Rain Postpones Finish Of Twilight Season

Local Twilight Ball League fans, who anticipated seeing one of the hottest games of the season last Friday night were disappointed when the game scheduled to be played between the Legion and St. Mary's was called on account of rain. However, this postponed game will be played next Monday night, weather permitting. In case of rain on Monday night the game will be played Tuesday.

Baseball dopsters are making a lot of predictions as to which team might yet be holding first position when the season finally closes. They are injecting a few "ifs" as follows: IF the Congregationals defeat St. Mary's tonight and St. Mary's tonight defeats the Legion Monday night, there will be three teams tied for first place; IF St. Mary's win tonight with the Legion; IF St. Mary's win or lose tonight and lose Monday night the show will be finished; IF such a catastrophe would be permitted to happen as to place three teams in a tie for first position a series of games would be necessary to decide which team would carry away the honors.

However, all this "doping" by the dopsters may not mean very much after all, so fans are urged to attend the two remaining games of the season as now scheduled and if additional games are necessary they will be announced later. Don't forget the games—St. Mary's vs. Congregationals tonight; St. Mary's vs. Legion (postponed game) next Monday evening.

Past week's results:
Thursday—Congregationals 4, St. Paul's 2.
Friday—Rain.
Monday—Legion 4, Methodists 3.
Tuesday—Masons 6, St. Paul's 5.

The standings:

	W	L	Pct.
Legion	10	4	.714
St. Mary's	9	4	.692
Congregationals	9	5	.643
St. Paul's	6	9	.399

Michener Explains Congressional Acts IN KIWANIS ADDRESS

Hon. Earl C. Michener, of Adrian, Representative in Congress from this district, delivered a very interesting address to an appreciative audience consisting of Kwanians, their wives and guests, numbering more than fifty, at Sylvan Estates Monday evening.

Although Mr. Michener is a candidate for renomination at the primary election to be held September 13th, his talk Monday evening was free from the discussion of any political issues, it being a resume of the acts of the last session of Congress and an explanation of some of the principal bills passed.

Following are some of the highlights of Mr. Michener's address:

"The last Congress has been the most hectic in our history. We have been passing through our greatest depression. Expenses of Government, like personal expenses, have increased. Congress was confronted with the proposition of raising large additional sums for relief. It was confronted with reducing the cost of government. The first proposition required more taxes; the second proposition demanded less taxes, and because of the depression the Government's income was reduced more than 50 per cent.

"With all this it was necessary to balance the budget. The Administration outlined a relief program, the underlying principle of which was an effort to revive industry, furnish employment in industry, assure permanent jobs, and yet avoid the deleterious effects from the Government. Appropriation bills were presumably cut to the bone by the budget. The Congress then reviewed the work of the budget and made further reductions.

"The result was $1,139,000,000 less appropriations this year than in the preceding year. The reduction in the departmental expenses or in the actual expenses of running the government, are 20 per cent less than last year.

"These reductions in the various departments range all the way from 4 per cent in the Treasury Department to 33 per cent in the legislative bill, which covers Congress. These are all wholesome reductions, but must be further reduced.

"While the entire cost of government—local, State and Federal, is $14,000,000,000, yet the local government covers $9,500,000,000 of that amount.

"We must not lose sight of the fact that the tax that is causing the trouble here in this locality is not the Federal tax. Preceding the new (Continued on last page)

Local Couple Speak Nuptials Wednesday

The marriage of Miss Zita Anna Merkel and Joseph Philip Hafner, both of Chelsea, was solemnized at seven o'clock Wednesday morning, August 10th, at St. Mary's church, with Rev. Henry Van Dyke officiating. The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Merkel, the former a brother of the bride. Preceding the ceremony Mrs. J. Vincent Burg sang "O Promise Me." High mass was sung by Father John Farrell.

Miss Merkel chose for her wedding a gown of pilot blue crepe with lace trimmings and she carried a bouquet of bridal roses. The matron of honor was gowned in figured crepe and carried Briarcliff roses.

A wedding breakfast was served the bridal party immediately after the ceremony, following which Mr. and Mrs. Hafner left on a motor trip to points in northern Michigan. They will make their home on West Middle St., Chelsea.

DEER COMING CLOSER

Some of these fine mornings early risers in Chelsea are quite apt to see a herd of wild deer galloping down the street. These animals have been venturing a little closer to the village each week. Last week a buck was sighted at Hardscrabble Fruit Farm, and this week Wednesday morning a three-point buck was loitering in the barnyard at the Wm. Hafner farm just west of Chelsea. Mr. Hafner and family watched the deer for several minutes before it sighted them. When it became frightened it ran to the north into a woodlot.

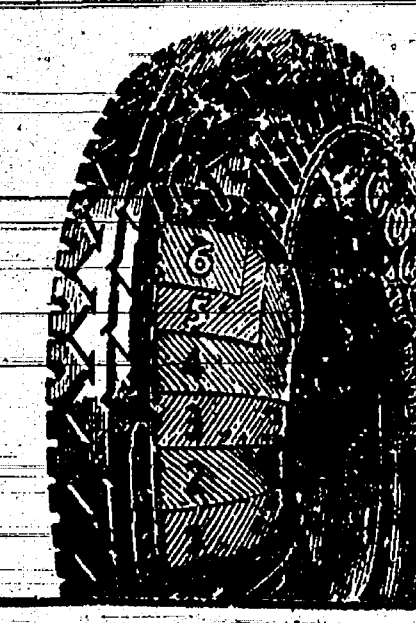

THANKS, GEORGE

The Standard acknowledges with thanks the receipt of a basket of choice peaches from Geo. T. English. The peaches, of the Early Prolific variety, were grown on Mr. English's Hardscrabble Fruit Farm, located 2 miles northwest of Chelsea. Mr. English has many varieties of peaches, with planting planned so that he will have ripe peaches to offer the public most of the time from now until late fall.

WEEKLY NEWS PULLETIN

Frank D. Fitzgerald
Secretary of State

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 10.—In recent weeks, representatives of an organization advocating taxation reforms have been giving out erroneous information regarding the cost of administering the motor vehicle weight law. In Muskegon county, citizens have been told that the cost of administering this law is $9,000,000 a year. In Kent county, according to reports received by the Department of State, agents of the organization claim that the law costs $14,000,000 a year. In other counties, still other claims have been made.

