Annual Homecoming at Salem M. E. Church

The annual homecoming of Salem Methodist Episcopal church will bring many of the former members and old friends to Salem Grove next Sunday, July 1.

There will be no Sunday school session, but at 10:30 a. m., the District Superintendent of the Ann Arbor District, Detroit Conference, Dr. J. A. Halmhuber, will preach the sermon.

The ladies of the church will serve a chicken dinner at noon, to which the public is invited.

At 2:30 p. m., a program of music, instrumental and vocal, will be given, and the ministers of Chelsea, Waterloo, Munith and Grass Lake will bring messages of friendship and good will.

Nothing has been left undone to make the day a memorable one; and everybody is assured of a cordial welcome.

Sea Scouts Cruise on Ford Lake, Ypsi

Fourteen Chelsea Sea Scouts took a week-end cruise at the Ypsilanti Sea Scout camp on Ford Lake, Ypsilanti. Each Scout received instructions in rowing the cutter and sailing the schooner "Legionaire."

The two weeks' cruise to Chicago and return starts July 26 and all the Chelsea Scouts are working hard to equip themselves and to earn their expense money for that trip. The U. S. S. Truant is to be turned over to Commander Schrader the first of July and as many Sea Scouts as can are to stand watch on board from then until the sailing date.

The Chelsea crew has received orders to parade and drill at the Ypsilanti 4th of July celebration and have been offered the opportunity of helping on the Sea Scout concessions to earn money with which to purchase fuel for their trip.

State Plans To Sell Local Cement Plant At Friday Meeting

Following a legislative decree that "it must either be sold, operated or dismantled by July 1, 1934," the State Administrative Board last week opened bids on the old Chelsea cement plant, referred them to the finance committee with power to act. Action will be taken by this committee on Friday of this week.

The Board's action is just about the last chapter in the story of the cement plant which was put in operation by the state some 10 years ago, experienced ups and downs and gained the reputation of being the State's biggest political football.

The finance committee can either accept or reject the three highest bids for the property which includes some 20 buildings, an 800 acre tract and a good sized inland lake. If the bids are unsatisfactory, then the committee has the alternative to have the plant dismantled by prison labor and salvaged for what the state can secure out of it.

The three high bids were from Norman Levy—Chicago, $41,200; Michigan Portland Cement Company, $40,100 and Joseph E. Zilk, Ann Arbor, $40,000.

There was no intimation from Levy whether he intended to operate the plant or dismantle it. The Michigan Portland Cement Company is a new organization and they intimated through their attorney that the plant would be operated for the manufacture of cement. The Zilk bid is for operation of the plant as a fertilizer manufactory.

An effort is being made by local business men to influence sale of the plant to Mr. Zilk, as it is believed his proposition would furnish a greater amount of local labor and for a longer period of time. Local business representatives were in Lansing last Friday to interview the administrative board and a delegation will be sent tomorrow to meet the finance committee prior to their consideration of the bids at 10 o'clock.

Supervisors Hold Preliminary Meet

The Washtenaw County Board of Supervisors held a preliminary meeting on Monday, discussing the drain bond situation and other problems which will be considered at their next meeting, Monday, July 2. Dr. Edwin C. Ganzhorn received the appointment as county physician.

The equalization committee, composed of Fred Blumhart of Saline, James Galbraith of Ann Arbor city, Mr. Thompson of Ypsilanti city, Edward Foster of Ypsilanti township and Gilbert Magdon of Dexter township, met Wednesday to equalize the valuation.

Mrs. Graves, county agent of the state welfare, was present at the meeting.

Rogers-Corners School to Observe Centennial

Rogers Corners school, Freedom township, will celebrate their Centennial on Sunday, August 19. Committees have been appointed to make arrangements for the event and it is promised that a good program will be provided for those in attendance. The school and church grounds will be used to accommodate the crowd. Further details will be published at a later date.

WOMEN'S UNION MEETS

The monthly meeting of the Women's Union was held Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. William Hensch, Jr., with Mrs. Norman H. Schmidt as assisting hostess.

The meeting opened with Scripture Reading by Mrs. Wilbert Breitenwischer and prayer in unison. The topic, "The Holy Ministry," was given by Mrs. Arthur Schaefer. A reading, "Wanted, a Worker," was given by Mrs. Elmer Schaefer, and "The Afterglow" by Mrs. H. J. Paul.

Lunch was served by the hostesses.

Street Improvements Are Well Under Way

It is expected that grading on West Middle street will be finished this week. Labor for this project has been furnished under the provisions of the FERA. The curbing project for this street has been approved and the work of digging trenches will start the first of next week. Labor for the curbing will also be furnished by FERA, with the possible exception of the cement finisher, and according to village officials, some of the material may be furnished.

W. T. Rye, Monroe contractor who black-topped several village streets last summer, moved some of his equipment here this week and is completing his part of the contract, making necessary repairs to the pavement. The village held back several hundred dollars of the contract price for the black-top work and this will be paid Mr. Rye when the streets have been put in shape to the complete satisfaction of authorities.

Men have been employed by the village to fill cracks in the cement pavement on Main and Middle streets and work of pouring tar and sanding was started Wednesday.

County Republicans to Picnic Saturday

The big Republican picnic to be held this week Saturday afternoon at Man-nie's Inn, Pleasant Lake, will afford the people of this vicinity a chance to meet and talk with most of the prominent candidates for state and county offices. Everyone is invited as the picnic is free, and favors will be distributed to the children.

Among those to speak at the picnic will be Frank D. Fitzgerald and Clarence J. McLeod, candidates for governor; Loren Dickinson of Charlotte, candidate for lieutenant governor; Earl C. Michener and J. Milton Hoyer, candidates for Congress; Jack Dunn, James Warner, R. N. Burr, Geo. Gaudy, candidates for state representative; Jacob Andros, candidate for sheriff; Albert Rapp, candidate for prosecutor; Emmett Gibb, candidate for county clerk, and others. All candidates present will be introduced and those desiring to speak can do so.

A full program of sports has been arranged to start promptly at 2:30 p. m., to be followed by the speaking program at 4 p. m. A great number of people have already signified their intention to be present and a huge crowd will be present. In case rain the hall will be used.

The local committee handling arrangements are as follows: Otto D. Lulek, P. C. Maroney, Theo. Bahnmiller, Mrs. J. S. Cummings and Mrs. J. L. Fletcher.

