More Than Hundred Attend R. L. C. A. Meet

The Rural Letter Carriers of the second, sixteenth and seventeenth congressional districts of Michigan held their first tri-district meeting and banquet on Saturday evening at the public school gymnasium. About 130 were in attendance and partook of a supper at 7:30, served in a unique and delightful way by the pupils of the senior class of Chelsea high school.

The program of the evening opened with the singing of America, after which S. P. Foster, president of the second district, introduced Thomas E. Abus of Eau Claire, president of the Michigan Rural Letter Carriers' Association, who presided as toastmaster. H. D. Witherell, Chelsea postmaster, gave the address of welcome, to which Wm. S. Foote, president of sixteenth district, responded. A musical selection, "Springtime," was rendered by Hart's orchestra.

A talk was given by Hon. John C. Lehr, representative from second congressional district, who spoke of our president, Franklin D. Roosevelt, his personality, and his plans for reconstruction, and made a very inspiring plea for the cooperation of all members of the civil service. Judge B. D. Chandler of Hudson, who accompanied the congressman, also spoke of the seriousness of conditions and the need of the help of each and every one.

Mrs. L. G. Blackman, state president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, told of the assistance the Auxiliary already has been to the R. L. C. A. and outlined phases of the social work and advancement that they have slated for the future.

The principal address of the evening was given by W. G. Armstrong of Niles, national president of the R. L. C. A., who flew from Washington to attend the meeting. He told of his efforts to restore to the carriers their maintenance allowance which was reduced when city carriers and other civil service employees were placed on furlough, but which up to the present time has not been returned, although the furloughs have been discontinued.

The toastmaster called on several past national and state officers, who responded briefly.

A business session followed the program and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Frank Elliott, Sand Creek
Vice Pres.—Robert Walker, Plymouth
Sec'y-Treas.—William Foote, Milford.

The meeting closed with the singing of "God Be With You" by the assembly.

Broesamles Write From California

The following letter was received by The Standard on Tuesday from P. M. Broesamle, who, with Mrs. Broesamle, is spending several weeks at Ventura, California:

1633 Thompson Blvd.,
Ventura, Calif.
September 30, 1938.

To the Editor of The Chelsea Standard.

Dear Sir:

We look forward to the time when The Standard gets here. We sure do appreciate the paper, and thought our many friends would like to hear what kind of a trip we had. We started Saturday, Sept. 16 and arrived at Fred Mensing's in Ventura on Saturday, September 23, at 6:30 p. m. We found very little poor roads, and the desert and mountains were very interesting. Much of the desert was very pretty, full of flowers and all kinds of cactus. The lowest mileage we made in any one day was 317 miles and the most 434 miles.

No chance to get lonesome here as Fred and Alta are giving us the time of our lives. We are missing the sunshine as it has been very foggy. It was very hot part of the way.

Ventura has grown considerably since we were here six years ago and is really a pretty city.

Not wishing to make this letter too long, we are just saying "Hello" to everybody in and around Chelsea and we expect to be home about Nov. 1.

Yours truly,
P. M. Broesamle.

Ann Arbor Man Offers $30,000 for State Plant

An offer of $30,000 has been made by Joseph E. Zilk of Ann Arbor, for the purchase of the cement plant, located east of Chelsea at Four Mile Lake, and the purchasing committee has recommended to the state administrative board that the plant and equipment, exclusive of land, be sold at that price. It is reported that Mr. Zilk, who is associated with others in the proposed venture, intends to operate a fertilizer plant.

The cement plant, purchased by the state during Alex J. Groesbeck's administration, has not been operated recently, on account of the high cost of producing the cement, authorities claiming that it could be purchased cheaper on the open market.

On Tuesday of this week the state administrative board rejected the Ann Arbor man's bid and also a Detroit man's bid of $70,000.

Plan To Lift Farm Prices To Meet the Industrial Gains

Washington—Extension of the Administration's cotton loan plan to apply to other agricultural commodities is being pushed rapidly. Continuous conferences are being held with the purpose of making the plan operative as to all possible crops prior to December 1. As in the case of the cotton loan plan, it will be definitely linked with the acreage reduction program to guard the Government against monetary losses, as well as to render more certain advanced prices for all crops to be affected.

