Team Is Selected To Oppose Trojans In Friday's Game

Chelsea's All-Star team, selected by popular ballot during the past week, will play the champion Trojans in a big game at Holmes field on Friday evening of this week.

Players selected by ballot to oppose the Trojans in this classic event are:

First base—Ted Hoelschwerdt and James Munro; tie vote.

Second base—A. Kaesher.

Third base—Geo. (Red) Myers.

Shortstop—A. Zinke.

Center field—Tom Alexander.

Right field—Chet Miller.

Catchers—Pete Crocker and Carl Schneider.

Pitchers—Ed. Miller, Geo. Hart, Paul Harbour, Claire Rowe.

Manager—Roy Harris.

Umpires—Saxon and Dumouchel.

The game will start promptly at 8:15 so that seven innings can be played before dark. An ultra-special feature of the event will be a collection which will be asked of fans who enjoy this favorite sport which has furnished free entertainment during the season. The money secured from this collection will be used to build a new backstop before the opening of next year's baseball season and for incidental expenses which must be paid by the league.

Final standings of the six teams entered in the league this season are as follows:

Teams	Won	Lost	Pct.
Trojans	11	4	.733
Harpons	8	7	.533
St. Paul's	7	8	.467
Spauldings	7	8	.467
Congregationals	7	8	.467
Federals	6	10	.333

Results of the last two games played:

Thursday—Spauldings 3, Congregationals 1.

Friday—Congregationals 8, Federals 6.

Last year's champions, the American Legion team, have challenged the Trojans to a game which will be played at Holmes field next Tuesday evening. It is expected this game will close the local baseball season.

In a game played at Holmes field Tuesday evening between the Highway Laboratory team of Ann Arbor and a combination of the Federal Scow and All-Stars, the former won by a score of 6 to 5.

Local Stores To Close Wednesday Evenings

According to information received by The Standard on Wednesday from business men who have made a canvass of practically all of the stores in Chelsea, closing time of merchants will be at 6 o'clock on Wednesday evenings, beginning next week.

It is also reported that the majority of merchants favor closing at 9:30 Saturday evenings. This decision is not definite but it is expected this hour will be agreed to this week.

Shortening of store hours is deemed advisable by the merchants in view of the fact that hours of employment must be reduced in accordance with President Roosevelt's National Recovery program.

BAND CONCERT

The third concert of the season to be presented by the American Legion Junior Band will be given next Wednesday evening, beginning at 8:00 o'clock. Following is the program:

Success March—Bennett.
Headway March—Bennett.
Idle Fancy (Serenade)—Bennett.
Advance March—Bennett.
Service, Two-Step—Bennett.
Annette, Waltz—Bennett.
Courage March—Bennett.

At Evening Time, Serenade—Jewell.

American Boy March—Walls.

Gov. Comstock Lauded By Democratic Leaders

Washtenaw county Democrats and friends to the number of 500 gathered Saturday afternoon for their county-wide rally and picnic at Whitmore Lake.

William L. Walz, county chairman, presided for the afternoon program and the speakers included George J. Burke of Ann Arbor, Horatio J. Abbott, newly appointed internal revenue official, Congressman John C. Lehr, of Monroe, O. K. Fjeldland, secretary to Gov. William A. Comstock, Dr. Paul Voelker, new superintendent of public instruction, and Mrs. James H. McDonald, president of the Women's Democratic club of Washtenaw county.

Mr. Burke strongly defended Gov. Comstock and his administration, while the governor's secretary briefly discussed the sales tax, maintaining that citizens should be willing to pay the 3 per cent tax on certain articles to feed the hungry and provide education for the school children.

Congressman Lehr discussed briefly the problems confronting the administration, commending President Roosevelt's leadership in the financial crisis, his devotion to duty, and his change of the prevailing spirit from fear to confidence. Dr. Voelker dealt with the plight of education in Michigan, statistically outlining the situation, and Mr. Abbott, who followed on the program, pointed to the increase in the selling price of farm products as indication of better times for the farmer.

A basket supper followed the program, after which games were enjoyed. Music for the occasion was furnished by Mercer's band and Benson's musical trio, and John Hoey of Dexter rendered two solos: "Can't You Hear Me Calling, Caroline?" and "Happy Days are Here Again." He was accompanied by Mrs. John C. Thompson of Dexter.

NRA Honor List

Information supplied by H. D. Witherell, local postmaster, gives the list of business places in Chelsea and vicinity who have signed certificates of compliance with the President's Reemployment agreement, which entitles them to display the NRA emblem. Many others are prepared to sign the agreement when the code for their respective business or industry is approved by the administrator of the Act. When further signatures are received the names will be supplied by the postmaster for publication.