CANNING FOR WELFARE

Welfare ladies are canning vegetables and fruit at the parochial school, under the direction of Miss Alice Van Akorn, of the county welfare-canning department. Anyone having any produce which they will donate for this purpose is asked to call Village President J. E. McKune and the produce will be called for. Cooperation of local residents will be appreciated. The assistance of any local residents who can help in the canning will also be appreciated.

WILL PUBLISH LATER

Because of the Fourth of July holiday falling on Wednesday of next week, publication of The Standard will be delayed until Friday morning instead of Thursday. We will appreciate the cooperation of our news and advertising patrons in getting as much as possible of their copy to us on Tuesday.

FOR THE CHILDREN

The story of a lettuce head
My grandpa found the heart of;
It takes some real hard thought to
How could it have been a part of?

The heart was once a little sprout,
Another grew beside it,
And covered it all over, 'till
You'd surely think 'twould hide it.

Another and another came
And hugged the little stranger,
Until the little life was crushed
Down in its little manger.

It still kept sweet and tender, for
It wanted folks to know;
Some day, upon a table fine,
'Twould make a great big show.

The day arrived, the hostess knew,
The heart was all complete;
And would you know the reason why?
Sure, hugging made it sweet.

—Arthur Carlton.

Michigan Department of State*WEEKLY NEWS BULLETIN

Frank D. Fitzgerald
Secretary of State

Lansing, Mich.—One provision of the new financial responsibility law demands that drivers be properly licensed and a mere oversight may result in a driver being placed under the provisions of the act for a minor offense.

Very little attention has been paid in the past by motorists to the fact that the motor vehicle operators' license law requires motorists to register changes of address with the chief of police or sheriff. If this is not done, the motorist is not properly licensed.

Enforcement of the two acts is in the hands of local officials and motorists who fail to secure new licenses when the old ones expire or who fail to properly register changes of address, place themselves in danger of being compelled to furnish proof of financial responsibility.

Employees of the Department of State who are members of the Michigan National Guard may attend the annual training camp at Gaylord without endangering their positions, Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald announced last week. Time spent in military service will not be considered in computing vacations.

One of the most severe "shatter-proof" glass laws in the United States becomes effective in Michigan on July 1.

The law, adopted by the 1931 legislature, declares that all automobiles manufactured after July 1, 1934 and operated in Michigan must be completely equipped with shatter-proof or laminated or unbreakable glass.

In most other states, laws require the use of the special glass in windshields only.

MASON—Monday's half-day rain broke the long drought and saved corn, beans and wheat. The rain gauge at the Mason disposal plant recorded .61 of an inch. While the rain was not heavy it came steady and all of the moisture soaked into the ground.

Wednesday night's shower was noisy but only .10 of an inch of water was recorded. It was accompanied by a high wind which damaged orchards and flattened several billboards along the highways. The shower of Wednesday night was spotty. In some sections of the county not a drop of water fell while in others the rainfall amounted to half an inch. —County News.

Ypsi Legion Ready to Celebrate Fourth

Ypsilanti, June 27.—If anything has been left undone to make their third annual Fourth of July celebration the most complete in the history of Southeastern Michigan, members of the Ypsilanti Post of the American Legion who have been working feverishly for a month past at ironing out and assembling the parts of their program want to be told about it.

As the boys who came back from overseas paused briefly today to check over the fruits of their preliminary efforts they viewed with just satisfaction a five-day program that seems to contain everything, and more, generally associated with the real "old-fashioned" celebration of American Independence. Beginning this Saturday, when the advance guard of a crowd expected to exceed last year's total attendance record of 25,000 people makes its way into Recreation Park, the program includes parades, sports events, various other contests and exhibitions, dancing, rides and shows, designed to pack every minute of the celebration with interest and excitement right up to the instant of the last dying ember of the huge fireworks display which will officially end the celebration on the night of the Fourth.

Work of laying out the park actually got underway last week and was to continue today with erection of a huge dance floor and preparation for the installation of the big headquarters tent and the various rides and shows which will begin arriving late Thursday night to begin their "setup" Friday morning. By that time the park itself will be presenting one of its busiest scenes in years.

While the shows, rides and dancing will be in full swing to welcome the early crowds Saturday afternoon and evening, the first actual events of the celebration will be staged Sunday afternoon in a baseball game between Faust and Bushway post baseball teams, leaders of the Detroit Legion League, at 2:30, and a band concert by the Ypsilanti Community Band under the direction of Prof. John F. Barnhill at 7:30 in the evening.

Monday is to be known as "Farmers Day," with various events of special interest to rural folks planned during the day. The principle feature is an open field meet for both children and adults set for 2:30 in the afternoon. Several hundred babies will command the attention of a dozen prominent physicians as judges in a special contest Tuesday morning.

Tuesday afternoon will feature the annual children's and pets' parade, beginning at Ypsilanti high school at 2:30. Cash prizes for pets, novelty of costume and so forth will again be awarded and along with an unusually heavy entry list it is expected that more than 10,000 persons who witnessed last year's parade will border the line of march. At 8:30 in the evening interest will turn to the big outdoor arena to be erected in back of the baseball diamond, where Washtenaw county stars will compete with a Detroit group in an amateur boxing show.

Wednesday, of course, is the day of days, opening with the huge Fourth of July parade. The second annual Southeastern District drum and bugle corps contest at 2:30 in the afternoon will be preceded a half hour earlier by an air circus featuring planes from the 107th Observation Squadron.

Other prominent organizations expected to take part in the parade and special exhibitions are the Wayne County Council Auxiliary Women's Drum and Bugle Corps of Detroit, the Women's Auxiliary Corps of Hamtramck, the Jackson Girl Scouts who received a great hand for their excellent drill work last year, the Jackson Zouaves' famous double-time drill team and the Adrian German Band.

As the dancing and other merry making reaches its height of the celebration a second band concert will be conducted by Prof. Barnhill at 7:30, to be followed by a dazzling display of modern fireworks to ring down the curtain at 10 o'clock.

In addition to this general program, Boy Scouts of the district will pitch their tents on the grounds Monday to begin their annual three-day jamboree and assist in directing the crowds.

