Large Crowd Attends "Open House" Event

The public school was the scene of a large and interested gathering of townspeople last Friday evening, who went to see just what was the result of the summer's activities there. That everyone was pleased was very evident. The cleanliness of the buildings was so apparent, the new arrangement for the library so appropriate, and the new lockers for the convenience of the students so timely that it was fully agreed all had been well planned, and that much credit was due the Board for what had been accomplished.

Each teacher was host or hostess in his or her own room where fall flowers brightened the scene and added warmth to the greeting which was extended to the patrons of the school.

Light refreshments were provided at a prettily appointed table, presided over by Mrs. L. P. Vogel and Mrs.
John Fletcher, with high school girls assisting. From the number served it was estimated that between four and five hundred had been present.

Game Law Digest Is Available From State

A supply of the 1932-33 Digest of important game laws has been issued by the Department of Conservation and copies are now ready for distribution. Copies will be furnished with each small game, deer and trapping license issued.

In addition to listing the seasons,
bag limits, etc., the digest, as in past years, includes outlines of general hunting and trapping provisions and special orders affecting game laws in particular counties.

A plea to hunters to return to the Department information relative to any tagged migratory birds, pheasants and deer is contained in the digest.

The 1932-33 small game licenses will be on sale through approximately 1,800 license agents of the Department of Conservation, Thursday, September 16, fifteen days prior to the opening of the season.

In a few northern counties the licenses have been available since the beginning of the week.

The licenses, which for the first time in several years are not accompanied by "buttons" were distributed to the various agents by truck from Lansing.

Prompt Action May Stop Insect Enemy

Prompt action by the entomology department at Michigan State College and by the State Department of Agriculture has greatly reduced the danger of Michigan's potato fields becoming infested with the potato tuber moth, which is a very serious enemy of that crop in states where it is established.

A sample of potatoes sent to Professor H. H. Pettit from Bay City by the county agricultural agent proved to be infested with the larvae of the tuber moth. These larvae tunnel through the potato and ruin it for food.

The potatoes were part of a shipment sent into Michigan from Virginia. The State Dept. of Agriculture immediately sent men to trace other portions of the shipment of potatoes and to seize them so they could be destroyed to prevent the emergence of any adult moths in this State.

Several thousands of bushels of potatoes were taken from dealers in Detroit and destroyed. The State Department now has declared a quarantine on shipments of potatoes from states where the tuber moth is known to be a serious pest.

The College entomology department recommends several measures for the control of the moth if it emerges in the State but hopes that the steps already taken will prevent this insect from becoming another source of annoyance and expense to the farmers in Michigan.

ARE YOU SATISFIED WITH THE KNOWLEDGE YOU POSSESS?

The first meeting of the Chelsea Evening Law Class will occur on Monday evening, September 19th, at 8 o'clock at the high school. The members of this group are Chelsea people who believe that in adult life they should continue to acquire knowledge. The course of study is founded upon the law because there is no other subject which has such practical value and touches so many angles of useful information. Although the course includes every subject taught in a regular law school, its purpose is, not to train lawyers, but to give the person in business or professional work such information as will contribute most toward proper preparedness for the affairs of everyday life.

A cordial invitation is extended to any interested person to attend two or three of the meetings of this class and observe the type of study which the members will pursue. The meetings are held weekly on Monday evening. Visits to these meetings will cost you nothing. If, after a visit or two, you decide that you would enjoy participating in this work, a welcome will be extended to join the class. The cost is trivial and the benefits are many.

Autumn on the farm
BY A. J. DUNLAP

The finest time on the farm by far
Is after the sun went down,
Along in September when autumn leaves
Wear yellow and russet brown,
When twittering flocks of blackbirds hew
Across the gray twilight sky,
And tassel and blossom both tell the tale
That Summer has drifted by.

Then over the ranks of the dead ripe corn
Hang low the round harvest moon,
While up in its tower the old windmill crooned
Its mellow and home-like tune,
Then down by the barn in the old corral
Contented, the cattle lay,
And chewed their cud while the cotton-tails
Slipped round the new ricks of hay.

The bullfrogs were still in the swamp of last
And deep in the stacks of grain
The chorus of crickets and katydids
Played on in a minor strain,
And dull was the eye or the ear that failed
To catch in the twilight there
The wonderful message of peace that rode
The wings of the autumn air.

ANN ARBOR—The Democrat county committee has issued a call for a county convention to be held in this city at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening, September 20. At this meeting 20 delegates will be chosen to attend the Democrat State convention which will be held in Lansing on Tuesday, September 27.

SOUTH LYON—A field of corn at the Theo. Fisher farm is the pride of its owner. The stalks in this six acre field measure from ten to twelve feet high and support mammoth ears of corn and plenty of them. Sure looks like a big corn harvest for Mr. Fisher.—Herald.

MILAN—Louis Smith is the first Milan man to be recognized by the United States Government for service in the World War. Last week he was awarded the medal of the Order of the Purple Heart for bravery under fire during the war. The medal was shipped by the War Department last week suitably engraved. The first medals of this type were awarded by George Washington when he was president of the United States to men who were in his command during the Revolutionary War.—Leader.

HOWELL—In central and eastern Michigan, five dairy herds produced sufficiently high to place them among the first twenty-five highherds in the state as found through records kept in dairy herd improvement associations during the past year.—Republican Press.