The primary purpose is materially to increase farm prices during the period when the largest proportion of crops will be marketed and to bring farm prices at once to a level commensurate with increases in the prices of industrial products. The substantial credits to be extended to farmers will reflect the Administration's own confidence in its drive for recovery and remove its efforts from the realm of price fixing or stabilization.

The cotton loan plan is designed to put a "bottom" under cotton prices by offering loans to cotton growers up to 10 cents a pound on all cotton held by them, provided they agree to join the Government in production-control plans for next year. Through this plan farm officials hope to reflect at once gains in the prices they expect to come later from the reduction of acreage. Raising of prices is regarded as essential. Farmers are in many cases without resources to delay selling for any extended period beyond harvest time, or even to incur the expense of harvesting.

The next farm commodities to be included in the extension of the cotton loan plan are hogs and corn. This plan will be ready within a week. It will supplement the emergency pig and sow purchasing program, which expired September 29. That had been characterized as purely an emergency measure to help out farmers with shortages of feed as result of drought.

Agricultural Administrator Peek said that the extent to which the new plan will be applied to wheat depends upon what representatives of wheat producers propose. The wheat production control campaign was completed September 26. Benefit payments up to $90,000,000 are to be distributed to growers who pledged acreage reduction.

BEACH WEDDING WAS OUTSTANDING EVENT

The following wedding announcement, taken from the "San Antonio Light" of San Antonio, Texas, will be of interest to the many friends of the groom in this vicinity:

The marriage Saturday evening, September 23, of Miss Florence Eileen Clem, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lincoln Clem, Jr. and Dwight Edward Beach, Lieutenant of U. S. Army, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Edward Beach of Chelsea, Michigan, was one of the outstanding events of the week. The ceremony was performed in the garden at the country home of Dr. and Mrs. John B. Herff at Boerne, the Rev. Samuel Capers, rector of Christ church, reading the impressive ceremony of the Episcopal church.

Just previous to the appearance of the bride party, Ples J. McNeel sang "Because," accompanied at the organ by Mrs. A. M. Fischer. She also played the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin. The bridegroom's attendants then came to the altar, walking double file, and included Lieutenants Clifford Rees and Romulus Puryear, James Cunningham and Frank Jamison, Benjamin Webster and Hunter Harris, Jr. The bride's attendants, who came in walking singly, were Misses Emily Keeren, Olivia Nolte, Josephine Bennett, Jean Herff, Marie Louise Guenther and Mollie Bennett. The maid of honor, Miss Lillian Anita Clem, sister of the bride, walked just in advance of the little flower girls, Carolyn and Juanita Herff. The bride then entered with her father and was met at the improvised altar by the groom and his best man, Lieut. Tonglis Wolf. The altar was formed of a semi-circle of graceful cedars, over which shone a soft light of many frosted electric globes, the bride party passing through a low hedge of cedars to the altar.

The bride was lovely in a gown of shimmering egg-shell satin, made along empire lines. The bodice was cut with a surplus effect and the bottom of the close-fitting skirt was finished with a ruffle set on with a deep shirring which extended around the bottom of the train. The veil of tulle was overlaid in another of rare Venetian lace caught in a Juliet cap by a cluster of orange blossoms. With this she carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and valley lilies. The bride's attendants wore gowns of white satin and carried shower bouquets of sweetheart roses and cadena de amour. The dainty flower girls wore pretty gowns of pink chiffon and carried white baskets filled with pink rosebuds.

An interesting feature of the occasion was the arch of glistening sabres of the bridegroom's attendants through which the bride party passed after the ceremony.

An informal reception was held in the pool garden on the opposite side of the home. Three tables skirted the lawn. One large table was laid in Venetian fllet lace and centered with a bowl of white roses and runners of white cadena de amour. Here the wedding cake embossed in white roses was served; at another table, coffee and at a third, punch. The smaller tables were decorated in pink roses and pink cadena de amour in silver bowls.

Mr. and Mrs. Beach left for a month's motor trip to Canada, stopping in New Orleans and Chicago, and on returning they will visit his parents in Michigan.

Lieutenant Beach, who graduated from Chelsea high school in 1926, attended the University of Michigan for two years, before receiving his commission to West Point Military Academy, where he graduated in 1932. He is now stationed at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Texas.

There is a sewing chart in our room on which each child's name is written. Each day all of us try hard to get another color on our chart.

Another chart is a health chart for morning inspection. If a child gets all A's in everything, then a color square is placed opposite his name.