Girls in Teens Lead Sex in the Habit of Blushing

Girls of high school and college age blush more than older women, according to psychologists, says the Chicago American. Thousands of questionnaires filled out by girls and women of all ages were summarized as follows:

1. Blushing is most common among girls between thirteen and seventeen years of age, with 61 per cent admitting that they blush frequently; it is least common among married women over fifty, with only 21 per cent admitting that they are habitual blushers.

2. Unmarried women are 35 per cent more apt to blush than married women. The greatest difference in blushing habits between married and single women is between the ages of twenty to twenty-five. During these years blushing is 60 per cent more common among unmarried than among married women.

3. Both married and unmarried women show a distinct tendency to stop blushing as they grow older.

4. Divorced women blush much more frequently than married women who are still living with their husbands.

5. Widows blush less than divorcees, but more than married women.

MICHIGAN BELL TELEPHONE CO.*MICHIGAN... THE IDEAL VACATION LAND

Out-of-state relatives and friends will thank you for suggesting a "Vacation in Michigan."

Only a few hours away from any part of the midwest, this lake-bordered state offers a reasonably priced vacation among ideal surroundings. Its lakes, streams and beaches, primeval forests and modern resorts, hospitable towns and cities and great manufacturing plants add to its charm and interest. Splendid highways and boat and rail lines make it easily accessible.

Michigan's tourist and resort business brings large sums of money to the state each year. It provides employment for thousands, and greater prosperity for all of us. We can increase that business further by telling out-of-state friends about Michigan's vacation advantages, and by spending our own vacations here.

And, no matter which part of Michigan you visit this summer, banish worry by telephoning home and office frequently. Call ahead for reservations, or to tell friends you are coming. Long distance calls will add but little to the cost and much to the enjoyment of your vacation.

OUR NEIGHBORS

PLYMOUTH—American Legion Myron H. Beals Post No. 32 of Plymouth has purchased and moved into the former Gleaner's hall located on Newburg road, Newburg. Through the efforts of the legionnaires headed by the building chairman, Melvin C. Gutherie the remodeling and landscaping is going forward rapidly and soon the legion expects to have a permanent home that they, as well as the entire community, will be proud of.—Mail.

MANCHESTER—Everybody seems very happy to see the workmen engaged in digging the trenches for walls for the second unit of the new high school building and should they learn that a way has been found to go still further and build the main section to make a complete modern school building. Finishing of the first unit is now under way and what an improvement it will be in every way.—Enterprise.

GRASS LAKE—Ford Wooster, 40, one of the best-known of the younger farmers of Grass Lake township, was killed Wednesday morning when the team he was driving became frightened and ran away, dragging the body of the unfortunate man around a 40 acre field twice.—News.

DUNDEE—On Sunday evening the official board of the M. E. church of Dundee and Azalia met at the local church to discuss the quarterly affairs of the congregation. Rev. J. A. Halmhuber of Ann Arbor, district superintendent, addressed the group. Rev. Risley received a unanimous invitation to return for another year.—Reporter.

Question And Answer Dept.

Ques.—I wish to ask you why is the picture in a camera upside down?

Ans.—The lens of a camera produces a picture by making the rays of light from the outside scene converge. It makes them come together to make a smaller image of the real scene. In doing so the lens makes the rays cross. Those from the top of the real scene cross those from the bottom of it, and appear below them on the plate at the focus of the camera.

Ques.—How many pounds of water does it take to make 100 pounds of ice?

Ans.—It takes just exactly 100 pounds of water to make 100 pounds of ice. However, the ice will occupy a little larger volume of space.

Ques.—If the moon was to blow up would the people on earth see it and hear it, too, if the report was loud enough?

Ans.—The people on earth would see the explosion, but they would not hear it, regardless of how loud it was. Between the earth and the moon there is a vacuum—empty space. Sound travels through matter; and as there is no matter in a vacuum, sound cannot pass through it. Light can pass through this vacuum, since light travels in the ether, which is not matter.

Ques.—Can you tell me in your interesting paper why a wood fire will snap and crackle, and it doesn't do it with a coal fire?

Ans.—In almost all kinds of wood there are a great many very small holes or cells. Some of these holes or cells have a little moisture in them. When the wood gets hot, this moisture turns to steam and bursts the little cells. This makes a noise like a small explosion, and a great many of such noises together make the crackle of the fire. Coal does not have those cells, and does not contain moisture in any other form.

Ques.—May I ask in your question department when salt dissolves in water what becomes of the salt?

Ans.—In solid salt the molecules are all stuck together in a permanent arrangement just as they are in all crystals. When salt dissolves, the molecules come apart. They float around singly in the water, and they are so small that it takes a powerful magnifying glass to see them.

Ques.—I want to ask in your question column if all gold coins are made of pure gold?

Ans.—No. Pure gold would be too soft. The molecules of pure gold do not stick together very tightly, and too many of them would rub off or wear away when the coin was carried about or used. To prevent this, they put a little copper into the gold when it is coined into money. This copper (called alloy) makes the molecules stick together more tightly so that the coin will be harder.

Ques.—Should a girl 15 years old kiss her boy friend?

Ans.—They shouldn't kiss, but they usually do. While we are not posing as moral reformers, we will say that from a hygienic standpoint the act is not very safe to either of the kissers.

Ques.—What and when was the first important discovery made with the telescope? Also who was the discoverer?

Ans.—The first important discovery made with the telescope was on Jan. 7, 1610, when Galileo discovered the moons of Jupiter. This discovery proved that the earth and the other planets revolve around the sun and displaced the theory that the earth was the center of the universe—a theory that had been accepted by everybody for nearly 2,000 years before Galileo's discovery.

Ques.—How is the weather predicted?

Ans.—Nearly all the changes of weather we have in the United States move across the continent in approximately the same path. A change usually starts in the northern part of the Pacific ocean, swings southeasterly across the western states, and then northeasterly across the Mississippi valley into the eastern states and into the Atlantic ocean. The weather map enables you to watch this path across the country to predict about when a change will affect a certain place.

Ques.—I am writing to ask you if animals can think?

Ans.—Yes, to a limited extent. In man, the gray matter of the brain, which does the thinking, is a thin layer from one-tenth to one-quarter of an inch thick spread over the surface of the upper part of the brain, where it has room to grow. With most animals—particularly the lower animals—the thinking part of the brain is on the inside, where any great growth is impossible.