The list to date is as follows:

Chelsea Milling Co., The Chelsea Standard, Elmer E. Winans, Standard Oil Co., Chelsea Foundry & Manufacturing Co., Methodist Old People's Home, Herbert E. Snyder, Schneider & Kusterer, Herbert L. Paul, Dillon & Tuttle, Clarence W. Maroney, Central Fibre Products Co., Chevrolet Sales & Service, J. W. Van Riper, Walworth & Steiner, E. J. Claiborne, H. Bruce Plankell, Louis J. Paul, H. B. Murphy, J. E. McKune, Hindler Bros., Armstrong & Armstrong, Harper Sales & Service, Henry H. Fenn, W. F. Schenk & Co., Dixie Service Station, Walter Kattienhoe, Chelsea Hardware Co., Farmers & Merchants Bank, Lewis Feed Mill, Adolph M. Seitz, Chelsea Ice Co., Alexander Griffin, Willow Inn, Lloyd Lantis, Sinclair Refining Co., Economy Shoe Repairing, Brown & Lowe, George W. Beckwith, Grant Schooley, Alex. C. Fisher, Thomas G. Wood, William M. John, Loeffler & Son, J. Vincent Burg.

BIDS FOR CEMENT PLANT

Seven bids were received by the State Administrative Board when the Chelsea state-owned cement plant was put on the auction block Tuesday of this week.

The highest bid was made by D. L. Spickler of Detroit, whose offer was $70,000 for the land and equipment. Members of the board are considering the bid and it is said they may re-advertise the plant in an effort to receive better offers.

GIRL SCOUT MEETING

The Girl Scouts will meet next Monday, August 21, at 6:00 p. m. at the home of Jean Dancer for a hiking party and picnic lunch at the home of Lorain Weatherwax.

All girls interested in scout work are invited and are requested to bring dishes, sandwiches for selves, and a pot luck dish for the picnic lunch.

ICE CREAM SOCIAL

The Ladies' Guild of the Congregational church will have a social at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leigh Laick of Lima on Thursday, August 17, beginning at 6 o'clock. Ice cream, cake, frankfurters, rolls and coffee will be served. Everyone invited.

Budget Savings Are Lost In Tangle Of Overdrafts

By V. J. Brown

Now that the matter of "political payrolls" has again been disposed of, at least for the present, suppose the attention of the reader be turned for the moment to a consideration of the 1933-34 budget and the special appropriations as finally adopted by the legislature and approved by the governor. Considerable confusion appears to exist in the minds of the citizens of this state as to just what occurred to require more money to be raised by the state than ever before.

For the purpose of this discussion let round numbers be employed for the sake of a better understanding. Also for the purpose of a better understanding let the items be divided into groups in order that appropriate and correct comparisons may be made. The reader is cautioned to remember that two new fields of state spending were created by the 1933 legislature, both of these functions having been heretofore entirely supported by local taxes on local property. These two new purposes demand the raising of $27,000,000 not heretofore included in state tax or other state revenues. They are: Emergency welfare aid, $12,000,000; state aid to local school districts, $15,000,000.

$27,000,000 Replacement

It should be borne in mind also that in the event no more money is expended on these purposes, then every penny provided by the state from the sales tax is a direct replacement of an equal amount which otherwise would have been provided by a tax upon property assessed and levied by local assessors. On the contrary, to the extent that the state spends more money in these respects than would have been spent if left in the hands of local authorities, just to that extent are the taxpayers of the state in general penalized.

The current purpose budget covering state departments, institutions, colleges and the university adopted by the 1931 legislature amounted to approximately $29,000,000, all of this sum being provided by a state tax levied against the properties of the state. The 1933 legislature for these same purposes appropriated $19,000,000 but was forced to add to this sum to make up for deficiencies in the revenue.

Letter Says Farmers Don't Get 'Square Deal'

J. E. McKune, village president, is in receipt of a letter from a rural resident who objects to the fact that so many local residents park their cars on the streets on band concert nights that the country people are compelled to park blocks away from the center of activities.

The complaint states that many of the village residents drive their cars down town in the afternoon, walk home and then come back in the evening to hear the concert. The writer also states that when the farmers park their cars on side streets that many groceries are stolen.

The letter suggests that Mr. McKune present the facts of the case to the council and that a parking limit be placed in effect in Chelsea as is done in cities. In answer to this suggestion, Mr. McKune states that to limit parking time would necessitate employing a full-time police officer to enforce the law and this would be an impossibility under present economic conditions.

However, the case is well presented by this rural resident. Too many merchants and village residents forget the courtesy which is due rural residents who make Chelsea their shopping center. These customers are loyal to the village and should be entitled to equal parking privileges.

There is no law to remedy the condition—the decision must be made by each individual who has not displayed the proper spirit of cooperation with rural residents—let your conscience be your guide!

OSLER SPEAKS HERE

R. S. Osler, county agricultural agent, addressed the local Kiwanis club at their regular meeting Monday evening. Mr. Osler explained the wheat acreage reduction plan which is a method being employed by the federal government in an effort to stabilize the price of wheat, or to bring the purchasing power of a bushel of wheat to the 1909-1914 level. Meetings will be held in each community to explain the proposition to wheat-growing farmers before they are asked to sign the agreements.

ICE CREAM SOCIAL

The Ladies' Aid of the Sharon Community church will hold an ice cream social at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Haelschwerdt on Friday evening, August 18. Hot coffee, rolls and frankfurters will also be served.

ences of the previous two-year period which amounted to approximately $10,700,000. These deficiencies were the direct result of two causes, namely failure to appropriate sufficient funds to meet actual demands and inability of the taxpayers to pay the taxes levied for state purposes. A slump in miscellaneous revenues also had its part in the creation of this deficit.