These claims are wildly extravagant. In 1931, the cost of plates, and all distribution costs including branch office fees, auditing costs and the costs of maintaining a quadruple file was about 50 cents per set. In 1932, the total cost of manufacturing and distributing a set of plates will be approximately 40 cents per set. In 1931 approximately 1,300,000 sets of license plates were sold at a cost of approximately $650,000, while this year the cost should not exceed $500,000.

This reduction in costs came about by reducing fees allowed branch offices, by reducing office rentals and by lowering auditing, filing and other administrative charges.

Included in these costs is the maintenance of the quadruple file which contains more than 5,000,000 separate cards, which is required by law. The file contains four cards for each vehicle, under the classifications of owners' names, license numbers, title numbers and motor numbers. The law provides that these records be kept for three years. Through these files, in ordinary cases, a complete history of a motor vehicle can be given during a three-minute long distance telephone call if the person asking information can give the owner's name, license number, title or motor number. The department averages more than 200 requests for information of this sort every day.

On a basis of collecting $20,000,000 in license fees at a cost of $500,000 it costs about two and one-half per cent of the revenue to manufacture and distribute the license plates.

Market Your Grain
Livestock provides the best market for Michigan grains under present price conditions, according to members of the animal husbandry division of Michigan State College.

Groups of calves bought by State College for experimental feeding cost $7.50 per hundredweight and were sold for the same price, but they made gains rapidly enough to pay the following prices per hundredweight for grain: ground barley, $1.48; shelled corn, $1.30; and ground oats, $1.30.

Roughage and grain can be marketed through lambs at a good profit. In forced feeding, approximately equal quantities of roughage and grain are fed, but, if light lambs are carried through a longer feeding period, the proportion of roughage can be increased to about twice the amount of grain.

Better than current market prices for feed can be realized from feeding lambs which sell for the same price per pound that was paid for them. Any increase in market price for the finished lambs will materially increase the returns from the feed.

Good, thrifty pigs are excellent grain markets unless an attempt is made to make the gains on grain without any protein supplement when the hogs are being fed in a dry lot. The College livestock feeders say that the cost of gains under such conditions is prohibitive and they recommend the addition of skim milk or tankage to the grain ration.

Altogether Animal
Silk is purely an animal product, since it is a secretion from silkworms, or the larvae of silkworms, from which they spin their cocoons.

PINCKNEY — Starting Monday, August 1, 1932, Pinckney postoffice now has but two rural mail routes in place of three. Carriers G. W. Dinkel and John Dinkel will continue to carry mail but Carrier Russell Livermore has been transferred to Dexter to replace Carrier Cord Thurber who has been retired. Livermore had 29 miles of mail route. This has been divided between the two remaining carriers. This gives John Dinkel 48 miles to cover and G. W. Dinkel 44. In addition to this the latter has 5 miles extra during the summer resort season, giving him a total of 49 miles.—Dispatch.

BOARD OF EDUCATION ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Board of Education is making several changes in the physical condition of the school plant during the vacation months. Several rooms on the first floor of the high school building have been affected by the gradual settling of the foundation in such manner as to cause the floors to be pulled away from the baseboards. This condition has been corrected by the use of a new type of two-piece molding, placed along the floor at its junction with the baseboard.

For several years it has been the custom to mop the floors with oil during the summer and at Christmas time. As a result the floors have become blackened. A new policy of floor maintenance has been adopted which does away with the use of oil. In order to put the floors into condition for this treatment, those of the gymnasium and the high school classrooms and study hall have been sanded. The treatment of the gym floor is complete and consisted of the repainting of the lines and the application of three coats of sealer. The lane along the south side, which carries traffic between high school and elementary buildings has received several coats of wax above the sealer.

During this month the other floors that have been sanded will receive two coats of sealer, followed by two coats of wax.

All of the floors in the elementary school building have been scrubbed twice with an electric floor machine and are receiving a third scrubbing this week. This will be followed by an application of a substance which will be sprayed upon the floors in a mistlike form and then polished with the floor machine. This same type of treatment will be given the corridors and other portions of the high school building that were not sanded.

The methods of floor treatment described above have several advantages. Appearance is improved. The floors cannot catch and hold disease-producing germs. The necessity for using sweeping compound is removed. Another project carried out by the Board this summer is the placing of a drying rack for clothing in the boys' dressing room. This rack is swung upon four bars from the joists above the ceiling. The rack itself consists of three parallel pieces of lumber, two inches by four inches by 16 feet, placed four feet apart and joined at the ends by two twenty-sixes. The rack hangs in a horizontal position six and one-half feet from the floor. Along both sides of the timbers, clothes hangers have been attached, thus providing ample opportunity for boys to hang up their athletic clothing in such manner as to allow it to dry properly.

Heretofore the dressing rooms of both boys and girls have been equipped with half-size steel lockers. These are so small as to be of little use to a member of an athletic team, since they measure only 12 by 12 by 30 inches. Each of the dressing rooms has thirty of these small lockers. The Board deems it wise to replace these with full-size lockers measuring 12 or 15 by 15 by 60 inches. A sufficient number of these new lockers will be installed in the dressing rooms to supply team members.

The advantage of having lockers in the school corridors and cloak rooms that are available for the use of individual students is universally recognized. Students appreciate the privilege of putting their books, clothing, and other valuable articles under lock and key. In order to begin the equipping of our high school building with these individual lockers, the Board is installing a limited number of full-size steel lockers on three floors of the building. It is obvious that not enough lockers can be purchased to supply all students and hence the Board has decided to make the use of the lockers a purely voluntary matter and to collect a nominal fee from those students who wish to take advantage of the locker privilege. It will be remembered that the half-size lockers in the dressing rooms are being removed. These will be placed in the first floor corridor, and rented to students at 25¢ per semester or half-year. The full size lockers for boys will be placed in the basement corridor and those for girls in the second floor cloakrooms. These large lockers will be rented at 40¢ per semester. It is apparent that by this rental system a fund can be built up which in a few years' time will enable every student to be supplied with a locker. Each student who rents a locker will supply his or her own padlock and will deposit with the superintendent one key to this lock.

