Leigh Beach, Lima Supervisor, Is New Chairman of Board

At the annual April organization meeting of the Washtenaw county board of supervisors, held Monday at the county building, Leigh Beach, representative from Lima township, was elected chairman of the board. The name of Mr. Beach was placed in nomination by Supervisor Fred Blumhardt, of Bridgewater, while Mark Sugden, of Saline, was nominated by Supervisor Edward D. Foster, of Yp-santi township. Mr. Beach received 20 votes and Mr. Sugden, 11, and on the motion of Mr. Foster the clerk was instructed to cast a unanimous ballot for Mr. Beach.

A feature of the meeting was the discussion of covert road bonds, there being insufficient funds to meet the obligations which are due May 1st.
George Gill, chairman of the road commission, was of the opinion that the bonds should not be refunded, and that the $25,000 on hand in the county covert road fund be used to partially meet these obligations. The commissioners, however, are unwilling that the balance of $22,814 in the road commission fund should be used for covert expenses.

A meeting of the highway committee and the road commission will be held in an attempt to solve the problem, the report of which will be given to the board.

A request for $300 for park maintenance by the board of park trustees was received and filed.

It was voted to table the resolution of Supervisor Miller, first ward, Ann Arbor, to have two members of the equalization committee come from Ann Arbor.

The county treasurer was authorized by the board to collect the full penalty on overdue taxes, with the understanding that refunds would be made if the time of payment should be extended by the state legislature.

The question of reorganization of school districts was referred to the legislative committee as was a communication relative to reduction in rates on small loans made by Michigan financial firms.

The legislative committee reassembled by Chairman Beach, are Supervisors James Galbraith, Ann Arbor; George Alber, Sharon, and James Warner, Ypsanti, who were chosen because of their familiarity with the problems now before the committee.

Since the students are taking their Spring Vacation this week, all of the items in this issue of the "Seepiess" are contributed by the superintendent.

An item of interest to many Chelsea people comes from Shelby, where we spent two years as superintendent. We refer to the death of Mrs. O. H. Fleming, nee Vinnie Burkhardt, who was born in Lyndon township during the period of the Civil War.

One of Mrs. Fleming's children, Mrs. Zada Beam, was a close friend of Mrs. Moore during our stay in Shelby. Both Mrs. Fleming and Mrs. Beam were students of Chelsea High School and have numerous relatives and friends in this community.

FORMULATE PLAN FOR STATE AID

Original Intent of Framers of Constitution Embodied in New School Program.

TO RELIEVE PROPERTY AND TO REDUCE SCHOOL COSTS

BACK to state responsibility in the financing of Michigan's public schools is the aim of legislation proposed by educational forces of the state. The plan as outlined endorses the shift of a fair share of the public school operating expense from the burdensome property tax to other forms of taxation more in accordance with sources of income of the present day, and provides for a reduction of twenty-five million dollars in the operating costs of Michigan's public schools. It will mean a reduction of fifty million dollars in the amount of taxes to be levied on property in 1933-34, as compared with the amount collected in 1930-31.

Michigan's first governor expressed the hope that the state would some day pay the entire cost of educating all of the children of the state. When the people of Michigan adopted their first state constitution in 1835, they made education of the youth of the state a matter of state-wide concern. At that time, other states of the Northwest Territory had assigned their grants of school land to local school districts. Michigan, however, asked that school lands be given the state to be administered as a state fund. The request was granted in 1837, and Michigan's primary school fund dates historically from that early beginning.

Harking back to the original intention of the framers of the constitution, the plan calls for the state as a whole to take the responsibility of furnishing its boys and girls with at least a minimum program of education.

The arrival of the fifteen mill property tax limitation amendment in Michigan merely emphasizes the stand taken several years ago by leading educators, who have repeatedly declared that local property should be relieved in a great measure of furnishing public school revenues.

ARK Augmented Primary Fund.
The plan of financing Michigan schools as presented by students of the question calls for the primary school interest fund to be distributed on the present basis—that of school census. In addition, a supplementary primary fund is proposed which will assume a great share of the burden now assessed against local property.

The Original Plan Modernized.
The plan incorporates and puts into effect the original principle of state responsibility as expressed in the Michigan constitution, say its formulators. Augmenting the primary school interest fund will bring this fund back to a relation to total school operating expense similar to that which it occupied when the state was sparsely populated and little local taxation revenue was obtainable.