Therefore, without any new spending of any kind any possible savings made by the economies written into the 1933-35 budget were wiped out by reason of the deficits created during the previous two-year period. Had there been no new taxes created and had there been no allocation of funds back to the counties and municipalities and schools as contemplated under the welfare and school aid bills, the state tax for 1933 would of necessity have been just about as it stood in 1931 except that the legislature in making its appropriations for 1933 to 1935 made an honest effort to avoid a repetition of deficit creating fiscal policy. In other words had the state continued to have operated on a property tax basis, and had the tax levy for 1933 been in the same amount as in 1931 and if all had been collected, Michigan would just about have climbed out of the red ink mire in which she has wallowed during the past several months.

Property Tax Broken Down. However the property tax system had broken down. The people of the state were virtually upon a taxpayers' strike. They had adopted a constitutional amendment to the effect that not to exceed 15 mills of tax could be levied against the assessed value of any property. Something had to be done. Not only was it necessary to create new revenues for state purposes, it was also deemed necessary to provide state money to help out local units of government in the relief of the destitute unemployed. Many local school districts also found it impossible to operate their public schools within the 15-mill tax limitation, and state aid seemed unavoidable.

After months of discussion and debate and conflict of interest the straight three per cent retail sales tax was decided upon. This tax was estimated to yield about $32,000,000 annually. When all the demands upon the state treasury had been computed and all revenues from sources other than the sales tax had been estimated, it was found that not sufficient money was in sight to wipe out all the state property tax as the governor hoped. Consequently $3,500,000 was levied for the partial support of the university and Michigan State College, eight-tenths of a mill having been reserved by the state for just this possible emergency. This left then $16,000,000 as the possible revenues to be depended upon from mill tax, corporation taxes, insurance and other taxes, beer revenue, and the receipt of delinquent taxes levied for previous years, the latter being estimated at $2,000,000. This $16,000,000 deducted from the total budget which, including deficiencies amounted to $29,700,000, left $13,100,000 to come from the revenues to be derived from the retail sales tax.

Cost of administration of the sales tax must be calculated and possible leakages in collection estimated, this bringing the probable revenues from the bill as drawn and then intended to be administered down to around $28,000,000 for the first year, possibly less. Adding the $13,100,000 to the $12,000,000 demanded for welfare and insisted upon by the federal authorities before a cent of federal aid would be promised made a total of more than $28,000,000 to come from the sales tax revenues before anything could be made available for public school aid. The sales tax must yield more than $40,000,000 in order to assure the schools their full share of state aid as provided in the Sias-Thatcher act.

To Sum Up

To sum-up, the 1933 state budget for actual current necessities amounts to $19,000,000 annually. Deficits which must be covered within the next year amount to $10,000,000, a total of $29,000,000 if the state was operated as under the old regime and no money was provided for diversion to local municipal units for school and welfare aid. With these two new demands included, the budget immediately jumps to $66,000,000 to which must also be added to get the grand total a sum no one as yet dares to estimate which will be required to administer the beer act, the sales tax and other new state ventures.

It is no wonder there is confusion of mind in respect to the budget and new taxes and deficits and new spending. "It is as clear as mud," one member was heard to remark to the director of the budget after a lengthy discussion and an attempted explanation.

The Administration Measure

The original administration bill providing for a gross sales and gross income tax was intended to yield from $45,000,000 to $60,000,000. The sum of $31,000,000 was expected from a three per cent sales tax upon the purchase of necessities by the public; $7,500,000 from a three per cent tax on personal services of doctors, lawyers, dentists, repairmen, plumbers, blacksmiths, cobblers, carpenters, painters, and every other individual in the state who holds himself out for service other than one who draws a salary; $5,500,000 from a three-tenths of one per cent tax on manufactured products.

Imagine the great corporate industrial interests of the state having their state tax wiped away and their local taxes cut in the middle and more by the 15-mill limitation and then being taxed to the tune of only $5,500,000 under the proposed 3-10 of one per cent tax while the individual who bends over his bench to resole worn shoes, the motor mechanic who crawls around in the smear and grease and their co-laborers in other fields dig into their meager earnings for $7,500,000. The legislature rejected the manufacturers' tax, not in response to the lobby as charged but because the members could not see the equity of such a tax and so agreed to leave them out along with the garage mechanic and the washer-repair man until a better plan can be worked out.

Facts Sought

Right now facts are being gathered from every industrial center to determine just how much the industries of Michigan have been benefitted from the elimination of the state property tax and from a compulsory reduction in local taxation under the 15 mill limits. From early returns from this survey, it is already apparent that no three-tenths of one per cent is going to balance this saving.

Another fact which bothered those who sought to produce an adequate and equitable taxation measure is the mandate of the state constitution which leaves out of the picture entirely the salaried person and also the restrictions which prohibit the legislature from levying a collectable tax against intangibles such as stocks, bonds and mortgages as well as against tangible personal properties and similar evidences of wealth now entirely off the tax rolls. Still another forbidden field for tax revision is the income tax. An attempt to submit the revision of the constitution in this respect passed the house early in the session. It languished in the hands of a senate committee until too late for submission at the 1933 April election and then was dragged out and killed. Unless submitted by initiative petitions it cannot again be submitted before the general elections of 1935.

