Stockholders Asked to Ratify Consolidation of Local Banks

President Asks For Scouts' Cooperation

"As many of you know, we are doing everything possible in this emergency to help suffering humanity," spoke the President Saturday noon, to Boy Scouts all over the United States of America. He continued: "I called upon the Federal Emergency Relief Administrator, Mr. Harry L. Hopkins, to tell me what kind of a national good turn would be of the greatest service. He has recommended that during the balance of the month of February every troop and every scout do everything possible in their separate localities to collect such household furnishings, bedding and clothes, as people may be able to share as gifts to those who greatly need them."

"Therefore, I ask you, under the direction of your own local officers, and in conference with the representatives of the Federal Relief Administration and other local social agencies, to gather up such of this material as may be available for distribution."

In order to cooperate with the above request, the Boy Scouts of Washtenaw and Livingston counties, with their leaders will immediately put into operation plans which have just been completed by the local Council office. Patrol leaders will assign certain blocks to pairs of Scouts, each pair being given a number of cards with description of the work on one side and list of items which are to be checked by each household, of gifts which they wish to contribute to this emergency relief.

It is hoped that the boys will be able to cover their district by Friday night, without interfering with school, home, or church duties. No collection will be made at that time, but if possible, should be done by Saturday, February 17.

Arrangements are being made for central depots in each town, where the boys may bring the donations, and from which they will be dispensed upon orders from the CWA case workers. Each group should arrange its own transportation of articles from the homes to the central depot, except in the case of larger furniture or stoves.

Parents and friends are urged to cooperate wherever possible, by notifying scouts of things they can spare, as well as helping in the use of cars and trucks for transporting goods to the central depots.

Progress Is Slow On Town Hall Project

Little progress has been made by the Sylvan township board and the village council during the past week in the matter of constructing a combination township and village hall on the site of the old town hall with CWA funds.

Two joint meetings of the board have been held during the week, sketches of the proposed building have been drafted and it is expected that formal application for funds will be made to the county CWA directors this week.

Success of the project depends on the action to be taken by Congress in the matter of appropriating additional CWA funds as well as approval of the county board.

Question And Answer Dept.

Ques.—To settle an argument will you kindly answer how long Napoleon was in exile at Elba?

Ans.—Napoleon was exiled to Elba on April 28, 1814, and made his escape on Feb. 26, 1815—nine months and twenty-nine days.

Ques.—Why did the United States government select the Italian Fascist emblem for our United States dime?

Ans.—You have the "heart before the horse." Mussolini's Fascists were not organized until 1919—three years after our dime came out bearing this symbol of ancient Roman victors, which is known as the Fasces. See your dictionary.

Ques.—Will you please tell me what causes the Mexican jumping bean to jump or turn over?

Ans.—The Mexican jumping bean is the seed of three varieties of swamp trees. A very small gray moth lays its eggs in the blossoms of the "beans," which becomes the home of the larva. The mature larva can jump around on the inside of the bean, and this act causes the bean to turn over or jump.

Ques.—What countries in Europe have defaulted in their debt to the United States?

Ans.—The countries that have defaulted to date are France, Belgium and Estonia.

Ques.—When did William Penn come to America?

Ans.—William Penn landed here on Oct. 26, 1682.

Ques.—Why is it that watermelons are so closely associated with the negroes?

Ans.—This is hereditary with negroes in their taste for watermelons. This fruit, which belongs to the gourd family, is a native of tropical Africa, where it was the favorite fruit of the black men for thousands of years.

Ques.—I noticed in a certain daily paper that in the recipes they spelled syrup with an "i," thus "Sirup." As it occurred more than once, I allowed it was done intentionally. Was that ignorance or just carelessness?

Ans.—Neither one. Nearly all metropolitan papers have adopted Webster's International Dictionary as their authority for spelling—even to the preferred way of spelling, where more than one way is correct. Therefore, while "Sirup" is correct, "Syrup" is preferred. Nearly all Chicago, Philadelphia and New York dailies are very strict in this respect.

Ques.—Will you please explain how long distance or lengthy events get the term "marathon"?

Ans.—The cities of Athens and Marathon in Greece are a little over 26 miles apart—to be exact, they are twenty-six miles, 386 feet apart. A Greek named Pheidippides ran at top speed the entire distance between the two cities to give the king the news of a great victory and then dropped dead from exhaustion. From this fact all kinds of endurance contests have been termed "marathons."

Ques.—I read an article in a magazine recently where a negro preacher stated in his sermon that King Solomon was a black man—meaning he was a negro. Can you tell me if that is correct?

Ans.—We can find nothing to justify the statement that King Solomon was a black man—or a negro. He was dark-skinned, as most Jewish people are. He was of that branch of the white race that settled in Palestine in prehistoric times. The modern Hebrews are descendants from that same stock. No doubt this claim that he was a black man was taken from the fact that Ras Tafari, the King of Abyssinia, who is a negro, claims he is a direct descendant of King Solomon. This is a claim only, and not a fact.

Ques.—I would like to know if a chicken can swim?

Ans.—No. Neither can it sink. The chicken can only flounder around in the water.

Ques.—What does "Soviet" mean as applied to Russia? Has it anything to do with anarchy?

