The Story of Eastertide in Music

Business Places Will Close On Good Friday

In keeping with the custom which has prevailed in Chelsea for many years, local business places will close from 12 o'clock noon until 3 o'clock on Good Friday.

Following is the proclamation by J. E. McKune, village president, in which he requests this observance:

To the people of Chelsea:
According to an ancient practice in Christian civilization, Christian people have reverently observed the anniversary of the death of our Lord.
From time immemorial on the day
called "Good Friday" they have reflected upon the truths connected with His death.

To make it convenient for all Christian people of Chelsea to attend their respective places of worship, and to lend encouragement to such a wholesome practice, I, J. Edward McKune, President of the Village of Chelsea, request that on Friday, March 30, in the year of Our Lord 1934, all commercial enterprises discontinue business from twelve o'clock noon until three o'clock.

By Order of Village President,
J. Edward McKune.

Inaugurates Policy of Service Charges

Announcement is made by the Chelsea State Bank in an advertisement on another page of this issue that, beginning April 1st, they will make nominal charges for some branches of their service.

Although the definite policy which they will follow in this respect has not been made public it is understood that a small monthly charge will be made on commercial deposits when an individual's account falls below a stipulated amount, and that there will be a fee collected for handling out-of-town checks. Definite information on these items and other matters for which a charge will be made will be provided patrons when they call at the bank, according to the advertisement.

The policy of making charges for some of the services rendered is quite generally practiced in banking circles, and has been effective in Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti for some time. The charges to be made locally and in all other banks of the county outside of the cities named will be lower than the general prevailing rate, according to officials of the Chelsea bank.

APPOINTED LOCAL DEALER

Announcement is made by Harper Sales & Service that they have been appointed local dealers for Plymouth and Dodge motor cars and Dodge trucks. Mr. Harper now has the cars on display and offers complete service for these cars. He will continue his agency for the Pontiac line of cars.

JACKSON—There must be a first in everything. Last Sunday evening three boys walked to the Michigan Center dam. The water was frozen except in one spot where there was a small opening. The temperature was below freezing, about 15 degrees. In to the icy waters the three plunged, swam about for several minutes to inaugurate the 1934 outdoor swimming season.—Evening Star.

Elementary News

Kindergarten
We are reorganizing again. Our room is repainted and very clean. We have nice poster boards to put our pictures on. Eleanor Ann Lamberton donated a nice doll.

First Grade
—are back in their nice new room. They have new lockers for their wraps. Now that they are back, they are beginning to learn to write.

Second Grade
—are making Easter cards and baskets. They are having a "cleanliness drive," to learn the good ways of doing things. They have read "The Play Road to Health," and are trying to follow that as an example. These are the questions they ask when entering the classroom for work—
Am I ready for school today?
Is my hair brushed?
Is my face washed?
Are my ears clean?
Are my teeth brushed?
Is my neck clean?
Are my hands washed?
Are my finger nails clean?
Have I a fresh handkerchief?
Are my clothes neat?
Are my stockings clean?
Are my shoes shined?
Are my shoes laced tight?
Ask the looking glass!
Is our class room clean?
They hope all the mothers will co-operate with them and help carry on this campaign, and make it a success. Poems some of the little folks wrote:

I saw a little snowflake
As it fluttered in the breeze,
I reached out to take it
But it fell among the trees.
—Virginia Spaulding.

Pretty little snowflakes,
Floating in the air,
Landing on the hills and vales,
And almost everywhere.
—Joyce Foster.

I saw a little snowflake
Way up in the sky,
And when I went to reach for it
It hit me in the eye.
—Sumner Oesterle.

I saw a little snowflake
Fluttering in the air,
It flew around my head
And settled in my hair.
—Esther Riemschneider.

Little snowflakes fluttering in the breeze,
When you fall into the lake, I hate to see you freeze.
—Philip Vogel.

I am a little snowflake,
I came for the children's sake—
For the children to romp and play all through
The long, long winter days.
—Doris Collins.

Third Grade
—are making Easter pictures. Miss Yager gave them a shelf in the cubboards to use as their own. These are some of the things they do in their extra time.
Things to do—
Use combination cards.
Read to find out something which we may tell the class.
Study the thing that our report cards shows we need.
Make a picture.
Help others.
Write a story.
Write poems or riddles.