Limitations Must Yield

Under existing constitutional limitations the legislature is stopped from touching the salaried person. A person may be engaged in business for himself, say he is operating a service station and garage. Suppose he employs five helpers. Under the Southworth bill he would have been taxed on his gross receipts of say $10,000 for the year. His neighbor working for a corporation on a salary of $10,000, would have paid nothing except a three per cent tax on his purchases which would apply also to the garage owner.

A $10,000 professor would pay nothing but the dentist who graduated under him and practiced his profession would pay on his gross receipts even though his rent and supplies would have taken most of his income.

People Demand Services

Another point which should be remembered in connection with state expense and state taxes, whether property or sales or any other form of tax, is the fact that while the demand for retirement of the taxing power continues, there is no cessation in the demand for new and added ways of spending. In this the people themselves take the lead. There was not a single effort made to cut a payroll, reduce the number of employees, or tone down a state service, which did not meet violent opposition. And in addition to these there came the demand for state aid for garages in sums as high as $50,000,000 as urged by some, and the demand for state support of the unemployed which many would have tilted to twice the $12,000,000 finally made available.

Indeed the people have not yet learned that whatever government provides, the people must in turn provide the government. Government is an everlasting pauper. It has nothing and can have nothing except it takes it away from the avails of private endeavor, in the form of taxes or licenses or privileges or some other form of tribute.

Relief Yet Unknown

Such is the situation regarding the regular budget and the new functions taken over to be supported by the state and which heretofore have been supported locally from taxes imposed upon the lands and structures of the folks back home. Until the property owner has his 1933 tax bill he will not know to what extent he has been relieved. In many counties and in many townships and school districts his relief will be substantial. In other localities where local public officials have ignored their responsibilities to the taxpayer, he will find himself burdened almost to the point he labored under before he was forced to pay a tax on all his purchases.

The reader is cautioned again to consider the fact the current expense for running the state government was reduced by approximately one-third but the balancing of the budget came too late for the taxpayer to receive immediate and equal relief. There is a big hole called the general fund deficit which must be filled from current revenues and that puts the demands upon general fund revenues back to 1931 figures. In making comparisons with former totals for state purposes, the comparison should stop right at this point. The remaining $27,000,000 is a direct replacement of the local property tax from funds raised by the state and paid out for municipal units.

WEEKLY NEWS BULLETIN

Frank D. Fitzgerald
Secretary of State

Lansing, Mich.—An intensive study of the entire subject of highway finance is to be made by the legislative council before the next session of the legislature. This was decided upon by the council sub-committee on finance which met in Lansing, August 17.

This study will include the weight and gasoline taxes, the township and county highway laws and the various laws which divert highway funds to local governmental units.

One of the recommendations to be considered by the council and which may be submitted to the special session of the legislature early next year, is the proposal of Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald that license plate costs be reduced to three, six and nine dollars depending upon the weight of the automobile. This recommendation has met with popular approval in all parts of the state.

Taxation upon motor vehicles, Mr. Fitzgerald pointed out, has now reached the point where it is more nearly confiscation. In buying an automobile, the purchaser pays a federal excise tax in addition to a proportionate share of the federal income tax; and then pays the three per cent state sales tax. The weight tax, which was originally intended to furnish funds for state highway construction, must be paid yearly by the motorist. Federal and state gasoline taxes, in addition to the state sales tax, bring the total levy upon each gallon of gasoline to four and three-quarters cents.

The Michigan old age pension law is not "workable" in its present form, according to Welfare Director Wm. S. Carpenter, and he intends to study old age pension laws in other states before the next session of the legislature.

Because of conflicting provisions of the law, old age pensions will not start on October 16, the date upon which the law becomes effective. The law makes no provision for collection of funds through the imposition of a head tax of $2 per person until next March.

Mr. Carpenter estimates that the present law would cost the State of Michigan $60,194,000 a year while total revenue under the head tax would be approximately $5,587,000.

WAYNE.—While a temporary main was laid to Inkster last week to guard against a threatened shortage of water at Wayne, heavy rain the latter part of the week would have obviated the necessity of laying the emergency main could the rainfall have been foreseen. The main, however, will be maintained for six weeks or two months in view of the possibility that the amount of water available from the local source, the River Rouge, may still prove inadequate during the course of the summer. Truth About Prices Will Be Published

Consumers of farm products are to be furnished, in the near future, with weekly reports from the Government on the reasons for any commodity price increases, and with information on who is getting the additional money, according to the economics department of Michigan State College.

Field workers of the United States Department of Labor and the United States Department of Agriculture are to gather and report price figures, while the Washington agencies tabulate and analyze them, Dr. Frederic C. Howe, consumers' counsel for the Agricultural Administration, has announced. Doctor Howe intends to release the information on prices through the press, radio, and special reports to groups and individuals.

The field staffs of the two departments will gather retail prices on wheat, milk, meat, and other foods, in cities and from more than 1,000 stores. In the department offices at Washington the prices will be checked and the portion that the farmer is receiving for raw materials will be determined.

