Three People Injured When Cars Collide

Two children were cut and bruised and a man suffered minor injuries when they were involved in a collision Saturday afternoon on US-12, three and one-half miles east of Chelsea.

Mrs. Mae Rentz of Detroit, going west on the highway, lost control of her machine after passing another westbound car and went into a shallow ditch. Her husband, who was riding with her, righted the machine and as he brought it back on the road, his car struck broadside an eastbound car driven by George C. Johnston of Michigan Center. Accompanying Mr. Johnston were his wife and their guests, Mrs. Michael Hollow and three children, who were en route to the home of the latter in Detroit.

Edmund Hollow, seven years of age, suffered a deep laceration on each cheek and cuts about the head, while his sister, Dolores, five, also suffered cuts and bruises. Mr. Johnston sustained a gash across the forehead. The other parties in the accident were uninjured.

The injured persons were brought to Chelsea Private hospital for treatment, returning to their homes Sunday morning.

Local People Attend Pioneer Club Picnic

J. George Wackenhut, daughter Lil-ber, Mrs. Frank E. Storms and son, Carl Fletcher, Mrs. Ella Burkhardt and daughter Flora, and John Steinbach were attendants from this vicinity at the fifth annual picnic of the Wash-tenaw County Three-Quarters Century club held Friday at Newport Beach, Portage Lake.

More than 400 people were present, including 27 couples who have been married over 50 years and one couple who had been wed 68 years. They were presented with bouquets, and assembled for a group picture. The oldest member in attendance was Mrs. Frances Gruner, honorary president of the club, who celebrated her 97th birthday on Monday.

Following the picnic dinner at 12:30 C. H. Hemingway, publisher of the Ann Arbor Tribune, presided as toast-master and an interesting program was given. Gov. Wilbur M. Brucker and Dr. Frederick H. Fisher gave the principal addresses of the afternoon. The former paid tribute to the work of the pioneers in making this country what it is today, stating that more of the fertility, courage and perse- verance of the pioneers are needed to meet the problems we are now facing.

The subject of Dr. Fisher's address was "Memories that Bring Happi- ness." Short addresses were given by members of the club, and musical numbers were features of the pro- gram.

Election of officers followed, and Mrs. Chrissur Kingsley of Chelsea was chosen member of the board of directors for the 1932-33 term.

HOLD PLEASANT GATHERING

The home of Mr. and Mrs. John Harris of Dearborn was the scene of a pleasant gathering when the mem- bers of the Bahamiller family as- sembled as a surprise to Mrs. Harris. A delicious picnic dinner was served at one o'clock. Guests were present from Chelsea, Manchester and Sharon. Those from Chelsea who attended were Mr. and Mrs. J. Bahamiller and daughter Loretta; Mr. and Mrs. Theo- dore Bahamiller and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Weinberg.

ANNA GEDDES HONORED

Miss Anna Geddes recently received a book called "The Bird-Lover's Au- thology," as a reward for special work in the field of poetry which she has been doing each month for the past six months in the Nature Reserves. The Nature Reserves is a club depart- ment of the "Girl's Friend," a publi- cation of the Evangelical Synod of North America.

CYTHEREANS ENTERTAINED

The Cytherean circle was delight- fully entertained at the home of Mrs. G. J. Chandler of Grass Pointe Park on Friday. A delicious three-course luncheon was served at one o'clock. Five hundred was the diversion for the afternoon. Mrs. Henry Schneider of Beloit, Wis., and Miss Marian Schmidt were guests.

KILLS DOGS

PRISON COMMISSION ASKS FOR OPENING OF STATE CEMENT PLANT

Would Provide Fund of $10,000 for Experimental Manufacture of Commercial Fertilizer.

At a meeting held at the Marquette Branch Prison on Saturday, the State Prison Commission adopted a resolu- tion recommending that the State Ad- ministrative Board appropriate $10,000.00 to meet the cost of experiment- ing in the production of commercial fertilizer at the State-owned Chelsea cement plant.

A proposal has been made by an Ann Arbor man holding a patent on a formula for the manufacture of a rock phosphate type of commercial fertilizer, that the cement plant be converted into a fertilizer factory and the product be used on State farms as well as sold on the open market.

The matter was placed in the hands of a committee and a report submit- ted to the commission stated that ma- chinery in the plant is suitable for the manufacture of fertilizer of the type proposed, which is similar to that being manufactured and used in other parts of this country and Europe.

It was suggested by the commission that the $10,000 required be raised by the sale of cement which is now stored at the plant.

According to local cement plant offi- cials, it is quite probable that manu- facture of the fertilizer on an experi- mental basis will start within the next few weeks if the necessary funds are provided. It is estimated that em- ployment of thirty to forty local men would be required to operate the plant, with an increase necessary if manufacture of the product continued on a large basis.

Dailies Say "No No", We Still Say "Yes"

In spite of denials by the Metro- politan press, there will be wild-west features on the Michigan State Col- lege Farmers Day program, as attested by a halter-making and calf lead- ing contest and by a bull-throwing demonstration duly supervised by the dairy department of Michigan State College, Friday, July 29.

All well conducted rodeos have a calf roping contest as a featured event. At the College Farmers Day, contest entrants will have to rope their calves and also make halters with which to lead them. Farmers who have led calves can draw their own conclusions whether there are going to be any thrills for the specta- tors of the contest.

Movie fans know that the final at- traction at good rodeos is the bull- dogging contest in which mere steers are turned loose for cowboys to throw. Members of the dairy department on Farmers Day will throw one live, four-footed bull. Farmers, again, are invited to draw their own conclusions about the comparative thrill of tossing the steer or throwing the bull.

In addition to the wild-west features, there will be a hay loading and haul- ing contest, a woodlot thinning con- test, and a choir singing contest.

Visitors from the cities whose ar- tistic senses rebel when rodeo is men- tioned can put in happy hours listen- ing to the choirs render "Listen to the Lambs." This song contains that quaint, pastoral flavor which the read- dailies apparently believe a Farmers Day program should have.

C. H. S. Band To Give Concert In Grass Lake

The Chelsea High School Band will journey to Grass Lake on Saturday night of this week, where they will present a concert which is being spon- sored by business men of that village.

This demand for the services of the High School Band is a tribute to the success which has marked their ef- forts to become an outstanding musi- cal organization. This is the second year the band has been giving open- air concerts, under the direction of their instructor, Wesley Smith.

Three concerts have been given by the band here this season, with the fourth scheduled for next Wednesday evening. The fifth and last concert will be given on Wednesday evening, August 18th.

Scouts Will Continue Summer Activities

Following a most successful season at Camp Newkirk, the Boy Scouts of Washtenaw and Livingston counties are not content to "let well enough alone", but are going ahead with plans for camp and troop activities during the remainder of the summer. Of course, as most folks know, the Scouts camp all the year 'round, but summertime gives unusual opportu- nity for more distant journeys, where the campplace is lost in the wealth of new sights and experiences.

"Many of our troops are holding regular weekly meetings," says Scout Executive Wallace F. Watt, "but they are usually of the outdoor variety, with swimming, outdoor cooking, and nature games as features. Boys like to use their collective instincts, and often bring back many interesting souvenirs for their troop museums."

Camp Newkirk will be available for small groups of boys and leaders throughout the remainder of the sum- mer, using the camp's tentage and other equipment if desired. No charge is made for this service, if the Scouts furnish their own food. Sev- eral other campsites are open for use, including two cabins well equipped for overnight parties.

"On the whole, we prefer to have these smaller groups with their own local leadership rather than the large masses under strange leadership," said Mr. Watt. "Our unusual success this summer, with a remarkable ab- sence of homesickness and of discipli- nary problems, is a reflection of the more natural grouping by age and by home community, where a boy is not thrown among perfect strangers. The problem of making a boy a more so- cial creature requires time and pa- tience, and not haste," he concluded.

