Old People's Home Gets $10,000 Bequest

A bequest of $10,000 was given to the Chelsea Old People's Home, under the terms of the will of Mrs. Louise Reed Stowell of Lowell, Mass., whose father, Seth Reed, was the first superintendent of the home, and was one of the early Methodist ministers of the Ann Arbor district.

The will provides that part of the money shall be used for a birth celebration in his honor. E. R. Reed and Mrs. Charles Baldwin, brother and sister of Mrs. Stowell, both of whom are members of the Old People's Home, will receive life incomes of $1,000 a year, while another brother, Dr. Wilbur E. Reed of Cheboygan, received a similar bequest. Other beneficiaries are Mrs. Chas. H. Dunham of Baltimore, Md., sister of Mrs. Lowell, who will receive $10,000, and her two children, Charles E. and Louise J. Dunham, $5,000 each.

The College club of Lowell will receive $2,000 and the bulk of the estate will constitute a trust fund, proceeds of which will be used for the erection of a children's building for the Lowell General Hospital, in memory of her husband, Charles E. Stowell, who for many years was head of the hospital's board of trustees.

Mrs. Stowell was born in Ann Arbor and was a member of the first class containing women to be graduated from the University. Later she became a member of the faculty. She died February 2nd in Tucson, Arizona, where she had resided since early October.

The body was brought to Ann Arbor and funeral services were held at the home of Regent and Mrs. Julius E. Reed with interment in Forest Hill cemetery.

Candidates Will Be Named This Week

Announcement by Chelsea's two political parties of their caucus dates heralds the beginning of another lively period for local politicians and everyone interested in the government of the village.

To date there is apparently very little political gossip, but party committees are working hard in an effort to draw a crowd to the meetings when nominations will be made for the annual village election to be held on Monday, March 14.

The Independent party caucus will be held Friday night and the People's party will meet in caucus Saturday night, both caucuses to be held at Sylvan town hall. Official notices of the meetings appear in this issue.

Lantis Team Defeated In Overtime Period

Last Friday evening the Lantis Ice basketball team and Stockbridge Independents engaged in one of the best games of basketball ever staged on the Stockbridge court. This was the second time this season these two teams have met, the local boys winning the first game, 18-16, while last Friday's encounter placed them on the short end of an 18-16 score.

With two of the regulars out of the line-up due to injuries, the Ice team put up a stiff battle and played a good defensive game. At the close of the regulation playing time the score-board registered a 12-12 tie, and three extra periods were necessary to decide the victor.

This week Friday the Lantis quintet will meet the Manchester All-Stars on the Manchester court, and on Saturday evening they will journey to Pinckney where they will entertain a veteran independent team.

Sacred Concert Will Be Presented Sunday

The special feature program at the Methodist church Sunday evening will be furnished by a group from the Central Methodist church choir of Flint and will include selections from the men's octette and the ladies' quartette. The choir leader will be in charge and Mrs. Cole will officiate at the organ. Choir robes will be used by those taking part.

The pastor has used this group on two other occasions and can vouch for the quality and wealth of this program, and states that anyone would go a long way to hear anything better. Included are some good Welsh singers with fine tenor voices.

PEOPLE'S PARTY CAUCUS

The People's Party will meet in caucus at the Sylvan town hall, on Saturday, February 20, 1932, at 7:30 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of placing in nomination officers for the Village of Chelsea to be voted on at the Village Election to be held on March 14, 1932, and for the transaction of such other business as may come properly before the caucus.

By Order of Committee.

Dated, February 15, 1932.

INTRODUCING NEW SUPT. OF SCHOOLS

Last week The Standard carried an announcement of the local school board's decision (after long and careful consideration and much consultation with the authorities in such matters both at Ann Arbor and Lansing) to grant a contract for one year to Earl Y. Poore, as superintendent of the local public school system. Knowing that this matter is of interest to every resident of Chelsea, the Standard hastened to secure a complete history of Mr. Poore, the essentials of which are hereby set forth.

