THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Prudence Schuyler comes from New York to Prosperity Farm, inherited from her uncle, to make a new life for herself and her brother, David, whose health has been broken by tragedy.

CHAPTER II.—The second day on her farm, Prudence ventures into the barn loft after eggs. She slips on the hay and falls to the ground—would have been badly hurt had not strong young arms been there to catch her. This was a case of Rodney Gerard, rich young man, who lives at High Ledges on the neighboring farm. There is at once a mutual attraction between the two, and they decide to try to make something of the fall and winter, looking after the timber. But Prudence decides to maintain a cool attitude toward him. She suspects men since her sister's death and ran away with her brother's wife.

CHAPTER III.—Lan Calloway, a rival of Rodney Gerard, tries to buy the timber off. He has a bad attitude and conducts with him to dispose of the trees. On the evening Prudence is visited by David from New York who is expected by Mrs. Gerard. He is a handsome young man, but Prudence is not interested in him. They are hateful, curious persons and leave Prudence rankled.

CHAPTER IV.—A few days later Prudence comes in contact with a man who is a rival of Rodney Gerard. He is a bad man, but Prudence is not interested in him. They are hateful, curious persons and leave Prudence rankled.

CHAPTER V.—They go to the circus, and while they are watching the parade, Calloway, an old clown, is accidentally killed. He was the father of Muffy Gough, one of the circus riders. Rod became friendly with Muffy when she and her parents spent a year on Prosperity Farm. Now her parents are dead, Calloway introduced the available laborers in the district so that they cannot be hired to cut the timber for Rodney Gerard.

CHAPTER VI.—Muffy Gough broke her engagement to Calloway, but never told him the reason and has since been led a life of misery. After the accident to Calloway, Muffy was so heartbroken that she had to leave the circus. She is still more against Rod when she sees in the newspaper a flashlight picture of him with Muffy.

CHAPTER VII.—Calloway stopped to brush the snow from the top of a granite boulder. "See that B in the stone? It marks the southernmost corner of the tract your uncle purchased from my father. Here's a trail. We'll go in a little way so that you can see the quality of the timber."

CHAPTER VIII.—Prudence looked up at him. Whatfulness was entirely out of her line, but she did her best with voice and eyes. "Suppose—suppose—is it too late to change my mind and let you?"

CHAPTER IX.—The shrill whistle of a locomotive shattered the silence. The train had arrived in a moment or two—the gang would be on its way to High Ledges, and Calloway was here! Prudence lowered her head. She felt as if her eyes were twinkling stars of triumph.

CHAPTER X.—"Suppose I agreed to let you cut my timber, would you still try to stop Rodney Gerard?"

CHAPTER XI.—Calloway, who had started on again, turned. Prudence stopped so as better to preserve the distance between them. His massive figure blocked the trail where it divided and ran east and west.

CHAPTER XII.—"Do you mean that you'll chuck Rod Gerard and give me the contract to cut? Do you mean that?"

CHAPTER XIII.—His eyes burned red as he hurled the question. Perhaps it was the shadow of his theatrical hat that gave the effect. Whatever the cause, she didn't like it. Prudence told herself she would back track as soon as she was sure the men were well away from the village.

CHAPTER XIV.—"Can't a girl change her mind?" Calloway's eyes flamed. He caught her shoulder. She shook off his hand. "Don't!"

CHAPTER XV.—"Horry, I didn't mean any harm, Miss Schuyler. Say listen, I'm a just man, but I don't stop at anything, get me, anything when I've been double-crossed. I'll pay Rodney Gerard for interfering in my affairs—it goes back long before he thought of cutting timber—if I never do anything else in my life, but I don't want a fight with you. I'm crazy about you. Marry me, and I'll cut your logs, sell them, and turn the money over to you. You can have your own bank account."

CHAPTER XVI.—"Oh, c-can I? You don't really mean it? Your romantic attack of the subject thrills me."

CHAPTER XVII.—She must not chuckle like that, and she had better cut out sarcasm, she warned herself. How long since the whistle had blown? She hated the eyes looking down at her. He was coming nearer. Perhaps he was a little mad. Violent-tempered people sometimes ended that way. Should she make a break into the woods. Of course, Calloway would follow, and somehow she would elude him. She couldn't get lost.