We hope to make this another interesting and successful year. Signed: Max Spike and Max Hepburn.

Old-Time Chimes
Chimes of some pattern were fairly common in the Sixteenth century, and accounts rendered for their maintenance afford quaint reading. In 1527 an agreement with one Thomas Lovday shows that he "hath convenanted and bargaynd with the Abbot to repayre the Chyme gonges uppden eight ballis," and the Abbot "promyseth to pay the said T. L. at the fyntishement of his said tunyable and wokenly repara."

Question And Answer Dept.

Ques.—Will you please tell me in your valuable paper on what day of the week the Armistice was signed? In an argument one party said it was on Saturday, while another said it was on Monday. Now, who is right?
Ans.—The Armistice was signed on Monday, November 11, 1918. It was widely rumored that the Armistice was signed on Saturday, Nov. 9, preceding, but this was a false alarm.

Ques.—Did Jack Johnson and Bob Fitzsimmons ever fight? If so, who won? Also when did Jack Johnson win the heavyweight title?
Ans.—Jack Johnson knocked out Bob Fitzsimmons in two rounds at Philadelphia on July 17, 1907, and he won the world's championship on July 4, 1910, by knocking out James J. Jeffries in the fifteenth round at Reno, Nev.

Ques.—May I ask in your question column on what day and date did William Jennings Bryan die?
Ans.—William Jennings Bryan died on July 26, 1925.

Ques.—What is the name of the largest theater in Chicago? Also can you tell me its seating capacity?
Ans.—The largest theater in Chicago is the Coliseum, at Wabash avenue and Fifty-ninth street. It has a seating capacity of 15,000.

Ques.—How far out from Chicago is the Century of Progress exposition grounds located?
Ans.—The Century of Progress exposition is located on the lake front facing the loop district. Therefore it is only about 15 minutes' walk from the corner of State and Madison streets, Chicago's most congested district.

Ques.—I wish to ask you if there is any danger of lightning striking the roof wires of a radio set?
Ans.—No. There is no more danger of lightning doing that than there is of its striking a chimney or a tin roof. As the wires are usually put up, they have a ground switch to connect them with the earth. If they have this, they are actually a protection against lightning.

Ques.—Can you tell me in your question department why a certain instrument is called a "saxophone," and who was the inventor of it?
Ans.—The instrument known as the saxophone was invented by Adolph Sax of Germany about the year 1840, but it was many years before it became popularly used. The instrument was called a "saxophone" because of the name of the inventor—Sax.

Ques.—What became of ex-President Hoover's presidential yacht, the Mayflower, and what yacht does President Roosevelt use in his official capacity?
Ans.—The yacht used by ex-President Hoover, the Mayflower, was ordered discontinued in 1929. It was sent to the Philadelphia navy yard, when in 1931 it caught fire and sank. It was raised and bought later that year for $16,105 by Leo J. Coe of Chicago. President Roosevelt now uses the Sequoia, former Commercial Department boat, and which is now the official presidential yacht for his trips on the Potomac river and the Chesapeake Bay. President Roosevelt used the Amberjack II during his recent vacation along the Atlantic coast.

Ques.—To settle a dispute, will you kindly answer if golf is an American game or did it originate in Scotland.
Ans.—Golf did not originate in America; nor is it a Scotch game, as many people believe. The game originated in Holland and takes its name from the Dutch word "kolf," meaning "club." Early prints of Holland show that the original game was mostly played on ice. It found its way to Scotland, where it was extensively played, despite the fact parliament had forbidden it on three separate occasions. In 1457, 1471 and in 1491 it began to be popular in America about 1890.

Ques.—Why is a ring necessary for a bride at a wedding, and why does she wear it on her third finger?
Ans.—The custom of a wedding ring rose from an ancient seal. Signet rings usually bore the seals of the owner, and anyone in possession of the seal, or ring bearing the seal, was empowered to carry out orders in the owner's name. A ring was the symbol of confidence, and a wedding ring signified that all things were given into the wife's keeping. It is worn on the third finger because the Romans believed that a nerve ran direct from the finger to the heart.

Great Human Reservoirs
The history of the world shows that there have been three great human reservoirs which from time to time have burst their banks and flooded neighboring countries. The Arabian peninsula, the steppes of Central Asia, and the lands round the Baltic, the original home of the Germanic and Anglo-Saxon peoples.