Local Scouts are proud of the fact that Kenneth Gilbert was awarded the rank of Eagle Scout at the last Court of Honor at Camp Newkirk. The ac- tual badge will be presented to him in a public ceremonial, as soon as it arrives from the National Boy Scout headquarters in New York City.

MRS. FREDERICKA M. FIEGEL

Mrs. Fredericka M. Fiegel, 89 years of age, died Saturday morning, July 23, at her home in Freedom township. She is survived by four daughters, Ricka Fiegel, Mrs. Christina Kalm- bach and Mrs. Martha Pfizenmaier, all of Freedom township and Mrs. Emma Geiger of Clinton.

Funeral services were held at two o'clock Tuesday afternoon at St. Thomas church, Rev. C. A. Brauer of- ficiating, with burial in St. Thomas cemetery.

Mrs. Fiegel was the last of the Fie- gel family, pioneer residents of Free- dom, and was an aunt of Charles, John and Reuben Heber, Mrs. Louise Winans, Mrs. Louise Ragge, Mrs. Rita Brooks and Miss Laura Heber, all of Chelsea.

Munro, Leo Elsie, Henry Thier- man, B. E. Crocker and Dorothy Luick and the Misses Ruth Russell, Agnes Young, Marjorie Howe, Lucille Haselwerdt and Gertrude Weinberg. MARON.—W. L. Cheney plays safe. He celebrated his 71st birthday anniversary Sunday. A few days before the event Mrs. Cheney asked her husband whom he wanted as guests for a birthday dinner. She was surprised to hear that he wanted a doctor and an undertaker. So she invited Dr. S. V. Barnum and Mrs. Barnum and Mr. and Mrs. John E. Wood of Lansing. Mr. Wood is a funeral director. Mrs. Cheney thought it peculiar that her husband wanted to have a doctor and an undertaker around the festive board. But the guest of honor thought the joke was on the doctor and undertaker. At 71 he is healthy enough to need neither except for their friendship.—News.

Leave The People
Something To Do!

The tumult and the shouting of our political conventions has died away, and the captains and campaign managers have departed. In a short time our quadrennial campaign will be in full swing, the country's plight will be duly depicted and medicine prescribed to fit each diagnosis.

Just one hundred years ago a great historian and philosopher, detached from the hurly-burly of politics, made a suggestion which is pertinent today—Macaulay wrote:

"Our rulers will best promote the improvement of the nation by strictly confining themselves to their own legislative duties.

by leaving capital to find its most lucrative course, commodities their fair price, industry and intelligence their natural reward, idleness and folly their natural punishment, by maintaining peace, by defending property, and by observing strict economy in every department of state.

Let the government do this—and the people will assuredly do the rest."

How different our modern approach! Government is no longer the simple affair of our forefathers. To it we ascribe superhuman and supernatural powers, forgetting it is only a cross section of the citizenry of the country, with all the ambitions, inhibitions, vices and virtues of the rest of us.

Yet we solemnly propose through this growing and gangling organization called government to make and unmake economic laws, to impose on intelligence and industry increasing penalties, the while coddling and condoning idleness and folly.

It is a fair question which only future students of this period can answer:

Has recovery from the depression been delayed because of our feverish attempts to short-cut normal and natural forces by edict and fiat? What matters human nature and economic law when we have a legislative body?

For our recourse to a political administration of all our affairs we are paying a price. Today governmental overhead has reached 30 per cent—fifteen billions out of a total national income of fifty to fifty-five billions.

With between eighteen and twenty millions of our people dependent upon tax payers. We pay another price, the price of economic freedom.

History is replete with examples of this. Dr. Samuel Dill, reviewing the decline of the Roman Empire, says:

"The system of bureaucratic despotism, elaborated finally under Diocletian and Constantine, produced a tragedy in the truest sense, such as history has seldom exhibited; in which, by an inexorable fate, the claims of fanciful omnipotence ended in a humiliating paralysis of administration; in which determined effort to remedy social evils only aggravated them until they became unendurable; in which the best intentions of the central power were, generation after generation, mocked and defeated by irresistible laws of human nature."

During the coming months, candidates will promise relief for this and that through law, or regulation, or outright edict. Each proposal will call for additional administration and expense. To all such the voter should reply as did the French philosopher:

"That government is best which paves the way for its own resignation."

In other words, the candidate who promises "to govern least" will get my vote. —Morde Thorpe, in "The Nation's Business."

Stop Codling Moth
With Another Spray

Warnings for the spray to be applied to control the final brood of codling moth on Michigan apples are being sent to many counties by the entomology department at Michigan State College.

The date upon which this spray is to be applied is very important as the protective poison coat has to be on the fruit before the minute larvae enter the apples. The spray cannot be used on summer or early fall varieties of apples.

For late fall or winter apples which are not to be washed before used as food, the spray should be 2 pounds of arsenate of lead in 100 gallons of water. This should be the final arsenical spray on fruit which is not to be washed.

Where apples will go through a washer, 3 pounds of arsenate of lead can be used and the spray can be repeated once or more.

Dilute lime sulphur may be used with either strength of spray or it can be omitted at the option of the orchard owner.

Dates recommended for the application of this spray in the different counties are: July 26, Cass; July 26, Berrien, St. Joseph, Lenawee and Monroe; July 27, Branch, Hillsdale, Calhoun, Jackson, Washtenaw and Wayne; July 28, Van Buren, Kalamazoo, Barry, Eaton, Ingham, Livingston, Oakland, Macomb, and Kent; July 29, Allegan, Ottawa, Ionia, Clinton, Shiawassee, Genesee, Lapeer, and St. Clair; July 30, Muskegon, Montcalm, Gratiot and Saginaw.

Could Not Buy Cathedral

The cathedral of Notre Dame in Paris was sold, during the revolution, to a private individual for $1,000, but the purchaser was unable to raise sufficient capital and the purchase fell through.

Question And Answer Dept.

Ques.—Is there any kind of green wood that will burn as well as dry wood?

Ans.—Yes. Green ash wood will burn equally as well as some kinds of dry wood.

Ques.—I would like to ask you how many syllables there are in "Louisiana" and how the word is pronounced?

Ans.—"Louisiana" has five syllables. The word is pronounced "Lo-ee-ze-anna."

Ques.—A friend of mine asked me one day "Why the 'brown' study?" When I asked her what she meant, she just laughed. What did she mean by "brown study"?

Ans.—The word "brown" in this phrase suggests gloomy or seriousness.

Ques.—Is it true that whatever day of the week that the first day of May falls on, that Christmas of that same year will fall on the same day of the week?

Ans.—Yes. If you will consult a calendar you will find this to be a fact.

Ques.—Can you answer in your question and answers department what kind of nuts are "filberts"?

Ans.—"Filberts" is correctly applied to either of two European hazels, which are very closely allied to our common hazelnut.

Ques.—Have there ever been any negroes elected to the United States Congress?

Ans.—Since the adoption of the Constitution there have been two negro senators and 21 negro representatives elected to Congress.

Ques.—On what day of the week will Labor Day fall on one thousand years from now? Can you answer me that?

Ans.—Our perpetual calendar shows that the first Monday in September, exactly one thousand years from the present date will fall on Sunday. If still in doubt, just wait that long and see for yourself.

Ques.—Who was the youngest signer of the Declaration of Independence? And what was his name and age?

Ans.—There were two signers of the Declaration of Independence who were the same age and who were the youngest signers. They were Edward Rutledge and Thomas Lynch—both 27 years of age.

Ques.—To settle an argument will you please answer which bears the closest relationship the parents of children or brothers and sisters?

Ans.—From the standpoint of eugenics and biology, brothers and sisters bear a closer relationship to one another than they do to either of their parents. A parent and child are of one-half common blood, while brothers and sisters have all common blood.

Ques.—May I ask in your question column if the mayor of Washington is elected every two or four years and who is the mayor now?

Ans.—There is no mayor of Washington. The city is governed by commissioners appointed by the president every four years and approved by the Senate.

Ques.—Why do chickens circle around in one direction, while ducks circle the opposite direction when they are being fed?