CHAPTER XVIII.—"Really, Mr. Lan, you've surprised me so that I'm all jittery."

CHAPTER XIX.—Her mouth made no dent in his glowing regard. "I'm not in the habit of snapping up an offer of a heart and hand. You must allow me time to think." She pushed back the sleeve of her cardigan. "My word—have I dropped my wrist watch? I must go back. David gave it to me and I wouldn't lose it for all the timber in the world. Please help me hunt for it."

CHAPTER XX.—Her suggestion paused question as she had hoped it would.

CHAPTER XXI.—"We're going on. Looking the lay-out over was your idea. Don't be a quitter. I've got you here; you'll stay. I'll go back for the watch. I can find it quicker alone. Wait here."

CHAPTER XXII.—Taking compliance for granted, he stepped back. As he disappeared

CHAPTER XXIII.—Prudence darted along the trail which turned sharply east.

CHAPTER XXIV.—She went on cautiously looking for the blaze on trees. No sign of human occupation. She stopped to listen. Was Calloway following? Did he think her a quitter? She wasn't. She was, to use a favorite legal term of David's, merely "in the exercise of due care."

CHAPTER XXV.—The trees thinned. What was that sound? A brook! She couldn't be far from home if it was the stream which crossed her lower meadow. She climbed a high bank, drew a long, ragged breath of relief. No danger of being lost now. She had her bearings.

CHAPTER XXVI.—"Hullo! Hullo—o—"

CHAPTER XXVII.—Calloway abouted. A thin gray fog of doubt dimmed her satisfaction in the success of her role of Providence. Perhaps her idea hadn't been such a knockout after all. She had better get home. The trail on the other side, a little way down stream, looked familiar. She would wait to that.

CHAPTER XXVIII.—Zowie, the water was icy. She slipped on slimy, concealed rocks, splashed through pebbly shallows, plunged into a good pool.

CHAPTER XXIX.—"I'll bet I gave the front the thrill of their lives," she said aloud; as she pulled herself up by a shrub to the bank. A fresh breeze! She had seen Jim Armstrong slash it. She was on the home trail now! Better rest for a moment.

CHAPTER XXX.—"Hullo—o—"

CHAPTER XXXI.—The call set her nerves vibrating. It didn't frighten her, but she didn't like it. It was too near. The woods seemed to be closing in on her. She hated the feeling. She couldn't be mistaken about this trail. She was sure that she had been on it before. She must get into the open. She was freezing.

CHAPTER XXXII.—She ran as swiftly as clutching bushes and treacherous tree roots permitted. Her cold, wet skirts lashed her knees; her teeth chattered. How long could she keep this pace? Darn! What had she done that had put her in the middle of her forehead, not under her eye.

CHAPTER XXXIII.—What was that? Was she just seeing things, or was it—was it a log cabin? She had been following the freshly blazed trail to her cabin instead of one to the clearing! What difference did it make? There was a chimney. She could get warm.

CHAPTER XXXIV.—She stumbled toward it. Threw herself against the door. It opened! The breaks were with her! She plunged in. Lost her balance. Some one caught her. She stared unbelievably. Closed her eyes. Opened them. She was awake. Every hard-drawn breath had been wasted; every step she had taken every fall had been futile. Calloway's furious, triumphant eyes blazed down at her.

CHAPTER IX

Sudden, uncontrollable panic shook Prudence. In the tense silence she stared up into Calloway's inscrutable face.

"Thought you'd double-cross me, didn't you? There are several trails to this cabin."

At his harsh voice her mind and courage sprang to arms. "My cabin, isn't it? I had no idea it was so—so luxurious."

She forced her eyes to move slowly, as if appraisingly from the antlers over the fireplace to the water bucket on the bench by the door, on to the wood pile near the hearth with an air leaning again at that—as she looked away quickly. Calloway must not suspect that it had seemed like meeting an unexpected friend.

"Hatter-uh-uh—leave here the other day with Jim Armstrong, but we didn't come here."

She was talking against time. Surely Jean must have reached the red brick house by this time. Must have told someone where she was.

