Flagpole and Traffic Lights Are Relocated

Workmen from the Chelsea Electric and Water Department plant have set a pole at the northeast corner of Main and Middle streets and moved the traffic light from the flagpole to that location, preparatory to taking the flagpole down and moving it to a new location.

The traffic light has been placed on top of the pole, and the street light has been placed on an arm on the inside of the post. The signal light at the corner of Main and South streets is being placed on a post at the Chelsea State Bank corner. It is believed that it will be necessary for the village to purchase two more traffic lights to provide a satisfactory signal system, as only one light on a corner will not be seen by traffic from all directions.

Although the council has not definitely decided where the flagpole will be placed, the favorite location which has been under discussion is in front of the town hall.

With removal of the flagpole motorists will find it much easier to make the turns at the intersection, especially those traveling on Main street. It is planned to paint traffic lanes which will permit more convenient turning.

The flagpole has long been considered a traffic hazard in its present location and there has been much discussion concerning its removal, but not until recently was any definite action taken by the council.

Seek Projects for Local Employment

Village President Roy Harris and Peter Boehm, manager of the Chelsea Electric and Water Dept. were in Ann Arbor on Friday evening where they made definite application for work relief projects for the village. The application will go to Lansing and then to Washington for final approval, which it is expected will be received within the next week.

Projects which were applied for include lowering of the water main on Madison street and installing copper service pipe; installation of a new surface sewer on North Main street to Mill Creek, and cleaning out of Mill Creek for a distance of approximately 4000 feet.

It is estimated that these projects if approved, will require the expenditure of about $3500.00 federal funds for labor, with a small cost to the village for materials.

Village authorities have received word from Geo. Champe of Toledo, consulting engineer who is preparing plans for a local disposal plant, that he will have the plans and estimates ready within the next week. There is a possibility that a special session of the council will be called as the regular meeting night is not until August 5, and it is the desire of officials to submit the data to authorities in Washington at an early date with their request for federal aid on the project.

HOFFMAN-MAYER WEDDING

Only members of the immediate families and a few close friends were present Saturday for the marriage of Miss Irene Elizabeth Hoffman, daughter of Fred Hoffman, and Leroy George Mayer, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Mayer, which was solemnized at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's father, Rev. Frederick D. Mumby officiated and the guests were received by Mrs. Addison Webb of Ann Arbor and Mrs. John Frymuth of Chelsea, aunts of the bride.

The rooms were attractively decorated with garden flowers. The bride wore an ensemble of pink crepe, with white hat and white accessories, and carried a shower bouquet of sweet peas in pastel shades. Her bridesmaid, Miss Cecil Sherman of Jackson, wore a princess gown of Copenhagen blue crepe, with white accessories and her flowers were pink sweet peas. The bridegroom was attended by his brother, Norman Mayer.

Following the ceremony, a buffet lunch was served to 20 guests, after which the couple left for a week-end trip to Grand River Lake. Mr. and Mrs. Mayer will be at home to their friends at 353 Washington St.

A pre-nuptial party and miscellaneous shower was given by the groom's mother, Mrs. George Mayer, on Thursday evening at her home on Elm St., which was attended by about 70 relatives. Progressive supper furnished diversion for the evening, with high honors going to Miss Hoffman and consolation to Fred Hoffman. Refreshments were served and the bride-to-be received many pretty gifts.

CHELSEA WINS SUNDAY

Chelsea defeated Sharon on Sunday in a game played at Sharon, with a score of 7-2. The game was hard fought, neither side making any errors. The game was won in the seventh inning when Chelsea went on a batting rally, making five runs out of six hits. This was Chelsea's third consecutive victory, and the boys hope to keep up the good work. Next Sunday Chelsea goes to Manchester.

Mill Lake Camp Being Prepared for 200 Veterans

According to C. D. Platt, Waterloo project manager, it is expected that the Mill Lake CCC campsite will be ready for occupancy within the next week or ten days. Drilling of a well for the camp water supply is now in process and Consumers Power Co. will have a power line to the property completed within the next few days, to supply lighting and necessary power for camp requirements. The electric line is being connected to the line which now serves Sylvan Estates, about 1 1/4 mile west of the Mill Lake camp.

The first contingent of men to arrive at the camp will be the parent company consisting of about 100 war veterans to be transferred from the Black Lake veterans' camp in northern Michigan. The other 100 veterans required to make up the camp will come from Camp Custer. They will be quartered in tents until permanent buildings are constructed. They will aid in construction work and will be employed in general park improvement.

Although the purchase of acreage in the project has been greatly curtailed, it is expected that approximately 3000 acres will be added to the 8800 acres already under option to the federal government for the park and recreational area. However, the purchase of additional land is dependent upon the price and the amount of work relief labor which can be employed in improvement work.

Ten. Czerkowski, who is in charge of the recreational phases of the project development, has asked that organizations interested in the establishment of camps in the park notify him at his headquarters which he will establish in the local administration office. The government will build the camps if they are assured that they will be properly maintained by the organizations.

Development of the project will include children's camps, family camps, picnic and camp grounds, swimming beaches, natural trails, and many other facilities for outdoor recreation. It is estimated the camp will serve 8,000,000 people within a 40-mile radius.

Electric Current Will Be Turned Off Sunday

Late breakfasts will be in order for many Chelsea families on Sunday morning, as announcement is made by the Chelsea Electric & Water Department that all electric current will be turned off from 4:30 to 9:00 o'clock a. m. on July 28.

This action is necessary because of damage done at the local plant during the electrical storm last Friday afternoon. A Consumers Power Co. crew will be here to make repairs to their transformer and meter mechanism in the power house.

While the current is off new arms outside the plant and larger wires leading into the plant will be installed.

BIRDS LEAVE TOWN

The experiment which has been tried by the village to chase starlings from the trees on Congdon street has proved very successful, according to the electricians at the municipal plant. In addition to the electric lights which were placed in the trees a noise-maker was fixed up with the use of a small motor, with chains fastened to the motor shaft which strike on a large tin can. The birds have practically all vanished from the trees on Congdon and so far no complaints have been heard from residents in other parts of the village, so it is believed the birds have taken to the swamps and woodlands outside the village limits.

Paul C. Maroney of Chelsea was elected commander of the Second District American Legion at their quarterly meeting held at the Monroe American Legion Home on Sunday. The district includes Washtenaw, Lapeere, Jackson and Monroe counties. More than one hundred delegates from the four counties attended the meeting.