Turtles Weigh 350 Pounds
All of the sea turtles are giants of the tortoise race, and the loggerhead attains to four feet in length of shell, and to from 250 to 350 pounds in weight, says Nature Magazine. The sea is the loggerhead's element and if he is swift enough to catch fishes and eels upon which he is reported to feed, he must, when full grown, be monarch of all he surveys.

Birthplace of Chrysanthemums Long before the first candy chrysanthemum reached Europe, Chinese gardeners cultivated and developed many interesting forms. The first chrysanthemum appeared in Europe after the middle of the seventeenth century. First planted in Holland, they then were introduced in France and England where they quickly became popular. They made their appearance in this country in the nineteenth century. Two wild chrysanthemums with small flowers are said to be the ancestors of 400 different types of this plant.

McNider To Appear at Republican Meet

Jackson, June 27—The younger voters and the ex-service men are being attracted to Jackson, Michigan, July 6 and 7, when the Republican party celebrates the 80th anniversary of its founding, by the presence of the Hon. Hanford McNider of Iowa. Mr. McNider, although a young man, has had many honors of national importance. He is past national commander of the American Legion. He is former assistant secretary of War. He is former Minister to Canada. He is an excellent speaker and he will appear on the program at the fair grounds immediately following the old-fashioned torch light parade which will take place at 8:00 p. m. Friday night, July 6. Several leaders of young Republican groups have already been to Jackson to talk over arrangements for the Friday evening meeting with the "On to Jackson" committee. It is thought that this will be the largest gathering of young Republicans ever held in Michigan.

Cockatillo, Noisy Bird, Is Native of Australia

The cockatillo, whimsically described by one authority as "a bird as a small edition of the cockatoo, is a most distinguished appearing bird, says a writer in the Detroit News. Measuring between 10 and 11 inches in length this immigrant from Australia is clothed almost entirely in gray, having a pearly gray breast and darker gray back and wings. Yellow cheek patches, each with its center of crimson, lend a touch of color to the cockatillo's attire; white its dignity is greatly heightened by a pearl gray crest, shading to yellow at the base. These are the colorings of the male, but the female is practically the same in appearance, though the color touches are not so bright. They are noisy. Their love-call has a bell-like and musical quality, but is uttered very often and sometimes grows too piercing for the enjoyment of the listener. Some of them learn to talk a little, though such cases are rare. Although the native home of the cockatillo is in Australia, most of those found in this country have been bred here, for there is in effect in Australia a law which forbids the exporting of native birds. However, they are said to show a tendency to breed off in captivity than in their native state. The American bred birds are harder, in the opinion of many authorities, than imported ones.

Black Marble Under Chalk

In the chalk mine of Nagyvasnyo, near Miskolc, rich layers of black marble are found under the chalk. writes the Budapest correspondent of the London Sunday Observer. According to expert reports, this marble is equal in quality to the famous black marble of Belgium. The mountain ranges which surround the mine also contain quantities of black marble streaked with white. This stone has in the past been employed by the villagers for paving the highways, so the villages of Nagyvasnyo, Ural and Suss bear the unusual distinction of being approached by marble roads.

Before Bank of England

Merchants of London placed their gold, which was the unit of exchange, in the Tower of London for safe keeping. Charles I, 1640, took possession of the tower with 200,000 pounds of gold, which he appropriated. The merchants then placed their money with the goldsmiths and the notes given in exchange were passed from hand to hand, originating the system of checking. The goldsmiths became too powerful as the holders of the gold of the country and were suppressed, principally by the chartering of the Bank of England, 1694.

"Still, you were well informed of his matriculation in the East," Rankin stated bluntly.

"I learned of that wholly by accident," the physician returned, "through his uncle, Mr. Merrick. In September I called at his Vananda bank about a loan I wished to arrange; and during our conversation, he mentioned his nephew was a junior at Philadelphia."

The detective nodded. "Your own alma mater was Hawthorne, wasn't it, Doctor Prince?"

"Yes, in Fort Wayne; I belonged to the Omicron chapter of Mu Beta Sigma there. I graduated eight years ago, but have always retained an interest in fraternity affairs and kept in close touch with its activities."

"And your meeting with Mr. Merrick was your only connection with young Jordan?"

Tullied into a false sense of security, the alumnus answered with a touch of assurance.

"Our paths crossed just that once," he declared confidently. "Much as I'd like to help you, Mr. Rankin, I'm sorry I cannot."

"Then, Doctor Prince," and suddenly an implacable tone replaced Rankin's ingratiating manner. "What about his wife, Laura Dumont, who was also your mistress for more than a year?"

Caught off his guard, consternation leaped into the physician's dark eyes; but despite his surprise, he screened his alarm by an assumption of anger.

"Laura Dumont?" he demanded. "I never heard of her! Who the devil is she?"

"It was your relations with her that caused the Jordans to separate. He found out about you only last May, after his marriage, when he happened to visit his wife unexpectedly from school. That was why he decided to quit Aberdeen and go to college elsewhere."

"You must be crazy, Rankin! I haven't the least idea what you are talking about."

"There's no point, Doctor, in claiming you were ignorant of Stuart's movements," Rankin interrupted acerbically. "Mrs. Jordan kept you well posted. In several letters she wrote the boy, asking his forgiveness, she admits you were her lover. And to persuade him of her good faith, she promised him to forget you completely. He lied convincingly, certain that Doctor Prince could scarcely know the exact tenor of the actress's correspondence."

As though in anger that some part of his plans had gone awry, the doctor's features revealed a genuine fury mingled with his sudden alarm. "You found some of her letters?" He compressed his lips viciously, then regained his suavity with an effort. "You are on the wrong track altogether, Rankin. Whatever she wrote, they have nothing to do with me."

"Except as very satisfactory proof of your association, Stuart's blindness and how he detected you. It would carry weight as evidence in court."

Abruptly, Doctor Prince appeared to realize the futility of further evasion.

"Well, what if Laura and I were lovers for a while?" he shrugged.

"That's an old story; it has been over since last June—nearly ten months. In fact, we broke off soon after Jordan discovered us together in May."

Since the letters had only vaguely outlined the circumstances leading to that exposure, the detective asked: "I suppose that occurred in the Somerset apartments he had taken for his wife?"