Too Many Defects Now
The ridicule of bodily defects was at one time one of the richest sources of laughter.

JOB, AND HIS INTEGRITY

It that I knew where I might find him, but he knoweth the way that I take, when he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold. Job 23:10.

Can you think of a scene more pathetic than was Job when he uttered those words, Under power of the cruel inventor, To deviate, slacken and swove.

His children were killed by a cloud-burst, His herds, and his cattle were slain, His dwellings destroyed by fire, His good name besmirched and defamed.

O that I knew where to find him, I am sure he would answer my cry. But his wife only mocked his sad pleading, "If I were me, I would curse God, and die."

Job had no Bible to teach him, No John the beloved, nor Saint Paul, No Jesus to carry his burden, Though pressed, sadly pressed to the wall.

Integrity! Treasure of Heaven, No power that Satan could hold, Upheld by omnipotent courage, The reason this story is told.

My friend, if Job had the courage, Integrity, will, to go through, When heaven seemed brass, and each friend to the last, Unkind, unfaithful, untrue.

May you with Bible assurance, With church, and all it pretends, With blest Holy Spirit to guide you, Find Job's fruition your end.

Happenings In The Elementary Grades

First Grade
The little folks have continued their study of nature the past week. They found the snapping turtle to be the most interesting of all their species. This week, will the study of plants and their ways of living.

Second Grade
Because the second grade folks have been reading about a black and white cat, one of the little folks brought his pet to show the rest of the class. Also they have a toad, frog, and turtle, which they study.

Third Grade
This little girl's name is Dorothy. We know that Dorothy is very fond of skipping school for the reason what a good time she had not attending school that afternoon. The boys and girls of her class are sorry they had a person in their class who would skip school.

Fourth Grade
The Fourth Grade are learning the folk games of different countries in connection with their geography study of these countries.

Fifth Grade
The Fifth Grade were guests last Friday and played the "Swiss Mountain March", which they learned last year in connection with the study of Switzerland.

Sixth Grade
Miss Patricia Williams of Detroit is taking Mrs. Martha Sanka's place in teaching. Mrs. Sanka has gone to Truxton City where she has accepted a position in the public schools.

Present-day Fads

Bicycle riding has become very popular and here lately among the girls. Just who are giving the girls their bikes?

Roller skating ranks next in girl sports. Be careful girls, don't fall and mar your beauty!

Also don't be excited if you see them horseshoe riding. They are apt to go most anything! Not only the girls are interested in horses but boys also. One senior boy rides his horse to school each morning—sometimes falls to his own time.

Hiking seems to be popular. Everyone seems to be hiking to and from school. The Girl Scouts have taken several hikes of late.

CAN YOU SPELL "SCISSORS"?
Most of us poor mortals are afflicted with a great desire to assert our originality on certain of our words by spelling them in something other than the generally accepted way—and no wonder. When in doubt we spell phonetically, or according to the vocal value of the word. There, the public begins.

Suppose we use the word "scissors" to illustrate. The vocal value is obviously "sizers." Think of all the ways of making each letter-sound. If you have them all, a simple calculation will tell you that there are 65,536 different ways of spelling "scissors," according to Ellis in his "Key to Reformed Spelling". Do you wonder that we slip occasionally? Neither do we.

OUR NEIGHBORS

DENTON—Rev. and Mrs. A. A. Denton took her mother to the Beaumont hospital Monday, where the latter submitted to an operation for tonsillitis. Today.

MASON—Superintendent D. A. Mason has received word from the department of public instruction that this is the year that the school will be examined by a member of the state department. Mason's school is on the three-year list of accredited schools, the highest award given any school. The University of Michigan and the Michigan department of public instruction alternate in examining the schools of the state—County News.

WAYNE—The Wayne Saddlery Company, a new firm with Harry Sedman as proprietor and William Bremer as manager, is preparing to begin in the manufacture of all kinds of leather goods with the plant to be located at Middle and Michigan avenues. The equipment of Naylor, Carson and Hough of Detroit, consisting of 75 machines, has been purchased and is now being installed.—County Review.