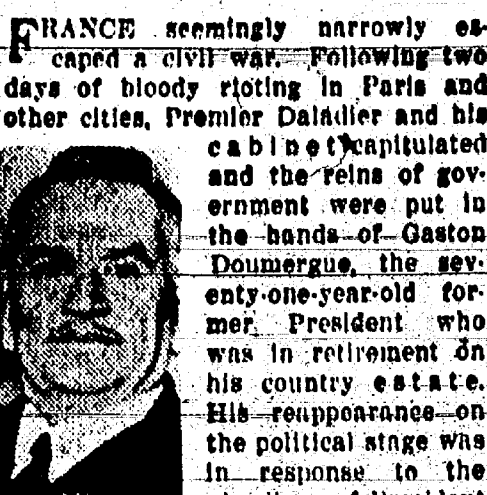

Ans.—It is one of the forms of government. "Soviet" is a Russian word which means "Council" in English. It is a form of government in which each factory in the republic elects one representative to attend this "Council."

Bloody Riots in Paris Drive Out Daladier, and Doumergue Becomes Premier—Devaluation of Dollar Brings Flood of Gold.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Gaston Doumergue

FRANCE seemingly narrowly escaped a civil war. Following two days of bloody rioting in Paris and other cities, Premier Daladier and his cabinet capitulated and the reins of government were put in the hands of Gaston Doumergue, the seventy-one-year-old former President who was in retirement on his country estate. His reappearance on the political stage was in response to the pleadings of President Lebrun and many other patriots who were convinced that he alone could restore the country to quiet. It was couched in pledges that both chambers of parliament would support him unreservedly and that the president would give him an executive order dissolving the parliament and calling new elections, to be used if he considered it necessary. So the "iron man" of France, as he has been dubbed, returned to Paris with plans for a small cabinet made up of former premiers and party leaders and with power to make himself the virtual dictator of the country.

War veterans, monarchists, Communists and other elements joined in the violent demonstrations that forced out the Daladier regime. All joined in opposition to the government, though no one of the groups was in accord with any others in other respects. The mobs were furious and fought desperately with the police and the troops that Daladier had brought into the capital. The rioters, operating mainly in the Place de la Concorde and the region about the Palais Bourbon, where the chamber of deputies sits, were raked by machine gun fire, snatched by mounted troops and clubbed and shot by the infantry and police. But they returned to the fray time after time and would not cease the struggle until Daladier resigned. The number of dead was estimated at fifty, and more than a thousand persons were wounded. After the battles were over the boulevard in the center of Paris presented a scene of desolation and destruction unequalled there since days of the commune in 1871.

Nationalist elements resented especially the removal by Daladier of Jean Chiappe as prefect of police, feeling that he was being made a scapegoat in the Bayonne bond scandal. The Communists and Socialists accused Chiappe of fomenting the rioting, but the "right" elements said the "leftists" were determined to get the Communists out of the way because they knew he would block the proletarian coup d'état they were planning. The Royalists, that they might be able to restore the monarchy and put on the throne the duke de Guise, head of the Bourbon house of Orleans, who lives in exile in Brussels. Naturally the pretender shares in that hope, but he was quoted as deploring the bloodshed.

DEVALUATION of the dollar, and the purchase of gold at $35 a fine ounce caused a turmoil in the world's money markets and an immediate result was a great flow of gold from Europe to the United States. The pound sterling and the franc made gains, but not big enough to suit President Roosevelt and his monetary advisers. Later both the pound and franc declined again, and the confusion was made greater. The French were alarmed by the drain on their gold and expressed intense resentment against the American policy, charging that the administration was making de liberate efforts to embarrass France.

For the time being the administration was prevented from driving the dollar down to its projected parity points in foreign exchanges by the rising tide of American dollars flowing back to this country. But most of its financial experts were confident that the $35.00 cents value would be made to prevail after a reasonable time to allow for the shakedown. As for the $35 an ounce for gold, it is the opinion of Prof. George F. Warren, chief adviser of the experiment that is under way, that the figure must be raised if prices of commodities are to be put up materially. Frank E. Gannett, the Rochester newspaper publisher, after a visit to the White House and talking with both the President and Professor Warren, said in his Rochester Times-Union that he had been convinced by those conversations "that we shall continue to raise the price of gold" and that the $35 figure probably would succeed only in preventing prices from slipping.

By the President's devaluation stroke a treasury deficit of $1,000,000,000 was transformed overnight into a surplus of $673,710,937.

IT WAS authoritatively stated in Washington that the President believes that excessive interest rates on all classes of debts should be reduced as an important step toward reduction of the debt structure. His viewpoint applies to foreign debts owed to United States citizens, to private debts and to those of industry. He was said to be of the opinion that reduction of interest would make payment more probable, and that fixed charges also could be cut down.

Bills before the senate, which have house approval already, would enable corporations and municipalities or other political subdivisions of states to scale down the principal and interest of their debts through an agreement with the majority of their creditors. Legislation is already in effect which enables the individual to rearrange his debt and interest rates through a pact with the majority of those he owes and to give similar help to railroads. There have been complaints that these laws have not been particularly effective and that they need strengthening. The President, in letting it be known that he thought the debtor was paying too much on obligations contracted in better times, did not say what he believed was a fair rate nor did he specify particular charges that he regarded as too high.

NRA and the steel industry came into sharp conflict, and the NRA to a certain extent backed down. Executives of all the leading steel companies met and considered the claim of the national labor board to authority given by the President to conduct elections for employees' representatives when a "substantial" number request that action. To this the steel men took exception. They issued a statement saying the NRA "intends to resist all attacks" and that the present plan of employee representation "is in complete violation of the principle of collective bargaining as provided in section 7 (a) of the national recovery act."