The reports will also cover any price increases resulting from the payment of higher wages and new employment, and will include any changes in prices of manufactured or other commodities that farmers buy. The latter item will provide an index of the buying power of the farmer.

"Farmers have too long been getting a small return for their labor in feeding us," Doctor Howe declared. "We are trying to increase their pay. At the same time we are going to do what we can to see that the consumers are protected at a time when the Administration is trying to pull farmers and workers out of what President Roosevelt has called the 'economic hell' they have been living in for four years."

"Many manufacturers and distributors have declared their readiness to play fairly and squarely with the Administration in its efforts, while consumers are beginning to organize to ensure fair dealing. In scores of cities in the last couple of weeks, Consumers' Councils have been formed, in many instances at the suggestion of mayors. They are non-political and reflect consumers' interests. With these representative groups we will cooperate to the utmost."

THE HEART OF LOVE— THE HELPING HAND

By Arthur Carlton

How many have come—How many have gone Since those happy days in life's sun- ny-morn, When a heart that was loving, a hand that was strong, Clasped ours in His, while we tod- dled along Over the cobblestones under our feet, Lifting us over rough places, and steep;

'Twas always the same, no fear thought would start, With our hand in His, be it daylight or dark.

Many years have been added to cal- endar's page, Passing swiftly the milestones from youth to old age; How gladly we turn back the pages of time, Reading there of that heart, and the hand that was kind.

How we cherish the memory of those precious days, Covet power to write, or speak to the praise Of the Father-God gave us the day we were born, In the little brown cottage that Oc- tober Morn.

The days—Oh! how swiftly time rushes them by, Every footpath is strewn with some sorrow, or sigh; Are we leaving a fragrance of some perfume sweet, Are our hearts and our hands lifting those whom we meet?

Some flowers we gather, where others have sown, May we not sow for those who may fall, as we on? And thus may we pray to our Saviour above, That we all Love to Live, that we all Live to Love.

Question And Answer Dept.

Ques.—I am curious to know why they named the World's Fair "Century of Progress." Answer, please, soon as you can, to settle a dispute.

Ans.—Century of Progress at Chicago this year was so called because it marks the 100th anniversary of the founding of Chicago, which was "born" in 1833.

Ques.—Why are some people so hoggish as to own more than one automobile?

Ans.—That's simple. They couldn't put all their accessories on one car.

Ques.—To settle an argument, will you please state whether Mary Queen of Scots was born on Sunday or Monday? Thank you.

Ans.—Mary Queen of Scots was born on Dec. 7, 1542. This date was on Tuesday.

Ques.—Why is it that people vary in size—some large and tall, others small and short?

Ans.—The various sizes of people is caused by the pituitary gland—a little organ no larger than a pea. This gland is located on the floor of the skull just below the brain. When it is very active, it produces a large, tall person according to the degree of its activity. When its activity is the reverse, then stunted and dwarfed people is the result.

Ques.—Will you please answer what is meant by "biennial," when it is applied to crops?

Ans.—A biennial crop is one that is planted one year and harvested the next.

Ques.—Is a person dead the instant the heart stops beating?

Ans.—No. But when the heart stops beating, one loses consciousness almost immediately. The brain is very sensitive to the least lack of oxygen. As soon as the heart stops and the supply of fresh blood no longer flows to the head, the brain stops work and a person becomes unconscious. If the heart starts up again within a few minutes, they will usually be all right. Gradually, however, the lack of oxy- gen causes chemical changes in the brain which cannot be repaired. When that happens, they are dead.

Ques.—What would happen when an immovable force meets an irresist- ible object?

Ans.—This is a mooted question, and a very foolish one. Presuming you are asking it in good-faith, we will say that there is no such a thing as an "immovable force meeting an irresistible object." They contradict each other.

Ques.—Has perpetual motion ever been discovered or is it a possibility as yet undiscovered?

Ans.—No. Perpetual motion must have absolutely no friction, no air resistance or any other kind of resist- ance. No such machine has ever been made. Even if it could be made, you would not be able to get power from it. Any attempt to do so would stop it.

Ques.—Once you said that "sound was vibration in the air." Then why does not the waving of your arms produce sound?

Ans.—Because you cannot wave them fast enough. We cannot hear sound unless it has at least forty vi- brations per second—that is, there must be at least that many separate sound waves following each other in each second. It is impossible for you to wave your arms that fast, but a bee can wave its wings back and forth faster than that. Therefore it pro- duces the sound you can hear.

Ques.—Is there any cure for can- cer?

Ans.—None that we know of. How- ever, scientists are pinning their faith to the efficacy of radium. Radium will kill some kind of germs, and they claim it will kill the cancer germ.

The work, however, is still experimen- tal, and they are not yet sure just how valuable the radium treatment will prove to be.

Ques.—Can you tell me how I can remove a scorch and a stain from a garment?

Ans.—Giving recipes is a little out of our line, but we are informed the following is very good: Moisten a piece of cheesecloth or a clean hand- kerchief (white) with peroxide of oxygen, then with a hot iron press over the stain or scorch. You should not use this method on anything that is not white or fast in color, as it will take the "run" color out of garments as quickly as it will stains and scorches.

