Favors Manufacture Of Cement By State

With much agitation prevalent in Chelsea which favors operation of the local state-owned cement industry, it is interesting to note that our neighboring state of Indiana is contemplating the manufacture of cement with the use of prison labor, with the thought in mind of saving a large sum of money by furnishing their own product for highway purposes.

Michigan's last administration closed the local plant as an excuse for an economy measure, while Governor McNutt of Indiana now proposes state manufacture of cement as an economy measure. With the new administration now in charge at Lansing it is the hope of many that a careful study of the proposition will be made with the result that the Chelsea plant will soon be in operation for the manufacture of cement to take care of the state's highway construction work.

An article explaining Gov. McNutt's plan to manufacture cement with convict labor appeared in the Jan. 20 edition of a Ft. Wayne daily paper as follows:

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 20.—(I. N. S.)—Gov. Paul V. McNutt has under consideration the manufacture of cement at the state farm at Putnamville for use of the Indiana Highway Commission. It was said at his office here today.

A clause in the State Highway Ripper Bill now pending in the senate enables the commission to purchase prison-made road materials. The commission spends annually about $2,500,000 for cement alone.

The Governor was said to be favoring the state penal farm instead of the state prison at Michigan City for the making of cement because of favorable limestone formations near Putnamville.

Yesterday the Governor ordered stopped the purchase by the commission of 1,420,000 barrels of cement.

H. D. Withers, who was named at a mass meeting held here last week to select a committee to confer with state officials in regard to reopening the local plant, announces the appointment of the following men to act with him on the committee: J. E. McKee, Conrad Lehman, J. A. Conlan and A. Q. Hinderling. An effort is now being made to secure an appointment with Gov. Comstock and Edw. Frensdorff, director of prison industries.

The output of sweet cream will be shipped to Eastern markets and other products of the concern will be sold locally and in nearby markets. Plans call for the establishing of from 20 to 40 milk routes in the community surrounding Chelsea. Ten or 12 men will be employed in the plant when operation is started, with an increase in employment as new lines of dairy products are produced.

Mr. MacKinnon is an experienced manufacturer of dairy products, having been connected with the Purdy Ice and Cream Co. of Adrian for 10 years. He states that when the Chelsea plant is ready for operation it will be one of the most modern equipped plants in this part of the country.

Plans Completed For Location of Creamery Co. Here

Final plans have been completed for the location of The Tower Creamery Co., a Michigan Corporation, in the building known as the tower building, just north of the Michigan Central tracks on North Main street.

C. W. MacKinnon of Adrian who will head the new enterprise, announces that the building has been leased from the owners, Conrad Lehman and L. P. Vogel, and that some equipment for the plant is being moved here from Detroit this week.

All equipment has been purchased and will be moved here as soon as extensive remodeling of the building has been completed. The work of remodeling the structure to make it suitable for the creamery will be started when several thousand bushels of onions which are stored in the building are removed. After the building is vacated it will require about four weeks' time to get the plant ready for operation, according to Mr. MacKinnon.

All of the three-story building will be used by the concern. The first floor will be used as a receiving room and for the boilers and ice machines. The second floor will be utilized for manufacturing of their products, which in the beginning will include separation and pasteurization of milk and cream, making ice cream, mix, cottage cheese, powdered milk and butter. The third floor will be used for storage tanks for raw milk, and for warehouse purposes.

It is anticipated that 40,000 pounds of milk will be received at the creamery daily at the beginning, with a possible increase to 75,000 pounds daily, which will be the capacity of the plant.

The output of sweet cream will be shipped to Eastern markets and other products of the concern will be sold locally and in nearby markets.

Plans call for the establishing of from 20 to 40 milk routes in the community surrounding Chelsea. Ten or 12 men will be employed in the plant when operation is started, with an increase in employment as new lines of dairy products are produced.

Mr. MacKinnon is an experienced manufacturer of dairy products, having been connected with the Purdy Ice and Cream Co. of Adrian for 10 years. He states that when the Chelsea plant is ready for operation it will be one of the most modern equipped plants in this part of the country.

Fire Damages Local Residence Sunday

Fire, believed to have been caused by defective wiring, caused extensive damage to the A. H. Schumacher residence, at 118 East Middle street on Sunday afternoon. The fire was mostly confined to the roof and upper story, the lower floors being badly damaged by water used in extinguishing the blaze.

The furnishings of the home, which was occupied by M. L. Knickerbocher and family, were considerably damaged by smoke and water. The loss is fully covered by insurance.

Mr. and Mrs. Knickerbocher have moved to apartments in the Palmer residence, corner Park and Madison streets.

Local People Injured In Auto Accident

While Mr. and Mrs. D. Edward Beach, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. J. Nelson Dancer, were returning Sunday afternoon from Port Huron, their automobile skidded on the Grand River car tracks at Redford, striking an electric light pole. Mrs. Dancer received a severe cut on the head requiring several stitches, also a cut on the face and other injuries. Mr. and Mrs. Beach suffered minor bruises. Mrs. Dancer was taken to the Redford hospital, returning to her home here, Monday.

Lantis Ice Joins Tri-County League

The Lantis Ice basketball team, who has joined the Tri-County League, will stage three big games in the local high school gymnasium sometime during February.

Lloyd Lantis, manager of the local team, has consented to turn all the proceeds over to the Red Cross.

The teams participating in this contest are Clinton, Grass Lake, Manchester, Michigan Center, Brooklyn and Chelsea, representing Lenawee, Jackson and Washtenaw counties.

Each week three games are played. The initial contest was held last Thursday at Clinton, the local team meeting the fast Brooklyn quintet and handing them a 32-22 defeat in a very close game.

This week's games will be played on the Grass Lake court, Wednesday evening, with Chelsea playing Clinton at 8:15.

Demonstration of Tree Pruning Held Here

Michigan State college, Lansing, is putting on three pruning demonstrations in the county. The one covering this section was held Tuesday afternoon at the farm of Elmer M. Smith, Lima township, with about 60 attending from Ann Arbor, Manchester, Sylvan, Sharon and North Lake.

The demonstration as given by Prof. Cardwell of M. S. C., featured the pruning of apple, peach, cherry and pear trees and grape vines, and stressed the importance of cutting as little as possible of the wood, to save the fruit spurs. It was the sentiment of those present that it was the finest demonstration ever held in this vicinity.

DRAMA BY LOCAL PEOPLE AT M. E. CHURCH SUNDAY NIGHT

Fourteen local people will present a very interesting drama at the Methodist church, Sunday evening, entitled, "Making the Best Use of Nature's Laws." The character parts are as follows: 1. Law. 2. Saller. 3. Transportation. 4. Aviation. 5. Agriculture. 6. Electricity. 7. Moses with his Tables of Stone. 8. Modern Law. 9. Health. 10. Courtesy. 11. Forgiveness. 12. Kindness. 13. Truth. 14. Love. The choir will assist.

A climax is reached when Law is really disclosed as Liberty. You are urged not to miss this presentation of a great truth.

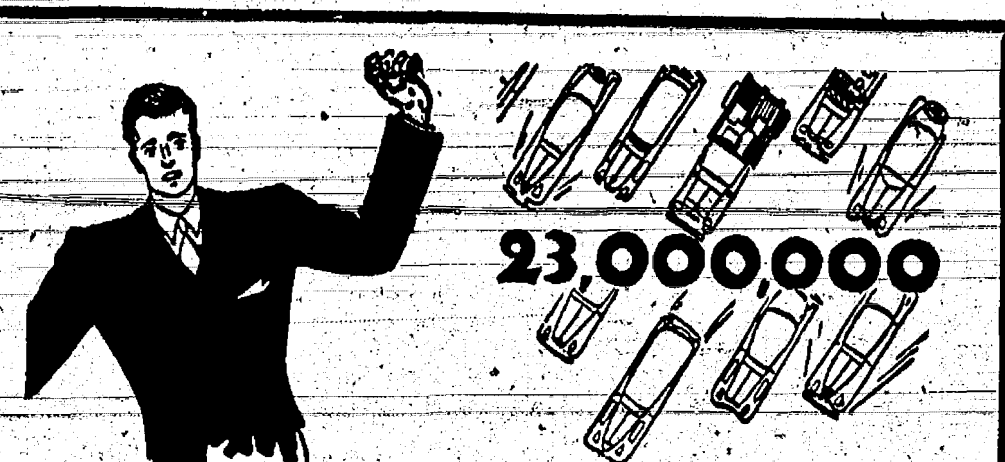

MRS. LEACH HONORED

About 20 members of the W. R. C. gave a party Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. W. Van Riper for the pleasure of Mrs. Emma Leach, who recently celebrated her golden wedding anniversary. The afternoon was spent playing "500" and Bounce. Mrs. Charlotte Mohrlock and Mrs. Nulle Whitmer receiving high score. A solo, "Memories," was given by Mrs. Mary Burg, after which all joined in singing "Best Be the Tie That Binds." Mrs. Leach was presented with a beautiful vase, also a gold piece in remembrance of the occasion. A pot-luck supper was served at 5:30.

ASSOCIATIONReduce Farm Costs
Is Program Theme

Methods of reducing the costs of farm operations will be the theme of the program prepared by the Agricultural Engineering section for Farmers Week at Michigan State college, Jan. 30 to Feb. 3.

Dairymen will be interested in the talk by E. W. Ruehs, Caledonia, on his experiences with the old type of dairy barn as compared with the new design, which is known as the pen barn system. Mr. Ruehs will be given Thursday morning. Models of the pen barn will be exhibited to show just how this type of barn is constructed.

F. W. Wallin, Jenison, will discuss methods of applying engineering principles to farming to save time, labor and money. Mr. Wallin operates the Wallingford Farm and will talk about experiences and not about theories.

