Legion Sponsoring Great Movement

Of great interest to all residents of Chelsea and Dexter and the surrounding territory is the proposal of the local American Legion Post to circulate a petition for the re-opening of the Michigan State Cement Industry plant at Four Mile Lake.

Authentic information is being secured from many sources as to the cost and practicability of its operation and when this has been secured petitions will be circulated throughout the state asking for the speedy resumption of activity.

So many favorable comments have been received and offers of assistance are coming from many sources and it is the opinion of the local post that favorable action will be an assured outcome of the venture.

Large Crowd Attends Open House at Public School Friday Night

The open house held Friday night at the public school proved to be one of the most outstanding community events ever held in Chelsea.

All grades were dismissed at noon on Friday with orders to be in session at 7 o'clock in the evening so the public could view the entire school as it is conducted in its regular routine.

From the kindergarten kiddies to the sophisticated Seniors the students and teachers were busy at their regular duties and with few exceptions every one of the hundreds of guests visited each of the grades in both the high school and grade buildings.

In spite of the unavoidable confusion occasioned by the moving throng of people the different sessions were being well conducted by the faculty members.

Those who viewed the improvements in the buildings for the first time marveled at the attractive appearance as a result of the CWA work which was recently completed—especially in the grade building, practically a new building so far as interior finish is concerned.

Following the school session the crowd assembled in the auditorium where they were entertained by the Chelsea High School Band and an address by Prof. Geo. E. Carrothers of the School of Education, University of Michigan.

The concert given by the band was most enjoyable. A marked improvement has been made in this musical organization through the efforts of Wesley Smith, their director, and many were the words of praise heard from the audience as the result of the splendid musical entertainment.

Prof. Carrothers praised the Board of Education, the Superintendent of Schools, faculty members and pupils of the school for their cooperation in planning such an open house event, and the spirit of the public in attendance.

He stated that Chelsea could well be proud of their school buildings and of their school system as now conducted as it ranks among the best of the state.

The speaker remarked that in his observance and questioning of students in different grades he could sense the spirit of real satisfaction and cooperation between the students and faculty and he congratulated the parents and public at large for their interest in school affairs.

Voters Must Qualify for Referendum Vote

The Department of State has transmitted to all county election officials the opinion of the attorney general relative to whom may vote on the $37,800,000 bond issue at the election April 30.

A portion of the attorney general's letter to Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald, follows:

"I therefore suggest to you the following certificate, to be signed by electors upon making application for a referendum ballot:

"I hereby certify that, in addition to being a duly qualified elector in this voting precinct, I have properly assessed for taxes in the State of Michigan, or that my husband or wife has property assessed for taxes in State of Michigan."

The attorney general also asserted that the certification shall constitute the oath to be administered by election inspectors in cases of challenged votes.

Local Legionnaire Is Honored at Convention

At the 2nd District convention of the American Legion held Sunday at the Ypsilanti State hospital, Paul Maroney of Chelsea was nominated for the post of District Finance Officer.

The annual election will take place at the July meeting which will be held at Ann Arbor.

The business meeting which was preceded by a tour of inspection of the entire hospital, was well attended and many worth-while matters were brought up for consideration.

Of chief interest to Chelsea residents was the proposal to circulate a statewide petition for the re-opening of the state cement plant, a project of the local post of the Legion.

H. E. Van de Walker of Ypsilanti gave an inspiring talk on the needs of the crippled children of Michigan and explained the work being done by the Crippled Children's Commission of Michigan of which he is a member.

After the meeting a chicken dinner was served in the dining room and various prominent Legion and Legion Auxiliary members were introduced and a discussion was held regarding the State Bond Issue which will be voted upon April 30th.

After seeing the wonderful work being accomplished at the hospital and being told of the lack of space to take care of the thousands in need of care the Legion heartily endorsed the bond issue.

The evening's entertainment was in the form of an "indoor circus" staged by the inmates and it proved a hilarious hit from start to finish, and demonstrated that one of the many ways in which cures are accomplished at this great state institution which is making such an enviable record in the treatment of mental cases.

The Chelsea delegates were Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Mayer, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Bahnmiller, Dr. and Mrs. A. L. Brock, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Eisele, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Hinderer and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Doll, Mrs. Harry Foltz and son, Mrs. Grant Schooley, Mrs. Elmer Schiller, Mrs. Charles Carpenter, Carl Mayer and Wm. Rademacher.

