Conservation Officer Writes Appreciation

Appreciation for the attitude taken by the Chelsea Fishing and Fish Propagation Club toward the State Department of Conservation is expressed in a letter written by F. A. Westerman of the Fish Division and received by A. K. Collins, secretary-treasurer of the local club.

The letter follows:
Lansing, Mich., Nov. 30, 1931.
Mr. Art K. Collins,
Chelsea, Michigan.

Dear Sir:
We have your letter of November 19th enclosing a copy of the Chelsea Standard and appreciate very much the attitude of the Chelsea Fishing and Fish Propagation Club toward this Department, particularly with reference to its efforts to replenish and maintain good fishing in the lakes in the vicinity of Chelsea.

At the present time we are carrying on a distribution of perch fingerlings and trust it will be possible to include a distribution to Washtenaw county lakes. These fish are being secured at several locations as they migrate from the Great Lakes and are being distributed by our trucks working out of several of the hatcheries.

Very truly yours,
Dept. of Conservation.

F. A. Westerman, Fish Div.
Fifteen cans of perch, 10 cans of bluegills and 5 cans of large mouth bass were received Saturday morning for planting in Mill Lake. On Tuesday, 30 cans of perch were received for planting in Coganough Creek.

Sugar Loaf, Cunningham, Four Mile and Island lakes.
A total of 49,500 fish have been secured from the Department of Conservation this year for planting in nearby lakes, exclusive of a large supply secured by the Crooked Lake Fish and Game Club for planting in that lake.

Genuine appreciation for this co-operation from the State is felt by every resident of the community who is interested in the sport of fishing, not only for local people, but for the attraction of bringing countless thousands of anglers to our community from other localities.

SHOW AND BANQUET HELD FOR 4-H CLUBS

The Chelsea Kiwanis club sponsored the fifth annual 4-H show and banquet for the club members in the Chelsea area last Saturday, November 28, and Monday, November 30. The show was held in Sylvan town hall on Saturday from 10:30 a. m. to 7:00 p. m. All the 4-H members of the Busy Two in One of Dexter township, Industrial Three in One of Dexter and Lyndon townships, Lyndon 4-H club of Lyndon township, and Lima 4-H club of Lima township participated. Canning club members exhibited canned products. Food study club members exhibited their note books, and representative foods which they had learned to prepare. Livestock members exhibited a balanced ration for their animals for one day. The two poultry clubs exhibited birds from their members' flocks, and also simple home-made equipment, and rations. Potato club members exhibited potatoes, garden club members exhibited garden produce, bean club members exhibited beans, and 4-H Forest Rangers exhibited representative exhibits of their work.

At the banquet on Monday evening, attended by about two hundred club members and their parents, announcement was made of the local champions in each club, who will represent their clubs in their respective projects in the contests for county champions. These championships were not determined solely on the basis of the exhibits at the Saturday show, but were selected on the basis of all-round 4-H club activities during the whole summer by the various members.

It was generally conceded by those that had attended the show and banquet ever since it was started in 1927 that the event this year was even more successful than the preceding years. Special features of the program included music on a handsaw, by Trumbull Jackson, of the U. of M.; music by the Lima 4-H orchestra; readings by Ira J. Smith; a 4-H play which was written by Olney Outwater and given by Lima 4-H members; a poultry feed mixing demonstration by Harold Barth and Harold Sias; an address by Paul G. Scheible of the Kiwanis club, and a talk by Ted Balmier, 4-H club member. The judges of the show, Mrs. Stanley Proctor and Cyril Spike, each gave a talk. Barney D. Roepcke presided as toastmaster. Leaders of the respective clubs, and County Club Agent A. B. Hagen, awarded the certificates of achievement, and announced the champions.

A complete list of winners at the show on Saturday, and of local champions will appear in The Standard next week.

A special show for the benefit of the Senior class of Chelsea high school, will be presented by the managers of the Princess Theatre next Monday evening. Tickets are now on sale and can be secured from high school students.

