Telephone Co. Tells Of Michigan's Advantages

Appearing in the current issue of "The Michigan Bell", monthly magazine published by the Michigan Bell Telephone Co., is an editorial entitled "Our Great Winter Playground", which we believe to be well worth reprinting for the pleasure of our readers. For the past four summers this company has consistently advertised, in more than 250 Michigan newspapers, the advantages of Michigan as a summer playground, and advertising schedules call for "Michigan in Winter", which will appear in newspapers sometime this month.

The advertising program of the Michigan Bell Telephone Co., which has not been reduced in any way during the present economic readjustment, calls for facts concerning our great state, realizing that anything which helps Michigan helps us all. Thus, in addition to the splendid service which this great company is rendering to many thousands of patrons through their local and long distance telephone service, they are continually striving for the betterment of the entire state by "advertising Michigan."

Following is the editorial appearing in the February issue of their magazine:

Michigan provides unexcelled facilities for the enjoyment of outdoor winter sports of every kind, and it is unnecessary to seek them in other sections of the country.

The topography of Michigan is as interesting in winter as in summer, because of its variety, with almost uncounted ideal locations for hunting, skiing, tobogganing, bob-sledding, snowshoeing and other sports. Old-fashioned sleighrides are in vogue again, and our thousands of lakes provide unlimited opportunity for skating and other ice sports. Michigan long has been famed for its natural iceboating facilities and for its winter regattas. Some of the country's greatest indoor and outdoor ice skating carnivals have been held here. All those sports, as well as winter horse-racing, fishing through the ice and other healthful pleasures can be enjoyed within quick reach of both large and small cities. At many Michigan points, gay, colorful winter carnivals are held each year.

The development of Michigan as a winter playground is both practical and feasible, and each succeeding year our own people as well as many visitors, achieve a greater realization of the exhilarating lure of this great state.

Unusual Basketball Attraction Coming

An attempt will be made to revive amateur basketball in Chelsea. A representative group of players have formed a team to be known as the Chelsea Young Men's Club. For the inaugural game they have selected the All-American College Girl team, which will appear here in the public school auditorium Wednesday evening, February 17.

The boys consider themselves fortunate in securing this team, which is making a tour of Michigan, coming from Columbus, Ohio. Their sponsors have given satisfactory assurance that the girls are properly chaperoned and are skillful athletes. Their record indicates that they are not always successful against the men, but that they have always been able to give a good account of themselves. Between halves the girls engage in a fencing exhibition, which in itself should prove interesting.

The game will not only be a novelty but promises to be a fast one.

Earl Y. Poore Will Be C. P. S. Superintendent

At a meeting of the board of education held Monday night, Earl Y. Poore, formerly head of the Shelby (Mich.) public schools, was tendered a contract as superintendent of the Chelsea public schools for the 1932-1933 term. Mr. Poore comes to the Chelsea school system with the best of recommendations and was chosen from a list of seventy-five applicants.

SCOUTS OBSERVING ANNIVERSARY WEEK

The Boy Scouts of America at the present are in the midst of their Anniversary Week celebrating the twenty-second birthday of the Scout movement in America. In the Washtenaw council, comprising Livingston and Washtenaw counties, the week opened with religious services on Sunday.

Each Scout attending the church of his choice, usually in uniform. On Monday evening, the entire body of Scouts in America united again in pledging themselves to the Boy Scout oath, led in the radio broadcast by Star Scout Bob West, son of Chief Scout Executive James E. West. There are now over 908,000 Scouts and leaders in the United States, while 5,887,000 men and boys have been connected with the movement during its 22 years of existence in America.

On Tuesday evening, over 400 Scouts, leaders and parents attended the annual Scout banquet at the Barbour gymnasium of the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor. Following a series of entertaining musical numbers, Mayor H. Wirt Newkirk of Ann Arbor presented Coach Fielding H. Yost with the "Silver Beaver" award for distinguished service to American boyhood. Coach Yost has been Scout Commissioner of Washtenaw council since its beginning, and was largely responsible for the building of Camp Newkirk, the Boy Scout camp near Dexter. Veteran Scout leaders also presented to Hackley Butler of Ann Arbor for twenty years' service.

Scouting to Prof. Paul B. Samson of Ypsilanti, president of the Washtenaw council, for fifteen years' service; William Inglis of Ann Arbor for ten years' service; and to Supt. Otto W. Haisley of Ann Arbor for five years' service. One of the most interesting features was the music furnished by Truman Jackson of Buffalo, New York, playing a saw with violin bow in a most unusual manner. Scouts from each troop gave a brief report of the outstanding features in their group.

Those from Chelsea who attended the banquet were Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Brunner, son John, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beigel and son Foster, Roy and Hubert Ives, James, Nicholas and Charles Panaritis.

On Thursday evening all Scouts in Washtenaw and Livingston counties have been invited to attend a jamboree at 7:30 at the Ypsilanti central high school. A program of mass games, moving pictures and selections by the Ann Arbor Boy Scout band will be closed with a general swim for all of the boys in the Ypsilanti central high school pool.

Many troops are planning to present programs in school and church during the remainder of the week, while some groups will entertain parents and friends at special troop meetings.

On Saturday afternoon, all Scouts are invited to attend the session of the Red Cross swimming and life saving course for Scouts and Cubs, at the Michigan Union pool in Ann Arbor. The boys who cannot swim fifty yards with ease will arrive at 1:30, while the advanced swimmers and life savers will enter the pool at 2:30.

