Supt. Poore Tells of School Crisis in State

Earl Y. Poore, superintendent of the Chelsea public schools, addressed the local Kiwanis club at their regular meeting Monday evening, discussing action of the State Legislature in regard to the crisis facing educational institutions of the state. Mr. Poore emphasized the fact that, although the legislature had been in session for almost three months, not one piece of constructive legislation has been passed, and prophesied that no action would be taken by that body to give aid to the educational crisis.

In outlining the situation in regard to the local schools Mr. Poore stated that under the provisions of the 18-mill limitation amendment passed at the election last fall, a reduction of approximately one-third would have to be made in the budget unless some new source of revenue is provided before the present session of the legislature adjourns.

Chelsea Milling Co. Enters N.Y. Market With Jiffy Product

With a large shipment of Jiffy-Blanc flour to be made this week the Chelsea Milling Co. enters the New York City retail market in an introductory merchandising plan which promises to be exceedingly fruitful in results.

The flour which is being shipped this week goes to two chains of grocery stores in the metropolitan area of the largest city in the country, with total outlets numbering more than eleven hundred stores.

Monday, April 3 has been set for the date which will herald the introduction of the Chelsea product to the housewives in this eastern metropolis. Radio broadcasting will be started on that day, under the direction of the Copeland Service, headed by United States Senator Royak S. Copeland, over station WINS, operated by Hearst newspapers. The Jiffy broadcast will be in the form of a food and health program, and will go on the air on Mondays and Thursdays of each week for one-half hour, beginning at 11:30 a. m.

Simultaneous with the first broadcast to advertise the product, the two chains of groceries will feature the flour in their newspaper advertising and elaborate window displays.

Production of Jiffy flour at the Chelsea Milling Co. plant has increased steadily since its development several months ago. Popularity of the brand is justly deserving, inasmuch as laboratory tests by an uninterested firm divulge the fact that as compared to the most popular nationally advertised brand, shows the Jiffy flour superior in almost every point.

Steady increase in production has resulted in added employment at the local mill and with new markets being constantly developed. It is expected this increased production will be maintained.

Dates Are Set For Rural Music Festival

The date and place have now been decided upon for the spring Rural Music Festival. This is the culmination of a year's work in music in Washtenaw county by the courtesy of the Music Department of Michigan State College under the direction of Miss Mary Ann Collinge. The festival will be held in H.H. Auditorium on the University of Michigan campus on the evening of May 23. It is estimated that over one thousand children in grades four to eight from the rural schools and from the Lincoln consolidated school will participate in the songs and dances that make up the program.

This is the first event of the kind that has taken place in this vicinity, and the entire county is keenly interested in the coming festival which will demonstrate what the music director from the State College has been able to accomplish with the rural children in one year.

Two Local Teams in Semi-Finals Tonight

Very few events in the history of Chelsea sports have created the interest and enthusiasm which is so evident in the Golden Basketball Tournament in progress this week at the public school auditorium.

Sixteen independent teams from Dexter, Pinckney, Michigan Center, Napoleon, Grass Lake, Manchester, Dundee, Britton, Milan, Ann Arbor and Chelsea were entered in this sports classic which began on Monday evening of this week. Semi-finals and final games will be played tonight, the first game starting at 7:00 o'clock, as follows: Wallace Bears vs. State Street Rangers; at 8:00 o'clock, Chelsea Trojans vs. Napoleon, and at 10:00 o'clock the winners of the semi-finals will meet in the final game.

There will be a preliminary game by two of the girls' teams from the Chelsea High School in between the semi-finals and finals.

In Monday night's play Dexter was eliminated by the Wallace Bears, 34 to 32, in a hotly contested game. Pinckney was the victor over Faber City Washers, 35 to 34, and this was also anyone's game up to the whistle. St. Thomas nixed out Britton, 27 to 21 and the State Street Rangers from Ann Arbor upset Dundee, 55 to 37.

In Tuesday night's round Napoleon was an easy victor over Alexander's local five, 26 to 12. Milan won from Manchester, 44 to 26. The McDonald Ice, from Ann Arbor, and the Sportsman's Club from Michigan Center played an over-time period, ending in a close victory for McDonald Ice, 20 to 17. The Chelsea Trojans won in a well played game, from the Grass Lake Legion, 27 to 16.

In Wednesday night's round, Wallace was an easy victor over Napoleon, 34 to 26. In the final game, Wallace will meet the winner of the Wednesday night's round, Wallace.

What Is Wrong In Lansing? Door Kickers For Job Seekers

Pres. Roosevelt Accomplishes More In 10 Days Than State Administration Does In 10 Weeks.

By S. L. Marshall

What is wrong in Lansing? The new state administration has been on the job for more than TEN WEEKS.

A new national administration at Washington, D. C., took office just about TWENTY DAYS ago.

In Lansing everything is chaos, bickering and leaderless confusion. At Washington, starting the first day of President Roosevelt's administration, came bold action striking at the very heart of the country's trouble.

As this is written such relief as Michigan's 500 banks have had has come from President Roosevelt. From their own state administration, has come nothing but a succession of conflicting reports. Michigan depositors and Michigan bankers are dizzy trying to follow the gyrations of an impotent banking bill which has been tossed, torn, tangled and wrangled over because of what?

PATRONAGE! It has not been a question of how soon or how much of Michigan's hundreds of thousands of state bank depositors shall be relieved. Little consideration is given the business interests of the state. "Who will get the jobs?"—that's the thing they are fighting over; the spoils of office.

Paraphrasing, let the writer make it clear right here that he has confidence in the honesty and sincerity of Gov. William A. Comstock. The Governor is trying. He wants action. He was drawn into declaring a bank holiday with minutes to consider his action, where he should have had days. If that was a mistake, he made it upon the frantic advice of a group of federal banking officials and Detroit bankers in the wee hours of the morning of February 14th. He was called from his bed and rushed to Detroit to make a decision of unprecedented importance to Michigan depositors and Michigan bankers—and he had to make this decision AT ONCE. No wonder he is discouraged. No wonder he is bewildered. What has happened since is too fresh in the minds of Michigan people to need recounting. Nor is it necessary to explain why the Governor's efforts have been futile to get action.

Things are in a mess at Lansing. There is no leadership.

The Senate is aimlessly arguing and bickering about meaningless trifles. Its presiding officer, Lieut. Gov. Stebbins has not yet learned how to follow the simplest parliamentary procedure. Its clerk, according to veteran newspaper men, has not yet learned the routine rules. The Senate is a joke.

The writer has spent two days in the capitol city talking with veteran observers, experienced state house newspaper men and some of the older members of the legislature. Without exception they say, "Never has there been such disorganization and lack of purpose in Michigan's government as exists today."

"What about the House?" we asked. "Not too good," they say, "but not functioning as it should." In years past the House was more unified. One hundred members were more difficult to get action from than the 32 members of the Senate. Today it is different. The House with 41 veteran members are waiting for the Senate, and waiting for a clear cut program to come from the executive office. It has not been forthcoming. They are wondering when it will come and when they can get down to actual work and accomplish some of the many things which Michigan's citizens are waiting for, and voted for last November.