An even larger crowd is anticipated for this afternoon. A feature of today's school will be the awarding of a Magic Chef gas range.

Did You Go To The Land Fire?

As we walked toward the gym last Saturday night we were amazed to see that it looked all red as if it were on fire. Drawing nearer we heard the strains of that famous melody "Wagon Wheels." On entering the gym we found what caused us to think that the gym was a ball of fire. Suspended from the ceiling were three huge balls of glittering crystals which turned about and were changing colors as the spotlight shone on them.

The orchestra, which consisted of five pieces, were seated upon the stage. They were none other than Ralph Baker and his boys from Battle Creek and could they play!

As we gazed and danced about we noticed that our faculty was well represented and they seemed to be having a enjoyable time.

The seniors turned out in full force to support their good name.

Scattered about the floor of the gym and all appearing to be having a good time were the frivolous underclassmen.

Out of town people were present from Dexter, Ann Arbor and Stockbridge.

The dance drew to a close about 12:30 and we heard many sighs and groans from the people wishing there were more tunes to be played. All together the dance was a huge success.

Blue Squills

How many million Aprils came before I ever knew How white a cherry bough could be,
 A bed of squills how blue.

And many a dancing April
 When life is done with me,
 Will lift the blue flame of the flower
 And the white flame of the tree.

Oh, burn me with your beauty, thou—
 Oh, hurt me, tree and flower!
 Lest in the end death try to take
 Even this glistening hour.

Oh shaken flowers, oh shimmering trees,
 O sunlight white and blue,
 Would me, that I thro' endless sleep
 May bear the scar of you!

—Sara Teasdale.

How Many Answers Did You Get Right?

1. Sodium Bicarbonate.
 2. The loss of this supply during the World war caused this country to make an extensive search for potassium compounds. Many principle sources were found.

The evaporation of the brines from Sealess lake, California yields more potassium than any other source in the country.

The recovery from dust of the flue gases of blast-furnaces and cement kilns is a source that has been worked only to a limited extent. The wastes of the molasses, alcohol and beet sugar industries has helped greatly.

3. Opal, Agate and Jade are solid jellies of Silicon Dioxide, in which other substances giving color are included.

The opal owes its brilliancy to a minute quantity of water.

4. Diamonds are pure carbon in crystallized state. They are found in tinted, brown, and even black varieties. The value as jewels depends on their ability to bend light which passes through them so much that gorgeous rainbow tinted rays emerge, like those from triangular prisms of glass.

That diamonds are really carbon is proved by the fact that they will burn when raised to a high temperature in oxygen, and form only carbon dioxide as the product.

* Diamonds exist in Ozark mountains in Arkansas, where several thousand have been found. One as large as 48 carats. Diamonds from some unknown source are occasionally discovered in the glacial drifts of Ohio and Indiana.

5. The formation of underground caverns in limestone regions is due to the dissolving action of carbonic acid on calcium carbonate. The soil water, charged with carbon dioxide from decaying organic materials dissolves the limestone.

Examples of this action continuing for centuries are the Mammoth Cave in Kentucky, Luray Caverns in Virginia, and the Carlsbad Caverns in New Mexico. Of course there are many others.

Is Zat So?

An Expensive Horse
 A Civil war veteran of Minneapolis sends the following story about fiat money in 1865:

At the end of the Civil war, a Confederate soldier, who owned a horse, was approached by one of his companions, who offered him $1,000 in Confederate money for the animal.

"One thousand," exclaimed the other. "I should say not. I just paid $3,600 to have him curried."

The one who thinks these jokes are poor,
 Would straightway change his views.
 Could he compare the jokes we print
 With those we do not use.

Rud Gulde: They say President Roosevelt hasn't slept for 30 days.
 Miss Hazard: Hasn't slept for 30 days—how come?
 Rud G.: Well, he sleeps at night.

Mr. Cross: Howard, you certainly do keep your car looking swell. It's almost three years old, and not a scratch on it. How do you manage?
 Mr. Thompson: Oh, that's simple. I just make it a rule to always park between two new cars.

Harold Grove: Hey Jane, let's go automobiling.
 Jane Belsor: I'm afraid of an accident.

H. Grove: You're crazy. What I know about driving would fill a book.
 Jane: Yes, and what you don't know would fill a library.

The days may come,
 The days may go,
 But where they come from
 I don't know.

