Boy Scout Camp Will Open Sunday, June 19

Camp Newkirk, the Boy Scout Camp for boys of Livingston and Washtenaw counties, will open its 1932 summer season on Sunday afternoon, June 19th, for four weeks. Many interesting developments are planned for this season, including lower costs and emphasis on local scout troops camping out at the Council camp, in charge of their officers. This year the boys will be given greater responsibility in forming their own programs and carrying them out with the assistance of the camp leaders. Wallace F. Watt, Scout Executive for Livingston and Washtenaw counties, will again act as camp director.

Assisting him in charge of the various departments, will be a staff of qualified experts. Dr. Earl Kleinschmidt, city school physician of Ann Arbor, and a former scoutmaster, will have charge of the health of the camp. Including a physical examination of every boy and officer attending the camp. Dr. Kleinschmidt plans to follow up each case where special attention is indicated, and this feature of the camp will receive increased emphasis this year. Assisting him in charge of first aid will be field commissioner William W. Bishop, Jr.

The handicraft program will be in charge of Clarence Newman, director of manual training at the Mack Junior high school of Ann Arbor. Mr. Newman has had many years of experience in camp handicraft projects in private camps in the middle west, and will assist boys in planning their own camp projects. Lee Yen-Ten of Ypsilanti, recently returned from China will again have charge of archery, in which he has proven himself an expert. Indian handicraft and Indian lore will be in charge of Edwin Simons of Lansing, who will instruct the scouts in the construction of head-dresses and other Indian equipment. An Indian center will be established. (Continued on last page)

Annual Reunion Held By Lima Center School

School District No. 4, Lima, held their annual reunion Saturday on the school grounds, with about 65 guests attending from Detroit, Ann Arbor, Mason, Hart, Francisco, Lima and vicinity. Following the dinner at 1:30, the program opened with the singing of America, and prayer by Rev. Henry W. Lenz, and the address of welcome was given by Henry Wilson, with response by Louis Stocking, of Detroit.

Music by the Lima Center Orchestra, Glenn and Paul Barbour, Mrs. Grant Schooley and John Steinbach, was followed by an account of his winter trip in the South, by Ransom Armstrong.

A song "When I Was a Lady" was rendered by Misses Ruth and Jean Luick and Edna Steinway, with Grace Luick as accompanist.

Rev. Lenz gave a short talk and letters were read from absent members, Mrs. Helen Clippen and Miss Minnie Steinbach, of Chelsea.

At the business session officers were chosen as follows:

President—John Steinbach.
Secretary—Mrs. Omar Stocking.
Treasurer—Emmett H. Dancer.

Public Library Notes

Library enthusiasm is running high this week. Several patrons and other interested people have sent in lists of books which they recommend to be put on the shelves for the benefit of those who have not already read them; also lists of books which they personally would like to read.

These are the activities which are seemingly little things but which, on the contrary, are some of the biggest helps that we can receive for the benefit of our expansion. Everyone should feel the freedom of the organization by expressing any wish in the book line with the knowledge that if the book is obtainable, the library staff will be glad to supply the need.

With the exception of two library periods which were omitted during the scarlet fever epidemic, the organization has been open every Wednesday and Saturday from three until five o'clock since February 27th and in that time has dispensed for juvenile and adult use 1295 books.

This may express to some extent the need for such material in Chelsea. If you are not one of the patrons of the book shelves, it will make you most happy at some time to come in and watch the little folks make their selections of books, and see how they are learning to handle a library situation.

Every effort is being made to build for the children and their future both from the standpoint of their charge and the parental cooperation.

Kiwanians Vote For Government Economy

Politicians who are seeking votes on the theory that spending money is sure fire stuff should have other reminders, is the opinion of the Chelsea Kiwanis club. It was voted at their Monday evening meeting to write our representatives in Congress to vote against any public building program which would increase indebtedness of the nation.

Congress has been considering a program for public buildings which would include an item for a $70,000 postoffice building for this village. With full realization that such an expenditure of public funds on a project of this kind in Chelsea is unwarranted under present conditions, and that a nation-wide program of spending is poor economy, the Kiwanians feel that their protest should be voiced along with other civic organizations of the nation.