G. C. Barkley, American Zinc Institute, New York, will discuss sheet metal roofing for use on farm buildings. This talk is listed for Thursday morning as is that of Mr. Barkley. The talk by Mr. Ruehs will be given Tuesday morning.

Members of the agricultural engineering department will speak on several phases of the problem of lowering the costs of farm equipment. Electrical apparatus, equipment for irrigation, machinery repairs, and tractors are some of the subjects listed. The program will be held in the gymnasium annex, as in previous years.

An air-tight tractor, recently placed on the market, will be exhibited as well as a model of a Gothic roofed barn. It is said that this type of roof decreases building costs.

Money Is Subject
For Farmers Week

The various governmental funds for the financing of farms and farmers co-operatives, the proposed measures for raising the levels of farm prices, and means for improving economic conditions for all lines of business are subjects given special attention in the economics program prepared for Farmers Week at Michigan State college Jan. 30 to Feb. 3.

The "Domestic Allotment Plan" for increasing the prices for certain farm products will be the subject of a talk given by Assistant Professor O. Urey, M. S. C., Wednesday, Feb. 1. Dr. H. S. Patton, head of the college economics department will discuss "Farm Debt Adjustments" the same day.

The three forms of governmental credit, crop production loans, crop marketing loans, and farm mortgage loans, will be explained by members of the college economics department or by officers of the agencies charged with the administration of those funds. Dr. H. S. Patton, Gifford Patch, Jr., M. S. C.; N. P. Hull, Lansing, director, Agricultural Credit Corporation of Minneapolis, and F. G. Wanek, secretary, Federal Land Bank of St. Paul, will appear on this section of the program, Thursday, Feb. 2.

Taxation and public expenditures are also subjects with a particular appeal at the present time. R. V. Dunn, M. S. C., will talk on "Where Our Taxes Come From and Where They Go" and F. M. Thrun, M. S. C., is given the subject, "Suggested Reforms in School Financing an Administration." These talks will be given Tuesday, Jan. 31.

Dr. Herman Wyngarden, M. S. C., and Prof. E. B. Hill, M. S. C., have the topics "The General Business Outlook" and "Farm Management Adaptation for 1933." These men are on the program, Wednesday, Feb. 1.

Farmers Will Get
Long Sought Wish

Those farmers who have often said they would like to see one of those white-collared dudes out on a farm where he had to make a living can have that opportunity at Michigan State college during Farmers Week, Jan. 30 to Feb. 3, when two of the speakers on the soils department programs are a graduate physician and a graduate from law school who are operating successful farms in Michigan.

N. P. Beebe, Niles, a graduate of the law department at the University of Michigan, deserted the law office when his health failed and started growing crops on muck soil near Niles. His farm at present contains 2,150 acres on which he grows 600 acres of mint, 125 acres of celery, 150 acres of cabbage, and large acreages of other truck crops each year.

He owns a cold storage from which he handles a year-round business that amounts to 600 carloads of vegetables a year. Mr. Beebe will discuss on Feb. 2, the methods which enabled him to build up a farm business, become the mayor of Niles for several terms, and take time out to visit 38 foreign countries in the past few years.

Dr. G. S. Felt graduated from the medical school at the University of Iowa, served in the army during the World War, and then bought a farm at Sparta, Mich. He states that the farm would not produce enough feed for 15 head of stock at that time but the crops he grows now feed 30 head and there is a surplus to sell. Dr. Felt talks on Feb. 3.

Just to prove that graduates from agricultural colleges are not at a serious disadvantage when competing with other college graduates, Jason Woodman, Paw Paw, premier potato grower of southwestern Michigan, will follow Dr. Felt on the program. Mr. Woodman is a graduate of Michigan State.

TWENTY-FOUR YEARS AGO

Thursday, January 28, 1909.
Washtenaw and Monroe counties are now free of the quarantine which has been enforced due to the hoof and mouth disease.

Chas. West and Fred Bailey caught a 17½ pound pickerel at North Lake on Friday.

Dr. A. G. Wall has given up his dental practice at this place and on Tuesday moved his office equipment to Dexter.

Monday morning the Millen Portland Cement Co. put a large force of men at work and it is expected that the plant will be run continuously from now on. The entire output will be handled by Detroit parties.

If one could take the usual signs that are displayed, spring was surely here. The first of the week. Small boys dug up their marbles and you could hear "far-dub-dub" (knights down light) and various other terms that go with the game. The frogs were hopping about the marshes and the mud was knee deep.

Lester Canfield has been appointed special internal revenue collector, with Indiana for his field at present and Indianapolis as headquarters for the present.

The Altar society of St. Mary's church held their annual meeting on Sunday and the following officers were elected: Spiritual Advisor, Rev. W. P. Considine; president, Mrs. John Parrell; vice-president, Mrs. William F. Kress; secretary, Mrs. Frank Carlinger and treasurer, Miss Mary J. Miller.

A newspaper clipping from a Chicago paper states that Herbert A. Clark, formerly of Lyndon, of that city picked up a valuable purse on the street and received a reward of $50 on its return to the owner.

THIRTY-FOUR

Thursday, January 26, 1899.
Mrs. Squire Covert of Lima township died at her home on Friday, January 20, 1899. Funeral services were held at the church on Sunday.

There is every prospect that the Lansing-Dexter and Ann Arbor electric road will be built and in running order within six months.

Died, on Friday, January 20, 1899, Carrie, wife of George Holzappel, aged 34 years. Funeral services were held at Rogers Corners on Monday.

Died, on Tuesday, January 24, 1899, Catherine, wife of John Jons of Lima, aged 70 years. The funeral was held at 10:30 o'clock this morning at St. John's church.

At a meeting of the Methodists of this place, held at the town hall on Monday evening, it was decided to build a new church here this year instead of repairing the old one which was badly burned recently.

Married, on Wednesday, January 26, 1899, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Schumacher, Miss Emma Schumacher and Lewis Morehouse, both of Waterloo. Mrs. A. Congdon and Miss Ida Schumacher of this place attended the wedding.

Ed Shanahan has been making the fishermen here anxious to take a day off and try their luck. On Monday he brought in a pickerel that weighed 13½ pounds and on Tuesday one that weighed 16½ pounds.

Hiram Van Tassel, a former Chelsea resident and father of Mrs. Eugene Freer, died at his home in Chicago, Thursday, January 19, 1899. Interment was at Oak Grove cemetery, Chelsea.

The following are the officers of the W. R. C. for 1899: President, Carrie Schumacher; senior vice-president, Lillie M. Wondy; junior vice-president, Ann E. Harrington; chaplain, Julia Fuller; treasurer, Mary E. Van Tine; secretary, R. M. Wilkinson; conductor, Estella Guerin; guard, Georgiana Thompson; asst. conductor, Mary V. Michigan
Department of State
WEEKLY NEWS BULLETIN

Frank D. Fitzgerald
Secretary of State

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 25.—During the year ending June 30, 1932, a total of 52,157 persons were arrested and confined in Michigan jails, according to the annual abstract of sheriffs' reports recently presented to the Governor by the Department of State. For 60 years, state laws have required the annual report to be made by the department.

Of those arrested, 15,985 were charged with major crimes, 34,105 with misdemeanors and 2,067 were not charged with any crime. Of those who were arrested and the 1,774 who were in one of Michigan's jails on July 1, 1931, 2,308 were convicted and sentenced to state prisons; 908 to the Michigan Reformatory; 2,139 to the Detroit House of Correction; 32 to the Boys' Vocational School and 13 to the Girls' Training School.

The report shows that cost of maintaining jails, traveling and other expenses was $1,469,741.

Few persons know that the Department of State is charged with the duty of registering names and distinctive markings of milk bottles. This duty is conferred by Act 361 of the Public Acts of 1927.

A company desiring exclusive use of words or marking on milk bottles must first file a copy of the desired marking with the county clerk of the county in which the company is located. Then it is mandatory under the law for the company to advertise its intention for three weeks in some newspaper in the county. Upon certification of these facts to the department, the words and markings are registered.

Printed sheets containing names and addresses of all county officers in Michigan are now ready for distribution by the Department of State. These charts are usually compiled before Jan. 1, but were delayed this year because of the many recounts and elections of county officers which prevented securing the necessary information.

NOTTEN ROAD

Fred Heydlauff was in Dexter on Sunday.

The Ladies' Aid and the Grange will have a joint meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Miller, Wednesday, Feb. 1. Mrs. Theo. Weber will put on a health program. A good attendance is desired. Lunch will be served at noon.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Notten and Mrs. Leona Heydlauff were in Ann Arbor, Friday.

Mrs. Fred Notten attended a business session of the Royal Neighbors at Grass Lake Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Kalmbach of Jackson visited at the home of Henry Kalmbach Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Schweinfurth spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Schweinfurth at Chelsea.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Riggs of Detroit spent the week-end at their farm here.

Mrs. Lina Whitaker was in Jackson Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Brocasma visited relatives in Manchester Sunday.

Miss Bertha Riemenschneider is spending some time in Detroit visiting relatives and friends.

FRANCISCO

Mr. and Mrs. Milton G. Bohne of Jackson spent Sunday with Henry Bohne and family.

Mrs. Lewis Lambert, accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Cecil Taylor of Chelsea, visited Mr. and Mrs. Orin Scramblin of Jackson Friday.

Wilbert Willy, who discontinued his work in high school last spring, resumed his tenth grade work Monday.

Christopher Benter, who spent part of last week with his mother and family has returned to Detroit.

Rodney Richardson was in Jackson Thursday afternoon to attend the half day institute.

Pupils of the district who are attending school in Grass Lake wrote the semester examinations last week. Some finished Wednesday and had the balance of the week for vacation.

Mrs. and Mrs. Rodney Richardson spent the week-end with Mr. Richardson's parents in Horton.

Henry Bohne and son Walter were in Chelsea Saturday evening to call on Charles Moore who is ill.