STOCKBRIDGE—Lightning struck the farm barn of Henry Ackley about 1:00 o'clock Sunday night, causing it to burn to the ground. The barn contained about forty tons of hay, eight acres of beans, a plow, five

If you see some of those Freshmen just ask them how they liked their initiation. It hit more than one of them—will stare daggers at you. But wait a minute, I am supposed to be talking about a party. Well, anyway, the sophomores gave the Freshmen a very jolly party last Friday night.

A game "wink 'em" was started. You should have seen some of the boys hang onto their girls, and some of the girls hang onto some of the boys. Did you know that—Larkie Wolf could wink? Boy, can she! If you want to be an expert winker at the next party you had better ask her to teach you how.

Many games of cards and ping-pong were played. We had the "Two-Half" two-piece orchestra which furnished good dance music. At a late hour ice cream and cake were served and enjoyed by all. Some of us to o'clock boys and girls had to be getting home or we would have received a scolding and could never have come again. So—Mr. Cross sent us home.

HELP! WANTED

An authentic announcer to make those "few" necessary announcements in study hall. Miss Howard.

FALL FROLIC OF THE LEAVES

Softly, a little breeze blew thru' the trees, Whispering a secret to the leaves, Inviting them, large and small, To attend the Fall Frolic Held at "Nature's Hall".

The gay leaves a tumbling came To the Frolic at "nature's hall", Garbed in the hues of a brilliant fall, Singing and dancing was their delight.

While they were at the ball that night, Then each sleepy, worn little leaf Left the "Frolic" in greatest of peace, Happy, yet tired, as he left the hall To answer the great earth's final roll call.

—Annabelle, Vicary.

The Perfectionist

The United States government through the bureau of standards recently released the dimensions of the so-called perfect girl. These are: Height, 5 feet 6 inches; weight, 121 pounds (which seems pretty light, if you should ask a meat-market clerk); 12 1/2 inches; bust, 33 1/2 inches; waist, 20 1/2 inches; and hips, 30 inches.

Puffers Are Peculiar
Various sea-creatures, like the moon, wax and wane in size. Some have the power of growing larger than normal as a temporary expedient, then reducing themselves. Others regularly grow smaller, and then start life afresh. The fishes called globe fishes or puffers can, by swallowing water or air, make their bodies swell up like balloons. They are too roundish in shape to be fast swimmers, but they wear an armor of spines which appear as a truly terrible pincushion when they puff themselves up and float. No predatory fish dare attack these porcupines of the sea. When they deflate themselves, by expelling the air, a loud hissing sound is produced. Try Standard Liners for Results.

and her family had moved in with 'Fugate,' leaving the Forlorn a large two-room barge. This the yacht crew in the first start, but to land, quietly but with no misgivings, and in a matter of minutes had the two families and the door, he turned to Nan, who was sitting on a cot, and said:

"This was home. It was good to shut out the darkness. She and Eric were both surprised. He would not speak her rights, meet her more than half way in everything. A sweet sense of security swept over her, unknown in all the days of her exile. She smiled at Eric's efforts to make the most of the rough fare, and then she looked at the wooden stool, her own handiwork, containing her few treasures and, except from the wreck, waiting for her in the adjoining room.

He inspected his revolver, lying in the wall in easy reach, then drew her gently to him. "You're tired, aren't you, Nan?" "Tired? We've had two trying days."

"I'm going to keep you up only a minute—just long enough to ask you a question, then you can curl up in there, on the sofas."

"The softness in his voice and gaze touched her profoundly. She opened her mouth to say more than ever. "What is it, Eric?" "I think I already know the answer, but I want to be sure. . . . Do you love me?"

She looked into his steadfast eyes a long time before she ventured a reply. "I'm so fond of you, Eric, but I don't think it's the best thing yet. You want me to be honest, don't you?" "And the real reason you married me was so I could protect you? You chose me to make a choice between you and me?"

"I think that had a great deal to do with it," he said. "But perhaps you will learn to love me, soon—as I love you!" She pressed his hand against her breast. "Very soon, I think, if you'll just let me love you in my own way, my own time. Just be tender with me, Eric."

"I'm not sure I can do that," he said. "I'm not sure I can do that," he said. "I'm not sure I can do that," he said. "I'm not sure I can do that," he said. "I'm not sure I can do that," he said.

"Eric, Do You Take Me for Your Wife to Love in Chelsea in Prison?"