Mr. Poore is a native of the State of Missouri, is 36 years old, married and has one child, aged four months. Mr. Poore was educated in the public schools of Missouri and the State Teachers' College at Kirksville, same State, receiving his B. S. degree in 1923. He did graduate work at the University of Missouri in 1927, also at Northwestern University, Ill., 1930. 32, receiving his M. A. degree in education from the latter institution. It is also interesting to note that in 1924 Mr. Poore took a law course through the American Extension University, located at Los Angeles, Calif., receiving ing his LL. B. and the following year was admitted to the bar in the state of Missouri—though, states Mr. Poore, he never intended to practice law.

Mr. Poore's teaching experience began as principal of schools, Jonesburg, Missouri, 1912-13; principal—high school, Weston, Missouri, 1913-14; principal of schools, Corning, Missouri, 1914-15; principal of high school, Rock Port, Missouri, 1915-17. Then came the war. He entered the U. S. Army, and served a year overseas. While across he traveled in five countries. On returning to civil life he resumed his profession as teacher in the capacity of high school principal at Wolf Point, Montana, 1921-23. In 1924 he returned to his native State, having secured the position of Director of Dept. of Social Studies, Smith-Cotton high school, Sedalia, serving in that capacity until 1927.

Mr. Poore's experience in Michigan began in the fall of 1927 at Iron Mountain, as Special Instructor, and Supervisor in the public schools of that city. In the fall of 1928 he was employed by the school board of Shelby, Michigan as the superintendent of their system, where he served until 1930.

According to information received, Mr. Poore's work has been marked by unusual success. Space will not permit printing many of the favorable reports received from the various positions which he has held. The following are submitted: "The Montana High School Inspector in the year 1920 gave Mr. Poore the highest rating as classroom teacher in the State. He took charge of a Michigan school system that had been removed temporarily from its position."

Local Club Sponsors Circulating Library

A project sponsored by the local Child Study club is being promoted in the form of a circulating library for children and adults. There will be placed temporarily on the former one hundred books having been sent to the local club from the state officer in Lansing for the use of children and fifty books for adults.

The library is being started on a small scale but will be added to in the near future through the local club, the state and possible contributions of books from residents of Chelsea. The project for the present will be carried on in the building formerly occupied by the C. E. Smith store, with plans through the interest and cooperation of the public for a more permanent place later on.

The Chelsea Child Study club is a unit of the National organization by the same name, for the purpose of furthering and sponsoring worthy activities for the growing child. Details are now being planned and carried out so that opening of the library will be announced in a few days.

Standard Adds "Alfalfa Joe" As Feature Writer

"The Sod Surgeon Says", a new and original column of farm fun, facts and philosophy, starts this week in The Standard, one of a selected list of newspapers that will carry this feature exclusively for readers in its territory.

Written by a farm boy and from a distinctly rural point of view, the horse sense and humor dispensed in this column will be thoroughly enjoyed by all our readers—old and young, whether in town or in the country. The author of "The Sod Surgeon Says" is already known to millions of readers throughout the country as "Alfalfa Joe", the Hired Man, a regular feature of the National Grange's coast-to-coast broadcasts over 45 stations.

"The Sod Surgeon" has followed the plow and swung a fork. He holds degrees from two agricultural colleges and his technical articles on farm subjects have appeared in the leading newspapers and farm publications.

Five years in the National Capitol gave him an intimate knowledge of the relationship between politics and agriculture. For two years he has been an eye and ear witness of the "Big Town" and a commentator on "Farmington Broadway."

His column will contain humorous and pointed comment on politics, world affairs, science, economics—boiled down and pepped up for busy readers.

BROOKLYN—Millard Monagin of Onsted and Trace Donohoe of Brooklyn went to Buffalo the first of last week with a carload of cattle shipped by Mr. Monagin.—Exponent.

MASON—The death knell of the county fair was struck Monday when the Ingham county board of supervisors signified their intention to withdraw all support. The fair association faces a deficit of nearly $300, $1500 of which is represented by outstanding notes signed by officers and directors and nearly $2000 in unpaid obligations of 1931. Efforts to reorganize for the 1932 fair in the hope that the deficit might be reduced have waited upon the action of the supervisors. It is not now likely that any further efforts to hold fairs will be made.—News.