Folk Song Project

The Juniors, in American Literature Class, are studying Folk Literature. Wednesday, this class went in the gym and sang the good old folk songs. Helen Baxter led us, and Marie Wenk accompanied at the piano.

Among the songs we sang were: "Deep River," "Home on the Range," "She'll Be Coming Around the Mountain When She Comes," "O Mary Don't You Weep."

We all enjoyed ourselves and wish to thank Miss Le Gendre, our practice teacher, for planning it.

Speech-Class Organized

The Speech class has organized a debating club under Miss Barrus and Miss LaGendre, our English practice teacher. We have already had practice debates on such subjects as "The Government Should Control Motion Picture Production," "Geometry Should be Made Compulsory," "Wrestling is More Dangerous Than Boxing" and "All Children Fourteen Years of Age and Under Should be Forced to go to School."

We had a special debate for Friday night school. The subject was "Four years of college is more beneficial than two years of travel."

This week we are beginning our first real debate and the debate we have chosen is, "Resolved, that Capital Punishment Should Preval in Every State in the Nation."

Hi-Lights of the News

The President returned from his vacation. Viewing the wreckage, I suppose he must have felt much like a swimmer who goes to the river bank to find his clothes tied in knots. However, Washington "insiders" expect that things will start humming again when he again is at the helm.

Senator Vandenberg's proposed munitions investigation should win the whole-hearted support of every peace loving person. The writer has long held to the idea that armament manufacture should be entirely controlled by the government. This investigation should have a desirable effect in leading to this end.

A hitherto unrevealed fact became known recently in respect to State Secretary Stimson's (Hoover cabinet) sudden reversal of his attitude toward Japan at the time of the Far Eastern crisis of a year ago. He was the recipient of a rather strongly worded communication from Rear Admiral Taylor, the Asiatic Fleet Commander, to the effect that Japan could easily wipe out every vestige of American shipping including the fleet in a very short time and that the soft pedal had best be applied in diplomatic notes. Perhaps this explains Congressional cooperation in the matter of enlarging the Navy immediately.

Good diplomats all over the world are laughing up their respective diplomatic sleeves at the lack of finesse with which Turkey handled the Insull affair. It seems that such backward countries as Turkey actually have a sense of honesty and justice. Greece could not be considered backward if this criterion is used. In fact, she ranks with the leading powers in this dealing or, if you wish, double dealing. Clean statesmanship with a distrust toward bribery seems dead. Let us hope that it can be rejuvenated.

"Charity Suffereth Long" says the Bible. Could it mean to include even Huey?

Can you imagine anyone low enough to raid the United States Treasury without permission from Congress?

The new economics is reasonable enough. An auto manufacturer now pays his employees enough to buy a car and then gives them time enough to wear it out.

Cause of the wreck has not yet been determined. Only the freight cars left the track, the engine being unharmed. Traffic on the P. M. was at a standstill this afternoon and will be until Friday morning. No persons were seriously injured in the wreck.—Herald.

A NEW YEAR'S REFLECTION

Among my resolutions made
 On New Year's Day I find
 It hard to keep them all in place,
 And follow line by line,
 But feel ashamed to let them off,
 And fear some I'll forget;
 Though Mother jogs my memory oft,
 So I'll not chafe nor fret.

Please wipe your feet 'fore you come in,
 Hang up your coat and cap,
 Fold up the paper when you're thru
 And put it on the rack;
 The ash-pit and the furnace too,
 Remember every day,
 The snow from off the sidewalk clean
 Before you go away.

Pay as you go—Keep out of debt,
 Watch your gas and oil,
 Though everything may go askew
 Don't let your temper boil.
 With all these resolutions made
 On New Year's day I find
 It hard to keep them all in place
 And follow line by line.

Under a British Mandate
 Palestine is administered by Great Britain under a mandate, which was passed by the council of the League of Nations on July 24, 1922, and came officially into effect on September 29, 1923. The mandate provided for the Ralfoor Declaration of November 2, 1917, to the effect that "his majesty's government view with favor the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people, and will use their best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of that object, it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine, or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country."

Question And Answer Dept.

Question.—Why is 21 years the legal age for voting? Where did it originate? Does the legal age vary in different countries and climates? Answer.—According to ancient Chinese scientists and philosophers the span of life of the human race was divided into 7-year cycles. The first seven was "babyhood," the second seven was "childhood" and the third seven was "manhood." The latter was considered the beginning of maturity. They contended that the human body and mind changed every seven years. Thus when one was 21 years old, they were entering the cycle of maturity, which qualified them as voters. This has been followed by almost all civilized nations of the world.