Perhaps the crux of the situation lies in the fact that Gov. William A. Comstock inherited an inexperienced official family. Several of these state officials are fine gentlemen but wholly untrained and unacquainted with their duties. They should not be censured too much for this. The people of Michigan elected them.

In at least one office there is a man in whom the Legislature has little confidence. We refer to Attorney General Patrick O'Brien. It was around O'Brien that the recent deadlock on the banking bill developed in the Senate. The Attorney General wanted to have a finger in the patronage pie when it came to appointing receivers for many anticipated bank reorganizations. It is a well known fact that Governor Comstock is not playing "political ball" with O'Brien. That being true it is small wonder that a group of Senators blocked O'Brien's ambitions.

We are told that the Attorney General has four more employees in his department than there are desks. The personnel has increased from 28 under Paul Voorheis in December to 42 at present. Economy and a new deal!

In the meanwhile Michigan waits. State funds are overdrawn and an empty treasury faces unusual demands. Unemployed thousands who voted for a new deal and prompt decisive legislation are wistfully waiting.

Hundreds of job-hunters roam up and down the capitol corridors day after day. They peek in this office door and that, wondering if there is a desk, a swivel chair and a pay check in store for them. But their quest is in vain. No more jobs until after the spring election is the edict. "We'll wait and see how many votes you boys can hustle out to the polls" is the thought back of the delay. Smart politicians. Sure, but the most deserving democrat in Clinton county is still waiting, wondering if he is going to get what has been promised, or if the smart boys from Detroit are going to sidetrack him after the spring election.

Door-kickers for job seekers. What is a door-kicker? It's a long thin sheet metal plate fastened to the bottom of a door to keep people going in and out from kicking dents in the door.

The hundreds of doors in the state office building have remained in good condition for many years without these "door-kickers." Burnett J. Abbott, new secretary of the administrative board, has purchased 9,000 door-kickers and ordered them placed on all the doors.

The newspaper boys are wondering if the door kickers were installed because of the influx of job seekers. They have been unable to find out from what friend Abbott purchased the door kickers or what they cost.

But they will. Tired at the inaction of the legislative board, Governor Comstock appeared recently and took the lawmakers to task. He demanded action on the banking bill. Also there were other important pieces of legislation, among these a bill to increase the cost of a notary public license from $1 to $3. The bill has been amended to make the term two years instead of four. This means 7,000 Michigan notaries public will have to buy a $4 bond every two years instead of four. Results: bonding companies get $28,000 every two years instead of every four. The people pay it. To whom is this notary bill important?

What about party lines? Are they drawn sharply? They are not. Since legislators of both parties are trying to work out a semblance of order, you will find such men as Democratic Rep. George H. Schoenhals of St. Johns and Republican Rep. Vern J. Brown of Ingham county, conferring and earnestly working together. Lack of a definite program, political jealousy, inexperience and unwillingness to conform to any constructive plan are all contributing factors. More concern over the political patronage than the welfare of the state is undermining any progress.

These are the reasons why the new Michigan administration has not made a start in 10 weeks.

Road Tax Reduction Equals Property Tax

Lansing, Mar. 22.—A reduction in local road taxes has been made in the last five years, which nearly equals the entire property tax collected by the state, State Highway Commissioner Grover C. Dillman announced.

In other words, he explained, co-operation between county and township highway officials and the state highway department, has resulted in a decrease of local highway taxes since 1929 of $20,217,781. In 1929 local road levies were $24,434,713 while they had dropped 83 per cent to $4,216,932 in 1932. In 1932 the state property levy was $23,487,000.

"State and local highway officials through co-operation have eased the burden of the property taxpayer by more than $20,000,000 a year over a four-year period," Commissioner Dillman stated. "Those who are raising a cry for elimination of the state property tax, hide the fact that a saving to the taxpayers by almost the amount they ask to be eliminated, has been made by highway officials alone."

"This is not a mere bookkeeping economy, but is an actual saving to property taxpayers. Revenues of the highway department, of which 54 per cent are turned over to local authorities for tax relief purposes, come from gasoline and automobile weight taxes alone. But great credit must be given to local officials for their willingness to make real economy in slashing costs."

Mylos Standish's Grave

In 1930 the bones of Mylos Standish were taken from their wooden coffin, placed in a metal one and then reinterred in the cemetery at Duxbury, Mass.

Michigan Department of State WEEKLY NEWS BULLETIN

Frank D. Fitzgerald Secretary of State

Lansing, Mich., Mar. 22.—Michigan motorists who operate their cars on half-rate windshield sticker permits until August 1, will be able to drive in 23 other states without being stopped, according to formal assurances already received by the Department of State.

Ohio, Indiana and Illinois have notified the department that Michigan motorists using 1932 licenses and the windshield permit, will not be stopped. Official notice of Wisconsin's assent to the plan has not been received as yet, although department executives declare they are confident that they do not expect the neighboring state to raise any objections to Michigan's system.

The states which have approved the plan formally are Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky (pleasure cars only), Tennessee, Nevada, Utah, Province of Ontario, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Colorado, Alabama, Georgia, New York, Connecticut, Maryland, Maine, Arkansas, Louisiana, South Dakota, Oregon, Oklahoma, South Carolina, West Virginia, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Vermont, District of Columbia and Florida.

Following a request by the legislative secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald extended the time for the use of 1932 plates until April 1. This extension was made because of the fact that many motorists and companies owning fleets of trucks were unable to secure funds which were in banks. No further extension will be made and after April 1, motorists will be required to have either 1933 plates or 1932 plates with the windshield permit.

SAINT JOHN—14118

Just how to speak or what to say When tired and nervous, too Someone in crispy questionnaire Provokes asks of you?

Before you speak count ten, we're told And this will bring relief We tried the anaesthetic, and It only saddened grief. One day while meditating through A book of ancient birth, We found some precious gems of thought Infinitely of worth, An arrow piercing through the heart So often hard to bear, By telling Jesus of the hurt He comes the hurt to share. I will not leave you comfortless I hear the Master say, My peace I give and leave with you And it shall be your stay.

—St. John, 14:18.

So when to speak or what to say Instead of counting TEN, I rest upon his precious word My spirit says Amen! —Arthur Carlton. M. E. Home, Chelsea.

If You Get Up Nights

Physic the Bladder With Juniper Oil

Drive out the impurities and excess acids that cause irritation, burning and frequent desire. Juniper oil is pleasant to take in the form of BUKETS, the bladder physic, also containing buchu leaves, etc. Works on the bladder similar to castor oil on the bowels. Get a 25c box from any drug store. After four days if not relieved of "getting up nights" go back and get your money. If you are both cured with backache or leg pains caused from bladder disorders you are bound to feel better after this cleansing and you get your regular sleep. J. V. Burg, druggist, says BUKETS is a best seller.

MASON—Last Friday there was no ice on Pleasant Lake but on Saturday the lake was entirely frozen over. Mason Reynolds, shortly after arising on that morning, looked for the flock of ducks familiar to the people at the lake. He finally discovered them near the island. Two hours later Earl Styles came to the Reynolds cottage and said the ducks were frozen in the ice since they had not moved all morning. Mr. Styles borrowed a rifle from Mr. Reynolds and shot toward the ducks. After three shots the birds were finally freed from their frigid prison. They "quacked" hearty thanks to their helpers on shore.—Ingham County News.