The SOO SURGEON Says

COPYRIGHTED 1932 BY FARM FEATURES

Weather forecast: Don't expect too much from the rest of February. There'll be February weather, whether we like it or not. And there'll be a bit extra this year, what with a 29-day month.

Colonel Knox has been pledged the solid support of national organizations having 20,000,000 members in his campaign to knock the Sox out of money-hoarding. (Or should we say, to knock the hoarding-out-of-socks.) Now, all he needs is the active cooperation of two others—YOU and ME—to start some of those billion cartwheels rolling in the direction we all want to go.

Besides getting a lot of that money out where it will get the rust worn off, there are some other ways this campaign will help. Here's how:

1. People will sleep better if they haven't got "money bumps" in their mattresses to prod 'em in the ribs.
2. Putting socks on the feet, instead of using 'em for safe deposit boxes, will reduce the cases of "cold feet" by about so-and-so per cent.
3. Chinnies will draw better when the rolls of bills are fished out.
4. Folks can start spading up their gardens without being afraid of turning up tomato cans full of nickels.

Politically things are warm and getting no cooler fast. So far no one has refused to be a candidate for President. But do you know anyone who would trade places right now even up with the candidate who won last time? Al Smith didn't say "No" and he didn't say "Yes"—he just feared the Democrats to nominate him.

The move in Congress to build another big reclamation dam is bringing some louder and bigger "dams" from back home. It's worth a two-cent stamp to write a letter where it'll do the most good.

A Missouri Congressman wants to reduce the appropriation for developing the reindeer meat industry in Alaska. I'm not sure that's the thing to do. After trying to eat some reindeer meat, I'm ready to believe that selling it in the U. S. would be a great boost for old-fashioned beef, pork, mutton and chicken.

Winston Churchill, one of England's bravest, says the English-speaking nations should so salute commodities in the 1932-1933 year. There's some worthy support for the "Honest Dollar" campaign. More power to him!

JOHN D. SEES SLUMP PASSING—Not a prediction, he says, just what he sees. And here's hoping his 63 years have given him better eye sight for having seen a half-dozen other slumps COME AND GO.

Here's another one that's good at hen-setting season. A woman wrote in to ask how long it takes to hatch chickens, and how long for ducks. They told her "Three weeks for chickens, and four weeks for ducks." A month later she wrote back: "Dear Sirs: I set a dozen eggs and at the end of three weeks there were no chickens. Not wishing to raise ducks, I sold the eggs. What should I have done?"

"Dunged if things ain't getting cheap these days," remarked the hired man a-lookin' over the ais in the truck paper. "It won't s'prise me none if the doctors come out with some brand new, reasonable-price operations this spring."

"I read where the Chinese at the Geneva disarmament conference wants to install radios so the delegates can hear the shootin' over around Shanghai. It strikes me they can hear all the 'statin' they want right there at the meetin'."

"By thunder, they've got another surplus now. Too much wheat all this time. The feds at school will be glad to hear they're going to quit 'whistling' for a year."

Here are a few from the "Ask 'em and Answer" department:

Q.—How can I get rid of quack grass?
A.—The easiest way is to trade farms.

Q.—Do you approve the suffering of beasts to give us fur coats?
A.—No, and especially when one of the poor beasts is father.

Q.—The big banks say they must keep "liquid." What do they mean?
A.—Dunno, unless it means they're all "wet," and want to stay that way.

One neighborhood had its first horse theft in 86 years. Who says farm and mals aren't in demand?

New tests show that Vitamin B may help develop brains. Can't you think of a lot of people that didn't get their share?

There's a new ballad in high named "The Place of Father in the Home." That's true! So far he's been getting off with verbal orders. Now they're putting him in his place and doing it in writing.

A sober thought for today: "With reference either to individual or national welfare agriculture is of primary importance."—George Washington.

And this: The new banking bill is like an operation to remove the cause of a serious disease. What do we all do when an operation is being performed?—Watch, wait, hope and pray!

Most Deer Hunters Favor One Buck Law

Lansing, Feb. 17—If the reports received from over 2,000 deer hunters is a fair sample, the majority of Michigan deer hunters favor a continuation of the one buck law.