On Saturday afternoon there will occur another event of unusual interest. At 4 o'clock, the Scouts will assemble at the Cabin on the Huron River drive, near North Main street, Ann Arbor. This cabin was formerly the property of Detroit Scout Council, and was recently presented to Washtenaw Council, for use by Scouts of Livingston and Washtenaw counties.

By a recent vote of the council at its annual meeting, the Cabin will now be known as "The George Washington Scout Cabin." After the dedication ceremonies, a lunch will be served to all present.

According to Wallace Watt, Scout Executive, when Anniversary Week activities are over, he will be in position to start Cub work in Chelsea.

Missionary Drama At M. E. Church Sunday

At the Chelsea Methodist church Sunday evening, the Wesley Players of Ypsilanti will present the thrilling drama "Larola," by Helen L. Wilcox. This is one of the most gripping stories of Indian life with its strange caste system. In "Larola" there is a story founded on facts, or a series of incidents in which is seen how Christ breaks the bonds of caste and brings to all the truth that "at last all India shall be free."

The characters of the drama are as follows:

Ellnor Daggett—Wife of the missionary.
Walter Daggett—An American missionary in Palinow.
Nanak—A servant in the mission.
Marna—A Hindu Bible woman from Chabassa; an old friend of Larola.
Larola—A widow of Chabassa.
Lela—A young Brahman woman; wife of Chunder, who has become a Christian; a new neighbor of the missionaries.

Professor Binder Sen—Of the General Assembly College in Calcutta; a friend of the missionaries.
A Brahman Woman—A neighbor of the missionaries.

The incidents take place in the living room of the mission bungalow at Palinow in Bengal, India. The characters will dress to represent their parts.

The Isham Trio will present musical numbers.

Question And Answer Dept.

Ques.—Will you please answer in what year did Queen Victoria of England die?

Ans.—Queen Victoria died in 1901.

Ques.—My wife gave me a for not going to church, and said some day I would be shoveling coal for Satan. Would I have to work like that if I went there?

Ans.—No. Inasmuch as your wife gave it to you, you should be boss if you get there.

Ques.—Has there ever been such a thing as a cross between a human being and a lower animal—the ape, for instance?

Ans.—The Smithsonian Institute says there is no authentic record of a cross between the human race and the lower animals.

Ques.—How many honey bees are there in the average swarm, and what percentage of them are drones?

Ans.—The normal colony of bees contain between 15,000 and 30,000 workers, while the drones may number from a few dozen to several hundred.

Ques.—I wish to ask you if birds use the sense of smell or sight in their quest for food?

Ans.—Birds depend altogether on the sense of sight in getting food. They are endowed with the power of sight by which they can see very small objects at great distances.

Ques.—Can you tell me why fish is not considered meat?

Ans.—This distinction between fish and meat grew up in the Catholic church. In the book of Acts it says: "Abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled." From the early days of the church this passage was interpreted as referring only to the flesh, blood or marrow of such animals and birds as constitute flesh meat. Fish, mollusks, crabs, turtles, frogs, and such cold-blooded creatures were not considered as coming under the ban.

Ques.—I wish to ask in your question column if a person marries in South Carolina, which does not grant divorces, and separates from his wife in that state, can he be legally married in another state without a divorce?

Ans.—No. He would first have to get a divorce in the state where he desired to be married or in some other state.

Ques.—Will you please answer if the United States furnishes a home for the vice-president the same as it does for the president?

Ans.—No. The Vice-President must seek a home for himself and family during their term of office in Washington. Usually they live at a hotel.

Ques.—May I ask in your good question column why hunters are called Nimrods?

Ans.—Nimrod is mentioned in the Bible (Gen. 10:9) as Ham's grandson, and is spoken of as a mighty hunter before the Lord. Different interpretations are put on this, but Nimrod has since become the romantic name of the hunter.

Ques.—To settle a dispute will you be so kind as to tell us in your question department if the huckleberry and the blueberry are one and the same?

Ans.—They are not the same, despite the fact that in many parts of the United States "huckleberry" is indiscriminately applied to both huckleberries and blueberries. They belong to entirely different plant families. The blueberry has numerous minute seeds, while the huckleberry has 10 nutlets.

Ques.—Is it true that members of Congress ever wore their hats during their sessions?

Ans.—Yes. In the early days of our government it was customary for all Congressmen to wear their hats during the sessions of the house. The practice was discontinued when Andrew Jackson became president.

Ques.—To what class of foreigners is "hunkies" applied. Also who are the "wops"?

Ans.—Such terms as "hunkies", "wop", "dago", "polack", "canuck", etc., should not be applied to anybody. They are only slang terms of contempt or derision applied to foreigners from southern Europe. They are terms not used by people who have any regard for the feelings of others.

LINCOLN

IF SUCCESS were easy, the world would have no failures. . . . Taking Abraham Lincoln as an example, upon the occasion of his birthday anniversary, the Great Emancipator had many failures to add color to his great humanity. Lincoln failed in business, failed in politics, and failed in the romance of his life.

But in the end, he came out a victor, and stood supreme and immortal upon the tombstones of his failures.