MORENCI—Frank Evers, 15 years old, of Canandaigua, was arraigned before Judge Rathbun in Adrian on Tuesday. He was arrested by members of the sheriff's force July 23 on a charge of stealing 700 pounds of wool from Mrs. Fay Wilder. Young Evers pleaded guilty to the charge and was sentenced to spend three months at the county jail.—Observer.

TECUMSEH—A large dredge belonging to the Tecumseh Sand & Gravel Co. sank in about 30 feet of water at the gravel pit Sunday night, after becoming water logged as a result of Saturday's heavy rain. A Diesel engine, sand pump and stone crusher sank with the dredge. Air tanks are to be used in an effort to raise the dredge.—Herald.

DUNDEE—About thirty boys reported for football practice at the first session this week, according to Coach William Tufts, who says that there is plenty of material from which to pick a strong team.—Reporter.

BRIGHTON—S. B. Jacobs, for many years the editor and publisher of the Argus, and who until recently has been a part of the office force, has purchased a farm near Williamston on U.S. 10 and will move there with his family in the near future. Mr. Jacobs has a very extensive acquaintance in this vicinity and throughout the county and many newspaper men of this section, which was acquired during his more than a quarter of a century editorship of this newspaper. His very large circle of friends will regret his departure from Brighton, but will wish him a large success in his new venture.—Argus.

CLINTON—The Rodeo outfit that was at the Ann Arbor fair was passing through town Tuesday when they were stopped by the officers. It seems that one of their wild cattle broke loose and badly damaged an automobile and they were being held for damage. The two truck loads of cattle and horses were taken back east.

MANCHESTER—A considerable number of negroes have been coming here to fish in the Raisin river and the ponds. It is said that they catch many undersized fish, occasionally a larger one. No doubt they need the fish for food and they may sell a few. If they could only catch the carp we would be glad.—Enterprise.

PUTTING IT UP TO FANNIE HURST—But Author of "Back Street" Appraised the Script and Now Praises the Picture.

Fannie Hurst has not always approved of the moving picture transcription of her novels. In fact, she has very seldom been consulted about the way they were to be put on the screen. No one knows better than she that the technique for moving picture work differs radically from the technique of literature. With all of these differences, however, Miss Hurst feels that the spirit and the motivation of the novel should be zealously retained in the motion picture. John Stahl believes exactly the same thing. He was delighted when Carl Laemmle, Jr., assigned the direction of this significant novel to him.

"Back Street" is a story of a woman of beauty and spirit and capacity, who gave her whole life for a love which could not be declared. Ray Schmidt, the role which Irene Dunne so gloriously portrays, is a woman that every other woman in the world will understand and sympathize with. Her idealism and her sacrifice were as whole-hearted and as unselfish as Joan of Arc. "Have you made the world go round" was not an idle phrase to her. It was her whole life. Since her social position was unorthodox, outside the pale, and the forces opposing it even more insidious, her status was even more difficult to maintain than that of the French heroine.

In Ray Schmidt, Fannie Hurst created one of literature's greatest and most unusual characters. Everything that Miss Hurst put into this character has been fully retained by Mr. Stahl and Miss Lehman.

This picture comes to the Majestic Theatre, Ann Arbor, for four days, starting Saturday, September 17th.

Bible Thought and Prayer

BE NOT CONFIDENT—Be not wise in thine own eyes: fear the Lord, and depart from evil.—Prov. 8:12.

PRAYER—I will trust Thee and extol Thee, O my God.

Question And Answer Dept.

Ques.—How far back can the editor of your question and answer column remember?

Ans.—We are not given to boasting, but we can remember when grandma smoked a clay pipe and knocked the ashes into the fireplace instead of smoking cigarettes and knocking them onto the parlor rug.

Ques.—How large was Rome at the time of Julius Caesar?

Ans.—About Julius Caesar's time the population of Rome was 1,200,000.

Ques.—Will you please answer if the rat is a native of America. Your answer will settle a dispute.

Ans.—Only three species of rats are native to America—the Cotton, the Florida and the Rocky Mountain rats. The gray, white-bellied rat, which are the most numerous in this country are native to Egypt and northern Africa. The kind that frequent mostly water-fronts are native to Norway.

Ques.—Why is green worn on St. Patrick's day?

Ans.—Green is the national color of Ireland, and as St. Patrick is the patron saint of that country, and further that Ireland is known as the "Emerald Isle" (green island), the green is worn on the anniversary of St. Patrick.

Ques.—I would like to ask you where the wind is when it doesn't blow?

Ans.—Your question is rather senseless. But believing you are sincere in asking, we will say that "wind is nothing but air in motion." When it moves, it is known as wind.

Ques.—To settle an argument, will you please tell me in your question department who was it that wrote the epitaph of Thomas Jefferson?

Ans.—The epitaph on Jefferson's tombstone was written by himself before his death. It is as follows: "Here lies Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence, of the statute for religious freedom in Virginia and founder of the University of Virginia." It is conspicuous for its absence of any mention of being president of the United States.

Ques.—Why is it that most people won't heed when opportunity knocks at their door?

Ans.—We presume it's because most people are out in their car when opportunity knocks.

Ques.—Do elephants' tusks grow to be very long?

Ans.—Yes. They continue to grow during the life of the animal. The longest tusk on record was that of an African species, which was 11 feet five and one-half inches long.