Do Not Use Sprays

Made With Fluorine

East Lansing, Mar. 22.—Research work done at Michigan State College and at other experiment stations has established the fact that an apple a day may keep the doctor away, but if fluorine sprays are used, the apple will be the biggest boost for dentists' profits that the tooth-drillers have ever encountered.

The spray schedule for protecting apples from codling moth require the use of arsenical sprays which, in some instances where fruit was sprayed late in the season and was not washed by the rains, leave undesirable residues on the fruit. Apples shipped from the United States to England were condemned for this reason and agents of the United States who enforce the pure food laws seized garlands in this country.

All stations and all spray manufacturers have attempted to develop a spray which would replace the arsenical but no substitute has been given the approval of entomologists at Michigan State. However, some sprays have been offered for sale in which the killing agent was some fluorine compound and orchard owners have been told that this spray was harmless if any remained on fruit.

This is not true. Fluorine compounds either in feeds for animals or in human food are distinctly injurious. The federal enforcers of the pure food laws will condemn fruit which shows traces of fluorine and that fruit will be total loss to its owner.

Work with mineral mixtures fed to dairy cattle at Michigan State College proved that the feed containing fluorine ruined the cattle's teeth in a short time. Tests at other stations show that the teeth of children are seriously injured by fluorine.

Michigan orchard owners should not use sprays containing any fluorine.

Peanut Production
Peanut growing in southern states has become an extensive industry both in improved and seedling varieties. Georgia in an average year is credited with producing about two-fifths of the "improved" varieties. Texas and Oklahoma harvest two-fifths to four-fifths of the seedling nuts. Peanuts produced range from 25,000 to 75,000 pounds annually.

Burial Ceremonies
Burial service is of very ancient origin. The Greeks and the Romans had ceremonies at the grave. The early Christians had a proper ritual consisting of hymns, prayers and songs, at the grave. The Jews followed a similar custom. As early as the fourth century the churchman was celebrated either in the church or in the grave.

Obtain Corn Plant
Resistant To Borer

East Lansing, Mar. 22.—A variety of corn which will greatly reduce losses from the corn borer and which also will yield a profitable crop is the promise seen in the latest reports from the work done at the Monroe sub-station maintained by Michigan State College.

When the corn borer was a front page story, this station was established and work has gone on unceasingly to find some way of protecting Michigan's corn crop. South America contributed to the work by furnishing a relative of the corn plant which had a flavor that the corn borer did not like and which it attacked very seldom.

This Maize Amargo would not ripen in Michigan, would not produce a crop of grain comparable to corn even if it did ripen, and was less valuable as a food substance. It had only one redeeming feature, the corn borer would not eat it.

The men at Monroe had to find some way to combine this one trait with the desirable ones possessed by ordinary corn. The first successful crosses of the two plants were made at Monroe, but the few poor ears of grain obtained were discouraging when compared with standard ears of corn.

The yield records from the station in 1932 show one variety of corn developed from this cross which yielded seven bushels to the acre more than Duncan, a standard variety. The type is not as good as that of common corn varieties but further work will probably correct this fault. Only 18 borer per 100 plants were found in this variety while the Duncan plant contained 162 borer in each 100 stalks.

No seed from this variety is available for general planting but the farm crops department at the college will be in a position to give the corn growers of Michigan a borer resistant corn if the damage done by the borer in the future requires the use of a borer-resistant variety.

Supt. Children's Village at Methodist Church

If you are interested in children and the pressing problems of the hour you cannot afford to miss hearing Miss Frances Knight, superintendent of the Methodist Children's Village, Detroit. The pastor heard Miss Knight at the Ann Arbor district meeting a few days ago, tell this thrilling message and felt sure that the Chelsea people would like to hear it. You will have that privilege on Sunday evening.

Miss Knight is a very capable speaker and will be interesting to all who attend. Here is one incident of many: "The Village had finally come to the end of its rope, with not enough in the storeroom to cover the needs of the week ahead. Miss Knight told the children that they must pray, with a new sense of dependence upon God, the old prayer of 'Give us this day our daily bread.' That very day a certain lady in the community had a feeling that the Village would probably be in need, so, borrowing a car and a friend, the two of them canvassed the neighborhood, and came in with a carload of vegetables, and oranges, and twenty dollars in cash. Responses of this sort will save the abandonment of this work until proper provision can be made to carry on the work. We are sending out this S.O.S. for help and suggest that as an extra offering, that we have a community food shower for these orphan children placed under the responsibility of the Christian church.

Suggest that you bring, Sunday evening, such things as canned goods, cereals, eggs and so forth. Miss Knight is not particular who brings them as long as the Lord sends them. Make her heart glad by your response. A little from each will not hurt anybody. Note—They grew their own potatoes.

Question And Answer Dept.

Quos.—Can you tell me in your question column why salt makes a person thirsty?

Ans.—When a person takes more salt than they need, too much of it gets into the blood. This excess must be washed away so that the blood can be brought back to its usual composition. This causes thirst, and the drinking of more water will serve the purpose the body is crying out for.

Quos.—Can you tell me when Good Friday comes?

Ans.—Good Friday always comes on the Friday before Easter.

Quos.—When was the first automobile sold in the United States?

Ans.—The first automobile sold in the United States was a Winton. It was sold in New York on March 24, 1898.

Quos.—What does "kissing under the mistletoe" mean, and what is the origin of this?

Ans.—This is taken from Scandinavian mythology. Balder was the Scandinavian Apollo of the North, and he was the favorite of the gods, but he was hated by the wicked spirit, Loki. Balder could not be harmed by fire, earth, air or water, so the legends go on. But with wily ingenuity Loki killed Balder with a mistletoe dart. Then in sympathy with Balder's mother, the gods dedicated to her the mistletoe, so long as it did not touch the earth—as this was his domain now. The mother of Balder determined that the mistletoe should be no longer the instrument of omens and death. Instead, she made it the emblem of love, and all who passed under it, received a kiss.

Quos.—I would like to ask in your question column what and when was the first coin ever minted in the United States?

Ans.—The first coin minted in the United States was turned out in Philadelphia in 1793.

Quos.—How many advisors will Roosevelt have?

Ans.—Well, we don't know exactly—his cabinet, and practically everybody else.

Quos.—Will you please tell me how fast the wind has ever been known to blow?

Ans.—The fastest wind ever measured by the United States Weather Bureau was 102 miles an hour. It is thought that higher speeds have occurred momentarily during tornadoes.

Quos.—I am curious to know what the clouds are composed of. Can you answer that question?

Ans.—Clouds are millions upon millions of droplets of water. They are exactly as fog and mist, except that they are higher up in the air.

Quos.—I have been told that snakes can charm birds so that they are unable to fly away. Is that true?

Ans.—No. This is a myth. However, some birds that have been caught by snakes under the belief they were charmed, were only struck by a paralysis of fear. The snake would then catch it before the bird could regain its power of flight. Therefore, it is mortal fear in the bird—not the "charm" of the snake.

Quos.—Can you answer in the question column of your good paper why flower pots have holes in the bottom?