Bernard Hill of Monroe was named vice commander; Morris Huribut of Adrian, finance officer; and the Rev. Father George Cairns of Monroe, chaplain. The present commander, J. Fred Monahan of Jackson, presided at the Sunday meeting.

The high bid was that of the car Snyder of Ypsilanti, which was for $85.00. Mr. Snyder was notified yesterday that his bid had been accepted and that the house must be removed from the property within 30 days. The ground will then be leveled off and made ready for the playground extension, the purpose for which the property was purchased.

Plan Five Meetings for State Dairymen

Michigan dairymen will want to attend one of the five meetings arranged by the dairy department at Michigan State College and the Michigan Milk Producers Association.

The schedule for the meetings is Kellogg Farm, August, Monday, July 29; State Hospital, Ypsilanti, Tuesday, July 30; Fair Grounds, Inlay City, Wednesday, July 31; McCreey Park, Corunna, Thursday, August 1; and Townsend Park, northeast of Grand Rapids, Friday, August 2.

A. C. Baltzer, extension dairymen, M. S. C., and C. L. Holander, fieldman for the Michigan Milk Producers Association, have made the plans for the meetings. The program for each meeting will start at 10:00 a. m. with a judging contest and stunts. After a basket lunch at noon, the speaking program occupies the time from 1:00 to 5:00.

The speakers will be Jack Nixbet, Howard Dairymen, Ft. Atkinson, Wis., and Thomas Horford, a charter member of the Farmers Union, and now working in Washington, D. C. Mr. Nixbet is well known by Michigan dairymen and is a member of an organization which has given the dairy business assistance for many years. Mr. Horford has been with the Farmers Union since its inception and has a message about things that can be done through cooperative action by farmers and things which have been tried and have failed.

Kellogg Farm maintains a fine herd of Guernseys; the Ypsilanti herd of Holsteins is worthy of close inspection, there will be a large milk processing plant open for inspection at Inlay City, and another milk plant at Owosso will be shown to anyone who cares to visit it.

India's Tigers Desperate
India's large man-eating tigers often seriously disrupt the economic life of great areas. Not infrequently they have caused road building and mail service to be suspended for weeks at a time. A few years ago one beast alone terrorized a district that 18 villages were evacuated and 200 square miles of farm land thrown out of cultivation.—Collier's Weekly.

Question And Answer Dept.

Ques.—If you know so much, will you please tell me how many United States soldiers went through the World War without a scratch?

Ans.—None. There were too many casualties.

Ques.—Who was the goddess of music?

Ans.—The word "music" was taken from "muse" and in Greek mythology Europa was the goddess of music, as she was one of the nine muses, all of whom were daughters of Jupiter.

Ques.—Is it true, as I have been told, that ex-Governor Ritchie of Maryland is a Catholic and an ex-priest?

Ans.—You have been misinformed. He never was a priest, and is not even a Catholic. He is an Episcopalian.

Ques.—Which is the largest university in the United States in the number of enrollment?

Ans.—Columbia University in New York City claims the distinction of having the largest enrollment of any in the country. The enrollment there varies between 20,000 and 30,000 students.

Ques.—Can you tell me if Congressmen receive extra salaries for attending special or extra sessions of Congress?

Ans.—Congressmen are not paid by the session. They are paid by the year, no matter how many special or extra sessions they are called upon to attend.

Ques.—I like your interesting question department, and now I would like to ask you why do we catch cold?

Ans.—Colds are due to germs which grow in the tissues of the nose and throat and swell up. These germs are always lurking about on the moist surface of the mouth and nose, but when we are in good health they cannot get a foothold in the tissues. A severe fatigue, a spell of indigestion, a great chilling of the body or any other thing which lowers our vitality temporarily may give the germ a chance to enter the tissues and get a start. It is then we catch what is commonly known as a "cold".

Ques.—Can you answer in your Question column of your paper if Benjamin Franklin was a bachelor?

Ans.—Benjamin Franklin was a married man. He and his wife are buried in the old cemetery of Christ Episcopal church in Philadelphia.

Ques.—What and where is the tallest building in the world?

Ans.—The Empire State Building in New York City. It is 1,058 feet high, has 85 floors of office space and is 200 feet higher than the Eiffel Tower in Paris, France. It is 12 feet higher than the Chrysler Building, its nearest rival.

Ques.—Please answer this question to settle a dispute: When Abraham Lincoln said in his Gettysburg speech "government of the people, by the people and for the people," was or was not the expression original with him?

Ans.—President Lincoln's famous Gettysburg address closed thus: "That this government of the people, for the people and by the people, shall not perish from the earth." Statistically speaking the phrase was not original with Lincoln, as several statesmen before him had used the phrase in a slightly different form. In Wythe's & Horford's translation of the Bible in A. D. 1384, this passage is found: "This Bible is for the government of the people, by the people and for the people."

Ques.—I see you are good at answering questions. Can you tell me on what day of the week I was born? The date was July 27, 1802.

Ans.—You were born on Sunday, July 27, 1802 fell on that day.

Ques.—Can the president of the United States declare war on another nation—that is, does he have that power?

Ans.—No. He can recommend it in his message to Congress, which alone has that power. However, the president could approve or veto it. If he vetoes it, it would take a two-thirds majority of the Congress to pass it over his head.

Ques.—To settle an argument please state what the nickname of Arkansas is? Also what is the state flower?

Ans.—The nickname of the State of Arkansas is the "Beehive" state. The state flower is the "Apple Blossom".

BROOKLYN—After a number of weeks of investigation and consideration the Brooklyn council on Tuesday evening with all members present and taking part in the final discussion, voted to purchase a new fire engine with standard equipment. The purchase of the new fire engine is the culmination of a lot of previous expense not only with the inadequate village chemical equipment but with any aid to be expected from the county pumper with location at Jackson. It is expected that the council will now continue the good work and locate cisterns about the village in locations where water supply is not now available.—Exponent.

Everyone All Set for Farmers Day

Members of every department of the agricultural division at Michigan State College claim that their particular kinds of experimental work will be most interesting to Farmers Day visitors, Friday, July 26, and it appears that those who wish to see all the new work will have to come early in the morning.

Draft colts which are on feed trials will be exhibited in the barns south of the river, and some of the best of the mature horses will be shown on the rubber tired farm equipment which will be exhibited. The agricultural engineering department is in charge of the plowing and soil fitting contests by farmer-built and by commercial tractors.