Ques.—Has the president of the United States got the power to pardon a prisoner in a state penitentiary?

Ans.—No, unless he is incarcerated in a State prison for a federal offense. Otherwise only the governor or the pardoning board of the individual state has that power.

Ques.—Where is the elm tree under which Washington took the oath as commander of the American army?

Ans.—The original elm tree you refer to is dead. It was cut up into small pieces and preserved as relics and souvenirs. However, a cutting from the original elm was started many years ago by a student of the University of Washington in Seattle. When this tree grew large enough, a cutting from it was planted near the site of the mother tree and is now growing.

Ques.—Is it true that Columbus and his men were captured by cannibals? If so, how did they get away?

Ans.—No. Columbus never met any people whom he knew to be cannibals, although friendly Indians warned him there were such people on the island of San Salvador. The Indians were in mortal fear of these man-eating tribes.

SEVEN CHANGES IN DAY FOR LORETTA YOUNG IN "WEEK-END MARRIAGE"

Loretta Young, beautiful screen actress featured in First National productions, had the arduous task recently of changing her clothes seven times in one day for her latest picture, "Week-End Marriage," which comes to the Majestic Theatre, Ann Arbor, for 2 days, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 15 and 16. She did not, however, regard it as work.

"You just don't know the feminine heart if you think that was a tiresome task," Loretta commented on the set.

"Any girl would be pleased to wear that many beautiful gowns in one day. But I was unusually delighted, because there was another distinction attached to them. We have a new and wonderfully clever designer, Orry Kelly, at the studio, and it felt to my lot to have the honor of being the first to benefit by his advanced ideas, the first gowns he has made for the screen, being designed especially for me."

Others in the cast who will wear his creations are Vivienne Osborne, Gloria Shea and Aline MacMahon, while Norman Foster, George Brent, Allan Lane and Roscoe Karns have important roles and provide proper masseline admiration. Thornton Freeland directed.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS THE WORLD OVER

ON SEPTEMBER 11, the eighteenth anniversary of the Battle of the Marne, a fine memorial of that mighty struggle was presented to the French nation by America, whose citizens to the number 4,000,000 contributed its cost. The piece of art, entitled "France Defiant," rises 150 feet above a 60-foot pedestal, on an emulose overlooking the battle field. It stands as high as a seven-story building, and is the largest monument in France. It was designed by Frederic MacMonnies and Edouardo Quattrocchi was the sculptor. The motif of the memorial is a woman symbolic of France at bay, supporting a stricken soldier son. An infant emblematic of the future clings to the hem of the woman's tattered robe. On the front of the pedestal is Marshal Joffre's famous message to the French army on the eve of the battle: "At this moment when a battle hangs upon which rests the fate of our country no one must look behind. All must unite to attack. Any troop finding itself unable to advance further must hold the ground and fight until death. No retreat!"

JOSEPH V. MCKEE, who became Mayor of New York on the resignation of Jimmy Walker, was informed by the citizens' budget commission that the city pays more than $1,000,000 every day in the year for salaries for its employees. Therefore he got busy at once on economies in a way that made the politicians gasp. First he announced that his own salary was reduced immediately from $10,000 to $25,000 a year. Then he served notice that, after October 1, no city commissioner appointed by the mayor would receive more than $12,000 a year. And more of the same sort was expected to follow.

The budget commission pointed out that in the six years of the Walker administration 32,380 extra positions had been added to the city pay roll at a total cost of $120,633,223 a year—practically a third of the year's entire payment for personal service.

SCANDAL concerning labor employed on government jobs has been transferred from western projects to the lower Mississippi river valley. Charges have been made that workmen in river flood control construction camps down there are held by contractors in a virtual state of peonage; that the men are working 12 hours a day and 7 days a week at very small wages. Since this falls in the province of the Department of War, Secretary Patrick J. Hurley took cognizance of the charges and sent Gen. Lytle Brown, chief of army engineers, to make an investigation.

LOS ANGELES, the prolific source of tragedies, provided another—the suicide of Paul Bern, moving picture executive and husband of Jean Harlow, a famous screen actress. For reasons that at this writing are unknown, Mr. Bern shot and killed himself in the beautiful home he presented to his bride when they were married two months ago. He left a note that only added to the mystery. It said he was making good "the frightful wrong I have done you" and wiping out his "abject humiliation," and Miss Harlow insisted she did not know what he meant and that they had been perfectly happy together.

Mr. Bern, who was born in Germany 42 years ago, had been actor, stage manager and director, and in his work in pictures was very successful and popular. His associates said he had been acting strangely of late, and that his mother and three of his sisters had committed suicide.

One possible explanation for Bern's suicide was revealed when it was learned that for years before his marriage to Jean Harlow he lived with another woman. His brother asserted Bern continued to support her in a sanitarium after she had a nervous breakdown, and that Miss Harlow knew all about it. For ten years this woman lived at the Hotel Algonquin in New York city as Mrs. Paul Bern and paid her bills with checks sent to her fortnightly from Hollywood by the movie executive. She left the hotel last winter and had her trunk shipped to San Francisco.

RAPID progress on the government's $700,000,000 public building program was reported by the Treasury department in a review of authorized projects.

The report said that specific authorizations aggregated $494,469,642 and that 280 buildings costing $71,400,210 had already been completed. It further reported 382 projects with a total cost limit of $324,584,828 were under contract either in whole or in part.