Ans.—Holes in the bottom of flower pots is to allow for excess of water. The roots of plants must breathe, just as all other living creatures do, so that they must have a certain amount of air in the soil. If the soil is full of water, the roots get suffocated and die.

Quos.—I would like to know how the beautiful electric signs are made and worked, that they produce their wonderful effect. Will you please answer soon?

Ans.—The signs you have reference to, are made of a great number of electric light bulbs, each one connected separately with a switch. These switches are mounted on a revolving cylinder like a barrel. The cylinder is turned by a motor. As it revolves, the switches open and close. This makes the individual lamps on the sign light up and go out in succession, so as to form whatever moving design that has been arranged.

JOHN BEASLEY

John Beasley of Congdon street, died Saturday evening, March 18, at Ford hospital, Detroit. Mr. Beasley, who was visiting in Detroit, was stricken with a heart attack while walking on the street Saturday afternoon. He was born in Chelsea, Mar. 31, 1861, and for many years served in the employ of the Michigan Central Railroad and the Western Union, with headquarters in Detroit. Retiring eight years ago, he had since resided in Chelsea.

Funeral services were held at two o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the residence, Rev. P. H. Grabowski officiating. Interment was in Oak Grove cemetery.

"Brand New"

The phrase "brand new" is a combination of brand, meaning fire, and new meaning fresh. Therefore it has the meaning of fresh and bright, like a new coin which has just come from the mint.

Sophomore Play

Did you ever try telling nothing but the truth for 24 long hours? It seems quite impossible, doesn't it? It is extremely difficult, nevertheless. It has been proved to be possible. Lynn Dancer, our youthful hero in the sophomore play, entitled "Nothing But the Truth," and presented in the high school auditorium last Thursday evening, should serve as a shining example for all of us.

Not even his sweetheart, Leona Moeckel, could persuade him to tell a falsehood, and although confronted by many obstacles, he succeeded in winning the $10,000 he had bet. He was much disillusioned in the facility of telling the exact truth always (excluding even little white lies) when the 24 hours had finally very slowly elapsed.

All characters played their roles very well under the fine direction of Miss Virginia Barrus. A large attendance left the auditorium very much pleased, considering their quarters well invested and the dividends already collected.

If our sophomores could give such a splendid exhibition, what ought our juniors be able to do? Don't fail to see the junior play, entitled "The Girl in the Fur Coat," being presented by two separate casts, Thursday and Friday evenings, March 30 and 31. You can be assured of another full quarters worth of high class entertainment.

Kindergarten

"The kindergarten people" invites everyone to come and see their Dutch village, in the sand table. The boys have built a windmill, too, which is very interesting considering the fact that it was worked out without any suggestions from the teacher. When the boys found that there were no pieces of wood that could be used for the wheel on the windmill, they took an old box, split it into pieces and used a heavy block for a hammer. During the formal handwork period, the children are making Dutch block letters. They started a "Spring corner," too, but that will not be completed for visitors until later in the month.

Donald Roll, who has been absent for several weeks, returned to school. Several new rhythms have been introduced during the rhythm period.

First Grade

The first graders had a visitor Friday morning, Mrs. F. Givner. They are always glad to have their mothers visit them. Only six—on the way to school Monday.

They are having a new book to read soon and they are all very thrilled about the idea.

Third Grade

Jack Miller is back with his classmates again. They are very glad to see him again. But they are as sorry that Leonard Spilgoberg is ill.

Last week they spent an interesting hour in Yellowstone Park. Miss Hazard brought them some pictures of the park. She also told them about the bears and parkers. They are especially anxious to really go to Yellowstone some day, so they may see Haulkierchief Pool and the Paint Pots.

Sixth Grade

The sixth graders found themselves at a loss without a flag of the United States in their room, so they made a flag of cellophane. The girls' sewing class put it together, which by the way, is very beautifully done. Of course, they have been decorating the room for St. Patrick's Day.

They are very glad to have David Eaton back with them again.

In geography they are studying Central Europe, while in literature they are studying about Hawthorne and his works. In connection with this each pupil is writing a review of three of Hawthorne's stories. They are also studying about birds. Mr. Cross has very kindly consented to aid the boys, in anyway possible, in the making of bird houses. The boys are also building furniture for the kindergarten as well as making additional furniture. The girls are doing their part by redressing the dolls belonging to the kindergarten.

The sixth graders have been performing several experiments concerning oxygen.

David Stietor states that they have some very difficult arithmetic problems which deal with interest.

There has been a re-election of officers in the sixth grade, the following being elected: Pres, John Fletcher; clerk, Stuart Dingler; treasurer, David Stietor; councilmen, Vivian McBride, Marian Downer, Barbara Schroeder, Jan Daniels, Archie Wilkinson and David Eaton; health officer, Betty Marie Seitz; librarian, Mary Joan Riker; marshal, Eva Abdon; deputy marshal, A. Slane.

Ervin Wagner, who has had a sojourn in the South, is back to school again.

Editorial

"When we amaze even ourselves in recounting the birth and development of the modern industrial world, let us consider the problem which the public schools have been compelled to solve in these same thirty years," said Supt. Moore recently.

"New social and economic conditions had to be met on the spot by the schools. Educational requirements were no more at a standstill than the communities which they served, and these communities—even the most remote hamlets—were caught up in the whirl of the new age of opportunity.

"Some of these staged developments of their own with the foundation of industries which became links in the great industrial chain which was being forged. Every four corners had its quota of boys and girls approaching the age of self-support and anxious to assume as favorable a position as possible in the industrial world which beckoned.

"As impressive as are the figures of the state's actual increase in population, from 2,420,982 in 1900 to 4,842,325 in 1930, they no more than rough out the magnitude of the schools' increased responsibility, measured in terms of bulk alone. Even the general census figures fail to estimate the tremendous gain in school census. The one hundred per cent increase in population was outstripped by over one-third, in the increased number of children of school age. The state's school census of 1,790,276 in 1900 had become 1,430,475 in 1930, a percentage gain of 180 per cent.

"This perhaps only suggests, in industrial parlance, stepping up production by adding new units. If there were urgent problems arising in most communities in the mere capacity of the school houses, their availability to new population centers and the furnishing of sufficient equipment—the new problems of suitable and practical training for the changing world far overshadowed these in importance. This latter constituted the real challenge.

"New subjects had to be added to the school's curriculum. The need of the day was for young men and women with more technological and clerical training. The days of simple apprenticeship to a trade were gone. Those who would succeed under the new order could not spend years in a slow absorption of the elementary knowledge of their craft. They must enter the race with the fundamentals well mastered.

"Child labor legislation also advanced the age at which employment could readily be found and advanced courses in the schools became in further demand.

"The changing order developed hazards of its own, which had to be met. Organized health service in the schools became a necessity.

"The entire structure of the school had to be attuned to a new social and vocational standard, with a capacity which had been marked out more than double.

"Such has been the challenge which the schools have met in the past thirty years. The schools of the 30's would no more supply the present need than the bicycle and mud roads of the period would suffice for present transportation.

"The public schools still have their traditional task of transmitting the cultural heritage of the people, but they have been entrusted with additional responsibilities in which they assume a far more important role than did the old-time school. They are giving young people the tools with which to meet the problems of life today."