The farm crops experimental work includes tests with almost every crop grown in the State. The plots of soy beans will attract attention as they contain varieties being tested for adaptation to human consumption and others for use in manufacturing. Hundreds of potato seedlings are planted in one field in an effort to find a new variety better than any now in use. Hood canary grass and Sudan grass tests will interest many.

Flower and vegetable gardens east of the horticultural building form a part of that department's display for Farmers Day. Orchards and vineyards near the gardens will attract the attention of fruit growers of the State. Members of the staff will be at the gardens and orchards to answer any questions about the work being done.

Beef calves, a wool exhibit, market classes of lambs, and groups of pigs on food trials will be shown by the animal husbandry department at the sheep and the beef barns. A demonstration of the way wool is graded will be given.

A one-man sawmill, a log cabin, and the forest nursery are the high points of the things which the forestry department is preparing to show. The mill will be in operation so visitors can see how framing timbers and other lumber can be cut out of logs from the farm woodlot. The log cabin is the handiwork of students and members of the forestry department and contains many features which could be used by anyone constructing such a camp.

The dairy department is emphasizing some experimental work on pasture crops. Fields where a combination of June grass, ryegrass, alfalfa, and Sudan grass are used to furnish continuous good pasture will be shown. Talks by members of the department will stress the profit in using a home grown dairy ration.

One of the features of the afternoon program will be the dedication of a tablet to Professor L. R. Turt, formerly head of the horticultural department at Michigan State College. Professor Turt is credited with performing the first work with chemical fungicides in the control of orchard pests. He has promised to be present at the ceremony.

A parade of equipment which will show the development of apparatus for using sprays and dusts in the control of insect pests will pass the stands where the afternoon audience will be seated. Rubber-tired farm equipment will follow the spray equipment.

The plowing and ground-fitting contests will start at 8:30 a. m. in a field across from the State Police barracks on South Harrison avenue. The site of the afternoon program will be at a location a little west of the usual one on the campus. There is a better chance to park cars near this place and more shade for the audience.

Director V. B. Gardner will introduce Wheeler McMillen, editor of Country Home, as the afternoon speaker. Mr. McMillen is an authority on industrial uses for farm products. Music will be furnished by two home talent organizations, a Future Farmers Band of 50 pieces and the Manton Corn Cracker, youngsters from the Manton high school.

Appeals for Protection of State Highway Signs

Murray D. Van Wagoner, state highway commissioner, made an appeal this week for the protection of highway signs when informed of widespread vandalism throughout the state.

At the same time, Oscar G. Olmendor, commissioner of the Michigan State Police, announced that he had broadcast instructions to state troopers to launch a vigorous campaign against this type of theft and mutilation. He asked the cooperation of local law-enforcement authorities in the campaign.

Commissioner Van Wagoner has been informed of wholesale thefts and mutilation of state highway signs, particularly reflectorized signs. The commissioner said he believed most of the vandals were the work of young people "who are merely trying to play a prank."

"The loss of one warning sign may mean the difference between life and death on a Michigan highway," the commissioner said. "I appeal to all our people that they do what they can to stop this thievery and vandalism."

Products Taken From Whales
Whale and sperm oil, guano used for fertilizer, baleen, whalebone, bone meal, frozen whale meat for dog food, and a small quantity of ambergris are commercial products derived from the whale.

THE CHELSEA STANDARD, CHELSEA, MICHIGAN

PLYMOUTH—Well drillers engaged to put down a new well at the Ford Newburg plant at 110 feet struck one of the finest flows of water in this entire locality. Over 588 gallons of clear, cold sparkling water can be pumped every 48 seconds from the new well. This assures to the Newburg plant an ideal water system with all the water that can possibly be needed at the place.—Mail.

MILAN—Milan's famous bottle neck that has been holding up traffic for a number of years is going to be eliminated, according to the action taken by the village council last Friday night. The report of the street committee recommending the widening of East Main street from Farmington to County Street was accepted and work will be started within a short time.—Leader.

OUR NEIGHBORS

WAYNE—The Wayne Village Commission at its meeting Tuesday night made arrangements for the purchase of a two-acre tract of land in the Rouge River valley for park purposes. The site lies east of Elizabeth street, just south of the bridge. It was purchased from Charles Handeyside at a price of $150 for the two acres. Work is to be started immediately on the site, according to Charles Goudy, D. P. W. superintendent. He said that it will be ready for use by the public within 20 days. The work is to consist of removing brush, trimming trees, and cutting grass as well as the erection of benches and tables.—County Review.

MANCHESTER—Elevators and hoppers have been removed from the Ford mill at Brooklyn and taken to the Sharon mill, where they have been installed. The Sharon mill is said to be getting ready to grind soy beans from the nearly 1000 acres planted on surrounding land.—Enterprise.

HOWELL—State police have been in Fowlerville during the first part of the week investigating the theft of some $175.00 from the Farmers Co-operative Elevator, early Monday morning. It is believed that the burglars first broke into the tool house at the Pere Marquette railroad, stealing tools which they used to break into the safe at the elevator. An attempt was made on the safe at the Burkhardt elevator, but after knocking off the combination knob, they were unable to open the door.—Republican-Press.

MASON—Clay L. Braden, Ingham dog warden, is finding good hunting as a result of the resolution adopted last week by the board of supervisors. The county solons instructed the warden to shoot on sight all dogs roaming the countryside between sunset and sunrise. The edict was handed down because of the huge increase in claims for sheep killed by dogs. Mr. Braden has shot five roaming dogs since the resolution became effective.—County News.

PINCKNEY—Floyd Weeks, local druggist, was notified by Dr. O'Brien of Detroit, chairman of the state board of sanitarians last Thursday night that he had been appointed steward or business manager of the Michigan State Sanitarium near Howell and he is to assume his duties on September 1, 1935. He will succeed Fred Howlett of Gregory, who was appointed during the term of Gov. Comstock.—Dispatch.

WILL YOU?

Plant a rose in some garden today. Where a briar grew over the wall? Have you pulled up the thistles, transplanted a flower.
In reply to an Angelic call?
Have you planted a Fir tree, or Myrtle? Whose boughs with richest aroma abound?
Have you helped the dear Saviour to answer some prayer,
Whose love searching spirit has found?
O be that disciple of whom it was said, In as much as ye did it for me,
Your cup running over with blessing I'll give;
If you doubt, prove me now, and you'll see—

And there shall be no more prickling briar—
Nor any grieving thorn,
And they shall know that I am the Lord.—Ezekiel 28:24.

—Arthur Carlton.