In regard to 130 projects costing $42,172,000, the treasury said they either were in the specification stage or that bids had been received for their construction.

It was explained that Secretary Mills had not yet determined on the expenditure of the $100,000,000 for the construction of the new federal building in New York city.

vided in the roller act for public buildings.

MOST widely known of those who died during the week was Sir Gilbert Parker, Canadian novelist, traveler, lecturer and politician, who passed away in London at the age of sixty-nine years. He first gained fame as the author of "The Right of Way" and other novels.

WATERLOO

Girl Swims Across Clear Lake. Phyllis Collins, 15-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Collins of Stockbridge, formerly of Waterloo, has the distinction of successfully swimming Clear Lake in several directions. While camping there in August it was common daily exercise for her to swim from the County Park to the Boy Scout dock and back. Once she and Ivan Beeman swam from the County Park to the Fausser shore, but the longest stretch was the long way of the lake, a distance of over a mile from the spring to Smith's landing. Phyllis was trained by her dad, and used the breast stroke. On the long swim her sister, Marion, followed her in a row boat.

Farm Board to Sell No More Wheat or Cotton This Year— Iowa Farmers Still "Striking"—Germany Demands Arms Equality.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SALES of its wheat and cotton have been stopped by the federal farm board until next year, according to the announcement made by Chairman James C. Stone. He said the board and the American Cotton Co-operative association had agreed to the terms laid down by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for a loan of $50,000,000.

The board also announced that the board had sold all its stabilization wheat except 3,000,000 bushels. This means the grain stabilization corporation has disposed of more than 25,000,000 bushels of wheat since July 1, 1931, and more than 180,000,000 bushels since November 1 last. The stabilization corporation, therefore, is no longer a factor in the grain market. It still holds what Mr. Stone called a "certain amount of future contracts" which will be held at least until after the beginning of the next year.

A loophole for the disposal of the cash wheat was left by the provision that, though this wheat would be kept off the market until the next year, this limitation would not apply to possible sales to foreign countries not reckoned as important buyers of American grain.

In making the announcement, Chairman Stone explained that the purpose of the arrangement was to make a better market for the farmers. The cotton growers, he pointed out, will get the full benefit of the market for their crop of this year without the price-dulling interference of the hold-over crop. The Cotton Stabilization Corporation and the Cotton Co-operative association, Mr. Stone said, would gradually liquidate their holdings "during periods when more active demand is anticipated."

IOWA'S striking farmers did not approve of the truce called by the head of the "holiday" association and made preparations to renew the picketing of the highways around the larger cities. They also called on Gov. Dan Turner to try to induce the governors of several middle west states, at a conference in Sioux City, to institute an embargo upon all food-stuffs from the middle western states at less than production costs.

Pickets outside Sioux City wrecked a number of trucks and injured the drivers, but the sheriff's forces then got busy and dispersed them and removed from the roads the formidable obstructions placed by the farmers. In Nebraska the picketing was abandoned for the present.

FINANCIAL circles of the country were intensely interested to read of the new plans for the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company of Chicago, largest bank outside of New York city. The directors voted to nationalize the institution and to set up special reserves of $10,000,000 out of surplus to cover losses incurred. As a further mark of conservatism they voted a quarterly dividend of $2 a share in comparison with $3 in each of the two preceding periods and with a former annual rate of $5. The bank's capital remains unchanged at $75,000,000.

The directors explained to the stockholders that "the development of a plan for nationalizing the bank was suggested by recent legislative proposals regarding the banking system of the United States, all of which indicate a distinct trend in the direction of a more unified national structure, strengthened and controlled by the federal banking authorities."

FRED Hovey of Omaha, Neb., has been appointed head of the agricultural credit organization of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and already is busy in his office in Washington. For many years Mr. Hovey has been connected with the Stock Yards National Bank of South Omaha. He is so familiar with conditions and the needs of the stock raisers of the West that officials of the corporation feel he is especially well fitted to carry out the live stock feeders' loan program. This is to be the first work undertaken by the new Agricultural Credit Corporation and is looked on as of vast importance.

THIS year's national air races at Cleveland wound up in a blaze of glory for Maj. James H. Doolittle, who won the trophy for all ages and the handsome Thompson trophy with his Gee Bee racer. His average speed for the 100 miles over a triangular course was 252.659 miles an hour, and he broke all American records for speed around a closed course. Three days previously Doolittle, with the same bird-shaped plane set a new record for land planes, his average speed on four consecutive laps being 292.287 miles an hour.

Mrs. Mae Hatzl of St. Louis broke the women's world speed record for land planes by attaining an average speed of 255.513 miles an hour in four dashes over the three kilometer course. She won the Shell gold plaque.

MEXICO has a new president in the person of Gen. Abelardo L. Rodriguez, who was chosen for the position by the congress after Pascual Ortiz Rubio resigned because of political differences and his ill health. Rodriguez, who has been holding the portfolio of minister of war, is one of the strong military figures in the republic and in 1929 suppressed the Escobar revolt. On taking office, he issued a statement in which he said: "Naturally I shall continue the same friendly, cordial relations with the United States that have existed."

In the new cabinet Manuel Teller remains as foreign minister and Alberto L. Pani as secretary of the treasury. Several others were reappointed. Gen. Pablo Quiroga was given the war portfolio. The entire diplomatic corps in Mexico City called on President Rodriguez, and hundreds of congratulatory messages were received by him, including one from President Hoover.