Ans.—While there is a popular notion that barnyard fowls do this, it is not supported by close observation. Ducks and geese stumble over chickens going opposite directions to get the feed they just happen to see. The going in opposite directions is simply a coincidence and not the nature of the fowls.

DUNDEE—A warning of infestation of chinch bugs in corn and of the Mexican beetle in bean crops was given by C. Ward Andrews, county extension agent, after visiting northern and western sections of the county on call from farmers in that vicinity. Samples of both infestations were taken to Monroe by Mr. Andrews.—Reporter.

SENTENCES

A hint for up-to-the-minute readers: The Bible is the world's best seller.

Fervor is nothing but the fever that burns in the blood of a good man.

He who would regulate his personal ideals will not have to renovate them.

A husband who has a double standard of living makes his wife pine to be single again.

Nothing has been discovered to clear a man's moral air so quickly as a sincere prayer.

Great successes are of slow growth. Those who go up like rockets usually come down like rocks.

Talks And Music On Afternoon Program

Vocal and instrumental music, short talks by R. S. Shaw, president of Michigan State College, and by J. F. Cox, dean of agriculture, an address by George E. Bishop, secretary-manager of the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau, and a "Pageant of Progress" are the highlights on the afternoon program at Farmers Day, Friday, July 29.

The instrumental music will be furnished by the Boys Industrial School Band from Lansing. Members of all choirs competing in the morning choir singing contest will combine to furnish music during the afternoon. Fourteen choirs are now entered in the contest.

President Shaw will give a brief greeting to the guests of the College. Dean Cox will point out some of the progress made in agriculture during the past 75 years. Mr. Bishop is manager of an organization which is concerned in the advancement of agriculture and all other industries in the Upper Peninsula. His message on the value of organized efforts for the purpose of bettering any community or section will contain many points of value.

The "Pageant of Progress" will show improvements in means of transportation, in harvesting machinery, and in methods of supplying water to farm homes. The committee in charge of the pageant have obtained some of the implements which were used daily by pioneer farmers and these will be shown by characters in the pageant or will be exhibited on floats.

The College home economics department will supervise a playground for younger children from 10:00 to 12:00 a. m. and from 1:00 to 3:00 p. m.

HOWELL—A live alligator about 14 inches in length was found in Briggs lake near Island Lake, Sunday and captured, although the reptile was inclined to resent the disturbance and bit and snapped at its captors. The gator was taken to Detroit by W. H. Grant of that place near whose cottages the reptile was found. It was not of the Florida variety, however, it is stated, and had yellow stripes on its body and was said to be similar to those found at Porto Rico. It will be placed in the Zoo at Detroit, it is said. How it came to be in the lake is a mystery, the only theory being advanced that it might have become too old and vicious for a pet and was therefore liberated.—Republican Press.

GRASS LAKE—Stanley Johnson, from the M. S. C. experiment station at South Haven, visited the Fred Taylor huckleberry marsh Saturday and obtained cuttings from the bush which Mrs. Taylor won first prize, last year for bearing the largest berries in the state. This bush has been under the care of Mr. Johnson, who has visited it several times. The bushes are not bearing as well this year, due to the fact that many were in bloom in December, owing to the mild winter.—News.

Put America on Map
A map of the world in globular form, the work of Gerardus Mercator, famous scientist and geographer of the Sixteenth century, has been brought to this country, discovered in France by Dr. P. H. Rosenbach. There are but eight of these globes in existence, and the others are in the museums of Europe, but the new arrival on these shores has reposed in an ancient castle since it left the hands of the maker. It is therefore in excellent condition, while the others have been subjected to hard usage and are stained and worn by the operation of time. This map is one of the first which recognizes the existence of the American continent, but it is shown separated from Asia by a very small body of water.

BOARD OF EDUCATION ANNOUNCEMENTS

The tentative daily schedule of the Chelsea Jr.-Sr. High School is here given in the hope that we may early discover the existence of any conflicts in the programs of individual students. High school students usually take four subjects each year. No ninth grade student (Freshman) will be permitted to take more than this number, but in the upper three grades there may be some students who may properly enroll in five subjects. However, two requirements must be met before this privilege is granted. First, the student must have made an average of "B" or higher in his work of last year. Secondly, he must submit to the superintendent a request, signed by one or both of his parents or by his legal guardian, specifically indicating a desire that he be permitted to take an extra subject. It should be understood that these regulations do not apply to the classes in Vocal Music. Any student may take this as a fifth subject.

Special attention of the parents of high school students is called to the fact that provision is made in the daily schedule above for two classes in Music. It is sincerely hoped that parents will urge their sons and daughters of high school age to enroll in this course. It would be a splendid thing for the students individually and for the community in general if we could develop two glee clubs, one for boys and one for girls. The band, organized two years ago, is already a going concern and has proved to be a valuable community asset. If the interest in music could be carried to the point where we would have a band and an orchestra on the instrumental side and two glee clubs on the vocal side, then the musical situation would begin to approach the ideal.

In connection with the daily schedule given above, it should be noted that every student will be required to be present during every period of the school day. The attendance will be checked by the classroom teachers and by the person in charge of the Study Hall every period. Every student will be held responsible for being in his proper place so that he may be accounted for. The student who has four classes will spend three remaining periods in the study hall. The only exception to this rule will occur in those cases where a student receives special permission to spend a study period in consultation with a teacher, receiving special help in his work. Teachers who are neither in charge of a class nor of the study hall, will at all times be available for these periods of special help and students will be encouraged to take advantage of the opportunity thus afforded to secure individual aid.

This next section is addressed directly to the prospective high school students of Chelsea. Their parents and other persons will probably read it, but the subject is of special importance to the students themselves.

We who live in America are living in what we call a democracy. This word means that we are governed by persons whom we select to fill the offices of our government. This government of ours exists by our consent. Its existence is justified only because it serves us. The people of our country might live without any organized government at all, but our forefathers chose to establish a set of governmental machinery to safeguard our welfare and to make it easier for us to live in peace and security and happiness.

But this country of ours is not ruled by a king or a dictator. The people make and enforce their own rules, through their chosen representatives. When you are a full-grown adult, making a living or assisting others of your family in making a living, you will have to take your place in this great democracy of ours. If you become a good citizen you will vote; perhaps you will hold office.

Now, all this leads up to the important point that we wish to have you think about. You are to be a member of the Chelsea Jr.-Sr. High School. Don't you think it would be fine if the boys and girls of our high school could govern themselves? It is true that the superintendent and the teachers have a legal right to make rules and to force you to obey them, but how much nicer it would be if the students were to take upon themselves the duty of making and enforcing their own rules. We wonder if it is not possible for us to establish a real democracy in the Chelsea High School. The superintendent and all of his staff of teachers would always stand ready to give you advice and to let you have the advantage of their experience; but the responsibility for making rules for the welfare of the school would be upon your own shoulders.

Why isn't it a perfectly practical plan for us to set up a machinery of self-government similar to that of our nation? America has a national government that performs three distinct kinds of duty. Our Congress makes laws or rules of conduct. You could elect a group of representatives from each class for this purpose. Our president and his cabinet are the chief enforcement officers. You could select officers from among yourselves for the same purpose. We have judges who sit in our courts to settle disputes and to punish offenders. You could create a court to perform the same duties.

A school is governed either by the teachers or by the students. It is an American principle that the people govern themselves. Many persons think that high school students are too young and too undeveloped to make their own rules and follow those rules. But there are some schools where the students are successfully governing themselves. If the students of Chelsea are capable of carrying the responsibility, they, too, can govern themselves.

Think it over. And after you have done some careful thinking about it, go to the school office and talk it over with the superintendent.

What Is The Fundamental Purpose Of The American Public School System?

A Digest of a Series of Articles by William McAndrew, Formerly Superintendent of the Chicago Public Schools, in "The Nation's Schools", September, 1930, to February, 1931.

By Earl Y. Poore, Superintendent, Chelsea Public Schools

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of a series of Mr. Poore's digests of McAndrew's articles. The third will appear next week.