Make Many Changes In State Hunting Laws

A number of changes will be in effect in Michigan's hunting laws next fall and winter as a result of action taken under the Discretionary Power Act by the State Conservation Commission at its July meeting. The Discretionary Power Act, passed by the legislature of 1925, empowers the commission to shorten or close any open hunting season set by the legislature, when it feels such action is necessary to save the game and preserve hunting.

The commission reduced the 31-day open seasons provisionally set by the legislature on pheasants, sharp-shinned grouse, ruffed grouse, and prairie chickens to 18 days in the open territory of the lower peninsula. The commission had no authority under the Discretionary Power Act to increase the season on ruffed grouse, prairie chickens, and sharp-shinned grouse in the upper peninsula and so the 12-day season of previous years will prevail there.

Bag limits on the species of upland birds above mentioned, however, will be larger this year. The season bag limit on pheasants has been increased from four birds to six birds and the season bag limits on ruffed grouse and on combined prairie chickens and sharp-shinned grouse from 10 to 25. These limits are statewide in effect, except that prairie chickens and sharp-shinned grouse may not be hunted south of the north line of Townline 16 north.

The rabbit and hare season in the southern half of the lower peninsula was shortened by 30 days. South of the north line of Townline 16 the rabbit and hare season will close on January 1. In the rest of Michigan it will close on January 31 as in previous years.

The 45-day season for hunting raccoon in the lower peninsula was left as set by the legislature. This means an increase of 15 days for raccoon hunting. The season will be from Nov. 1 to Dec. 15, inclusive.

No action was taken by the commission on migratory waterfowl, due to the fact that dates of any open season allowed this year will be set by the United States Bureau of Biological Survey. If an open season is declared by the Biological Survey on certain species of migratory waterfowl, it probably will be shorter than that provisionally allowed by the state legislature.

No action was taken on the woodcock season, pending plans of the Bureau of Biological Survey on migratory game birds.

Previous discretionary orders of the State Conservation Commission closing hunting for black and gray squirrels will continue this year. The season on fox squirrels will remain the same as previous years.

The deer and bear hunting seasons were left unchanged with the same open territory as last year. Moose, elk, caribou, woodchucks, spruce hares, killdeer, swans, black-bellied and golden plover, quail, yellowlegs, and sandpipers continue on the protected list the year around.

Opportunity

PERHAPS one may say there is no opportunity for him; another, that opportunity is dependent upon personal influence and helpful environment, both of which he seems to lack. Another has some wonderful opportunity of which he takes advantage, and through which he gains success. Opportunities for service may seem to be opened to some while they are closed to others. Sometimes an individual goes to a country or locality other than his own, seeking opportunity to achieve the goal of his desire, seeking to gain that which to him means happiness and success. Another finds his opportunity at home.

What is opportunity, this thing which aids or hinders the progress of men? In a dictionary the root word is given as "before the harbor," and a harbor is a port through which one enters a country; therefore, a gateway. The Psalmist said (118:19), "Open to me the gates of righteousness: I will go into them, and I will praise the Lord." Is not the gate to righteousness the ability to think rightly? Jesus opened the door of opportunity to his disciples when, as it is written, he "opened . . . their understanding."

He taught them how to think rightly; how to know the truth, to understand and to utilize the power of God. He enabled them to realize their oneness with God, hence their oneness with the nature, qualities, and attributes of perfect Being; the result of which was shown when they took advantage of opportunities to heal the sick and cast out devils.

One may always think rightly, and right thinking leads to attainment. In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 199) Mary Baker Eddy has written these inspiring words: "The devotion of thought to an honest achievement makes the achievement possible. Exceptions only confirm this rule, proving that failure is occasioned by a too feeble faith."

It is one who has not succeeded in some honest endeavor will search his thought, he may find that what he needs in order to gain success is not so much an opportunity as a stronger faith in God, a firmer conviction of His omnipotence, an increased expectation of receiving, which, in turn, inspires greater effort towards attaining the good already provided by the loving Father. The faith which leads to achievement is founded on the truth that God, good, is all-powerful and His goodness available to all.

It may be that one has for years believed he is the victim of circumstances, or is handicapped by his environment, or, perhaps, he is in bondage to distressing conditions because of lack of health, education, or personal influence. Since God is omnipotent, circumstances have no power to victimize the true thinker; and because God is everywhere, environment or place cannot handicap one who understands the omnipresence of good. And as spiritual man is free-born, he can never be held in bondage to any material circumstance or condition. Understanding this, no one need remain behind the closed door of false beliefs; he may begin immediately to know and declare the truth regarding the situation. . . . Holding thought steadfastly to the truth leads to realization of the truth, and realization to achievement, thus proving that the door of opportunity is always open.

The gateway of opportunity is open and will ever remain so; but just as there are regulations to be complied with before a ship may enter a harbor, so there are laws to be obeyed as one passes through the gateway of right thinking to the land of opportunity. Not only should one conform his thinking to laws of right, justice, love, but he must obey them. Whatever the door of opportunity one would enter, the requirements are always the same, namely: that the desire be worthy, the purpose honest, and the effort steadfast.

Wherever one is, he may obey the loving counsel of the Master, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness;" to which he added the promise, "and all these things shall be added unto you" (Matthew 6:33). Mrs. Eddy has written (The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellaneous, p. 993): "Our thoughts begot our lot; not they make us what we are." Conforming one's thoughts to those of God, good, one may go forward to the attainment of genuine success and happiness. Through the gateway of right thinking one may surely reach any high and honest goal.

One who enters the land of right desire through the door of correct thinking, achieves thereby some worthy purpose. Will he, as did the Psalmist, "praise the Lord," for he knows that God is his strength and intelligence, and is therefore giving him the ability to progress.—The Christian Science Monitor.

Cusco, Most Ancient City in Peru
Cusco traces its history back to the eleventh century and despite the fact that the ancient city was ruined by Pizarro in 1535 it retains evidences of its former glory. Its ruins include the famed fortress of Sacsayhuaman and the Temple of the Sun, part of whose site is now occupied by the convent of Santo Domingo. Cusco is the capital of the Peruvian department of Cusco.

"WESTERN" NOVEL STRIKES NEW KEY

Author of "Winter Range" Adds Mystery Touch to Cowboy Yarn.

ALAN LEMAY

Alan LeMay, young master of "Western" fiction, whose latest thriller appears in the columns of this newspaper, brings to this type of American literature a fresh viewpoint and a rollicking, picturesque style.