STOCKBRIDGE—Stockbridge, Gre- gory, Munith and Unadilla have fixed their store hours from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. on Monday, Wednesday and Fri- day, from 8 a. m. to 10 p. m. on Tues- day and Saturday, and on Thursday the stores close at 1 p. m.—Brief-Sun.

PERFORMANCE
Thrill!

Certainly, you've already admired the new Oldsmobiles—for almost everyone has. And you rightly expect their distinctive style to be matched by equally outstanding perform- ance. But—until you sit in the driver's seat—you'll never know how far Oldsmobile's behavior exceeds your every expectation. Owners continually insist that Oldsmobile's performance simply cannot be duplicated—at anything near Oldsmobile's price. You have a standing invitation to make your own test of an Oldsmobile . . . at any time you like. We warn you, though, that once you drive an Oldsmobile, other cars will probably seem less interesting. You will find, beneath that jaunty exterior, an engine of exceptional qualities. Speeds of 75 to 85 miles an hour. Smoothness almost beyond belief. Quietness of operation that is unexcelled in any car. In fact, you can choose your speed . . . maintain it all day . . . and enjoy every mile of the trip. And—don't forget—no other car combines with such performance, the acknowl- edged Style supremacy that Oldsmobile has won. Come in today for a demonstration.

FORLORN ISLAND

W. N. U. SERVICE

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—With his yacht, the Intrepid, practically abandoned by its crew, Felix Horton, millionaire, sailing with his mother, his daughter Nan, and Roy Stuart, puts into Squaw Harbor, Alaska, to recruit a new crew. Fully aware of the fact that the Intrepid is a hulk, he engages a bunch of non-descript characters there. A gigantic Polar bear, called Eric, is a hairy, dumb, is their leader. At the request of Captain Waymire, the Intrepid's skipper, on the next day, Eric engages to sail as chief officer.

CHAPTER II.—Horton is seeking uncharted islands of which he has heard. Waymire and Eric look on the voyage as a wild goose chase. Nan, attracted by Eric's strength and his ruggedness in a moonlight situation, which brings them both to the threshold of interest in each other, if not of love.

CHAPTER III.—The Intrepid is attacked by a pack of wolves. Eric, looking on the wolves as a wild goose chase, Nan, attracted by Eric's strength and his ruggedness in a moonlight situation, which brings them both to the threshold of interest in each other, if not of love.

CHAPTER IV.—About Indians help the party ashore. From one of them, "Chequaco," speaking a little English, Eric learns there is no communication with the outside world. Eric, priestess of the island, descended from a white man in the remotest part, also knowing English, welcomes the castaways. Sandmar, backed by his crew, declares there shall be no law here. He is the only one who can decide the only gun, coveys them for the time, declaring he is the law.

Eric turned quickly, he could not wear the mask much longer. "Fido!" It was his own private devil. For pride's sake he had cast away the most fair and sturdiest hope that had ever touched his heart.

That night he built a barricade for Nan's refuge, and moved an old long squaw so he could have a small hut to himself. It was centrally located, and by knocking out a block of turf, he made a window to hear Nan's or Horton's softest call. The cabin door was of a ship's hull, cast up by the sea long ago, and its bolt of stone could not be forced without giving an alarm. Here he, too, could sleep secure from a surprise attack.

Tired from the day's toil, Sandmar's gang went to their hut at sundown. Though they might plot and threaten, they would make no trouble tonight.

He awakened with a heavy heart just before dawn. What if he did win this island war with the elemental powers? For the others—life, freedom, the pursuit of happiness; for him, what gain? Only a succession of other wars with wave, storm, and crew—continued bondage to his position—the search for the distant light-house that ever fueled his spirit. Love? He had denied it. No girl like Nan would ever cross his trail again; she was the one girl whose steel could strike fire from the flint of his soul, whose greatness called to his own greatness since the dawn of time, and he had been afraid to fight for her!

It must be that his Viking blood had paid in his veins, that the high place in the world he had wished to win was a fool's dream; otherwise he would have his way to Vallhalla for a mate like Nan!

Suddenly he was called from his thoughts by a subdued sound outside his window. Save for the stillness of the hour he would never have caught it, and there was no earthly reason why his heart should fling against his side. But there was an unearthly reason. In the deep of his sailor's soul he knew that this was destiny. All was not lost—he was to be given another chance.

A thin white figure stole by his hut and vanished in the dusk of the creek bank.

Slipping on his parka and mukluks, Eric quietly followed, but he was within fifty yards of the stream before he saw the ghost again. It looked almost too bulky for a river spirit, but presently it melted into a shadow, all animate shape, and then seemed to separate into two entities. One of these, and Eric knew it was a disarmed parka, fell and collapsed on the ground, and the other stood for a few brief, breathless seconds in silhouette against the dark water.

Eric did not turn and creep away. By Thor and Woden, such folly was behind him! He waited, breathless, his presence unguessed, and a soft voice came stealing through the dark. It was Nan's, and she was addressing pagan gods. "I am not asleep," she said bravely, as the icy flood almost took her breath. "I am not dead. I am alive."