In nearly every school room throughout our country the teacher leads the pupils in the singing of "America". The words they actually sing are: "My country, 'tis of thee, of thee I sing," whereas what they often should be singing is: "My country, 'tis of thee, I merely sing."

I have heard teachers, required to take part in a patriotic school program, say at the conclusion: "Thank God, now we can get back to our regular work." In all reverence to the Deity, I am tempted to paraphrase them by saying: "Good God, as if anything could be more regular than work. Teachers who are neither in charge of a class nor of the study hall, will at all times be available for these periods of special help and students will be encouraged to take advantage of the opportunity thus afforded to secure individual aid.

Someone has said that it takes 50 years to get an idea into a school teacher's head. Even at this estimate of our hard-headedness, we should have had a school system by 1899 that was teaching civic responsibilities to its pupils. I cannot say exactly what conditions actually did prevail in 1899, but I do know that if the schools of that day had absorbed the purposes of the founders of our country, their civic consciousness has been lost somewhere in the shuffle since that date. We certainly do not have it in many of our public schools today.

I go to our conventions of teachers. I hear the governor or the mayor make a speech on the opening day. I hear them inevitably stress the importance of the school in the American scheme of things, and then I hear from the teachers themselves nothing else or almost nothing else during the remainder of the convention that indicates their awareness of the existence of such a thing as civic responsibility.

Mr. McAndrew describes one convention of the National Education Association in considerable detail. It was held at Des Moines. He tells of how the governor of Iowa opened the first session with a fervent speech, built around the proposition that the public school should teach and strengthen democracy. He said there was a renewal of interest in this everywhere throughout the land. The gentleman who followed him was the state superintendent of schools. He said never a word on the governor's big idea, nor in his description of Iowa's educational program did he mention civic training.

Henry Ryan, speaking for the American Legion, besought us to study the American ideal, to get it into shape for teaching purposes, to realize that the government is not something separate. He said: "We are the government. The government isn't good enough. It breaks out into graft, bossism, injustice. We are not frequent enough in our participation in government. We should be educating our boys and girls in self-government. They will be the government of tomorrow. We are not self-governing. We neglect self-government in school. Our youngsters are easy marks for hoodwinking by political bosses."

At that same convention, Arthur Dunn, Red Cross representative, was plainly disappointed in school superintendents, although his courtesy prevented him from rudely saying so. He said: "Nearly everybody agrees that citizenship training must be continuous all through school. But too often citizenship training is tucked away in the corner of the senior year of the high school, to which the fewest children arrive, and it is a dull, lifeless description of our form, not our principles, of union."

The service of the public school amounts to little unless it is imbued with the American spirit of good citizenship. In all of the conventions of the last ten years, the importance of good citizenship as an aim of the public school has been discussed almost exclusively by those who are not in the teaching profession. We notice Maude Park of the National League of Women Voters taking as her subject "The Democratic Awakening." We hear Charles Evans Hughes telling the schoolmasters, "You give very little attention to training for citizenship. You don't inform those who are to be our successors how our political institutions are working." He, from the state of Iowa, told us that the city of Tammany Hall, knew who really was working, and whom.

Another American Legion speaker insisted that "the American goal of education has not been reached and will not be until you prepare the children for an active participating citizenship." We have had Ruth Bryan Owen, a member of Congress, telling us that we have run up the flag over the schoolhouse, but we are saying nothing as to what should be done to keep the flag untarnished. We must see to it that every citizen cares. We had Newton Baker tell us at Cleveland that the chief business of democracy is education, and that we educators should make our chief business, democracy. These people are laymen. So was Clark Howell, editor, asserting that the chief aims of public education must be specifically those in the preamble to the Constitution. Edward Gay, editor of the New York Evening Post, told us that "Democracy without education for citizenship is a failure. Schools may help the student earn a living, but they must also meet the responsibilities of a democracy."

It is significant to know what these out-of-school organizations, whose representatives have spoken to us, stand for and what they are after. The American Legion says that it "aims at training for good citizenship, to lead individuals to adjust themselves to civic requirements." The Knights of Columbus avow "service to God, to our country and to our fellowmen." The Women's Christian Temperance Union desires "to preserve the capacity of the masses for self-government." We could go on indefinitely, tying up the purposes of numerous organizations with the work of the schools. The same ideals are stated by our national heroes; past and present. Roosevelt, Taft, Wilson, Harding, Coolidge and Hoover have all sent us greetings in our conventions, repeating the same old big idea, so familiar that it is a commonplace, so frequent that it dulls us. We go on passing resolutions—and then doing nothing about it. "Them's my sentiments," says the lazy man—and the lazy school teacher.

The tragic thing about all this is that the man who tries something new is apt to lose his job. Here is an exact quotation from McAndrew: "Commissioner Finegan kept the live school men of Pennsylvania busy at a curriculum in democracy until every grade was covered by clean-cut lessons in civic duty. In violation of every principle of democracy, Pennsylvania ousted Finegan. I happened to be in one of the largest cities of the state afterward and asked the superintendent where I could see the best teaching of citizenship. He was sorry; he had been so busy with other things that he was having the teachers do nothing but 'regular work.' It was the same, was it not, in the time of Moses? None of us contradicted his plan of proper conduct. Some of us applauded. But the minute his back was turned we ran back to our regular idols and danced around them to beat the band. No wonder he was angry enough to break all of the ten commandments."

It was Rabbi Hirsch who said that if Jefferson and the other early patriots were to come and see the schools that they urged as public charges and found how little performed, the founders would weep bitter tears of disappointment. One of our early teachers' meetings in the coming year in Chelsea will be devoted to an inquiry of the teachers as to what they are individually doing in the line of inculcating civic duty. An earnest effort will be made to encourage mutual helpfulness among the teaching staff, to the end that each may have the benefit of the experience of the others.

OUR NEIGHBORS

BROOKLYN Oil prospectors are again active in this locality where thousands of people believe a better field exists than any other in the state. After a number of months of checking structure, independent oil men and operators are busy securing oil and gas leases in Napoleon, Columbia and Norvell townships of Jackson county. Many thousands of acres have also been secured in Washenaw and Lenawee counties. Exponent.

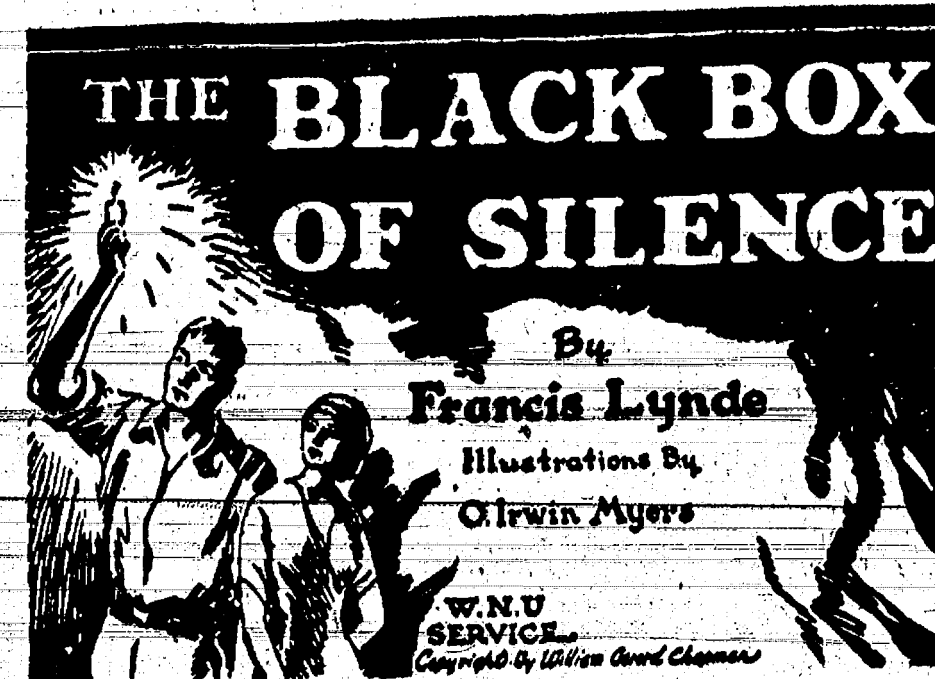

SALINE—Some great enthusiasts, when it comes to playing croquet, on South Ann Arbor street. Recently the interest was so intense the players couldn't bring themselves to quit when it became dark, so they placed a couple of automobiles where their lamps could light up the field and settled the matter sometime before midnight. Observer.