The heavy windstorm Thursday did some damage here. Roofing, window lights, trees and limbs of trees were among the things destroyed.

Truman Lehman, who was laid off last July, has been called back to Chelsea where he is employed in one of the shops.

Mrs. Carrie Benter and daughter, Miss Margaret, called on John Benter in the hospital near Ypsilanti, Sunday afternoon.

In the Medicine Closet

It is well to keep the medicine closet in a more or less catalogued condition by at least keeping the medicines for internal use and those for external use on different shelves. If you try, you will find you can group your medicine supply so there is little chance of mishap. Keep any poison marked in some way and in a place where it is quite an effort to get to, then there cannot be a mistake.

METHODIST HOME

Miss Lois Birkenstock of Brighton was a caller on her aunt, Miss Ella Bidwell, Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Wilkinson of Bellevue were guests of Mrs. Ida Lansing, Sunday. Mrs. Wilkinson is principal of the schools in that place. They were anxious to find out how their friend liked it in her new home. Their curiosity was changed to wonderment at what they saw and learned in their visit and went away expressing satisfaction.

On Wednesday Miss Emma Leeman entertained her nephew, John C. Leeman of Sharon and his friend, Clarence Gage of the same place.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gleeson of Detroit visited with their aunt, Mrs. Margaret Bliss.

Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Coogan spent some time with the latter's father in the Home.

Mrs. Carlton is still confined to her room under the doctor's care.

Mrs. Atwood MacAndrews of Ypsilanti visited with her mother, Mrs. L. C. Brabb.

Mrs. Phoebe French received a visit Sunday afternoon from her son, Geo. Tuck and Mrs. Pauline Stull of Pontiac.

Mrs. Frances Pool returned Sunday from her fortnight visit at Pontiac and other places in Oakland county.

Harriet Moore of Harbor Springs is attending the Normal school at Ypsilanti, called on by her grandfather, Charles Park, Sunday.

Mrs. Ione Gorton enjoyed a visit Sunday from Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Rowland and their daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rickenbach all of Detroit.

Russell Marlett and Ralph Hunt of Ypsilanti called on Mrs. W. J. Palmer Sunday afternoon, renewing old acquaintance.

Miss Harriet Adams of Detroit was a recent caller on Miss Alice Brown, Rev. and Mrs. E. A. Blake of Dunbar visited friends in the Home, Monday.

Miss Carrie Bowen of Ypsilanti visited with the members from that city, Sunday.

Miss Almada Beach has improved so as to be able to sit up occasionally.

"WHERE THERE IS NO VISION, THE PEOPLE PERISH"

Prov. 29:18

Brother have you had a vision? Of the real, the good, the true, Have you ever felt the impulse Of a push impelling you?

Urging, passionate entreaty That you act the victory part, Giving Christ your life in every part?

Start impromptu now this moment, Breathe a short decisive prayer, Put your impulse into action Here and now just where you are.

You have had a Heaven-born vision Of the real, the good, the true, 'Twas the Holy Spirit impulse, Let Him have His way with you.

Rose Coral, Costly

The general run of coral which is used in the manufacture of neckties and other fancy articles, is particularly valuable, the average cost being about a dollar and a half an ounce. But one type of coral, the rose coral, because of its comparative rarity, is highly expensive, costing several hundred dollars an ounce.

Giant Fossil Tortoise
of Pleistocene Period

All the giant tortoise to be seen here and there in the museum and zoological gardens are pigmies when compared with the giant fossil tortoise on view in New York. This one flourished in the Pleistocene era and its remains were found by a scientist in the Siwalk hills. Fragments of such giant tortoise have been found at different times, but never has a complete shell been recovered as in this case. The fossil was pretty well broken up, however, but it seems that all the pieces were present and the remains were gathered up carefully and shipped in several boxes. This was several years ago and finally an ingenious person with a flair for such work carefully put the pieces together like the assembling of a cut-out puzzle, only much more difficult. He put in the best part of two years at this job, and finally it was completed.

This ancient giant measured 7 feet 4 inches in length and 5 feet in width and the shell is 3 feet thick. When full grown it must have weighed a ton. The scientific name for this fellow is Colossochelys atlas. There are some very large tortoise to be seen at this time, shambling about the Galapagos islands, but they cannot compare with the old fossil for weight or size.

Poor Light in Days of Lanterns and Candles

It is reported that the first cattle imported to this continent from England, making the voyage in 1630, were no more than three. And it was a matter of twenty or thirty years before cows became at all common. Most of the people had to depend on such furs as the wild bears and deer in the woods about their settlement provided.

It has been said that beeswax was only to be had from England, but biologists have pointed out that there were swarms of wild bees to be found in the rocky crevices and in decayed tree trunks in New England. The wax from the honeycombs was then a welcome substitute for the tallow.

There was still another addition, specifically, a fat found in the head of the sperm whale. Candles made of this had the advantage of giving twice the light of the tallow products, but there was also more waste and smoke, though the latter was not disagreeable. Perhaps their excellent light was one reason for their employment in the little tin lanterns which illuminated several of Boston's streets in 1730.

A CONSERVATIVE Bank—and no other bank is worthy of the name—must be cautious in making loans. It cannot afford to take even the ordinary risk of the business man. The business man in extending credit is doing so with his own wares. But a Bank is loaning the money of its depositors.

THE safe Bank—the conservative Bank—the one that must be assured a loan will be promptly repaid and is properly secured—is one that is a benefit to the entire community—absolutely safe for its depositors—wholly just to those who borrow.

Chelsea Whips

Clinton 27 to 26

It serves Loe 13 to 9.

Last Saturday evening Chelsea High School defeated Clinton 27 to 26 for its first Huron Valley League victory. This marked a rise in Chelsea's standings. The Chelsea boys lost their other league contest to Milan.

The Reserve team for Chelsea lost by the score of 13 to 9. This game was marked by the good playing of D. Winans and C. Panarites. Panarites was leading scorer with six points. The Chelsea defense was weak and through this fault they lost the game.

The Chelsea first team failed to get started in the first half as the Chelsea passing attack did not advance the ball to a position for a short shot. Clinton got off to a good start and led 14 to 7 at the half.

Chelsea High came back strong in the third quarter and led by Novess and N. Panarites they soon tied the score. The game from this time on was a see-saw affair with the score very close at all times.

Both Ed. Steiner and Herbert Wal-lace, who played a good defensive game, were rejected from the game in the final quarter on personal fouls. Steiner stood out on defensive play and brought the crowd to its feet with a long shot from the center of the floor. Novess was leading scorer with nine points, followed by N. Panarites who tallied seven points.

Ye Ol' Snooper's Scoop

I have been wondering why so many of the students have been taking books home, when it suddenly dawned on me that one little word is responsible—"Exams." They are to take place Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

The basketball team shows a lot of promise for a winning team this season. They certainly played a good game last Saturday with Clinton. The score, by the way, was Clinton 26, Chelsea 27.

Our girls can dance. At least they showed a tendency to that effect in "Henry's Wedding." Dor Schenk, Leona Weinberg, Verna Adam, Marion Goodall and Mildred Goodall were those from school who displayed their talents.

The Journalism club has a new "dead line" for their news. Tuesday noon all news MUST be in.

The Seniors are going to have another dance, the "Heart-Y Hop," Feb. 3. The time, nine 'til one. The place, High School Gym. (The Girl, ????) Yours for bigger key-holes, "Snooper."

Dancer like Leona Moeckel.

PLYMOUTH.—If Plymouth post-office receipts are any indication of improved business condition, the year which just came to a close showed a better condition than the previous year. While the gain was not large, it does represent a substantial increase in view of all conditions.

Increase In High School Attendance

One of the direct results of the present economic depression has been the increase in high school attendance, reports Supt. E. Y. Poore. In Chelsea, high school enrollment has increased from 100 to 181 during the last year. Boys and girls of high school age, who a few years ago were leaving school to become wage-earners in automobile plants or other industries, now without the beckoning of a ready-money job, are found in the classrooms. Throughout the state there has been a great increase, also, in the number of high school graduates who are returning for post-graduate courses. Chelsea now has four students enrolled in post-graduate courses in the high school.

Even before the let-down in the national industry, a marked increase came in the enrollment figures of the junior and senior high schools. This doubtless found its chief motivating force at the time in the increasing reluctance of employers to subject themselves to the attendant hazards of child employment.

The increasing rigidity of child labor laws, with special permits required from the department of labor and industry for machine operators under 18 years of age, and associated with this the requirement of the Workmen's Compensation act that double compensation be granted to injured operators under 18 years of age, legally employed, had the effect of closing to high school boys and girls the employment office door in most factories.

Eleven industrial cities of the state which reported the tenth grade enrollment as 63 per cent of the sixth grade enrollment in 1929-30 indicated the tenth grade enrollment as 84 per cent of the sixth grade enrollment in 1937-38.

"Educating Michigan's Children," in Bulletin No. 26, recently published by the Michigan Education Association. These same cities reported the twelfth grade enrollment as compared to the sixth grade, to have increased from 28 to 80 per cent in the same period.

One large city reported its tenth grade enrollment of 100 per cent and a twelfth grade enrollment of 64 per cent of its sixth grade.

Figures, when available for the present school year, will without doubt show a new high in attendance and enrollment. A recent national survey shows a decrease estimated at more than one-third as compared with the average figure. In the number of 14 and 15-year old children leaving schools.

The schools of the country have not been mindful of the fact that a fair proportion of the individuals making up this increased attendance at these ages, seek some practical training for vocational activities.

Practical courses providing technological and clerical training have been added and expanded, and the boys and girls who have remained in school will eventually enter the office, store or factory, or go on the farm with a basic training which advances them immeasurably in the scale of productivity as a wage-earner.

Divided We Fall

A divided school cannot get very far.