Fourth Grade
—are all organized in their new room on the west side of the building. Everyone is back except Robert Fisher. Lillian Allhouse is back after having scarlet fever.

Fifth Grade
—are making center pieces from tin cans and decorating them with colored paper. They are also making crayon pictures. They are going to have new curtains which the girls will help make.

Sixth Grade
Doris Allhouse has returned to school after an absence of several weeks.
Jean Walworth brought a Vanessa Milbert's butterfly, one of the tortoise shells to school last week. An interesting thing about this butterfly is that it hibernates in the image form. We have added the word image to our vocabulary.
We have had many interesting rocks brought in to the classroom. We find that quartz and granite stones are most common. Wendall Richards brought in some good specimens of fossils—they were found in a driveway. We have been surprised at the beauty that we kick about under our feet.
Because we are studying about France we are learning some French songs. We have learned so far: "Faire Jacques" and "Allouette, Gentille Allouette."
Several spring birds have been reported. We will keep a bird record.
Our interest in birds made us want to know not only the bird but where they migrate, how they build their nest and something of their habits. We are reading the "Song of the Cardinal," a lovely story about a beautiful redbird.

You Can't Afford to Miss . . .

What?—The Senior play, "The Whole Town's Talking."
When?—Thursday and Friday, the 5th and 6th of April.
Where?—Chelsea public school gymnasium.
One of the biggest events of the season, "The Whole Town's Talking," is under way and will soon be ready for your approval. It is a very exciting play, the action taking place in the living room of the Simmons home in Thandusky, Ohio. The cast of characters is as follows:
Henry Simmons, a manufacturer—Roger Hinderer.
Harriet Simmons, his wife—Arlene Satterthwaite.
Ethel Simmons, their daughter—Helen Hofferick.
Chester Binney, Simmons' partner—Donald Oesterle.
Lilly Lythe, a motion picture star—Barbara Bleecker.
Donald Surf, a motion picture director—Bud Gulde.
Roger Shields, a young Chicago blood—Paul Rogers.
Lila Wilson, Sally Otis, friends of Ethel's—Jean Irwin, Mildred Beaman.
Annie, a maid—Gladys Abdon.
Sadie Bloom, a dancing teacher—Ruth Fajst.
Taxi driver—Jim Panarites.
And now for a few questions.
Do Mr. and Mrs. Simmons really quarrel?
Who is the dark haired sheik who goes about kissing the ladies' hands?
Can Chester Binney speak French correctly or does he just think he can?
We hear there's a terrible fight in the dark room. Is this so? If it is what are they fighting about?
Lila Wilcox 14th juh too excited for words. Of course she lives in Thandusky, but does she stutter, lisp or is she tongue tied? I wonder!
How does the taxi driver happen to come to the Simmons home? Does he get his reward?
What? You say you can't answer these questions? Well, just you buy yourself a ticket to this show and we are sure your troubles all will end and your curiosity will be more than satisfied.
Come on—everyone! Buy a ticket and enjoy the fun.

MANCHESTER — The windows will start tomorrow. They are finished building, furnace connections made and heat turned on, so interior work will start tomorrow. They are finishing work on the roof and there is much yet to be done there.—Enter-prise.

FIXING OF EASTER
Presented a
VEXING PROBLEM

HAT Easter Sunday is what is known in ecclesiastical circles as a "movable feast," falling now upon one calendar date and again upon another, yet always at present upon a Sunday, is a fact casually accepted without doubt or inquiry practically the world over. Something of mystery, however, attaches to this chronological paradox that now and then perplexes the curious and the inquisitorial, declares a writer in the Kansas City Star.

The time of the Crucifixion is fixed as coincident with the Jewish paschal or paschal feast, in the Jewish calendar month "Nisan," the month of the vernal equinox. The first obscurity in regard to the day arose from the Christian Gospels themselves. The Synoptic Gospels seemed to favor the day as the fifteenth of Nisan, that of St. John, the fourteenth. This established, by the preponderance of evidence, that the Crucifixion occurred on Friday, the day before the Jewish Sabbath. According to Matthew, the resurrection occurred "in the end of the Sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week."