MILAN—The thrill that comes only once in a lifetime is being experienced by one of Milan's home-town boys. Bob Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Grant Allen, is for the first time really getting two thrills in one. The first, that of being entirely on his own for the first time; and the other of attending the Great International Olympic games in Los Angeles during the next few weeks. Either thrill is enough for one summer, but Bob is getting them both at once. Leader.

MORENCI—The franchise, submitted to the voters of Morenci Tuesday by the Citizens Light & Power Company was voted down nearly six to one, the vote being as follows: Yes, 94; No, 532. Seven votes were thrown out, making a total of 633 votes cast. Although the consensus before election seemed to be that the franchise would not carry, few looked for such an overwhelming defeat. At the present time it is not known just what the next move will be to perfect a settlement of the light and power problem. Observer.

STOCKBRIDGE—Stockbridge citizens forgot the heat and depression for a short time last Tuesday morning when the shrill blasts of the local fire department called the truck and men to the farm home of Ben Wilson, on the Orrie league farm about seven miles west of the village. The damage was mostly on the roof of the house and the flames were soon quenched and loss was slight. The fire originated in a clothes closet, the cause not yet having been determined. Brief-Sun.

TECUMSEH—Rev. N. Norton Clark, 91 year old minister of the gospel, will deliver an anniversary jubilee address at the Methodist Episcopal church in Petersburg, on Sunday afternoon, July 31. Rev. Clark, who occupied the pulpit of the M. E. church in Petersburg for many years, is well known throughout Lenawee and Monroe counties and ministers from various churches will assist in the program. Rev. C. S. Risley is now pastor of the Petersburg church. A Herald. Rev. Risley was pastor of the Chelsea M. E. church a few years ago.

CHAPTER I

The Black Box

It was between the acts of the play. The orchestra of a theater in Carthage, a college town of the Middle West, was in full swing, when there sounded a faint oboe from what appeared to be an overgrown portable camera on the lap of one of two young men seated in the right hand proscenium box of the theater, and instantly the bowing of the violins, the cellos and the bass, the fingering of the brass and woodwind, the tapping of the padded sticks on the kettle-drums became merely so many soundless gestures in a pantomime. All was dead silence.

The two young men in the box who seemed to have precipitated this extraordinary state of affairs were both about of an age, both Carthage horn and reared, and both graduates of the local college. But with these basic particulars the similarities paused abruptly. Owen Landis, the one with the queer black box on his knees, was slenderly built, with a thin, eager face and dark hair and eyes—the eyes of a dreamer and enthusiast. His companion, Walter Markham, was the young man about town of a small city; well-dressed, well-fed, yet not without a glimmer of penetrative shrewdness in his eyes to prove his right to claim kinship with his hard-headed banker father.

For an interval measurable in seconds the soundless pantomime continued; then, suddenly, and as if there had been no gap of silence, the various instruments burst into full voice. A wave of half bewildered sweep over the house, followed quickly by enthusiastic applause, the audience ardently taking the pantomimic interpretation for a skilful bit of stage business on the part of the orchestra.

"Wonderful!" Markham exclaimed, under cover of the resumed music. "As you said, Owen, it has to be seen to be believed. Why didn't you keep it up a bit longer?"

Landis shook his head. "I didn't dare to let it go on. In two seconds more there would have been a panic. I figured that for just about so long Schomberg's men would go on bowing and angling automatically as they did. But when realization came, there'd be chaos. I meant to anticipate that moment, and I did; couldn't let it go over the brink, you know." "Black magic!" Markham commented. "Is this what you've been working on all these months that you've been holed up in your laboratory den?"

"You've said it." "Well, now you've got it, what's the answer? I mean, how does it do it?" "As I've told you, it is simple enough. In principle, by radio we transmit sound and make it do our bidding. My problem was to find a circuit which, instead of amplifying the received sounds would itself operate to neutralize them. Once my basic circuit was developed, all it asked for was a pretty long series of experiments."

"Now you've found the answer to your problem, what are you going to do with it?" "Come around to my shop with me after the play and I'll talk it out with you." Landis said, adding "Most inventors and discoverers are short on practical sense—common sense—and I'm no exception. Maybe you can supply what I'm lacking in that respect."

Two hours later the two young men were seated in Landis' workshop laboratory. On the wall from the theater Landis had tried to explain, as technically as he could, the successive steps taken in the development of his astonishing invention.

"What you've been saying is mostly Greek to me," Markham offered. "Just the same, I can surround the fact accomplished, all right—having had the question arises, what have you got? Can it be put to any useful use?"

"Possibilities!" Landis queried. "They are almost unlimited. The trouble is that they are bad as well as good."

"Shoot," said the son of small-city wealth. "I'm listening." "The circuit, or whatever you choose to call it, will operate at a distance—I don't know just yet how far—and it will pass either through or around obstructions. Turn a switch, and you can sleep in silence as profound as that of a mountain top, so far as noises are concerned."

"Huh! sounds a good bit like Alice in Wonderland. But what else? If you stop the racket for yourself, you stop it for everybody else, as well, don't you?"

It is really muted at its source. Beyond this inner circle the sound diminishes quite rapidly until at about half a mile it has vanished completely.

"In your demonstration tonight you connected the thing with the theater lighting circuit. Does that mean that you are tied to electric power plants for its use?"

"Not at all. An automobile storage battery will operate the box for a limited time."

Markham nodded slowly. "Don't you know, Owen, it all listens a good bit like a pipe dream."

"So it does to me. But what is worse, I can't get away from the feeling that I'm in the fix of the man who invented the Frankenstein thing."

"Meaning—?"

"Meaning the frightful uses to which this contrivance of mine could be put in the committing of crime. You might say there is no end to them. Noise is the burglar's chief menace; with this box of mine coupled to a lighting socket he could wreck the lower story of a house or blow the strongest bank vault in perfect security, so far as the noise was concerned. So, also, with the use of firearms. You see what

"In the possession of a Criminal There is Simply No Limit to the Harm the Thing Might Do."

I mean. In the possession of a criminal there is simply no limit to the harm the thing might do."

"How many people know about your invention, Owen?"

"Up to this minute, just two of us— you and myself. I haven't talked about it to anybody, partly because the whole thing was experimental and I didn't want to have to answer a lot of curious questions. But now, as I've said, I'm like the man who invented the 'Frankenstein' thing in Mrs. Stuever's story. When I think of all the harm it might do in the wrong hands, I feel as if I ought to tie a stone to the box and pitch it into the river."

There was a thoughtful pause, and at the end of it Markham said, "You are quite sure nobody else knows about it?"

"I hope I am." "Have you any reason to doubt it?" "Not what you could call a reason; no. But I have worked here in the lab a good many nights, sometimes until quite late, and there have been moments when I've had a queer feeling that I wasn't alone; that somebody was spying on me. Pure auto-suggestion, I guess."

Markham nodded. "We'll let that part of it rest and pass on to the material things. You want to make some money out of this invention of yours, don't you? Or are you too much of an inventor to look that far ahead?"

Landis smiled. "I'm not quite so much of a dreamer as that, Wally. If I could only be sure the thing wouldn't be put to evil uses—"

"You'd like to see some hard cash results," Markham finished for him. "That is right and proper—and human."

"I suppose so; while I was at work on it I did think that if it should prove a success it might help me find a place as a research man with one of the big electric companies."