BOLIVIA was reported to have flatly rejected the plea of the neutral Latin-American nations for a truce with Paraguay in their dispute over the Gran Chaco. The Paraguayans assumed that this meant war was certain and went ahead with their preparations. It was officially announced in La Paz that a Paraguayan force had attacked a defense post on the frontier and was repulsed by Bolivian troops.

Brazilian rebels in Sao Paulo state had an agreement with the navy that the latter would not indulge in hostilities for the time being; but the rebels dined machine guns on naval planes, dropping manifestos over Montserrat, which seemed to end the semi-neutral attitude of the navy. Seven of its planes flew over Fort Itaipu at the entrance of Santos harbor and destroyed it with bombs. The federal forces were said to have made considerable gains from both the north and the south.

WHILE the Germans were preparing for the crucial session of the Reichstag called for September 12 by Hermann Goering, the National Socialist president of the parliament, the Von Papen government was keeping the rest of the world greatly interested in not excited by its demand for the arms equality which Germany insists was promised her in the Versailles treaty. The demand had been submitted to France in the form of a memorandum and some days later was given to the public by Baron Von Neurath, foreign minister. It is really an ultimatum, announcing that unless the equality in armaments is granted by the powers, Germany will quit the world disarmament conference.

Before and after the publication of the note, Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, minister of defense, declared in addresses and interviews that if the demand were not granted Germany would arm anyway, and he was most emphatic in his statements. To newspapermen in Koenigsberg he asserted sternly: "I mean everything I have said. We will no longer stand for being treated like a second-rate nation."

Premier Herriot decided that France's reply to the Germans should be a refusal to discuss their demands, and in this he was upheld by the cabinet. He also disapproved mixing up modification of the Versailles treaty with the disarmament conference, and in his answer said that if the Germans questioned the accepted interpretation of the Versailles treaty and the League covenant, the matter must be referred to arbitration by the League council or the world court.

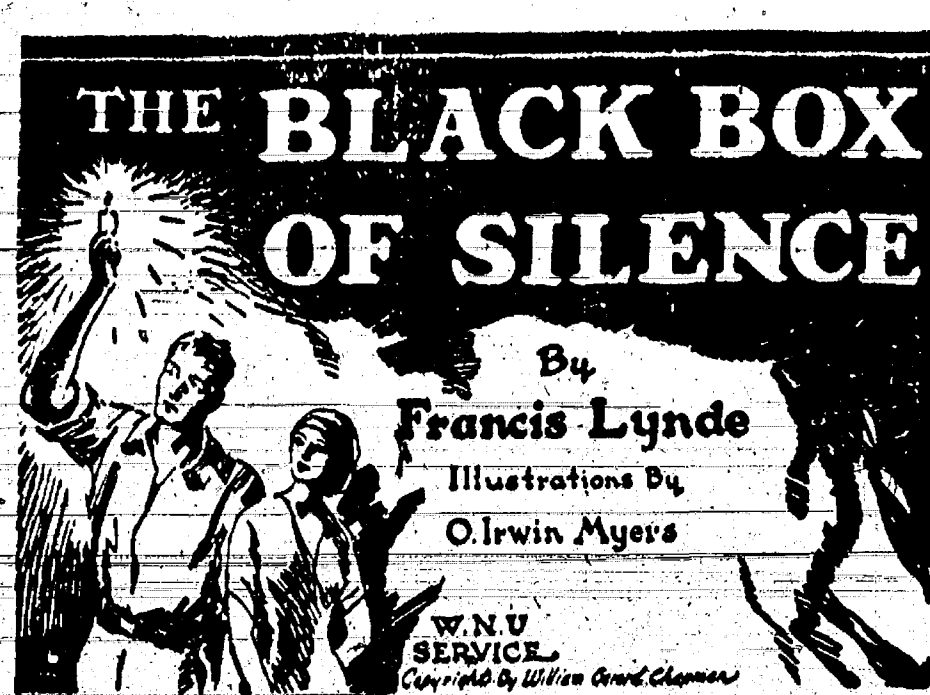

Some stress was also placed on the fact that the military clauses in the treaty of Versailles form the basis of many other post-war treaties and that the entire edifice of post-war Europe will be imperiled if they are tampered with.

two crossed to the neighborhood of the three, Markham saying, "They don't know us, so we can take a good look at them, for whatever that may amount to," and accordingly they took a couple of chairs a short distance from the three where they could sit and smoke and observe.

For a time the espat went for nothing. One of the trio was reading a newspaper, and the others, the tall man and the sandy-haired one—the one who had bought the new Fleetwing in Chillicothe—were smoking. There was nothing suspicious in the appearance or actions of any of them.

"Well," said Landis, "Where do we go from here?"

"I'm waiting for Canby to show up," was the low-toned reply. "I'd like to find out how he is linked up with these people."

"In that case won't it be better if we don't let him see us first?"

"You're right; we'll take the machine. We can look on as well from there."

They had scarcely settled themselves when a surprised voice behind them

"Well—of All Things! You Two Out Here?"

"Well—of all things! You two out here?"

"Betty!" Landis exclaimed, springing to his feet.

Markham laughed and said, "Sure; and why not?"

"But you never said a word to me, either of you before we left Chillicothe. How did you come by train?"