The NRA had given out a press statement implying that all company unions are dominated by employers. This drew sharp criticism, and the statement was retracted. Administrator Johnson and NRA Counsel Donald Richberg upheld the right of the labor board as stated above. They asserted, however, that the executive order which said that representatives elected by a majority of workers "have been thereby designated to represent all the employees," does not abridge the rights of labor minorities to conduct negotiations with employers.

SAMUEL INSULL, who was due to be ousted from Greece on February 1, was permitted to remain for a time because of ill health, but the government at Athens then informed him unofficially that he must leave before February 13, two physicians having reported he was unable to travel without danger to his life. The fugitive immediately began packing up, but at this writing it was not known where he would go in his effort to avoid extradition.

TWENTY-TWO days after he was kidnapped, Edward G. Bremer, banker of St. Paul, Minn., was set free in Rochester, Minn., and made his way home, nervous and with wounds on his head inflicted when he was "snatched," but otherwise unharmed. His father, Adolf Bremer, wealthy brewer, had paid the $200,000 demanded by the kidnapers. In $10 and $5 bills, though an intermediary. During his captivity Bremer was kept in a dark room and under constant guard. State and federal law enforcement agencies were conducting an intensive hunt for the abductors of Bremer, who probably numbered ten or more. It was believed the scheme was held in either Sioux City or Kansas City.

Vernie Sankey, notorious kidnaper who was captured recently in Chicago and taken to Sioux Falls, S. D., for safe keeping until his trial in a federal court, committed suicide in his cell by hanging, using a loop made of neckties. He had admitted the abduction of Charles Beutcher of Denver and Haskell Bohn of St. Paul.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT called congressional leaders into conference and with them formulated bills designed to bring the stock markets of the country under federal control. The measures were then introduced in both house and senate. They deal with short selling, marginal trading, specialists, pool operations and manipulation.

BACKED by the President, a federal grand jury investigation was going on in Washington that promised to uncover a $10,000,000 scandal in the War department. Two lawyers prominently connected in the past with the American Legion were said to be involved. It was asserted that automobile manufacturers had been asked for a fee of $50,000 in return for War department contracts for trucks running into millions.

The house naval committee made an inquiry into airplane and engine contracts that, it was predicted, would lead to changes in the Navy department's system of audits.

WILLIAM P. McCracken, who was assistant secretary of commerce for aeronautics in the Hoover administration, and three air line officials got into a jam with the senate committee that is investigating air mail contracts. All four of them were cited to appear before the senate to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt. McCracken practices law in Washington. The others are I. H. Brittin, vice president of Northwest Airways; Harris M. Hunshee, president of Western Air Express, and Gilbert Glavin, Hunshee's secretary. McCracken has been under technical arrest but this was vacated.

Chairman Black's report to the senate showed that Brittin admitted that he had removed from McCracken's office and destroyed subpoenaed correspondence, and also that Glavin, on order from Hunshee, had removed confidential papers since recovered by the committee.

Senator Black also told the senate that testimony before the committee showed post office contracts had been awarded "collusively and fraudulently" and that former Postmaster General Brown and McCracken participated in a "secret meeting" held in a room adjacent to Brown's Post Office department office at which the country was divided into certain mail routes and contracts were distributed among "particular" operating companies.

IN A unanimous opinion the Supreme Court of the United States held that all persons accused of violating the late national prohibition laws and whose cases had not been finally adjudicated by December 5 last, when the Eighteenth amendment was repealed should be set free. The opinion held that repeal canceled the power of prosecution.

According to the Department of Justice there were 9,673 prohibition cases, with about 13,000 defendants, pending in federal courts.

WITH little debate the senate passed the bill introduced by Senator Hiram Johnson of California which is designed to prevent the floating in America of private loans to countries now defaulting on past debts. Before passing it, the senators amended the measure so that it would not hamper the President's new scheme to grant to foreign nations loans with which to buy American goods. A proviso was written in declaring that loans to foreign defaulters could still be made by government owned corporations.

As it now stands, however, the bill puts in the hands of the administration its most powerful weapon for forcing payment of defaulted war debts. No defaulting nation may float any private loan in this country, and any American aiding in the illegal flotation of a private loan to a defaulter would be liable to five years in jail and $10,000 in fines.

According to Chairman Jesse Jones of the RFC, the President's plan calls for the creation of a trading bank which will partially underwrite extension of credits to foreign purchasers of American goods. The bank would be entirely owned by the government, so the arrangement would actually be a partial government guarantee of payment to the American producer. The bank would be a division of the RFC.

ONLY one representative voted "no" when the house of representatives passed on the bill to appropriate $550,000,000 for continuation of CWA and relief activities. The lone opponent was Representative George B. Verrill of Texas, Democrat. The money is to be used by the federal emergency relief administration for keeping up the federal dole to the idle for another year and for continuing the Civil Works administration until the early part of May. About 500 millions is to be used for the former purpose, it was said, and about 450 for the CWA.

OGDEN L. MILLS, who, whether or not you like him, is one of the most powerful leaders of the Republican party, has often been spoken of as a possible or even probable candidate for the G. O. P. Presidential nomination in 1936. But the New Yorker has now removed himself from that category. While in California to see Herbert Hoover and others, Mr. Mills told the press "I most certainly have no intention of becoming a candidate. Nor will I mix in local or sectional politics."

WAYNE—An old landmark on Michigan avenue, just east of old Dearborn, disappeared this week when the old bridge which handled west-bound traffic over the River Rouge was dismantled. When work at this point is completed there will be no trace of the old roadway, since the entire right of way between the river and the new pavement is being landscaped.—County Review.