"Too modest, as you usually are," grunted Markham. "There's a frilly fortune in that box if it's properly exploited. But to make money out of an invention you have to spend money. Suppose you let me talk to dad in strict confidence, of course."

"You'd do that for me?"

"Sure I would. Why not?" There was a moment of silent embarrassment, and then Landis said, so to think about it, Wally. I want to see if I can't fight down that feeling about the criminal possibilities. It's a fearful good of you to offer to step in and—" edgments. We've been pretty chummy for a good many years, you and I, Owen, and it would be a pity if either of us wouldn't give the other a hand when the chance offered." Then, with a glance at his watch. "If it wasn't so late I'd stay a bit longer and ramble about another matter. But I guess the other matter will keep."

"It isn't late for me. What have I been doing that I ought not to have done?"

"I was watching you tonight when Betty Lawson was on the stage. I guess you know good and well what I saw!"

Landis flushed boyishly and looked down.

"You didn't see anything more than you have known for a good while."

Markham laughed. "Nothing more than all Carthage has known for that matter. But, say, boy—what do you think a girl is made of? For a half-year and better you've buried yourself in this work—about of yours, and if you've thought anything at all about Betty, you've taken it out in thinking."

What social pleasure she's enjoyed here's had to forage for in other directions—the amateur theatrical movements, for instance. I've chased her about a little—not nearly so much as I wanted to—but you've simply ignored her, Owen; you know you have."

The laggard in love spoke up quickly.

"You are not saying it all, Wally—not speaking for yourself, I mean. But you don't need to. I've known her since last year how it is with you. You are in love with Betty yourself. That is one reason why I've buried myself in my job here—to give you and her a chance to find out where you both stand. No, don't make any mistake; it isn't any 'silly knightly chivalry on my part—just common decency. If I should marry, I'm not even sure I could feed and clothe a wife. And when poverty comes in at the door—"

"Oh, shush! You needn't quote proverbs at me. Don't you suppose I know that I don't stand a Chinaman's chance with Betty? What I'm really about is the way you scamp my chances with her. There's no Richmond in the field. Did you know that?"

Landis' face fell.

"No! You don't mean that, Wally!" "I do, indeed; this new fellow, Canby, who is cutting such a wide swath with his wonderful development scheme for Carthage. Going to make it the other Chicago overnight and all that. He is rushing Betty to a finish, and she seems to like it."

A gridiron of fine lines appeared between Landis' eyes.

"I don't like Canby, Wally—what little I've seen of him."

"Just the same, he is exactly the kind of brute to take a girl's fancy; good-looking, dashing, man-of-the-big-world; that sort. Betty is plenty sensible, but at the same time she's human. There; I've said my say, now I'll toddle along. What do you do with this priceless racket of your overnight—take it to bed with you?"

"Not quite that. I keep it here!" Landis knelt before a small safe under the laboratory work-bench, opened it, put the black box inside and twisted the combination.

"I see, safe, blind, safe, find," said Markham, with a laugh for a week's pun. "Let me know when—or if—you want me to have a talk with dad about the financing. So long."

So much for the night when Betty Lawson, daughter of the physics professor at the college, starred in their little theater association's production. At a comparatively early hour, the following morning, Wally Markham, getting out his roadster to drive to town for a box of congratulatory roses to be taken to the successful actress, was called to the telephone. A strained voice that he barely recognized as Landis' came to him over the wire.

"Is that you, Wally? For heaven's sake, come around here to the house as quick as you can. My safe's been opened and the black box is gone!"

CHAPTER II

A Blind Lead

Landis was waiting at the driveway gate when Markham's roadster came to a stand, and his thin face seemed to have grown hazier overnight.

"It wasn't my imagination, after all—that feeling I told you about last night, the feeling that some one was spying upon me as I worked," he said. And as they entered the small built-up lot, "This is just as I found it a few minutes before I phoned you."

Markham stooped to look into the safe, the door of which was standing open.

"It was opened on the combination," he said.

"Of course—it had to be. The thief knew where it was inside and knew that he couldn't dynamite the safe without taking a long chance of destroying the thing he was after. I found it just as it stands now; the bolts shot, and the dial standing on the final figure of the combination."

"Um; that brings on more talk, right at the beginning of things. Somebody know your combination?"

The question seemed to plunge the inventor into a deep pit of embarrassment.

St. Lawrence Seaway Treaty Ready for Investigation by Borah—Dictatorship Decried for Prussia—Great Railway Merger Plan.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

W. D. Herridge

UNITED STATES and Canada have signed the treaty for construction of the great St. Lawrence seaway, which is to cost in the neighborhood of $800,000,000, but the pact must be ratified by congress and the dominion parliament before becoming effective. Ratification is probable but by no means certain. There are various parts of the treaty to which grave objections have been raised, notably those relating to the drawing of water from Lake Michigan for the Chicago sanitary canal. These and all other phases of the pact will be investigated by a senate committee headed by Senator Borah of Idaho. The inquiry will not start until August. The treaty, which had been under negotiation for eleven years, was signed by Secretary of State Stimson for the United States and Minister William D. Herridge for Canada. By its terms the seaway is to be constructed under the supervision of a commission to be known as the St. Lawrence International Rapid Section Commission. Five members are to be appointed by each country and the work is to be carried on free from governmental red tape and on a business basis. The commissioners will not have the right to direct construction of the power plants to develop 2,200,000 horse power, although they can co-ordinate these with the seaway. They can order deferred works. When their job is done, they cease to exist as a commission.

PRESIDENT HOOVER signed the relief act but still had to complete his plans for reorganization of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation which is to handle the huge fund. In doing this he had to decide on successors to Eugene Meyer, governor of the federal reserve board, and Paul Bestor, farm loan commissioner, whose retirement as directors of the corporation was made mandatory by the measure.

The corporation itself decided to discard red tape to expedite loans from the $300,000,000 for state relief of destitution and $222,000,000 for public works, the latter including $132,000,000 which may be used to match state highway expenditures. More than two-thirds of the $300,000,000 sum will be applied for immediately.

POLITICAL riots and murders in Prussia resulted in the establishment of a dictatorship for that German state and the declaration of martial law in Berlin and the province of Brandenburg.

For three weeks more than a hundred persons had been killed and 4,200 wounded in the pre-election campaign encounters, which were mainly between Hitler's Nazis and the Communists. President Von Hindenburg therefore issued the necessary emergency von Schleicher decree and Chancellor Von Papen became virtual dictator of Prussia, naming Mayor Franz Bracht of Essen as chief assistant. When Prussian Minister of the Interior Severing declared he would yield only to force, the decree of martial law was issued. Premier Braun and Severing were removed from the Prussian ministry. Open air political meetings had already been forbidden throughout the Reich.

That Germany faces revolution is seen in the flat threat by Hitler that if his Nazi party does not win control of the Reichstag in the coming elections it will forcibly seize control of the government and arrest all Socialists and Communist leaders. According to an Amsterdam newspaper, Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, minister of defense, will co-operate with Hitler. The general, it has been recognized for some time, is planning to make himself eventually the actual ruler of Germany.

The Amsterdam journal also says former Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm recently visited the ex-kaiser in Dorn to discuss plans for a coup d'etat after the elections. The scheme is to form a new government with the ex-crown prince as leader; to bring Wilhelm back from exile in a German warship and to restore the regime of house of Hohenzollern. Hitler, the paper says, will help but will not participate in the government.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI of Italy made a grand shake-up in his cabinet, five ministers resigning by compulsion. Chief of these was Dino Grandi, minister of foreign affairs. The others were Alfredo Rocco, minister of justice; Antonio Mosconi, minister of finance; Prof. Babbino Glilano, minister of education, and Glusepe Bottai, minister of corporations. Mussolini, who already was minister of interior as well as premier, kept for himself the portfolios of foreign affairs and corporations. Francisci, Jung and Ercole were named to the other vacancies. Eleven undersecretaries also were displaced.

Grandi was made ambassador to Great Britain.