Question.—Will you please tell me on what day of the week was it that Russia surrendered to Germany during the World War? Answer.—Russia surrendered to Germany on Saturday, Dec. 16, 1917.

Question.—Can you tell me how lifting the hat to the ladies originated, and also what it means? Answer.—Lifting the hat to ladies is a mark of respect. The custom traces back to ancient times. In those times warriors wore heavy headgear which they took off in the presence of their superiors or others to denote their trust and lack of fear in standing before them or in meeting them with unprotected heads. Out of this circumstance grew the habit of removing or lifting or tipping the hat to distinguished persons and ladies.

Question.—To settle an argument will you kindly answer what is the nickname, motto and flower of the State of New York? Answer.—The nickname for the State of New York is "The Empire State"; its motto is "Excelsior" (meaning "higher"), and the state flower is the rose.

Question.—Should a good husband give his wife all the money she wants? Answer.—Yes, if there is that much in the world!

Question.—I would like to ask you if Amelia Earhart was the first woman to fly an airplane, and what was the date? Answer.—Amelia Earhart was the first woman to fly across the Atlantic ocean. This feat occurred on June 17, 1928. Aida de Costa, now the wife of Col. Henry Brockbridge, the attorney to Charles A. Lindberg, is the first woman on record to pilot an airplane. This event occurred in June, 1903.

Question.—Will you please answer in your good paper where the Virgin Islands are located? Also how many islands in the group? Answer.—The Virgin Islands, which were formerly known as the Danish West Indies, are located in the Caribbean sea. Uncle Sam purchased them from Denmark for $25,000,000 in 1917 and changed the name of them to "Virgin Islands." The group consists of three—St. Croix, St. John and St. Thomas.

Question.—What do you think of a man who constantly deceives his wife? Answer.—We think he is a wonder if he is able to do that.

Question.—Why is it that people of the different races will not form intimate relations with members of other races, as we are all human beings? Answer.—This is a survival of the fittest of savagery. Our unconscious minds retain a suspicion or distrust with which our savage ancestors were accustomed to regard members of another tribe. These unconscious memories produce strong instinctive antipathies which usually prevent friendship with members of other races.

Question.—Are there any places in the world where it never rains? Answer.—No. Even the driest place known—the Sahara Desert in Africa—will have a little rain now and then. The driest place in the United States—the Mohave Desert in California—averages about one inch of rain annually.

DRAIN OUT OIL-EATING SLUDGE NOW

Change to anti-sludge Iso-Vis "D" keep sludge out—save oil

It is time to change to a heavier grade of motor oil. And when you change, remember this: The greatest cause of high oil consumption in automobile engines is sludge—sludge that fouls filters, makes valves sluggish so you lose gasoline power and mileage, and causes rings to stick and pump oil.

Also remember this: You can keep sludge out of your motor by using Iso-Vis "D", the anti-sludge motor oil. Because it does not sludge, Iso-Vis "D" keeps rings lively and free, reducing oil consumption to the minimum. That's why Iso-Vis "D" users use less oil—add fewer quarts between drains. It's the most economical, fine lubrication you can buy.

ISO-VIS "D" 25c a qt. PLUS FEDERAL TAX 1c a qt. TOTAL 26c a qt.

Drive into your closest Standard Oil Station. Your Standard Service man will drain and change to the proper grade of Iso-Vis "D" in 8 minutes or less. Then you'll be rid of sludge and you'll keep your oil cost to the minimum.

Encore

Body by Fisher

Buick's 1934 reception strikingly resembles the insistent demand of an audience for an encore from a favorite star. Led by an army of Buick owners, all the public is far surpassing previous enthusiasm for Buick. Everywhere, the talk about Buick is turning into a flood of buying.

ance, thorough-going dependability and safety... greater ease and convenience. These desirable advantages are expressed in the new Kneo-Action gliding ride as only Buick gives it, in automatic starting and other new features, in finer smoothness and quiet, with greater power.

When you come to take your first ride in a Buick, you will find—in whichever type and size you prefer to buy—stunning new beauty and luxury. There is also new engineering progress... a broader incorporation of fine performance.