GRANGE GET-TOGETHER

All Granges of this vicinity have received an invitation from Webster Grange to meet with them Thursday evening, June 16, at the Webster community hall for a get-together party. Webster Grange will give a program, commencing at 8 o'clock, and pot-luck lunch will follow the program.

Hindelang Donates Mitt
Observing the great need for a catcher's mitt while witnessing a game this week, A. G. Hindelang has presented a good new mitt to be used by all catchers in the League. Officers and members of all the teams acknowledge this fine gift with many thanks to Mr. Hindelang for his generosity. Limited funds in the League treasury made it impossible for them to purchase a new mitt at this time.

Alfalfa Hay-Curing Demonstration Here

An alfalfa hay-curing demonstration will be held in Washtenaw county on June 16, at 2:00 p. m., according to H. S. Osler, county agricultural agent. This demonstration will be held at the Fred Kennedy farm, Lima township, one-half mile south of U.S. 12, and one mile east of Chelsea.

Since 1924 these hay-curing demonstrations have been held in various parts of the state by the extension forces of Michigan State College, and have been instrumental in improving the quality of alfalfa, as well as showing methods which are quicker than the old system of "cocking" hay.

Making the alfalfa into a windrow soon after cutting permits the leaves to be partially shaded while drying. The exposed stems, and the leaves, dry at more nearly the same rate so that when the hay is handled fewer leaves drop off. A bright green color is also secured by the windrow system just as with the old system where the hay was cocked.

Curing in the windrow permits more hay to be handled, and with less chance of being rained on than with other methods.

Does cutting of alfalfa in early bloom stage affect the life of the crop? Which varieties produce the most hay? Does it pay to harrow alfalfa? What are the experiences with alfalfa for pasture? Is alfalfa seed production possible in Michigan?

These, and many other questions will be answered at the demonstration. The preliminary plans for the demonstration will make it possible for those attending to see the effect on alfalfa hay of letting it dry in the swath different lengths of time before raking into the windrow. The effect on leafiness and color can be seen.

C. R. Oviatt will be the representative of the farm crops department at the meeting. This field meeting is being held to discuss not only hay-making, but will take up practically all phases of alfalfa growing such as getting a stand, handling it for hay, pasture or seed. It is a summer field meeting devoted to problems concerning the alfalfa crop, and all interested in any phase of alfalfa production should plan to attend.

WILL GIVE CONCERTS

The first concert to be presented by this 12-piece, home-talent band will be on Wednesday, June 29. Department of State

WEEKLY NEWS BULLETIN

Frank D. Fitzgerald
Secretary of State

Lansing, Mich., June 8.—The department of state has worked out a plan of staggered, part-time employment that will affect about 125 employees. On June 15, practically all typists and clerks employed by the department will start to work on a part time basis.

This plan will allow the department to retain 28 employees who would otherwise have been dropped. It also works to the advantage of the department because the employees of any division can immediately be returned to a full-time basis, whenever there is an unusual rush of work.

The governor and secretary of state are endeavoring to find some legal way in which automobile license plates can be sold at half price after July 1.

The automobile weight tax law fixes Sept. 1 as the earliest day when license plates can be sold at the reduced figure. However, the officials are studying statutes regarding powers of the state administrative board to act in emergencies, as a possible solution to the question.

Sale of license plates at half-price after July 1, would allow owners of approximately 100,000 cars to secure licenses, and it also would add hundreds of thousands of dollars to the state's revenue.

Employees of the department of state presented the state's oldest employee, Major Albert Dunham, with a basket of roses on his 87th birthday, June 1. The major celebrated his birthday by following his usual routine as custodian of the Great Seal of Michigan.

John Helle is ill, and under the care of the family physician.

Since the Francisco section has been divided between Grass Lake and Chelsea, Clarence Fauser has gone to Dearborn to work, Edward Willy and Clarence Kruse work with a Chelsea section. Less Kaiser goes to Grass Lake, and Clarence Noffsinger goes with the foreman, Leon Blackmer, to the East Jackson section. Mr. Blackmer's foremanship is only temporary, and until he is given a permanent transfer, he will continue to reside in Francisco.

Business No Barrier

A had employed in a northern Indiana factory has recently become quite popular with the fairer sex. Numerous phone calls were annoying the lad's employer, and on one occasion he answered a sweet young voice's request, saying:

"Bob is busy just now."
"You tell him it is Mary and he will want to talk anyway," was the reply.
Indianapolis News.