Funds provided by the state as a whole for the basic operation of its school system were then as necessary as they are now. The original primary fund had its inception in the income from state lands set apart for the purpose. Section 16 of every township became the property of the state and was set aside specifically for the use of schools, to contribute to educational aid in the entire state.

Throughout the years of the state's development, the growth of the primary fund has provided a necessary aid to the thousands of common schools of the state and has been an splendid monument to the foresight and educational zeal of its founders.

In spite of its own growth, however, the primary fund has been rapidly outstripped by the increasing demands for educational facilities. Increasing population and the manifold requirements of an industrial day have called for constantly better and more specialized school training.

Necessary funds for an adequate school program have been provided in the main by gradually stepping up the property tax until the situation of the present day, when the startling tax delinquency total has brought home conclusively the fact that no matter what stern economies are practiced, the state has outgrown its tax system. The limit was passed long ago and property will no longer bear the load of the most rigidly trimmed budgets.

The economic depression only precipitated what has been an unsound condition for several years, say students of the problem.

Wealth of State Changes.
At the time the property tax became the chief source of state revenue, the wealth of the state was centered largely in agriculture and timber. These leading industries of the time rightfully bore whatever additional tax was needed for school operation above that furnished by the primary fund.

In the present day, agriculture no longer furnishes the chief productive income of the state's inhabitants, and a more equitable means of taxation must be sought.

In the new plan it is pointed out that the aim has been to shift a fair share of the load to the productive industries of the present day, which in the final analysis are the chief beneficiaries, and are likewise the best able to bear it. Most of these sources of wealth are at the present time relatively untaxed.

Aim at Comprehensive Plan.

In recommending a greater measure of state aid, it is explained that the new plan neither seeks to relieve the school districts of their own share of operation costs, nor seeks any additional revenue. Local school budgets are still within the discretionary power of the districts.

The emphasis given in the new plan is the needed tax relief of the property owner, the shifting of this tax burden to a sales tax or some other general source, economy of operation, and a more comprehensive plan for equalizing educational costs by thoroughly revamping and safeguarding distributions of state aid.

Fifty Million Dollars Reduction.

The plan provides for a fifty million dollar reduction in the amount of taxes to be levied on property for public school support in 1933-34, as compared with the amount collected in 1930-31. (The amount collected from the general property tax in 1931 for public schools was approximately seventy-five million dollars. This plan anticipates only twenty-five million dollars in public school revenue from taxes on general property in 1933-34, with tax delinquencies deducted. In order for schools to operate on a minimum program, however, it will be necessary for the state to supply from some other source than the property tax a sum of approximately twenty-five million dollars. This in effect means an actual decrease in school costs of approximately twenty-five million dollars. It is expected that additional state aid of approximately seven million dollars will be available to schools through the annual distribution of the primary school interest fund.

Ten Per Cent For Equalization.

The twenty-five million dollars of new state aid would be divided into two funds to be known as the primary supplement fund and the equalization fund. In determining the amount to be set aside for the equalization fund, educators have followed the general trend established by the relationship of previous equalization funds to the primary school interest fund, or approximately ten per cent of the total. The equalization fund, then, would consist of one-tenth of the total of the two sums; namely, one-tenth of the primary school interest fund and one-tenth of the twenty-five million dollar supplementary fund. In other words, if the primary school interest fund is seventeen million dollars and additional state aid is twenty-five million dollars, the amount to be set aside for the equalization fund would be one-tenth of the total, or $4,200,000. The primary school interest fund is to be distributed as provided in the State Constitution; namely, to school districts of the state according to the school census (children between five and 20 years of age). The primary supplement fund also would be distributed on a census basis with limitations on a sliding scale to compensate for variation in school costs according to the size of the district. Districts receiving from the primary school interest fund enough money on which to operate a minimum program will not share further in state aid.

The equalization fund is to be apportioned to school districts which do not receive enough money to run the schools from both the primary school interest fund and the primary supplement fund. All school districts have to levy two mills on local property before sharing in the equalization fund. Tuition receipts also are deducted.

These are the basic principles involved in the plan. There are many details relating to limitation—payment of tuition, transportation of pupils, etc.—which do not affect the basic principles involved but pertain only to their applications.