Of twenty speaking parts in the motion picture which will be presented, "Huckleberry Finn," four are carried by well-known juvenile players—Jackie Coogan, Mitzi Green, Junior Durkin and Jackie Searl, all of them continuing the roles in which they won favor in "Tom Sawyer."

Several adult players seen in "Tom Sawyer" again play the same characters in "Huckleberry Finn," the second of the Mark Twain classics to come to the screen. Clara Blandick will again hold sway over the Sawyer boys, as Aunt Polly. Jane Darwell continues as the efficient Widow Douglas, Huck Finn's guardian angel.

Two veteran actresses, Cecil Weston and Lillian Harmer, were signed for the roles of Mrs. Thatcher and a companion of Widow Douglas. Miss Weston brings an experience of thirty years on the stage and screen to her difficult character role. Miss Harmer was a prominent stage figure for seventeen years before she entered pictures.

Nearly two hundred children, of assorted ages, have parts in the picture. The juvenile cast of "Huckleberry Finn" is much larger than that of other "Tom Sawyer" or "Huckleberry Finn" pictures.

Michigan
Department of State

WEEKLY NEWS BULLETIN

Frank D. Fitzgerald
Secretary of State

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 2.—The constantly increasing part the automobile has played in Michigan's state finances, is shown by a study of records of the Department of State.

The first state tax upon automobiles was levied in July 1905. For the last six months of that year, the automobile weight tax produced $6, 500 in revenue. In 1906, this fell off to $4,088. From then on, the state's revenue from automobiles increased steadily until 1911 when it passed the $100,000 mark for the first time. In 1915 the state received $451,046 but the 1915 legislature made radical changes in automobile laws, making the tax proportional to weight.

This new law became effective in 1916 when the weight tax produced

$1,699,650. Since then the automobile weight taxes have increased rapidly.
In 1920, the state received $5,482,853;
in 1924 the tax produced $11,261,282;
rising each year until 1930 when the weight tax added $21,247,760 to the state's revenue.

This year up to and including November 25, the weight tax receipts were $20,181,690. In 1915 there were 114,845 automobiles in Michigan while in 1930—the last year for which there are complete statistics—1,162,578 automobiles and 168,004 trucks were registered.

Under state laws, all weight tax revenues are used either by the state or county highway departments for road construction and maintenance.

It appears probable that Ohio,
Indiana and two or three other middle western states will ask their next legislatures to adopt motor vehicle laws similar to those on the Michigan statute books. It was announced by Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald. This is the outcome of the resolution adopted by the 1931 legislature, asking the Department of State to confer with officials of other states for the purpose of securing more or less uniform motor vehicle laws in nearby states.

June's Theory Was Correct

By JANE OSBORN

JUNE sat before the desk in her rather shabby little bedroom, pen in hand, a sheet of note paper spread before her. She intended to write to Rodney Mages, but she found herself absentmindedly writing the initials J. E. D., "Jim Edgerton Darrow," she whispered to herself.

Yesterday had been her birthday and Rodney had sent there to the girls' boarding school, where she served as an instructor, a box of gorgeous red roses and a brief little note in which he had told her of his love and begged her to become his wife. Jim had let the day pass without even a note—yet June knew perfectly well that he had known it was her birthday. Obviously Rodney loved her—and just as obviously Jim didn't. During a wakeful night June had almost decided to write accepting Rodney's proposal—there was so much about him that she admired, so much that she almost loved.

It was late afternoon. She picked up an afternoon paper and idly began to scan its pages. There was a section of one page devoted to a rather juvenile sort of advice to the lovers. Sleepily June began to read. There was an answer to a young woman obviously suffering from the pangs of unrequited love. "I am sorry to say," ran the advice, "that there is no way to make a young man fall in love if he is not disposed to do so. The best thing for you to do is to try to forget. Perhaps there is some other young man who really cares for you, who is really much more worth while."