The full-size lockers will be available for high school students only. The half-size type may be rented by students of the high school or by pupils of the 6th, 7th and 8th grades. As suggested above, only a limited number of lockers will be put into use this year. Since not all students can be supplied, the lockers will be issued to those students who first make application and pay their first semester rental. Applications for lockers may be made with the superintendent at any time hereafter.

Most people are acquainted with the fact that the tops of school desks are apt to acquire a collection of autographs, as well as sundry other works of art. These carvings may be dear to the heart of the author but they seriously detract from the proper appearance of a schoolroom. When school begins next month every pupil will occupy a seat that has had its top sanded and refinished. All tops will be free of marks and we trust that the entire school population will join in an effort to keep the varnish on these tops unbroken.

The Board is publishing this information concerning the summer repair work in the belief that the general public will be interested. Those who pay taxes in the Chelsea district are stockholders in a corporation of considerable size, and the Board of Directors of this institution of yours is impelled both as a duty and as a pleasure to keep you informed concerning its efforts to maintain and improve your property.

The superintendent has called upon 45 prospective non-resident students of the Chelsea High School during the past several weeks. These young people are either graduates of rural schools or belong to families that have recently moved into Chelsea's territory. Only two of them have ever attended our high school in previous years, and they only for a period of a few weeks. In other words, these 45 boys and girls represent additions to the list of rural children already enrolled in the high school.

In most cases a conference was held with both the prospective student and his parents. In a few cases only the students and in a few others only the parents were seen. Twenty-eight of the 45 young people have stated that they will attend our high school during the coming year. Five will probably go to Grass Lake. One intends to enroll at Dexter, and another at Stockbridge. Two will attend St. Mary's. Four are uncertain regarding their plans and four do not intend to continue their schooling any further, at least during the approaching year.

A check-up on last year's graduating class of 29 students will reveal that 13 of them were non-residents of the Chelsea district. If we may assume that all of the non-residents who attended school last year as 6th, 7th or 8th graders will return this fall, then it seems proper to believe that the enrollment of non-residents will be greater than during the past year. Of course it is likely that the plans of some persons will undergo change between this date and the opening of the school year, but with all proper allowances for losses, the Board is looking forward to an increased enrollment in the high school.

When the new steel lockers for the high school building arrive, they will be in a knocked-down condition. This means that the various flat parts will be crated in bunches to save space. The task of assembling these parts into complete lockers is a relatively simple one, but it requires a considerable quantity of labor. The thought has occurred to us that we may be able to secure the aid of several high school boys for this work. The Board will be pleased if any boys who can give some of their time to this matter will get in touch with the superintendent and advise him where they may be reached when the lockers arrive.

The urgent advice of physicians has caused Miss Stephanie Wedemeyer to resign her position as teacher of English, Latin and French in the Chelsea High School. Her successor has not yet been selected.

What Is The Fundamental Purpose Of The American Public School System?

A Digest of a Series of Articles by William McAndrew, Formerly Superintendent of the Chicago Public Schools, in "The Nation's Schools", September, 1930 to February, 1931.

By Earl Y. Poore, Superintendent, Chelsea Public Schools

There is one portion of McAndrew's third article that is of special concern to us in Michigan:

"I study the program of the state association of my dear old Michigan which ranks away up in the top row of educational organizations. In more than a hundred sections of it, with more than fifteen hundred addresses, demonstrations, musical recitations and so forth, I look for the big idea. In the multiplicity of topics—leisure time, public speaking, tone building, the goal in art, the Winnetka plan, Latin in Michigan, new reports, cards, the chain between Caesar and Cicero—what strikes me as astonishing in the program of the Michigan association, as in those I see of California, Massachusetts and other American commonwealths, is their remoteness from the purpose which Washington, Jefferson and the others insisted should be that of the tax supported schools. There is a sweet oblivion to the fact that these program makers are ignoring the work the only work which would justify taxing nonparents to pay school costs.

"Out of 1,500 offerings of the Michigan convention I count three that are in the field for which the public schools could be justified as entitled to public funds. These three are: a discussion on 'What Is Wrong in Our Civic Teaching?' set down for Lee Hornsby of Traverse City; 'Art and Citizenship,' by Mary Hutton of Ypsilanti; and 'The Development of Citizenship' by Harriet Van Antwerp of Ann Arbor. By a stretch of imagination I can relate seven more of the 1,500 selections to the main duty. Ninety-nine and four-tenths per cent of a statewide program is devoted to matters which hardly entered at all into the considerations that were urged as warranting the establishment of schools to be paid for by all the people, whether parents or not.

"It is fair to assume that the interests which are paramount in the school program are those that determine the convention offerings. My audiences at the meetings were delightful, polite people. They listened to my presentation of the historical, financial and civic obligations upon them. Here and there a schoolmaster, whose name had been given me by an inspector, gave practical ideas on the teaching of politics. The majority of Michigan teachers, like those of every state known to me, are bored by civic considerations. They are interested in 'organized dramatics,' the dictionary below the seventh grade, and 'Katie's Kitchen Cabinet Barn'.

"Except for the appalling few exceptions noted, the entire Michigan association program is quite suitable for select schools supported entirely by parents in any nation where the people have no voice in the government. Yet Michigan, like Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota, was by the Ordinance of 1787 committed to the duty of running its schools to preserve good government. She has had almost as rotten government as Illinois and New York. No association program has carried topics like these: 'How can we teachers clean the dirty politics of our towns?' 'How can we promote the honest election of senators instead of letting the post be sold?' 'Why has our state such a bad smelling reputation for harboring bootleggers?' 'What are our own high school children, who are given an expensive education at the expense of the community, doing for their town at present?' 'What proportion of my teaching time do I devote to making plain the present ills of our body-politic and the cures we teachers and pupils must promote?'