Buick builds this year's cars in the size you want to buy—119, 128, and 136-inch wheelbase. All have the same high excellence, the same flashing performance, the same famous dependability, the same advanced features.

THE STUDENT FRATERNITY MURDER

By Milton Propper

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Stricken during initiation into the Mu Beta Sigma Fraternity, Stuart Jordan, University of Ypsilanti, Michigan, was killed.

Stuart Jordan, University of Ypsilanti, Michigan, was killed during initiation into the Mu Beta Sigma Fraternity.

CHAPTER II—An injection of cocaine is shown to have been the cause of Jordan's death. Rankin finds all the student's shoes are marked with thumbtacks. It is only after a relative of his uncle, toward Merriek, St. Louis banker, also his guardian, and his heir.

CHAPTER III—Two students from the vicinity of Ypsilanti, Michigan, home town, Ralph Buckley and Walter Hendon, were in the investigation. Also the fact that a St. Louis physician, Arnold Prince, was chiefly responsible for Jordan's admission into the fraternity. A prominent lawyer, Edward Fletcher, present at the initiation, also engaged Rankin's attention.

CHAPTER IV—A signboard that discovered in that a student, Larry Palmer, Mu Beta Sigma member, was dragged by Ralph Buckley on the night of the initiation and his key, including a key of the fraternity house, stolen from him.

CHAPTER V—Jordan has been paying by check $100 a month to some unknown person, but that the check is not among the effects. Howard Merriek, as Jordan's guardian, had supervision of his conduct until he was twenty-two years old, when the boy's large fortune became his own. Police including cocaine, is stolen from the University of Ypsilanti, Michigan, by Patterson, is suspected of purchasing a mysterious woman, later Rankin secures it.

He stepped to the window. "Is there anything the matter, Mr. Thorne?" he inquired. "I came after getting your call, as soon as I could get away. You have a letter, I believe, for Mr. Jordan?"

The postmaster promptly comprehended his cue. "That's right, Mr. Rankin, here it is." He relinquished it gladly. "Only this lady claims it belongs to her; she says she accidentally sent Mr. Jordan a check that was meant for a charity."

"Yes, I heard that, Mr. Thorne. The detective faced her. "There isn't the slightest danger, madam," he declared. "If this letter contains what you describe, that it won't be returned to you. Still, under the circumstances, I will have to examine it first; but rest assured I will be careful with it."

The woman inspected him with mingled apprehension and dismay at the interruption.

"I don't understand," she faltered, addressing the postmaster. "This gentleman is from my headquarters?"

"Correct, madam," Rankin replied for himself. "And I am handling the investigation into Stuart Jordan's tragic death. A quality of steel crept into his voice, which had been calm. "It was murder—subtle murder of poison. In a case like this, it is the business of every one acquainted with him to offer their information to the police. And not hide their identity or try to suppress evidence, as you have done. You must have wanted this letter badly to run the risk of discovery to obtain it."

At his sternness, the woman's eyes reflected genuine fear and her cheeks paled beneath her rouge. But proving equal to the occasion, she regained her poise.

"I did," she admitted, with every indication of candor. "It was very important for me to get it back. I didn't want to mention it, but you see, it's my husband. I'm afraid of him. He disapproved of this charity and forbade me to contribute to it. He is very strict, and as I am dependent on him, I hoped to recover the check without his hearing about it."

Rankin remained unmoved. "Set your mind at rest, I promise you he will never learn of it through me. Still that won't excuse me from verifying your claim about this check." He bent toward her suddenly. "Who is your husband?"

"My husband?" Alarmed, the woman fumbled her handbag. "I... I don't see what difference that makes," she replied hesitantly. "He hasn't any connection with all this... with this crime; it would be a waste of time to bring him into it."

"I can not neglect any line of inquiry," Rankin returned coldly. "If he was even slightly acquainted with Jordan, he must be questioned. Are you certain that you attempted to reclaim this letter only because you feared he would learn of it?"

"Of course that was all." He was prejudiced against this charity and I didn't wish to antagonize him."

The detective became accusing. "Can you suggest another reason for your caution, madam?" he asserted. "You were still more apprehensive of the police than of your husband; primarily, you tried to hide it from them. I suggest there is no check in this envelope, but a note to Stuart Jordan, you dared not let the police see. You couldn't have sent a check by mistake in place of a birthday card, because the birthday is in May."

Once more the woman's features mirrored her pain; she moistened her painted lips with a tongue that had become strangely dry.