June didn't read the rest of the answer but her sleepiness vanished, and in its place came a deep feeling of resentment toward the woman—or man—who wrote the advice. Of course, it was possible to make a man love you. June had read once that any girl, providing she was not positively repulsive, could win the love of any man who was not already in love. June firmly believed it. If the girl did not succeed it was because she did not use the right tactics. Take Jim and herself. Of course she could make Jim love her, because she knew she was attractive and she knew further that Jim was not interested in anyone else. She had already tried to win Jim's love by making him jealous—by being cold and indifferent. She would now try the effect of making him think she really did care for him. Without difficulty now she went to her desk and wrote a little note to Rodney, in which she told him as kindly as possible that while she was very fond of him she did not want to marry him. She mailed it and then called Jim up at his office.

"Hello, Jim," she said archly. "You know yesterday was my birthday. Somebody sent me some lovely red roses, but you didn't even send a card." She paused almost regretted at her own boldness. Jim was making excuses. He had been very busy. He didn't think she cared about him anyway. There was a note of fluttered self-love in his voice that June did not exactly like, but this made it all the easier for her to go on. "Really, I was only teasing you," she said. "I didn't expect you would remember only it's terribly dull here at the school, and if you should ask me to go to the movies tomorrow night I think I'd say yes."

The next afternoon came, a box of orchids with Jim's card enclosed. On the back June read—"With sincere apologies for dear little June." There was a tone of conceit about it if decidedly irritating to her.

The following Sunday afternoon Jim came for her in his car to take her motoring. Somewhere on a lonely country lane he stopped the car and drawing June to him kissed her and only laughed, rather triumphantly, when she protested.

"Poor little June," he said, when he had let her go, and sat there stroking her hand. "I'd always liked you a lot. But, great Scott, I never thought you cared so much for me. You know I wouldn't do anything to make you unhappy. I don't know as it's a good plan to become actually engaged now—it might make trouble for you at the school. But suppose we have a sort of trial engagement. We'll play around together this winter—and in the spring if you still care for me the way you do now—why, I'll get you the nicest engagement ring you ever hoped to have."

June did not show her resentment—she did not even withdraw her hand. Instead, she looked straight in his eyes, eyes that beamed with gratified content.

"Jim, dear, I hate to hurt your feelings. I've always liked you a lot. Only, as you say, a real engagement would be awkward."

Jim looked a trifle nonplussed. "Perhaps if I'd come right out with a proposal, you'd have liked it better," he grinned.

"Perhaps," agreed June.

Back in the school June lost no time in telephoning to Rodney. She simply asked him to come to see her at the school as soon as he could, after supper. He was waiting for her in the dreary drawing room when she came up from the dreary dining room. She sat beside him on the little divan in a corner of the room.

"Rodney, I made a mistake," she said. "I really love you, but it took a little time for me to find it out."

Our buyer found one of the very largest importers of these goods in the receivers' hands, and he was liquidating his stock at 25 to 33 percent less. Most retailers place orders for their Christmas Handkerchiefs with salesmen that call on them, but we find that we can get much, very much better prices on the market by shopping around. You may expect values at least 25 to 50 percent better now than you will find usually!

Pennzoil Introduces Winter Lubricant

Following the introduction of Pennzoil's motor oil to motorists in every state in the Union and the good of favorable comments pertaining to the unusual ability of this Pennsylvania oil to lubricate at sub-zero temperatures, President C. L. Suhr of the Pennzoil Co. stated today that "Our Winter Pennzoil as it is now produced is probably the greatest forward step in the manufacture of a winter lubricant that has ever been made since the so-called cold settling was first discovered."

Mr. Suhr said that the problem confronting many marketers of Pennsylvania oils was one of decreasing the pour test properties so that the oil would flow as easily at zero as at fifteen to twenty degrees above that point. He pointed out that it was a well-known fact that heretofore a Pennsylvania oil with a cold test of about fifteen to twenty degrees above zero was a better lubricant than the same oil of either higher or lower cold test and particularly in the case of higher pour tests because oils of the latter description would not flow to the oil pump. "Our process," Mr. Suhr continued, "has been modified to overcome all difficulties and objections and as a result Pennzoil flows at zero. Some manufacturers are making a special oil for winter and must caution their customers not to use it in warm weather. Not so with Pennzoil; it is just as good a summer oil in all grades as it is in winter."