The students of Chelsea have always supported to a certain extent all school activities, yet when a worthwhile project comes along, it is given little support.

At the present time there is a discussion on the subject of a permanent school emblem. Undoubtedly the question will be settled by the group of students selected for this purpose, but in whatever way their decision affects you, PUT YOUR SUPPORT TO THE GOOD OF THE PROJECT.

This article is not written to apply only to the above question, but also to sports and every other activity the students wish to promote. When you students realize that this is your school and that your actions make or break the reputation of your school, the extra-curricular and other social activities will be given the support that they need and deserve.

Gossip is like a boomerang; it's liable to hurt the one who throws it.

All truth is safe, and he who keeps the truth or withholds it from man is either a coward or a criminal, or both.

WAYNE.—David A. Stagg, 35 years old, has bid adieu to his friends among the 10,000 patients and residents of Eloise. He is leaving to return to his boyhood home at Harrodsburg, Ky., to inherit a $1,000 estate left by his sister, who died recently.

Eighth Graders Again Victorious

Our eighth grade basketball team journeyed to Stockbridge on Jan. 10 and were again victorious in an overtime period. Novess and Pauser were the stars of this game, although it took the other three players to win. At the end of the half the score was Chelsea 5 and Stockbridge 4. As soon as the boys were rested they came back with full force and at the end of the game the score was 8 to 8. An overtime period of three minutes was played and the total score was 12 to 8. There were no substitutes for Chelsea.

The line-up was as follows: Oosterlo, R.F.; McElride, L.F.; Pauser, C. and captain; Tisch, R.G., and Novess, L.G.

Kindlings From The Elementary Grades

Kindergarten—

Did you know that there was an epidemic of mooses around? Well, there is. The kindergarten has one pupil out with it. The enrollment of 35 has dwindled down to 22 because of the prevalent sickness. We are happy to say that those who are attending are getting the benefit of the regular kindergarten activities. Would you like to see some new style curtains? Just visit the kindergarten and see the ones the kiddies made for their room. They are made of paper and are just like the real thing.

First Grade—

Can you imagine? The first graders have another new reader. Such rapid progress as these people do make! More mooses! And lots of them. These pupils are studying Eskimos and are making Eskimo pictures. Their sand table is very prettily decorated in keeping with Eskimos. They are waiting for it to snow so that they can make snow flakes.

Second Grade—

All the members of the second grade have been spending the month of January in Alaska. They will be ready to tell you all about it next week—that is, if they don't forget to come back.

Fourth Grade—

Ralph Dingle, our new boy from Cleveland, was appointed president of the Girls and Boys Council to fill the vacancy made by David Potts, who has moved to Grand Rapids.

The fourth graders are studying Switzerland. In geography they are reviewing the Swiss customs, while in art they are accumulating over Alpine scenery. In library work they are reading "Heldi—The Swiss Girl," upon which a report will be made to their librarian. They are also learning the "Swiss Mountain March" which is one of the folk games of Switzerland.

Club Spirit

To the entire Student Body:

At the first of the year various clubs were started by our fellow-students. We were all interested, but soon lost our interest. It seemed the lack of club spirit among our fellow-students has been exhibited and this played.

Personally, I think that when you have joined a club you should not drop it, but continue to keep it organized. Why bother to organize in the first place?

Did you ever ask this question? How can a club prosper if we continually all keep dropping out?

Unless the condition which prevails is abolished I think it will prove a disaster to all our clubs.

The clubs of Chelsea Public School need your loyalty, not only to the purpose of the club, but to individual members.

There are two clubs that have been practically dropped. The Journalism club is still prospering, thanks to all its members.

Let's all start over next term and show our club instructors real "club spirit." Will you? Sure you all will. I know you can if you try.

An Ideal History Test

1. Who was President during Monroe's administration?
2. In what year was the war of 1812 fought?
3. What two countries fought in the Spanish-American War?
4. What was John Jay's last name? (Miss Hazard—this is for your benefit.)

Question And Answer Dept.

Question.—I would like to ask you what in the world we have to be thankful for in these times of depression, when we owe so many and can't pay our bills?

Answer.—You should be thankful that you are not one of the creditors.

Question.—Will you please answer when Port Arthur was captured by the Japanese in the Russo-Japanese War?

Answer.—Port Arthur fell to the Japanese on Nov. 21, 1904.

Question.—May I ask in your question and answer department why a certain peak in the Rocky Mountains is called "Pike's Peak?"

Answer.—Pike's Peak was so named because it was discovered by Col. Zachariah Pike. This mountain peak was discovered in 1800.

Question.—Can you please tell me in your valuable paper how motion pictures are produced on the screen?

Answer.—The effect of producing motion pictures on the screen is due to a physiological property of the eye, called persistence of vision which causes an image to remain apparent for about one-fifth of a second after it has really disappeared. The pictures are projected upon the screen at the rate of about sixteen per second, and they change from one to the other so rapidly that the eye receives the effect of continuous motion.

Question.—To settle a dispute I desire to ask you who wrote "Auld Lang Syne?"

Answer.—Robert Burns was the author of that famous poem—"Auld Lang Syne."

Question.—If the earth is revolving all the time why is it that when one is up high in an airplane for many hours at a time is not left behind?

Answer.—As the atmosphere which surrounds the earth travels with it an airplane in the air is being carried along in the same motion with the earth.

Question.—Will you please explain in the question department of your paper what is meant by "flat" money?

Answer.—Briefly, "flat" money is a paper currency issued by the government and made legal tender by fiat law alone. "Flat" is a Latin word which literally means "let it be done." This money is not based on gold, silver or any metal or specie, and carries with it no promise of redemption. At the close of the World War Germany and Russia both issued flat money.

Question.—What is "Chile con carne," and how did it get that name?

Answer.—"Chile con carne" is a combination of three Spanish words. "Chile" is the name of a certain kind of red pepper, and "con carne" literally means "with flesh." The red pepper Chile is a native of Mexico and not of the country on the west coast of South America, as many suppose.

Question.—I would like to know who invented the rocking chair?

Answer.—Benjamin Franklin was the inventor of the rocking chair.

Question.—Can you tell me what matches are made of?

Answer.—The common match in use today is made of sulphur, phosphorus, paper and wood.

Question.—What is the distance the moon travels in circling the earth?

Answer.—The average distance the moon travels around the earth is 238,855 miles, which it makes in 27 days, 7 hours.

Question.—Why are Tuxedo coats called "Tuxedos?"

Answer.—A country club in Tuxedo, N. Y., used these jackets or coats at their dinner parties, and this particular style of coats became generally known as "Tuxedo."

Question.—I am curious to know when and where needles were first used. Can you answer soon?

Answer.—The Chinese were the first to use steel needles in a crude form, and these were carried into Europe by the Moors. The first needle-making industry was established in Nuremberg, Germany, in 1470.

Importance of Little Things When Summed Up

All great things are but accumulation of little things. . . . Rays of light make up the warmth of the sun; drops of water become rivers; grains of wheat push up their shoots; and all these work silently, almost imperceptibly, until a bounteous harvest is reaped.

Letters are arranged into words; words are formed into thoughts; thoughts are spread on the pages of books; in libraries and in universities intellect develops; and by the might of intellect, oceans are linked and man is master of the elements.

A sneer of scorn, a smile of encouragement, a kindness or a wrong—from such little things is character molded. Upon the characters of individuals are built the ethics of communities, industries and peoples, and empires rise and fall.

There is no act so slight, no task so trifling, but fills an important niche in the boundless scheme of little things. And in their accumulated accomplishment each man and group and commonwealth and nation and planet moves in the vastness that is the universe. —David Rand, quoted in the Missouri Farmer.

Monster Basket Made

by California Indians

It is said that the Ponca Indians, scattered remnants of a tribe that still live in Mendocino county, California, some time ago made a monster basket, which is declared to be the largest in the world. The lower or main part of this basket is composed of ozer twigs very skillfully inter-twined. Between the warp and woof the interstices are very small—so that the huge basket will hold any kind of fine grain.

Many similar, though much smaller receptacles—willow baskets—are made by these Indians and are used as granaries to hold provisions for the winter stores. Mandocino county abounds in oak forests, which produce a great harvest of acorns, of which the red man, his squaw and pinoches are very fond. Hundreds of bushels of the acorns are annually gathered and stored away in baskets for the hungry days. Other kinds of stored grains are also placed in these baskets. These willow granaries are generally mounted on a rude platform.

The immense basket mentioned is six feet from bottom to rim and 25 feet in circumference.

Latent Powers

Let us recognize our latent powers, and boldly devote ourselves to their unfoldment and use.

Chinese Junks Launched With Great Ceremony

Unless history be a fault, the Chinese were pioneers in breasting tempestuous seas to carry their commercial enterprises to far lands. The Chinese have held with astonishing faithfulness to many of their ancient religious practices. In a Portuguese work, translated into English in 1570, it is found this fairly full account of what the Chinese then did when they launched their ocean-going junks: "When they launched their ships into the sea at the first making, the priests go approved with long garments, being of very rich silk, to make their sacrifices in the ponds of them, where the place of prayer is, and they offered painted figures, and they cut and burned them before their idols with certain ceremonies that they make, and sing songs with an unorderly tone, sounding certain little bells. They worship the deity, where they have him painted in the forepart of the ship, because, as they say, he should do no hurt to the ships. In all this discourse they are eating and drinking at discretion." —From the Grace Log.

Masterpieces Not Free From Humorous Errors

Among famous errors of noted men, the Golden Book Magazine notes that in Van Dyke's celebrated picture of Charles I in armor, both gauntlets are for the right hand.

Then there is that passage from "Robinson Crusoe" which resolved, if possible, to get to the ship, so I pulled on my clothes and took to the water. . . . and by the help of a rope got into the fore-castle of the ship.

