOING TOERS

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THIS day has need of many a deed. The world has duties great and small. There is not one, if promptly done, That does not help, and help us all. But there are some to whom they come Who try to make a virtue, too. Of dreams they dream, of things they scheme, The things that they are going to do.

They proudly tell how wisely, well, They mean to live some later day. But every task that life may ask Is ours to do, and right away. They like to boast of things ahead, The work they never carry through, Things partly done, or not begun, The things that they are going to do.

Yet things unmade and things delayed Are not a virtue but a sin. There is no worth in things of earth We talk about, but not begin. And, at the last, when life is past, And heaven strikes a balance, too, The things we did will all be hid By things that we were going to do.

BETWEEN MEALS

EUROPEANS usually eat more meals a day than we do but Americans have won for themselves the reputation of eating between meals. The American can ask in amazement how the English woman can eat bread and butter sandwiches and tea every afternoon at four and then be ready for dinner at seven or half past, while the English woman can be justifiably amazed at American motorists who stop for ice cream in the course of a morning motor ride.

The habit of eating between meals is usually acquired in childhood and in many cases is due to insufficient or inadequate provision at regular meals. Some children crave between meals as a result of sheer boredom. The child whose vacation hours are occupied with congenial tasks or absorbing games will go from breakfast until lunch time without thinking about food. The child with nothing to do is pretty sure to appear in the kitchen by ten or eleven asking for bread and jelly, a piece of cake or something else that is sure to take off the edge of his midday appetite.

Doctors usually insist that for the child over five or six three meals a day are adequate—insisting on no between meals. Actually three meals a day frequently fail to satisfy. When this is the case a definitely arranged snack at ten in the morning or a regular four o'clock "tea"—consisting of bread and butter and milk or fruit juice is far better than between meals taken at random.

"Branding" Babies Ends Mix-Ups

SCIENCE, through the ultra-violet ray, has discovered a means of safeguarding the identity of newborn babies and it was tried for the first time when the infants of two baby girls were "branded" by means of the ray, upon their thighs immediately after their birth. The experiment was performed at the Shore Road hospital in Brooklyn, where the infants also were placed on the arms of the babies' mothers to make doubly certain that there would be no mix-up in the identity of the babies.

The rays of a large violet ray machine are directed upon a tin disk in which have been cut the proper initials, which is placed against the baby's thigh. It requires four minutes to bring out the identification marks, which remain for ten days.

The illustration shows Nurse Theresa Mure-Aurele "branding" Baby Irma Wagenfeld, daughter of Mrs. Jeanette Wagenfeld, who is looking on.

FLATHORN'S TROUBLES

"DID I understand you to say that Flathorn, the Moose, is having troubles?" asked Buster Bear of Honker the Goose, who had just come down from the Great Woods of the North to the pond of Paddy the Beaver in the Green Forest.

Honker nodded. "I see your ears are just as good as ever they were," said he. "That is what I said. Flathorn is having troubles aplenty. At least he was when I left on my way here. It seems queer that such a big fellow as he should have anything to worry about, but when I last saw him he was so worried that he was thinking of leaving all his favorite places because he didn't feel that they were safe any longer.

"Why not?" demanded Peter Rabbit, his eyes round with curiosity and his long ears standing straight up with interest. "Is he afraid of traps?"

Buster Bear, Honker, Paddy the Beaver, Frisky Porky, and Juniper the Hare laughed right out. "What do you think Flathorn is like?" asked Honker.

"I haven't the faint idea," replied Peter quite frankly. "You said he is big, but so is Buster, and he is afraid of traps. I don't see anything to laugh at."

"There isn't," replied Buster kindly. "It is a trick as us funny to think of anyone setting traps for old Flathorn, but as you've never seen him, of course you wouldn't understand. He's bigger than me. He's the biggest of all the people who live in the Great Woods."

NUTTY, NATURAL HISTORY

BY HUGH HUTTON

THE WISCONSIN POTTLE

THIS strange four-legged biped inhabits the shores of Lake Michigan north of Milwaukee, and causes the farmers endless trouble by raiding the banana orchards because of its fondness for banana skins. Its mischievous nature is somewhat overbalanced by its ability to lay half omelets instead of eggs, and if fed sufficient potatoes it can be induced to let the bananas alone.

A walnut and filbert again prove useful in making up the body and head of the pottle. Cloves for feet, a toothpick tail, split navy beans for eyes, and a popcorn nose do for the rest. The horns are also cloves, and everything is stuck together with chewing gum.

The Old Gardener Says:

Rock gardeners searching for choice plants should not overlook the hills, for there are several low-growing kinds that are perfectly at home in such gardens. One of the best is the Siberian coral lily, which rarely exceeds a height of two feet and has lovely deep scarlet, although very small, flowers. Groups of the Elegans Lily, particularly the dwarf variety, Prince of Orange, are excellent in the rock garden, and Lilium concolor is so hardy that it will thrive in Canada. These lilies should be planted the coming autumn.

Michigan Department of State

Frank D. Fitzgerald
Secretary of State

WEEKLY NEWS BULLETIN

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 9.—Officials of 14 states have accepted the invitation of Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald to attend a conference on reciprocal motor vehicle law enforcement, to be held in Detroit on September 15.

The Secretary of State is directed by a resolution of the last legislature to confer with the jurisdictional bodies of neighboring states toward a fair plan of reciprocity in the enforcement of motor vehicle laws of the various states in respect to their application to the owners and operators of motor vehicles going from one state to another, and to lend every effort toward providing a plan of uniformity of motor vehicle legislation with the neighboring states and to report any tentative plan to the 1933 legislature for its consideration.

The first conference was held in French Lick, Ind., and the subject of truck license legislation was discussed. The Detroit meeting will consider the question of uniform weight tax fees. New York and Pennsylvania, which did not attend the first meeting, have accepted invitations.

A wide diversity of commercial activity is shown by the new corporations which recently have been granted the right to transact business by the Department of State.

A $50,000,000 heating corporation, a fire alarm manufacturing company, a $3,000,000 drugstore merger, a finance company, and a securities company have been given permission to operate with their main offices in Detroit.

A new hotel in Ann Arbor was incorporated as were automobile sales agencies in River Rouge and Grand Rapids, while a $150,000 farm products company in Pontiac and a $20,000 nursery corporation in Zeeland were authorized to transact business.

All automobile drivers who secured their licenses before Jan. 1, 1925 have only seven weeks in which to secure new licenses.

Chinese Medical Ethics

The statement that the Chinese pay physicians to "keep them well" is fallacious, but has this foundation in fact: Upon feast days or holidays Chinese families make substantial gifts of money to their physicians. These gifts are expected. They, however, do not pay large fees for actual medical attendance.