Mixed Up

Eight-year-old Betty was having her first large party. She had been carefully coached as to the proper way to greet her guests and concerning her response to their farewells.

Heaving a sigh of relief, Betty closed the door after the last guest and sighed: "I never thought they'd go home so fast that I'd get my 'thank you's' and 'glad to see you's' so terribly mixed up."

The annual gathering of the Board of Managers of the Home was held here Thursday last. About 100, including friends and guests, were present and a very enjoyable session was held after dinner was served. The grounds and buildings were in fine condition and met the approbation of each and every one. The general expression was that the Detroit conference ought to be proud if its holding.

Mrs. Ione Gorton's granddaughter, who has just returned to the United States from some time spent in Southern Africa, gives an interesting account of her trip before she landed in New York. She says: "Yesterday morning when we got up it was bitter cold outside. They told us to go out on deck and see why. Way off on the horizon was an enormous iceberg. It's the first time in 10 years that icebergs have been seen around here in May. You know they are terribly dangerous as only 1-8 of them sticks up above the water. There were a seen yesterday and one of them was said to be as large as the city of New York. We were all scared to death last night as it was an iceberg that caused the Titanic to go down. The boat slowed down last night. They have an apparatus on board that tells when they are near one. Then there are also regular patrol boats that keep track of them and wire all big steamers every few minutes."

Realizes Her Mistake

One Toledo bride still in the beams of the honeymoon, reading of a girl who had offered to marry almost any man for $1,000, told us she was going right home and try to collect the market price from her husband.—Toledo Blade.

Telephone Company
Advertises Michigan

Appearing in the May issue of "The Michigan Bell", published by the Michigan Bell Telephone Co., the following editorial explains the reasons for this company's current advertising campaign which urges everyone to invite relatives and friends to vacation in Michigan.

For the fifth consecutive year, our Company will devote a portion of its advertising this summer to stressing the advantages of Michigan as a vacation land. However, that advertising will differ somewhat this year from the theme used heretofore.

During the past four years our "Vacation in Michigan" advertising has been designed primarily to call the attention of Michigan residents to the vacation benefits offered them by their own state. This year, we are suggesting that Michigan people not only spend their own vacations in the state, but that they urge relatives and friends living elsewhere to come to Michigan for their vacations.

We believe and maintain that Michigan is peerless among vacation lands. Every facility for summer play and vacation rest is offered visitors and home folks by our state's 1,750 miles of Great Lakes shore line; its 5,000 inland lakes; its numerous streams; the scenic beauties of its primeval forests, sand dunes, hills, valleys and countryside; its scores of historically interesting points; its network of splendid highways; its progressive cities and towns; its well-developed resort centers, and its temperate, water-cooled climate.

Each year thousands of visitors to Michigan from outside the state spend millions of dollars here. Coming from all parts of the land, many of them return again and again. Thousands of them have established permanent summer homes within the borders of our state. Michigan's tourist and resort business is one of its greatest activities and contributes materially to our general prosperity.

We believe that material additions can be made to that contribution by inducing still others who live outside the state to vacation in Michigan—and by spending our own vacations here.

That is the message we are carrying to the people of Michigan in our advertising, with the thought that whatever helps Michigan helps us all.

Mrs. Inez Rank is spending a couple of days at the Chelsea hospital, for removal of her tonsils.

Several from here attended the Memorial services at Waterloo on Sunday.

Semi-Precious Stones

Chemically the beryl, and its varieties, is described as a silicate of beryllium and aluminum. It is found in a good many gardens of the globe. Royalston, Mass., and certain parts of North Carolina supply the best aquamarines found in the United States. Some are found also in New Hampshire, California and other states. Older sources are the great graves of Ceylon, certain Russian and Siberian localities and Brazil.

Ask any scientist which is the best cooking fuel?

Should you enter any scientific laboratory in this country you might find chemical equipment that would defy description, but always there would be a Gas Burner on the scientist's work bench. Every fuel known to mankind is available to the scientist. But he always uses the one fuel that adapts itself best to every heating purpose—GAS.

Fifteen million housewives have become accustomed to taking Gas for granted, but the scientist never takes anything for granted. He uses Gas because: (1) It is the world's fastest fuel—(2) It maintains an even temperature—(3) It can be instantly adjusted to any heat desired. These reasons, plus the economy of Gas, indicate why most housewives prefer this flawless fuel.