"Yes," Doctor Prince answered willingly enough. "You see, the arrangement was that Jordan visited Laura only over the week-ends; at other times, he couldn't very well get away from Aberdeen. And Hannah had too small a town in which to establish his wife secretly. That left me most of the week with her, though I didn't take advantage of it; we were careful not to make my presence conspicuous and start the other tenants gossiping. Even her maid never suspected anything wrong in our two and one-half months at the Somerset; she came in to clean, always in my absence, and didn't sleep in."

"How did you become acquainted with Miss Dumont in the first place?"

"Our affair began in Chicago a year ago last fall," Doctor Prince related. "Laura's show, 'The Blue Rose' had a long run there; and I was attending a medical convention in the city. We met at a studio party of Layton Kroll, an artist and former classmate of mine, and readily formed an intimate friendship. Then, when the show came here in the winter, and she quit it to marry Jordan, we continued to make the most of our opportunities."

"And his awkward interruption of your affair," Rankin inquired.

"Yes, on Tuesday, May sixth; he just walked in without warning at about nine o'clock in the evening. The alumnus admitted without apology. 'The previous week end, he did not visit her; writing her that his studies and track practice detained him. Meanwhile he secretly planned to join her after hours on his birthday and surprise her pleasantly.' He paused, an amused smile playing unashamedly on his lips. 'It was difficult to tell who was most surprised. We had just completed an informal late supper in Laura's bedroom; she wore negligee and I... I'm afraid I was hardly in the most conventional attire.'"

Rankin nodded at this confirmation of his deductions. "What occurred then?"

"Well, there was no scene, if that is what you mean; the boy took it quietly. In fact, was the least flustered of the three. After the first shock, he didn't demand an explanation, but only expressed his regret and disappointment. Of course, he felt bitter; he informed Laura that she could have the apartment, but he was through. Then, before she could find her tongue, he hurried out. Later, he wrote from school that he intended to get away to Philadelphia and not see her again; but he assured her of a continued allowance. Laura visited Hannah several times in the vain hope of winning him back. And during the summer, I believe he went to the west coast to escape her. I heard that only indirectly, because in the meantime, as I said, we two also parted company."

Certain that the doctor lied about severing his relations with the actress, Rankin asked: "And what caused you to separate? Did you quarrel? Did Mrs. Jordan find another sweet heart?"

"Oh, no, it wasn't that," Doctor Prince returned easily. "Why does one usually break off? Like other people, we grew tired of our affair and mutually decided to end it. Somehow, it wasn't the same after the boy got wind of it. We parted the best of friends, however, even though we haven't met since."

"Then you wouldn't know of her trip to Philadelphia just before Stuart died. She went secretly; it looks to me as if she might have some connection with the tragedy itself."

The tentative theory was a trap to force the physician's hand, tempting him to produce his own alibi for Laura Jordan and thus to his own dishonesty.

But he evaded it cleverly. "I don't believe that for a moment," was all he said. "Unfortunately, I have no knowledge of her recent movements."

"Yet Myra Prentiss," Rankin stated deliberately, "was definitely led to understand that you do. More than that, you also spent the last month with her in a love nest at Lake Geneva."

At this calculated attack, for one brief second, Doctor Prince's features turned a pasty hue with fresh dread. But again, he recovered himself.

"You're talking in riddles, Rankin," he rasped out. "This Prentiss woman is mistaken, whoever she is!"

Rankin fully disclosed his own strong hand. "Do you deny, Doctor Prince, knowing that she impersonated Laura in St. Louis? She believed Mrs. Jordan went north with you; and she met her in Philadelphia last week, supposing she had just left you. Actually, Laura had been east for some time setting her plans, and at this end completing her alibi with your help."

"Of course I deny it!" the doctor exclaimed, on edge. "Everything! I deny it, are you daring to suggest I'm responsible for the boy's murder?"

"I suggest you knew where your lover was this last month and the purpose of her trip; that, in fact, you contrived it with her. That you were also aware Stuart intended to divorce his wife when he reached twenty-two and so disinherited her. That you could have given her the information she needed to enter the Mu Beta Sigma house during the initiation. That you might have supplied the poison."

A murderous rage contorted the alumnus' face. Quivering with an overwhelming fear, he leaped to his feet and crashed his fist on the desk.

"Get out of here, Rankin, quick!" he shouted. "You are trying to trap me into incriminating myself and exceeding your authority. If you intend to hold me, I have a right to the customary warning. This Prentiss woman is a total stranger to me; and except for her lies, you haven't a single iota of proof to connect me with the crime!"

And Rankin was appalled to recognize that accuracy of his pronouncement. In writing about her affair of almost a year ago, the actress never mentioned her paramour's name. And if she had, that would not involve him in the conspiracy to murder her husband. Myra Prentiss' word alone connected Doctor Prince with it, the accessory who was both Laura Jordan's past and present lover. For the rest, his guilt was based purely on hypothesis, without even circumstantial evidence. The detective's case against her was complete; but unless she confessed and implicated her distant accomplice of her alibi, no jury in the world would convict him.

Confronted at the last moment by imminent failure, Rankin sat silent; somberly, his eyes wandered to the desk. And then they suddenly widened, lighted by an amazed wonder and excitement. The discovery he made at that instant had been staring him in the face since his arrival; but only now, for the first time, did he really observe it, and appreciate its tremendous significance. For in one fell swoop, it told him the entire truth about the case. Abruptly it concluded his investigation; it brought Doctor Prince to the gallows, and most astonishing of all, supplied a solution totally unforeseen and new—the correct one, at long last.

CHAPTER XIII

By the Air Route

Taken unawares by the revelation, Tommy Rankin had to summon every bit of self-control to conceal his astonishment from Doctor Prince. Never before, in his career as a detective, had he encountered the equal of this brilliantly plotted and cleverly executed conspiracy. Acquainted finally with every detail, its ramifications were far more complicated than he had ever imagined; the identity of the criminal so unexpected as to be inconceivable. He could only gasp in admiration at the skill and subtlety with which he had been deceived and baffled; the ingenuity that blinded him to the correct solution. So daring was the plot that it was strange the shock of his knowledge did not betray him into exclaiming aloud. But with an effort he subdued every natural reaction; and the physician was too engrossed by his own wrath to have noticed his first start of comprehension.