"This time will come later, when we're back in civilization and I'm skipper of a tramp steamer yawling in the trough of the Atlantic." There had been a trace of bitterness in his tone, but it faded away as Nan's gaze looked on his

Something in her face made her words fall away. He took a quick step forward and clasped her hand.

"This time won't come later," he murmured.

"What is it, Nan?" "I've made up my mind at last."

There was still no evaluation in her face, only peace, rather, serene satisfaction. Her lips dimpled, curled.

"I don't dare believe," he began, dazed.

She swayed toward him and kissed him gently without lifting an eyelid. "You can believe it, Eric. I've come to you to stay. I want you for my mate."

CHAPTER X

When she went to Roy and burst out the covers, he took it in good part. "I must say I expected it, Nan. It was Forlorn Island that you got me for, but if you see you've made a mistake, back to civilization, you can't get out of it, simply enough."

"This won't be a trial marriage," she told him, solemnly. "It's the real thing."

"All marriages are trials. These days. The institution of that sort. The usual kind. If I don't love you a bit, Nan, you're just the way for you, and here only don't get too fond of me. Look up to him, that's all. If you want to get down to him when you're heart of yours got too much involved. That might be serious. You might even think you'd have to stick by him. You're not entirely safe from sentimental nonsense, you know."

"My heart is involved already. Otherwise I'd never go as far as this."

"You're not in love with him; don't try to tell me you are. You want a mate, and I admit he's the logical man. He's all right, too. I tell you, a gentleman, something of a scholar, and a good judge of girls. I had it to him for what he's put over here. I admit now I couldn't have been to the it. You'll respect him, have a happy time with him, he's queen of the island—and not his slightest girl."

Her blue brows knitted; she did not know how to take his breath. At last he had spoken—straight to the heart.

"I'm not in love with him; don't try to tell me you are. You want a mate, and I admit he's the logical man. He's all right, too. an impenetrable enemy had seized the stone on the foot of the boatman, with his unusual strength he came to the very doors. Through a crack between the blocks of turf, a sharp, hair-bared owl, forehead, he had looked Eric's position, then he had uttered the savage words he had in his mind and hurried it down.

But this was only the first of the things that were to happen. The owl was not the only one that had already attacked the victim before he could begin to recover a second blow fell. It was like a hazy, misty after a heavy rain. Peering down through the caucuses, the attacker saw he had missed his mark. Howling, he plunged through, and the further collapse of the roof under his feet sent him into the room with a violence only second to his thunderbolt. Nan saw him like an evil demon among the falling clouds and dust.

Eric made one hopeless effort to defect himself. He lunged out from the wall, but he seemed blind, his movements lacked their familiar timeliness and power. The light faded before it began. Nan's arm stretched slow and long, an odd, rising blow with open palm and hooked fingers. Eric was hurled back against the wall, only to fall to the floor.

Nan screamed with all her breath. She saw the glass and strength she knew so well, and she felt the terrible, terrible pain. She saw the glass and strength she knew so well, and she felt the terrible, terrible pain. She saw the glass and strength she knew so well, and she felt the terrible, terrible pain.

He was dead! She must not forget this again. It was a weakness. Her eyes began to wander for and far into those sockets. "Made crazed light grew steady and grey."

Great Lakes Tide

There is a slight tidal movement on the Great Lakes, but so slight as to be unnoticed so far as navigation or ordinary observation are concerned. The noticeable changes in the lake levels are due to reasonable conditions.

Flying Squirrel Depends on His Skin Parachute

One of the most fascinating, yet most elusive creatures in the flying squirrel—a brave little fellow no bigger than a man's hand who volplanes to earth from heights of 50 feet, and does it softly and silently, without seeming to take any chances with his life at all.

The reason that the flying squirrel is seldom seen is that he is a creature of the dark. In the daytime, he hides away in his nest inside a hollow tree, but as soon as the sun begins to sink, he steals out into the open. When dusk first falls, you may see him poke his head out of his hole, and if everything seems clear, you may see him run to the top of his tree, and take a daring leap, gliding to earth in a graceful curve.

As a matter of fact, this squirrel does not really fly, but he depends upon the membrane between his front and hind legs to act like a parachute and slow-up his descent. While the true squirrels may always be seen abroad in the sunshine, the flying squirrel behaves just the opposite. Ernest Thompson Seton says: "He has the eyes of an owl and sees perfectly at night."

