Anniversary of Boy Scouts Being Held Throughout Country

From February 8 to 14, inclusive, the Boy Scouts of the entire country are celebrating the twenty-third birthday of their organization in America. On Wednesday evening over a million boys and men united in re-committing themselves to the Scout Oath and the Scout Laws in connection with a nation-wide broadcast.

Since its beginning in February, 1910, the Boy Scout organization has enrolled between five and six million boys and men, who have taken as their rule of life the following Scout Oath:

"On my honor, I will do my best: (1) to do my duty to God and my country, and to obey the Scout Law; (2) to help other people at all times; (3) to keep myself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight."

This year, the Scouts have entered upon a new "Ten-Year Program," by which they hope to enroll one out of every four new 12-year-old boys each year, in the entire country; and to keep them actively engaged in Scout activities for a period of at least four years, so that by the end of another ten years, the Scout movement will be delivering to the United States 25 per cent of her new voting citizens; men who have had four years of training in this movement of citizenship training and character development.

The need for capable and interested volunteer leaders is greater than ever in Scout circles. "We could expand our groups to take in many more boys, all of whom need just such a program, if we only had the leaders," says Wallace E. Watt, Scout Executive for Washington and Livingston counties. To that end, training courses in scout leadership will soon be offered for local men to prepare themselves for this work.

On Saturday evening, all Scouts have been invited to attend a "Jamboree" at Ypsilanti high school, with songs, games, movies and swimming on the program.

Club Members Attend Movies of World Trip

More than three hundred 4-H club members, their parents and leaders, and pupils of the public and parochial schools witnessed the showing of moving pictures by Fred Benz of Ann Arbor at the public school auditorium Monday evening.

Mr. Benz has made three trips around the world during the past few years and the pictures shown Monday evening were taken on the trip which he enjoyed last winter.

The pictures were exceedingly interesting and educational, and the audience followed with keen interest the showing of the 33,000 miles of travel through Europe, Asia and Africa, depicting so well the varied modes of living and conduct in these distant countries, as well as the magnificent styles of architecture and beautiful natural scenery in the most ancient parts of the world.

The show was under the auspices of the local Kiwanis club, which has sponsored 4-H club activities in this locality for several years.

Preceding the show at the auditorium Monday evening the Kiwanis club was entertained with an address by Roscoe Bonisteel, Ann Arbor attorney. Mr. Bonisteel's subject was "The Integration of the Bar in Michigan." He explained in detail the bill which is to be presented to the legislature now in session which proposes the incorporation of the bar in Michigan, making it mandatory for practicing lawyers to become affiliated with the state bar association. As explained by Mr. Bonisteel, benefits of such a law would be many, and would result in a better code of ethics which would govern the conduct of members.

STUDY TAXESWonder Why Tax Plan Comes Before
State Expenses Are Cut.

By Elton R. Eaton

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 8—Just why Governor Comstock put in his plan to raise additional taxes for the state before he gave the legislature his economy program no one around the state house has been able to figure out. It had been anticipated that the new administration would first use the pruning knife on state expenses, and institutions in order to arrive at some general knowledge of just how much it would cost to operate the schools, hospitals and prisons per year. Some members of the legislature have declared that before they act upon the new tax plan submitted by Governor Comstock, they desire first to know just how much the costs of running the state are going to be.

"We must know something of the economy program before we go ahead with plans to raise more taxes," stated one veteran member of the legislature after he had read the Governor's message.

It is possible, say the legislative members, that the Governor may have in mind the use of the entire program of the old Legislative Commission that has been presented by Representatives Gus Hartman and V. J. Brown. In fact he has suggested that the legislature give consideration to these recommendations, which provide a cut of over six millions of dollars in state expenses. One of the commission's bills has already been passed, a bill that puts an end to the state building program started four or five years ago. There has always been some doubt as to the advisability of such an elaborate building program as was started, but it is now over with.

Last fall Governor Comstock declared that he would recommend to the legislature a way for the state to operate its affairs without the payment of a general property tax. Many of his opponents said no such plan could be devised. They now have the plan, which provides for a general sales tax in Michigan.

The governor plans to raise $35,000,000 by a general sales tax. Those who have figured it out, say this will represent about a three per cent tax on everything that is sold.

This estimate is apparently arrived from the figures gathered in 1929 by the department of commerce in Washington. For the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1929, the total retail sales in Michigan amounted to $2,220,000,000. These are the last figures gathered by the government on retail sales in Michigan. It is apparent however that Governor Comstock and those who have figured out the new sales tax plan have estimated a drop of just half of what the retail sales were in Michigan in 1929.

Local merchants who have been consulted agree that this estimate is about right.

Members of the legislature who have anticipated that the governor would recommend a sales tax to take the place of a general property tax, and have given the matter some thought, express the idea that a sales tax of three per cent would prove an injury to business and work to the direct benefit of mail order houses. Of course the three per cent figure has not yet been established, but those who have figured out the plan say that this must be somewhere near the amount the administration has in mind because of the amount of money the governor says a sales tax will raise.

If the 1933 legislature adopts a general sales tax program to take the place of the real estate tax, it will be the first time in the history of the state that real estate will never have been taxed.