"Part of the way," Markham qualified. "But again I ask, why not? Why shouldn't we take a few days off and—"

"I know; but it's perfectly wonderful that we should meet here this way."

Markham drew up a chair for her. "Sit down and we'll unravel it. Owen was needing a rest and a change of scene, so I took him by the neck and ran off with him. Where is your father? And how do you come to be breaking your journey in Cophah?"

"Daddy is around somewhere; and we're not breaking our journey. We're leaving presently—going on to see the Red desert by moonlight."

"Oh; so you're driving?"

"Yes; with Bert, in his stuffy luxury car. At the last minute after we'd all bought our train tickets—Bert was going home, you know—he said he'd like to drive, if we would. So we took our tickets back and came in the car."

"And a good trip this far?"

"Glorious."

"When did you reach Cophah?"

"Oh, quite a little while ago, about five o'clock. I think it was. Anyhow, daddy and I had time to—bath and change and go to the solarium. In time to see the sunset over the Red desert. It was simply gorgeous!"

"But you took a drive after that, didn't you?" Landis put in.

"Daddy and I—Oh, no; we just stayed until dinner time. But when did you two leave Chillicothe?"

Markham named the date, and she said, "Why, we must have been right along the road together! Or no; you said you came by train, didn't you?"

"I said, 'part of the way.' We got tired of the train, so I bought a car, and we came on in that."

"But where are you going?"

"Ask Owen; I'm merely his chauffeur."

Thus dragged in, Landis played up as best he could.

"I don't know—any more than the cat, Betty. We've just trundled along from one place to another, never knowing where the next stop would be."

"It must be simply spiffy to drift about that way, with no responsibilities."

threshold of the entrance. As the car came to a stand Canby got out. "As I've told you, you'll have to use your head," he was saying to the man at the wheel of the Eight. "The sketch-map layout I gave you is the best I could do. Your route book will show you where to turn off."

"No chance for a break on the day, is there?" came in low tones from the interior of the car.

"I don't make breaks," was the brittle retort. "You've got a monopoly to that field. Among you—you've better things up beautifully!"

"The h—! you say!" growled the voice in the interior darkness. "How could we know?"

"It was your business to know! You had the whole thing in four hands three days ago; all you had to do was sit down and wait until the lorry was over. And all you did was to yell for help! But that's a back number. Let it go and get out of here. And don't fall down on this business tonight. I'll meet you as arranged. Get a move!"

"The big car rolled out across the sidewalk; and Canby walked quickly around to the side entrance of the hotel. Markham followed, but not directly. Beyond the hotel counter he found a hardware merchant fast closing for the night, and persuaded the man to go back and sell him a couple of serviceable automatics. Then he returned to the hotel lobby, where he found Landis waiting for him.

"What did you find out?" Landis demanded.

"Enough to warrant us in getting quick action. Where is Betty?"

"She said it was leaving time for her and her father and went to get ready. Canby went up to an elevator."

"Did he see you?"

"No; I kept out of his sight. But no doubt he knows we are here."

"Naturally. Betty will tell him if he hasn't found out any other way."

"You say action; what is it to be?"

"A swift getaway. Get your suitcase and wait for the side entrance. I'll be there with the car inside five minutes."

In rather less than five minutes Markham was piping the rammer at the side entrance to the hotel. Landis, who was waiting in the rumble and climbed to his place, saying, "Can't you tell me now?"

"Wait until we get out of town," Landis waited, and he was still waiting when the rammer bumped over the flat railroad crossing to the Red Butte Western yards and shot out upon the broad, silent expanse of the Red desert.

CHAPTER VII

At the Cinnabar

"Something, but not as much as I hoped to," said Markham, in answer to Landis' repeated question, as to what he had learned by following Owen and the three; and he recounted the talk he had overheard. "All I can make out of it is that Canby is hooked up with these men in some sort of deal in which he is the klutkin."

"You say Canby gave the others a map?"

"Something of the sort. He called it the layout."

"What did he mean by saying that the three had yelled for help?"

"That is just another of the boys' teries."

"You heard what Betty told us; that they had bought their train tickets, and then Canby changed his mind and asked them if they didn't want to drive. I'm wondering if it wasn't the yell for help that made him change his mind and plans."

"It may have been."

Landis spoke of something else.

"You asked Betty what time they got into Cophah, and her answer was, 'About five o'clock.' Also, she said she and her father watched the sunset from the mesa road; and not very long after that, Canby, with two people in his car, overtook us in the outskirts of town. How do you make that fit in?"

"I don't," said Markham shortly. "Nothing fits in. Stop by stop, each new development, or half development, pointed to Canby as the thief of the black box of silence. But if Canby were the thief, Betty Lawson was just as certainly his accessory. And that he told himself, was unbelievable. Yet there was the great stone, tumbling down the mountain side in utter silence to point the finger of implication at Canby. What desperate undertaking was Canby engaged in that would warrant a cold-blooded double murder at one of its conditions?"

The lights of Cophah had long since vanished in the eastward distance before Markham spoke again.

"Sorry your time with Betty was cut so short, Owen. But maybe we'll see more of her later."

"The time was long enough," was the sober reply. And then, half heartily, "I'm out of it with Betty. Wally, Canby's the man."

"No, he isn't; not if our suspicions are justified."

Landis smiled was a mere barring of the teeth. "You ought to know women better than that—Wally. Business deals, straight or crooked, don't mean anything to a woman in love."