But his quarry was fully a thousand miles away in Philadelphia at that moment. And so was the conclusive evidence of guilt, supplementing that on Doctor Prince's desk, without which he was helpless to act. Remembering that brought another and suddenly alarming responsive chord to the detective's memory. It was based wholly on his estimation of the murderer's cleverness; yet, with a conviction approaching certainty, he realized that if he failed to obtain that evidence before noon of that day, he could never prove the entire conspiracy. He had only the few hours until morning to save it, before it would be destroyed. Perhaps it was already destroyed; the possibility that his discovery occurred too late to prevent that loss gave him a dreadful qualm. And unless he had arrested the murderer within the same time, as well, both the conspirators might escape him altogether, and his case end in failure. Already his watch, ticking off precious moments, pointed past midnight.

It was imperative that he act promptly and move as quickly as he could. Accordingly, he met Doctor Prince's outburst quietly, dropping his earlier aggressiveness.

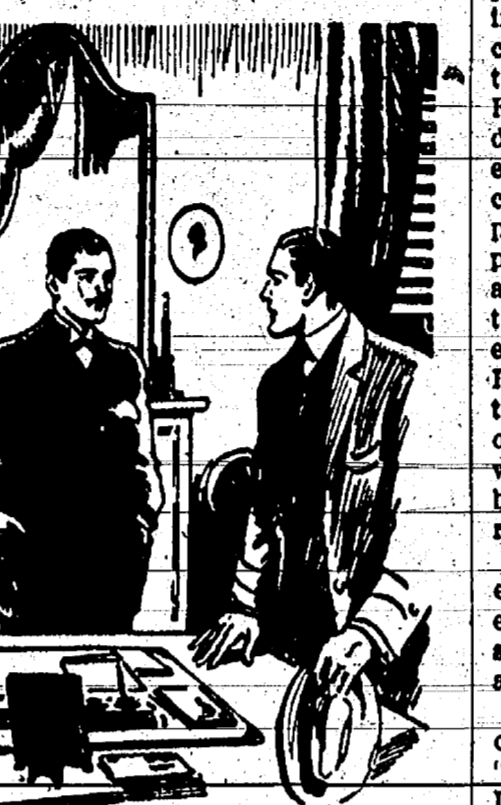

"I didn't intend, Doctor Prince," he said almost apologetically, "to interfere with any of your legal rights. My only wish is to get at the bottom of young Jordan's death; and I was almost positive that if you would speak frankly, you had some information that would be valuable to me."

At his retraction, the doctor's own truculence lessened and his tone grew more restrained.

"Well, I haven't, Rankin. The fact that Laura and I were once friendly has nothing to do with it. And since we separated almost a year ago, I haven't the least idea what has happened between her and the boy."

Rankin shrugged as he rose to his feet. "Perhaps I was mistaken," he admitted placatingly. "For the moment, I shall have to take your word for it. And as it is so late, I had better go. But I warn you, Doctor Prince, if I find any fresh cause for suspicion, I shall return for an explanation."

"You'll just be wasting your time," Doctor Prince returned. "It's no good your trying to bluff me into admitting another thing. I have nothing to hide, and I have told you all I know."

Still apologetic, the detective permitted himself to be ushered out of the office and the physician's residence.

But once the door closed behind him, his manner altered; grim and determined, it developed the nervous vitality and urgent haste of one who has decided on a definite course of action. In the dark around the corner, out of sight of the house on Harker street, he summoned the two detectives posted outside to aid him.

"Listen to my instructions carefully," he directed crisply, "and carry them out to the letter. From now on, you are to maintain a close watch on Doctor Prince. Wherever he goes, follow him; don't let him out of your sight. You understand, I don't want him to escape before I arrest him."

The younger of the two nodded. "O. K., sir, we'll see to that. He won't have any chance to slip."

"Then arrange immediately with the telephone company," Rankin continued, "to have his wire tapped, and every call or message he sends overheard. Particularly if he makes any long-distance calls to a Mrs. Laura Jordan at the Quaker hotel in Philadelphia. I am anxious to learn if he attempts to warn her of my visit."

"Do you expect him to get in touch with her?" the other phin-clotches man asked.

"That all depends. I was forced to disclose my cards rather fully to compel him to speak; and he may consider it necessary to inform her I am on their trail. It's more probable, though, that he'll suspect he is being watched and won't risk it. He denied knowing where she is and to communicate with her would be to play into my hands and prove the connection between them."

The detective paused a moment. "Now," he said suddenly, "can you tell me how to find the Central Airport of St. Louis?"

At the unexpected question, both sleuths looked temporarily perplexed. The younger one comprehended first. "Central airport? Oh, that's Lambert field, about twelve miles northwest of here; it's a good distance outside the city. If you want to reach it in a hurry, your best bet is to hire a machine or taxi to drive you out."

"Well, I do," Rankin returned promptly. "Captain Chambers is waiting to hear from me; phone him to meet me there as quickly as he can get to it. Tell him I intend to take a plane back to Philadelphia immediately."

There was still much for him to accomplish in St. Louis, he realized, to complete his investigation. He ought to make inquiries of tenants in the Somerset apartments for data about the actress' establishment there, for both her husband and her lover. The maid who served her, if he could locate her, might be able to supply him with evidence, unknown to Laura, of the intrigue; perhaps she could even identify Doctor Prince as her paramour. And at the Penton hotel, questions about Myra Prentiss' sojourn there, posing as Laura Du Monte, should prove productive. But it was all routine work that could be managed later, or possibly undertaken by the St. Louis authorities after his departure. At that moment, he was only concerned with the urgent need of returning home before the morning was over.

Rankin took leave of the two detectives and hailed a cab, whose driver, obeying his order to disregard traffic regulations, brought him to Lambert field in half an hour. It was already one o'clock; but despite the late hour, a plane roared off into the darkness, circling west, just as he arrived. Typical of all airports, a bewildering variety of red, green and white lights gleamed from unexpected places. Several searchlights swept the night, revolving on skeleton-like towers. An incandescent blue light flooded the flat wide field itself with the brilliance of day; its glare was reflected in the glassy stare of the low, arched plane hangars behind it. The main building and waiting room, near the road, still disclosed signs of activity and it was before this that Rankin alighted.

By the time Captain Chambers arrived, he had introduced himself to the only agent of the Continental Mail and Passenger airplane present, so late, presented his credentials and explained his predicament. And in return, was informed of the extreme difficulty of obtaining transportation to Philadelphia at that time of night.