All of the above is a direct quotation from McAndrew, who is a native of Michigan and was educated in Michigan schools. Just now we hear much about the costs of education. Teachers complain because they get small salaries. They criticize the Board of Education for failure to supply them with proper equipment for their "regular" work. On every hand you hear the teachers crying for more money for the schools. The thing I am wondering is whether the public school does not cost too much already for the result it gets. While we teachers howl for more pay, laws are broken, corrupt judges are elected and bribed, crime is more prevalent than in any other land; the citizenry whom the schools of yesterday were to enlighten is untaught in politics and the costliest of all public services, education, is, without guiding principle and is not preparing a civic tomorrow in advance of the tragic today.

The California Taxpayers' Commission hit the nail on the head when it published this statement: "The added increments applied to education must show commensurate returns. The machine must deliver its grist." The time has come for the public school teacher to think less of how much he is paid and more of how he may earn what he gets. If he is not filled with a determination to do his share in turning out graduates who are apt to be useful citizens, then his salary is too high, no matter how large or small it may be.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Having demonstrated the power of an extraordinary silence, the "Black Box" which he has perfected, Bert Canby, a young man in the little town of Carthage, confided to his chum, Wally Markham, that he feared the device if exposed might be used for evil purposes. That night the black box is stolen from a safe in Landis' laboratory.

CHAPTER II.—Landis tells Markham the only person, beside himself, knowing the combination of the safe, is Betty Lawson, with whom the inventor is in love. Markham takes a master cast of a woman's footprint, found beneath the window of the laboratory.

"Exactly what I've asked myself dozens of times," he laughed. "But while there's life, there's hope. How are you feeling after last night's struggle?"

"Oh—was it a struggle? Did it look that way to you? What made you, Owen, take a stage-box?—Did you think you might be able to rattle me and make me forget my lines?"

"Sheer devotion," he explained in mock tenderness. "We wanted to be as near you as possible. Your work was splendid. Not feeling any after-effects at all?"

"She dropped into a chair and passed her hand over her forehead. 'Sit down for a few minutes, won't you? After-effects, you say? I'll admit it was a bit of a struggle, last night. I had since fought horribly, at first—and she went on telling him just how the fight—complex had attacked her.

Sitting opposite Markham listened, and as she talked the testimony of the circumstantial evidence became still more unbelievable. Surely if she had taken the leading part in a burglary an hour after the play, she couldn't sit there chatting with him apparently without a single trace of self-consciousness. Yet there was the accusing footprint under Landis' workshop window and the confidant shoe in the room overhead.

"Weren't you pretty tired when the thing was over?" he asked.

"I was a perfect dishing! It made me furious. To think that I can play my eighteen holes of golf and come up smiling, and yet be wrung dry by a few hours on the stage!"

"Action and Reaction," he suggested. "Nothing is more stimulating than playing to an appreciative audience, especially when the player makes such a cracking success of a part as you did of yours last night. And the aftermath of any stimulant is apt to be a let-down that leaves you flat and with a dark-brown taste in your mouth. You ought to have had a bit of supper after the play."

"I did that very thing. Bert took me to Pozzoni's."

"He marked the familiar 'Bert' as applied to Canby, setting it down as a measure of the distance Canby had come on the road of the rubber-though a moment's reflection told him that it might mean little in Betty's mouth. 'She was nothing if not modern. 'And after the supper Canby drove you home in his car?'

"She nodded. 'He had to. I was so sleepy I could scarcely hold my eyes open.'"

"Still, I suppose the long way around was the shortest way home, at that, wasn't it?" he thrust in, with his good-natured grin.

"It might have been," she admitted. "To tell the truth, I was so tired and sleepy that Bert may have been driving circles around the block for all I knew, or cared."

"Bert," he said; "it's Bert" and "Betty" already, is it?"

"Whoops!" she laughed. "Is that the way you feel about it? But what do you expect? You home boys are so slow. Bert signed me up for last night nearly three weeks ago, and you didn't ask me until day before yesterday.

day. A girl has to take what she can get, doesn't she?"

"I suppose so," he yielded. In all of this lighthearted give-and-take she was the Betty he knew best; teasingly vivacious, altogether frank and friendly, wholly unembarrassed. If she were wearing a mask for him it fitted faultlessly.

His thoughts whirled back to the performance of the night before; to her almost inspired interpretation of her part in the play. Was she acting a part now?

"Some girls can reach out and take anything they have a fancy for," he said, answering her query; "you, for one, Betty, dear. You'll have a lot to answer for by the time you're a woman grown."

"I like that—'a woman grown'!" she retorted. "Am I not white, free and well, perhaps not quite twenty-one, but near enough to take the curse off? Never mind; if you think I'm a menace to the peace of Carthage, the menace will be removed after Commencement. Daddy is going out to the wild and woolly for the summer, and he is threatening to take me along."

"Good hunting, I suppose?" Though the professor, after the chat of physics in the college it was well known that his hobby was paleontology.

"It wouldn't be anything else. But he promises not to take me into the wilderness unless I want to go. We have friends in Browster, in the Timanyoni, and I'm to visit with them."

"You'll have a good time, wherever you are, trust you for that," she averred. "All the same, we shall miss you, or we'll say Bert Canby will miss you."

"What makes you say that so spitefully? You shouldn't be narrow, Wally, dear."

"No, he agreed mildly. "Nobody should be narrow. But I don't care so awfully much for Canby; for one thing, his eyes are too close together."

"And for other things I suppose you'd say he is too good-looking, dresses too well, is too successful in business, plays too good a game of golf and bridge. I'm afraid you are hopeless, Wally."

"Hopeless, and rather proud of it," he laughed, getting up to go. "Would you like to take a little spin this morning?"

"Too busy, thank you. I've a world of things to do before we close the house for the summer."

"All right," he acquiesced. "I'll vanish and let you get on with it."

And with that he took his leave, with the mystery of the black box's disappearance as dense as it had been when he alighted from his car at the Lawson door.

CHAPTER IV

Broken Threads

During the four days which intervened between the disappearance of Landis' black box and the college Commencement, Markham burrowed patiently and alone. If the footprints under Landis' laboratory window had been made by Betty Lawson, her companion, and accomplice, must have been Herbert Canby. Hence, during the four-day interval, Markham spent most of his time keeping the promoter of real estate schemes under quiet surveillance.