Of 2,000 hunters returning reports to the Game Division of the Department of Conservation following the close of the 1931 deer season, 58 percent favored a continuation of the one buck law. The rest were divided in their opinions as to what changes might be more satisfactory. About 28 percent wanted a one-deer law, nearly seven percent desired a closed season, and less than three percent favored a shorter open season.

More than half of the 2,000 hunters reported getting their buck and a slightly higher percentage of those hunting in the upper peninsula got deer than did those in the lower peninsula. Of 1,674 hunters reporting who went north of the Straits, 56 percent reported killing a deer, while 54 percent of those who hunted south of the Straits filled their licenses.

These 2,000 hunters reported killing nineteen bears and seeing 169 bears in the upper peninsula and 84 in the lower peninsula.

Over half of the hunters reported that deer were about the same or increasing in number where they hunted. The average number of deer seen per hunter during the season was 21 and the average number of bucks seen per hunter ran between two and three.

MANCHESTER—They say that the law says that a farmer desiring to bring eggs or any other produce to market may use his regular automobile. It also says that a store owner may use his automobile to go to market and bring merchandise and supplies to the store, but to deliver from the store to the customer, commercial license plates are required. There is a distinction without a difference.—Enterprise.

Michigan Department of StateWEEKLY NEWS-BULLETIN

Frank D. Fitzgerald
Secretary of State

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 17.—Michigan will be represented at a meeting with gasoline tax administrators of the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Pennsylvania to be held in Columbus, Ohio on February 19.

The meeting has been arranged to discuss problems of gasoline tax evasion common to the states. One of the specific problems to be discussed is that of running gasoline across state lines for the purpose of evading taxes.

The Secretary of State has delegated George L. Clark, director of the gasoline tax division of the department, to represent Michigan at this meeting.

Portable feed and grist mills, mounted on trucks must pay a tax on the entire weight of the outfit as it is used upon highways before securing 1932 license plates. The Department of State was informed in a recent opinion from the attorney general's department.

There are about 100 portable mills operating in Michigan, according to departmental records, and several owners this year sought to class the mill equipment as "load" and pay a tax only upon the truck chassis. In computing weight taxes for these vehicles, the opinion of the state's legal department is being followed.

Neither the Secretary of State nor any other state or local official has authority to extend the time for using 1931 license plates beyond February 29. Motorists who wait until the last days of the month to secure 1932 licenses, may have to endure long waits and other inconveniences.

Are a Woman's Afternoons for 30 Years Worth $150?

Not so many years ago, the national answer to this question would have been an unqualified "no". But the electric appliance trade has been teaching more and more millions of individuals to answer "yes" and to demonstrate their conviction by the purchase of more and more electric aids.

Now comes the electric range. The first cost is admittedly greater than that of most other forms of cookery upon which women have had to depend. But what of it? The initial cost of an electric refrigerator is many times that of an ice box but more than a million domestic units were sold last year. An electric iron costs more than a lump of metal fashioned into a sad iron but more than 20,000,000 homes iron electrically. A washer is much more costly as an original investment than a washtub and scrub board. But many millions of washers are in use!

Strawberry Facts

By Geo. T. English
Strawberry plants should be covered during the winter, more to keep them from thawing out than to protect them from freezing.

Freezing does not hurt the plants if you can keep them frozen.

The best way to protect them is to let the ground freeze several inches, then cover with marsh hay so as to keep them frozen as long as possible. If there is a good blanket of snow on the frozen ground at the time of placing hay on them, that makes an ideal protection.

This year the snow has failed to come, so cover them and do not take the hay off too soon in the spring.

Wait until growth has started in plants and by thus holding back the plants you may get by one or two frosts that would perhaps destroy the crop.

In removing the hay, try and get it between the rows, which will act as a mulch and help to conserve moisture.

A good plan is to take the hay off and cultivate between the rows, then replace the hay again.

Breaking the ground in this way helps to retain more moisture, and moisture is the most important thing to have to get a good crop of strawberries.

YOUNG MEN'S BASKETBALL TEAM DEFEATS GIRLS' FIVE

It was with great delight that the people of Chelsea witnessed the defeat of the All-American girls' team by the boys of the Young Men's club Wednesday night at the public school gym. The boys took the lead in the early moments of play and maintained it until late in the third quarter.