Pennzoil is distributed in Chelsea by Staebler Oil Co., Mr. J. A. Park, Manager, reported it available at all Dixie stations.

China's Great Wall

Cheap Transportation
Two Offhand Killings
Worry Is Necessary

Los Angeles. Imagination is stimulated by the story of Chinese-Japanese fighting "at the point where the Great Wall of China runs down to the sea." Those ancients that built the Great Wall could not imagine flying machines that would soar above it. They thought they had forever shut out barbarian hordes.

Impossible for us to imagine how the walls that we build, of industry, law and property protection, will amount to a few centuries hence.

That Japanese one day would fly over the Great Wall did not occur to the Chinese that built it. That every one day will not be the most important thing in the world, or all important, cannot be imagined those that build laws to protect and keep out the hungry, and distressed.

Nobody quarrels about salt water fresh air, there are plenty of both everywhere. The day is coming when nobody will quarrel about property or take any special interest in it. There will be enough for everybody—enough food, good books, music and leisure, the only things really important.

Many men accumulate money, wear themselves out and lose their characters doing it, as the tumbler who carries his energies storing up treasure in his storehouse. Men will not accumulate forever. That is something to be thankful for.

The change will come when the intelligence of men and their science are devoted to providing enough for everybody instead of too much for a few.

You have read of a flight by Charles Butler, British, from England to Australia, 14,500 miles in 9 days 1 hour 2 minutes, beating the world's record by an hour. More interesting, a new jet in the world's smallest airplane, weighing about 500 pounds, and the trip cost him only $170 for fuel and oil, less than 2 cents a mile.

Already automobiles make travel so easy that railroads will be compelled to revise transportation methods or abandon short hauls for freight, all bids for passengers.

Recently George Blestein, known everybody in his city, traveled on Buffalo, N. Y. to Atlanta, N. C., a Ford automobile, visiting this place. The one that carried two passengers could as easily and cheaply be carried five. The trip made one day, about 300 miles, cost for a day and oil, $5.10. For five passengers it would have been one-fifth of a cent a mile. For the two passengers was one-half a cent a mile.

A most valuable asset is the railroad rights of way, which nothing can ever replace. But they must be utilized with modern methods at modern speed and modern economy.

Two Mexican students, one the son of the President of Mexico, sat in their car in Oklahoma, on their way from an American college to their Mexican home. Two deputy sheriffs stopped them, and for some reason, they had to be explained, shot them both dead. A third Mexican in the car was not injured. That display of favoritism has not been explained.

A jury acquitted the two officials, who said they thought the ill-behaved young Mexicans might be gunmen or bootleggers "or something." Mexico's government announces its intention of bringing a civil suit for damages against this government.

It ought to recover the highest damages possible and will do so if it is fortunate enough to appear before a judge and jury with a sense of justice.

This region, like others fond of saying short and wise, reads this one in its type: "The secret of happiness is in letting the other fellow do the worrying."

The secret of happiness, perhaps, is the secret of success. He who lets the other fellow do the worrying usually works later for the other fellow than that worrier. Whoever believes in success can be achieved without worrying has not known success.

Michelangelo had to worry about building contractors that supplied him with inferior materials in the building of St. Peter's, and complained of the pope.

Christopher Columbus had to worry about his frightened, treacherous sailors, that in a few days more might have thrown him overboard.

Every man with a good idea must worry about those that would steal it from him. All progress involves worry.

Come out for the Olympic games next year if you like excitement with your travels. California is widening highways for the automobile rush. Roads are able to any when you reach them. You saw the earth, at least in this is really important—the United States from one ocean to the other.