Editorial

MOST people will agree that it is a duty as well as a privilege for the ordinary American citizen—man or woman—to take an active part in public affairs. Nowadays, not many will deny that a person should keep himself informed on matters of general importance to the whole people. Most persons admit that citizens should vote, serve on the jury, if called, and in other ways take an active part in the management of affairs in village, city, county, state and nation.

Because these things are true it is our belief that students in high school should get some training and actual practice in self-government. We believe it is fundamentally wrong and educationally unsound for the superintendent, principal or teachers to make and enforce all the rules and regulations governing a high school.

Hence throughout this school year we have tried in a variety of ways to develop some features of student self-government.

It is well known that nothing worth having is obtained without a struggle. So, the development in our students of the ability to manage some of their common affairs has not been smooth sailing. Some efforts have failed; others have succeeded only in part. Some students have been enthusiastic; others, skeptical or indifferent. It has not always been possible to get students to agree on matters of policy or procedure.

However, we believe that no matter how many projects may fail, no matter how many false starts may be made, no matter how many times a procedure must be changed, it is certain that we are on the right track—provided that we wish our children to be trained in self-government.

If we have had to abandon some methods of self-government in school, we are no different from our nation as a whole. Prohibition has been tried and found wanting. At least the feeling of the majority of people is as strong against the 18th Amendment as it was strong in its favor ten or twelve years ago. As a nation we often make mistakes, but not many people are willing to declare that democracy is a failure. Not many would enjoy seeing a king or dictator in the United States.

Just as our nation has passed through a process of gradual growth, so our high school student body will gradually develop the ability to regulate many of its own affairs. If everybody will sincerely co-operate, there is no more reason for iron-clad, teacher-made rules in high school than there is for putting a king or dictator on the throne in America.

Training in citizenship is everywhere recognized as one of the principal objectives in high school education. Many persons declare that this is the most important of all educational purposes. It is significant that the main topic to be taken up by the Schoolmaster's Club, which will meet in Ann Arbor during the last week in April, is "Training for Citizenship."

There seems little doubt that our students should be given actual practice in the management of their own affairs. Their success or failure depends mainly upon two things—first, their willingness to assume and carry responsibility on their own shoulders, and secondly, a sincere, genuine spirit of co-operation between students, parents and the community in general.

To students and adults we offer an earnest plea that you will exercise patience and perseverance in the effort to make our students into trained, practical citizens.

Children First — A Message To The Parents of Michigan

Prepared by the Michigan Congress of Parents and Teachers.

THE present emergency is a serious one. The times call for the most rigid economy in every field of governmental service. Budgets must be reduced and it is no longer primarily a question of what is desirable but rather a question of what the public can afford. But in making these reductions, future values and permanent effects must be carefully weighed. Parents cannot afford to meet the present emergency by putting too heavy a mortgage on their children's future. Some governmental services can be curtailed without permanent injury; impairment of a child's education, however, can never be restored. The child goes through school but once and lost opportunities now are lost opportunities forever. Crippling the schools through unwise retrenchment means an irreparable loss to childhood. Shall the budget be balanced at the expense of the children?

The lack of physical education or health instruction in the curriculum today may result tomorrow in adults who are physical burdens to themselves and to society.

The lack of training of handicapped children—physical, mental and moral—will destine them to barren, dependent lives.

The lack of vocational education means a rising generation unfitted for life and "dumped unprepared into the human scrap heap."

The lack of education in art and music and literature means a generation with no defense against the increasingly destructive lures of empty hours.

The lack of adequate high school opportunities will add thousands of children to hundreds of thousands of drifting youths, whose education in crime is a menace to society.

The lack of a sufficiently long school year spells added responsibility upon the community and increased juvenile delinquency on the streets of the city.

This call is directed to parents. Parents are numerous and wise enough and far-seeing enough to make potent and effective their demands. Legislators are listening to those who are vocal and who are willing to make themselves heard above the hysterical clamor of private interests.

Let the members of the Legislature from your district know that parents expect the schools, the libraries, the playgrounds to serve the children adequately through this crisis.

Become informed upon all phases of this educational situation. Become aggressive in protecting the children's future. Let legislators know that the parenthood of the state will follow through on matters of retrenchment; that the friends of childhood will support a sound and effective economy program. But let them know, too, that in this as in every other American problem, parents are building for the future—that in matters of education, protection and welfare, at whatever cost is necessary, parents will place and keep.