THE STUDENT FRATERNITY MURDER

by Milton Propper

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Stricken during initiation into the Alpha Sigma Beta fraternity, Stuart Jordan, university student, died almost immediately. His death, however, was not the end of the story. Rankin, Philadelphia detective, takes charge of the investigation.

CHAPTER II—An injection of cocaine is shown to have been the cause of Jordan's death. Rankin finds all the students who are marked with thumbtacks. His only known relative is his uncle, Howard Merrick, St. Louis banker, also his guardian, and his heir.

In reply to the boy's question, Rankin took out a professional card from his pocket.

"This will tell you my business," he said. "If you have seen the newspaper today, you'll know that a student named Jordan from the next dormitory was killed last night in a fraternity house. I am investigating his death. I believe the latest accounts mentioned that though a junior at the university, Jordan only entered this year. For the last two, he attended Aberdeen college in Hannibal, Mo., transferring this past autumn. The office of admissions informs me, Mr. Randall, that Aberdeen was also your original Alma Mater."

The boy closed the door of his room and invited Rankin to a chair; he took another.

"Oh, is that why you've called on me?" he remarked. "Yes, I was a freshman last year in Hannibal, but decided I would rather go to a larger and better known school in this part of the country. Now it seems I'll have to quit school, without even finishing the term."

Rankin was properly interested. "Is that so?" Mrs. Dixie said something about you not being in the host of death. I hope it isn't that."

"That's just the trouble," Randall explained. "A damnable tubercular condition keeps undermining my strength. I wasn't here in October more than a week and classes had only begun when it got the better of me. My doctor advised me to withdraw for the semester and rest a while at home; and Mr. Warwick granted me a leave of absence on his certificate of illness. That's why I just signed up for military training class, instead of gymnasium. But I feel the whole trouble beginning again and I don't think I'll be able to see it through."

"I was wondering what your uniform signified," the detective stated. "I didn't know that the university taught military tactics as a study."

"It is a substitute for gymnasium work. Naturally, in my condition, it was much easier."

Rankin reverted to the subject of his visit. "What I wanted to ask you, Mr. Randall, is whether you were acquainted with Stuart Jordan at Aberdeen. I am seeking for facts about his past life in hopes of learning something that will help clarify the problem of his death. Anything you know of him might be valuable."

"As a matter of fact, I did know him," the student replied. "Only casually, though; he was a sophomore, a class ahead of me. For one term, he happened to serve as proctor of the freshman dormitory in which I lived at Aberdeen. But that was my only contact with him and I don't suppose there would be anything in that which you could possibly use."

"Didn't anything ever occur that might throw some light on the crime?" Though reasonably Rankin could hardly have expected more, he was disappointed.

"Nothing that I remember," Randall spoke slowly. "Jordan had some difficulty with a classmate of his, Ralph Buckley; I heard of that because it took place in my dormitory. But that couldn't have anything to do with it."

The detective's recognition of the name startled him.

"Ralph Buckley, did you say?" Rankin demanded sharply. "Do you mean that he was also at Aberdeen?"

"Certainly—at the same time as Jordan, during the past two years. As I said, they were both sophomores just when I entered. The trouble between them broke out the middle of last year." The boy paused. "How is it you were familiar with Buckley's name when I mentioned it?" he inquired curiously.

"I had heard he came from Jordan's home town, Vandalla, and intended looking him up. Besides that, he is a freshman right here at the university."

It was Walter Randall's turn to be surprised and he raised his eyebrows expressively.

"Here at Philadelphia? That's news to me, sir."

"Had you known that Stuart Jordan was here before you got news of his death today?"

"Only for the past few weeks," the student replied. "I caught sight of him one day going into the college bookshop on Woodland avenue. I didn't speak to him then. I meant to look him up later, but haven't got around to it."

Rankin shook his head in obvious perplexity. "I don't see how Buckley could possibly have studied at Aberdeen for two years," he ruminated. "His record from the office of admissions says nothing about any college education before he came to Philadelphia. In fact, it distinctly states that since graduating from high school, two years ago, he worked at home."

"I think I can explain that," Randall declared. "He simply gave false information in the application he filled out for admission here. You see, because of his run-in with Jordan, he was dismissed dishonorably from Aberdeen. With such a blot on his record, no other school in the country would accept him. To get in another college, he would have to begin all over, as if he came directly from high school. And then he'd have to lie about how he spent the two intervening years. If the university didn't suspect anything, it would believe his story about working."

The scheme Randall outlined probably explained the deception correctly, but Rankin made a mental note to inquire of Mr. Warwick as to its feasibility.

"Now, Mr. Randall," he asked, "what was the cause of this trouble between him and young Jordan?"

"I tell you that," the boy said reluctantly. "I don't want you to use me to prove anything against Buckley. I can't have any connection with Stuart's death, and I wouldn't care to get him into a jam."

His entire natural attitude moved the detective to set his mind at ease.

"You will have no responsibility at all," he promised persuasively. "I can learn the same facts from the Aberdeen authorities; and they will have to confirm them, anyhow. So it won't be necessary for you ever to appear in the case."

With this assurance, Randall began an account of the dead boy's fond with Buckley. Though a dead institution, Aberdeen maintained separate sleeping quarters for its first-year men; and as at other colleges, it was the system there to place upper classmen as monitors in charge of them. While a first-year student, Jordan had served as class secretary; which was probably why he was selected as a monitor during his second term the past year. He had a proctor's duties to maintain order among the rooms he controlled, inform the proper medical agency of illness among the boys and advise them when he could. He must also report serious infractions of school regulations to the official executive committee.