"Better sit down," Calloway suggested with sickening snarl. He pushed forward a wooden chair.

"Thank you, I prefer to stand here," Prudence caught him by the great shelf of rock, which served as a mantle, with a grip which turned her nails white.

"Suff yourself. When you heat it, I feared that any path you'd take would lead here. I took a short cut and started the fire. There were red coals; someone's been using the place. Sorry I can't provide a lamp—it's getting dark outside."

If Prudence had distrusted the man back on the trail, she hated him now. Hated his mocking smile to which the flickering light gave a satirical twist. She took a step forward.

"Then we had better start home at once. I'm wet and cold."

In one move he was between her and the door.

"Hold on! Why the rush? You've been fooling me, haven't you? Been trying to make me believe that I was to cut your timber, while all the time you had your tongue in your cheek. What's the game? I was ready to play fair. I've no quarrel with you. I'm a just man—but please—trick me. Now—your pay for it. I'll keep you here till you sign a contract for me to cut for you."

OUR NEIGHBORS

SOUTH LYON—Deputy John Marks of Pontiac was called to South Lyon last Saturday morning to investigate the theft of a typewriter from the school. The intruder left no evidence where or how he entered the building. Mr. Marks stated he either had a key that fit the lock, or else the safety bar on the door had been unlocked. The janitor says he tried all doors Friday night before he left the building and found them locked.

TECUMSEH—With about 20 men on the payroll on Wednesday, and with plans calling for the beginning of another production line today or tomorrow, the Tecumseh Products Company swung into operation here this week. Seven of the company's officials and key men already have moved to Tecumseh from Hillsdale, where the factory formerly was located, and more of the men will arrive to take up their duties here as quickly as additional machinery can be moved from Hillsdale to the local factory. It is believed that altogether about 15 and 16 new families will move here from the neighboring county. The plant manufactures automobile and refrigerator parts, small tools and toys. Its largest automotive customer is the Ford Motor Company and it was on a Ford order that the assembly lines were being started this week.

Kindergarten

Our class had a Halloween party Wednesday afternoon. Cakes, sandwiches, popcorn balls and apples were furnished by the girls and boys. Our paper plates were decorated ourselves. The tables were decorated with huge pumpkins. Halloween dolls were furnished for everyone by Jerome Burg. All of us enjoyed our party very much.

First Grade

We are learning to write our names. Turkey which we made out of corn husks decorate our room. We had a Halloween party Wednesday afternoon school, and had candy, popcorn, and apples. The candy witches we made ourselves.

Second Grade

Monday, October 29, was a very happy time for us. It was the birthday of four of our group: Donna Burman, Helen Loeffler, June Novak and Bobbie Schenk. At the close of school Mrs. Burman appeared with a lovely birthday cake. After playing games in which Melva Myers and Dean Ligg excelled, the cake was cut and everyone was treated to a piece. Then Mrs. Schenk came with little cup cakes all so nicely frosted and there was candy too. Did we have a good time? We hope to celebrate together again next year.

Wednesday, we had another treat. Why? Well, of course it was Halloween. And there was candy, popcorn, apples galore, cookies and two lovely cakes. Then Mrs. Krontz surprised us with little pumpkin-faced cookies. My, it was fun!

Helen Loeffler, Ruth Paul and Flo Ann Longworth are new victims of the chicken pox.

Fourth Grade

Our visitors for this week were: Mrs. W. B. Bietenwischer, William Birch, Jr., Stanley Policht, William Langowski, Shirley Nordman, Mary Alice Nordman and Donald Eder. We are enjoying our new chairs. We have Thanksgiving pictures on our bulletin board. Our Halloween party was Wednesday after school. Candy, popcorn and apples were served.

We have a new self-control chart. For perfect inspection each morning we are allowed to color a red apple. For language we wrote letters. Douglas Miller, Father Kusere, brought a beautiful bouquet of chrysanthemums to school.

Fifth Grade

Everyone declared our Halloween party, which we had Wednesday after school, was the "best ever."

The various committees chosen by the Girls and Boys' Council surely did their work well.