There were, of course, no passenger planes or planes for both mail and passengers going east until morning; if the detective wished, however, he could charter one. The only other alternative was the mail carrier from Kansas City, bound for New York and due at Lambert field at two ten. But except in rare circumstances, and in cases of extreme urgency, the company never permitted these to carry passengers; and then only with the assent of the operation manager of that—the Central—district. The United States post office, the agent assured Rankin, could not object as long as the mails were properly delivered. The official in question though, Mr. Alcock, was in Kansas City and would have to be phoned by long distance to his residence there.

All this Rankin briefly related to the excited captain, as well as his discovery and the reason for his abrupt and speedy departure. Then he turned again to the agent.

"Try to get in touch with Mr. Alcock at once," he suggested anxiously. "If he refuses permission, I suppose I'll have to hire a plane. But the emergency is certainly great enough, once he realizes it is a matter of preventing the escape of two murderers and that I want to be on the ground myself."

"Yes, I should think so," the agent agreed, "and I'll have him on the wire in a few minutes. Of course, it's rather awkward at this hour; if there were more time or the request came from someone in a higher or more recognized position in the city, it would be less difficult. I haven't any doubt that your passage east could be arranged without delay."

"Just the same," Captain Chambers put in sternly, "the police authorities have a right to expect your cooperation. You can be assured this mission has full official approval. If you wish me to, I will phone our Commissioner of Police here and have him speak to your operation manager."

The agent nodded. "It might be a good idea to do that," he said. "Then, if it should be necessary to convince Mr. Alcock how important it is to grant his permission, we can connect them and let the commissioner back you."

Accordingly, while he communicated with Kansas City, the captain called the home of his superior in St. Louis, woke him and described the situation to him. His intervention, however, was not needed. It took fifteen minutes to get the C. M. P. A. manager on the line; but when he heard all the circumstances—from both his employee and Rankin himself, he was persuaded that they justified an exception to the usual company practice. Provided the detective signed a waiver, because the mail plane's contents were insured, releasing it from all liability in case of accident, he could go along in it.

It was two o'clock before, all preparations completed, Rankin accompanied the agent and Captain Chambers into the glaring lights of the field. Waiting there, he reported to the Captain his instructions to the detectives and added new ones. Suddenly, the distant hum of a motor from nowhere broke the silence, growing louder as it approached until it became a deafening drone. It ceased just as abruptly; and the next moment, a low-winged gray monoplane plopped into the illumination and settled on the ground.

Constructed entirely of metal, it had a single engine and open cockpit. Originally, it had been a cabin plane, with capacity for four passengers; but three of the seats were removed to make room for a mail compartment. Like all planes, the wing-spread revealed the license number and the name of the line that owned it.

The pilot stepped out alone, a tall, unusually handsome man, scarcely more than a youth, but with grim lips and a sharp wary expression. He acknowledged the agent's introductions with a firm clasp, listening to his explanation of the situation without comment; he accepted his passenger just as casually. Then he turned to supervise the unloading of the St. Louis mail.

When more east-bound mail had been unloaded, he returned to the cockpit. His parachute securely strapped, Rankin followed suit, crawling into the remaining seat in the cabin; scarcely had he settled himself than the whole plane vibrated with the thunderous roar of the motor.

Though he had traveled by air before, he experienced a thrill as it raced bumpily across the field. The ground tilted crazily beneath, causing him a sinking sensation, and abruptly it shot out of the area of light. At most imperceptibly, it climbed higher and higher into a black void, until the illumination dwindled and the humans on the ground became mere pigmies. Then the plane straightened itself and soared eastward.

There was, of course, no conversation between the flyers, the drone of the engine precluding any effort. Below, the detective estimated the distance down to be about two thousand feet. He could see only a blotch of darkness, punctuated by twinkling dots, so tiny as to resemble glow-worms; after the broad stream of the Mississippi river was passed, an occasional cluster suggested a village. He was not comfortable, cramped against a pile of mail-sacks, stacked to his very seat. And the cabin had no heat; with the plane racing at a speed of two miles a minute, the wind whistled into it bitterly. But Rankin was too thankful at being permitted to make the passage to dwell on his distresses. Free of the sultry atmosphere and smoke of city streets, the stars glittered more brightly and crisply than the lights below; the new moon, a knife-like slice moving low on the horizon, was too thin to dim their brilliance.

Nutation Twists Vines
The tendency of certain vines to twist and bend is due to a characteristic known as nutational. The tendency to grow makes the change in form. In the case of hollow-stemmed vines like the morning glory, for instance, this growth tendency, or the stimulation of it, travels around the stem, with the result that the stem is constantly twisting as it lengthens. In the case of certain plants, such as the crocus and the tulip, the petals are very susceptible to temperature changes. When it is warm the outer side of the petals grows faster, causing the blossom to open, but with lowered temperature the petals are drawn together. This, of course, explains the opening and closing of the flowers night and morning.

Expected to Find China, but Landed in Michigan

Robbed in the splendor of a Chinese mandarin, and "making thunder" with pistols in each hand, Jean Nicolet, a French explorer, is expected to find China, but landed in Michigan. The first white man to gaze upon the two peninsulas that are now Michigan, observes a writer in the Detroit Free Press.

His rich garment, embroidered with figures of Asiatic birds and flowers, fluttered in the morning breeze as he strode in the morning breeze and strode in the Straits of Mackinac, and the unknown.

He sought the mythical northwest passage to China and he sought Indian tribes whose wealth of furs would enrich France and his employers. He found the tribes. But instead of the passage, Nicolet discovered Lake Michigan and the Northwest Territory.

Three centuries have come and gone since the young Frenchman set out to verify or disprove the dreams of men who remained in their homes.

Centuries that saw the trail he blazed thrive with commerce and the virgin timber disappear. Yet his name has been written in the shadows of history, submerged by Marquette, Champlain, Pontreave, La Salle and other heroic discoverers who unveiled a new world.

Bull Terrier Aristocrat of the Bulldog Family

The white terrier faunts the immaculate white cloak of aristocracy. White as the snow and wool of the bull terrier. Harmoniously have the "Apollon" of his past vanished with the gradual disappearance of the original brindle markings of his closest ally, the bulldog. He is now a gentlemanly and aristocratic dog, no longer a fencer in the Los Angeles Times.