In particular, the edict against gambling in the dormitories was very strict. The first discord was caused by Jordan's discovery of Buckley and two of his charges engaged in a crap game for large stakes. Both the students were young men and inexperienced, with more money and less balance than was good for them; somehow, Buckley had become acquainted with them. At that first encounter, there was no actual quarrel nor any suggestion that Buckley did not play an honest game. When Jordan arrived, the youngsters had already lost two hundred dollars; but he merely requested them to quit the game and not repeat the offense. His classmate had protested so angrily that Randall, on the floor below, heard the commotion; in the end, however, Buckley submitted with bad grace.

"You Will Have No Responsibility at All," He Promised Persuasively.

It was Jordan's second encounter with Buckley that precipitated the fight. Toward the first of April, he learned in some manner that a similar game was in progress, and interrupting it, he found the two freshmen again heavy losers. This time less lenient, most of his indignation, directed against Buckley. He ordered him to stay away from the students in his dormitory and threatened to compel him to do so. And then, because he already knew of something disreputable in his past life in Vandalla—he accused him of cheating with loaded dice. Before he could be stopped, Jordan seized them and proved his claim that they were weighted inside. Buckley then attacked him, partly in hatred and partly in dismay at being caught; violent blows were exchanged and a battle royal might have ensued had not other occupants on the same floor been attracted by the uproar and separated the antagonists.

Randall had no idea how information of the altercation and its causes reached the college authorities. In all probability, one of the disgruntled victims of Buckley's fraud carried the tale to the executive committee. At any rate, Randall knew definitely that several days later that body began an investigation. Jordan, the two freshmen and others were summoned before it and perforce testified against Buckley; as a result, he was expelled from Aberdeen.

"Did it ever come to your ears," Rankin asked when the student concluded his recital, "that Buckley threatened Jordan?" His must have considered him to blame for his disgrace."

Randall shook his head. "I suppose he did, but I couldn't say about that," he answered. "You see, as far as I'm concerned, the whole affair is hazy; I wasn't in the dorm at the time of the argument. I got it all from other fellows afterward and can only tell you what they told me."

"Do you know what became of Buckley between the time he left Aberdeen and turned up here?"

At the negative reply, Rankin rose and thanked the boy for his assistance; it was evident that he could give him no further information at the moment.

The detective did not make the mistake of placing too great a value as yet upon his account. True, it represented his first progress in the case and revealed a motive for Jordan's death. While it might seem rather weak to the adult point of view, a college man would be apt to consider it serious and exonerate his gravity.

And in Buckley, who was evidently something of a rogue, it would excite a bitterness more malignant than a worse injury. Particularly if, since coming to the university, the murdered boy should have again clashed with him or interfered with his pursuits. But to prove that Buckley had reason to commit the crime was not enough, if he lacked the opportunity. That problem Rankin could not deal with until he learned where the two missing brothers had been during the initiation. It seemed impossible that Buckley, presumably a stranger to the ritual, was nevertheless present at the ceremony.

Breaking a Mirror

Don't be alarmed if you break a mirror and some one says that you'll have seven years' bad luck, because, like most superstitions, it is all nonsense and merely the end of witchcraft that was practiced during the Middle Ages. In those days if some one wanted to do harm to some one else he would contrive to break a mirror into which the second person had lately peered. It was said that if the mirror could be broken before the image of the victim had "evaporated" seven years' bad luck would be bound to follow the smashing of the glass. Actually, of course, the whole idea is ridiculous, just as ridiculous as thinking that the spilling of salt will bring bad luck. That particular superstition is the result of the very ancient idea that to spill salt at a man's table after one has dined with him is to insult him and challenge him to battle.

OUR NEIGHBORS

DEXTER—According to the report in the February edition of The Michigan Bell, the official magazine of the Michigan Bell Telephone company, Miss Minnie Daley, agency chief operator of the Dexter exchange, led the Traffic department of the Southern district. She was credited with the sale of 88 new telephones for the year 1933.—Leader.

STOCKBRIDGE—Robert Hubbard left Sunday afternoon for Camp Houghton where he has a position in the CCC as a piano player for the Camp. Through the work of Paul Goodwin and the supervisor of Roscommon county, he was able to enter under the quota of that county. Only three boys so far have been called direct from our village.—Brief-Sun.

BRIGHTON—Looking helpless as a large turtle when it is turned over on its back, a two and a half ton Mundus truck loaded with cases of beer was lying on its side at 3:00 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the foot of a seven-foot wall of Grand River just this side of where the street turns east toward Detroit at the intersection with old US-28. In spite of the seven-foot drop and the flop-over that it made, the truck did not seem, to the casual observer at least, to be badly damaged. The cases of beer also appeared to be intact and there was no sign of an amber stream winding its way through the freshly-fallen snow. But there was a hole large enough to put a football, or perhaps an "Andy" would say, "a couple of footballs" would say, "a couple of footballs" through, punched in the cobblestone basement of the Skoda house where the lugging truck had rammed it. Mr. and Mrs. Mann, of the Brighton Antique Shop, who at present occupy the residence must have thought one of the old war-time caterpillar tractors was making an attack upon them when the heavy vehicle struck.—Argus.

MORENCI—Flying squirrels paid a visit to the Observer office Tuesday. The squirrels, four of them, were captured by Artens Wotring on the Scott Clements farm five miles northeast of Morenci. Mr. Clements and Mr. Wotring brought the squirrels to the Observer office Tuesday and had them put on a flying act around the office. Flying squirrels differ from birds as gliders do from airplanes. They can soar, but can climb no higher than their starting point. Flying squirrels seem to be a scarce article of late. Mr. Clements said he had not seen one before in years.—Observer.