Nothing definitely helpful came of this. So far as outward appearance went, Canby ate, drank and slept the Greater-Carriage scheme to the exclusion of most other interests, also, he was gradually overcoming the effects of small-city conservatism to the substantial increase of his deposits in the Carthage Saving Bank & Trust, of which Markham senior was the president.

Wally dropped in upon his father at the bank for a word of counsel. The young man had inherited a comfortable bulk of which was invested in a local loan and implement factory, the future expansion of which was threatened by one of the ramifications of Canby's schemes.

"About that tract adjoining the shops," Wally began. "I was told that Canby is trying to get an option on it. Do you know anything about it?"

"Nothing definite. Gaultney—he's taken over the handling of the estate—was here yesterday, and he said nothing about it. I'm reasonably sure he would give us a chance if anybody else were trying to tie the tract up."

"I hope he would—but that Canby is pretty cagey in his deals, and he knows how much we're going to need that piece of ground some day."

"You needn't worry a bit about Canby, Wally. He's nothing but a noisy false alarm—as a good many people in this town are going to find out before they are through with him. As long as nobody can put a finger upon anything he has done that you could catch, or even shady. Just the same, I shan't be surprised any day if the bookkeeper comes in to tell me that Canby's account has been checked out, lock, stock and barrel. When that happens, if it happens, I'm thinking we shall have seen the last of the young man who says he's from New York."

Markham sought Landis in his backyard workshop, and found the robbed inventor a prey to the most gloomy forebodings touching the use to which his stolen invention might be put.

"I'm a total loss, Wally," was the way he described his condition; "can't work—can't even think straight. And now Betty tells me she's leaving Carthage for the entire summer."

Markham laughed. "Which is another way of saying that the worst is yet to come, eh? Then, 'When did you see Betty?'

"Yesterday. She came to the house to tell the folks goodby. They are leaving for the West tomorrow, she and her father."

"Did she come out here to your shop?"

"Oh, she couldn't well do less than to include me in the goodbyes."

"Well, what did you talk about?"

"Shucks! I wasn't fit to talk about anything. She said it and tried to jolly me up. Wanted to know if I couldn't take the summer off and go out to the wilderness with her and her father. Of course, she didn't mean it."

"Of course not," Markham agreed brutally. "As you say, she was merely trying to jolly you up a bit. But what about the black box? Any new developments?"

"Nothing; less than nothing. I've been buying newspapers from all around and reading them for the crime news. Plenty of crime, of course, but nothing to hint at any mystery. But it will come, you mark my words!"

"Good stunt, that—watching the papers. Keep it up."

"I shall, I suppose you haven't learned anything?"

"Nothing that you could give a name to," Markham evaded. Obviously, he couldn't tell Landis the length to which he had gone in checking up the scorching shoe. Neither could he make any mention of his suspicions of Canby, since Landis knew that Canby was Betty's escort on the night of the play. It was a mess, any way one chose to look at it.

Later that afternoon Markham learned from the room clerk of the Collier house, where Canby had his room, that the promoter had left town, to be away overnight. Whereupon he took another lawless step in the path which, up to the present, had led nowhere. Ormsbury, manager of the hotel, was a thin, tired friend, and to him Markham appealed.

"You know me pretty well, John, and I'm going to ask you to break all hotel traditions for me," was the way he began on Ormsbury. "I want to borrow the master key to the rooms on the third floor for a few minutes. Do I get it?"

"You've got your nerve, Wally," Ormsbury chuckled. "What's your line this time? Are you posing as a room thief? Or are you playing around as an amateur detective? Whose room do you want to break into?"

"Can't we let the room number hang up in the air for the time being? I don't want to point a suspicion unless there is something to point it at."

"Then you are sleuthing? Why not just let it go to the police, and so on on the windward side of the law? I suppose you know what will happen if you should be caught out between bases?"

"Of course. But I'm not going to be caught out. The rooms I want to break into are unoccupied just now, and you may be sure I'll leave them exactly as I find them."

"You've given yourself away," said the manager, with a laugh. "There is nobody away on the third floor excepting Mr. Canby. What have you got on him, Wally?"

"Nothing at all. I merely want to see how he lives when he's at home."

"All right," Ormsbury agreed, producing the coveted passkey. "It's smashing the traditions, as you say, but I'm banking on your discretion. Don't you want an authorized witness along?"

"No, you'd better not come. What you don't know you can swear you don't know. If anything develops, I'll promise you'll be the first to know it. Won't that answer?"

"I guess so—for this one time. But, for the Lord's sake, no chatter!"

With the pick-lock key in his possession Markham made sure there was no one looking on in the corridor when he opened the door of Canby's sitting room and let himself in. The sitting room, bath, and the adjoining bedroom were all in order, and it took him but a few minutes to make a rapid but thorough search in every nook and corner large enough to conceal Landis' black box. He didn't find the box; he had secretly hoped to.

It was when he was shutting the doors of the clothes closet wardrobe in the bedroom that he made a discovery. One of the several suits of clothes had fallen from its hook, and when he reached down to prevent it from interfering with the closing of the door he found that the bottom board of the piece of furniture was loose.

Laying the fallen suit aside, he lifted it. Underneath there was an enclosed space of a few inches in depth. At the farther end his groping hand came in contact with a leather bag lying flat. When he tried to lift it, it was so heavy that he had to take both hands.

Taken from its hiding place and opened upon the floor, the case contained nothing to throw light upon Landis' loss; still, its contents were surprising. First, wrapped in a chamois skin, there were two large caliber automatics, new, well oiled and with the magazines filled with cartridges. Next came a larger piece of leather which served as a wrapping for a set of tools, drills, files, steel saws, cut-nippers, pliers, a bunch of objects that he took to be skeleton keys, and, lastly a short steel bar drawn to a chisel-end at either extremity and beautifully tempered; each piece looking to be as new and as good as the automatics.

Having, as he believed, plenty of time at his disposal, Markham drew up a chair and sat down to consider his prize thoughtfully. Of course, there was no doubt as to its nature. It was a complete kit of burglar's tools, with the guns to back it up, a spare kit, as it appeared, since there was every indication that the tools had never been used or the guns fired.