"Well, I made it wasn't a birthday card," she stammered. "Maybe it was a note..."

That would have divulged the fact that you were unusually friendly with the boy?" Rankin's harsh tone rang with conviction, though he was only guessing. "Naturally you wouldn't want your husband to hear of your attachment; but it was even more important to keep it from the authorities. It might set them to looking for its relation to the murder."

The woman drew herself to her full height. "How dare you make such an insulting statement to me?" she cried resentfully. "I only met Stuart once in my life. But her consternation was more pronounced than her indignation.

"Well, soon discovered," Rankin shrugged. "Whether I am wrong or not." He began tearing open the envelope. "If I am, I shall be the first to apologize."

"For an instant, she watched him, a fascinated, almost desperate expression in her eyes; it seemed as if she would assault him to snatch the letter by sheer force. What she actually did was equally startling, however. With out any warning, she dodged agilely past the detective to the door. Taken completely by surprise, he might nevertheless have halted her flight by quick action had he so chosen. Instead, he contented himself with following her outside in time to see her rush breathlessly to the magnificent gray limousine behind which he had parked on his arrival. She flung herself into its tonneau with a word of command to the uniformed, swartly chauffeur at the wheel. While the detective noted its license number, the machine was off, swiftly gathering momentum as it raced thunderously down the street.

CHAPTER VI

The Woman in the Case

"My dear boy:

"Although this letter may be indiscreet, after last night's little adventure ended so unpleasantly, I can not help writing if only to tell you of my distress. Like other older men, my husband is often excessively suspicious in his love for me. At times, he has been intensely jealous, because of his harsh, dominating temper. The fact that he seldom gives way to it makes him capable, I fear, of a deeper anger and a resentment more subtle than any resulting from a mere outburst of passion. That is why I dread to give him any further grounds for doubting our relations.

"It is most unfortunate that twice now circumstances made them appear compromising. By itself, the incident at the fraternity on Saturday night was not so serious; after, my husband would have taken a more sensible view and realized it was too trivial to make a fuss about. After all, I had never been through a fraternity house before and there was no harm in our looking around together. But last night is entirely different, I am afraid, and he refuses to believe in its propriety and innocence. Of course, you know that at our first meeting at the dance, I intended our friendship to be only a pleasant companionship. Anything more intimate was furthest from my mind; I am sorry if what has occurred since may have suggested otherwise.

"In view of these facts, my dear Stuart, we had best not meet again, immediately. At least, for the sake of appearances and until we can do so without risk. Later, I shall drop you a line and we might continue this utterly enjoyable association.

"Affectionately, from

"VERA FLETCHER."

This was the letter which Mr. Thorne had held for Rankin. He had half-divined the identity of the woman claiming it, from the postmaster's statement to her that it was mailed from Gladwyne; that was one reason he did not attempt to detain her precipitous flight. For Gladwyne was the home of the lawyer who was being inducted into Mu Beta Sigma as an honorary member on the night of Jordan's murder. He had settled there with his bride after his marriage five years before. All that Rankin could recall about them was that Mrs. Fletcher was twenty years his junior—about the age of the woman he had just encountered—and lacked any social standing.

The letter's implications were distinct enough; but the exact situation between Jordan and Mrs. Fletcher that aroused in her husband a "resentment more subtle than any resulting from a mere outburst of passion" was obscure. Since she and the boy only met the past Saturday night, how had that situation arisen? And what about "last night" that ended so disastrous ly? That referred to the Monday night the phoebos were treated to their final and most severe hazing—when they were abandoned quite late outside the city. Stuart must have been one of the victims; when then, unless early in the evening, could he have had an adventure with Mrs. Fletcher?

To discover some answer to these perplexities, Rankin proceeded to the fraternity house. At least as to the incident at the dance, he expected enlightenment. He began his inquiries in the down-stairs living room, as before, quizzing the members one by one.

Mr. Fletcher, it appeared, had not danced throughout the evening. The responsibility of entertaining his pretty wife, therefore, had devolved upon the students. Several of the first young men Rankin questioned supplied a shrewd and strangely unanimous character appraisal of Mrs. Fletcher that coincided with his own. They agreed that she was alluring; but quickly sensed that her enchantment was calculated and artificial, that she sought excitement and adventure merely to relieve her boredom. For her own amusement, she tempted and invited but beyond a certain point of familiarity, withdrew before the advances her blandishments produced.