"If you think Betty would wink at criminality, even in her lover—"

"We haven't anything to lose a charge of criminality on."

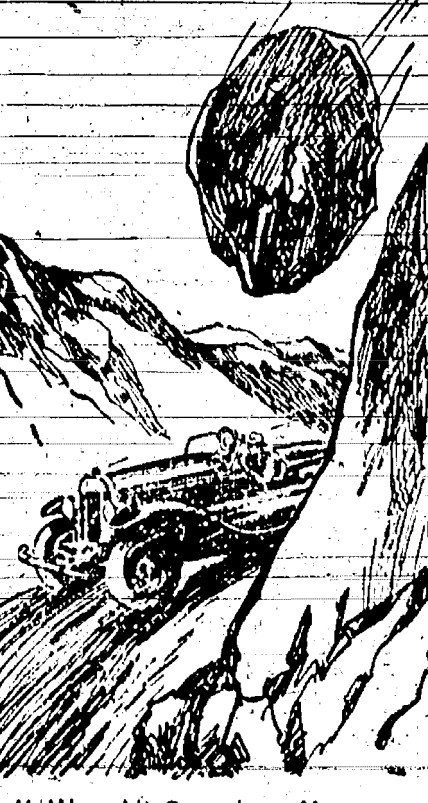

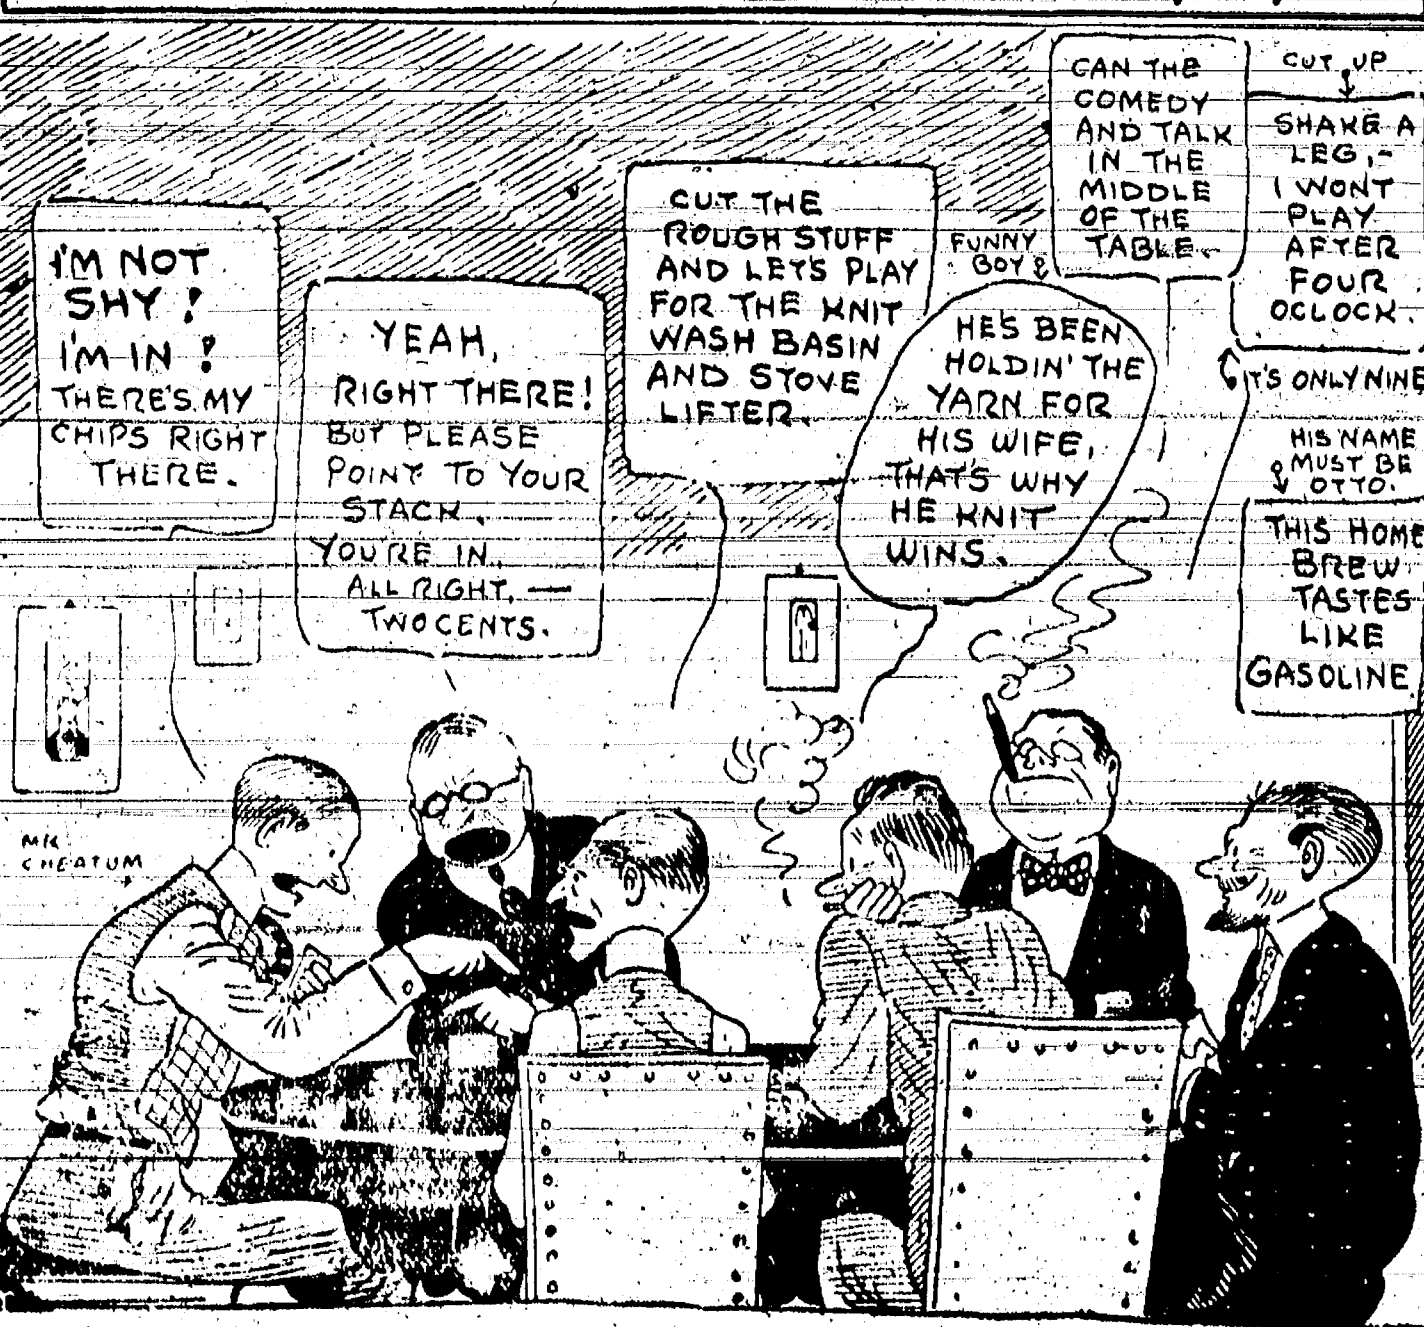

"Nothing positive, maybe. But what I overheard in Cophah seems to lean that way—not to go any farther back in the mess."

"Do you think so?"

great stones set up by the road builders to guard the down-mountain side of the highway. All at once one of the huge guard rocks tumbled over from its place to come tumbling over and down the declivity, timed as it by some calculating agency to reach the lower tangent coincidentally with the racing roadster.

Fortunately, Markham was one of those drivers whose reactions in an emergency are so instantaneous as to seem purely automatic. The first thing there was to do was to release the brakes and jammed the foot throttle open to its limit.

It was all over in a moment. With only a fraction of a second to spare at the point of intersection, but that fraction on the side of safety, the flying car shot fairly under the hurtling menace, and went racing on to the next doubling curve.

It was not until the car shot out upon the valley level that Landis relaxed, drawing a long breath and saying:

"I suppose so; though I couldn't make them out very well."

"But see here; Canby was an hour ahead of us at the last place we inquired, which was only a few miles back. His car couldn't have been the one we saw stopped up there on the mountain grade."

"Of course not. The people who were in that car pushed a rock over on us. Besides, Canby hasn't my black box."

"D—!" grunted Markham impatiently; and then, "Owen, this thing is getting too many twists and tangles in it—all together too many. I can't understand how Canby got behind us."

Landis shook his head. "Let's wait a bit and see if another car doesn't turn up," he suggested. "There must be another one, you know."

"They waited for half an hour, or more and nothing turned up. It's no use," Markham said at last. "We play as well drive on and get something to eat."