Ecclesiastical history preserves three distinct phases relating to the subsequent commemorative day which came to be known as Easter. Although the observance of Easter was at a very early period the practice of the Christian church, a serious difference as to the day for its observance soon arose between the Christians of Jewish and those of Gentile descent. With the Jewish Christians, who associated the death of Christ with the sacrifice of the paschal lamb at the Passover, which ended "on the fourteenth day of the moon at evening," the Easter festival followed the paschal tradition, no matter what day of the lunar month it chanced to fall upon. The Gentile Christians, on the other hand, following the Synoptic Gospels, identified the first day of the week, Sunday, as the day of Resurrection, and kept the preceding Friday as the anniversary of the Crucifixion. This was the phase of the controversy that characterized the first centuries of Christianity.

The second stage in the Easter controversy centers around the Council of Nice, A. D. 325, where so many doctrinal points were given authoritative sanction. This council was summoned by Emperor Constantine. The decision of the council was that Easter was to be kept on Sunday throughout the Christian world. It was at this point that astronomical science entered into the controversy. The correct date of the Easter festival was to be calculated at Alexandria, the then home of astronomical science, and the Roman pontiff was to communicate the date to the churches. This arrangement fixed the date of Easter Sunday as the Sunday "following the fourteenth day of the paschal moon," and defined the paschal moon as "the moon whose fourteenth day followed the spring equinox." But this ruling did not settle all difficulties. The third phase of the controversy arose from the divergent calendars and cycles in vogue in the Eastern and Western church centers. St. Augustine tells us that in the year 387 the churches of Gaul kept Easter on March 21, those of Italy on April 18, while the Egyptian Christians celebrated April 25 as Easter day. The British and Irish churches for a long time adhered to an ancient system of computation, though they observed Sunday as the Easter day.

With the adoption of the Mosaic cycle as a guide, the formula for fixing the Easter date was determined as "the first Sunday which occurs after the first full moon, or, more accurately, after the first fourteenth day of the moon, following the 21st of March, which is the vernal equinox." As a result, the earliest possible date of Easter is March 22, the latest April 25.

Observance of Lent
THE observance of Lent began with 340 years after Christ's time, but there was no specified number of days of fasting. It was extended to about 40 days by the fourth century and in the eighth or ninth century it was fixed to commence with Ash Wednesday and end with Easter Sunday. Forty days are thus observed,

THE STUDENT FRATERNITY MURDER

By Milton Propper

WIND SERVICE

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Stricken during initiation into the Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Stuart Jordan, University student, died almost immediately. A physician declared he was poisoned. As a result, the Philadelphia detective, takes charge of the investigation.

CHAPTER II.—An injection of cocaine is shown to have been the cause of Jordan's death. Rankin finds all the student's papers are marked with fingerprints. The only known relative is his uncle, Howard Merrick, St. Louis banker, also his guardian, and his heir.

CHAPTER III.—Two students from the vicinity of Vandellia, Mr. Jordan's home town, being Buckley and Walter Randall, figure in the investigation, also the fact that a St. Louis physician, Arnold Prince, was chiefly responsible for Jordan's admission into the fraternity. A prominent lawyer, Edward Fletcher, present at the initiation, also engages Rankin's attention.

"Yes, I'm here for a reason," the detective admitted. "As a matter of fact, I wanted to talk to Nick." He lifted a reassuring hand at Morton's dismay and the more animated expression of consternation in the waiter's features. "Oh, my interest isn't professional, at least as far as Nick is concerned; I merely have some questions to ask which I think he can answer, about a chap who was here last night."

Morton relaxed, his roiled patient in his more genial amiability. "Well, Nick will be glad to help you if he can, Tommy. Just who is this guy you want to know about?"

"The friend who came here with Mr. Palmer yesterday evening at eight o'clock, for a couple of drinks," Rankin elaborated. "His name is Buckley. He left first, alone; and Mr. Palmer was too much under the weather to remember what time he went. As Nick served them, I thought he could tell me."

"The proprietor glanced about the large chamber. 'Perhaps you had better talk this over where it's more private,' he suggested.

"Rankin, who had been following them back into the long corridor, entering one of the rooms lining it; he shut the door and all took chairs but the waiter. The fairly audible murmur of voices came from the adjoining chamber, though the words spoken were indistinguishable.