At this time, through the use of a bit of flash play and a large number of tackles and neck-holds, the girls gained a one-point lead. The boys, led by Winans, shook off their fair opponents and bagged the game with a series of smart plays which put them in the lead again.

The final score was 25 to 18. The boys' line-up included Leo Tuttle, Robert Foster, Arnold Stogor, Norman Mayer, Arnold Fahrner, John Keuch, Robert Winans, Wilbur Howe, Raymond Dancer, and Frank Vioel.

SCHOOL NOTES

Friday, February 12—Just one hundred twenty-three years ago today Abraham Lincoln was born in a little log cabin in Kentucky. Much of his early life was spent in working, receiving what little education he could by attending the country school whenever it was possible, and borrowing books.

The following tend to show the greatness which made up Lincoln's character: His honesty which was shown in the return of some miscounted change while clerking in a small store; his interest in humanity as a whole. Lincoln had that something within him which made it possible for him to bring out the feeling which was surging in the air, and which most people felt but could not express. His willingness to do something for someone else. Always doing what he thought would benefit the majority.

Mary Shipman Andrews brings out the wonderful character of Lincoln in "The Perfect Tribute" which was read to us by Robert Harris. Lincoln's mistake when he thought his Gettysburg speech a failure because the people were so touched that they thought it too sacred to applaud was afterwards addressed by Edward Everett who was the orator of the occasion, congratulating him upon his words by telling him that he would be flattered if he could have come as near to the central idea of the occasion in the two hours that he spoke as Lincoln did in the two minutes. Lincoln simply shook his head and laughed and turned away.

And today we find this same speech and a letter of Lincoln's hanging on the wall at Oxford College as a masterpiece of perfect literature.

And truly the memory of Lincoln is enshrined forever in the hearts of the people. In the nation's capital stands the most beautiful temple ever erected to the memory of man. In this memorial above the massive statue of Lincoln are inscribed the following:

In this temple
As in the hearts of the people
For whom he saved the Union,
The Memory of Abraham Lincoln
Is enshrined forever.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I—A woman, over the disappearance of the young and beautiful wife of his wealthy friend, Frank White, who had been married to him for three years, is investigating the case. A note from the missing woman's husband, not to call in the police, is the only clue to the case.

CHAPTER II—Mrs. White is a woman of great beauty and charm. She is a social favorite and is the center of attraction in the city. She is a woman of great intelligence and is a woman of great power.

CHAPTER III—It is found that Mrs. White has all her jewelry with her. She is a woman of great wealth and is a woman of great power. She is a woman of great intelligence and is a woman of great power.

CHAPTER V

At twenty minutes after six, a slim young man in a dark suit and a white shirt, with a white tie, came to the door of the room. He was a man of great intelligence and was a man of great power.

He was a man of great intelligence and was a man of great power. He was a man of great intelligence and was a man of great power. He was a man of great intelligence and was a man of great power.

He was a man of great intelligence and was a man of great power. He was a man of great intelligence and was a man of great power. He was a man of great intelligence and was a man of great power.

He was a man of great intelligence and was a man of great power. He was a man of great intelligence and was a man of great power. He was a man of great intelligence and was a man of great power.

He was a man of great intelligence and was a man of great power. He was a man of great intelligence and was a man of great power. He was a man of great intelligence and was a man of great power.

He was a man of great intelligence and was a man of great power. He was a man of great intelligence and was a man of great power. He was a man of great intelligence and was a man of great power.

"Maybe," the young man answered thoughtfully. "She could write." "Maybe not." "I don't like to think that," said the Jeweler anxiously. "If only she could know. Motherwell sometimes I think she doesn't know, absolutely, how her husband, adores her. There's nothing in this world or the next he wouldn't forgive, understand, excuse, explain. I believe he would take her back in any circumstances in the world—any, any, any."