To the victors belong the spoils is an old political saying that has never meant much in Michigan. Changing Republican administrations paid no attention to the politics of the individual. Even Gov. Ferris, the last Democratic governor preceding the present administration, gave little attention to the politics of men appointed. As an indication of how little attention Republican governors thought of the political alliances of an individual, the messenger that Gov. Ferris brought with him to the executive office served through all Republican administrations until the arrival of ex-Gov. Buckner, who relieved him of his duties. But things are different now. Unemployment in the state has created such a terrific demand for jobs that even though Governor Comstock and the other new Democratic state officials should desire to keep many of the old state employees, it would be hard for them to do so. Possibly never at any time in history has such pressure been brought to bear upon a governor for jobs as faced by Governor Comstock. Therefore jobs must be provided.

A. K. Grant, whose politics no one ever knew just what they were, is no longer associated with the state government. When former Governor Sleeper created the budget commission with the idea of centralizing the state purchasing for all institutions, he wanted some one who had had some experience in institutional buying. Mr. Grant was then the buyer for the Kalamazoo State hospital. Gov. Sleeper didn't know whether Grant was a Democrat or Republican. Grant had had a job in Kalamazoo before and during the Ferris administration, but Gov. Sleeper knew that Grant had the knowledge and experience for the job he had in mind for him. So Grant was brought over to Lansing and started work for the budget commission. Out of this move by Gov. Sleeper came the more and larger purchasing department established during the Groesbeck administration, with Grant still on the job. The finger of suspicion has never been pointed at Grant or the department. The other night as he was leaving his office for home, the new secretary of the administrative board stopped Grant and told him not to return in the morning. A Democrat is now on the job.

With the housecleaning that is taking place in Lansing, there is now and then a bit of tragedy written into the story. The new head of one of the departments called one of the older bookkeepers in his office the other day and told her she was fired. "But I am a widow and have two children to support. I have got to have work, and where else can I go now to find employment?" she protested. "Well if it will be any consolation to you, all of the rest of them in there will be out of a job in a few days," was the response.

The John K. Stack, Jr. family of Escanaba is doing very well in Lansing, thank you. The new auditor general who found a way to use his own office for the benefit of his lumber company's delinquent taxes, has also found a way to aid his daughter to a job in his department. The young lady is already receiving pay checks from the state. But there might be a fly in the ointment. The Democratic senate is protesting against more than one member of a family being on the state payroll.

FRANCISCO

Short-change artists who succeeded in fleecing $5.00 from Ray Helm, assistant to Tom Wortley at his oil station south of town, failed when they worked their scheme on Mrs. Lewis Lambert at their store Friday. There were three men in the car when it drove up to the store. One remained in the car while two entered. One engaged Mr. Lambert on one side of the store while the other made a purchase from Mrs. Lambert on the opposite side, tendering a $10.00 bill. The "artist" maneuvered to get the bill back, by "finding" he had 10c, after all. He had already picked up the $5.00 bill Mrs. Lambert had given him, and said "Here, you keep this (the dollar bills and silver change) and give me back the $10.00." Mrs. Lambert said "Yes, when you give me back the five you put in your pocket." Then the game was up. He returned the five, and both men left the store.

Mrs. Lambert thought no more about the matter until she heard it broadcast over the police radio that short change artists were in Francisco at 1:30. Then she realized that she had outwitted professionals who had tried, by witty conversation, to trap her.

"ZERO"

"Zero" was a Newfoundland dog.

His master was a night watchman, and while musing during the dark hours these thoughts came: Zero's name indicated 0 or nothing, so does his master's. Insignificant in the world, so is his master's. Beloved by his master, so am I by mine. Zero is black, but has a white breast. His master was black-but has been made white by the power of cleansing through, through the Great Master. Zero, when told to be a dead dog, will stretch himself on the floor, and although called by name, whistled to, and tempted in various ways, will lie perfectly quiet until some one cries out "Tramps", when instantly he jumps, ready for action.

This lesson to him, as well as to his master, has been hard to learn. When the Great Master above told Zero's master to be dead—dead to the world—dead to selfishness—dead to fear of man—dead to everything but to his loving command, he found it with him, as with Zero, it could only be by the complete surrendering of the will and after once learned it became a pleasure to obey. Zero sometimes becomes overzealous and runs ahead of his master, when to his humility he has to be called back. But this is not charged against him for, like our Master above, Zero's master knows a mistake of the head is not a sin from the heart.

In the morning while on the way home, Zero stops at a storehouse, takes meat or bread from the hand of his master, and gladly carries it along the way for those to whom it is sent. So His Master each morning stops at the Great Storehouse and humbly receives meat and bread which he tries to deliver to hungry ones who will receive—and He would offer to you a crumb today in the homely comparison of Zero to his master.

Artyle...

IN KEEPING with the new mode for tile in the kitchen, the makers of Magic Chef gas ranges have come forward with a striking new finish—ARTYLE.

Enameled in Old Ivory and Storm-blue, suggestive of the gleaming kitchens of Old Holland, we believe ARTYLE Finish to be the most exciting achievement of Magic Chef designers. Not eye-compelling beauty, sheer daintiness and charm, many women say ARTYLE surpasses even Magic Chef's previous achievements.