Young English gamesters patronizing the prize-rings and cockpits in the early part of the past century, soon became disenchanted with the slow, brutal exhibitions of fighting bulldogs. They demanded more action. Accordingly, attempts were made to produce a breed with the quick movement of the terrier and the fighting power of the bulldog. The Old English white terrier, now almost extinct, and the bulldog were crossed. The original bull terrier was the result: a massive animal, combining strength with speed. The entire make-up of the bull terrier suggests ability to defend himself and his master in any emergency. He is an excellent watchdog, with great courage and tenacity; very affectionate and a loyal companion. He has suffered some from a hereditary degeneration of a duct inside the ear which brought about deafness. Breeders have taken this well in hand and have almost entirely eliminated the defect. His weight varies from 12 to 60 pounds. Below 12, he is classed as a toy.

Liast, Great Composer, Gave Wealth to Charity

Frans Liast, the great composer, was born in Rading, Hungary, October 22, 1811, and evinced such talent at an early age that several nobles undertook to finance his musical education. He was instructed by Czerny, Salieri and his father, and appeared in Vienna at the age of eleven, when Beethoven set the seal of approval on his performance. In France he was hailed as "Lita, le Neveu de Merveille du Monde." In France, where he heard the violinist, Paganini, he was fired with a desire to emulate at the piano his technical brilliance, and succeeded in France also he met Chopin, Berlioz and Mme. La Comtesse d'Agout, his intimate friend and mother of his three children. From 1833 to 1848 he enjoyed a series of phenomenal artistic successes in all parts of the world.

Liast dispensed his wealth with generosity, not only in the name of charity, but in such gestures as paying for the completion of the statue of Beethoven at Bonn when work was discontinued because of a lack of funds.

When he retired from the concert stage in 1848 he devoted his time to teaching, conducting, writing and composing. He had some 800 private pupils, among them some of the most illustrious pianists of the day. He conducted the opera at Weimar, solving every opportunity to introduce new works. His motto was "First place to the living," and consequently he produced Wagner's "Lohengrin," "Flying Dutchman" and "Tannhauser." Berlioz's "Benvenuto Cellini," Weber's "Euryanthe," Schumann's "Manfred" and many others. He died at the Wagner festival in Bayreuth July 13, 1893, while visiting his daughter Cosima.

Metallic Silver Helps Purify Drinking Water

Metallic silver in an ionic condition appears to exercise a very effective bactericidal action on the germs which are usually present in drinking water, say, Scientific American. Various means of introducing silver ions into water are described in Chemical Age. An electrical method involves the passage of the water between silver electrodes through which a very small current is continuously passing. By this method, an effective number of silver ions are introduced into the water with the aid of a three-to-five milliamperes current.

One of the earlier methods of purification was based upon the ability of water to take up silver by merely allowing it to trickle over glass beads coated with a very thin layer of the metal. A suitable small-scale plant consists of a 25-quart stoneware jar filled with a quantity of silver-coated glass beads which reduces the capacity to 18 quarts. The water is passed into the jar via a tube fitted with silver-coated quartz fibers, and a velocity of flow of half to one quart per minute suffices for thorough infection.

A curious feature of this catadyn process can itself be used as a sterilizing agent for mineral water bottles and the like. It appears that on allowing such silver-charged water to stand in a glass bottle for several hours, a proportion of the ionic silver becomes transferred to the walls of the bottle and serves to sterilize any liquid subsequently poured into it.

The Natchez Trace Back to pioneer days when the first boatmen made their way with their crude produce-laden craft down the Cumberland, the Tennessee, the Ohio and the Mississippi to New Orleans the Natchez Trace played a large part, says Literary Digest. This was an overland route of about 550 miles, the merest trace through woods and swamps from Nashville to Natchez. It ran through country that is now Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi.

TO THE PUBLIC—A long time since I've been talking about Green Lake. We've been a long time trying to move it, but could not make the hill. I wish to tell the public that I received the rights to call the lake as far as my line fence goes my own private lake, so I will invite everyone that has a boat, or your friend may have a boat to bring along, and stay and fish as long as you want to, or bring your bed and stay as long as you like it. However, you must have my permission to enter the property or pay a fine of $100. Call at the house and get a permit from headquarters, John George Klink. Don't let anybody fill you with a lot of "hot air" and make you pay $1.00 for the use of the boat, and sit on the lake in the hot sun and perhaps not get a fish when you can get a good mess of fish for nothing. The big stovetop fish has been caught, but there are plenty of others. -47

During July and August the evening services will not be held. We urge that all our people help to make the morning service and the Sunday school more interesting and successful than ever.

Daily Vacation Bible School. Fifty-four members of the Sunday school are meeting for religious instruction at the church every morning at 9:00 o'clock. Two class periods of 45 minutes each separated by a 30 minute recreation period are held each morning from 9 to 11 a. m. The kindergarten group is studying "The Good Shepherd." Teacher, Miss Broessamle.

First Grade, first class period, "Everyday Lessons in Religion." Miss Nadene Dancer, second period, "The Good Neighbor." Mrs. R. Ambrose.

Second grade, first period, "Masterpieces of Religious Art." Mrs. Wilkinson, second period, "Learning to Live." Mrs. Bahnmiller.

Junior Department, first period, "The Golden Scepter." Miss Laid; second period, "Tales of Golden Deeds." Miss Lucile Finkbeiner.

In addition to the class instruction the above teachers direct the handwork and drills, etc., in the recreation period.

The advanced class in the Junior

Department is taught by the pastor. First period, A. Catechism Class; second period, "What Christian Missions are doing for the children of the Far East."

There is only one class period for kindergartners. Teachers who take the first period are on duty from 9:00 until 10:15. Teachers of the second period classes are on duty from 9:45 until 11:00. Judging by the interest shown in all departments the school is an assured success from the start.

Illness in Gold Rush Days

Emu, National Bird
In the old colonial days, immense flocks of emus, the national bird of Australia, roamed over the inland plains. Although still to be found in large numbers in some districts, they have become rare in places where formerly they abounded. The emu is one of the most interesting inhabitants of Wilson's Promontory National park, in the State of Victoria. Here they are "tame wild birds," says Nature Magazine. The emu figures in the Australian national coat of arms, and is to be found on all Australian stamps, while the national animal, the kangaroo, decorates another corner of the postage.