In "Winter Range" he achieves the unique accomplishment of combining a gun-smoking, hoof-beating tale of a cattle war with a fascinating mystery that rivals the technique of today's outstanding writers of "detective" stories. His gooseflesh suspense keeps the reader hanging on to the very last word.

LeMay, who makes his home in San Diego, Calif., numbers among his successes "Painted Ponies," "One of Us Is a Murderer," "Gunshot Trail," and "Thunder in the Dust." He is known for his contributions to Collier's, Cosmopolitan and the Saturday Evening Post. Now we invite you to seek adventure with him in "Winter Range." It will appear serially in this newspaper.

Does Your Advertising Get An Effective Reception??

Advertising is an effective force that any business can employ.

How effective it is depends on the copy and the number of readers . . . the number of readers depends on the method used by the advertiser.

Does it go through the mail? Is the hand distribution dependable? Will it reach homes? Will it go into the home after delivery?

These are vital questions any advertiser should ask himself before spending hard earned dollars for circulation of any advertisement.

To guarantee 100% circulation of an advertisement in the home it must be placed in a publication that has a public demand . . . a demand to the point that it is paid for.

If that kind of publication fails to arrive on time, there is a hurried call to the newspaper office for a copy to be sent out . . . because the subscriber pays for it and wants it.

Your advertisement placed in The Standard gets into the home. Results? Well, that's up to the ad "copy" . . . its appeal.

When Mother Stays in Bed
by Lawrence Hawthorne

When Mother has a rest bed told
Of her feelings very well,
An' Daddy makes her stay in bed,
It's certainly a hard tale.
What we're supposed to wear 't school,
Or when it's time for us to go,
Or if we got our books an' things,
Our Daddy doesn't seem to know!

An' when it comes 't breakfast—Gee
There doesn't seem to be a bite
For us to eat! But Daddy says
That everything will be all right!
He tells us that he learned to cook
When he was just a little kid,
An' when his mother wasn't well
That's only part of what he did.

But, if he learned, he soon forgot,
Cause all the time he's hard an' black,
An' every egg he puts right in two.
When Daddy says it on his back,
But I feel kind of sorry then,
Because he does the best he can—
And, anyhow, a cookin' job
Don't look so easy for a man.

No, it ain't a bit of fun
When Mother isn't well an' strong,
An' everything we try to do
Gets all mixed-up an' turns out wrong!
It doesn't take her long to see
What should be done, an' very soon
She's got things like they ought to be!

CHAPTER I

Kentucky Jones, independent livestock trader, plunger in cattle, whirled his light roadster into the main street of the little town of Waterman, and picked himself a parking place.

Waterman was very full of people for a Tuesday afternoon. Generally at this time of year the Wolf Bench cowmen, were only to be found scattered among the white-faces that perpetually lost themselves in the overpowering ruggedness of the rimrock, or having winter-weakened cows in the long-pole corrals. Today, though, either side of the street was lined with cars for three blocks; and between the automobiles stood saddled horses, dejected in the wet dampness of the snow.

Wolf Bench was not home range to Kentucky Jones; but six months in the rimrock had acquainted him with most of its people. He stepped out into the snow, a tall, leanly figure, his ordinarily humorous face relaxed in an unaccustomed gravity. It was a rocky face, made irregular by the uneven line of a nose that had been broken; but no one in the rimrock had ever seen it so austere as it was now, as he turned into the restaurant known to all cowboys as the Greasy Spoon.

As he entered, however, his face lightened somewhat. He kissed the girl at the counter absent-mindedly and helped himself to a wedge of pie. "Where's the inquest going to be?" he asked.

"They're having it in the hall over Kerry's store. It started nearly half an hour ago. They—"

"Good Lord!" He hurriedly pushed the pie wedge into the girl's hands. "Save this." He took to the street again at the trot.

Kerry's store itself was appropriately closed, but the hall above was full to overflowing. Here inquest was being held over the body of John Mason.

It was hard to believe that John Mason was dead, his name had so long represented unassailable strength in the Wolf Bench rimrock. That he was head of the Waterman bank had been an index but not the key to his significance. He had been a cowman once; and up to the very end he had thought as a cowman, never losing touch with the farthest corners of the Wolf Bench range. He had been in the saddle on one of his long circuits of the range in the hour that he died. His common understanding of both cows and money had made him more than the kingpin of Wolf Bench finance; almost he was the economic structure itself.

Through the hard times which low beef prices had brought to Wolf Bench, Mason had managed to carry along many a weakened outfit where a nervous banker, or one less a cattleman, would have abandoned all hope. But with Mason dead the bank awaited precariously, teetering on the edge of a smash that might carry down with it half the outfalls of the Bench. To many it seemed that only another Mason could avert disaster—and there was no other.

This was the man whose inquest jammed the little hall above Kerry's store until the overflow filled the stairway and left a milling bunch of the less aggressive in the street.

Some of those at the foot of the stair spoke to Kentucky Jones as he came up. "Inquest got any place?" he asked.

"Been running about twenty minutes," someone told him. "Campo Ragland's been on already. He didn't know anything new."

"Jean Ragland testified yet?"

"Uh-huh. She just said that her and her father was away."

"Thanks," Kentucky moved upward, exchanging monosyllables here and there as he wormed his way toward the room above. Waterman's hall was picked, bulging with people. At a plain table sat Sheriff Floyd Hopper, looking beleaguered; at the end of the table sat the coroner, who was also the sheriff's brother. There was Clive Pierson, the banker who must step into Mason's shoes; his face was an unwholesome gray, and a muscle in the side of his face kept twitching, for in the last three days he had hardly slept. Near him was Bob Elliott, who had gambled the future of his cow outfit upon the banking which Mason would have given him, but which he could no longer expect.

And there was Ted Baylor of the Running M. and the owners of the Lazy Deuce, and the Circle Five, and the J Z—men who could cut a thousand beef steers from their herds at a week's notice, but might easily be set back to their beginnings if Mason's death should cause the bank to close its doors; and many others.

Lee Bishop, the blocky, almost burly foreman of the Bar Hook, was in the witness chair, very red in the face from public speaking and the heat. Bishop was only telling what he knew about a happening which every one had already accepted as an accident, irremediable, over with; but his nervous phrases fell upon the thick silence of complete attention.

"I was going out to the pump house, carrying a couple of pails of hot water from the kitchen," he was saying. "I aimed to thaw out the pump. Then I seen this hump in the snow—thought maybe a calf had drifted in and fell down. I went over and looked, and it was Old Ironsides—I mean, John Mason."

"How long did you think he had been dead?"