Important as its beauty, are the many new and exclusive Magic Chef labor-saving features. Such as the Red Wheel Oven Heat Regulator... automatic top lighter... three-in-one non-clog burners... sanitary high burner tray... and rackless reversible broiling pan.

The Magic Chef in ARTYLE Finish is not a range to describe—it is a range to see. With ARTYLE and many other striking Magic Chef finishes and models on display, choose your gas range tomorrow.

Future Politicians

If you never knew Kate Staffan or Bud Guide—you surely know them now. Why? Haven't you heard a campaign speech for one of them? Well, where have you been? Since the beginning of this week nominations for student president have been in order. It seems, however, candidate ex-president Staffan and candidate Guide have stepped into the limelight. There have been signs "Guide for Student President" and "Vote for Staffan" peering at us from every corner, black-board, and bulletin board. Oh yes, each party has a slogan—Mr. Guide's being, "Ballots, not Bullets," and Miss Staffan's being "Hard Times Come Often—Don't Let Them Go to the Coffee."

More campaign speeches will be heard in the near future for each of the parties.

We hope the best fit for office wins and also gives the best he or she can for the good of Chelsea High and its students.

Appreciates Stand of Gov. Comstock

Appreciation of the stand taken by Governor William A. Comstock in presentation to the state legislature of his fiscal program, in which the financial difficulties confronting the administration of public school education in Michigan because of the enactment of the tax limitation amendment were discussed, was expressed this week by L. P. Vogel, President of the Chelsea Board of Education.

In his message last Thursday to the legislature the Governor shows not only his concern of the seriousness of the crisis facing the schools but also a real insight into the problem. Mr. Vogel declared, "His statement that it is necessary to provide as full assurance as possible that the schools will remain open certainly is in keeping with the thought and opinion of the people of the state who realize the extreme necessity of maintaining an uninterrupted school program. The citizens of Chelsea, I believe, will concur heartily in his views."

According to the Governor's program the present Primary School Fund would be retained near its present level and its revenue safeguarded both by constitutional amendment and by further diverting to it certain sales tax items. In addition, a portion of the state property tax, as now levied against real property, would be available for school purposes.

To protect local units deriving revenue from the property tax, legislative enactment is recommended to establish a minimum allocation for each of the various agencies—county, city or township, and school district. In addition, in counties of less than 30,000 inhabitants a county board of three (consisting of the county clerk, one member appointed by the Board of Supervisors, and one member selected by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction) will be named to determine additional tax levies not to exceed 15 mills. In counties having more than 30,000 inhabitants the county allocation board will consist of four members.

"Assurance accordingly of at least a minimum program is provided by the Governor's recommendations. With it as a working basis it should be possible for parents, boards of education and school officials to work out a satisfactory solution for our educational problems and keep the schools of Chelsea and of Michigan in satisfactory operation until further revenues may be obtained," Mr. Vogel declared.

Seniors Sponsor Dance

The Senior class were sponsors of a public dance held in the High School gymnasium last Friday night. Miss Bollore and Miss Yager graciously acted as chaperones.

The dance was a huge success, with a large crowd in attendance. The main attraction of our dance were Happy Hallock's Royal Columbians, a snappy jazz orchestra, hailing from Jackson. The dance started at 9 and broke up at 1 o'clock.

Thanks

The Senior class would like to thank the parents of the Seniors who attended our dance and acted as chaperones.

Reorganize Club

The former museum club is being reorganized. There was a meeting held for those interested in the Science club under the direction of Mr. Thompson. There was a committee chosen for a new name and constitution.

The Historical group met under Miss Cash and Miss Dancer. This group was made up of about 20 7th and 8th graders.

Remember you can't lift yourself by drowning others.

Ye Ol' Snooper's Scoop

My dear public:

Once more the Seniors are to be congratulated on the success of their dance—twas the best yet and the orchestra was grand. Keep up the good work, Seniors!

Oh Dear, we lost our basketball game last Friday but never fear, well soon forget that we lost when we see our team win the future games.

February 23 and 24 we will see "What Happened to Jones", with the faculty taking the parts of the actors and actresses.

This Friday our team is to "enter" team "Dundee". We only hope that our team really "entertains" them by putting up a good fight and a big score.

There has surely been some excitement this week over the coming election Friday. School spirit has increased and the only remaining thing we can wish for is that the best man may win.

—Ye Ol' Snooper.

Am. Government Course

This semester opened with a new subject for Seniors. American Government is a one semester course and is required in all Michigan Schools. The class is supervised by Mr. Poore. Let me tell you that what the students don't know about our government they'll soon find out.

Valentines For Her

All susceptible females are watching for the mail-man. And why? They must have Valentines (which is found at its worst stage between the ages of fourteen and twenty).

Feature the thrill of getting flowers, candy or even lace Valentines (since our fashioned things have come back in style).

Store-keepers are having an unusual rush in business from males buying everything from refrigerators to diamonds. (And lest we forget, the 5's and 10's are also doing their share of business.)