MASON—A charge of dynamite at the base of a beaver dam in section 27 of Alaledon township last week under the work of a thriving colony of beavers. Blasting of the dam was necessary to save a stretch of county road and about 200 acres of farm land from inundation. County road officials were granted permission by the state conservation commission to wreck the dam. Two years ago beavers built dams in the same locality. The county drain commissioner sent wrecking crews to the dams then. It is estimated that the present colony numbers about 100 animals.—County News.

PLYMOUTH—Business is going to be from 20 to 25 percent above normal during the year 1934, declared Clifton Jackson, Plymouth high school graduate and now president of the American Refunding company of New York in an address Tuesday evening before members of the Plymouth Kiwanis club. He made the prediction that business would continue to improve during all of 1934 and 1935, with the peak in 1936. "Statistics of business activities have been recorded in this country since 1787. From a study of these records and charts, the peaks and depressions of our economic history can be traced.—In 1929 business was 10 percent above normal; in March 1933, business was 51 percent below normal. This peak of 1929 has been equaled, or surpassed, fifteen times in our history, but never has the business low point been equaled or exceeded the low point of 51 percent in 1933," he said. "Strange as it may seem, the upturn of the present depression was first begun on June second, 1932." Mr. Jackson is well known to many of the old Plymouth residents. He is a graduate of the Plymouth high school, class of 1907. He has been assistant manager of the John Wannamaker Co., New York, director and vice president of Broadway Association, and now is president of The American Refunding Corporation of New York.—Mail.

Name "Marion" and "Marion"

There seems to be no hard and fast rule concerning the spelling of the Christian name "Marion." Its early literature it was spelled both with an "a" and with an "o." Marion as a feminine name is derived from that of the Virgin Mary, and in France as early as the thirteenth century was so spelled. Later there appeared a French feminine name, Marianne, a combination of Marie and Anne, which subsequently was abbreviated to Marion. Among the Latin races, many men were also named for the Virgin Mary, and the name Marion, spelled with an "o" or with an "a," is frequently used.

War Mail in Zinc Balls.

Recalls Siege of Paris
During the siege of Paris by the Germans in 1870 the post office administration hit upon the expedient of adding letters to small zinc globes, water tight and hermetically sealed, and dropping them into the Seine. There they floated, if they were not captured by the Germans, down the river to the French lines, where a net stretched across the river gathered them in, and they were sent on their way. Unfortunately for the French, the Germans discovered the character of these zinc floats, and as they could not hope to see and fish out by ordinary means all the letters that went down thus, they stretched across the river, at Villeneuve Saint-Georges, a net of their own and effectually stopped this system of postal communication.

The zinc balls and their use were pretty nearly forgotten, when, about thirty years ago, a fisherman found in the Seine, near Villeneuve, a queer looking globe of zinc. With a large knife he opened it, and found 300 letters, still legible, and all dated December, 1870. They were delivered to the postal authorities and were forwarded to their destination after having been in the river for more than thirty years.

Oddest Horse Race in World
The most thrilling and peculiar horse race in the world is the Fallo. It occurs twice yearly at Senna, a medieval little Italian town, which has witnessed this event for centuries, says a writer in the Cape Argus. The king of Italy and other members of the royal family usually honor the race. The race is run between different communes of the town, each of which provides a horse and a jockey. The popularity of the event together with the fiery enthusiasm of the spectators is mainly due to the great risk of serious injury entailed by those taking part. Nothing in the race is adjudged foul. Supporters of the different entrants are allowed to poison, incapacitate or steal a rival horse, jockeys and stablehands are offered thousands of pounds in bribes to tamper with the animals. Concealed pits have been dug in exercise grounds so that the beasts would injure themselves.

Icebergs Grow Long
One iceberg sighted by explorers in the Antarctic in 1930 was more than 30 miles long.

Shaggy-Haired Mammoths Larger Than Elephants

Mammoths were huge, shaggy-haired beasts, resembling both the mastodons which preceded them and the elephants of today. They had trunks and long, curving ivory tusks. They lived in what are now North America, Europe, and Asia and existed during the ice age, which started about the beginning of the Pleistocene period and lasted up to the beginning of the modern age, or the last fifteen or twenty thousand years. Bones of mammoths have been found by scientific investigators in many places in this country and in Europe.

In Siberia complete specimens have been found frozen in the ground by modern scientific investigators. Ivory from the remains of mammoths for many hundreds of years has been an article of commerce in Siberia. The flesh and hair of the specimens found in frozen ground were in a good state of preservation. Mammoths were larger than the present-day Indian elephants and some of them were larger than the huge African elephants. They differed from the modern elephant in that their ears were much smaller and their tusks longer and more curving. Chicago Tribune.

The Northmen

The Northmen were sea rovers from Denmark, Norway and Sweden who became famous during the period between the middle of the Eighth and the beginning of the Thirteenth centuries. They were also known as Vikings. Many of them penetrated into far lands and subdued weaker rivals. They began their first attack upon England in 787 and raided the shores of Flanders and France. From about the middle of the Ninth century bodies of Northmen established themselves in permanent camps at the mouths of the French rivers. They took possession of Paris, although eventually they were repulsed. Alfred drove them from England, but Charles the Simple of France turned over to Italy, one of their chiefs, the duchy of Normandy. As early as 1500 they entered the Mediterranean and founded kingdoms in lower Italy and Sicily. They also penetrated into Russia.