In these times of depression, when even the strong-hearted are prone to quake, this new Lesson of Lincoln should be of great inspiration. As you err and make mistakes, so do you grow. A machine has none of the frailties of the human being, and a machine can never be President, or a leader of humanity.

The silver lining around every failure of life is the lesson it teaches us, and the strength it gives for more daring effort. Discouragement could never have disheartened Lincoln, else he would not have achieved the greatest things of American history.

You who suffer from business depression, who often wonder if the fog up the road bespeaks a blind alley, do not give up your obdurate determination to weather the storm of what is simply an economic cycle. Tomorrow is going to be a better day for business and for you.

Such would have been the lesson preached by the Emancipator, and Man of Courage.

Electric Cooking Cost!

Now no one can tell you what it will cost you a month to use an electric range any more than he could guess what your grocery bill would be. But we do know that the average family will use from 100 to 125 kwh.

Of course you can waste electricity just as you can waste any other kind of fuel. And we usually find that the woman who wastes electricity would waste gas, coal, oil, wood—or cobs if she didn't have to carry them herself.

However, taking statistics from a bulletin issued by the United States Bureau of Labor, an electric range at the average rate per kwh. would cost the average family $49 a year, which is $10.93 less than the average family's cooking fuel costs!

Fine Program Ends At Michigan State

East Lansing, Feb. 10—With a constantly mounting attendance, which was climaxed with a crowd of 8,000 people who heard Governor Wilbur M. Brucker speak at the Thursday evening meeting, another successful gathering of the farm clubs concluded on Friday, February 5, at Michigan State College. The total attendance for the week was estimated at 19,000 by Joseph F. Cox, Deap of Agriculture.

An increased attendance at agricultural economic and farm management meetings and at sessions where tax problems were discussed indicates that farmers are greatly interested in methods of improving the business practices on their farms.

Close competition in the many shows, with an especially fine corn show, gave College visitors an opportunity of seeing the types of livestock, grain and potatoes that win ribbons at large shows and top prices on the large markets. Hundreds of Michigan farmers are owners of ribbons awarded as prizes for their ability in producing fine farm products and in preparing them for the show ring.

The rifle shooting contest drew 300 entries; 20 competed in the sheep shearing contest in which the winners sheared sheep in less than five minutes; and hundreds of partisans of the teams entered in the pulling contests cheered their favorites on.

The homemakers programs ran continuously throughout the week with capacity audiences at the daily meetings. Michigan husbands will not know their own homes if all the methods of adding to home's attractiveness are adopted as suggested by the speakers on this program.

Crops and livestock programs drew normal crowds, and sectional programs held by other College departments show that the farmers' interest in production problems has not decreased.

MEDUSA'S HEAD

by Josephine Daskin Bacon
Copyright, By D. Appleton and Company
W.N.U. SERVICE

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—In concern over the disappearance of the young and beautiful wife of her wealthy friend, Cranford White, Aaron Glanzer engages Motherwell, private investigator, to find her. A note from the missing woman warns her husband not to call in the police, saying she "hoped to come back."

CHAPTER II.—It is a strange coincidence that the day after his devotion has been the talk of New York, Mr. Glanzer is in the city. He is known to have with him a remarkable jewel, the "Medusa's Head," but her mother, Coggeshall, thinks she had little else of value.

CHAPTER III.—It is found that Mrs. White has all her jewelry with her. Coggeshall talks seriously of her mistress being "worried."

CHAPTER IV

At the door of the next house he met an interesting youth with a fat box, who whistled as he watched a game of marbles.

"There'll be a lady coming out fairly soon," he said, "I don't love her."

"No, sir," said the messenger boy, still whistling. Mr. Wells stopped at a newsstand and bought an afternoon special. Sitting in a corner drug store he saw through the sea of advertisements the office of a young man who would carry a bag in the street.

"Found a woman's pocket book," said the messenger boy, "Returned to owner on proper identification (the real)."

Mrs. Wells jumped into a taxi, but he did not drive to the address shown in the paper. Instead he took a decent if rather second-rate hotel on the West side and emerged from his washroom without spectacles or mustache, which made a vast difference in his appearance. When he came down from a room to which he owned the key, apparently, his hat, stick and neck scarf were by no means those of a young man who would carry a bag in the street.

The address led him to a dingy but perfectly neat little office where a typewritten sign announced that multigraphing of the highest quality would be executed promptly and with special accuracy. A brisk, young-old lady answered his knock and sent a teen gray-eyed glances through him.

"Can you describe the pin, please?" she asked.

"I can do better than that," said Mr. Motherwell pleasantly. "I'll show it to you," and he took from a little fold a colored stickery from some stationery.

"Is that it, by any chance?" he inquired.

The young lady's features relaxed. "Well, I'm glad to get that off my mind," she said, and going to a black display case on the wall she took a pin the size of a dollar.

"I told mother I'd hear from it," she said, with some satisfaction, "but she said I was crazy. I know it wasn't worth such a lot of course, but it was so unusual I was sure it was in the family or something."

Mr. Motherwell gazed calmly at the Head of Medusa in his palm. He even tossed it lightly, and the woman's eyes were fixed at this moment on the did so.

"That's the idea, exactly," he said, "my sister will be too delighted for words. I can't thank you enough. When did you find it? She missed it Wednesday, didn't she?"