"Oh, if only she had been capable of accepting of that poor man's affection, Motherwell, nothing would have persuaded her to go like that, without a word, a sign, an appeal for help, even?" "You think she didn't love him, then?" "No, no," Glanzer answered quickly. "I wouldn't say that. Motherwell, she has always been affectionate, affectionate and devoted. You couldn't ask for any more. Heaven knows, he was satisfied. But to compare her feeling to his—of course, no one would expect it. The situation was, too plain. Think of their ages. Of what he had to offer her? No, no—he brought her, Motherwell, for her youth and beauty and charm. She was the loveliest thing he had ever seen. And she's always been true to her bargain. In my opinion, she did well, and she knew it. She's a very practical young woman—You are going out there alone?"

"I think," the young man replied, "that I shall take Coggeshall." The Jeweler smiled. "You—your name just think. Coggeshall knows she's out there?" "I mean if she knows she isn't, she won't go," said Motherwell. "And then I won't go either." "Coggeshall" was waiting for the young man who had come to see the effect of electric light on the drawing table mirror. It was understood that the clock lights on this important bit of glass had irritated madam of the house.

Standing in front of her in the new green and ivory room, he threw her a long glance. "If you could see Mrs. White to-morrow—would you like to?" he asked her. "Oh, Mr. Wells, could I—can you?" "I'm only a guess—a jump in the dark," he said. "There may be a little risk in it, but honestly I can't see much, and I think you're a pretty good sport, Coggeshall. We're going out to Doctor Wentzel's."

She started nervously and caught his eye for a moment, then averted her own. "Oh," she said. "Yes, I went there just after you did. All the jewels were there." "So, sir?" "In the same box with the paper-weight. I judged she had left them there. So now we're going out to his place in the country, on the chance. Can you be ready at nine o'clock?" "Certainly, sir. Have you always—did you know about Doctor Wentzel all along, sir?"

"No," said Motherwell. "I didn't find out the day you were there. Was it you who threw away the Modista's hand?" "Mr. Sir? Throw it away? Do you mean it's been found, then? It was Mrs. White's favorite, sir, and it's not likely it would be thrown away. If anyone took it from her, you may depend they had to fight for it!" "Well," he said, "well, sir. It would be a great help. Coggeshall, if you could tell me just what extent Doctor Wentzel's—"

She turned an absolute profile. "If you know about it, Mr. Wells, I don't need to tell you," she said in a low voice. "All right," he said good naturedly. "Well, let it go at that. Be ready at nine, with a suitcase, will you?" (Continued next week)

The Mother of George Washington

LIKE other mothers of great men, Mary Ball Washington sought divine guidance through prayer and through her Bible and other deeply religious writings. Her associations from early childhood were of a deeply religious nature, for the early settlers staunchly adhered to church doctrine and to the established custom of family prayers.

Mary Ball was imbued with reverence and religious fervor. This, supplemented by adequate training in domestic routine, and her sense of responsibility for the duties of home life, admirably fitted her for the role of motherhood.

It was in 1730 that she came as a bride to the "Washington home" at Bridges Creek, later known as Wakefield, which had been without a mistress since the death of Jane Butler, Captain Washington's first wife and mother of his three children.

The greatest joy and pride of Mary Washington's life came on February 22, 1732, when her first-born was placed in her arms. She chose for her child the name of George in loving regard for her guardian, George Berkeley, an eminent lawyer of Virginia. George was only eleven when his father died but upon him she placed the old patriarchal duty of saying grace at table and prayers at night and morning. From this early age his mother expected him to assume and carry such responsibility in the circumstances of life brought to him. Under her plans guidance he could not have evaded any service that he deemed his duty.

She was a wise and loving mother who set her face against every diversion in life to devote herself entirely to her children. Her entire interest was centered in and revolved around the care and development of the best that was in them.

The steady line of her first-born from one position of responsibility to another of leadership was accepted by the "Spartan" mother as a matter of course, as a part of his duty. She is never recorded as praising him. She said:

"I'm only a guess—a jump in the dark," he said. "There may be a little risk in it, but honestly I can't see much, and I think you're a pretty good sport, Coggeshall. We're going out to Doctor Wentzel's."

She started nervously and caught his eye for a moment, then averted her own. "Oh," she said. "Yes, I went there just after you did. All the jewels were there."

"So, sir?" "In the same box with the paper-weight. I judged she had left them there. So now we're going out to his place in the country, on the chance. Can you be ready at nine o'clock?"