Sophomore Stock

Is Going Up!

In the interclass basketball tournaments the sophomore class of Chelsea high has swept all opposition aside to win the class championship. But last Friday brought the biggest surprise yet when the sophs beat the faculty, who were helped by Bob Foster and Eldine Hawley.

The sophomores did very well against the other classes. The freshman were hurt to fall to the tune of 35 to 8, next the seniors in an overtime period, 16 to 12, and then the juniors, 17 to 12. The faculty was beaten by the score of 18 to 16.

The sophomore class forecasts bad luck for teams that will oppose them. Our sophomore class may lift us to a higher level in sports during the next two years.

Ye Ol' Snooper's Scoop

Are we ever proud of our little Sophomores? Now we ask you, didn't they produce a play that was worth anyone's time and money? And, speaking of plays, our famous juniors are preparing for their play to be given March 30 and 31. "The Girl in the Fur Coat" will no doubt be more than popular from now on.

More about basketball—Monday night was a scene of intense interest, the Sophomores were beaten by an All-Star team composed of boys from the other Senior High Classes. The score, by the way, was 20 to 21.

Hats Off

From now on let's see if the boys around can't adopt a new slogan. And, let that slogan be "Hats Off." It is only common courtesy that the boys in Chelsea wait at least until they get out of the building before they put on their hats. It seems to me that it won't be hard to remember if you really try. Hats Off? We hope so.

JAMES WINTERS

James Winters, former resident of Chelsea, died Wednesday, March 15, at his home, 324 Thompson street, Ann Arbor. He was born in Chelsea June 27, 1862, and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Winters. His entire life was spent in this village until he moved to Ann Arbor about eight years ago. Surviving are six sisters, Mrs. Katharine Donovan of Ann Arbor, Mrs. Albert E. Foster of Owosso; Mrs. Edward Cowlishaw and Mrs. Edward Morrissey of Grand Rapids, and Misses Ella and Tressa Winters of Ann Arbor, and two brothers, Joe Winters of Farmington, and Edward of Saskatchewan, Canada. Funeral services were held at nine o'clock Friday morning at St. Thomas church in Ann Arbor with interment in Mt. Olivet cemetery, Chelsea.

BOY SCOUTS ACTIVE

During the past few weeks an active scouting program has been carried out. New committeemen and scout officers have been selected, which are as follows:

Scout Committee—Warren Daniels, chairman; A. K. Richards, J. L. Fletcher and E. W. Eaton. Scout Officers—Marion Longworth, scoutmaster; James Panarites, asst. scoutmaster; Andros Gulde, Jr., asst. scoutmaster, and Eldine Hawley, scribe.

Patrols have been reorganized. There are at present two patrols, but it is expected that at least two more will be organized in the very near future.

There are now about 10 boys who will begin scouting with the passing of their tenderfoot tests. The introduction of patrol competition was the main feature of the last meeting. A set number of points is given each patrol for certain activities performed by the patrol as a whole or by the individual members. At the termination of the contest, which will be sometime in May, the patrol having the greatest number of points will become the winner and will be given a prize, to be announced later.

Meetings will be held regularly every week on Thursday night. Every scout or boy who wishes to become a scout is welcome to join us in our meetings, and take part in the contest mentioned above for the purpose of making a more active troop in this town.

"Last Supper" in Mosaic

A copy in mosaic of Leonardo da Vinci's famous painting, "The Last Supper," is on exhibition in the Portlinton museum in Berlin. Some 300,000 pieces of glass were required to make the picture, which is about 12 by 23 feet. It is the work of a Berlin studio. —San Francisco Chronicle.

COUNTY HOME RULE

We do not agree with Professors Reed and Brumage, of the University of Michigan, who have just submitted a report to the legislature advocating home rule for counties. It is only fair to these gentlemen, however, to say that they also recommend that this form of local government be made optional with each county. It is true that abuses have crept into township government—but that is equally true of all government. Township government is close to the people and because of that, some form of it should be retained; at least in part if not in its entirety as we know it today. Perhaps one-half of our township units might be eliminated in the interest of lower costs of government, but for rural districts to surrender all their rights would be a mistake—we know too well what happens when government becomes too much centralized.

Professor Sutherland, also of the University, urges in a companion report the abolition of justice courts. He would substitute a county court for local justice courts, which he declares are unsuitable for the performance of judicial duties. We fail to see where that is sufficient reason for the elimination of these officials. Township justices perform many duties from which they receive no remuneration whatever. They are a part of every community and act as friendly arbiters in countless disputes which they are able to settle without recourse to the higher courts. In this alone they save more to the taxpayer than is ever received in fees. They may not be legal-minded, but their decisions are based on a knowledge of the circumstances, combined with common sense and mercy. They should be retained.

"Railroad Jack" Talks To Student Assembly

One very eminent personage, Harry Cooper, better known as "Railroad Jack," favored Chelsea with two visits this week. On Tuesday afternoon he appeared at the Chelsea public schools and spoke to members of the fifth and sixth grades at the invitation of the teachers of these grades, Mrs. Olds and Mrs. Seaks.

He again visited the public schools and spoke before the entire student body in the auditorium from 10:00 to 11:00 on Wednesday. Students were asked to name great historical characters and Jack gave the date of their birth, marriage, death and important events of their lives, which were correct in every detail.

This interesting character claims to have 10,000 dates stored in his cranium, about 5,000 or more people in his life. According to his version of his mental state, he claims that he was born "dumb" as the average person, but after years of conscientious study he has acquired this superknowledge. Jack says he never married and consequently has always been happy. He leads a simple life, sleeps in the open in a trailer cart which he tows by himself except when given a lift by a motorist.

Jack is moving toward the World's Fair in Chicago, where he expects to entertain the millions of people who attend that event, if he is able to cover the great distance to that city before the fair closes.

While I have visited and addressed the pupils and students of hundreds of public and parochial schools throughout the land within the past 30 years and have been cordially received by the teachers of those schools, it gives me pleasure to state I was especially cordially received in the Chelsea public schools by teachers and students last Tuesday and Wednesday, March 21 and 22. I found a variety of questions asked me, concerning historic characters, strictly up to date and the attention given me the best for a long time.

Rail Road Jack.

In recognition of the effort put forth by Jack to entertain the children of the school, Supt. Poore presented him with the following letter of recommendation:

Chelsea, Michigan.

Today we have had the pleasure of a visit from Railroad Jack at the Chelsea Public Schools. He entertained two groups of elementary school children and another group made up of junior and senior high school students. We observed that not only were our pupils entertained but that they were also instructed by many of the things which Railroad Jack in his characteristic manner said to them.

In as much as this man has become more or less of an institution at the University of Michigan and throughout the State in general, I have no hesitation in recommending him to any school executive who desires a unique and interesting type of assembly program.

Very truly yours,
EARL Y. POORE,
Superintendent.

UNADILLA

Mother and Daughter Banquet. The Mothers and Daughters banquet, held in the Unadilla Presbyterian church last Friday evening, was sponsored by the Young Peoples' Tuxis Group, and was a very successful event.