I found that all the ship's provisions were dry; and being well disposed to eat, I went to the bread room and filled my pockets with biscuits. The various nautical colonies would no doubt be grateful for DeFoe's explanation of how this feat was accomplished.

Count Hermann Keyserling, who was not the author of "How to Tell the Birds From the Wild Flowers," is responsible for the following: "The jungle is a thick and its fauna, in general, is rich and luxuriant, rather than important as regards its individual plants."

Solitary Islanders

Unfortunately located for any ship lanes, the island of Tristan da Cunha, the largest and only inhabited of a group of three islands in the middle of the South Atlantic ocean, is regarded as the loneliest place in the British empire. It was named for a Portuguese admiral who discovered the island in 1505.

Months, and sometimes a year, pass without a ship calling there. People on the island have only a population of 100—20 without mail and newspapers for a long time as a result. Their food supply grows woefully short and they live on the barest means the soil and sea can furnish.

Agate Easily Polished

The agate, once highly prized by the ancients because of the beauty of the coloring, can be brought to brilliant color and polish by boiling in a strup and then in an acid. The resultant colors are beautiful. The agate is fairly widely distributed in the world, being found in Egypt, Scotland, Germany, South America, the United States and in other parts of the world. The most type is found in Wyoming and Nevada, while the banded type is found in quantity along Lake Superior. Large specimens of the banded type are also plentifully distributed in Texas.

Man's Need of Women

By women, poets are ruled. Women give an age its color; not because they themselves are omnipotent, but because men, being children first and last, see their gods through women and have no power but at the breast and no imagination of rebirth but in the similitude of a womb. Solitary men are like cut flowers in a pot; they are beautiful but they wither; being without nourishment; yet if man consent to be nourished of woman, he, like a flower, is rooted and held; there is no escape until his earth receives him again. —From "The Fountain" by Charles Morgan.

Tomato From Peru?

Peru is thought to have been the native home of the tomato, and the natives of Mexico are known to have grown it since very early times. They called them tomatoes or tomatoes from which the present word, tomato, has probably been derived. It was not until nearly 100 years after the discovery of America that Europeans became acquainted with the tomato, and even after they had known the plant for many years it was used mainly for ornamental purposes, the food value of the fruit being little suspected.

Sheephead Valuable

The sheephead, a fish with an unattractive name, is nevertheless one of the most valuable food fish along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts. It varies in size, from two pounds to 15 pounds. The drum is sometimes called the sheephead, although this designation is not correct.

The name of the fish comes not from the shape of its head, but rather because of the nature of its teeth, with incisors in front and molars behind. It feeds upon shell fish, for which its grinding teeth are well adapted.

Spelt Sixteen Ways

If spelling is your weak point, there is one word on which you practically can't go wrong. Ivan Turgenev, according to the Golden Book Magazine, may be written correctly in 16 different ways. You begin with the simple "Turgenev" and work up, by the addition of vowels and consonants, till you reach "Tougenoueff." Then you start all over, putting an accent occasionally over the first "e." But however you spell it, Turgenev was one of the great triumvirate of Russian novelists and the first to be known outside of his own country.

Reason for Suspicion

A "golf widow" decided that she would practice the game secretly and then challenge her husband. She did both and indulgently he accepted her challenge. From the first she drove a nice ball well on the fairway, and this so unnerved the husband that when he essayed his drive he missed the ball altogether.

"Now, George," said his wife in a hard voice, "I'd like to know what you've really been doing these last 12 years when you've been pretending to me that you were playing golf?" —Boston Transcript.

Not Work for Weak Arm

When the housewife says that her arm is tired from kneading the dough for the family bread, she is perfectly justified, for dough is so resistant that it bends cost steel paddles which are a foot long and an inch thick at the neck and which do the kneading job for the mixing machines. In order to make these paddles stand up under this severe service, nickel alloy steel has been specified for them. Incidentally, it requires no less than eight horsepower to push one of these paddles through dough at the rate of 12 times a minute.

No Butting In

"Put up your hands!" commanded the larger of two bandits who had stopped the motor coach. "We're in to rob the gent and kiss all the ladies."

"No," remonstrated the smaller one, "wait! We've got the gent in right, but we'll leave the ladies alone."

"Young man," snipped a woman passenger of uncertain age, "mind your own business! Your friends are managing this holdup!" —London Tit-Bits.

Skeleton Within Skeleton

A strange find was made by a man living near Bulawayo, South Africa. It was the skeleton of a jackal, inside the skeleton of a horse. Some speculation has arisen as to how one animal came to be inside the other. It is thought that the jackal, finding the horse dead on the veldt, started to gnaw into the body, and was trapped by the collapse of the carcass while eating its way towards the front of the shoulder blades.

Time

Time cures every wound, and though the scar may remain and occasionally ache, yet the earliest agony of its recent infliction is felt no more. —Sir Walter Scott.

ONLY A FEW LEFT

But They Blazed the Trail That "Air Mail" Now Holds Up To Glory.

Charles A. Lindbergh, Casey Jones, Phil Love, Bud Gurney are some of the nation's aviation heroes who graduated from the ranks of the intrepid government air mail service, whose thrilling and romantic story has been screened by Universal in its drama, "Air Mail," coming to the Pelness Theatre, Friday and Saturday, Jan. 27-28.

The early aces who blazed the way across the continent and tested the air times at the risk of their lives are mostly all gone, many of them having crashed in the perilous flights, while others have retired to less hazardous pursuits. Only a handful remain in active duty, among them Hamilton Lee and "Bud" Williams, Jack Knight and Ray Little.

The crop of younger pilots who have taken up the trust of putting through the mail fly under less dangerous conditions than did the pioneers, but the rigorous mail schedule makes mail flying hazardous at best.

Ralph Bellamy, Pat O'Brien, Russell Hopton, Slim Summerville, Gloria Stuart and Lillian Bond enact the feature roles in "Air Mail," the first screen play to dramatize this little known but romantic flying fleet.

Repaying Discourtesy

"Inducement," said H. H. the sage of Chinatown, "is a pleasure only to one who has experienced discourtesies in early life and who has acquired fortitude enough to retaliate." —Washington Star.

REVIVES OLD POEM

A poem which was written 58 years ago by Ruel M. Speer, now a dentist in Battle Creek, has been found by Jas. W. Speer, a brother of the author. The poem was written while Mr. Speer was a student in the Chelsea schools, and we print herewith the verses, believing they will interest many of the "old timers" in the community:

"Our New School"

All quiet is the death of our old friend,
All quiet the birth of our new,
All quiet in the school-room, too,
All things are now entirely new.

Our new Professor (Jay K. Davis)
with a grace,
Shows every scholar his place;
He shows no partiality to any girl;
And every lesson, on the pupil tells.

You can see that he is not a churl;
He shows no partiality to any girl;
You may hear the recitation of any class,
And you can see that they are learning fast.

Our new assistant, Miss Hall,
Although she is not very tall;
Can teach us all, both great and small;
If your example, you have wrong,
She can work it right along.

In our Grammar Department, is Miss
McKay,
And her scholars pronounce her all
O. K.,
Instead of with laughter and with song,
The studies now, go right along.

Invitation extends to all.
To give our school a call;
Now, parents, please come and see How quiet, your children can be.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Mohrlock and family of the late Mrs. Phoebe L.
Richards desire to thank the many kind friends and neighbors who so thoughtfully came to their assistance in their recent bereavement. Also many thanks to Mrs. John Oesterle for her beautiful singing and Rev.
Frandsen for his words of comfort.

CLAUDE RAY COLEMAN

Claude Ray Coleman, 61 years of age, died Friday, Jan. 20, at his home in Sharon township, where he had resided the past two years. He is survived by the widow, Lucinda, two daughters, Mrs. Raymond Lawrence of Dearborn and Mrs. Emil Wagner of Blissfield, and a sister, Mrs. Frank Bloomer of Tipton. A prayer service was held at 11 o'clock Monday forenoon at the residence, followed by funeral services at two o'clock at the Wellsville church. Interment was in Blissfield.

GEORGE WOOD HAYS

George Wood Hays of Sylvan township died Monday morning, Jan. 23, at University hospital, Ann Arbor.
Mr. Hays was born March 26, 1882, in Philadelphia, Pa., and had been a resident of this vicinity for about six years, coming here from Detroit. He is survived by the widow, formerly Elizabeth Morton, and three sisters,
Mrs. C. J. Goodrich of Princeton, N.
J.; Mrs. Willis Sinclair of Strabane, Md.; and Miss Anna Hays of Philadelphia. A brief service was held at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning at the residence, after which the body was taken to Fort Thomas, Ky., where services were held at three o'clock
Wednesday afternoon at the home of H. A. Stogeman. Interment was in Evergreen cemetery, Fort Thomas.

A delicious lunch was served by the hostess.

TEACHERS ORGANIZE

A permanent organization of the teachers who serve in the public schools in and around Chelsea was perfected in a meeting held last night at the Kiwanis Club rooms in Chelsea. This Teachers' Club will meet regularly once each month. Sixteen teachers from Chelsea village and 17 rural teachers were present at last night's meeting. In this group were teachers from Sylvan, Lima, Lyndon, Freedom, Dexter and Sharon townships. Mrs. Inez Rank is president of the local organization and Miss Evelyn Mayer is the secretary-treasurer.

SHARON

Mrs. Wilbur Comstock of Manchester spent a part of last week with her daughter, Mrs. Reuben Haselschwerdt.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Davidson visited from Friday until Sunday in Detroit with relatives.

Claude R. Coleman passed away on Friday morning, Jan. 20, at the age of 61 years, after a lingering illness.
Funeral services were held Monday with burial in Blissfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Keith Hewes of Flint and the parents of a little daughter, Donna Joy, born recently. Mr. Hewes was a former Sharon boy.