"Certainly, sir. Have you always—did you know about Doctor Wentzel all along, sir?"

"No," said Motherwell. "I didn't find out the day you were there. Was it you who threw away the Modista's hand?"

"Mr. Sir? Throw it away? Do you mean it's been found, then? It was Mrs. White's favorite, sir, and it's not likely it would be thrown away. If anyone took it from her, you may depend they had to fight for it!"

"Well," he said, "well, sir. It would be a great help. Coggeshall, if you could tell me just what extent Doctor Wentzel's—"

The Nation's Greatest Son

This portrait of George Washington, highly prized possession of Marshall Solberg, Chicago, is claimed by him to have been painted by Gilbert Stuart. It bears the year 1794, and is signed by the master in an inconspicuous way. Some have thought that the artist "Stuart" was in session in the year 1794 and Stuart refers to this in correspondence with relatives. It was then that one of the three sittings occurred; there were many portraits of George Washington painted by Gilbert Stuart, but there were only three sittings, so that many of the portraits were copied by Stuart from either completed pictures or sketches. It was, of course, not entirely unusual for great painters to make preliminary sketches of their subjects, although they usually complete their paintings at sittings. This latter procedure was followed, it is thought, by Gilbert Stuart in this portrait. If it is so, it stands unique among the "Stuart Washingtons." According to a volume in Mr. Solberg's library, Gilbert Stuart admired this picture so much that he retained it himself and would not part with it for many years thereafter. When it landed in the hands of Congressman Gilbert of western New York he loved it so much that he asked that it might be the last object for him to gaze upon in this life.

Washington, Man, Patriot, Statesman

COURAGE, physical and moral, was a part of his nature, and whether in battle or in the midst of popular excitement he was fearless of danger and recollections of consequences to himself. (Sparks, Jared—"The Life of George Washington," p. 428.)

At all times and under all conditions Washington was true to the role of a second national hero. Hypocrisy and a truckling in expedients for popular applause no more matched with his life than the crime of murder. He led his army in the spirit of a patriot and a statesman.

His Personal Triumph
Then came the triumph of Valley Forge and of the winters in Morristown. Those were the days when descriptions were many and embellishments were few, when Washington did not give open battle and there was hardly left to him a place for retreat. Then came the Conway conspiracy, and the ambition of Gates, and the cowardice of Lee and the treason of Arnold, and a series of persecutions so petty, so bitter, so malignant, that it is amazing how Washington survived them. Then, too, came defeats like that at Brandywine, and battles of uncertain meaning like that at Monmouth.

It is easy for us as we read these events in the light of the issue to keep up our courage and understand the triumph that finally came, but it was a very different thing for Washington. Congress was weak, inefficient, and vacillating. The soldiers were raw, undisciplined and sometimes mutinous. There were jealousies and feuds and forgeries and slanders almost beyond our present ability to believe.

When I recall Washington's calmness in the midst of exasperating annoyances, his unselfish loyalty when surrounded by enmities and jealousies, and his faith that put courage into the hearts of men who marched hungry and left bloody footprints in the snow, when I remember how after eight years of this and more he emerged victorious, as calm in victory as he had been serene in defeat, I do not wonder that Frederick the Great is said to have pronounced George Washington the most brilliant military annals.

Shared Men's Sufferings
Washington did not leave his men and go home to live in luxury, but stayed with them in the field.

stayed to endure privation with them. Only he who reads his letters written during these trying times can appreciate his troubles and anxieties. (McLaughlin, Andrew C.—History of the American Nation, p. 108.)

Behold him (George Washington) in 1775 taking leave of his family and his home, and stepping to the relief of a distant and then unknown part of America. See him transforming and cementing a band of rascals into an army. Follow him to the field of battle, and see him first in danger and last out of it. See him sharing the hunger, the cold, the fatigue of every soldier in the camp. Was there ever such fortitude in adversity? Was there ever such consideration in the hours of victory? (McMaster, John B.—History of the People of the United States, Vol. I, p. 465.)