Morton modulated his voice. "We'll have to talk quietly." He shrugged toward the wall. "The partitions aren't as thick as they should be; and some of the boys are having a little name next door." He turned to the waiter. "Do you remember Mr. Palmer and his friend, being here last night, Nick?"

The waiter's positive and verbose reply was accompanied by numerous gestures.

"Silly do, boss; down Meester Buckley, he's here before," he said, in his broken English. "An Meester Palmer, he's a boy what I tell you desma morning give me all dat trouble last night." He made a grimace of distaste at the student. "When his friend go off, he's a sleep an' I no hear of him till maybe 'leven o'clock and he's sorta busy. Don't wake him up, but he's a drink too much for going 'way himself; so Signor Casady an' me, we gotta carry him an' put-a him out da door, almost."

"Did you noticed either Mr. Palmer or his friend particularly, before that?" Rankin asked the next question himself. "That is, beside waiting on them?"

Nick pondered a seriously. "Well, I come in over five minutes, maybe dey want something else," he responded. "An' I see down-a Buckley talking to Meester Palmer an' bending close, lak he's whispering. He's a got arm round his-a shoulder. Dese boy here, he's a no say nutting."

Unobtrusively, Rankin reflected, Nick had observed Buckley searching high-spiritedly dragged victim for his keys; he screened the act by a pretense of an intimate colloquy.

"And then, Nick, what happened?" "Nothin'," the waiter answered. "Dey lak-a busy an' I go into back-a room again. An' in five-a minutes, I come in, an' Meester Palmer's he's all night, sleeping. Dese Buckley, he's a gone, no say nutting."

"Five minutes later, you say?" Rankin queried. "Then he went between eight-twenty and eight-thirty-five?"

"Dese a right, Meester Rankin," Nick affirmed. "He's a no more here, twenty-five-a minute past."

The detective nodded his satisfaction for the twenty minutes between eight-twenty-five and eight-thirty-five was ample to allow Buckley to reach the fraternity house. He had easily time to call at his room for a costume similar to those worn at the initiation and still enter the chapter room as the second late comer.

When Rankin established that the waiter had told him he knew, he thanked him and dismissed him.

It may have been because Nick left the door open that the conversation on the other side of the wall suddenly became audible. Or perhaps the occupants behind it spoke more loudly than before. But, as the waiter quit the room, the harsh sound of deep tones lifted in anger, came through the separating partitions; and the words held an unmistakable menace.

"D-n it, kid, you can't pull that stuff on me again! I want that money in a hurry; you lost it in a stupid open game of blacknick with me and Lew Meyer. If you come here to ruin-ble and get hurt, you're on to me for it, understand? This is no child's play!"

A younger voice replied, more highly pitched and hesitant, but also distinct.

"But I don't have it tonight," it said insistently. "I just wasn't able to get it. I swear I'll bring it to you tomorrow, though."

"Nothing doing, kid!" The first speaker's wrath increased noticeably. "You promised that before; I let you off Monday if you agreed to have the money in my hands yesterday—at the latest. And last night, you didn't even show up! Well, get this, kid," his voice rang with a cold fury. "no more chances; you aren't going to get away with any more stalling!"

The desperate tones of the younger man showed a note of apprehension, if not fear.

"Honestly, I'm not trying to do that. Only I need a little more time. I've always paid you before, haven't I? And you can trust me this time, too, if you'll wait."

Tanlin glanced significantly across the table at the proprietor. "There might be serious trouble," he observed. "You ought to step in and see what it's about, Gusie. Better not let it go too far."

"It's Carl Walton in there with some body," Morton growled; he rose, his face red with displeasure.

As he left the room, the detective felt Larry Palmer's hand grasp his arm. The boy's eyes blazed in a countenance gone suddenly as white as chalk.

"Mr. Rankin," he whispered hoarsely, "that second fellow—the one who said he'd bring me thirty dollars—this chap is a threatener. It's not Ned Patterson."

Rankin was startled as the boy, "Patterson? Are you sure of that?" he demanded.

"Yes, I recognize his voice," Palmer answered, tensely.

In an instant, Rankin had followed the proprietor into the adjoining chamber, Palmer at his heels. The boy's perception had been accurate; a chair was upset; and in a blue haze of cigarette smoke, Jordan's sponsor stood stiffly behind it, as though on guard, his dark sallow features half defiant and half alarmed. His weak chin quivered slightly.