"That's it," said the multigrapher. "I told mother that just because whoever took it got mad and threw it away, when she found what it was, that doesn't say it wasn't valuable to somebody. I suppose, you see, she thought it was real."

"Real?" he stammered.

"Emerald or something. The idea, that size! That's what I always say about that imitation stuff—they make it too big, don't they? Not that a lot of it doesn't get sold, all the same, at the department stores, there seems to be a regular craze for it, those queer, ugly, oriental things, especially."

"Department stores, oh, yes," Mr. Motherwell repeated, and the writhing, wondrous snakes, that were Medusa's hair, laughed wickedly at him.

"Chinese, isn't it?" she asked, "or mean of course, it's meant for that."

"Yes," he answered, "I believe it is. But my sister didn't throw it away—she lost it."

"Oh, yes, your sister lost it all right, but the one that stole it threw it away," she corrected him. "I was sitting in the window, watching out for mother. And a woman came out from over there somewhere—I didn't notice—and jumped into a taxi that hardly stopped. I sort of watched her for a moment, and when she did she took something out of a bag and threw it right out of the window! It fell in the mud that was in the gutter on this side. I wouldn't have thought much about it, you know, but she looked so mad, I think she was at the time. Perfectly furious, she looked!

And just then I saw mother coming along and I ran down to help her. Over her shoulder, as we stepped on this sidewalk, I remembered the green button, and I looked down, and there it was! I thought it was quite pretty at first—I'm dreadfully short-sighted without my glasses—then I saw those dreadful snakes. So I feel bad, too, but I'm not afraid to throw it away like that. But all the same I do think it's worth more than a green button."

She paused and blushed. His sister had liked it, anyway!

"I told mother I thought it was worth more than a green button," she said. "Look at all the work on it."

"I'm sure it is," he agreed. "It's worth that to my sister to get it back! She wanted me to."

"Oh, I couldn't think of it—please!" cried the multigrapher, embarrassed.

"I told mother anybody's best to pay for the three insertions, and it didn't cost me anything. I was sure it was a family piece."

He bowed politely.

"As it happens," he said, "one arm has only eight of multigraphing to do, every now and then, you may be sure I shall remember this, Miss—"

"Miss—," she said, gratefully, "I've always said so, thank you."

He left for the three insertions briskly.

"What did this thief think like, by the way?" he asked.

"I didn't say so! All I could say was that she was white as a sheet, and had a green ribbon around her head. And she looked dreadful!"

He took out of his pocketbook a little photograph of a popular actress whose resemblance to Cleopatra White was remarkable in New York.

"Did she look like that?" he asked.

"Goodness, no! Miss Cleopatra, a sweet, really, that's a young woman. This was rather an ordinary looking woman—I don't remember."

She had a black suit on and a motor bonnet.

She was evidently visualizing the little scene to the best of her ability.

"Oh, yes, all alone. The cab was going along looking for fares, and she ran out and stopped it."

"From which place?"

"I couldn't say at all. It might have been anywhere."

He studied her list. He seemed to have endless leisure, this young man.

"There—just when where that woman's coming off, I should say," she said suddenly.

He looked, his jaw dropped slightly.

"Oh, there," he said, "I know a man over there. I think I'll hop over and see him good day, Miss Fleishman. I'll be in again about that multigraphing."

At the corner he caught up with the errand boy, still looking along with his hat box.

"Where'd she go?" he asked, passing him and starting to look a little more.

"Went to a second floor back," the boy answered. "She made a row in there and started coming out. Talked to herself."

"Keep right after her, Bill," and ran easily up the steps the woman had just come down.

nothing. "How can I tell who was here, Bill?"

"Ah," said Motherwell sympathetically, "I suppose they do worry you. And women don't always understand—"

"There you said it!" the youth burst out. "Women! Just had one in here."

"Women! Just Had One In Here. Lord, I thought she'd knife me!"

Lord, I thought she'd knife me! She and her messages. Wouldn't I give me to her? I had 'em? What's Mrs. Gray to me? Mrs. Pink or Mrs. Blue? You'd think the professor ran a post office."

"Oh, well," Motherwell remarked maliciously, "you know women to leave messages for each other."

"I see old Wentzel taking 'em, too!" said the youth scornfully, and accepted an excellent cigarette. "Nothing else to do of course—and him called up by the Rockefeller push and the 'S' and all the big bugs—why, I've worn out with it! Look at that table there," and he pointed to a heap of bundles and bottles on a heavy table by the door.

"All right to be called for—boys and messengers paying over it, to get 'em back if the professor can't get 'em himself."

"Yes, well, I tell 'em, 'prove up on it and take it away. If that's the idea, you can't see him. Give me a voucher and get out. Some of 'em aren't even tagged—look at that thing!"

He pointed to a good-sized box wrapped in purple paper. Motherwell stared at it. Half the wrapper had been torn off, and the torn piece he had seen the night before, blistered and scabbed, in Mr. Glanzer's olive, blue-veined hand. He drew a deep breath.

"For the love of Mike, that's mine!" he said excitedly. "That's my specimen! Do you mean to say the professor hasn't touched it?"

The youth shrugged his shoulders elaborately.

"There you are!" he said, "as bad as the rest! Now, what's your trouble? Where's your receipt? Want it back?"

"Receipt?" Motherwell cried in vexation. "Why should I have a receipt? We were to go over it together. I can't wait a moment. We must have the report today!"