Science has done much to improve the Gas Range in recent years. Have you seen the 1932 Models with the latest type Burners, Insulated Oven, Smokeless Broiler, Heat Regulator and Automatic Timer? Stop in! We'll gladly demonstrate without obligation to you.

Question And Answer Dept.

Ques.—Will you please tell a dumb-bell who is commander-in-chief of the United States army?

Ans.—The president of the United States is commander-in-chief of the army and navy of this nation.

Ques.—When speaking of a ring or any kind of gold what is meant by being "18 carat"?

Ans.—Pure gold is 24 carats fine, and therefore anything that is 18 carats means that it is 18 parts pure gold and 6 parts alloy.

Ques.—Who wrote the Bible story of the creation?

Ans.—Moses is said to have written the first book of the Bible, but we have heard it was a baseball reporter, because it starts "In the big inning" (beginning).

Ques.—To settle an argument will you kindly answer in your question department how the name "New Orleans" is pronounced?

Ans.—This name is correctly pronounced "New Or-le-anz," with accent on the syllable "Or".

Ques.—Can you tell me which weighs most at birth—a boy or a girl?

Ans.—Sometimes a boy and sometimes a girl weigh most at birth, but the average is about seven pounds for a boy and about 6 1-2 pounds for a girl.

Ques.—Our dancing master told us there were two necessary requirements to be a good dancer, and that he would bring the point out later on. Have you any idea what he meant by the "two requirements"?

Ans.—We are hardly mind readers, but maybe he meant your "two feet."

Ques.—I would like to ask if the United States ever had a war with France?

Ans.—War has never been declared between these two countries, although in 1798 they did considerable fighting on the high seas and war seemed inevitable. But the rise of Napoleon to complete power prevented war from being declared. This period of strained relations and fighting at sea was the closest approach to a war between France and the United States.

Ques.—I am curious to know if there is any way of knowing how much gasoline the average motorist consumes a year. Can you tell me?

Ans.—Not exactly. The Department of Commerce in Washington estimates the average motorist in the United States consumed 594 gallons of gasoline last year.

Ques.—What is the rule for using "el" and "il" in many words differently when they are pronounced the same?

Ans.—The general rule is to use "il" after all consonants except the letter "s". The important thing to remember is that always after the letter "s" and usually after the letter "a" the "el" is used.

Ques.—What is the origin of the expression "they fight like Kilkenny cats"?

Ans.—This expression had its origin in Ireland. According to an old Irish story, the Kilkenny cats were two pugacious felines which fought until nothing was left except the ends of their tails. To "fight like Kilkenny cats" means to fight or wrangle until both sides have lost everything. During the Irish rebellion of 1798, tradition has it, the town of Kilkenny in Leinster was garrisoned by Hessian troops. One of their favorite amusements was to tie two cats together by their tails, hang them over a clothesline in the barracks and then watch them claw and scratch each other until one of them was dead. When the officers heard of this barbarous practice they decided to put a stop to it, and accordingly one of their number was instructed to keep close watch on the men with a view of catching them in the act. On one occasion while several of the Hessians were engaged in cat-fighting, they heard the officer ascending the stairs and one of the soldiers quickly cut the cats down by severing their tails with a single stroke of a sword. The cats escaped through an open window, but the bleeding tails tied together remained as tell-tale evidence. When the officer demanded the meaning of this he was told that two cats had engaged in a fight so furious and savage that they had completely devoured each other with the exception of their remaining tails.

GRASS LAKE—Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Sanford spent the week-end at the home of their son, Marvin, in Detroit, where on Monday, May 30, they celebrated their 55th wedding anniversary. Their son, Bela, and family came from Brooklyn, N. Y., to participate in the happy occasion, but their son, Earl, and family, of Ogden, Utah, could not be present as their daughters, Dorothy and Marilyn, were graduating from the U. S. A. C., and the Ogden High School, respectively, at that time. Mr. and Mrs. Sanford are well known pioneers of Grass Lake township and received felicitations from their many friends.—News.