Boys, help the depression and find an unemployed heart and get busy!

Editorial

Reduction of the local tax on property to a rate of not more than five mills ($5.00 per $1,000 of assessed value) for the operating costs of public schools, with the State government supplying sufficient additional revenue so that public schools of Michigan can be maintained on a per pupil basis of 1923, is recommended by the Michigan Education Association.

During the past 10 years the tax on property has supplied approximately 73 per cent of the funds for public schools, with school tax rates at the present time ranging from nothing to more than $60 per $1,000 of assessed valuation.

"A total sum of $30,975,000, in addition to an estimated $16,000,000 Primary Fund and a five mill local tax, would be needed in 1933-34 to supply enough revenue to operate the public schools of Michigan on a per pupil cost basis of 1923," estimates E. T. Cameron, executive secretary of the Michigan Education Association.

"These estimates allow for (1) a net revenue of $22,500,000 to be realized in 1933-34 from the five mill local property tax, deduction having been made for a probable tax delinquency of 25 per cent; and (2) for a probable reduction in the amount of the Primary School Fund to $16,000,000 because of the 15 mill tax limitation amendment."

"Statistics from the State Department of Public Instruction show that the average per pupil operating cost in 1923 was $68.18, while the average per pupil cost in 1930-31 was $89.18," stated Mr. Cameron. "Teachers salaries in Michigan already have been reduced since 1930 to the 1921 level, with rural teachers' salaries in some areas being as low as those of 25 years ago. But teachers salaries were only 60 per cent of the operating costs of schools in 1931, and only 42 per cent of the total costs of public schools in 1931, the total cost including capital outlay and bonded indebtedness, according to facts presented in Research Bulletin No. 25 of the Michigan Education Association. The other 40 per cent of operating costs in 1931 were made up of such items as coal, lighting, books, building repair, insurance, etc. Operating costs per pupil for these items also have been considerably reduced during the past few years, but the continuous increase in the number of children going to school has increased the total cost, in spite of stringent economies. Further economy can be effected by rural areas by the establishment of larger units of school administration, and the Association is asking the Legislature to take action in this respect."

Chelsea Loses Game

Chelsea journeyed to Belleville Friday, only to lose their second League game to the Belleville quintet.

In the preliminary game the Purple and Gold Cubs played a very good game defensively as well as offensively and held the Belleville Cubs to a 20-20 tie. Chelsea Cubs were leading at the half, 15-7. It was a very good and exciting game. Winans was high scorer with 7 baskets which netted 14 points for the Chelsea Cubs.

Chelsea High lost a very one-sided game to the strong Belleville 5. Chelsea was outplayed throughout the game. Chelsea was very weak in checking the Belleville offense. Consequently, they (Belleville) took Chelsea, 24-12. There were no outstanding players on the court for Chelsea. Belleville had two sets of players that they played against Chelsea, each set playing two quarters, and thus tired out the Chelsea lads very much. Chelsea had only one team to play with. Hutzel was taken out of the game at the half because he was very ill.

Lincoln

"The kindly, earnest, brave, forceful man, sagacious, patient, dreading praise no blame, New birth of our soil, the first American."

These words written by Lowell to describe Lincoln as he saw him seem, I'm sure, are the words that we would all utter if we had a chance to see him. He is the true American and he led the entire nation, and removed the question of slavery from our country. This month we celebrate his birthday—his life will pass in review and show forth the truly great man.

The men that once looked on him with hate now look on him with admiration, seeing him as the world's greatest man.

Stamp Club

Perhaps you don't know it but a new craze has hit Chelsea High. It is stamp collecting.

Just before the Holidays a meeting was held and the following officers were elected:

President—Wallace Wood.
 Vice-Pres.—Richard Barton.
 Secretary—Herbert Mauch.

The club chose Mr. Vander Ven for their faculty advisor.

At the beginning of the second semester the club was reorganized. Last Thursday the club selected for its name "The Philatelist's Club of Chelsea High". At this meeting it was decided that the officers of the club should draw up the by-laws for the organization. Hubert Ives and Robert Williams are alternate on reports from the American Boy Magazine.

Richard Sowers is to give a weekly report from the stamp article in the Detroit News. "The club is to be a very select organization. Therefore, to be a member, you must be a booster."

Highway Construction Funds Greatly Reduced

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 8.—Due to the use of State Highway Department revenues to reduce local highway taxes, the department in 1933 will spend less than one dollar per inhabitant of Michigan for new highway construction. This amount may be reduced if gasoline tax collections fall below $20,000,000 during the year. No portion of State Highway Department revenues come from property taxes.

These facts are contained in the biennial report of the department, by State Highway Commissioner Grover C. Dillman, covering the two-year period ending June 30, 1932. The report is more than a mere statement of operations of the department as it contains complete information on all departmental activities. All construction work, all maintenance work and department salaries are contained in charts attached to the report.

In outlining the 1933 financial statement, the estimated receipts from the gasoline tax are set at $20,000,000. Receipts from the motor vehicle weight tax are estimated at $18,000,000 but this entire sum must be apportioned to the various counties for local road tax relief. An additional $2,500,000 will be returned to the counties under the terms of the McNitt-Holbeck-Smith act for maintenance of township roads taken over by the counties.