A moment later she had slipped on her warm fur parka and was hurrying back to the turquoise. She did not see Eric till she was almost upon him, then she flung back with a gasp. He did not speak, but she recognized him instantly.

"Spying!" she whispered, bitterly. "Yes, and glad of it." "I thought at least you were a gentleman."

"I didn't come any nearer than this," although I wanted to. I don't ask you to forgive me—I'd do it again. But I do want your forgiveness for the lie I told you today."

"What lie? I'm cold, you can tell me in the morning."

"I want to tell you now. It was the bluest, bluest lie of my life. I said that I didn't mean my declaration to Sandmar. I did mean it from the bottom of my heart. I am in the field. I want you for my own."

Nan stood very still. Her eyes were long black shadows in the white blur of her face, but he could not guess their message. "If it was a lie, what it said today, I'm glad you took it back," she told him quietly, at last. "I think you are a gentleman—after all."

"And you are, loveliest, the bravest girl I've ever known. I knew it when I saw you by the salmon pool—but I tried to dismiss you as unattainable. But I'm going to fight for you now. I'm going to try to win you away from Roy. You are my wife—and if I lose you, I lose the world."

Nan gazed long and dreamily across the water to the glimmer of dawn. A child's sweet look was on her lifted face. "I'm glad you want me," she told Eric at last. "It almost makes me think that there is something to me after all—not just a spotted young hellion—but Eric, it will be a hard row. The odds are all against you, you see that. This island adventure is only an interlude in our lives. Some day we'll go back, and you must stay by the sea and the snow. Besides, you're competing against a dominant man, a man who always takes what he wants, and who's got a head start."

Eric's heart only leaped the stronger. "But you are mine for the winning!"

"For the winning, yes. I take back what I told you today, there's no insurmountable barrier. I'm going to win you, Eric. I'm not cold any more, but I'll see you in daylight."

"It's daylight now," Eric's low voice had a timbre she had never heard. He looked out to the grim mountains, just emerging from the dark. "It's the most beautiful summer day I ever saw."

She smiled, and stole away. Excited, Eric walked down the beach, the seaweed in his hair, the shimmer of a new dawn in his eyes.

In the next day's toil, Eric had cause to remember Nan's expressions of Roy. This deep thinking eye was no fish out of water, but a power to be reckoned with, a dangerous rival for Eric's leadership. He had found his bearings and was easily settling out to master his environment. If he were so strong here, how could Eric compete with him on his own ground?

He had called Eric's attention to a black box behind the bluffs. "It's a low grade of parka," he said. "I've seen the like in Iceland. Get the men to cut that square and set 'em out to drain. In a few weeks we'll have a new fuel and can divert considerable quantities of animal fat into the indoors."

Eric rejoiced, without a trace of jealousy. This might spell the difference between plenty and famine, in the grim months to come. But the rift between the leaders remained unbridged.

As they were helping the hunters complete their fish trap, ready for the salmon run, Roy proposed that it be extended so that it cover the channel. "Then we'll get every fish that comes up. As it is, at least a fourth will get by."

"We've got to move enough for breeding stock," Eric answered. "Salmon come back to the stream where they spawn. If we catch them all, four years from now there won't be a fish to be seen."

It was another clash of viewpoints. "Do you expect to be here four years from now? Thank God, I don't! Let's take the cash and let the credit go."

But Eric stood by his guns. "It's not our island. We're invaders, but we're not Huts, to destroy as we go. Moreover, it's only too possible that we may be standing on this very bank not only four, but ten years from now, waiting for the salmon run, and we don't want it to fail!" He turned to Cheolamo, his half-breed. "Tell the men to build the trap as usual."

"I don't understand your point of view," Roy said. "Surely you aren't trying to pander to the natives?"

"I was pandering only to my sense of right and wrong," was the grave answer. "That may seem laughable to you, but it's a fact. And it's true I'm trying not to antagonize the natives any more than I can help."

"You're already antagonized 'em. Certainly you don't imagine that they've taken kindly to this little monarchy you've set up. They'll rise against you, against your friends, too, the first chance they get. If Sandmar uses his head—and you know he has a good one—he can lead them in a revolt that will sweep us all into the sea. The only sensible thing now is to go the whole hog, rule 'em with an iron hand, regard the island not as their property but ours, and make it so tough for them that they'll gladly break their taboo to help us find our way back to civilization."

"Roy went on. 'We'll let that go for now. But there's another matter we won't let go. I refer to what you told Sandmar the first night on the island.'"

Eric turned gravely. "That I wanted one of the girls?"

"Yes. I thought at first you must refer to Marie, or that possibly it was just part of your bluff. Since then I've noticed your attitude toward Nan, and I heard your voice, though I couldn't hear what you said, when you accented her this morning. I've been forced to the conclusion that you meant Nan, and meant it seriously."

Eric's eyes turned gray. "I did mean Nan, and I did mean it seriously."

"Then I'm obliged to tell you—lay off! That's simple and plain; isn't it? I'll tolerate your selling the reins here, but I won't stand to see you prying court to my prospective wife."

Eric's anger had been rising like the tide before a gale, but suddenly it ran out and left him struggling with a smile. "Isn't she the one to decide about this?"