IN ONE of its most important decisions the Interstate Commerce Commission approved a plan for consolidation of all eastern railroads, except those of New England, into four great systems. The plan will probably be accepted by the lines concerned, though it does not suit them in certain respects.

The four systems will be known as the New York Central, the Pennsylvania, the Baltimore & Ohio, and the Chesapeake & Ohio-Nickel Plate. The systems thus created will embrace 57,000 miles of rail lines—300 roads, though many of them are already operated by the large trunk lines.

The commissions' ruling caused an immediate reaction approaching jubilation in railroad circles, which hailed the plan as the most helpful factor in that industry in 12 years. In fact, as the report pointed out, the leading railroads have received virtually all that they have asked for in order to work out a new plan of economies.

GETTING into action rather more swiftly than their rivals, the Republican campaign leaders in Chicago headquarters started the preliminary work for the election of 42 United States senators in the central states. The plan was under the direction of Senator L. J. Dickinson of Iowa, keynoter in the national convention. "We are going to concentrate on the senatorial fight," he said. "Where a senator is stronger in his state than the President, we'll expect him to carry the whole ticket, and vice versa."

Senator Dickinson said the prohibition question would be the principal issue in many states, the people having to decide whether the Eighteenth amendment shall be repealed outright, as the Democrats desire, or replaced by another amendment giving congress control of the liquor traffic, the Republican solution.

On August 11 President Hoover will be officially notified of his nomination and will deliver his speech of acceptance at the White House. He has decided not to make a western trip this summer, but will send Vice President Curtis to represent him at the opening of the Olympic games.

GOVERNOR ROOSEVELT, having ended his short vacation cruise, was back in Albany attending to business and laying out his campaign plans with National Chairman Farley.

The latter gentleman announced the campaign would be run through the state organizations. There will be a campaign committee at Roosevelt headquarters in New York, but it will assist and co-operate with the state organizations rather than attempt to direct them. Farley said. There will be only one national headquarters, located in New York. The money will be raised by a special committee not yet named. Nellie Taylor Roosevelt of Wyoming will again be at the head of the women's organization.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who says she has always been "a profound dry," has publicly declared her belief that the Eighteenth amendment has not worked successfully and should be repealed.

THOUGH the members of the bonus army in Washington are rapidly leaving for their homes, taking advantage of the free fares offered by the government, those who remained, especially the radicals, were threatening more trouble in the form of a picketing of the White House. A promise to do this to congress were not called in special session to pay the bonus was made by Urban LeDonou ("McZero"). Brig. Gen. Smalley D. Butler, former marine, projected himself into the picture by giving the veterans a characteristically vigorous talk urging them to stay right there and praising their behavior.

"They are trying to get you to go home," he said. "You ought to keep some one here in the front line, trenches. You have as much right to a lobby in Washington as the United States Steel corporation. Don't take a step backward. Remember, as soon as you pull down the camp flag this movement will evaporate. Those of you who do go home, vote to kick 'em out of your enemies."

Field Marshal Viscount Plumer, one of Great Britain's distinguished generals of the World War, and indeed of previous wars, died in London and was interred in Westminster Abbey with great military pomp.

Louis Maurey, who was the chief artist of the now famous Currier & Ives prints, died in New York at the age of one hundred years. He lived to see his pictures, rather scorned at the time he made them, selling to connoisseurs at high prices.

THE economic conference of the British empire opened in Ottawa on Thursday with many of the empire's most eminent men in attendance. Stanley Baldwin, lord president of the British council, leader of his delegation, said that this is the most important conference in history for two reasons:

"First, Britain never before has been in a position to negotiate with a free hand from the electorate, and second, never before was the trade of the world so depressed."

(By Western Newspaper Union.)

CONGRESSMAN J. B. SHANNON'S house committee inquiring into the inroads of the government into business in competition with private concerns opened its hearings in Kansas City, his home town, and first received critics from many organizations.

M. W. Borders, in presenting the data assembled by the Federation of American Business, which has branches in 34 states and represents more than 100 industries suffering from competition from government boards and bureaus, financed by taxpayers' money, set forth that bureaucracy has grown to such proportions that it threatens the existence of the present form of American government.

A procession of merchants from Leavenworth testified that they were being driven to the wall by the competition from new government stores in the two federal penitentiaries and by the activities of the post exchange and book department at Fort Leavenworth.

Efforts of the government to get into the cafe and restaurant business were attacked by the American Hotel Association, with 6,000 member hotels. Live stock producers, commission men and bankers pictured the "collapse of live stock industry under withering dictatorship of the secretary of agriculture," and attacked the doings of the federal farm board.

THOUGH the members of congress during the recently ended session gave up a vast amount of time to political scheming, quibbling and useless talk, they actually did enact considerable legislation of moment, under pressure from the Chief Executive.

They passed a series of measures that began with the moratorium for intergovernmental debts, that included the creation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and that ended with the passage of the $2,122,000,000 relief bill and the home loan bank bill with its currency inflation provision.

They put through a new revenue measure designed to raise more than a billion dollars in additional taxes, and an economy bill saving perhaps $150,000,000 in government expenditures. They passed all the necessary department supply bills, but refused to make most of the promised economies in these.

Two measures long advocated by Senator Norris were passed. These were the "lame duck" resolution to change the constitutional dates for the beginning of congress and the inauguration of the President, and the anti-injunction bill relating to labor disputes.

The growing national discontent with prohibition was reflected in congress by two test votes in the house and several votes on the legalization of beer in the senate. On March 14 voting to bring the Beck-Canham repeal resolution to the floor, the house cast 137 wet votes, the largest of its kind since prohibition, as against 227 dry ballots. Two weeks later, a similar vote on the O'Connor-Hull beer bill was 192 to 218.

Senate votes pinned their hopes to various bills to legalize beer, and measures by Senators Hiram Bingham and Millard E. Tydings were offered as amendments to the tax bill, and in a final effort to gain modification and increase federal revenues as a rider to the home loan bank bill. The various attempts met failure.

President Hoover vetoed only three important pieces of legislation. These were the bill extending veterans' privileges to hitherto unthought of classes of former soldiers, and the first Garner-Wagner relief bill with its federal loans to individuals, and the bill to shear the President of his powers under the flexible provisions of the Smoot-Hawley tariff act.

WHEREVER in this country or abroad are found former students of the University of Illinois the news of the death of Thomas Arlie Clark was read with mournful interest. For many years dean of men in that institution, he performed the difficult duties of his position with extraordinary skill and tact, and won for himself a high place in the educational world.

Among other deaths of the week was that of Jules J. Jussier, who for many years was French ambassador to the United States and was one of the most popular of all the diplomats in Washington. Americans in Paris joined with the French in paying a last tribute to him at the funeral services.

Field Marshal Viscount Plumer, one of Great Britain's distinguished generals of the World War, and indeed of previous wars, died in London and was interred in Westminster Abbey with great military pomp.

Louis Maurey, who was the chief artist of the now famous Currier & Ives prints, died in New York at the age of one hundred years. He lived to see his pictures, rather scorned at the time he made them, selling to connoisseurs at high prices.

THE economic conference of the British empire opened in Ottawa on Thursday with many of the empire's most eminent men in attendance. Stanley Baldwin, lord president of the British council, leader of his delegation, said that this is the most important conference in history for two reasons:

"First, Britain never before has been in a position to negotiate with a free hand from the electorate, and second, never before was the trade of the world so depressed."

THE BLACK BOX OF SILENCE

A race half-way across the continent with mysterious robberies, attempted murders, hair-raising adventures, and the love of a maid and a man, makes this a story of unusual interest—among the best this distinguished author has produced. It will run serially in these columns. Be sure to read it.

WATERLOO

Church services for July 31st are as follows: Morning worship at 9:30. Preaching, Rev. Reed, subject, "Time." Sunday school at 10:30. The special feature of next Sunday evening service will be a playlet, "The Challenge of the Cross," given by a group of young people from Adrian. These young people have given this play in several places and have always brought out large crowds because of their exceptional ability in presenting it. These also bring with them a choir of trained voices. We urge you to come, because we know you will enjoy it.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Beeman and two children of Detroit spent from Wednesday until Sunday night at Alva and Earl Beeman's.