Goats' Milk Is Popular

Goats are kept for three main reasons. The first is because they can supply enough milk for the average family cheaply, thriving on poor or rough land. The second is because the goat does not contract or give off in its milk the germs of tuberculosis. The first named reason has behind it the goat's omnivorous appetite, which includes all the ordinary crops as well as some weeds and leaves of low-growing deciduous trees. The third reason has to do with the peculiar qualities of goats' milk and, it is by far the most important from the viewpoint of human health. Chemical analyses have shown that goats' milk more closely approximates the human mother's milk and has a larger proportion of the more important chemical elements than has cows' milk. Personal Service Bureau Chelsea Continues Losing Streak

Dear Hi-Lighters:

Well! Well! Is news flying around here? Just ask us!

First we must admit our column didn't make such a wonderful beginning for so much news we were dying to tell you we forgot to keep our people straight. Our apologies go out to the captain of the reserve basketball team for our mistake in naming the girl whom he was rushing. Don't think that he isn't rushing someone—Oh no, he is, but alas, it's that very prominent blonde freshman who frequents the corner drug store and Dud—whooops! I nearly told you—well, he's been seen so much lately in the company of one of the more promising of the sophomore class at St. Mary's. So that's that.

Now to the rest of the news. St. Mary's High had a party on Wednesday night last—and lo! Who do you think was there from our high school? No less than the two cronies in the sophomore class (you know the two blondes) in the company of a sophomore and a senior from St. Mary's. Now you guess? If you can't, and still want to know just see the Personal Service Bureau. We also spied a blonde sophomore (a boy) who might know if I said he reminds me of Ozzie Nelson, the orchestra leader—and another sophomore, the captain of the reserve basketball team. By the way, we're sure that's why he made that splendid foul shot in the Milan game—did you see who was watching him? We did, she's very, very dark and old, so dense! You remember the song "Rose Marie"? Just change the last three letters on "Rose" and you have it. Know now?

Some questions have been asked and now we shall endeavor to answer them. Yes (to the doubtful Junior): it's true about that sophomore-senior affair. We don't know anything to the contrary. She, the senior, evidently thinks he's okay and after all that's all that's necessary—but I wouldn't suggest you put much faith in it.

To that person who wanted to know with whom Pete Allhouse was dancing so much Saturday evening: Simple, another of the sophomores—she's blonde, wears glasses and happened to be wearing a brown crepe dress, trimmed in orange, Saturday night. You certainly ought to know now.

True that Jean Blecker was there in the usual company.

This only makes so little of the news, but don't worry—next week will bring more.

For no good reason at all—
Personal Service Bureau.

A Self-Satisfied Sap

According to an unofficial census, there are over a million egotists in this country. An egotist is a man who's so satisfied with himself that he goes to the zoo in order to congratulate the stock.

One fellow was so conceited he thought he did his folks a favor by being born. He used to talk in his sleep, and then listen for the applause. Last year he gave a speech in Switzerland and even charged the people for the echoes. He got the impression that his voice was so wonderful that he had a phonograph record made of his cough.

He finds his mind is so narrow he can wear a razor blade for a hat, and is so sorry that he wasn't born triplets; he's even too smart to be twins.

This fellow says he's a self-made man; he certainly must have encountered labor troubles, and during a strike at that. Every thought in of himself, which gives him practically nothing to think about. He's just the type that when he goes to a movie, he takes a bunch of photographs of himself to look at during the show.

He always gazes into two looking glasses because he figures he's too handsome for one mirror. And when he'd like to do something really big, he can't even kick a mouse in the shins.

After all, it's so foolish to be egotistical, because if you're really great, people are bound to admit it. You won't have to tell them. Remember that!

Win One, Lose One

Last Friday afternoon the ninth graders thought they were iron men, so they took on a pick-up team of Sophomores and Juniors. The Freshmen beat them by a score of 22 to 10. After that game they played the 7th and 8th graders and were beaten by a score of 5 to 6.

On Saturday, Feb. 3 the boys played in the basketball festival at Ann Arbor. They won their game with Clinton Class C by a score of 16 to 8. McBride and Meyers were high point men in this game.

Always Take Time

1. Take time to be pleasant. A bright smile or a pleasant word falls like a sunbeam upon the hearts of those around us.

2. Take time to be polite. A gentle "I thank you," "If you please," etc., even to an inferior, is no compromise of dignity, and you know—

True politeness is to say the kindest things to the kindest way.

3. Take time to be patient. Patience and kindness will open a way for friendliness with almost any person around us.

4. Take time to be thoughtful about the aged. Respect gray hair, even if they crown the head of a beggar.

And remember—

If friendliness you do hold high, five things observe with care;

Of whom you speak, to whom you speak, And how, and when, and where.

When I have time

When I have time, so many things I'll do

To make life happier, and more fair

For those whose lives are crowded now with care,

I'll help to lift them from their low despair.

When I have time

When I have time, the friend I love so well

Shall know no more the weary, tolling days;

I'll lend her feet in pleasant paths all ways

And cheer her heart with words of sweetest praise.

When I have time

When you have time the friend you hold so dear

May be beyond the reach of all your sweet intent,

May never know that you so kindly meant

To fill her life with any such loving content.

When you had time

Now is the time. Ah, friends, no longer wait

To scatter loving smiles and words, or cheer—

To those around whose lives are now so dear

That may not meet you in the coming year.

Now is the time!