SALINE—Quick work and fancy riding on the part of Officer M. A. Alber Monday morning brought about the capture of two Detroit men, Leslie Cole, 24, and Sam Badalamenti, 24, after they had stolen a motorcycle belonging to Orrie Graf from his home west of town. Graf reported the theft to Policeman Albar who set out after the thieves at top speed. He caught up with the two before they had gone eight miles from the Graf farm, and put them under arrest, returning the motorcycle to its rightful owner.—Observer.

NORTHVILLE—Irving J. Ulrich, well known business man and leader in American Legion circles, has the honor of being one of the very first service men in Michigan to receive the Order of the Purple Heart, the decoration being sent from the war department to those men who were wounded in action while fighting for the United States. Mr. Ulrich, who was wounded at Château-Thierry during the World war, received this honored tribute this week. He was at that time a member of Company G, 125th Infantry.—Record.

Try The Dixie "Foot Test"

Forget for a moment about advertising, about mileage, about ratings—and give your gasoline the "foot test." Take your car out on the open road. Cut down to five miles an hour. Then push the accelerator clean to the floor, and see what happens.

If it's Dixie Gasoline, your car will pull away swiftly, silently and easily. Because Dixie is made to meet the "foot test" on hills, in traffic, or on the open road. If you like quick, smooth, silent responsiveness in your gasoline, you'll like Dixie.

Latin Little Used

While a form of church Latin is used by clergymen of various nations as a medium of conversation, it is not true that there is any nation today whose mother tongue is Latin. Many of our modern languages are derived largely from Latin but all differ considerably from it.

Green and Black Teas

The same kind of tea leaves can be used for the manufacture of either green or black tea, the difference of the two teas lying merely in the process of curing.

Some varieties of tea leaves, however, are better adapted than others for making certain kinds of tea. In producing green tea the leaves are sterilized by steam. This prevents oxidizing or fermentation in the leaf which retains its green color and when boiling water is poured over it the result is green or greenish-yellow liquid. In manufacturing black tea the leaf is allowed to ferment which changes its color from green to very dark brown. In the case of oolong or semi-fermented tea the fermentation is allowed to reach a certain desired point.

Wooden Leg Uninsurable

The Supreme court of California has decided that a workman cannot collect a workmen's compensation liability benefit for injury to a wooden leg. In the case of John Priscott, a teamster, whose wooden leg was broken when his horse shied and threw him. The case was bitterly fought, three judges dissenting from the majority of the bench. It was urged that loss of an artificial member was a real disability. The majority held that a decision favorable to the workman would open the door to claims for damage to crutches, eyeglasses and false teeth.

Capturing Oil Cushers

"Wild" oil wells are capped in a number of different ways, depending upon conditions at the casing head when the wells blow out. In general, the operation consists in attaching a gate valve to the casing head and closing the valve after the connection has been made. Connections which provide a number of flow lines are then made to flow the oil from the wells.

The complete assembly of well head connections is known as the "Christmas tree," because of the various branch connections off of it, to the main header above the large flow control valve.

Shadows of the Past

It has been estimated that in the approximately 1,800 generations since 4000 B. C. 2,000,000,000,000 people have lived in the world. It is impossible to state, even as an estimate, the number of human inhabitants of the earth since its creation, or, more accurately, since the beginnings of human life, since this has not yet been definitely dated.—Washington Star.

Earth's Ice Supply

There are about 6,000,000 square miles of ice on the earth's surface. Of this amount 5,000,000 square miles are in the Antarctic.

WAYNE—We have just heard of a prominent resident of Inkster who has just learned that sparrows, like pigeons and cats, have homing instincts. He set a trap for the feathered pests. When he had accumulated a total of forty, he had a change of heart and couldn't muster enough fortitude to wring their necks. Instead, he took them about ten miles from home and released them. And when he returned home he found them chirping on his front lawn.—Review.

MASON—Lansing wants an advance of $40,000 from the board of county road commissioners to enable the city to undertake street work and thus create work for the unemployed upon the welfare list. Such a request was made by the ways and means committee of the Lansing city council in a conference attended by the county road commissioners.—News.

JACKSON—An appeal for assistance from county officials was made Wednesday by a group of cattle raisers residing south of Grass Lake, who have lost several lambs during the past week through activities of a lone wolf or coyote. The animal has been killing four and five lambs nightly and has already visited five different flocks. The fact that the sheep are not disturbed, as they are when attacked by dogs, leads to the belief that the killer is a wolf or coyote. The task of finding the killer was assigned to the two county dog wardens, who plan to assemble a group of farmers and make a concentrated drive thru the woods in that locality.—Tribune.