The largest fixed charge which must come out of department revenues is $9,000,000 for highway maintenance. Into sinking funds to retire highway bonds $4,082,000. To meet Detroit street widening agreements $3,228,700 will be needed in 1933. After all other mandatory disbursements are met only $3,229,000 is left for use in extending the state's highway system.

Since 1918 the federal government has appropriated funds for use in building roads in Michigan, but no appropriations have been made thus far for 1933, the report points out.

In discussing construction during the past two years, the report shows that 1,344 miles of road was surfaced. Of this 530 miles was finished with concrete while 90 more miles was widened with concrete slabs. Slightly over 600 miles was surfaced with gravel.

The report shows that because of the McNitt-Holbeck-Smith act, the township road tax was reduced almost one half in 1932 as compared with 1931. In 1931 the total road tax of all Michigan townships was $5,413,894 but it is estimated that the township road tax was less than $3,000,000 last year.

"Face In The Sky"

Heralded as one of the outstanding pictures of the season, "Face In The Sky" makes its debut before local theatre-goers at the Princess Theatre, Sunday, February 12. It's treatment, photography and the work of its cast are all said to strike a new note in screen artistry.

Spencer Tracy, Marian Nixon and Stuart Erwin have the leading roles in this tale of a traveling young signboard artist whose dream of marrying an heiress fades when he falls in love with a little country girl.

Whimsically handled details of farm life, a fire-fight between the painter and his helper against the farmer and his son, a kidnapping unmasked, the romance of the girl by a young girl bridegroom, her escape and desperate search through New York for her lover, and a unique reunion all punctuate the progress of the story.

"It brought Electric Cooking to Our Home long before I ever dared hope."

"I had always looked forward to the time when we could have what I considered the 'luxury' of electric cooking—its convenience, and cleanliness, and healthfulness. But I had supposed it to be far in the future—until I saw the Waldorf Electrochef!"

"It seemed that the Waldorf was just everything I had pictured my range to be. I fell in love with its trim, simple design and its cool, sparkling finish. The table-top design appealed to me, too—and the handy cupboard space for cooking utensils. It had everything we had seen in other ranges—and even some extras! Yet the price was so low that we decided we couldn't afford to get along with our old range any longer!"

LINCOLN

IF SUCCESS were easy, the world would have no failures. Taking Abraham Lincoln as an example, upon the occasion of his birthday anniversary, the Great Emancipator had many failures to add color to his great humanity. Lincoln failed in business, failed in politics, and failed in the romance of his life. But in the end, he came out a victor, and stood supreme and immortal upon the tombstones of his failures.

You who suffer from business depression, who often wonder if the fog up the road bespeaks a blind alley, do not give up your obstinate determination to weather the storm of what is simply an economic cycle. Tomorrow is going to be a better day for business and for you.

Such would have been the lesson preached by the Emancipator, and Man of Courage.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I—"Tom" Belknap, big timber operator, ordered by his physician to take a complete rest, plans a three months' trip abroad. Promises of advancement he has made to his son John, just commencing in the business, are broken, for no apparent reason, and the young man is indignant. Paul Gorbelt, Belknap's partner, whom John and other business associates of Belknap cordially dislike, is a source of contention. Father and son part without a complete understanding.

CHAPTER II—At Shoestring, his train delayed by a wreck, John is ordered to leave at once. He refuses, and after a hot fight, his attackers realize it is a case of mistaken identity. John learns his father is believed to be out to wreck the Belknap lumber company. Bewildered and unbelieving, he seeks employment with that company. At the office he finds Gorbelt bullying a young girl, and throws him out. Gorbelt does not recognize him. The girl is Ellen Richards, owner of the company. A letter he carries, which John's name as John Steele, the Belknap name being dropped inadvertently, and John, knowing the feeling against his father, allows Ellen to believe that is his name.

"But, couldn't he say I was all there was to say 'What time?'" "Seven, sharp, in the mill yard. Good night. And once more, I thank you for . . . for what I did here." "That was all right," he said, "I'd be glad to take on a row with a hand like Gorbelt."

He did not know the slight happiness that had been in her voice, indignation that thinking back to her encounter brought a recurrence of light. He did not care what went on in the mind or the heart of Ellen Richards except for what she might think or feel of him as an applicant for a chance to show his father. Indeed, what he was wound on!

CHAPTER III

He was in the mill yard early, watching Ellen, clad in Mackinaw and breeches and pines, as she watched the loading of camp supplies. She was crisp, intent, business-like and greeted him almost curtly.

"The Temple reached down from the locomotive cab to shake his hand; Way-Bill took a moment to apologize again for the trouble of last night and John could see that both were watching him closely, probably wondering about his errand.

He strolled about, watched the mill saw, looked over equipment in the yard. With the train under way he sat down in the "ditch-house" of the way out while Ellen returned to her talking earnestly with the conductor. Her words reached him occasionally and always drew words of his own, savoring in phrase and inflection of the timber. She was a daughter of the camps, for coming spring from the same stock which had given him birth.