Striving to Please

A general of another day was fond of confusing his men by asking them unexpectedly and often absurd questions. One bitter cold night he rode up to a sentry and demanded, "How many stars are there in the sky?" The sentry answered coolly, "Wait a little, general, and I'll tell you" and then, turning his face upward, deliberately commenced counting. "One, two, three," etc. When he had reached 100, the general, who had become half frozen, thought it high time to ride off, without waiting for the final count.

Diamonds in Industry

The hardest diamonds and therefore the best for industrial purposes are the black stones from Brazil, but other good stones for such use are the grays and browns from the Transvaal and the Belgian Congo. These diamonds are used in holes, as nibs serving as points for master precision gauges, in the teeth of saws which cut stone and other hard materials, in drills, and in various other tools. The cutting and piercing value of the diamond is so great that, were it not for the cost, its field would be greatly extended.

Bird's Nest Delicacy

A certain type of bird's nest regarded by the Chinese as a delicacy is the nest of the swallow or of related species of swift or swallow of the Malay archipelago. It has the shape and size of half a teacup, is attached to the rock in the interior of a cave, and has the appearance of fibrous gelatin or isinglass. It is composed of a mucilaginous substance secreted by special glands, and is not, as was formerly thought, made from a glutinous seaweed.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I—Tom Belknap, big timber operator, ordered by his clans to take a complete rest, plans a three-month trip around the world of advancement he has made in his own life, just commencing in the business world. He is accompanied by his son, John, and the young man is indignant. Paul Gorbelt, Belknap's partner, whom John and other business associates of Belknap cordially dislike, is a bone of contention. Father and son part without a complete understanding.

He had boarded a late train, packed over his shoulder, oblivious to the stares of people in the station, telling himself that he had been double-crossed, abused to a point which was intolerable. Through the remaining hours of the night he had tossed in his berth, letting that rage eat up the disappointment and indignation. Today, on a less comfortable train, his feet mounted and as the cars rocked and bounced on northward over increasingly rough steel, he sat for long intervals without moving a muscle, the fire in his eyes glowing, the darkness in his heart deepening.

Snow fell. Now and again some of it sifted down from the ventilators to the greasy rattan seats of the smoker. The brakeman came in and lighted oil lamps as waiting afternoon brought wintry darkness. One more change now, and he would be on the Kämpf line. But he was not going to stop at Kämpf!

He moved with a start, then, and his jaw muscles tightened. This was the route he had planned so long to take, but the destination was no longer what it had been in those years of planning. On through Kämpf, further on for the better part of another hundred miles to Mid-West headquarters.

"You're out of luck," the conductor said, "getting into Kämpf tonight. They got three cars off on a culvert and it may take an hour to get their line open. Tell you what, the Junction boarding house is right there, a good place to stay and come back in the morning in time to get the east-bound."

"Shoestring? Never heard of it."

"Spry little town," the conductor smiled grimly as he adjusted the wick of his lantern. "If the branch hadn't been blocked this afternoon, you might've seen some big times there tonight."

John did not heed this. He sank when asked and settled back in the corner of his seat with his arm. Soon the brakeman rose and came out. "Shoestring."

Burrowing his Macknaw, slinging his packback to one shoulder, John stood in the end of the car as they joined to a stop. He was the only passenger disembarking, and when he pulled the door open snow swirled about him. Moving figures showed against the glow of depot lights.

A voice sang out sharply: "That's him!"

He dropped to slim-dog snow on the platform, and a jolting figure moved to confront him.

"You'd better git back on the train," the man said. "You ain't welcome here."

"Check him through!" someone called hoarsely.

"What's the big idea?" John snapped. "Who are you to—?"

"We ain't here to argue, Jack! You git back aboard that car and keep your feet out of Shoestring and you'll be better off."

The big man grasped his arm determinedly, and as John twisted to free himself he slipped. He hung out a hand to catch his balance and, on the gesture, a stinging blow caught him full in the mouth.

An instant before, and despite his black mood, he would have argued; but that fist on his lips dropped a red curtain before his eyes, congealed all the anger which had kept him hot for two days and a night, stripped reason from him. He cringed, he rushed. He was going to let no gang put him back on any train! He bore into them, through them, until he had distance between himself and the car and then straightened, catching one a stiff blow on the neck that spun him about. He whirled and drove his fist hard into a belly.

Voices, then, sharp and profane. Someone struck him on the cheek, and with an uppercut John dropped a man who charged in from the right. The taste of blood on his lips galled him.

"They came on with a rush. He kicked one's feet from under him, and the falling fellow tripped another. He struck and kicked and elbowed and ducked. His head rocked sideways from a blow, and he squeezed his eyes shut for a split instant to check the mounting dizziness. They could have had him down and beaten to a pulp in one minute, if they'd used their heads. They were too mad, too eager to carry the fight; they of it, one another's way, fended off the blows of their fellows.

A man, charging him, checked and veered, and he had a fleeting glimpse ful and held it against brow and temples.

"Tiny grinnied and puckered his lips and stirred. He moaned, next, and opened one eye and whimpered.

"What in—?" he began, and the crowd stirred, as in relief.

John drew a deep breath, then, and looked up at the faces above him; weather-beaten, vigorous faces, they were, and as his eyes swept them they turned on him with curious expressions.

"He wants to know what the h— is," he began. "And that makes two of us. What the h— is it?"

He broke short. He had settled back to his heels, searching those faces with a demand for explanation, when he saw her. She had stood beside him, looking down. Very small and slight of figure she was, and the face beneath the snarl of a beard was as gentle as those others were rough. Her eyes were dark and large and serious; more than serious, perhaps, possibly deep trouble, rude in them to go with the repressed line of her mouth.

She was looking full in his face, and as he broke his stiff question he inclined his head slightly as in recognition of a difference and in apology.

"He caught his breath. 'Sorry?' to her, 'I should say—' whipping his glance to the man again. 'What's a stranger to think of being poked into this?'

A slim, wiry man, who had squatted on the other side of the reviving Tiny, spoke.

"We was expecting another party, change he said. 'You're a match for him in size, but you ain't the one way to look for this particular hard egg seat in to clean us out by old Tom Belknap!'

John's head jerked. He leaned forward, his eyes fixed on the man who spoke, and he demanded, a long-drawn word, strained with surprise, perhaps with something like shock.

"I said, we'd got news a certain party who's raised h— here was coming in to put a chunk under a corner. We aimed to get him back to Kämpf, but he had news for old Belknap. He's excited like we was, and being dark like it was, we mistook you for him. Not important, mebbe, but true."

John took a quick breath and let it out through his nostrils in an unheeded whiff.

"Well, I'll be—"

He looked up again for the girl's face, as though an exchange of glances with her might clarify this bewildering situation. She was gone. He started at the others, but they were watching Tiny, who was being helped to a sitting position by the spunter man.

"All right, Tiny?" the other asked.

The boy nodded, his chin gingerly and his head, and then shook it as if to chase on the fog which impaired his faculties.

"D he git away?" he asked.

A chuckle from the crowd then.

"Away, your granddaddy! There he sets, Tiny!"

The dozen eyes followed the gesture and then blinked slowly.

"Y G—d, Way-Bill, 'tain't him," he said woefully.

"No, 'tain't."

"But this one . . . he's a stem-velander."

"Anyhow, that."

"No! If this one was him—"

"Then we'd have a lot more to worry about. Yes, sir, if old Belknap could hire 'em like you, chum," to John, "then the company would have something to be proud of."

Tiny had been staring at John and now his gaze wavered as a man's will when he is overcome with embarrassment.

"I got up," he mumbled, and John helped him to his feet.

The boy's heart was pounding. Old Tom, starting that sort of trouble? "All right, Tiny?" Way-Bill asked, and when assured that the late unconscious man was getting to be as good as new, he turned to John. "Guess it's due you to explain a little," he said, and John caught some vague change in the attitude of the group.

The shifting of feet, the murmurings, the looks spoke of a growing chagrin and embarrassment such as had marked Tiny's fathering now. "Stranger in this country?"

"Mebbe you've heard of old Tom Belknap?"

"Yes."

"I have . . . once, some of his work going upward to mingle with high curiosity."

"Well, he's evident aiming to run the Richards company, here, off the earth. He's done plenty, but the last thing he thought up was to bring a hand named Baxter to Kämpf."

John, frowning, followed the man's matter of fact words closely. He spoke as one sure of himself; even as one reciting common knowledge.

"This Baxter's a tough customer. He mixed it with our woods boss last week, tossed him off a car 'nd broke his hip. Tonight he was advertised to come over here 'nd clean out the town single-handed. Makes us pretty hot—voice rising a trifle—"he said, "old Belknap only wants to close us down so's he can buy something for little or nothing. We done what, like, you'd do for the outfit that liked, you 'nd you knew was fair 'nd square 'nd in a lack-out. Only—'we done 'n error."

A grim little man, he was, but had spoken with a fine spirit of loyalty. He now added: "I'm sorry, Tiny, but here, some ought to be awful sorry, we do. I hope, chum, the feelin's ain't too hard."

They stood as a group with when a man came up. "Important question is due."

"Why, no."

John said, but blankly.

Mistaken for his father's hired bully? And old Tom trying to run this other company into a corner? . . . Old Tom, mixing it up, perhaps, an even older Belknap had done in the pine days? Was that a possible explanation of why he—young John—had been so carefully kept away from Kämpf? Were things transpiring in this country of which his father was ignorant?

Take a white-hot thread the thought seared through his consciousness. If a fight was on here, waged by his father against a weaker competitor. Now, might that not offer a greater even a more complete relief for his swelling resentment than hushing strangers with his fist? Until this moment his only possible vengeance on his father had been to run away, but now—

A man came in from outside, shouldering through the press, beating snow from a Scotch cap with his mitten.