BROOKLYN—Hilliard Howland, and family are not ordinarily nervous but the "three times and out" theory has placed them on edge. A week ago their house caught fire from the blowing of the engine packing of their home lighting plant. Last week the house was struck by lightning but not fired. If they can get through this week all right they hope to have a fine summer.—Exponent.

HOWELL—The townships of Hanley, Genoa, and Cohocah held their playdays last week and completed the schedule of eleven townships out of the sixteen in the county where playdays have been held. With the schedule complete a record attendance of 1,995 has enjoyed a day of fun and frolic.—Republican-Press.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—From his fur post, Stuart House, in the Canadian north, Jim Stuart, trader in furs, looked on a certain night in the lake. With his headman, Omar, he rescued the drifter, who proves to be Aureole, the son of a certain trader in the fur business. Made comfortable at the post, Aureole proves to be a charming companion. Leblond, with Paradis, his snarling half-breed lieutenant, arrives in search of the "missing girl." Aureole plays a cunning game, leaving the meeting in embarrassment, though Leblond acknowledges his debt of gratitude to Stuart House.

CHAPTER II.—Before leaving, Aureole and Jim arrange to exchange places on a certain night. Jim is ambushed by Paradis and forced to travel toward the Leblond post. On the way he overtook the boat, leaving his half-drowned enemy on the beach.

CHAPTER III.—Jim, with Omar, goes to discuss plans with his superior, Andrew Christie. Displeased at the trade showing made by the post, Christie allows Stuart, at his request, to go to make good. He leaves the post with a heavy heart, feeling he has been unjustly treated. Jim and Omar, the attempt fails, and Jim takes the Indian to Leblond.

CHAPTER IV.—After hearing the story, Leblond discharges Paradis. Jim and Aureole arrange a rendezvous. Aureole, through cunning, must escape before they are each other. Aureole is returned to Winnipeg, and Jim to "make good" his position as factor of Stuart House, has planned a personal appeal to the Indians, who so far have persistently refused to trade their furs with the company he represents.

CHAPTER V.—Jim, visiting the Indian camp in the Pinecone country, attempts to dissuade the natives from trading with Stuart. Paradis, non amenable, and Omar again, but they are not harmed.

CHAPTER VI.—Jim and Omar travel from camp to camp surrounding the lake, "medicine men," as a paid agent of Stuart and Leblond, meet with two successes. On the last journey, which they hope will result in the capture of Aureole, Jim, with his Indian, makes an open attack on Jim and Omar, but they drive off the attackers. Paradis escapes, after shooting Smoke, Jim's favorite dog.

CHAPTER VII.—Canning for the night, the two travelers put their blankets in the shape of men sleeping beside the fire, and hide in the bushes. The men supposedly in the blankets, Jim and Omar, attack and kill them. Jim successfully treats the infected man, and Aureole, who was causing a great deal of trouble, is cured. They set out to find their ally, Esau.

CHAPTER VIII.—On his way down the river Esau frustrates determined attempts to stop or kill him. Corrupted by his enemies, the veteran canoe man successfully runs the Windigo rapids, a feat hitherto impossible. Jim, in a fit of jealousy, kills the Indian, and Aureole, who had been the cause of the trouble, is cured. They set out to find their ally, Esau.

At last, off the shore where the expectant Ojibwas were gathered before the fire, the paterboro drifted in the mark. A short distance from the fire, Jim, outlined in the shadows at the foot of the Medicine Stone, stood a small cylindrical-tipt of caribou skin, ornamented with the grotesque shapes of serpents and animals. It was the medicine lodge of Jingwak.

"We wait for heen to mak de bug howl, den we go ashore below here," whispered Omar.

"Can you make out Paradis?" replied Jim.

"Paradise keep een de dark until he see how de magic of Jingwak work. Kef eet work, we have to fight for Esau."

Presently, the rattle of shells, mingled with the beat of the medicine drum, drifted from the tent. The low hum of the squatted audience died. The sorcerer had begun his invocation of the spirits.

At the fire, aware faces turned gray with dread.

Suddenly, out of the hush, lifted a voice as from the grave. A spirit was speaking.