"The youth picked up the box, balancing it scornfully.

"Not even an address!" he said. "That's a new looking package, isn't it? That's a nice responsibility I have on my shoulders!"

"What's your name, anyhow?"

"My name is Wells," said Motherwell, his eyes snapping, "and it's a piece of oxen. It's from Glanzer and Company. Call Mr. Glanzer right up and get it O. K. if you want, but for heaven's sake give it to me—I must get somebody else to test it, that's all."

"The youth whistled.

"Well, you can search me!" he said thoughtfully. "Let's have a look at it, citizen, you say?"

He took out a pocket knife, poked through the tissue wrapping and disclosed a veined, milky men of oxen, with a gold rim just edging out.

"I guess you win," he said, "give me a receipt for it, will you? There can't be two of 'em. And the nine again, will you?"

Motherwell wrote and thrust the box under his arm carefully.

"Where is this laboratory?" he asked suddenly. "I'd like to have a try at the professor, myself."

"I'll bet you would!" the youth agreed suddenly. "But you won't! Non-ambly one. He'd not be disturbed, he isn't."

Motherwell sighed.

"Oh, well, all right," he said. Then his face lightened. "Haven't he got an assistant or something?" he asked hopefully. "Could I see him?"

"Back," said Motherwell suggestively, "with a beard."

"Lorrie!" This one's sandy-haired and a little mustache. He's working with him now. A lot of people want him, too. I'll tell you. Schaffner's got a dinner date at Bruce's—know that Italian place? You might catch him there. Try it, anyhow."

"Thanks, I will," said Motherwell, "and or were you here Wednesday morning? I didn't see you."

"Motherwell went slowly down the stairs.

"Now, why did Coggeshall lie about that paperweight?" he asked softly of the taxi cab he sat in. "Did she come for it? Then why not ask for it, outright. Or was she looking for the Medusa? Or did she throw the woman who stole it threw it away. And kept the rest, of course. She didn't dare keep it—knew it would be identified. Because Coggeshall is shielding her madam—she'd keep the Medusa, if anything. Didn't even ask for her—unless madam called herself 'Mrs. Gray.' But if Coggeshall knew that name, then she knew the whole plan from the beginning, and lied all along. Besides, that woman in the cab wasn't young. Did they fool her on the jewels, and give her only the 'Medusa'?"

"Well, here's the paperweight and there's where she went, anyway. Now let's look up Old Prezels."

Sitting an hour later in his club in front of a chop and a baked apple he was called to the telephone booth and surprised to find himself talking to Mr. Glanzer himself. No, he had not gone to his old friend, who had begged him to stay in New York. The doctor was with him, and a nurse. Had Mr. Motherwell any further ideas as to the business they had been discussing?

Mr. Motherwell had, and would send Mr. Wells around to see him shortly.

And soon the young man with his bag and shell-rimmed spectacles was in the library of Mr. Glanzer's city house, and the torn box was on Mr. Glanzer's knees, and the Medusa in his olive hand.

"You know, you're rather extraordinary, Motherwell," said the jeweler. "Only lucky, sir," the young man answered frankly, "really! A child would have followed up that ad in the Herald. The rest just broke my way."

"I was told that things often broke your way," said Mr. Glanzer. "It seems they do. Who is this Wentzel?"

"Perfectly all right, sir, as far as I can find. He's a Swiss. Asst. Int. Stands very high. He worked out some explosives during the war, and they had him up because he was looked for one or two formulas, of which one was just about to be used when the armistice was signed. He's very strong on airplanes, and car-like products generally. He's a member of the Chemical Engineers club and has lectured at Columbia. Has a laboratory in Jersey. They've got his whole record."

"You're sure he went there?"

"Here's the only thing Coggeshall tied up, sir. The paper isn't absolutely. I think she wrote it there."

"And left this for Coggeshall?"

"Probably. Coggeshall seemed to want a message, not a package. Didn't even take it."

"You think she was Mrs. Gray?"

Motherwell shrugged. "Maybe. But who is the older woman? She's the one we want, sir. She didn't get enough pay, you see, and she was alone. Mrs. White was with some one—some one who was burying her."

"And telling her what to say, you think?"

"Absolutely, sir. And making her go. 'You still stuck to that, don't you?'"

"Yes, sir, I do."

"And yet, Motherwell, what was the hurry? The jewels were all out of the way, before a very quiet, plain dress was arranged, a lock was called, not to use her own car. What is there sudden in all that?"

"Something turned up," said Motherwell.

"Or somebody," said the jeweler. "Motherwell turned on him impatiently.

"There you are, sir," he cried, "there you are! You see, you've got this all clear in your mind—I know you can't help it, but you have. And you can't really think, you see. You've got a complete picture."

"What do you mean?" the older man asked shortly.

"Why, excuse me, sir, but it's so clear what you think!"

"What do I think?"

Motherwell sighed impatiently.

"See here," he said. "Here's a girl. Married at what—twenty-two—twenty-one? That's near enough. All accounted for since then, and perhaps from when she got to Paris. Perhaps before. But a lot can happen to a girl before she's twenty-one. Before she's nineteen. Before she's eighteen. Well, suppose it's happened, happened and forgotten."

"Now, here she is, happy and secure. Brilliantly secure. Everything going her way. And then—the old story. It turns up. Or, of course, he turns up. A lover? Perhaps. A husband? Maybe. Maybe she thought he was dead. Maybe he was. Oh, yes—it happens, you know!"