"Getting Tanned" Simply Aiding the Pigmentation

What we call "getting tanned" is simply a building up of the pigmentation of the skin as a protection against over-exposure. We all are familiar with the way sunlight penetrates a transparent object, but finds difficulty in getting through a dark, opaque substance. The darker the substance is the more light it absorbs, preventing further penetration.

The human body is so constituted that it will, over many generations, produce enough pigment necessary for protection against sunlight according to environment. Peoples inhabiting northern zones commonly develop one degree of protection, while those in more southerly latitudes, where they are subjected to more sunlight, develop another degree. The more southern peoples, even of the white race, generally have darker skins—that is, skins with a greater amount of this protective pigment.

Silver of Astronomical Mirror

The silver of an astronomical mirror is always on the outer or front surface and not on the back as in a household looking glass. The light used by the observer is reflected from the silver itself, and does not pass through the glass of the mirror. Since the silver coat cannot be protected but must be exposed to the air, it deteriorates in a comparatively short time and thus reduces the efficiency of the telescope. Impurities in the air cause the silver to tarnish, and moisture loosens small flakes of the metal from the glass. A few months after silvering, the surface shows a brownish hue and, when examined by placing a bright light behind it, it is seen to be punctured by a multitude of small holes where particles of silver have become displaced.—Literary Digest.

Ancient Volume

In the archives of Fyence Municipal library a research student discovered a 58-page volume printed in that town in 1476, the year that Caxton set up his press in Westminster. This ancient volume is noted as coming from the press of "Fer and Clander," obviously men of Germanic origin who must have brought their art not from the inspiration and lead of Gutenberg, the work of these men at Fyence, practically contemporary with that of the famous printers of Venice and elsewhere, seems to have escaped history. The book is the "Doctrines" of Alessandro di Villadel, described as grammatical rules set out in Latin verse.—Montreal Herald.

Harp Made at Home

An aeolian harp, the harmonious sounds of which are delightful, may be easily made at home with thin, vibrant wood and cut gut as the principal material needed. A sounding box is made of the thin wood, across which cut gut is stretched and tuned much after the style of a violin. When the harp is completed and placed on a window sill with the window closed down on it, wind passing through will set the strings to stringing and provide a pleasant tone which will vary in intensity, and in the number of strings vibrating as the strength of the wind passing through varies.

Cosmic Bodies in Air

According to the scientists, about 400,000,000 bodies of cosmic origin enter the earth's atmosphere daily, of which some 20,000,000 are large enough to be seen as shooting stars. "Meteor" comes from a Greek word meaning "things in the air" and the ancients thought they originated in the atmosphere itself. It was not until 100 years ago that they were proved wandering from the cosmos.—Gas Logic.

Interesting Letter

Written By Roy Ives

The following letter was received by Mr. and Mrs. Wirt Ives from their son Roy, who left here on Wednesday, August 23, for California, later going to Arizona where he is attending the University of Arizona at Tucson:

Dear Mother, Dad and all the family: This is the first letter I have been able to write and will write one that will suffice for all.

First I will tell you about the trip to Los Angeles. We left Detroit with a group of cars and picked up some more at Bryan, Ohio. From Bryan we went through Fort Wayne and Gilmer, Ill. to Vandalia, a town where Lincoln once lived. From there we took a general southwestward course to El Paso, Texas, then thru New Mexico to Phoenix, Ariz., and on to Los Angeles, a trip of approximately 3000 miles. We certainly went through a variety of country and climate. The most fertile land I saw was in Ohio, Illinois and the irrigated deserts of Arizona and California. Texas is a country in itself, ranging from fertile, well cultivated land in the northeast to almost desert in the west with a very fertile irrigated piece of land along the Rio Grande at El Paso. First you will see dry cactus and sage-brush cattle land, then a strip of cotton, vegetables, alfalfa and watermelons. Mr. White bought two which weighed approximately 82 pounds each. The alfalfa is mostly threshed for seed, some however being used for hay. I saw very few large birches in Texas. Houses all through the part of Oklahoma and Texas that I passed thru are squat like, one story, with slowly sloping roofs. Mulles and jacks are used almost entirely for farm work from Missouri to New Mexico. What horses there are, are small Texas ponies. As soon as we reached New Mexico southern characteristics disappeared. It seems that the Yankee predominates in New Mexico, Arizona and California as the dialect is Yankee and the horse replaces the mule of the south. The best heavy draught horses I have ever seen were in one of the irrigated places in Arizona.