The dining room was beautifully decorated in an appropriate manner for St. Patrick's Day and 74 mothers and daughters sat down to the fine dinner which was served in a very efficient manner by 15 men and boys of the church.

Grace was said by the pastor, the Rev. J. H. Rheingans, and with Mrs. Verna A. Rheingans as song and cheer leader, the dinner and program which following was interspersed with many cheery songs by the entire group, who entered heartily into every part required of them.

Miss Margaret Roepcke, president of the society, welcomed the guests and introduced the leaders in an able manner, and Miss Maxine Marshall capably filled the role of toastmaster.

Miss Wilhelmina Roepcke gave a toast to Daughters to Mothers; Mrs. L. K. Hadley gave the toast from Mothers to Daughters; Mrs. Roger Ginther sweetly sang "My Irish Mother"; Mrs. Norman Hiltz, with five daughters and a granddaughter, gave an impressive group reading; Miss Mary Lantis paid an eloquent tribute, in verse, to Mothers present and passed on.

The address of the evening was given by Mrs. Mildred Mayer of Munith, which covered the subjects of Motherhood, Daughterhood and home life in general. She pictured the ideal home with Christian parents at the fore, as a prime necessity for the future welfare of our land. It was a sane and sensible talk, strongly given and well received.

The program closed with group singing of "Blest Be the Tie" and prayer by the Rev. Verna A. Rheingans.

Guests were present from Gregory, Plainfield and Munith.

ST. PATRICK'S PROGRAM

A St. Patrick's program featured the weekly meeting of the S. P. I. held Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Louise Winans. Roll call was answered with Irish poems, and a chip basket contained short Irish stories. The following articles were given:

Saint Patrick—Amanda Koch.
The Shamrock—Mary Schneider.
Ireland—Katherine Kusterer.
Irish Leaders in American History—Lettie Kaercher.
Irish Songs—Olga Strieter.
The Blarney Stone—Louise Winans.
Aaron's Holy Place—The Reek—Lillie Wackenhut.

A guessing contest followed and lunch was served.

Radium Watch Dials

The Bureau of Standards says the luminous material on a radium dial watch contains phosphorescent zinc sulphide. This substance will glow when exposed to a bright light and continue to glow with decreasing brightness for several hours after such exposure. When the luminous material is freshly prepared the glow observed in the dark is chiefly due to the action of the radio-active material contained in it.

American. The two-thirds rule, known in the legislative assembly of ancient Greece and Rome and the present in the parliament of the United States, is a history of Great Britain. It is regarded as American in origin and is incorporated into the Constitution. The two-thirds rule was adopted in the first Democratic National convention held in Baltimore in 1832.

Jonah's "Host" In the book of Jonah the sea monster which swallowed the prophet is referred to as "a great fish." In Matthew 12:40 the creature is referred to as a whale, which is not a fish but a mammal. "Sea monster" would be a more accurate translation of the word used in the Greek text.

A Romance of the North Woods

SERVICE

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—"Tom," Belknap, big lumber operator, ordered by his physician to take a complete rest, plans a three months' trip abroad. But his son John, just commencing in the business, are broken, for no apparent reason, and the young man is indignant. Paul Gorbel, Belknap's partner, whom John and other business associates of Belknap's family, is a man of great education. Father and son part without a complete understanding.

CHAPTER II.—At Rochester, his train delayed by a wreck, John is ordered to leave at once. He refuses, and after a fat fight, his indignation realizes it is a case of mistaken identity. John leaves his father's house, and after a long journey, he arrives in Chicago. He does not recognize him. The girl is Ellen Richards, owner of the company. John Steele, the Belknap being dropped inadvertently, and John, knowing the feeling against his father, allows Ellen to believe that is his name.

CHAPTER III.—Ellen engages John as her foreman. A series of underground tricks designed to handicap operations of the Chicago company culminate in the destruction of a locomotive drawing a snow plow.

CHAPTER IV.—After heroic efforts the locomotive is got back on the rails. John, knowing Ellen's bravery under the conditions, begins to feel a sentimental attachment for the girl, which is returned.

CHAPTER V.—The Richards barn and stables burn in a night fire. John carries out the dead body of a stranger. He realizes the fire was set, but refuses to believe his father could be party to such an act. Steele and Sheriff Bradshaw arrange to work together on the case.

CHAPTER VI.—John is surprised that Gorbel is the malignant influence at work. He is ordered by Steele to drop the name and reputation. Gorbel discovers that "Steele" is John Belknap.

CHAPTER VII.—Having evidence of the Richards stables, Sheriff Bradshaw interviews him. Gorbel admits the dead man had been in his employ and claims he had discharged him for being drunk, the afternoon of the fire. Steele and Bradshaw arrange for an autopsy on the body. John sends an anonymous letter to Ellen, informing her of Steele's identity, and insinuating that a thing for his father and John is responsible for the business troubles. John is unable to make a satisfactory explanation, and Ellen, against the dictates of her heart, discharges him.

CHAPTER VIII.—Young Belknap, determined to fight to the bitter end to save his father's reputation, faces Gorbel and forces his enemy to give him employment in the Belknap lumber plant. Sheriff Bradshaw cleverly induces Gorbel to incriminate himself in the burning of the Richards stables.

The third was painted white; it set back thirty feet from the street. As he came abreast of it the door of the storm-house, which, during the winter protected the tiny front porch from weather, opened inward. He saw her standing there and she beckoned. "Come in," she said, looking down the street and closed the door, shutting the snow into the little cubicle. "All right, now"—speaking in a normal tone. "Old dad, you're this is the house—is dead as a post. She sleeps like a log, too. If anybody comes up the walk here, go straight through the kitchen and out the back door!"

"Who would come?" he asked, suspicious now. "Paul Gorbel might come," she said. "Oh!" "Yes! And if he found you here with me, he might kill me!"—dramatically. "He'd be afraid of you, but he'd never let me get away, knowing that I know all he does and after he'd seen us together. That's why"—more earnestly—"I can't take you up to my room. If he trapped us there—" "In the habit of coming to your room, is he?" "Yes," she said. "I'm not going to try to put anything over on you, Mr.

"Yes! And if He Found You Here With Me He'd—He Might Kill Me!"

Belknap. I couldn't, even if I wanted to, and I don't want to." "That's generous, I'm sure. But..." "I know this is a wild sounding sort of thing, but I want you to believe that everything I say is God's truth!" "It's a long story, Mr. Belknap. It's the kind of a story with a moral, far as I'm concerned, I guess." She laughed, a trifle bitterly. "I'm coming clean. I've got to, to show you how I know these things, and to make you understand why I tell you to go. A girl's got to shoot square as long as the other party does. I've done my part up here. I've been given a dirty deal from the beginning!" And now her voice was coarse, unpleasant, filled with anger.

"Don't misjudge me, Mr. Belknap! Please don't do that! I was only a kid when Paul Gorbel commenced coming into the Chicago office. I was a typist there and he—well, he propositioned me while he was in and out of Chicago, seeing my father about building the new plant here. I was to come up here as his secretary. As soon as we could make good with the town, so there wouldn't be any gossip, he said, we'd be married. Well, we made out with the town. He's smart; I've been awful careful. We've got by but I haven't heard any wedding bells! First it was the excuse of heading off gossip, because he's awful particular about his standing. Then it was something else again."