House and Home

A house is built of bricks and stone,

Of sills and posts and piers,

But a home is built of loving deeds

That stand a thousand years;

A house, though built a humble cot,

Within its walls may hold

A home of priceless beauty, rich in love eternal.

The men of earth build houses, hall

And chambers, roofs and doors,

But the women of earth—God knows!

The woman build the homes.

I've could not stay away from Paradise

For Oh, no matter where

Her Precious Presence led the way,

Let Paradise be there.

Station C-R-A-Z-Y

On Again

It is said that a picture of one of our Seniors was being passed around study-hall the other day. He had both hands in his pockets and stood there very tall and stately. Everyone flattered him until it was passed to our freshman, Harley Prudden, who immediately said: "Oh, that's all wrong."

"What's all wrong," asked a host of bystanders. "Why," said Harley, "if I were on there and he had both his hands in my pockets it would be O. K. then."

Now for a series of dumb questions?

Do the Rocky Mountains rock?

Do people play golf on the Gulf of Mexico?

Does stability mean taking care of a stable?

Is a monastery a place for monsters?

Chas. P.: "That noble phrase 'Hate changed'."

Leona M.: "Changed to what, Charlie?"

Chas. P.: "Hats on! The woodpecker will soon be back to get another peck."

To land, or to spend, or to give in,

'Tis a very good world that we live in;

But to borrow or beg, or get a man's own,

'Tis the very worst world that ever was known.

Station C-R-A-Z-Y going off the air again.

So long—So short.

Kipling must have been thinking of a patent cigar lighter, when he wrote "The Light That Failed."

Celebrated Rise of the Nile
In the days of the Pharaohs it was believed that unless certain prescribed ceremonies were performed with due reverence to the proper time and place, the Nile river would refuse to rise.

The celebrations were participated in by all classes, with great pomp and ceremony. They began when the river commenced to rise, and the celebrations were proportionate to the height of the rise.

Aids to Agriculture

The revolution in method wrought by the tractor is not generally realized in urban communities. It ushered in the era of power-farming, affording employment to a smaller number of persons, but with an increase of individual output. The chemist with his fertilizers, the biologist by segregating special resistant qualities for particular climates and soils, have all contributed their quota to a development as significant in its way as the railway and steamship.

Modern Orchestra Goes

Back to Bow and Arrow
Music as an art—at least as we understand it—is a purely accidental development scarcely 400 years old, says a writer in the Kansas City Star. Within that short span of time the human imagination has found many widely differing modes of expression through music; the conception of song melody and instrumental melody has changed radically; the various musical instruments have undergone vast improvement and some have definitely been relegated to the museum. But throughout this entire period the orchestra has been undergoing a fascinating evolution.

The modern orchestra may be said to go back to the bow and arrow as its starting point. For the orchestra, as we know it, was built around the string quartet; and the string quartet was composed of the violin family. Musicologists assume that the origin of the violin may be traced to the time when primitive man in letting fly the bow from the arrow heard the sound made by the bow string. Slowly and painfully this primitive idea was developed until it found its perfect force in the Cremona and Guarneri violins. A moment's examination of the violin will convince the observer that the instrument is in principle the same as the bow which the hunter used.

Similarly, in the case of the flute, the assumption is that a primitive shepherd in tending his sheep heard the wind blowing across the end of the reed. Thus we see that in the case of the orchestra it is the unpredictable leaps of the human imagination that have produced its instruments, and that its origins go back to the roots of human nature.

No Other Sport Equals

That of 'Coon Hunting

There is a strange appeal to 'coon hunting that can be compared to no other sport. There is a cleanliness among 'coon hunters, too, says an authority in the Detroit Free Press, that bears evidence of the uniqueness of this type of enjoyment. More important than the 'coon by far, is the dog, for without a dog there would be no 'coon chase, no muffs, no thrill of "harking up," no stumbling one's way through the night-blanketed woods, following the bound whose nose is a hundred times keener than the human.

Within the past few years, 'coon hunting has been developing more and more as a sport and less as a skin-getting game. It is true that the coon still does play a part in the economy of the 'coon hunter's set-up, but they consider their catch less as a money-crop than as a source of ready cash with which to purchase and maintain their dogs. This seems to be the attitude among the 'coon hunters, and with the development of a more "sporting" attitude, comes the greater enjoyment of a prolonged chase. Of course, the destruction of

McINTEE SCHOOL NEWS

Our sixth and seventh grades filled the holes in our school desks and painted them.—Donald Harr, 8rd grade.

Mrs. Robinson was here this month and gave our seventh grade the county test. It was passed with an average of B.

Our visitors for the past month were: S. Foster of Chelsea, Mr. Jackson of Jackson, Mrs. Robinson, our supervising teacher, and Mrs. Walter Harr.

Our Health meeting on January 28 was well attended, 35 people being present. We enjoyed the lecture on "Prevention of Contagious Diseases." Dr. Topps of Ann Arbor gave the talk.

The percentage of attendance for the year is 90.3 per cent, with two tardy marks for the month of January.

—Mary Ulrich, 6th grade.

Our seventh grade has made some wooden articles fashioned after patterns in Hamilton's Arithmetic book, higher grades.

Our next month's work is written composition. We have the covers made and have added several compositions to them. These will be exchanged with some other school in the county.

We have finished our 4-H hot lunch posters and soon will start on our story. —Margella Huyek, 6th grade.

We sent a letter to the ladies of our district who belong to the nutrition group at Waterloo thanking them for our lovely balanced hot lunches and their fine cooperation.