"Now in that case, it's blackmail, or it's just plain principle—principle and conscience—or it's sheer funk. Of course, everything she has should give up. But maybe that's not enough. Maybe he just wants her, and there's no bribe at all."

"The jeweler's mouth fell open. "I tell you, yes!" the young man cried. "That's what was about women! It's happened! 'Anybody, who went. And didn't want to. Because she wanted to come back. That's according to you, she wants to eat her cake and have it, too! And all you want to know, now, is how much she'll take! Isn't that so?"

Glanzer threw up his hands.

"I'm afraid it is! And you're any other picture, you extraordinary boy?"

"I can't see any picture at all," said Motherwell. "I'm not at all."

There's no—obvious one. And of course it may be the actual one. I don't say that. But I do say that if I let it get in my way, I couldn't do anything. You think Coggeshall knows all about it. Now, I don't. I think she knows something, a little, a lead, a clue. But she's afraid to tell it. Why? I think she had no idea that her mistress had gone. I think she hasn't any idea where she has gone, but believes she can find something out from Wentzel. I believe if she knew, she'd tell me."

Mr. Glanzer shook his head.

"Well," he said, heavily, "my head is too old a head to make a new picture, perhaps. But Cleo would never have parted willingly with this," and he stared, half-bitterly, half-delightedly at the frozen smile on the wonderful lips encased by the tiny, teasing serpents. "Whoever took that from her, look the thing she loved the best, Motherwell."

"I'll put this away," he added, and opened the box. Lifting out the heavy, opalescent half-globe of onyx, he shook it free from the tissue wrappings.

"I gave her that last Christmas," he said. "See, the frame has slipped."

He gathered up a handful of paper from the bottom of the box and stared questioningly at the young man.

"What's this?" he asked and shook it free.

A dark blue flash from the paper, and as something slipped from his hand he seized another roll of it, and shook it out. A three-strand pearl necklace fell on his lap.

"What?" cried Motherwell, and falling on the rest they unrolled them: cool emerald and bleeding ruby, and here work of platinum and spray of icy diamonds.

"Good heavens above!" cried Motherwell, "they're all here!"

The great jeweler stared at him, pearls in his hand, a collar of rubies flaming on his trouser leg.

"And I left them in the checkroom at the club," the young man gasped. "And she left them in a half-wrapped package on an office table!"

said Mr. Glanzer slowly. "Poor Cranford! My poor old boy!"

The Perfect Paragraph

"When a man marries a woman he must expect her to be the captain of the ship," says a writer. He, of course, is only her second mate.—London Humorist.

Seeing Straight

A man may think, if he will, that two eyes see no more than one; or that a gangster sees always more than a looker-on; . . . but when all is done, the help of good counsel is that which sees business straight.—Bacon.

In Spare Moments

One thing that renders conversation difficult is the fact that much of it is carried on by people who, having a little spare time, think they will proceed to settle questions that have puzzled the world for centuries.—Washington Star.

Six-Foot Fat Travels Far

Eds recently landed at Aberdeen, Scotland, are said to be the largest ever seen in British waters. One was over six feet long and weighed 81 pounds. Because of their size they are believed to have traveled as strays from the South seas.

Sensible Advice

"It was my father's last wish," concluded a winsome lass to the Portland Express, "that I should marry a tall man. Now, I find myself madly in love with a very short one. Would you consider it a sin if I married him?"

"No," counseled the editor. "It is better to have a loved man than never to have loved a man."