Out to the northward they rolled, up mile after mile of stiff grade, and after seven miles they crossed the magnificent branch, with its water tank and tender's house.

From the crossing they picked and clanked down long grades towards the distant timber, stopped at the Belknap & Gorbelt camps, spotted cars and then went on another three miles to Richards Camp, sixteen woods head-quarters.

He just followed her around. He met men: Saunders, the foreman; Jack Tall, the barn boss; the cook, the scaler, the clerk, Jerry Tobbs, fat and enthusiastic. He heard her talk to these men as he himself would have talked to men in his employ; directly, tersely, in their own language. But now and again he heard items which indicated the sorry deficiencies in her experience for such a task as that confronting her. He kept his eyes as well as ears open; he asked questions of Ellen occasionally, and of a man here and there; but all the time he was replete, up on the bit, growing hourly more provoked with a girl who needed him but who would keep him waiting!

But in late afternoon, when she led the way into the office, described for the moment, she changed; ceased to be the assured, young-business woman, filling a man's shoes more or less competently.

The crude office was silent, and John closed the door.

She dropped to a chair as though suddenly weakened and her mouth worked. Then she looked up with a very little smile and asked:

"Well, what do you think of it?" "Any wire?" he exploded. "It's slow, costly . . . a joke! No wonder you're in trouble, with a woods job run like this one!"

"Well . . . what would you do?" she asked, trying to put some tone of challenge into the words and failing.

He stood there and told her what he would do and why, item by item; told it emphatically, almost as though she were disputing him; told it with a thoroughness and his agility of inter-the stiff grades with four loads of logs bound for Kumpfest. Tiny Temple looked back to see a car leave the rails, to see the splintered ends of ties pop up through the snow, to see the car take the ditch and go over before he could stop.

Wrecking tools were in Shoestring, and it was necessary to make the run in for jacks and replacers. They got the car back on the track repaired, but a day was lost and the margin of safety for the mill shrank instead of growing.

Way-Bill and Tiny came to John. "A brake-beam on that car'd been monkeyed with," the conductor said. "You could see the fresh wrench marks on the nuts."

"What do you make of that?" "They know we're doing too well. Fixed to spill us to make trouble. They care a d-d about getting their logs moved! The Kumpfest yard's full, and if we keep on the main line won't be able to clean out the switches at the crossing. Store dirty work!"

John called Tucker into the conference, but the roadmaster smiled and shook his head doubtfully.

"Purdy story!" he said. "You couldn't tell within two weeks when that beam'd been repaired."

Way-Bill spat and big Tiny eyed Tucker with a look that was not pleasant. John wondered, feeling a bit uneasy. Thereafter, he kept wrecking equipment in the way-car.

And now Gorbelt's men commenced dumping at two landings, which meant that it would be necessary to spot two strings of empties daily, more minutes taken from the time of Ellen's train.

"A man must take it and grin, though," John knew that he had read the old contract by which Richards agreed to transport those logs.

Ellen talked to him in detail of the company business to point out the necessity of going even faster. Cars of all-steel lumber called out of Shoestring; piles of green lumber grew.

New looms, with lumber as security, were negotiated in Milwaukee to care for the curd demands of the Kumpfest bank.

"But we're only one jump ahead of disaster!" she said. "These Milwaukee bankers have been so decent with us up to now, but there's no telling when their good nature will give out. If we should shut down it would bring them up here in a hurry. If we can just keep going!"

They had not got abreast of the situation again as yet. A four-day tie-up would leave the mill hungry.

"Lack is with us," Ellen said that night. "We've had no blizzards since you came. You seem to be able to checkmate their moves, but you can't beat bad weather!"

"Cross your fingers," he said grimly. Right he was. The next afternoon the placid western sky hazed up and the temperature, which had been moderate for days, dropped suddenly.

A restive, puffy wind began to blow and settled towards dusk, to a moaning breeze which carried fine, stinging snow before it.

"Tiny Temple brought the train in air today," late, locomotive plastered with snow, festooned with icicles, and John, who had been busy in town all day, was there to meet him.

"Get your supplies," he told the crew. "She's going to be a buster! We'll run the snow tonight!"

"That's the way to lick it," a brake-man said.

Two hours for food for the men and coal and water for the engine and to couple to the wing plow that stood ready on its siding. Men and there, a dozen of them, armed with shovels, sitting in the heated way-car, waiting to give battle.

Tucker and John and two section men were in the plow the first brace to ride in the lookout and watch ahead; the others to jump the big wheel which manipulated the wings.

They were nearing the first bad point, and John leaned forward to see better.

"Ready, there? . . . Open your wings!" he called, and the men below bent on the wheel, turning it to force the wings outward so they would toss the displaced snow far to either side.

An immense, up-ending catnap came over the front of the plow, shutting off their view completely. John felt their speed diminish as though velvet-faced brakes had gripped the wheels and Tucker howled:

"Let 'em in!"

A man at the wheel kicked the trip; the wings were squeezed back against the sides of the plow; they held their pace a moment longer and then came to a stop.

John's snow fences had functioned and some of the cuts were easy to traverse because of these barriers which caught and held the snow to windward, but in other places the going was impossible. A dozen times the shovellers were out, tossing aside and waiting to shovel the plow free when it wedged it into the drift.