What was Canby figuring as an energetic young promoter intent upon making Carthage good, doing with a burglar's kit hidden in his wardrobe?

During the four days in which he had been quietly pursuing his investigations, Markham had found the circumstantial evidence, based on clues revealed the morning following the robbery, gradually losing its hold. Apart from the fact that Betty Lawson had demonstrated, or had seemed to demonstrate, her innocence of any part in the robbery, Markham was reluctantly compelled to admit that, to the present moment, he had discovered nothing upon which to hang an assumption of Canby's guilt. More over, if Betty were innocent, her acquittal necessarily cleared the young promoter, since the two were together from the close of the theatre performance up to and including the return to the Lawson house. Yet here was this burglar's kit, cunningly hidden in Canby's bedroom, to muddy a pool of his thoughts.

Deep in a maze of dubiety, Markham restraped the bag and returned it to its hiding place. Clearly, the first thing to do was to tell Ormsbury of his discovery. Possibly the hotel manager might be able to indicate the step to be taken. In returning, he had tried to leave everything just as he found it, retransferring the suitcase of clothes so that it might appear as if it had not been disturbed, and turning the key in the lock of the wardrobe door.

Five minutes later he was handing the passkey to Ormsbury and congratulating himself upon an exceedingly narrow escape. For, as it emerged from the elevator he had seen Canby getting his own proper key from the clerk.

"If I had delayed a few minutes longer," Markham said to himself, "he would have caught me red-handed!"

Ormsbury grinned. "It would have served you right. I don't quite see how you could have ducked out of it."

"Neither do I. At the same time I found something that needs an explanation quite as much as my presence in Canby's rooms would have."

"What was the something?"

"A pair of man-size automatics wrapped up in a genuine outfit of burglar's tools, hidden under the bottom board in Canby's wardrobe."

"The devil you say! Bert Canby a burglar?" Ormsbury ejaculated. "That's ridiculous, Wally. I grant you anything you care to charge him with the blue-sky field; he is burglarizing the community pocketbook to queen's taste in the promotion scheme, but he doesn't need a cracksmann's kit to do that. What did you do with it?"

"I put it back where I had found it. It is up to you to rediscover it, if you want to. I don't know how it got there, or what use, if any, he means to make of it—but it's there."

"But see here, Wally; perhaps—" "What the manager was about to say was left unsaid, for at that moment the office door opened to admit the promoter himself; and the leather case he laid upon Ormsbury's desk was the one Markham had so lately restored to its hiding place.

"Hello, Markham!" Canby exclaimed cheerfully. "Glad to find you here. Two witnesses are better than one any day in the week." Then to Ormsbury, "A few minutes ago, as I was putting my grip away upstairs, I found that thing hidden in the bottom of my wardrobe. It isn't any of mine, is it turning it in?"

"What is it?" Ormsbury asked. "Search me, I haven't opened it. Wouldn't you know, not without witnesses. It may be an internal mine, for all I know."

"Suppose you open it, John, and let us see what it is," Markham suggested.

"The Devil You Say! Bert Canby a Burglar?"

"That's ridiculous, Wally. I grant you anything you care to charge him with the blue-sky field; he is burglarizing the community pocketbook to queen's taste in the promotion scheme, but he doesn't need a cracksmann's kit to do that. What did you do with it?"

Michener Explains Congressional Acts

Revenue Law, no one paid a direct tax toward running the Federal Government, for which he received a tax receipt, unless he paid an income tax, and might pay in this country an income tax last year.

"From 1920 to 1931 only 8 per cent of the people contributed direct to the cost of the Federal Government. The difficulties will be appreciated when we remember that the revenue of the Federal Government comes largely from income taxes and in 1930 was $4,177,000,000, while the entire revenue for the Government for last year was but $2,005,000,000.

"The three outstanding acts in the reconstruction program are:

"(1) Legislation providing for $125,000,000 additional to be loaned to the farmers under the Farm Loan Act.

"(2) The creation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, with its $1,500,000,000 additional credit, made available to the country to aid in financing agriculture, commerce and industry. This legislation takes $500,000,000 out of the Treasury and this amount is included in this year's appropriation bills. Machinery is set up whereby this corporation may function to the extent of furnishing a $1,000,000,000 additional credit. The uninformed and the demagogue have said that this furnishes relief only to big business—the banks, the insurance companies, and the railroad companies. It is true that these loans are not made to individuals, but the purpose is to save banks from closing, to prevent insurance companies from collapsing, and to keep the railroads out of the hands of the receiver, and thereby protect the investors, the depositors, and the working people. This money is not given to anybody, by the Government. It is loaned on adequate security and by releasing frozen credits and inspiring confidence, is bound to rebound to the benefit of the humblest citizen.

"Up to June 30th, $1,054,000,000 had been loaned by the R. F. C., and the error, and when it is clearly shown that this money went to 'big business' is answered when I tell you that three-fifths of the money went to banks and trust companies. Between 30 and 40 millions of our people are interested as stockholders and depositors in these institutions, to say nothing about the general welfare of the community where these institutions are permitted to continue rather than to close their doors.

"Of these loans made, 20.3 per cent was loaned to banks and trust companies in towns of less than 5000 population. Some of the balance was loaned to railroads, but we must not forget that there are a million men working for the railroads and the continuation of the operating affects every one of them and their families.

"Life insurance companies and fire insurance companies also received loans where they had proper securities, and every dollar of this money so loaned to them will be repaid. There are more than 120,000,000 life insurance policies outstanding in the country. We all know that there has been a great demand on the part of the holders of insurance policies to borrow on their policies, even for the purpose of paying taxes, and it is hardly fair to say that legislation for the express purpose of protecting these policy holders is for the benefit of the big interests only.

"(3) The next major legislation in the Relief program was called 'The Relief Bill'. This was originally introduced into Congress at the suggestion of the Speaker of the House, and I am sure that you have learned through the Press the extent of the proposed bill. In fact, in the thousands of post offices contemplated, it included a post office building for Chelsea. I think eight or ten in this Congressional District—as well as innumerable harbors, river and harbor development, etc. The country realizes that we cannot squander our savings into prosperity, that all money appropriated by the Federal Government must eventually come from the taxpayers, and that our present difficulties cannot be solved by simply appropriating more money and going into debt for luxuries for which we must pay, which we cannot afford, and which we do not need, and which will ultimately in the end add weight to the taxpayers' burdens.