"The stranger from the land where the sun sleeps is no shaman. He came from the trader, at the House of the Setting Sun, the home of devils."

"Where is this conjuror?" asked the sepulchral voice, "who tells the Ojibwa his magic is stronger than that of Jingwak, my brother? He is not here! He fears the wrath of Jingwak, the great shaman."

Jim's muscles stiffened. The moment had come. It was time to strike—but where was Esau?

anters of a caribou. On the skin-clad body writhed painted snakes. At the ash hung the medicine bag and shell rattle of a conjuror.

A suppressed "Ah!" swept the startled Ojibwas. "The shaman! The shaman!"

There was a pause. Wide eyed, the electrified Indians waited for the funeral voice from the mask.

"I have come, on Jingwak! Otchig, the shaman from God's lake who fears not your magic, is here!"

But from the tipt of Jingwak came no sound.

"Come forth, oh magician with the split-tongue! Otchig, the shaman from God's lake, laughs at your medicine!"

Still the lodge of Jingwak gave no answer.

From the squatted Ojibwas rose murmurs of surprise. Why did not Jingwak speak?

Suddenly, in the gloom across the fire, sounded heated words. Jim's eyes turned from the horned shape by the medicine lodge. An inflamed face, lit by the glow, faded into the darkness. It was Paradis.

"Those Jingwak, the friend of the trader, Paradis, fear the magic of Otchig that he hides his face?"

Low groans greeted the strange bayler of the mute conjuror in the tent.

"He's afraid to come out!" whispered Jim, excitedly. "What's Esau done to him?"

The half-breed's answer was a fierce squeeze of the arm.

Shortly, above the murmuring of the Indians lifted the voice of Jimwak, the intruder. "The strange shaman has put a spell upon Jingwak!"

There was a movement in the medicine lodge. The door flung wide.

As he rose, the rut-like eyes in the painted face, avoiding the mask of Otchig, shifted furtively from side to side.

"He's quit! Esau's got him! We'd better work around behind to hold 'em off, if they rush!" breathed Jim.

"No, de Indian believe Esau—wait! I tak care of Paradis!"

"Look, men of the Sturgeon, on the great Wabeno!" jeered the voice from the painted mask. "As Jingwak's hunted eyes fell before the rows of fire-lit faces. His friend, the spirit, asks me for magic! Behold the medicine of Otchig!"

With an ear-splitting scream, he stiffened his arms and sliced the air, downward, to his side.

"Without blood I have taken this curse!" announced the voice from the mask. "Go to him and behold the magic of Otchig!"

The desperate Jingwak turned to escape in the blackness of the apron, but Jim and two Ojibwas were on him and dragged the panic-stricken sorcerer back to the fire. Pushing aside the long hair which hung to his shoulders, the Rutlesnake exposed the sides of Jingwak's head to the view of the astonished Ojibwas.

The ears had been removed close to the skull!

For a hushed interval the awed Ojibwas gaped in wonder at this proof of Otchig's magic. Then with a roar there was a rush for the impostor who had deceived them with his boasting. But the terrified Jingwak writhed free of the arms that held him and disappeared in the blackness.

At the same time Jim and Omar cut back to the shore to head off Paradis, but he had foreseen defeat and his canoe had lost itself in the shadows. Furious at having the man who had hunted them slip through their fingers, Jim and Omar returned to the fire.

As his paddle tore the water, he laughed in his relief and joy: "We've won! We've won! Aureole! D'you hear, down there in the city? I'm coming back to you, girl; I've won!"

"You foxy old devil! You deserve the Victoria cross!"

For the twentieth time Jim hugged the lean frame of the grinning Esau, as they stood at their camp-fire.

"You know, before we left the post that Jingwak was this Makwa, with-out ears, you had run out of Wolf river years ago. But how in thunder did you find it out; you never saw him!"

"When I hear dat Jingwak and Paradis scare de hunter from Sunset House wid devil story, I remember dat een de same talk dis Makwa mak at de Wolf riviere. Den some Indian tell me dat Jingwak wear heeg hair ver long. Makwa woud dat to hide de ear he lose. Ah-hah! Ween de people here, tell me wat he look lak—den I know he es Makwa."

"And you played him like a master! Wait till the story reaches Pipestone. I guess Andrew Christie's eyes'll open when he sees the fur you'll get for us by this night's work."