"He wasn't lying there around one o'clock, when we left the home ranch. And there wasn't any snow under him. It begun snowing around two o'clock, out there."

"Then you figure Mason had this accident between one and two o'clock?"

"That ain't what I said. I only said there wasn't no snow under him."

Sheriff Floyd Hopper exhibited annoyance. "Let's not quibble over words; what we want is to get down, here."

"Well," Lee Bishop went on with an unnecessary air of submission, "I turned him over, and I saw that he'd been shot. His gun was in his hand—that long-barreled .45 he always carried to take a pop at a coyote with, if he should see a coyote."

"Is this the gun?" said the sheriff's brother, turning toward a cluttered window ledge at one side. A deputy handed the coroner the required weapon. Bishop identified it. "Well," he went on, "I sent up a long yell but nobody answered; and I took out and ran for the house."

Kentucky Jones had been searching all the room for a sight of Jean Ragland, and now he was surprised to discover her so near the focus of interest that he had missed her by searching too far away. She was sitting beside her father, the big stoop-shouldered owner of the Bar Hook. The two sat almost under the window ledge where a deputy kept his eye upon a muddled collection of exhibits.

He gazed instantly how pale she seemed, so that her hair looked darker than usual against her face. Had she been a stranger his glance might have passed her unnoticed, so little of her usual vividness was apparent. Then a deputy shifted his position, blocking her profile from Kentucky's view.

The sheriff was bombarding Lee Bishop with questions of little point. "Is that cut-off trail between the 88 and the Bar Hook often used?"

"A mighty little." It was the first emphatic Bishop had used.

Kentucky's eyes sought Jean Ragland again. Suddenly he perceived that she had leaned back so that she could peer between the standing deputies and was looking directly at him. He smiled at her but her face did not change.

Then suddenly he was aware that she had signaled to him, secretly beckoned him to draw nearer. It had been the faintest narrowing of an eye, the slightest inclination of her head; yet he knew absolutely, as she again averted her face, that a signal had been conveyed.

Deeply puzzled, he began to work his way along the side of the hall. The sheriff, he noticed, was perceptibly pushing ahead with his questions, evidently very conscious of his far-gathered audience. The sheriff's brother, the coroner, was nudging him, but he was barging ahead, as Kentucky Jones presently reached a point not more than three yards from Jean Ragland, who was still separated from her by the thicker press of men which had been forced back from around the coroner's table; but here he stuck.

It was trying to catch Jean Ragland's eye as a sound of sniffling and contention broke forth in the back of the room. The sheriff glared, fidgeted and stopped. A tall deputy left Jean Ragland's side to go pushing back through the crowd.

Watching the disturbance at the back, Kentucky did not see that Jean Ragland had left her chair until she stumbled, almost against him. Her handkerchief was at her mouth, and she seemed even paler than before, as if turned suddenly faint by the stifling of the close air. Campo Ragland, her father, sprang up and was beside her in a stride, supporting her in his arms. For a moment the press of the crowd was too much and they cou' not get through. Her shoulder pressed hard against Kentucky, but although he spoke to her by name she did not appear to hear.

Then unexpectedly, in the smother of the crowd, her fingers closed upon his in a quick, hard grip. She had pressed a small heavy object into his hand.

Turning it over in the pocket of his coat, Kentucky Jones discovered with a queer slow stir of the blood—that the thing she had left in his hand could be nothing else but a used bullet. He knew at once that this was the slug which had killed a man.

Campo Ragland said through his teeth, "Will you let us out, or not?" and the standing gentlemen flattened against the wall to let Campo and his daughter by. Kentucky Jones just right of Jean as the crowd closed behind them.

But for Kentucky Jones the atmosphere of that packed room had changed. He was no longer simply a gentleman interested in a death which threatened to shift the economics of a range. The thing that had pulled him over four hundred miles of snow-clogged ruts in the last eighteen hours suddenly took on a new aspect, as acutely personal and definitely sinister as if he had himself been accused of murdering the man who was dead.

And now the inevitable sequel broke. A deputy who had stood by the cluttered ledge where the exhibits were hung out sharply, interrupting the sheriff.

"Wait a minute! Hold everything! There's something missing here!"

In the momentary silence a lower voice said: "Maybe it's fell on the floor."

"What is it?" the coroner demanded. "What's gone?"

"This here bullet's gone, that we had on the window sill with the other things."

"Bullet? What bullet? You mean—"

"The slug that killed Mason!"

There was a sudden moment of struck silence all over the crowded room. This was followed immediately by a rising buzz, as almost every man of all the great number in that room turned to speak low-toned to his neighbor.

Watching the stir about the coroner's table, Kentucky saw that Bob Elliott, owner of the 88, was looking at him curiously. Kentucky grinned faintly at Elliott as he worked a hole in the seam of his pocket with a thumb-nail, and pressed the bullet through, so that it fell deep into the lining of his coat.

Over the buzz of confusion he heard the coroner almost shouting, "You sure it was there?"

"It's been here all the time, but just now I reached back, and—"

"The sheriff jumped to his feet, and his chair clattered over backward. His voice rose in an angry yell. "Look that door!" he ordered. "By God, I'm not going to have it!"

A deputy silence fell at the impact of his voice. "Some of you fellows are no better than children. I suppose you'd steal the shirt off your own back if you figured it was a souvenir. I—"

"Wait a minute, Floyd!" The coroner caught the sheriff's arm, and pulled him down to whisper in his ear; and there followed an inaudible but apparently a heated discussion. It seemed to take effect upon the sheriff's plans, for he sat down abruptly, his square face flushed with exasperation. "All right, let it go for now. But somebody hasn't heard the last of this!"

Go ahead and give 'em cause of death."

Kentucky Jones drew a deep breath. He had come up into this crowded room to attend a routine hearing, calculated to condemn the death of a man who, however important to these people, had only died foolishly, accidentally, by his own gun. But now the inquest as such had lost all meaning, turning into a sham, an apparently unconscious fraud.

A sudden incomprehensible anger overshadowed reason as he wondered if Campo Ragland knew that the bullet which killed Mason was not what it seemed—and had prompted his daughter to get it out of the sheriff's possession. If her theft of this scrap of evidence was not in behalf of her father, then who? If Jean Ragland was being used by her father or anyone else as a cat's-paw in a dangerous situation, he meant to find it out. Once more he worked his way sideways through the crowd along the side of the room, this time toward the exit.