Physic the Bladder With

Juniper Oil

Drive out the impurities and excess acids that cause irritation, burning and frequent desire. Juniper oil is pleasant to take in the form of BUKETS, the bladder physio, also containing buchu leaves, etc. Works on the bladder similar to castor oil on the bowels. Get a 25c box from any drug store. After four days if not relieved of "getting up nights" go back and get your money. If you are bothered with backache or leg pains caused from bladder disorders you are bound to feel better after this cleansing and you get your regular sleep. J. V. 1932Sends Greetings To Friends In Chelsea

E. S. Prudden of Merrill, Mich., a former local resident, sends greetings to his Chelsea friends in a letter received this week by The Standard. The letter follows:

To my old neighbors and friends: I send greetings. There is no place that appeals to me like Chelsea. There are no people that appeal to me like the Chelsea people. The Great Bank says "love thy neighbor as thyself." When I say that I love my old neighbors and relatives of Chelsea as myself I very truly express my affection for them.

To the churches of Chelsea I feel very grateful, without regard to creed and to the church of which I was a member I feel more grateful. They always gave me good advice, which helps me to withstand the afflictions of old age. We are living in a fast age and if a person wants to be popular he doesn't want to give too much of the "goodly goodly" talk, but that makes no difference to me—I don't want to be misunderstood for I want everyone to know that I am on the Lord's side. He has helped me over the rough spots of life. If anyone doubts this I can only entreat them to come and taste and see.

I want to express this through the columns of this valuable paper. I mean this in every sense of the word. Before the paper comes I have great anticipation and after it comes I have greater participation of joy. It is like a letter from home.

Sincerely,
E. S. PRUDDEN.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—John Belknap, big timber operator, ordered by his physician to take a complete rest, plans a three-month trip abroad. Promises of advancement he has made to John John, just commencing in the business, are broken, for no apparent reason, and the young man is indignant. Paul Gorbelt, Belknap's partner, who John and other business associates of Belknap cordially dislike, is a source of contention. Father and son part without a complete understanding.

CHAPTER II.—At Shoostring, his father delayed by a wreck, John is ordered to leave at once. He refuses, and after a night fight, his attackers realize it is the son of the big timber operator. John learns his father is believed to be out to wreck the Richards lumber company. Belknap and John, leaving, he seeks employment with that company. At the office he finds Gorbelt, a young girl, and throws him out. Gorbelt does not recognize him. The girl is Ellen Richards, owner of the company. A letter he carries is John's name as John Steele, the Belknap being dropped inadvertently, and John, knowing the feeling against his father, allows Ellen to believe that is his name.

CHAPTER III.—Ellen engages John as her foreman. A series of underhand tricks designed to handicap the operations of the Richards company culminates in the deliberate wrecking of a locomotive drawing a snow plow.

CHAPTER IV.—After her father's wreck, the locomotive is sent back on the rails. John, admiring Ellen's bravery under the conditions, begins to have a sentimental attachment for the girl, which is returned.

CHAPTER V.—The Richards barn and stable burn in a fire. John, in the excitement, carries out the dead body of a stranger. He realizes the fire was started by a party to whom he owes money. Sheriff Bradshaw arrests him to get on the case.

CHAPTER VI.—John is satisfied that Gorbelt is the man who wrecked the locomotive. He is sure that Gorbelt is the man who wrecked the locomotive. He is sure that Gorbelt is the man who wrecked the locomotive.

CHAPTER VII.—Having evidence of Gorbelt's confession in the burning of the Richards stable, John, in the excitement, carries out the dead body of a stranger. He realizes the fire was started by a party to whom he owes money. Sheriff Bradshaw arrests him to get on the case.

CHAPTER VIII.—John, in the excitement, carries out the dead body of a stranger. He realizes the fire was started by a party to whom he owes money. Sheriff Bradshaw arrests him to get on the case.

ers," she said. "I'll have them take me out towards the Mad Woman. A day or two at Wolf's is what I need. I guess."

And so she went, a light pack sack and snowshoes, toward behind her, eager to be afoot and trudging the dozen miles that lay between the end of this road and the trapper's camp.

CHAPTER XI

A mad day for Paul Gorbelt was drawing to its close, with light snow falling outside.

He had changed to woollen clothing at noon, intending to drive to one of the camps. But fear held him in town, that fear which grew with the hours.