Lillian Allhouse was chairman of the decorating committee. Roberta Lindsey of the entertainment committee and Pearl Alexander of the refreshment committee. Right now we wish to tell the mothers that we think they should have had a part in this party, at least in the refreshments, because of all the work they did in the preparation of them for us. Thank you anyway, mothers, we surely appreciated it.

In arithmetic we are well under way in our fractions which is the big item in the Fifth Grade Arithmetic program this year. Everyone says "We like them already."

Mrs. Wolfe and her little grand daughter visited us on Monday. Lawrence Dietle is back to school and since he cannot play baseball or football anymore this fall he is improving his recess time learning the accomplishments to our new songs which Mrs. Sheehan is teaching at this time.

We appreciate the invitations which we have received from the other grades to come and sing for them.

The new item in which we have been particularly interested this week is concerning transportation—the Union Pacific's new streamline train and the "Gophy" of the Burlington route. These truly mark the dawn of a new era in transportation progress.

Sixth Grade

We elected officers for our grade this week. They are: President, Ralph Dingle; vice president, Grace Riemenschneider; secretary and treasurer, Doris Ashkal.

Within twenty-four hours we elected officers and had a fine Halloween party. Helen Miller, chairman of the food committee, arranged such attractive refreshments that Mr. Blocker wanted to help us eat them. Mrs. Miller furnished a gallon of ice cream. We wish to thank her for it. We also wish to thank the other mothers, Mrs. Chester Miller, Clara, Jimmy, Mrs. Sheehan and Mrs. Yeager were our guests.

We were very sorry we did not hear the Stone Age Lecture in Detroit. We have some New References Books which everyone is welcome to use. Betty Fletcher, Helen Miller and Theodore Combs have started some plants for our room.

N. Y. City's Population

New York City's population was 6,918,326 according to the census of 1930, although yellow fever had driven away many residents who could afford to go.

"Hey! Quit shovin'. Who do you think you are anyway?"
"Oh, cut the comedy! Let's get going. I'm hungry!"

It's the same old story—noon time rush. It seems however, that Chelsea high school isn't the only school where the students turn to blazing fires. There are other schools! But is that any reason why we should have to do likewise? We are being very discourteous to each other and especially to the teachers.

When the bell rings, it seems as if everyone must beat his neighbor to lunch or home; consequently there is a mad rush to lockers and stairs. No one misses his golden opportunity to make all the noise possible. Some one drops a book on your foot. The teachers back up against the bookcases to escape the danger of being crushed to death by this wild horde.

Have you ever seen or heard a herd of buffaloes racing down a mountain slope? If you ever have you will recognize the similarity.

Is it so necessary that we do all the tramping? Are we gaining anything by it? And where does courtesy come in? It's completely forgotten. Think it over.

Practice Begins

Late Wednesday afternoon of October 31 the Debate Club journeyed to Jackson for a practice debate to argue the league question. "Resolved, that the Federal Government should make annual grants to the several states for equalizing educational opportunity in the public elementary and secondary schools." The affirmative team was composed of Estelle Seiter, Helen Himelung and Jean Blocker. Mr. Watermann, Mr. Burgess and Miss Telford formed the negative team for Jackson. There were no judges but general opinion favored the affirmative side. Philip Jones, Jackson coach, is bringing his affirmative team here to debate our negative team. Wednesday evening, November 7, a tentative debate is being planned with Adrian for Monday evening, November 3, in Adrian.

Shindig Was Success

Wal, last Wednesday night round about 7:30 we hustled round right part with the chores, 'cause they was havin' a shindig up at Jackson. We hitched up and drove to town at a light good pace and when we got to the gymnasium we found a rippin' good old time bein' had by all. All the grades were takin' part in the relay races. Pears as if the Seniors and the Seventh Grade won.

Next came the play "Little Nell, the Pet of the Plains." It was a good, old-fashioned, well-drawn, such as you don't see nowadays. It was so sad, I had to get out my old handkerchiefs and use 'em.

Then we had a dance. There was do nutz with some newfangled kind of sugar on 'em, and popcorn balls, too. After we had 'em, we danced. My some of them youngsters are serious spiky! Marie Wink pounded the piano.

First thing we know, it was 10:30, so we hustled up, and drove home.