"Here," he said, holding it toward John. "Here's your cap."

John guessed it off and . . . well, you see how it was."

He was flustered and so evidently contrite that John smiled, and when he smiled the tension that had been on those men relaxed. The presentation of that cap was equivalent to a treaty gift, a token to hint of a truce, a pledge and seal of friendship!

"Anything we can do for you now . . . after tryin' our best fies to do things to you?" Way-Bill asked.

"Why . . . I guess not. 'Thanks a lot.' He was finding his pulse, stilling the hot curiosity that might lead him into binders, mulling up his mind to begin this whole story, but to do it adroitly, at the proper time. 'If somebody'll point out the hotel, now."

It was past the supper hour in Shoestring's public stopping place, Rex Jasper's Public Hotel.

But Rex was neither hospitable nor unkind of the dinner. No more was he an uncommunicative host. So he himself spread cold but satisfactory viands on one end of a long table, and sat there, elbows on the olefoid, while his slightly murred but obviously outstanding guest ate and fawned well to the questions that John Steele Belknap, identity as yet unknown in Shoestring, put to him.

The boy ate slowly, gazed much of the time on Jasper's face as the man talked and talked and talked.

"It just goes to show," he said, narrowing his watery blue eyes, "what the concentration of great wealth into the hands of unscrupulous men will cause. Now did you ever read the History of Great American Fortunes?"

"No," said John, impatiently. "You are sure that this man Belknap is behind all the trouble?"

"Sure? Sure?" The large man belated with assurance. "Wasn't it a Vanderbilt that said that the thing a man wanted more than anything else was money? That's the way with this old Belknap. Predatory, he is; of the predatory, wealthy! He's got the Richards company in a corner and he ain't going to let it out. Why, even his own partner, Gorbelt, over here at Kämpf, can't stop him. Gorbelt ain't so bad, but Belknap gives the orders. You can't blame Gorbelt. If a man's got to exist economically under a capitalist system he's got to go with the capitalists, ain't he? Now if you've ever read 'Das Kapital' by Karl Marx, you'll see."

John shook back his plate and tapped the table with his fork.

"Just a minute. Let's see if I've got this story right: The logging railroad, owned by the Richards Lumber company, goes through Belknap & Gorbelt timber. The right of way was granted by a man named Kämpf, who used to own that timber. Belknap & Gorbelt bought him out and began to operate. Under the terms of the old contract they can either force the Richards company to haul their logs out to a main-line branch or order them to pull their steel. And, to tighten this squeeze, the Belknap camps are making logs in such quantities that the mill here can't handle 'em. Is that right?"

"That's right! This old Belknap ain't satisfied to have a soft thing, he ain't. The Richards mill's been getting by some way; God knows how—and soon's he sees that he starts getting rough, just like any old feudin' baron'd got rough. He bus his hired help 'nd Royce, the Richards woods boss, on of commission, which is awful bad. You can't log without a good boss, and no man in his right mind's going to tackle a job where, on top of having to scratch to make a showin', he's in danger of getting his block-knocked off any minute."

"Why, this old Belknap thinks he's a superman or something. I guess he's been reading Nietzsche. Did you ever read 'Beyond Good and Evil?' No? Well, now—wriggling closer to the table—there's what I'd call a downright dangerous philosophy. You see—"

But John Belknap, leaning back in his chair now, gave no heed to Landlord Jasper's interpretation of philosophical theory. After what his father had done to him yesterday, young John was ready to believe anything. He had known of wars waged by old Tom against competitors; he had at times thought, then, waged on fair terms. But here was a conflict apparently unfair, unvarnished, shocking, to a man, evidently attuned to its ruthlessness, and John's indignation drove him headlong into an acceptance of that belief. Headlong and steady. As good as a blow in the stomach, that. He had been kept away from Kämpf after heading towards it these years.

Why? What reason? Because old Tom did not want him to know what was going on? Because he knew that John would have demanded an about-face?

Well, how would his father like it if he refused to take what was offered; if, more than that, he stopped in and aligned himself with an opposition because it gave him a chance to see what he was wound up? And with their backs to the wall, the Richards outfit, wherever and whatever it might be, needed a leader, fresh blood, someone who was not afraid of this giant, Tom Belknap!

"Where's the Richards office?" John interrupted, rising.

Jasper blinked his watery eyes again.

"Why, it's across from the mill," he said, shuffling to a window and peering out through the slit of unframed glass near the top of the pane. "Year the 's a light there now. Generally '7s, nights—' this winter."

Snow had ceased falling. The wind had dropped and the planks of wooden sidewalks, deep under hard-packed snow, snapped and bounced as John traversed the shadows of lumber piles towards the looming bulk of a sawmill and the lighted, one-story building across from it which had been pointed out to him.

He had no definite plan. He had considered telling the manager the whole truth and asking for a job. That, however, might not be advisable.

He depended entirely on the type of individual he encountered. It would be a rough chore to convince some men that they should hire for a responsible post the son of an arch enemy! . . . But whoever he found he would at least learn more of what his father was up to. Of that only was he certain as he took the cold steps at a lumber and opened the door.

The building was divided into halves by a cold hallway. A single incandescent, dusty and weak with service, was set in the ceiling. Its light was not good, but a room to the left had better illumination, and on the glazed glass of the door was painted the word Manager.

John stamped snow from his feet on a thick rug, but he started for this evidently occupied office the sound of a voice arrested him.

A man was talking softly, quietly, and he stopped, not wanting to listen at an inopportune time, but impotent at the delay.

"The voice went on: ' . . . and my offer stands. I'm helpless to help the Richards company in any other way, but I will buy, at that price, the entire property, timber, railroad and mill. 'Perhaps this offer seems small, but look what is going to happen if you try to keep on alone. I'm a partner with Tom Belknap, yes, but I'm powerless to stop the policy or direct the practice of that partnership. I'd give every dollar I have, Ellen, to see you personally at peace, but you will have no peace until Belknap has his way! He is out to buy this company at a figure even lower than I offer, and he finishes what he starts. . . . Now, what do you say?'

John's heart raced as he stood there, listening. This man in that other room was Paul Gorbelt. He was making threats in Tom Belknap's name! Truly, a man for old Tom!

The woman spoke then.

"I have only one thing to say, Paul! That the Richards properties aren't for sale at any price, and that if they aren't for sale at any figure under such pressure. They're in a tight place, well enough; they would have plenty to contend with in a fair fight, but you may take this word back to your Mr. Belknap: that the Richards company is going to keep on fighting, that it's not going to whimpers. That if it finally goes down, after doing all it can do to survive, it will be with the flag flying and the hand saw slung!"

"Take that word to your renegade partner, Paul, and don't come here again with one hand extended in friendship and the other carrying a club!"

Her voice, gentle in the beginning, had mounted, and her hardening determination sent a pricking sensation to John's very fingertips. Some loyal employee—a bookkeeper, an office woman, a wife or daughter or sister of the Richards involved—had set Gorbelt down with a hit!

Behind that closed door, a low, sorry laugh and the sound of slow footsteps. A shadow crossed the lightest glass and Gorbelt spoke again.

"Ellen!"

John saw that behind this is only one thing for me? Can't you understand that I'm risking all I've got just trying to help you in some way? It's you I want—voice rounding a bit with passion. 'It's you who's got into my blood! It's the waiting that kills me. . . . I can't wait, I tell you! I can't—"

"Get back! Get away! Don't you dare touch me!"

He called her name again, almost savagely. Feet scraped on the floor, a sharp cry as with a crash the light in the office went out, and the glass in the door showed a blank for John Belknap.

"Paul! Get out of this office. I tell you! Get away . . . away!"

Paul, now, in the time, and for the man waiting outside there was but one move to make.

The faint light from the hallway, further impaired by his own shadow as he poised there, hand still on the knob, revealed them.

A desk lamp lay on the floor at the man's feet and he was turning, relinquishing his hold on the girl's wrist, looking over his shoulder with a white drawn face. He posed so a moment staring at this intruder who showed only in silhouette.

"Well?"—in sharp demand.

Young Belknap did not move; did not reply for a moment. Then he said almost casually:

"I happened to overhear you being told to get out. I opened the door for you."

Gorbelt whirled to face him then, feet spread, arms held with stiff truculence at his sides.

"And who are you?"—bright eyes searching, striving to identify the shadowed face.

"The chap who opened the door."

"Well. . . . Close it, then, and tend to your own affairs!"

John shook his head.

"No," he said. "Not until the lady asks me to."

He could see her standing in the deeper shadows where she had swiftly retreated on his appearance. She was backed against a filing case as though in need of support. He added, then:

"I don't hear her asking me to get out."

Gorbelt's hands were knitting into fists.

"You d—d eyesdropper!" he muttered. "You—"

John took the few quick strides that put him face to face with Gorbelt, so close to him that he could hear the man's quick breathing.

"No names!" he muttered. "No names!" or any other talk. Are you going out on your own legs?"

Gorbelt swung backward. His right hand swept the desk top, and with a growl John had the arm in one hand, twisted the man about, and wrenched upward on the wrist until Gorbelt doubled over with a cry.

"Drop it!"

"The devil with—"

Gorbelt struggled, but the lock on his wrist was secure. He bent forward for relief as John opened the door. The cold night surged in on them, and then the one was running down the steps to regain the balance that the other's shove had imperiled.

At the bottom he whirled and lifted his face, normally handsome, now wreathed with rage.

"You swine!" he cried. "You'll pay for this!"

"Collect, then! But you stay away from here until you're sent for! Get that!"

He closed the door and turned back to the office, removing his cap as he went.

"Why, This Old Belknap Thinks He's a Superman or Something."