"Unfortunately, not. As a dictator here, you feel that you have the right to protect the Aleuts against an invader's ruthlessness. As Nan's friend, I have to protect her against her own folly. I concede that you are a gentleman, still in any normal state of affairs you wouldn't have a dog's chance with Nan. You could give her nothing she would have to give you everything. You could never fit into her life, or she into yours. But out here, when every old standard is wiped away, she is likely to lose her head. You may make a primitive appeal to her. I can understand that very well, and sweep her off her feet; then there'll be another shipwreck when we get back to civilization. I mean to protect her against that—and protect you, too."

Eric's smile was now open and broad. "You needn't worry about me."

"Does that mean you'll confine your energies to running the island?"

"It means I can look out for myself. Moreover, I think Nan can, too."

"You No Come See Fireheart Heap Much," She Chided Gently.

Eric's smile faded, and he faced Roy straight. "Any way, my attention to Nan are nobody's business but hers and mine, and if I can possibly get her, I'm going to do it."

Roy did not answer for a long time. At last his lips curled. "I see that your idealism is only for outside consumption; the welfare of your shipmates doesn't cut much ice when your own desires are involved. True, I respect you for that—it's fact, not flattery—but in secret you can remember that I'm your enemy."

Eric was roused with an uneasy smile. "On all the island, he had only one staunch and unflinching ally—Mother Horton. Felix Horton leaned on him, against his will. Wilcox looked to Roy as his chief, and would take his side in any break with Eric. Marie adored her mistress, blow hot and cold with her, and Nan herself was half-park, half-fox. Sandmar and his men secretly plotted his death."

Where did the Aleuts stand? With out their friendship, Eric could not win. But they, too, resented his law. Eric could control the natives only so far as he could sway their priestesses; and he could as well stake his life on tomorrow's weather! Fireheart was his right-hand name, she was as one of the elements and she obeyed her own law.

When he passed by the shrine on the fourth evening, she called him in throaty, throbbing tones. "White Chief!"

He paused, and she came to the doorway. In her slanted eyes was a gleam that stirred his pulse, calling to the brute that slept in some black cellar of his brain, but her dark skin repelled him.

"You no come see Fireheart heap much," she chided gently. "I've been working hard, to get food for the people."

"But you no get Fireheart food she want. She mighty hungry, mighty thirsty." She snatched wistfully. "You no eat him love yet?"

"Not yet, Fireheart. But I want you to be my friend."

"Your skin like snow. Maybe you heart like ice." Fireheart, she no want be your friend, she be your girl! Maybe you think Fireheart no so pretty as girl who come in boat. Maybe you think no white man want her. But fine, big white man come to her last night, say he take her, say he want her heart."

She did not fail to see that this shot went home. "Who was it?" Eric asked quickly.

"Man whose skin like milk, hair like dry grass. He say his name was 'White Chief.' He promise take Fireheart to white man's country, treat her fine. Fireheart no give to him yet, but maybe she will if White Chief no catch love pretty quick."

Eric's flesh crawled at the prospect—the virgin prowess of the lost Isle in the arms of the worst out-throat in Sandmar's crew—but when he opened his lips to protest, the ringing words would not come. How little and futile was one man's power!

SIX PEOPLE EXPRESS THEIR OPINIONS ON THE VALUE OF TELEPHONE SERVICE

Each day, a metropolitan newspaper asks several persons a question and publishes their answers. Recently, six were asked, "Do you consider a telephone in your home a luxury or a necessity?" Each answered, "It's a necessity!"

A MERCHANT said: "The other day our youngster had an accident, and my wife immediately called a doctor and me. That one call was worth the cost of the service for a year."

A MUSICIAN said: "I get many contracts over my telephone that I would not get otherwise."

A SALESMAN said that he could economize on many things, but not on his telephone, as in emergencies it might be worth its cost for years.

ANOTHER SALESMAN replied that he and his wife cancelled their telephone service to save money, but after a month of inconvenience decided a telephone was an absolute necessity.

A MANUFACTURER referred to the value of a telephone in emergencies.

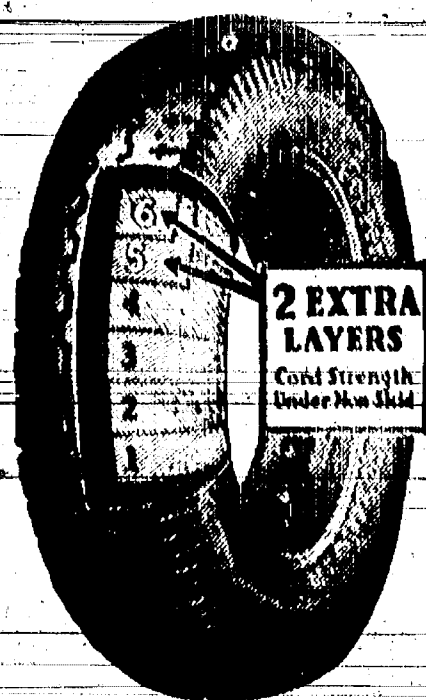

A MANAGER regarded the telephone as worth more to his wife than its cost, by saving her time and trouble.