"The Relief Bill is divided into three titles.

"(1) Title I, authorizing the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make available $300,000,000 additional for loans to states and municipalities for relief, on application of the Governor, and when it is clearly shown that local interests are unable to cope with the depression. Possibly some of these loans will never be returned to the Federal Treasury, yet they are loans made in good faith and the principle of the debt is not established.

"(2) Title II makes available additional loans throughout the country to aid in financing projects authorized under Federal, State and Municipal law, and which are self-liquidating in character. Under extreme circumstances this title provides for loans by the Federal Reserve Board for individuals, partnerships, and corporations, but at all times reasonable security that the money will be returned must be provided.

"(3) Title III makes available $322,224,000. Of this amount $120,000,000 is for Federal highways, and every dollar of it is to be used in the development of Federal construction already authorized. The items are carefully selected, and while the Government would not think of proceeding with all these projects at this time were it not for furnishing employment, yet this money will not be wasted.

"With the exception of the $120,000,000 for highways this money can not be expended until the Treasury Department and the President find that there is money available. This $322,224,000 was another item included in this year's appropriation bills.

"There are those who will object to the measures provided in this relief measure, yet all legislation is a matter of compromise. There is much in this bill to which I object, yet it is so much wiser and so much sounder than other bills along the same line that it has been and will be generally acceptable to the country."

To Preserve Health

A man's own observation, what he finds good of, and what he finds hurt of, is the best physic to preserve health. Bacon.

MRS. HELEN FREEMAN

Mrs. Helen Freeman, widow of the late Judson Freeman, died Tuesday morning, August 9, at the home of her son, Carlton Freeman, in Kalamazoo. Mrs. Freeman was 81 years of age and the greater part of her life was spent in Brooklyn. After the death of her husband in 1919, she came to Chelsea to make her home with her daughter, the late Mrs. EH. Notten, residing here until 1928. She was a member of Oliver Chapter, 108, O. E. S. Surviving are one son and two grandsons. Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the Presbyterian church, Brooklyn. Interment will be in Brooklyn cemetery.

CHELSEA TIGERS WIN

The Chelsea Tigers came through with a victory by defeating the Chelsea Helians, 15-2 in a game played at Holmes field on Monday. Battery for the Tigers: G. Novess and Hawley; for the North bunch, Koneski and Reed. Pitcher G. Novess featured the game with two home runs.

Fair Will Feature County Resources

With the opening of the 13th Annual Washtenaw County Fair, August 20th, heights never before reached in its history are expected to be attained, and it will give to its patrons the assurance that it will be a real anniversary celebration. The Washtenaw County Fair is always a great exposition of the natural resources of the county. The rural community is given excellent opportunity to display the product of the farm and the merchants are keen to exhibit their wares while the entertainment features are always high class.

The Texas Ranger Rodeo, a consolidation of the Adams Rodeo Co. and Mitt Hinkle & Co. is the largest traveling rodeo in the east and will present each afternoon and evening a most sensational drama glorifying the Western Range Life. The fifty cowboys and cowgirls are the descendants of those hardy frontier plainsmen who "tamed the west", there is in the organization also one hundred and twenty-five wild horses, wild long horns, steers, trained cow ponies and untamable outlaw bucking horses. The largest herd of range stock ever used in a Rodeo east of the Mississippi.

Another unusual feature in the grandstand performance will be a concert given by the Washtenaw Concert Band. It will be conducted by Nicholas D. Falcone, conductor of the well known University of Michigan Band, and managed by Walter C. Pierce of Ypsilanti. Members of the band are from all parts of the county and include some of its best talent.

Emphasis is being placed by the Fair management on the unusual, fine display of fireworks this year. The fireworks show will be far the biggest ever had at the fair. Akron Zeppelin and the Japanese Daylight displays are included in the special colored feature pieces which will be presented each evening.

The automobile show will be held in part of the merchants' building, making it an entirely new and spectacular display. This means a limited number of booths for the display of merchandise and the space is very much in demand.

COL. BRANNETT C. CLARK, son of the late Speaker Champ Clark, won the Democratic nomination for United States senator from Missouri, defeating Charles M. Howell, former Democratic state chairman, and other aspirants. Clark is thoroughly well known in the state, and his record in public life was a fine one. He was nominated for senator by the Republicans.

In the Kansas primaries Senator George McGill and Gov. Harry H. Woodring won re-nominations, and the Republicans apparently had chosen Ben S. Paulsen for senator and Alfred M. Landon for governor. McGill, Paulsen and Landon are listed as drys.

Reduced 30 Pounds

Never Felt Better

Safe Way To Lose Fat

Take the case of Miss Madeline Crowley, for instance, who lives in Little Rock, Ark. Just read her letter:

"I have used Kruschen Salts for one year—when I started I weighed 140 pounds—now I weigh 110 pounds and never felt better in my life."

That's the big reason a host of men and women take Kruschen to lose weight—as the fat goes you gain in health—skin clears—eyes grow bright—activity replaces indolence.

Take one-half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast—cut down on fatty meats, potatoes and sweets—a jar of Kruschen that costs but a trifle lasts 4 weeks—get it at any drugstore in the world—but for your health's sake demand and get Kruschen Salts.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Hitlerites Demand Control of German Government—

Bonus Army Is Ordered Home by Its Commander.

—Chapin Succeeds Lamont in Cabinet.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

ONCE more the voters of Germany

frustrated the plans of Adolf Hitler and his National Socialist party to get control of the government of the reich. In the parliamentary elections the Nazis about doubled their representation in the reichstag, electing 229 members, but they were still far short of a majority. In consequence Chancellor Von Papen and his cabinet, representing no party but with the backing of the Junker element, declared they would hold on. The Nazi leaders, who might combine with the Junkers, were said to have rejected that idea and were determined to demand the selection of one of them, either as chancellor and another as minister of the interior. Just what the outcome of the political struggle will be cannot be determined until the reichstag meets at the end of August.