Dramatics Club

There's a new club in Chelsea High! It is the Dramatic Club, composed of high school students interested in drama in its various phases. Several departments have been included: Scenario, Acting, Stage Managing, Junior Directing, Costume and Set Designing, Publicity Dept. We are sponsored by Miss Powles—have 22 members, and were organized very informally with a chairman and committee heads. Our first work was our production, "Little Nell—Pet of the Plains" at the high school party last Wednesday. The play was written and staged by members of our club.

Down Roosevelt

By boating Roosevelt on Friday the Chelsea Hi team gained its fourth league victory of the season. This winds up the league games for Chelsea. This Friday Chelsea will play at home. Manchester will furnish the opposition.

Religious Liberty Guaranteed
The colony of North Carolina insisted on a clause guaranteeing religious liberty before ratifying the United States Constitution in 1789.

Caesar Says

As this is voting week I may write a book on Democrats. I promise you it's not a dry subject. You know everyone has a chance to become president. I'll tell you—there are fifty cents. Some people say beer makes them fat. Well, it makes me lean against telephone poles and buildings. That reminds me of a story about a man who was drunk and was knocking on a street lamp as some people do on doors. He thought he was knocking on a door. A policeman came along and seeing his position started to kid him by asking, "What are you doing?"

"I've been knocking on this door and no one answers," he replied. "Maybe they are not at home," said the policeman. "You can't fool me, there's a light upstairs," he replied. "Leaving you, I remain the wizard of wit. Adios."

Sponsors Party

Mr. Lyons and his brother "Al" gave a party last Wednesday, October 26. All of the Farm Crops and Animal Husbandry classes were invited. The boys were to come at 6:00 o'clock. Mr. Lyons told the boys that he would give them a dinner if they brought the rabbits. A few jokes were cracked about the dinner, otherwise all went well.

Mr. Lyons brought "Sophie," his dog mascot, which made a few mistakes by trying to bury a bone under a piano. At 6:45 the party was adjourned and the boys all thanked Mr. Lyons and went home.

Caruso, Junior

She sat at a Steinway grand piano, and was evidently as surprised as Johnny, tho' she showed it in a different way. Mentally Johnny took note that first, she was pretty, and second, she was pretty, and third, she was pretty, and that, thought Johnny, ought to make her pretty good-looking. Johnny would have said she was of medium height and build of certain he knew she was a brunette, and she had very nice dark brown eyes to go with her hair. Something else that was easy for Johnny to gather at a first glance, was that she was certainly from a city. She didn't look like the girls that he knew in Meadville. She didn't comb her hair the same as they did—it wasn't in little fuzzy waves that stuck out all over her head, like the girls in Meadville had theirs—Johnny guessed they were called perennials, but he wasn't sure. Her hands as they lay on the piano keyboard, were long and white, and slender, with very brilliant tips. She was slendorous than the girls in Meadville—or maybe it was her clothes. She wore a light dress—Johnny would have said it was a sort of orange color, but girls would have said it was white. It possessed long full sleeves, with white collars and cuffs, was buttoned high around her neck. Johnny thought it looked like a Chinese coat and was pretty nearly right. It was a Mandarin coat of bitersweet satin. Johnny was just beginning to note that it was not a long coat that reached to her ankles, but palamas—when she opened her well-redened mouth and spoke:

"Well, good morning, were you looking for someone?"

Nice as the rest of her, thought Johnny—meaning her voice. She had nice white teeth, too. Then he found himself stammering—
"Why no—not exactly—I was—a why I was just working here outside the window here—I stood up—I a—was just going to move on to some other work—and a—I stood up to see who was—I mean I was just sort of tired of stooping so I stood—and you see the window is sorta low and I'm sorta tall and a well I couldn't help looking in."

"How interesting!" she said, and Johnny could tell by the amusement and mockery in her eyes that she thought it was all pretty funny. She got up from the piano bench and walked slowly over to the window seat, where she planted herself and her bitersweet palamas—while Johnny noticed, with some awe that she was wearing shoes with no toes or heels. Sandals to be exact—and what's more she was wearing the same brilliant color on her toes as were on her fingertips. Johnny was absorbing this when she tilted back her head and looking her arms around her neck, spoke.