Washington's Victory
On only one point did there seem to be unanimity and accord. That was that the dogged prosecution of the war and the ultimate victory must be credited to George Washington. Others had fought valiantly and endured hardships and fatigues and gnawing suspense, but without him, who never wavered, they could not have gone on. (Thayer, William H.—George Washington, p. 128.)

The American revolution from a military point of view was a group of little wars rather than a single war, the one integrating force was the person of the great commander, but George Washington held the army and the cause together by his exhaustless energy.

WASHINGTON'S ARMS

Man of Firm Friendships
The chief thought that runs through all the sayings is to practice self-control, and no man ever displayed that, most difficult of virtues to such a degree as George Washington. (Lodge, Henry C.—George Washington (American Statesman), Vol. I, p. 61.)

Solitude, indeed, is the last quality that an intelligent student of his career would ascribe to him. Dignified and reserved he was, undoubtedly; and as this manner was natural to him, he won more true friends by using it than if he had disguised himself in a forced familiarity and worn his heart upon his sleeve. But from first to last he was a man who did his work in the bonds of companionship, who trusted his comrades in the great enterprise even though they were not his intimates, and who neither sought nor occupied a lonely eminence of unshared glory. (Van Dyke, Henry—The Americanism of Washington, pp. 4-5.)

His passions were strong, and sometimes they broke out with vehemence, but he had the power of checking them in an instant. Perhaps self-control was the most remarkable trait of his character. It was in part the effect of his discipline; yet he seems by nature to have possessed the power to a degree which has been denied to other men. (Sparks, Jared—"The Life of George Washington," p. 400.)

Put Patriotism First
Washington was an incorruptible patriot. He was one of the few rich men who was not a Tory. A very large proportion of men of large means shared with the British crown; nor must we too hastily condemn them. But Washington, who had more to lose than almost any other man in the thirteen colonies, was not blinded by vested interests, nor bound to conservative action by his wealth and station. For the sake of the country which he loved he suffered innumerable hardships, was stung by ingratitude and hurt by slander, but he stood firm in his loyalty to the cause he had espoused, and was faithful to the end. (Barton, William E.—George Washington, p. 108.)

personally from the University list, and in one year placed the system not only on the approved list but on the biennial inspection list.

He has also had extensive experience as an athletic official. He has received the highest rating in football and basketball by Michigan State Dept. of Education Committee on Officials.

Taken from the Iron Mountain, Michigan, school paper: "We needed only a lawyer for a coach in order to have a successful team. Yes, and a fellow like Mr. Poore. Hats off and good luck to him!"

And from the Iron Mountain daily newspaper, April 21, 1928: "Mr. Poore handled 38 cage games in the past season, acting either as referee or umpire in all 38 games. It is believed that he has established a record for handling basketball games during the season 1927-28."

The local American Legion Post will also be interested to know that he is a member of the American Legion and was elected State Historian in Montana for two years, and State Vice Commander for one year.

Mr. Poore also has been very active in all social and civic affairs wherever he has been located. He is a member of Kiwanis and past District Trustee. Again we quote from the Iron Mountain daily: "Earl Y. Poore of the school faculty gave an interesting talk on the 'Man of Tomorrow'. Mr. Poore is a forceful speaker and his address was particularly applicable to the aim and object of Rotary."

Also from the Oceana Herald, Shelby, Michigan, in 1929: "Supt. E. Y. Poore, who spoke to the men's club last Sunday evening on 'The Perils of Progress', made a splendid impression upon his audience and gave them something unusual to think about."

Mr. Poore comes here with a splendid record and glowing accounts of past successes. Chelsea awaits his advent with expectancy and the hope that our high standards of education may be maintained.

How One Woman
Lost 10 Lbs. in a Week

Mrs. Betty Luedke of Dayton writes: "I am using Kruschen to reduce weight. I lost 10 pounds in one week and cannot say too much to recommend it."

To take off fat easily, SAFELY and HARMLESSLY, take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—it is the safe way to lose unsightly fat and one bottle that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle. Get it at Burge's Grocery Drug Store or any drugstore in America. If this first bottle fails to convince you this is the safest way to lose fat—money back.

But be sure and get Kruschen Salts—imitations are numerous and you must safeguard your health. Adv.