And the grateful Jim again hugged the old man, whose smoke-tanned face, like old leather, beamed with his content.

"Otchig, the strange shaman from the west," chuckled Jim. "You clever rascal! When Jingwak saw that the man who took his ears at Wolf river had called his bluff, he flying to that lodge of his like a fox to his hole! Do you suppose he had guessed before this who you were?"

"Mebbe so, Jihaw say dat Paradis look hard for me before eet grow dark. I know he do, dis so I land on oder side an' cross de island tru de bush."

"I certainly thought we'd have to fight, Esau. Why didn't you tell me about this Jingwak? Did you cut off his ears?"

"No, wun good friend of me, at de Wolf riviere—he do him," replied the old man, and he met Jim's incredulous gaze with the unshaken look of a Chinaman.

"And you ran those rapids?"

Esau told of his meeting with Paradis and his men which had forced him into the Rapids of the Windigo.

"How you got through the lord only knows! And you did it for me!"

The eyes of the old man were bright with emotion. "For you and your fader. I tell heen when he goin to de rapids, I tak care Jeem."

"And you have you and Omar! Bless your old bones!"

"Esau," grunted Omar, bitterly. "But I let dat Parates get away!"

In the morning the paterboro from Sunset House started on the long trail south. Up the great lake on the way to the inlet traveled the canoe. An interval of mellow days—the early Indian summer of the far north—would companion it up the Sturgeon to the Pipestone lakes.

At the foot of the big rapids of the Sturgeon, Jim looked for, and found, the footprints of Smoke. The absence of rain, and the dropping of the river, had left the last traces of the friend he had lost as clear as on the day after the fight on the peninsula.

"Good-by, Smoke!" said Jim, gazing through eyes, blurred by many a poignant memory at the footprints of the dog he had fed from puppyhood.

"Jim never had a better friend than you. All you had you gave him, and now he's gone home without his dog. Good-by, Smoke!"

CHAPTER X

Hard as they had raced the coming winter south through the Pipestone lakes, long since deserted by the Indians, the men from Sunset House found that the moccasins telegraph had been even more swift. For one day, as they followed the inlet of the last of the chain, they overtook a canoe.

Anxious to speed the news of Jingwak's downfall, Omar ran the paterboro alongside the traveling birch bark. At his mention of the defeat of the sorcerer and his friend Paradis, the men in the boat nodded in affirmation.

"Otchig, the great shaman from God's lake took his ears," said the older Indian. "Jingwak is a liar. He has left the country."

"Otchig now lives at the Lake of the Sand Heaches," announced Omar. "Do the Ojibwas believe he lives with devils?"

The Indian shook his head. "It was the lie of Jingwak and Paradis, the trader. In the Little Moon of the Spirit I and my sons will journey to the House of the Sunset with our furs."

When the paterboro had passed from earshot of the other craft, Omar asked his friends: "How did you hear dat so soon?"

"A canoe must have started for the Pipestones that night. Why didn't you tell them that Esau was the great shaman, Otchig?" demanded Jim.

Omar frowned at the lack of astuteness in his chief. "Dey bring dat fur to us Creechins to have a look at de great shaman. I not tell dem dey look at heen now, wen de got no skin to trade."

"Omar, you're a statesman! You're wasted in the bush; you ought to be in Ottawa," insisted Jim, while Esau nodded in approval.

Then, between the Pipestones and from the first battlements of the forest, fleeing the freezing winds, lifted the night with their dinner, and hard on their heels came the snow. Each morning breaking a path with their poles through the heavier fog of ice and the deadwaters, riding the thinner sheets with a pommeling bow, the voyagers raced the winter south.

ADVERTISING

Our wide circulation guarantees you a reading public, and a buying power that will pay tenfold the cost of advertising.

They have learned through experience that to look in the Standard first is to save time and money afterwards. They have learned that advertisements in the Standard give them the information they want, and the places where they can make their desired purchases. The Standard is really a sort of clearing house of shops, those advertising in it steadily come under the notice of the many women subscribers, and they come into their stores, while those who don't advertise lose the chance of even being considered as a prospective market. You have a business, why not make it pay? Appeal to one woman and you appeal to many, for women never keep a secret. Neither does The Chelsea Standard—the chance is open to all, a guaranteed arena of women buyers.