I must wander back to crops and soil. I was very much interested in the tremendous size of the corn, the prevalence of millet, the soy beans and the cotton ranging from the short plant about six inches high in Oklahoma and northern Texas to the shoulder high plants in the irrigated portions of Arizona and California. Oklahoma and northern Texas seemed strange on account of the red soil. Everything seemed as if I were looking through red glasses.

I suppose you are wondering about the mountains and desert. They are very fascinating and alluring. They strike one with awe and make one one is. Where one can see for miles and miles and think it is only an hour's walk distant. One wonders what is on the other side of the mountain, not realizing that, were he there, the same empty space would meet his eyes. The mountains are of beautiful colors, especially if there are clouds in the sky. The clouds make patches of dark grey wherever the shadow rests, making a contrast to the intense brightness of the landscape. The semi-desert is not devoid of vegetation. There are many varieties of cacti. Mesquite growth is very common. Sagebrush dots the desert. There are some jack rabbits, cottontails, and plenty of buzzards. Sometimes for many miles there is nothing but red or white sand, red rocks or burnt rocks or hills of sand. The real desert is nothing but white sand dunes which shift with the wind, and is it but there! Picture this set down between distant mountains on all sides. The mountains seem close, but were you to attempt to walk to them without an adequate supply of water. Running through the desert are dry rivers, creeks and washes, for it rains occasionally, especially in the surrounding mountains. Along the railroad tracks you will notice long stretches of bridge work. It looks rather ridiculous for there is apparently nothing to span a train there. But I have been told that there have been times when miles of track have been washed out by the torrents of water. When it rains in the mountains the dry rivers fill with real raging water, doing its damage to automobile and railroad beds.

PAY-OR ELSE

THE TOLL GATE

Pointing to the present tax upon automobile owners as an unfair burden, a state-wide movement is now under way, led by the Automobile Club of Michigan to cut $12,000,000 off the state weight and gasoline tax bill. The campaign is gaining widespread support throughout the state. The average tax per car in Michigan totaled more than $40 last year. Next year it will average more than $50 per car. This does not include taxes on car sales, excise taxes, taxes on oils, tires, parts, etc., which will even increase this total.

I was told while riding through the Salton Sea valley, that the sea periodically moves its location. I inquired if the sea seems to be growing smaller and was told it varies from year to year, but in the long run it is no smaller than when first seen by white men. Along the road near the sea is a heap of massive rocks which look as if they had been dumped there by humans, but really are a natural formation. On these rocks are hieroglyphics written there by some extinct race. No one has been able to decipher them yet.

Between Phoenix and Yuma one may see a different kind of desert—what is called the lava beds. These beds are nothing but brown and black porous rocks ranging from very small stones to about the size of stone used for building in Michigan. There are scattered for miles. There is little or no vegetation. In the desert one must be very careful of lizards, scorpions, tarantulas and rattlers. It is not advisable for one to go into the desert with oxen or mules. There was one bad pass through which we came—the Devil's Canyon. It twists up and up, down and down. In one place the walls of the mountain overhang the road. It is several thousand feet to the bottom of the canyon. At the top is a tunnel. This is enough of description.

A boy from California and I have rented an apartment and are "batching." I think we are going to get along fine. I feel better already. There are lots of people here from all over the United States on account of health. I like the University. Can get the same work in two years that I would get in three in Michigan. I do not have to take so many unnecessary courses. Write often—I like to hear from home.

Love to all,
Your son, Roy Ives.

Fish Hibernates Buried Deep in Mud for Snooze

Scientists have discovered a hibernating fish that hibernates six months of the year in mud.

The discovery was made by a representative of the Zoological Survey of India, at Uttarbagh, near Calcutta. He found the fish buried in mud to a depth of six feet, where it passes the summer season in sleep.

The fish, which is an elongated goby of the genus pseudomugil, lives in creeks, and when they dry up it burrows itself into the mud. It remains comatose, breathing through an air-hole at the top of the burrow.

When brought up the fish was languid, but on being placed in water respiration was resumed, and the fish flapped its gill covers.

The significance of the discovery is declared to be that all previous examples of hibernating fish have been of the fresh water type, and this is of the salt water variety. Gobiids are essentially coast fishes, and exist in nearly all seas.