"Tell me," she asked, "are you real?"

"Real?" echoed Johnny faintly, looking rather blankly at her. "Why, looking at myself, I always had an idea I was something like that but now that you mention it I certainly wish I were unreal right about now. It might help things a lot. I mean that's a—"

"That wasn't very nice," she interrupted. "Now, really," and again that look of amusement came onto her countenance. "I know lots of young men that would give a lot to be standing right where you are now—talking to me."

"Well, I didn't mean that it was you didn't like, cuz I like talking to you all right," his face reddening. "I mean, well you know—I a-a well, I a-a—" and Johnny once more so terribly confused wondered what she thought of him, but he struggled on, "I like to talk to you all right—only a-a well—" until she, finally said, laughing—

"Oh, come now—I'm not really as bad as all that and please don't be so utterly uneasy. I'm really quite harmless—the maid will tell you so—but goodness knows I've never had this effect before. You know," she said, scrutinizing him carefully, "I like your looks—even if you are red-headed. You have awfully nice brown eyes—they twinkle don't they? You're one of the citizens of this fair city, I take it?"

"Yeah," said Johnny, still very uneasy about it all. "Yeah, I'm a citizen, that is, I'll vote at the next election. That is—a—" Lost again. Poor Johnny!

"Do you talk to your girl-friend like this?" "Do you always talk to her like this?"

"Don't have girl-friends," said Johnny gruffly, deciding not to say anything that wasn't absolutely necessary.

"There ain't no such animal," she said laughing.

He was rushed to the Rowa Memorial hospital by his son, Glenn, where he was given medical attention. Mr. Hoeman was hurt Monday afternoon at about 5 o'clock when his left hand was caught between the belt and pulley of the machine. His arm was broken in several places and his hand severely crushed. He was working on the Bradley farm, north of Waterloo, when the accident occurred, and was brought here by Bill Harbor and Clayton Arts.—Brief Sun.

Question And Answer Dept.

Ques.—May I ask you what nation owns the Antarctic regions? Is that section of the world worth anything?

Ans.—There is much of the Antarctic regions that must remain in a vague state for some years to come. While Admiral Byrd has claimed a narrow sector of Antarctica for the United States, the names and extent of the topographical features are still too indefinite for anything like a permanent record. The general outline of the continent are known, but that is about all. However, there is reason to believe that it is extremely rich in coal deposit, but because of the hazards of transportation this immense coal deposit could not be profitable to any nation.

Ques.—How many planets are there in the solar system? Which one is nearest to the sun and which one is farthest?

Ans.—There are nine planets now known to be revolving around the sun—known as being in the solar system. The planet Pluto, which was discovered in 1930 by the Lowell Observatory in Arizona, is farthest from the sun, the distance being four billion six hundred million miles. It revolves around the sun once every 350 years.

Ques.—I want to ask you on what day of the week was Jan. 10, 1851? This was the date my grandmother was born, and I want to erect a monument stating the day of the week in the inscription. Thank you.

Ans.—Jan. 10, 1851, was on Sunday.

Ques.—How did Nebraska, which was the home state of William Jennings Bryan, vote on prohibition repeal?

Ans.—Nebraska has not as yet voted on the repeal amendment. The date for the convention was set for Dec. 4, 1934. Therefore, we will not know until then.

Ques.—Will you please inform me through your Question column when France first became a republic?

Ans.—The first republic of France was in 1792. It fell when Napoleon was proclaimed emperor in 1804. Again it became a republic in 1848, which again lasted 22 years. Then the second empire under Napoleon III, reigned 18 years, when the present republican form of government went into power.

Ques.—What president of the United States had the greatest number of children, and which was the least number? This is to settle an argument.

Ans.—William Henry Harrison, who was elected president in 1840, had the greatest number of children—six sons and four daughters. There were four presidents who were childless. They were: Washington, Madison, Polk, and Fillmore. Buchanan was a bachelor.

Ques.—In what time did Charles Darwin live? Did he claim that man descended from the monkey?