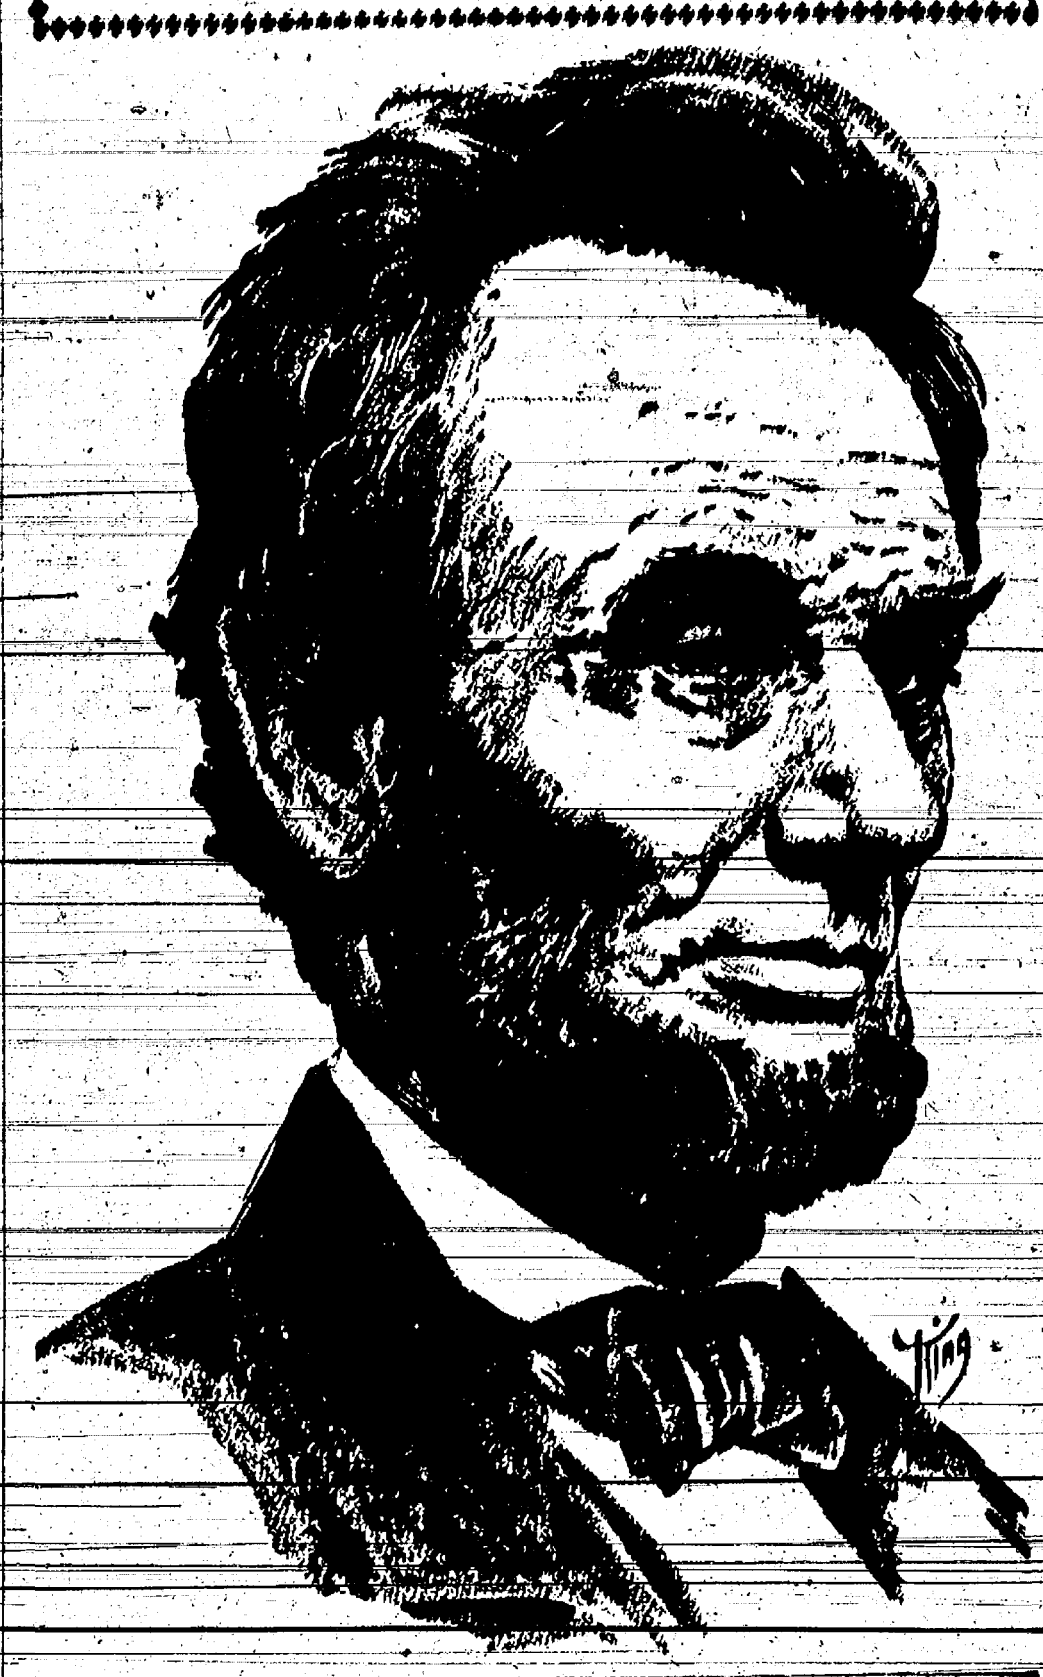

First Typewriters

Typewriters were introduced as a means of enabling blind persons to write. The first typewriter made its appearance in 1714, but it was not until 1867 that Poncelet and French introduced machines with printed letters to their possibilities for general use. After years of experiment Mr. Charles Sholes produced a practical machine for general use, which was put on the market in New York, in 1874.

Dolphin Brings Trouble

Butler in the Philippines that the killing of a dolphin had being bad luck was borne out, according to the crew of the Bustanante, when John Javilla, attorney-general, recently shot an eight-foot specimen during an ocean trip. When Javilla took the dolphin on board the crew warned him, but he laughed at their fears. Soon afterward there was a fire aboard ship. Then followed engine trouble, and finally the vessel was caught in a storm.

Simple Beauty Marks Rebuilt Tomb of Lincoln

Shrine at Springfield New More Worthy of the Great President.

These bronze statues were obtained by the state through the efforts of Mr. Hammond and H. H. Cleveland, director of the state department of public works and buildings.

The sculptures, Daniel O. French, Fred Torrey and Leonard Crunelle, are each represented by two models, white marble and bronze. The statues are each a masterpiece of art.

Supreme Effect in Chamber.

Beautiful as are the rotunda and the galleries, the supreme effect is attained in the sarcophagus chamber. There the pillars and frieze are of French black marble—as dark as midnight, with walls of St. Genevieve golden vein marble. On the upper portion of each jet black pillar there is a bronze wreath.