Campo Ragland had taken his daughter to Waterman's rambling one-story hotel, and had returned to the street again by the time Kentucky Jones, after a fifteen-minute search through Waterman, again located the boss of the Bar Hook.

Kentucky stroiled up, greeting Ragland with the slow singularly infectious grin that served him as a pass port through hard times and slack wherever he went. Campo Ragland, grim as was his mood, half smiled to return as they shook hands.

"Come, the people didn't hardly realize how important Mason was around here, until now he's dead," Kentucky began. "Of course, he naturally had enemies."

"You can't run a bank right," said Ragland lifelessly, "without raising up an enemy here and there." "The boss of the Bar Hook was not quite as tall as Kentucky Jones, but his lean, stooped shoulders were very broad. His eyes were blue, like his daughter's. And though the general aspect of his face was benign it was a face which could set grimly and stubbornly, turning into a fighting face."

"Curious," said Kentucky, Jones, watching Ragland closely. "That everybody was so ready to accept that he went to work and shot himself—accidentally."

"What else could it have been but accidentally?" Ragland said impatiently. "Nothing, I guess," said Kentucky; "but on pretty near any other range somebody would most likely have tried to prove there was a shenanigan."

For a moment Campo Ragland's eyes turned upon Kentucky. Watching him intently, Kentucky Jones could not, however, see that the man's face changed. "I suppose so," said Ragland, without expression; and he half turned, as if he would walk on.

Kentucky Jones wavered an instant. His cautious prodding had failed; but his failure was more challenging than a revealing answer. He plunged.

"Mr. Ragland," he said, "can you use a man?"

Ragland's eyes quickened. "I don't want no more of these fiver tourists we get for cow hands today. But if you got in mind some good steady—"

"I was speaking for myself," said Kentucky Jones.

"Come off! You're a cattle trader," Times are bad, Mr. Ragland; the more so with Mason dead. I was a brush popper before I was a trader, and I'm a good one yet. And I'd sure like to fill in at it for a while. Plain cow wallowing is all I want."

"Well," said Ragland, doubtfully, "if you want a plain riding job for the rest of the winter, at fifty-five and found I sure can't refuse you; though I must say, it comes as a kind of surprise."

"I'm on, then," said Kentucky.

"You'll have to take a horse, the way the roads is. I'll leave an order at the livery barn you're to have a Bar Hook horse."

CHAPTER II

The inquest was over as Kentucky Jones returned to Kerry's store. He joined one of the big groups which talked it over on the sidewalk.

"Verdict come out same as expected?"

"Oh, sure! Accidental discharge of his own weapon." The jury didn't hold out more than a minute and a half. Say! The sheriff wants to see you."

"Where is he?"

"He went along about ten minutes ago."

"All right."

Kentucky Jones moved off down the street in unhurried long strides. As he reached the sheriff's little frame office Floyd Hopper was in the act of leaving, having just ejected, with diplomacy, more worried gentlemen than the little structure could comfortably hold. For Kentucky Jones, however, he reopened his door.

"Come in here, Jones," Hopper jerked a ragged blind downward over the door's glass pane and flung himself into a chair.

"See you got your inquest over?"

The sheriff puffed out his cheeks and blew an exhausted blast. "Damnation! Can you beat this? In the whole Wolf Bench country, here was just one man that couldn't be done without—one man that as good as held the rimrock cattle in the hollow of his hand—and a rabbit jumps, and blooey! He's gone. Great guns, Kentucky. Any other man, any other time—"

Kentucky Jones waited, studying him. There is a certain type of man who seems fated to pursue public office, somehow perversely unfitted for anything else. Hopper was such a man. His straight-clipped gray mustache, his flat loose-skinned jowls and full-drooped eyes somehow unmistakably indicated the public office holder—not incompetent, but definitely limited.

"Any other man could have been spared better," he raved. "Even John could have been spared any other time. Bix with Wolf Bench cattle on the ragged edge of bankruptcy, and the longest beef prices since—"

"Does Clive Pierson—he steps into Mason's shoes, doesn't he?—does he know anything about cattle?"

Twilight League News

The Trojans and Congregationals played a five inning tie game on Thursday evening. Darkness was the factor which caused the game to be concluded so soon. The score was 6 to 6.

Lixey pitched for the Trojans and allowed four singles and two doubles, and walked four men. He fanned seven Congregationals. A. Fahrner hurled for the Congregationals, allowed two singles and one double, walked two, and hit two Trojans with pitched balls. He fanned 11 men—a remarkable showing in a five-inning game.

The Congregationals rather carried the game, putting the Trojans on defense, except in the third inning. The Congregationals scored once in the first and twice in the second, off six hits and a walk. The Trojans responded in their half of the second by making three runs on three walks and an error, tying the score.

The Trojans forged ahead when they scored twice in the third inning when a hit followed an error, and both men scored on passed balls. Then the Congregationals rallied to the tune of three runs in the fifth, giving them a point margin which the Trojans evened up when Dvorak doubled, and scored on a wild pitch.

Friday night's postponed game was again postponed on account of rain.

Mayer Electric defeated the Sea Scouts, 5 to 1, in a seven-inning game played on Monday evening.

Both line-ups were somewhat heterogeneous, with Hoffman hurling for the Electric, and Fahrner (the itinerant pitcher) throwing for the Scouts.

The Scouts tallied their run in the first inning when Fahrner beat out an infield hit, and advanced on Hart's single. He scored when E. Miller's fly to left field was missed. They maintained this scant lead until the third frame when the Electric tied the score on two hits, by Hulce and Crocker respectively.

The Scouts' one run in the first was their swan song for they failed to score again, while the Electric marked up two runs on a walk, an error and a hit in the fifth, and two more in the seventh (just for safety's sake) on a walk, a hit and an error.

On a muddy and insecure field the Trojans added a 2 to 1 victory over Spaulding Chevrolet on Tuesday evening. It was a seven inning game, and flaunts as its bid for fame Fowler's unassisted double play the first one of the season.

The run which won the game for the Trojans was indeed spectacular. Hap Wallace was trapped between third and home with the entire Chevy infield surrounding him—three men on each side of him, closing in and eyeing him like tigers. After seeing a very cleverly devised time, Hap finally burst for home when the ball was thrown to third, and just skinned past the three players covering home territory as each in turn received the ball. Lyons scored later in this, the second inning, to give the Trojans their second run, when he came in after the catch of Allen's fly ball to center field.

Lixey, the winning pitcher, was in fine form. He allowed only three men to reach first base—two of them on hits—and fanned 12 men.