Of the twenty-one parties contesting, only 19 gained seats under the official apportionment; thus eight parties lost their entire for the time being.

Besides the fact that it brought no rightist majority, the election's next biggest surprise was the strength developed by the Communists, who will have 89 instead of their former 77 seats.

That the "middle of the road" course no longer appeals to the German voter was believed indicated by the crushing of the moderate parties of the right, even including Hugenberg's Nationalists.

MGR. IGNATZ SEIPEL, the great priest-politician who formerly was chancellor of Austria and still was helping direct the destinies of his country, died at his home near Vienna of diabetes and complications of the lung due to the presence of a bullet fired at him by an assassin eight years ago. Strangely enough his death saved the government of his party, the Christian Socialists, from defeat in the parliament and consequent downfall.

The government needed Seipel's vote in parliament to defeat a no-confidence resolution introduced by the Pan-Germans and backed by the Socialists. Under Austrian law, deputies cannot vote by proxy. Seipel's severe illness prevented him from attending parliament. Less than an hour after Seipel's death, Chancellor Dollfuss appointed a local baron, John Wankers, to take his seat. Wankers hurried to parliament, arriving just in time to vote for the government. That vote saved the cabinet's life, the count being deadlocked 81 to 81.

PARAGUAY and Bolivia are in arms ready to engage in real warfare for possession of the disputed Gran Chaco region, where already their frontier forces have been fighting and the Bolivians have attacked several Paraguayan towns. Mobilization was ordered in Paraguay, and was expected any day in Bolivia. In both countries there were great demonstrations of patriotism and the war fever was high.

The United States, according to the two nations to cease warlike activities and submit their dispute to arbitration, being joined in this effort by Mexico, Colombia, Cuba and Uruguay. Argentina, Brazil, Chile and other Latin American countries added their plans for a peaceful settlement, and collective cables were sent to Paraguay and Bolivia informing them they were violating the arbitration treaty adopted at the Pan-American conference in 1923. Bolivia already had notified the neutrals she would settle the Gran Chaco dispute "even by the force of arms." A similar reply was sent by her to the League of Nations. Paraguay agreed to arbitration.

Both Bolivia and Paraguay claim the whole of the Chaco as between the Paraguay and Pilcomayo rivers. Actually the territory is about equally divided now as far as physical occupation goes.

ROBERT P. LAMONT of Chicago resigned as secretary of commerce in order to return to private business. His retirement from the cabinet had been expected for some time. To succeed him President Hoover selected Roy D. Chapin of Detroit, who has been chairman of the board of the Hudson Motor company since 1923. Mr. Chapin, who was born in Michigan in 1880, has been a close friend of Mr. Hoover for many years and is a lifelong Republican. He is married and lives at Grosse Pointe farms, Michigan.

REAL warfare broke out at the Dixie Bee coal mine, ten miles from Terre Haute, Ind., where trouble had been brewing for months. Five thousand union miners armed with rifles attacked the nonunion workers and in the battle one of the former was killed and a number on both sides were wounded. The defenders, numbering less than a hundred, took refuge in a small building and were there besieged for 48 hours. Governor Leslie was asked to send state troops, and more than 800 National Guardsmen were ordered to the scene under command of Col. Paul Sieberling. Before moving against the line of union pickets the colonel and his aids scouted the region in airplanes.

The troops then advanced, early in the morning, and the union forces vanished swiftly without firing a shot at the soldiers. The beleaguered miners were rescued, four of them being wounded. Among them was one woman, Colonel Sieberling established military patrols around the mine.

REVERBERATIONS of the ousting of the bonus expeditionary force from Washington continued to roll over the country, and it was evident the political loss of President Hoover would take full advantage of his action, notwithstanding the fact that it seemed to have general approval. Wary and bedraggled, some nine thousand members of the B. E. 7 made their way to Johnston, Pa., at the invitation of Mayor McCloskey, but Gov. Gifford Pinchot said they would not be permitted to camp there until Congress meets, as they wished. At the same time Pinchot bitterly attacked the President for the way the men had been treated in Washington. Then a Maryland woman offered a big pile of ground in that state for a camp, but Governor Ritchie put a veto on that plan, chiefly for reasons of sanitation.

Walter W. Waters, leader of the "army," issued orders for its disbandment, but later produced a new scheme—separate camps in each state—and said various governors had made "favorable" replies to his communications. To the men in Johnston camp Waters said he did not intend to make another march on Washington; that the bonus seekers would fight their battle at the polls.

A coroner's jury in Washington exonerated two policemen who killed two of the bonus marchers during the rioting that preceded their ousting.

FRED C. CROXTON, who was appointed assistant to the director of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to pass on loans to states, called on all governors of states seeking federal relief funds to send with their applications statements showing estimated relief needs for each of the remaining months of 1932. A list of the municipalities and other political subdivisions for which funds are required.

Governor Pinchot made application to the R. F. C. board for an immediate loan of $10,000,000 for relief in Pennsylvania, and said the state's minimum requirements up to April 1 next would be $10,000,000. "We have 1,250,000 persons totally unemployed," Governor Pinchot told the board. "In addition we have 800,000 working on half time. This represents more than half the working population of the state."

Governor ROOSEVELT opened his speaking campaign with an address over the radio in the course of which he attacked all Republican administrations since

Wilson for extravagance in Washington. It was predicted that this would evoke a sharp response from Calvin Coolidge one of whose proud boasts is that his administration reduced the public debt about $1,000,000,000. Others of Roosevelt's accusations and assertions were due for notice from President Hoover in his speech of acceptance on August 11.

The Democratic candidate was cheered by the announcement that Governor Eliot of Massachusetts, who put Al Smith in nomination, would support the ticket, and also by a call from the former national chairman, John J. Raskob.

Chairman James A. Frank announced the appointment of the Democratic national committee. The post had been vacant since the resignation of James W. Gerard last spring. Mr. Walker is a New York lawyer of considerable note.

Republican National Chairman Everett Sanders made a call on Calvin Coolidge recently and afterwards announced the report, mentioned above, that the Sage of Northampton would take part in the campaign in behalf of President Hoover, probably making several speeches in October.