"To Rankin, this estimate was important in proving sound his original judgment of the dead boy's integrity and uprightness. Though he might be subtle and impulsive, he was also obviously decent; into whatever entanglement with Mrs. Fletcher he had been drawn, it was not on his own initiative. Instead, he was led on, unconsciously, that she was playing with him, to accept her interest and any fondness she might have displayed, as genuine.

The first direct contribution to the subject of Rankin's probe came from a boy named Harris Connelly. Ted Stanton and his roommate, Clark, were present to hear his statement; their faces mirrored their uneasiness at the disquieting implications of this fresh inquiry. Connelly, an overgrown, heavily built, good-natured sophomore, too stably to be an athlete and already almost bald, was a stag at the dance the last moment. As a result, he had danced with the lawyer's wife early in the evening. Then she requested an introduction to Stuart Jordan. Later, he had remarked her continuously in his company, while Mr. Fletcher lounged near the dining room door, beside which the orchestra was stationed, and watched. The next thing Connelly noticed was the pledge and Mrs. Fletcher going upstairs to the second floor.

"Just a minute, Mr. Connelly," Rankin interrupted him at this juncture. "What time did you see this?"

"About half past twelve," the student replied.

The president nodded, confirming the hour mentioned, and Rankin signed for Connelly to continue.

"Well, I wouldn't have thought anything of their quitting the crowd," the boy obeyed, "except that Mrs. Fletcher wasn't Stuart's girl. Even so, I forgot about them until twenty minutes afterward, I went upstairs myself to my room to put my favor away. It looked unoccupied or I'd have knocked before entering; the light was out and the door shut. But the instant I switched on the light, two people jumped up hurriedly from my bed where they had been sitting and I saw they were the boy and Mrs. Fletcher."

"Exactly which is your bedroom, Mr. Connelly?"

"The second one along the back hallway on the third floor, Mr. Rankin."

"All right," the detective nodded affirmatively. "Go on with the incident. What happened after you discovered Stuart and Mrs. Fletcher in your room?"

"Nothing much could happen, sir, could it? I don't know which of us was most embarrassed. Nobody spoke for a moment; and then they just stood there and waited for me to act. So I excused myself for interrupting, set the favor on my desk and nudged my exit as quickly and gracefully as I could."

Rankin's tone became searching. "Leaving them to follow you and join the others down-stairs—did they remain where they were, instead?"

"They stayed right on in my room," Connelly replied. "I waited a while on the second floor landing, expecting them to come out. But after ten minutes, I figured it was none of my business anyway and gave up watching for them. But they still hadn't returned to the dance floor much later in the evening."

He had not spoken of the incident, be informed Rankin, to anyone else. Harris Connelly had nothing further to relate and the detective dismissed him. The next information touching on his inquiry came from Paul Whitaker, a handsome alert boy. In a sense, his tale supplemented Connelly's, taking it up a half-hour later. At one-fifteen, the lawyer had singled him out during the dance and asked if he had recently seen Mrs. Fletcher about. In the lawyer's elaborately casual manner, Whitaker had caught a hint of trouble brewing.

"In his manner?" At this, Rankin fixed his eyes intently on the boy. "Exactly what attracted your attention? Was it the way he spoke?"

"No, not so much that, Mr. Rankin, though he sounded kind of harsh, as if it was hard to control himself. Yet he seemed perfectly calm. What made me wonder was his look. If you understand me, it was like a frown, only worse; his mouth was drawn into a rigid thin line and his eyes burned—I hunted a word—'well, ruthlessly.' I could almost see the veins on his head throbbing."

"You would say, undoubtedly, that he was angry?"

"I suppose he must have been. Only it was a deliberate, impersonal sort of anger, like the smoldering under the surface. Then, I remembered, I hadn't seen Mrs. Fletcher anywhere for an hour. I volunteered to lend her but she refused; he said he would do it himself without any trouble. By that time, I was pretty certain something was up, and when he left me, I began to trail him. I couldn't help wanting to learn why Mr. Fletcher was upset."

"Your interest may prove very valuable, Mr. Whitaker," Rankin encouraged him gravely. "Now, what did Mr. Fletcher do? He searched for his wife, of course?"