At five in the morning they gained the mainline crossing. Atop the ridge as it was the snow had mostly blown away, but Tucker held the wings open until they approached the last switch.

"Bring 'em in!" he called, and elbowed briskly as they bumped across the points. It was the one place on the line where caution must be used, with the wings; the one standard switch-stand on the whole line was located there and to pass it with wings extended might mean derailment.

John had arranged for breakfast at the crossing tender's house by telephone before they left town, and as he watched the men fall to the steaming food he grinned. The battle wasn't over yet, but he had held his own so far. He had checked and guided John's train, and he was waiting an even break from the weather. He would not have been so easy of mind, would not have taken such a fierce glory in the conflict with snow, had he known that his victorious afternoon, in the shadow of a car of logs, Tucker had listened to Paul Gorbelt while the man talked, slowly at first, as one feeling his way, rapidly later, as one who has achieved his end.

And now on into camp: hours of battle through the barren choppy until they gained the shelter of timber.

They must tinker for half an hour with his engine; men must rest. Fresh shovellers could be taken on at camp, but the engine crew could not be replaced.

As day waned the wind dropped and snow thinned. The temperature fell, too, but the back of the storm was broken. All that remained now was to reopen the road from the crossing on into Shoestring, seven miles and all down grade.

John opened the pig-door, waiting for that stop. The wings were spread and he could hear the fall of snow they shovelled out to either side.

Up above, alone now, Tucker grasped the hand rail tightly and braced his feet. One of the men at the wheel spoke to his mate and looked upward, a bit puzzled. That standard switch-stand was just ahead.

From the engine came a muffled toot. Brakes set sharply. They slowed, but it was too late.

From the right, a third and a rasping rattle as the wing caught the switch-stand, tearing it from its anchorage. A jolt and a clunk from the moving switch just as the plow's rear wheels met the point and the wheels dropped down on the ties.

"Or!" yelled John. "Jump, you!" He led the way, hurling himself out into the snow-bank.

The plow bucked, creaked, tilted. A splintering sound as the front trucks left the steel, and with a ruck and a crash the plow was on its right side and John was floundering in the snow, watching the locomotive. He saw her stick her pilot into the drift, saw the fireman lean, saw Tiny grab him.

The engine, all the motive power they had, settled slowly to its side, carrying the tank over with it.

Excitement! Men were in the snow; men were shouting; the way-car was speeding more men. "Anybody hurt? Guess not! But we've derailed, man, derailed!"

John was confronting Tucker. "What the devil?"—angered, he was, fuming, ready to take a man apart.

"My G-d, Steele, I forgot!" The roadmaster was shaking, holding a wrist in the other hand.

"Forgot the d-d thing!" he cried.

"Forgot the d-d thing!" He cried again. "Thought we were over the hump and—"

Something in his manner nipped John's attention, steadied his judgment, but he did not dwell on it when he turned to the shovellers who were waiting up from the way-car.

"Get your shovels, half of you, Jim, take the rest of the boys back to that tie. Bring up a lot of 'em; all shovelling down to gravel here. Tiny, uncouple your tender. Tucker, get some wood from that car yonder and build a fire . . . a big one. Snop to it, now! You'll chow in an hour and then it'll be all right for most of you. Double time for every man that stays by it!"

Heart pounding, he oversaw the first preparations. Made a monkey of, was he? . . . Looked like it. He'd made big gesture, played his cards in the distance of his father. The main-line branch was snowed in. A locomotive wouldn't be through for days to open help. Without such help, fighting this equipment was a man-sized job for anybody; the best of men needed time to turn a trick like this, but no Richards man had time to do else but Richards.

Four days, perhaps only three days of run was left for the mill. He could see his father's face when the old man heard; he could hear Tom's disdainful laugh when he learned of this failure!

He hurried back to the crossing tender's house. His wife had enough grub for one more meal, anyhow. He ordered a team with food and blankets to start fighting its way through the timber.

CHAPTER IV

And now twin emotions drove the man known in this operation as John Steele to the task confronting him. His rage against his father still smouldered but it was augmented by fear, and that was twofold.

First came the fear that he was going to fail, that the much would be on him, to wither and shrivel his pride.

Secondly was the fear that Ellen Richards, suddenly become for him a lovely girl in distress, would see her hopes go tumbling, her misgivings realized.

He could work hard enough, could drive men fast enough, when only rage spurred him; but with rage backed by fear he was a superman.

CHARLOTTE—G. W. Brown, publisher of the Chelsea Gazette, had a narrow escape last Thursday morning when the Ford coupe he was driving crashed through thin ice on Houghton lake and sank in about eight feet of water and mud. Mr. Brown went down with the car but was able to extricate himself, coming to the surface and by grasping the edge of solid ice was able to hang on until several nearby fishermen came to his rescue. The accident occurred about a mile off shore. Using a beaten path across the ice over which more than a hundred other cars had passed that day, Mr. Brown was returning to shore when a fish house, driven across the ice by the heavy wind that swept the lake struck the front bumper of his car, throwing the machine from its course and onto a patch of ice which later proved to be not more than two inches in thickness.—Republican-Tribune.