They had eaten dinner in the dining room without seeing anybody they recognized, and were making inquiries at the desk for the Canby-Lawson party.

"Nobody of either name this evening," said the clerk, "but that doesn't necessarily spell anything. If they are merely motoring through, they may have taken dinner tickets at the cashier's window; in which case we'd have no record."

"I see," said Markham. Then he took from his pocketbook the slip upon which, in the St. Joseph hotel, he had copied the names of the three Louisville men, and handed it to the clerk.

"Any of these gentlemen here?"

"Why, yes; all three of them. They came in this afternoon. There they are now—pointing across the lobby."

"Thanks," said Markham, and the

A LITTLE MORE about this nice Green Lake! Some thought I was telling foolish things, some thought I ought not to make public what little I know. I did not think I would get everybody excited within two or three hundred miles around. I do not want to do any harm to anyone. Water is a funny thing to play with—you can pick it up in a glass, you can't pick up the same amount in your bare hand, or carry it in your pants pocket, you can wash your hands in it, you can step into it and get your feet wet, you can jump into it when taking a bath, and you can jump into it when you are sick of living. Water does a lot of damage—sometimes. We often read where a big dam has given away, or some big reservoir has sprung a leak, or a hole has been broken in a big ship; with the water works in our own house—we go to sleep at night, some little pipe springs a leak, we wake up and find ourselves laying in water. Water has the most power! If it wasn't for water we would have to put lakes under big ships, or load a railroad engine on a stone boat. Some want to know why I didn't keep on building that big dam. When Columbus discovered America I think this Green Lake was on the map then. With all those things—and perhaps a million others against me, when I took my second thought and found myself all alone I happened to think of the old saying, "Better let that job out and leave good enough alone." Now my light's gone out, I'll take a good good drink and go to sleep!—George Klink.