"Very thoroughly, sir; he looked into every room along the halls, regardless of whether the door was closed or not. He had to excuse his intrusion to the people inside several times. At first, he had no luck, if you can call it that; and I began to think Mrs. Fletcher had left the house altogether. But when he reached Harris Connelly's room, he suddenly entered and shut the door behind him. That's the one next to mine, Mr. Rankin, on the top floor."

"Do you recall if the door was open or closed when Mr. Fletcher approached the room?"

"Closed, sir, and he didn't bother to knock," Whitaker returned. "He just walked in without warning. As soon as he shut it, I slipped into my own den, next-door, figuring I might be able to hear what happened."

"Well, how much did you overhear?" Rankin inquired. "Could you make out what was being said?"

"Not at first," the student related. "As I engaged my own door, Mrs. Fletcher was talking fast and earnestly, as if explaining the situation. She said something about being tired of dancing and having a headache, and then Mr. Jordan was kind enough to keep me company while I rested. Then I knew it was Stuart with her, though he didn't utter a word the entire time. The surprising part of it was that Mr. Fletcher was almost as quiet; interrupted just once and said, 'Don't you think your place as chauffeur is down-stairs, Vera?' And he spoke in such a firm, almost threatening way that it was definitely a command. When they all came into the hall, I felt a tension between them that made the situation seem even more serious than it had sounded. Stuart was flushed with embarrassment and Mr. Fletcher looked positively vindictive; and his wife was scared, in spite of her efforts to cover her confusion."

"And that was all that was said or done between them?" The detective voiced his regret at the meagerness of Whitaker's disclosure and account.

"All I saw," Whitaker answered promptly. "When they came down-stairs, I took Mrs. Fletcher away for a dance, to relieve the strain. But I never let on I had any idea of the trouble up-stairs. We talked mainly about the pledges—how we haze them and have fun with them the last few days before initiation."

Rankin's features suddenly displayed a fresh animation and he shot his question at the boy.

"Did you mention to Mrs. Fletcher the annual practice of taking the pledges for a ride late on the night preceding the initiation, and losing them in the country?"

"Yes, in some detail," the boy replied. "I described the way we dressed them in old clothes, made sure they had no money with which to return and separated them in some deserted spot outside the city to get back the best way they could."

The detective turned to Ted Stanton. "What time did you drive out to the country with the initiates and where did you eventually strand them?"

"Well, we started from the house with them at ten-thirty by machine," Stanton complied unreservedly. "There cars to all went out, belonging to the boys; each carried three pledges and the same number of brothers."

"Before that, at what time did the earlier hazing of the night begin?"

"Right after supper, Mr. Rankin, and the president returned. The pledges had all been instructed to report here by supper on Monday; they knew in advance it would be a hectic evening for them."

"Was Jordan present at the meal and throughout the evening?" Rankin asked.

Ted Stanton hesitated doubtfully, but his roommate replied with conviction.

"Oh, yes, I remember he sat at my table during supper."

The detective nodded. "How about

Mr. Fletcher? Did he take any part in the activities?"

"Only as a spectator." It was the president who replied. "We could scarcely ride a person in his position. He was invited to attend the whole affair; but he could just drop in for a few minutes around nine o'clock on his way to town. He said he had business which would detain him so late that he'd probably stay in town overnight. He left about nine-thirty."

Mrs. Oscar Kalmbach and children and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Rowe of Grass Lake called on Mrs. Herbert Rank, Sunday.

CARD OF THANKS
I wish in this way to thank my neighbors and friends for their many kind gifts, and the P. T. A. for the box of food, during my illness.
Loren Hinderer.

PRIMARY TEACHERS MEET

The Primary teachers of the Methodist Sunday school held their April meeting at the home of Mrs. George Walworth on Thursday afternoon. A delicious luncheon was served at one o'clock, followed by the business meeting and program.

Roll call was "Children's Day Suggestions". A poem, "The Teacher" was read by Mrs. Mumby. Mrs. Sidney Schenk read a paper on "The Object of the Starr Commonwealth for Boys" and "There Are No Bad Boys."

A report on the annual banquet of the Washtenaw Council of Religious Education at Dexter was given and was followed by an informal talk on "Programs", given by Miss Marie Brown.

Minnesota Paints

THE REAL savings on paint are made by buying the best quality it is possible to make . . . "Minnesota" —because they cover more surface per gallon . . . you buy fewer gallons for the job! —they give better protection, save costly repairs! —they last longer, hold their color longer . . . you don't have to paint so often.