ORDER FOR PUBLICATION

State of Michigan, the Probate Court for the County of Washtenaw.

At a session of said Court, held at the Probate Office in the

Advocate Many Ways To Help Conditions

East Lansing, Feb. 8.—Ideas advanced by farmers for the improvement of agricultural conditions which were presented at meetings during Farmers Week included price fixation, non-interference with governmental functions, harder work at home, better loan facilities, decreased taxation, improved grading of products, regulation of trucking and dozens of other remedies.

Practitioners advocated by N. P. Beebe, Niles, were sale of quality goods, use of an attractive package, and the employment of good salesmanship. Mr. Beebe grows the largest amount of vegetables on muck soil of any middle-western farmer and his ideas apply more particularly to truck crops.

Ernest A. Rouha, Caldonia, said, "Farm efficiency has never as much as scratched the surface. We still work much as our fathers and grandfathers did. There are a lot of extra things to do to raise that extra money we need for our taxes; but, to do this, we must start at home instead of trying to run the government."

G. S. Felt, Sparta, urged farmers to improve the quality of their soil to reduce the per bushel cost of producing crops. Mr. Felt explained how he had built up a run-down farm by the use of green manures and the keeping of livestock through which the produce of the farm could be marketed.

A round-robin discussion by growers of regulated harvests for beets brought forth an array of conflicting opinions about the proper time to pull beets and the proper way to pile them. The dispute was unsettled but the growers participating were somewhat cheered by the prediction by C. R. Oviatt, crops specialist, M. S. C., that higher prices are on the way.

Extension Group Meets At Lindemann Home

The East Lima Home Extension Sewing club met on Thursday, February 2, at the home of Mrs. Eugene Lindemann, with 16 in attendance. The meeting was opened by the chairman, Mrs. Clifford Bradbury, and after a brief business discussion, was turned over to the project leaders. The lesson for this month gave the ladies an idea of the necessary equipment for the sewing basket. They also were shown samples of 22 different cotton fabrics in order that they might become familiar with each.

A delicious pot luck dinner was served at noon, after which Mr. Howe, of Ann Arbor, demonstrated the care and use of the sewing machine with its many useful attachments.

Every lady was very much interested in the use of the attachments, and each member is requested to make several samples, using each attachment, before the next meeting. They are also to furnish their own pattern, cut a dress and baste it together. The next meeting will be held on Thursday, March 8, at the home of Mrs. Clifford Bradbury.

Farmers Ask Answer To Loan Questions

East Lansing, Feb. 8.—Continued questions by farmers concerning the extent and the methods of obtaining government funds for financing farm production and marketing operations led to an open forum discussion during Farmers Week at which College staff members and officials of the credit corporations answered questions.

The seven agencies which supply funds for different types of loans were explained by Dr. H. S. Patton, head of the economics department at Michigan State College. Dr. Patton said there was some duplication of work between these agencies and that a revision of their activities later would perhaps facilitate their work.

"As long as the farmer continues to sell his products individually, he will have to obtain his credit individually," was the statement of Gifford Patch, Jr., M. S. C. Mr. Patch pointed out that Michigan farmers had been able to obtain credit when they belonged to such organized groups as the cooperatives handling livestock, fruit, beets, and celery in Michigan.

John W. Barton, manager Federal Intermediate Credit Bank, Minn., advocated the amending of Michigan laws to permit the filing of chattel mortgages with the county clerk instead of with township clerks, as at present. Mr. Barton stated that the present requirements delay the granting of loans in this state.

L. G. Wanek, Federal Land Bank of St. Paul, said that the Federal Land Bank is starting no foreclosure proceedings against Michigan borrowers who are really making an effort to save their farms.

Our Headache Came From Finance Drunk

East Lansing, Feb. 8.—"We went on a financial drunk and now we are having a hangover financial headache," was the diagnosis given by C. N. Wright, Scottsbluff, Neb., for the present business conditions confronting those attending Farmers Week at Michigan State College.

The speaker continued, "It was the greatest financial drunk and the greatest headache in history but the ache will pass away and we will soon feel better. The silk shirt period is over and we are now left to work out our own salvation."

"We are all of us, bankers, business men, and farmers, like a group of shipwrecked sailors on a raft, intent upon our own problems. If we could forget our individual difficulties and work for the salvation of the group, present conditions could be improved much faster."

"A knothole view, such as many have now, is always bad. We must cooperate not only with college specialists but also with neighbors to get an intelligent, comprehensive view of the situation before we can finally work out of it."

"We talked too much about the depression and sold ourselves the idea that there was one. Now, we are getting somewhere. We are beginning to think and analyze ourselves. We must get our feet on the ground again before we can climb. Bankers talking conservatism scare people to death."

Ocean Noises

To a keen-eyed aquatic animal the ocean depths—usually regarded as silent—must be full of noises. Thanks to the hydrophone, some of these sounds can now be heard by human eavesdroppers. The stearns "rattles" as he marches along on his four feet, whilst the ostriched fairly thunders when the heavy falls close at the approach of danger.