The Ever Ready circle picnic was a success. Prizes in contests were won by Laura Vicary, Mildred Beeman and Bernard Artz. Lolly-pops were enjoyed by the crowd.

Marie Stemen has returned home after spending three weeks in Toledo. 4-H club news: General meeting at the Center July 1. Crops meeting at Dick Bartons. Cocoa, sandwiches, cheese and cake were served. Poultry meeting July 15 at Monica McKernan's. Cocoa, pie, sandwiches were served. The annual 4-H picnic will be held at County Park, Clear Lake, next Saturday, July 30. Swimming, ball game, and other sports. Pot luck dinner.

Alva Beeman lost one of his best horses last Thursday by the heat. Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Rowe and children of Chelsea, and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hamill and daughters of Jackson are camping at the Clad Rowe farm.

Mrs. Edna Cooper graciously entertained the U. B. Square circle Tuesday afternoon. Work was done on a quilt.

She Reduced 38 Pounds The Safe Way

"I have been taking Kruschen Salts for 4 months and I think they are wonderful. I am 32 years old and 5 ft. 2 in. tall. I was very fat. I weighed 165 lbs. and now I weigh 127 lbs. and feel fine. If I let up taking the Salts one morning I feel lazy and heavy." Mrs. Florence Loftus, Boston.

This is just one of hundreds of letters we get every month. Kruschen not only causes you to lose fat but while you are losing it you gain in health—in vivaciousness—you lose fat where fat is most prominent and at the same time keep stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels functioning naturally.

Any Druggist in the world will sell you a jar of Kruschen for a trifling sum—take one-half teaspoonful in a glass of hot water every morning—go light on fatty meats, potatoes and sweets. But for your health's sake demand and get Kruschen Salts—imitations are numerous. It's the little daily dose that does it.

Ancient Bushmen

Deep in the wooded foothills of the Drakensberg may yet be found the secret of South Africa's first inhabitants. Scientists are busy probing for relics of Berg Bushmen in hilly valleys where grow luxuriant palms and gigantic yellowwood trees that date back for 2,000 years. A skull, a number of clay pots and other relics have also been found in caves, which abound in the area. Rock paintings point to the theory that an aboriginal tribe made this mountainous district its home many years ago. The area must have been a paradise for early man, for it abounds in game, and has semitropical vegetation.

Great "Roman Holiday" Staged on Alban Lake

In the year 51 A. D., the great tunnel which was to drain the Alban lake was completed, and the Emperor Claudius celebrated it with a characteristic Roman spectacle. He gave a minute naval battle on the lake, repeating upon a much larger scale a similar spectacle Augustus had given. Claudius named two opposing fleets with 10,000 men. Some of the galleys had three and four banks of oars. Around the shores of the lake troops were stationed to see that none of the naval gladiators escaped.

An immense multitude of people from Rome and the neighboring towns gathered to see the battle. The banks, the slopes and the hillsides were crowded with spectators, so that the scene resembled a vast theater. The emperor, dressed in a splendid military cloak, and his wife, scripping, also wearing a military cloak, presided. The men who did the fighting were criminals and slaves. History tells us that in this anguinary conflict the combatants, possibly animated by expectations of freedom, fought bravely. It was they who coined the famous Latin salutes: "Hail, Emperor! We who are about to die salute thee."

Excepting and reserving therefrom a piece of land now occupied by the School District near the south-east corner of said tract containing one-half acre, more or less, being a part of section number sixteen (16) in Town One South, Range Four East, in the Township of Dexter, County of Washtenaw and State of Michigan. Dated July 27, 1932.

The Dapple-Gray

When the dapple-gray was a 4-yr old, And he led the herd with a flying mane, Then the idle days of the colt were done, And the hour had come for the trace and rein. So we snubbed him up at the snubbing post, And he fought, red-eyed, for an hour or more, 'Til his will was broke by the hempen rope, And he let us fit the old hackamore. Then his value rose in the marks of men, As he learned the law of the trace and rein. As he drew the plow through the ranks of corn, Or the dusty reaper that cut the grain. When the world has learned with the dapple-gray That the power to serve is the mate of worth— Then the golden age of our dreams will dawn, And a truer freedom will bless the earth.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and the Statute in such case made and provided, on Saturday, the Twenty-second day of October, A. Commencing at the north-east corner of section number sixteen (16), Town One South, Range Four East; thence running south along the east line of said section to the center of the road running easterly and westerly through said section; thence westerly along the center of said road to a point ten (10) chains and seventeen (17) links west of the north and south quarter line of said section, and to Samuel Schultz's east line north of the highway; thence north along said Schultz's east line and continuing north parallel with the half quarter section line to the north line of said section; thence east along the north line of said section to the place of beginning, containing two hundred-seventeen (217) acres of land, more or less.

AN unusual, exciting, interesting holding story in which the author has taken a modern invention as the "hub" of his narrative and done a brilliant bit of story telling. From the opening, when Owen Landis, designer of the "Black Box of Silence," dreamer and enthusiast, confides his secret and his fears as to what ignoble usage his invention may be put, to his chum, Walter Markham, until the cleverly worked out and altogether satisfactory ending, even the most exacting reader will be fed to a pleasurable excess on action, climaxes and entertaining dialogue. With it all there is an appealing love story.

This story of exceptional merit will appear serially in these columns. It means a real treat for our readers, and we urge all to read it.

Sutter's Case Supreme

Tragedy of Gold Rush

The richest man in the world died a beggar on the steps of the Washington Capitol, according to an article by a leading German writer, Stefan Zweig, presented for the first time in English in the Golden Book Magazine. Gold was first discovered in California on the property of John A. Sutter. Sutter at that time owned most of inhabited California, including the present sites of San Francisco and Sacramento.

A year later he owned nothing, his thousands of cattle, his acres of vineyards, his miles of private railroads, his home had been appropriated and destroyed by the mad army of gold-seekers.

Sutter took to court the largest claim that has ever been filed anywhere! And finally won it! But a thousand men and women, crazed by the fear of dispossession, set fire to the hall of records, looted Sutter's home and killed his son. Sutter spent the rest of his life in a fruitless search for justice.

Whole Country May Be Put Under Martial Law

Martial law is arbitrary government in cases where the safety of the state or nation is menaced. It is really not law at all and has no relation to military law, which is an established code for the regulation of military forces. Martial law is the law of military necessity in the actual presence of war and is justified only when, because of actual invasion or civil war, the courts are closed and it is impossible to administer justice according to law.

The Supreme Court of the United States has held that a state may proclaim martial law when the safety of the state demands it. It is presumed that the Constitution, by implication, also permits the declaring of martial law in the United States as a whole. This implication is contained in the clause providing that the privileges of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended except in cases of rebellion or invasion when such suspension is essential to the public welfare.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Cash prizes of $500 each will be awarded the winners in the fifty divisions of the United States that have been determined according to population. Everyone is eligible, excepting employees of the sponsor and associated companies.

Details regarding the Norge Contest are fully covered in advertisements which are appearing throughout the country. The newspaper has been allotted the bulk of the appropriation, since in the words of Howard E. Blood, president of Norge Corporation, makers of Norge Kollator Refrigeration, "The newspaper offers that point-of-decision contact which is obtainable through no other medium. It is for this reason that we have chosen newspapers to tell readers about the Norge Summer Contest. Both distributors and dealers will receive announcements in the advertising columns which will give full information on the contest. And, in addition, the prospective contestant can receive full information from any Norge dealer in any city."

The Norge Cross-Word Puzzle Contest is fully outlined in the booklet available from Lloyd R. Heydlauff, local dealer. It shows the 15 puzzles presented for solution and gives complete rules for competing. Norge dealers only have these booklets on hand to be given free and without obligation to anyone requesting a copy.

Who will win the $500 prize in this section? The winner's name will be published in this paper, soon as it is announced.