"You see, everything had been between Paul and your father. None of the others in the Chicago office had anything to do with it. This plant isn't supervised and audited like the Belknap company plants are. I never knew why."

"But a year ago Paul came back all in a huff. Your father wasn't just satisfied with the way things were going. He'd commenced to ask questions about the plant and the bank that were hard for Paul to answer. He came up himself, just as snow came, and there was a lot of tall scratching. I'm here to tell the world. But he never found out anything."

"Now I'm commenced to figure that he was about through with your father. He'd gone as far as he could in getting stuck in this company. He was going a good deal further in other ways that I'll explain after a while."

"All along, I'd had a feeling that he wasn't shooting straight with me. I hadn't been here a month before I was sure of it. It seems that he'd been trying to make this Ellen Richards for a while."

"Surprise you?" she laughed as she felt John start violently. "Well, he had! He'd been gone on her since before her father died, but the old man didn't believe in a guess what ever he knew he landed on to this girl because she didn't tell."

"It got under my skin of course. A girl can't help it, she gets jealous. Mr. Belknap, well, as I say, she didn't have time for anything but her job, anyhow, after her father died. You see the bank here had a lot of their notes and Paul knew all about her affairs. He got his big idea about that property last fall. I remember the day he hit on it."

"I'm not dumb. Not exactly. I watched and listened and put two and two together and found out his scheme. He figured that the Richards company was in such a bad way that he could close it up in a few weeks if he could crowd it a little harder. He wanted to do that but he didn't dare until he heard your father was going to Europe. He counted the days until he thought he was safe and then opened up."

She laughed a bit nervously. "I guess you know what happened. Well, he did it all on his own, and timed it so your father wouldn't get wind of what was going on before he called. He started gunning up her railroad; he brought in this Baxter to clean up on her men. He did a lot of other things that I don't know about probably, thinking he could force her to the wall, buy at his own price and then he could go over there as sole owner, leaving his stock in this company in this bank as security for the loan it would take to swing the deal. Did it? He'd be free of your father, then."

"Now I happen to know how he worked it. He let the story out—as he's a way of doing—that your father was responsible for all this. He's smart, Paul! He spread that story pretty early, I'll say. But you, Mr. Belknap, sort of upset his buggy!"

He found out who this John Steele was and you'd ought to've heard him rave! He dictated that letter and I had to write it to Ellen Richards. When you showed up here and went to work it knocked him for a loop! He was scared stiff. He laid off the Richards job and started in, tryin' to make her again—daddy. The dirty double-crosser!"

She fumbled for a handkerchief and blew her nose with vigor. "Well," said John with his heart tapping his ribs. "Well, and it's about as I had it figured out. He's played his own game, using my father's cards and my father's name!" "That's it! But that ain't the half of it, John! Again her hand was on his arm.

"The thing that got your father suspicious was how the lumber was grading. It showed up an awful lot of low-grade stuff. The more we cut, the worse it seemed to be. Well, that's easy. If you're inside, every week, cut after cut of good Number Two Common and better rolls out of Kampfest, billed to the North Star Lumber company in St. Paul—as usual. Yes, sir! You can check on that!"—nodding. Her voice was a bit hoarse now. "And that North Star company is Paul Gorbel. I don't know where or how. But he knows it. I know that and he doesn't know how I found out. Oh, he'd kill me if he knew that! But it's true!"—desperately. "It's true, John. He's double-crossing your father every day in the week, and when your father tried to check up on it by an inspection at the other end, Gorbel fixed that, too, some way. I think he switched cars in St. Paul on the inspector."

"There's things in the bank, too. How much I don't know. I do know that he's accepting a lot of North Star notes in payment for that good lumber at cut prices. In other words, he's stealing Belknap & Gorbel blind!"

She ended, breathing rapidly and John stood there, so close to her, triumphant emotions surging in his heart. He looked down at her face, so close to his. "I'm sorry," he said, and meant that. "Poor, light-headed kid," he thought. "A gold-digger, yes; coarse, vindictive, cruel, selfish. She wanted him to kiss her now. She was swaying closer to him."

He put his hands on her shoulders gently. "Thank you, Marie," he said. "May be there are things I'll be asking of you later! Just do your job and wait. If I have to see you, I'll write a note and let you plan the meeting."

"I'm awfully obliged. Good night!" He went then, seeing her in the doorway. She watched him go and finally turned into the house with a sigh.

"Gosh," she said. "Gosh. As hard to make as a million dollars!" But as she climbed the stair her disappointment—a casual sort of emotion—gave way to a hard joy. She lit her room and took off her coat with quick, eager movements.

"You got gay with the wrong party, you double-crosser!" she muttered, and her weak, pretty little face was unlovely to behold. Woman scorned!

In his room at the boarding-house John wrote a letter before he turned in. It was to Bradshaw, brief and to the point. And the concluding paragraph read: "And so send the following message to T. A. Wolcott, St. Anthony's Trust Co., Minneapolis. He is an old friend; open his reply and follow any leads he may give you."

"Please find out at once all you can about investors in and officers of North Star Lumber Co., St. Paul, also advise me of its local standing. Send reply to Nat Bradshaw, this address—JOHN BELKNAP."

Paul Gorbel had not attended the dance. He had had other matters to occupy him. Neither had Baxter been in the recreation hall, though on other Saturday nights he had occupied his place by the fire and made his mouth observations of women far the benefit of boys and low-grade men.

Tonight he stood in the shadow of a lumber pile with Gorbel and took his orders, but he took those orders, snapped at him coldly, with grace. "But spare it kites him!" the man muttered.

"So much the better!" "Good G-d, Gorbel, I don't want to kill any of old Tom Belknap's!"

"I'm giving you orders. If you don't go through with it, remember, I know who has your thumb-prints and your pictures."

"That crowds me, Gorbel. I s'pose I'll have to do. You've got me in a hole."

"Good guess. This week, remember. You've every chance in the world to get away with it."

And so while John Belknap toiled at the hot-pond in a fever of suspense and excitement, death stalked him, waiting, skulking in the shadows. But this morning he was on the far side of the pond; that evening he worked close to another sign of the crew. This day, one man alone could not handle the stake trips on the tilted, heavily-laden cars; the next, the pond was full and no loads had been set in. So on, until Thursday.

Thursday afternoon, then, with the yard engine setting in more cars, pulling out, leaving the ponds on the canted track beside the loads to throw dark shadows beyond them. A prowler could come through the lumber yard then and stand well screened to watch. He could stoop and look beneath the car and see the pond-men working. He could slip forward silently in the snow, squatting on the dark side of the trucks, waiting, watching.

Across the pond was Ole, tooling a log slowly towards the slide where other workers were busy. And now around the end of the pond came John Belknap, walking swiftly, pike-pole over his shoulder. He was abreast the car now, and the prowler, hands on the trips, bent low to look beneath, saw his legs.

A flash of breath, a jerk with great hands and toes were craning down upon that man beneath them!

On the first stir, John looked sharply. He had a glimpse of a smooth, long, hard, snoring, from the child, that had him, snoring at him through the air, outside of a score of others, rolling, bounding, leaping towards him!