Brighter lights burned now, for a switch in the ceiling had been switched on. The girl sat at a dittered desk in the middle of the room, pale, shoulders hunched, head bowed. He stopped, poised in surprise. She was the girl he had seen in the station waiting room, arm with her coat and hat re-floated, in the Jersey dress which exposed a graceful column of throat, she was as out of place in this office with its battered desks and dingy walls as a flower in a wood yard!

John spoke.

"He called me an eyesdropper. I guess, in a way, he was right."

"Fortunately, your heart," she murmured, and they looked in. "Oh! Oh! I didn't know it was you!" She blushed at her soft, short hair nervously and managed a sort of smile. "I wanted to tell you how sorry I am that the boys did what they did. . . . Won't you come in?"

She rose, and he could see that she was rallying her composure rapidly.

"I feel like an intruder," he said, advancing. "I came over here on the chance that I might find the manager and run into the late unpleasantness."

"I am the manager," she said simply. "I am now surprised had him, wholly so completely that he blinked and laughed outright."

"What! You. . . . Why, a girl in this mess?"

She flushed deeply.

"I guess that's what it is: a mess. Even strangers know! I am Ellen Richards. This was my father's company. I've been trying to carry on, for over a year now, since he . . . since he died."

"Oh," he said dully. "Oh!" a bit longer, this time, and in a sort of relief rather than amazement or stupefaction. Relief, because it was a girl on whom his father made war!

The Eternal Process

Whether the longer life that is won by new knowledge of life is pure gain or not remains to be seen. Maybe the surplus is merely to be devoted to study of diet with the thought of prolonging life, and so on. New York Sun.

GRASS LAKE.—E. M. Lantis took a shot at the animal, supposed to be a wolf, which has been devastating sheep flocks in this vicinity for several months, Sunday morning. Mr. Lantis is said to have found 15 sheep dead on the previous day and he kept vigil Sunday morning with the result that the marauder came back. He shot and wounded the supposed wolf which fell to the ground and then jumped up and ran away. A small amount of hair found on the ground where the animal fell was brought to the Grass Lake elevator.—News.

Groves of Ann Arbor, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Washtenaw, Michigan in Liber 182 of mortgages, on page 358, on April 26th, 1928, at two o'clock P. M., and

WHEREAS, the amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice is the sum of Three Thousand Dollars ($3,000.00) principal, and One Hundred Six Dollars ($106.00) interest, and the further sum of Thirty-five Dollars ($35.00) as an attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage and the whole amount claimed to be unpaid on said mortgage is the sum of Three Thousand One Hundred Forty-one Dollars ($3,141.00) and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law to recover the debt now remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the same mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the south front door of the Court House in the City of Ann Arbor, on the 11th day of March, A. D. 1938, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day; which said premises are described in said mortgage as all that certain piece or parcel of land situate and being in the City of Ann Arbor, Washtenaw County, Michigan, to-wit:

"All of Lot number three (3) in Samuel Miller's Addition to the City of Ann Arbor, Michigan, according to the recorded plat thereof."

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE NOTICE

By a Certain Indenture of Mortgage bearing date the 19th day of May, A. D. 1927, Anna Beach, a widow, of the township of Ypsilanti, County of Washtenaw, State of Michigan, all that certain piece or parcel of land, situate and being in the township of Ypsilanti, in the County of Washtenaw, State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit:

Commencing at a point on the West line of section number one, town three South, range seven East, where said line intersects the North line of land of the Detroit, Jackson and Chicago Railroad Company; thence Easterly along the Northerly line of the right of way of said Railroad Company six rods; thence North a sufficient distance to include one-fourth acre of land measured from the section line; thence Westerly parallel with the Northerly line of the right of way of said Railroad Company's land to the West line of the Southwest quarter of said section one; thence South to the place of beginning, being a part of the West half of the Southwest quarter of section number one, town three South, range seven East, in the township of Ypsilanti, County of Washtenaw, and State of Michigan.

Said mortgage was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Washtenaw County, Michigan, on the 14th day of May, A. D. 1927, in Liber 180 of mortgages, on page 18. The amount claimed to be due at the date of this notice for principal, interest and attorney's fees as provided in said mortgage, is the sum of $1,500.00. No suit or proceedings at law has been commenced to collect the amount remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Default has occurred in the performance of the conditions of said mortgage on the part of the mortgagor, such default consisting in the non-payment of the principal sum therein provided when it became due. Also in the non-payment of a certain installment of interest which became due and payable on the 19th day of November, A. D. 1932. By reason of such default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative and accordingly, notice is hereby given that said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises to satisfy the amount remaining secured by said mortgage together with the interest, attorney's fees and costs and charge of such venue and sale.

Said sale will be at public auction and will be held at the South outer door of the Court House in the City of Ann Arbor, Michigan, on Saturday, the 15th day of April, A. D. 1933, at 10:00 o'clock in the forenoon, Eastern Standard Time. Said Court House being the place of holding the Circuit Court within said County of Washtenaw.

Dated this 12th day of January, A. D. 1933.

Slippers of Destiny

RAYMOND found the package on his table when he went up to dress for the Flemming's dance. He had thought that he would give up dancing, but this was a particular occasion, Billy Flemming having a birthday and his wife insisting on a real old-time party.

So Raymond had hied him to his favorite shoe shop and been fitted to dancing slippers, and the oblong box testified to their arrival at the last minute. Raymond dressed leisurely, and when he had finished he untied the oblong box and opened it.

There he stopped aghast. Instead of a pair of shiny patent leather pumps, he found nestling in the white tissue paper a tiny pair of high-heeled slippers, frivolous cloth

Love Imperative
Faith and hope are two great virtues; but those who have not love are nothing; they are like sterile plants that the sun never shines upon.—Francis de la Valliere

Celtic Suffix
"An" is a diminutive suffix found in many Celtic names. Originally it had the force of a patronymic and meant "son of." For instance, "Callahan" is derived from "Conluch," meaning "warrior" plus the suffix "an," and therefore, means "son of the warrior."

Opera First Night

By HANNAH LOWE

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNC Service

MARY HOLLOWAY settled herself in her seat just as the orchestra began tuning up. It was the opening night of the opera. Ever since childhood Mary Holloway had wanted to be just where she was—all dressed up in the Metropolitan Opera house on opening night of the opera.

Mary was not specially musical. But opening night at the opera—well, in her Mid-Western, smalltown girlhood, that had meant something that nothing else meant. And when Mary sought her fortune in New York—and landed a fairly good job in a magazine office—she had thought of this night as the climax of her first winter in the big fairland city.

As day had followed day and week had followed week, and months had followed months, Mary had realized that, if she went to the opera, she would pay for her own tickets.

So Mary decided to go by herself. She bought an expensive evening dress. She sent home for the family pearls, and paid to have them insured. New slippers to match the dress—with silver trimming. And long white gloves. She was ready to try an extravagant evening coat, that she might never wear again. But one of the girls she knew had an aunt who lived a more formal life—she wasn't using her evening wrap that night. Mary could have it.

So Mary went to the opera. There was an empty chair at her side. Just one, and beyond that, a party of half a dozen. She wondered who would fill it.

And when, just before the lights went out, a decidedly good looking and well-dressed young man slid easily down beside her into the vacant chair. The gay chatter died out as the lights went out and the orchestra leader took his place. And with the rising of the curtain Mary forgot about her next-door neighbor. But not for long.

"I beg your pardon," she heard a pleasant, well-modulated voice in her ear. "I'm sorry—but I dropped my pencil, and it's rolled down under the chair in front of you. If you don't mind, I'll try to get it."

"Oh, let me," whispered Mary, quickly. "The music was forgotten. What she had really come to the opera for was the audience. And here was one of its most distinguished members talking to her. She leaned down and felt along the floor for the pencil. The she heard the whisper again. She turned her face and saw another close to hers.

"Here's my pocket flask." And he held its tiny beam so that she could see along the floor until she had retrieved the rolling pencil.

They bumped their heads together a bit as they carefully and noiselessly worked back to an upright position. When they were settled again, with the feeling of old friends between them, Mary saw that he was writing in a little notebook. She sighed a little. She didn't want him to be too musical. It was one thing to have a governor, or whatever it was that looked after the rich children and took little boys to a matinee opera. Grown to a man, he still might find attractive a girl who had mortgaged her future to hear—and see—her first opera. But if he was too musical it in the gloom he was jotting down musical notes, or something, well, Mary didn't want that. For already she wanted the young man next to her to like her.

He did. They spent their intermission together, and at the end of the last act he said, rather humbly, "My name is Squires—John Squires. I suppose you're separated from your family—couldn't get seats together or something—an overflow from one of the boxes, perhaps? But if you're not you've known me a lifetime, and you must know me well enough to let me take you home—and to stop and get something to eat on the way."

Mary accepted. "This was a conspiracy, anyway. She hadn't thought that one of the leading young New Yorkers would so informally, but quite courteously, push her. But she liked him, and she was her most charming self as they stopped at a hotel restaurant for supper.

Over a salad and coffee he told her who he was. "You see," he said, "I come from the sticks. It's only fair to tell you that having you here with me just finishes out a dream I've had ever since I was a kid and used to read about the opera. I've just come to New York. Just a few weeks ago."

And I was determined to go to the Metropolitan first night this winter. But I haven't met any nice girls. So I decided to go by myself. I've been taking notes on my impressions of the audience—not the music—because I'm writing a story that needs opera local color. But I'm afraid most of my local color is—about you."

Then Mary explained. "I suppose you think I'm Miss Asterblit off for an independent evening, or something like that? But I'm just a girl from the sticks, too, with a lifetime dream of going to an opera first night. And I've spent two weeks' salary for my dress and my cloak is borrowed—and that's the sort of a girl I am." She smiled bewitchingly at him, for she knew that it didn't matter to him what sort of a girl she was.

"We'll celebrate this anniversary every year in the same way," he suggested boldly.

And Mary smiled again.