Schedule

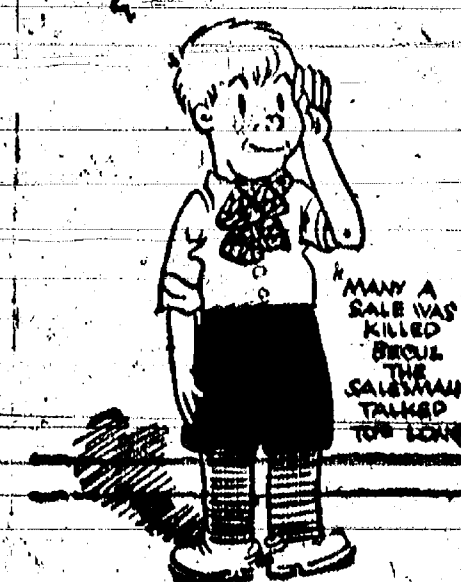

Thursday, July 25—St. Pauls vs. Congregationals.
Friday, July 26—Mayer Electric vs. Spaulding Chevrolet (postponed game).
Monday, July 29—Sea Scouts vs. Trojans.
Tuesday, July 30—St. Pauls vs. Spaulding Chevrolet.
Thursday, August 1—Mayer Electric vs. Congregationals.

SPEAKS ON PROBATION

J. Myrie Rowland, Probation Supervisor of the State Welfare Department, addressed the local Kiwanis club at their Monday evening meeting, telling of his work in the juvenile courts of Detroit, where he was employed for several years prior to the time he received employment with the state department, and discussing the work in which he is now engaged. He gave figures showing the saving to the state where counties maintain full time probation officers, which eliminates the sending of many offenders to prison, at least until they are given a chance to go straight.

HOLY NAME SOCIETY ELECTS

At the best attended meeting ever held by the St. Mary branch of the Holy Name Society, held recently at St. Mary hall, John O'Hara was elected president, Robert Howe, vice president, M. P. Swickard, treasurer, John Damouche, secretary, Martin McKernan and Joseph Honeck, marshals. The local branch during June and July had the largest attendance it had enjoyed since its inauguration and the new officers are planning to hold the attendance at this high mark through interesting activities. The next meeting will be held August 11.

Caribou Ranks Next to Seal With the Eskimos

Next to the seal, the caribou is the most useful of animals to the Eskimo. It is only the coast natives who can hunt the seal, and all Eskimos are forbidden by their taboos to have seal meat and deer meat in their igloos at the same time.

"Taboos are rules which the Eskimo believes he must observe; if he did not, the spirits would be very angry with him and spoil his hunting, so if he wants to get any food for himself and his family, he thinks he must be very careful not to break any of these rules. This makes his hard life very much harder.

Eskimos who live away from the sea, therefore depend entirely on the caribou for food and clothing. The caribou is different from all other members of the deer tribe and is found only in the Barrens and the extreme North. They live on the moss and tundra which grows there and never come as far south as the bush country where this moss does not grow.

Thimbles, Ancient Device, Long Known to Old World
Thimbles did not come into general use in England until the latter part of the seventeenth century. The little device was known to the Egyptians and Romans, for articles of a similar pattern have been found among Egyptian ruins, and the Romans, according to Seneca, performed the "and the little pea" trick with the brass or bronze ancestor of the modern thimble.

The first machine-made thimbles were turned out in Holland in 1688, by John Lulling, a Dutch inventor to whom the patent was granted. Silver and gold were the materials first employed and only well-to-do could afford to buy them. Later when they were made of cheaper metal, practically everybody used them. The name which the Dutch first gave them, translated literally, meant "finger-hood." The English, however, soon supplied their own name of "thimble," derived from the bell-like shape of the little article and from the early practice of wearing it on the thumb to ward off the point of the needle.

About 250 years ago the quaint custom sprang up of inscribing postals and forget-the-note inside the thimbles and it is said that in those days the thimble served the same tender purpose as the engagement ring of today. Leather thimbles were at one time introduced, but soon proved themselves unsatisfactory.

"Eureka," Exclamation of Delight, Authority Says
The story concerning an ancient philosopher and the exclamation, "Eureka," follows:

"Eureka" (Gr., more correctly, "Heureka") I have found it! An exclamation of delight at having made a discovery, originally that of Archimedes, the Syracuse philosopher, when he discovered how to test the purity of Hiero's crown. The tale is that Hiero delivered a certain weight of gold to a smith to be made into a votive crown, but suspecting that the gold had been alloyed with an inferior metal, asked Archimedes to test it. The philosopher did not know how to proceed, but, in stepping into his bath, which was quite full, observed that some of the water ran over. It immediately struck him that a body must remove its own bulk of water when it is immersed; silver is lighter than gold, therefore a poundweight of silver will be more bulky than a poundweight of gold, and would consequently remove more water. In this way he found that the crown was deficient in gold; and Vitruvius says: "When the idea flashed across his mind, the philosopher jumped out of the bath, exclaiming: 'Heureka! Heureka!' and without waiting to dress himself, ran home to try the experiment."

Grizzly Bears Store Up Food
The feeding habits of black and grizzly bears differ notably in one respect. The grizzly often stores food or bites a carcass for future use, a thing that the black bear never does.

Sun Spots Vary
Sun spots vary widely in size from small and very inconspicuous ones to multiple spots that string out to a length of 100,000 miles, according to a writer in the New York Herald Tribune. The average sun spot during maximum activity is about the size of a spot that would be produced if the earth, 8,000 miles in diameter, were used as a projectile and shot into the sun. While the sun spots look black on a photograph of the sun and when viewed directly, they are actually quite brilliant, and only appear black because they are so much cooler than the surrounding areas of the sun's atmosphere. Measurements made at Mount Wilson give the approximate temperature of the spots as 5,000 degrees absolute, the surrounding penumbra 5,400 degrees and the normal photosphere 6,700 degrees.

LOCAL DEALER IS HONORED BY TIRE COMPANY PLAU

In recognition of their many years of friendly relations, a handsome plaque has just been presented to Palmer Motor Sales' local Chrysler dealers, by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. Accompanying the plaque was a personal letter from P. W. Litchford, president of Goodyear, to L. G. Palmer, expressing the manufacturer's concern's appreciation of his outstanding loyalty as a Goodyear dealer and the hope the friendly relations may continue indefinitely.

The plaque, which occupies a prominent spot in Mr. Palmer's place of business, is strikingly done in brass with the name of the Palmer Motor Sales and of Goodyear appearing in raised letters on the lower portion.