Ans.—Charles Darwin, whose outstanding works were "The Origin of Species" and "The Descent of Man," was born in 1809 and died in 1882. Darwin did not believe that man descended from the monkey. But he contended that man and monkey had a common ancestor, and that they branched off millions of years ago.

Ques.—What is sodium chloride?

Ans.—Sodium chloride is the chemical name of common salt.

Ques.—In the game of contract bridge how much do the tricks count in the suits and also in no trump?

Ans.—Spades and Hearts are 30 for each trick; Diamonds and Clubs are 20 for each trick, and for No Trump the 1st, 3rd, 5th and 7th (over the book of course) is 30 for each trick, and 40 for each 2nd, 4th and 6th trick. As game is 100, it takes four tricks in Spades and Hearts to go game, five tricks in Diamonds and Clubs, and three tricks in No Trump. For instance, in No Trump the first trick (over the book) is 30, the second is 40, and the third is 30, which makes 100 (game).

Ques.—Are huckleberries and blueberries the same?

Ans.—No. They are entirely different, notwithstanding many people think they are the same. They have a resemblance, but the huckleberry is the more hard of the two and contains 10 seeds. The blueberry has numerous minute seeds.

Ques.—Where did the Indians get their horoes?

Ans.—Horoes were first brought to the western hemisphere by the Spaniards in the seventeenth century and were traded to the Indians for land and other valuable property. The Indians took to horoeback riding like a duck taken to water, and it was not long before all Indian tribes were using the horoes to fight, hunt and travel.

Pennsylvania's Elevations
The greatest elevations in Pennsylvania are in the mountains of the west central part of the state. The highest point is Negro Mountain, in the Alleghenies in Somerset County, which is 3,213 feet. There are many ridges which reach 3,000 feet.

THE SONGS MY MOTHER USED TO SING

Within the shadow of my room,
An old melodeon idly stands,
A relic of our dear old home,
Long years ago in other lands.

Its ivory keys are turning brown,
But round them—tender memories cling.
And with its sweetest tones have fled
Those songs my mother used to sing.

Its frame is falling to decay,
The music from its soul has fled,
And those dear hands that used to play
Like autumn leaves are still and dead.

The quaint pictures on the wall,
The shadows of the setting sun,
All blend, while memories cluster here
Around the sweet songs my mother sung.

I see her dear form sitting there,
Sometimes when fancy takes its wing,
And then, tho' tears may dim my eyes,
I hear songs mother used to sing.

—Arthur Carlton.

Halloween at M. E. Home

It is commonly supposed that when people have passed the half century mark they have pretty well lost interest in the youthful hilarity that clusters about Halloween. Not so, however, at the Old People's Home, for in the week plans were on foot for some mysterious doings there, no one seemed to know exactly what, for various groups were engaged in working out details of a program to surprise others. Wednesday morning the first activities began to make their appearance. During the preceding night busy fingers had prepared weird shapes and figures in black, representing cats, witches, owls, and what-have-you that covered the windows, curtains and walls of the dining room and created an air of expectancy. During the day boxes and packages arrived from Detroit and elsewhere as contributions to the occasion.

The details of the program were announced by Dr. Leeson, the Superintendent, during the supper which was made an occasion of unusual interest. The electric current had been turned off and candles were lighted to furnish a dim old-fashioned atmosphere. Delicious tarts with pumpkin faces were the contribution of Mrs. Lixey, the genial cook. Bon bon favor boxes filled with candy and nuts adorned each place which were a gift of Martha Holmes church in Detroit. Ice cream with yellow pumpkin center decoration was a gift of the Adelphean class of Central church, Detroit. During supper hour Dr. Leeson announced a program for the assembly room where all were requested to gather during the early evening. Two booths, in the meantime had been constructed in the main hall, of corn stalks and each was presided over by a witch in tall hat, black gown and yellow trimming who revealed to guests their past, present and future. Mrs. Gerardin and Mrs. Danson (91 years of age) acted as fortune tellers much to the delight of all.

During the evening the Supt. with the aid of his stereopticon cast old time songs on the screen to sing and told stories of his worst scare. Mrs. Bennett, the Matron, read Orphan Anne and The Goblins Will Get You; and the girls dressed as Ghosts to enliven the company by their wallings and later by pleasing songs and recitations.