No place to go, there! Eight feet ahead would put him in the clear, eight feet backward, and he would be safe. But eight feet are two strides. It takes a man time to get under way.

One other place, then; the pond! Before the pike-pole which had been on his shoulder hit the ground, he dove for a gap between two logs in the pond. To strike them, to have that rolling timber come on him, would crush life out. He had to make it!

Eyes open, hands extended, he cut the water. His hip brushed one log and as he went under swimming nighly, he felt the first of the down-rolling deck touch his leg. Touch it! That was all. He had found an opening. He had missed catastrophe by inches.

And he was under the logs, swimming, groping for a way out. Ole had seen. With a cry he saw John disappear. With a shrill yell he leaped to a maple, danced along a hemlock, skipped over a trio of small birches. Close together the logs lay in the pond; scarcely room for a man to slip between them anywhere there!

He gauged the distance. He swung his pike-pole. He brought his weight to bear on a high-rising log, and shoved it with all his strength, crowding it away with the pole, shoving the one on which he stood in the opposite direction with his feet.

Above him, a bright electric light glowed from its pole. The opening water was sable velvet, stippled with eddies.

"Hi!" he yelled. "Hi, John!" A bulging, swirling, "An arm shot through; a face showed—and John—"

The Exalted Swede tried to drag him out. Belknap, grasping a log, was choking and gagging for breath!

The excited Swede tried to drag him out. "All right! Let me breathe!" he gasped, and Ole stood up as others came running.

What happened? Anybody hurt? Who was it? Chattering like as John, still plunging, shaking with cold, dragged himself out.

"All right!" he gasped, and then to swim—a hour looking for a hole!

"Py gosh, John, you come by a fire now!" said Ole as, water streaming from his wooden clothing, John made his way to shore across the logs.

He was shivering, but he shook his head. "Not now, Ole. Not yet! Got some-thing to do first."

As he trotted around the pond, under the slide and made for the car from which four thousand feet of logs had rumbled down to menace him, Ole put down his pike-pole and followed.

As the Swede rounded the half-empty car he saw John squatted low to the snow.

"Careful, Ole!" the boy cautioned, teeth chattering. "Don't step in his tracks. Got a match?"

Edging along so that his feet would not muddle any of the traces there in the newly fallen snow, the older man drew matches from his pocket and lighted one.

"He came in from yonder," John said, pointing to lumber piles. "He stood there behind that truck, a while, squatted down, see? There's where his weight rocked up on the balls of his feet. . . . Came over here, and afterwards, went out that way. See where he ran?"

"Who, John?" Ole asked, puzzled. "Whoever tripped the stakes to let the load down on me!" John laughed harshly. "You didn't think they just let go, did you, Ole?"

"Yumple! Yesus!" breathed his companion. "Fustle with the light now. Let's see what we can see!" Together they bent low over the tracks, while Ole struck a fresh match. "New rubbers, see, Ole? . . . See that star brand in the heel? Old ones wouldn't leave a clean mark like that! Looks like the work of a die. Heavy. . . . big man."

John did not listen as the man expounded the virtues of his wares. He held a rubber in his hand, gazing at the raised star in the heel with its constellation of little stars about it, at the heavy, crepe sole like the surface of a spring-mushroom.

"Sold, many?" "Well, not many. Only two pairs, yet. You ask the boys, though. They'll tell you they fit fine around the foot! Try one on and—"

"Not now. Who bought?" The merchant scratched his head and told him the names of his purchasers. The last man mentioned crystallized the suspicion that had been in John's mind.

The recreation hall was accommodating its usual evening throng when John entered. He passed among tables where smug and checkers engaged attention, went past the fireplace towards the pool tables with their shaded green lights.

Baxter was sitting against the wall, a pimply-faced lad grinning at him from one side; another loafer sitting bent far forward, elbows on his knees, sycophants, he looked up, perhaps a trifle warily, as John approached. His hands were in his pockets, one foot crossed over the other knee.

"Put up your foot, Baxter!" John said sharply, coming to a halt before him.

The man started. "Hi!" he asked. "Put up your foot!"

"Who says so?" he asked, truthfully. "I do. Put it up!"

The man laughed. "If you want my foot up," he growled, drawing his hands from his pockets. "You go down and sit it and—"

John went down with a swoop and a crouch, a swing of his hand, fastening on the man's ankle, he backward, snatching Baxter from his chair with a third, a crash, an oath.

One leg in the air, hold there by that hand, seated on the floor for a split second, the man gnawed while his face flooded with redness.

John stared down at the sole; big star; little stars, crepe rubber on the sole.

"Thought so!" he said with a sharp nod and let the resisting leg go. Baxter had started to turn over with a mighty heave of his great body as John relinquished his grip. His foot dropped and upset him again, but he came up with an agile scramble, clenching his fists.

"Put a man, even a fighting man, a halting, fighting man, doesn't waste his mind on something other than making so completely that he pays no attention to the drawing back of your fist."

Baxter remained poised, ready to strike, but not striking, facing the torrent of words from young John Belknap, who stepped closer, one hand, palm upward, extended in a business-like sideways gesture.

"If you'd put it up, I'd saved you being set down on your tail, Baxter. I wanted to see the bottom of your new rubber because I found a track in the snow a couple of hours ago and, put alongside of other things I found out, I figured your rubber made that print. You've got a reputation to uphold, I suppose, but hereafter when I tell you to do a thing—I want you to do it!"

"Don't get ready to fight yet!" John went on, as he might have talked to an enraged child. "Maybe there'll be some fighting between us, but not until you've had your chance to get out of it."

"Chance?" Baxter shouted. "Say, you got a lot of guts, talkin' of givin' me a chance to get out of fightin' you?"

John nodded. "Yes, I have. Enough guts so you don't scare me very much, Baxter. And plenty to tell you what I'm come to tell."

Baxter's eyes swung a segment of the circle about them; he swallowed quickly. "This was something new in the way of an encounter."

"Well, what you got to tell me?" he demanded.

Principles and Thoughts

How can the principles become dead, unless the thoughts which correspond to them are extinguished? But it is in the power to fan these thoughts into a continuous flame.—Marcus Aurelius.

Peculiar Rainfall

In Honolulu you can walk to the sunstone on one side of Aiea street and be dry, while on the other side of the street, owing to the fact that showers that fall in the valley back of the city are blown at an angle. Showers blowing down the valley usually stop just below a certain house and the owner directs friends to his house by telling them that it is "the first house after the first shower."—Punch Under the Sun.

Electric Ranges

"Automobiles? Humph. They'll never be practical. Why, there'll soon be laws forbidding them the use of the country roads!"

DID YOU EVER WONDER WHAT HE'D SAY ABOUT ELECTRIC RANGES?

If you were planning a trip to Europe, would you ask someone who had never been outside of Kansas whether the salt air really affects one's appetite? If you want to know about electric ranges, ask someone who is using one—a modern one!

We do not claim that all electric ranges are fast. However, we know that the modern electric is fast. The ranges of 15 years ago were often very slow, to be sure; and they were expensive to operate, especially when we did not have the low cooking rates in effect today. But if you were going to buy a new car, would you go to the owner of a 1920 Model and ask him about the new Models?