Dusk now, and the approach of evening time. He sat brooding, planning how he could see the country if light became necessary, turn between the fear of having to face a state's law if he remained and the fear of adding to suspicion if he left.

That suspicion might still be a flament of his own imagination, a product of conscience. He could not know.

A cruiser came in, dropping his pack in the highway. He had been to the northward for a fortnight, and Gorbelt appeared to listen while the man made a brief report of his activity and his findings.

"Didn't expect you back so soon," Paul said.

"Nor would I've made it but for finding old man Richards' cabin empty. Run on to him headed east with his outfit after wolves that are raiding the Caribou deer yard. I know he'd camp over there until he'd get the wolves or used up all his tricks, so I moved my stuff down into his camp. It was closer to those descriptions, you see. I didn't have to spend most of my time going from camp to timber."

The mill whistle blew then; in the back office chairs scraped and feet sounded.

"Another day," Gorbelt said. "Come in tomorrow and we'll go over this matter again."

The woodman left.

Smiling, a team pulled to a halt before the office, and the big man on the seat of the light sleigh kicked robes from about his feet and rose. Inside Gorbelt strained forward, tense, waiting.

Knuckles fell on the panel. Gorbelt wet his lips.

"Come in," he said, unsteadily.

The knob turned and Nat Bradshaw's big bulk showed in the gloom.

"Oh," he said, "You, Gorbelt?"

"Hullo," Gorbelt said, fighting for his self-control. "Hullo, Nat. Just leaving."

The sheriff did not advance but stood there, saying nothing, sliding his hands into his pants pockets, feet spread, back against that door.

ominously blocking figure.

"Then I'm just a figure," he said dryly. "I've come for you, Gorbelt."

"Yes," Gorbelt said, finally, "the word fell heavily."

No, faulced corner now. No trap made up of the fabric of guilty imaginings was closing on Paul Gorbelt. This was real.

"Why, why, what the devil are you driving at?" he demanded, rallying a show of bluster.

"Turn on your light and I'll read why."

Fox Film's "Cavalcade" Comes to the Majestic

Noel Coward Drama Heralded by Enthusiasm Not Equalled Since Inception of Talking Pictures.

Fox Film Corporation brings "Cavalcade" to the screen of the Majestic Theatre, Ann Arbor, on Saturday, April 15. This drama whose theme is the effect of world events on the home and family has been hailed as the greatest written in the English language in a score of years. The author, Noel Coward, known for his successes, enjoyed the distinction of having his play run for a solid year at the Drury Lane Theatre in London.

More than six months of preparation by a staff that numbered 200 preceded the actual start of production. Captain Reginald C. Berkeley, distinguished English playwright, was brought over from London to adapt the play for the screen. Frank Lloyd, twice winner of the Academy award for the best production of the year, was chosen as director.

The story of "Cavalcade" is the story of the Marryot family, Jane Marryot, their two sons, Joe and Edward, and their daughter, Fanny.

While it is etched on a background of historical events of the last 33 years, the story itself is the principal feature of "Cavalcade." The family—its joys, loves and tragedies—is always uppermost. Its theme is universal.

Diana Wynyard and Clive Brook have the roles of Jane and Robert Marryot; Ursula Joans plays Fanny Bridges; Herbert Mundin is seen as Bridges; Una O'Connor portrays the role of Ellen; Irene Browne plays Margaret Harris; Merle Tottenham is seen as Annie; Frank Lawton as Joe Marryot; and John Warburton as Edward Marryot.

Other well known players who have important roles are Margaret Lindsay, Dorey Mercer, Tempe Pigott, Billy Bevan, Frank Atkinson, Lionel Belmore, Mary Forbes and Brandon Hurst. Important child roles are acted by Dick Henderson, Jr., Douglas Scott, Bonita Grapville and Sheila MacGill.

It Tastes Better!

Everything tastes better, too. There was a man in Wisconsin who had the reputation of being the worst grouch in that part of the country. Someone sold him an electric range. He never did say anything about it to his friends, which made them more and more curious to hear why he let it stay in the house. They knew he must like it, otherwise he would have been finding plenty to say against it. Finally one of them asked him.

"What do you like about that new electric range, Jim?"

"Aw, everything tastes better," was the growled reply.

Even the chronic grouch admitted that food tastes better when cooked on an electric range. And, of course, the reason that electrically cooked food does taste better is because the natural flavors, as well as food values, are retained!