The ceiling of the chamber is covered with gold leaf, and the room, like the rotunda, is lighted indirectly by lights hidden by an ornamental cornice.

There over the spot where Lincoln's body lies beneath many feet of concrete has been placed a new sarcophagus of solid marble of warm red hue, and it is the simple monument.

Abraham Lincoln, 1809-1865.

Directly above what formerly was the north door, but now transformed into a window covered with a wrought-iron grill, there is cut in the marble this famous tribute to the emancipator.

"Now He Belongs to the Ages." Across from the sarcophagus in a crypt sealed with slabs of marble rest the bodies of Mrs. Lincoln and three of their sons, Edward Baker, William Wallace and Thomas.

Flags Form Honor Guard.

Arranged along the semicircular wall of the sarcophagus chamber, flanking the sarcophagus, there is an array of flags.

In the place of honor, at the right of the sarcophagus, stands the Stars and Stripes. The official standard of the seven states in which the Lincoln family lived from the time of their arrival in America until the end of the emancipator's career—Massachusetts, New Jersey, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois—occupy the next seven positions.

President Hoover personally installed the flag of the President of the United States.

Looking at Lincoln

February 12 means Lincoln. On that day of this nation and many in other nations honor the name which embodies struggle, achievement, patience under an avalanche of rebuffs and the smiling peace of humor brightening a persistent upward fight for a great ideal. All these things about "Lincoln" when February 12 comes around.

His Great Task

Lincoln rose out of the soil and state of life in a Middle West community to attain the greatest heights. He held the nation together until it was finally joined in such a way that it will separate again.—Exchange.

When the victory shall be complete—when there shall be neither a slave nor a drunkard on the earth—how proud the title of that land which truly claim to be the Mecca and the cradle of both these revolutions that shall have ended in that victory.—Abraham Lincoln.

PRAYER AGAINST WAR
O Lord, since first the blood of Abel cried to thee from the ground that drank it, this earth of thine has been defiled with the blood of man shed by his brother's hand, and the centuries sob with the senseless horror of war. Ever the pride of kings and the covetousness of the strong has driven peaceful nations to slaughter. Even the songs of the past and the pomp of armies have been used to inflame the passions of the people. Our spirit cries out to thee in revolt against it, and we know that our righteous anger is answered by thy holy wrath. Break thou the spell of the enchantments that make the nations drunk with the lust of battle and draw them on as willing tools of death. Grant us a quiet and steadfast mind when our own nation clamors for vengeance or aggression. Strengthen our sense of justice and our regard for the equal worth of our peoples and races. Grant to the rulers of nations faith in the possibility of peace through justice, and grant to the common people a new and stern enthusiasm for the cause of peace. Bless our soldiers and sailors for their swift obedience and their willingness to answer to the call of duty, but inspire them none the less with a hatred of war, and may they never for love of private glory or advancement provoke its coming. May our young men still rejoice to die for their country with the valor of their fathers, but teach our age nobler methods of matching our strength and more effective ways of giving our life for the flag. O thou strong Father of all nations, draw all thy great family together with an increasing sense of our common blood and destiny, that peace may come on earth at last, and thy sun may shed its light upon a holy brotherhood of peoples. — Walter Rauschenbusch. — 24

Why fifteen million women cook with GAS

Because Gas Cooking is...

BETTER Modern Gas Cooking is fully automatic. Gas is more flexible and is more positively controlled than any other cooking heat. And remember, that more than three-fourths of the cooking is done on the cooking top where speed and flexibility are vital factors. In broiling, the Gas flame sears the food instantly.

QUICKER It is a well known fact that Gas is the only fuel which will give maximum heat instantly. Just turn on the Gas and you have heat at full force—Pronto! Every other fuel necessitates waiting.

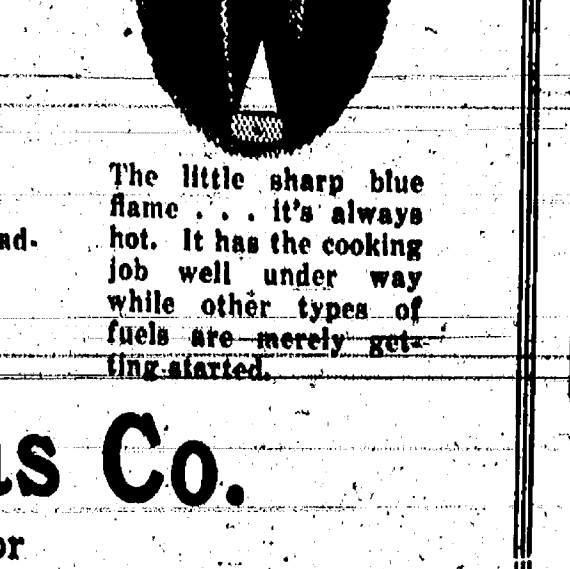

CHEAPER Gas heat costs less per person per meal than any other modern cooking fuel.

ASK ANY FAMOUS CHEF—Look about you in hotels and restaurants—find out for yourself from professional cooks who know good food as well as they know the cost of cooking—ask those "in the know" what type of heat they use for short order cooking and broiling. There will be just one answer and that answer will be—

G - A - S

MODERN GAS RANGES give you all these features, plus the advantages of up-to-date equipment.