At the sight of Rankin, Walton interrupted the lecture Morton had begun about his behavior; his ire changed into annoyance. Patterson looked chagrined as Palmer entered after.

The detective greeted the gambler with a sereity his intimates would have recognized as ominous and deceptive.

"How are you, Carl? I have mutual friends; it seems I also happen to know Mr. Patterson. And I hardly approve of where he spends his time or the company he keeps. Probably Patterson isn't aware of your reputation as one of the slickest sleight-of-hand performers who ever handled a deck of cards. Inexperienced students make easy victims; you've evidently taken him over." He turned to Patterson. "For how much was it?"

"Only a little—about fifty-five dollars, this time." The boy spoke suddenly, as if he relished the interference no more than the gambler.

"And every cent was honestly, Rankin," Walton declared. "You can't prove anything different. If he isn't a watcher, he'll pay his debt."

The detective shrugged. "Well, maybe he will another time, though not if he is wise; I can't keep track of what he does in the future. But right now, until you get settled off, I think he had better leave the club with me."

"Oh, I wasn't going to hurt him, Tommy," the gambler claimed hastily. "I only wanted to throw a scare into him."

Larry Palmer broke in, backing Rankin's suggestion. "Come along, Ned; let's go back to the fraternity," he said. "This is no place for either of us."

But instead of assenting, his schoolmate was palpably and inexplicably reluctant to join him.

"No, I'll go along later, Larry. There won't be any more trouble, I'm sure; and I don't suppose if I stay a short while longer, it will."

"You'll do nothing of the kind, Patterson!" Rankin was curt, his level tones carrying a distinct command.

CHAPTER V

The Jordan Estate

At nine the next morning—the second after the murder—Rankin presented himself at the Philadelphia Western bank. To the cashier, Mr. Perry, he explained his interest in Jordan's account. But the cashier could not aid in tracing the identity of the recipient of the dead boy's mysterious monthly checks for four hundred dollars. Canceled checks, he related, were returned to their numbers quarterly. Jordan's most recent payment—that of March second—had not yet been cashed, it appeared.

By ten o'clock, the detective was back at headquarters. There he turned over to Detective Lester Gordon the task of finding the taxi-Buckley must have taken from the Morton club, to reach the Mu Beta Sigma house by eight-thirty-five Tuesday evening. Without the taxi driver's testimony, he had nevertheless ample evidence to justify an arrest; and once Aberdeen college replied to his inquiries there, and Gilmore reported, he intended swearing out a warrant. But this gave Rankin no excuse for neglecting to previous-link in his case as the driver's deposition.

The detective also instructed Gordon to visit Croft hall at his first opportunity, to complete the investigation he had left unfinished there. Also, there was the cleaning woman to be interviewed.

"Be particularly thorough when you question her, Lester," Rankin admonished. "Someone marked all of Jordan's shoes with thumb-tacks; and it was done recently—within a few days before his murder. I want to know when anyone might have a chance to get at them; also whether she saw any person about his rooms, acting the least bit suspicious. And Jordan's desk looks as if it had been searched. Find out from the chambermaid if she observed anything in connection with that. Probably his shoes and desk were both tampered with at the same time, by the same person."

"All right, Tommy. I've got that all straight," Rankin's colleague nodded. Another angle of the problem Rankin decided to handle himself as soon as he could. This was the interview with the graduate nurse, Ben Crawford's companion of Tuesday night, to get her confirmation of his account of himself.

After Gordon left, he conferred with the coroner and Superintendent of Police Wainwright about thequest on Jordan. It was to be held that afternoon, a purely routine affair; it was

HEAVY SNOWFALL HERE

Old Man Winter staged a great comeback this week when Chelsea and vicinity was visited by the heaviest snowfall in several years on Monday and during the night. On Monday evening the rising wind made the roads drift, which practically brought the automotive traffic to a standstill.

The snow, which was about a foot deep, blocked the roads so the rural carriers were unable to cover their routes on Tuesday with the exception of a few patrons on the main highway which had been scraped. On Wednesday they covered most of their routes, and they expected to make the entire trip today.

In addition to the heavy snowfall, the mercury dropped to near the zero mark Tuesday night, so all in all this "spring" weather has been rather severe.
