Project Offices Are Opened In Chelsea

Because of unavoidable delay in receiving official approval for the location of their offices in Chelsea, the administration headquarters for the Waterloo project were not opened here until Wednesday of this week. Furniture was placed in the rooms above the Loeffler meat market about four weeks ago, but final approval for transfer of the office from Ann Arbor to Chelsea did not come until Tuesday of this week.

The office personnel now located here consists of C. D. Platt, project manager, John Keusch, project attorney, as well as draftsmen, architect, engineers, foreman, landscape architect, rehabilitation supervisor, and one stenographer. There are ten people in the office.

According to Mr. Platt, some publicity during the past week pertaining to condemnation suits in order to acquire some tracts of land in Jackson county were misleading. He states that these are friendly suits merely to clear title on property which has been optioned to park authorities, and that the condemnation suits have been filed with the consent of owners of the land.

John Keusch, project attorney, stated that the government uses this means to quiet title, to clear defects in the records of ownership, and thus saves the vendors money. In this way the expense of clearing the titles is borne by the government, and is the only way in which the government can legally assume the cost.

Mr. Keusch made it plain that there had not been, and so far as he knows there will not be any attempt by the government to condemn land for projects, such as proposed game refuge at the Waterloo park, unless the owner of the property is agreeable that it should be done. Such action, he pointed out, is taken only in cases where the owner has already given an option to the government to buy.

Land for the project will be purchased, not confiscated. Slum clearance projects ran into difficulties when the right of eminent domain was upheld, and the land utilization division is attempting to clear clear of that pitfall.

Reclamation of poor lands is the task of the resettlement administration. The reclamation duties are carried on largely under the banner of the land utilization division, under which the Waterloo project is being developed.

Sportsmen May Train Dogs for Longer Period

Michigan sportsmen with hunting dogs were given a "break" in the game bill passed by the 1935 legislature and now in effect.

The law was amended so as to allow hunters to train their dogs on game for 60 days previous to the opening of the respective hunting seasons on game. It also permits them to train their dogs throughout the winter and up to and including the 15th of March of the following year.

This means that sportsmen in the upper peninsula of Michigan can begin to train their dogs on rabbits, squirrels, ruffed grouse, prairie chickens and sharp-shinned hawks August 2, while sportsmen in the lower peninsula must wait until August 16 to train their dogs on the respective species of game mentioned.

Dogs may be trained only between the hours of sunrise and sunset, and the law forbids any hunter to possess firearms while training a dog.

Field dog trials may be held between the hours of sunrise and sunset at any time and under such rules and regulations as the Director of the Department of Conservation may prescribe.

Under the old law the hunter could not begin until 30 days previous to the open hunting season on the respective species of game and field dog trials could not be held except for a 15-day period set by the Director of Conservation previous to the 15th of March of each year.

MUST VACCINATE DOGS

According to the provisions of a state quarantine, all dog owners must have their dogs immunized against rabies if the animals are allowed to run at large. County dog wardens warn that the quarantine law will be strictly enforced and that all dogs running loose without vaccination tags will be picked up. Violations of the quarantine by dog owners will subject them to a fine of not less than $10 and not more than $500, or by imprisonment in county jail of not more than six months, or both. There has been no report of rabies in the county and it is the hope of officials to avoid such an epidemic. The quarantine expires on September 14.

SCHOOL OPENS SEPT. 3

Chelsea public school will open on September 3. Teachers' meeting will be held in the morning and enrollment and assignments will be the order of the day in the afternoon. H. L. Blocker, Supt.

American Legion Plans Homecoming Here Aug. 15-16-17

Plans are being formulated by the American Legion for the holding of a Harvest Festival Street Fair and Homecoming in Chelsea, with the tentative dates set for August 15, 16 and 17. Although some difficulty is being experienced in securing necessary concessions and rides for these dates, it is believed by members of the Legion that they will have their program ready for these dates. It is planned to open the event on Thursday evening, which will provide three nights and two full days of entertainment.

Ed. Miller, commander of the local American Legion post, has named Clarence O. Bahnmiller, commander-elect, as general chairman of the affair, and Mr. Bahnmiller will name committees to arrange for the various events on the program. The Legion will hold a meeting tonight, when definite plans will be discussed and formulated.

Plans call for a merry-go-round, ferris wheel and other rides, as well as game concessions, musical programs, free acts, speaking, sports events, etc. An effort will be made to have an exhibit of products from the farms and gardens of the community, with suitable prizes for the winners.

Merchants of the village will give financial aid to the Legion in the enterprise and it is hoped that the event will prove to be one of pleasure and benefit to the community.

Complete details will be ready for publication next week, and if the program can be arranged for August 15, 16 and 17, advertising material will be out by the last of this week.

P. O. Will Close At Noon On Saturdays

Orders have come from the Post office Department in Washington that the Chelsea postoffice will close at 12 o'clock noon on Saturdays. One clerk will remain on duty to receive and dispatch all first-class mail, including special delivery letters, as usual, but no window service will be available.

Also, leaving of the lobby open after closing hours has proven to be such a nuisance that hereafter the lobby will be closed at the time of closing the postoffice.

The above changes will not be put in effect until new quarters are occupied.

H. D. Witherell, Postmaster.

TO CONSTRUCT SEPARATION

In an advertisement which appears on another page of this issue, the state highway department is asking for bids on the grade separation which will be constructed on the new US-12 super highway where it intersects the Michigan Central Railroad, 3-4 miles southwest of Chelsea, near the Oscar Kalmbach farm.

All bids for the project must be in the state highway commissioner's office before 10 o'clock a. m. on August 14.

This project will be constructed under provisions of the Emergency Relief Administration, which specifies the minimum wage scale for all men employed.

Wolf officiating. Burial will be in Oak Grove cemetery. For information, friends may call Plankell Funeral Home.

Flagpole Set In New Location On Friday

Chelsea's Main street at the corner of Middle has quite a barren appearance since removal of the flagpole last Thursday. While the appearance is considerably changed, motorists find that making turns at the intersection is much easier.

On Friday the flagpole was set at the southwest corner of the Main and Middle street intersection just north of the building being remodeled for occupancy by the postoffice. The cobblestone and concrete water trough which was near the new location of the flagpole, has been removed and the curb at that point repaired.

Village authorities have a force of men at work repairing sidewalks about town, one of the major repair jobs being in front of Masonic Temple on West Middle street. It is planned to do as much necessary repair work as possible during the summer months.

The Michigan Central Railroad Co. has constructed a sidewalk across their property at the east side of the McKinley street crossing, this work being done at no cost to the village, with the exception of a small amount of concrete work leading to the railroad property.

Many Fishing Licenses Are Obtained Illegally

A new "racket" in connection with the purchase of non-resident fishing licenses has been brought to the attention of the Department of Conservation.

A number of instances in which non-resident sportsmen have obtained "wife" licenses at the reduced fee of 50 cents for their woman companions has been reported. This is legal if the woman companion is the wife of the applicant, but illegal if she is not.

The racket constitutes a violation of the law and conservation officers have been instructed by the Department of Conservation to investigate carefully the fishing credentials of suspected non-resident anglers.

The non-resident annual fishing licenses for men or women cost $2, except that the wife of a non-resident angler over 18 years of age may obtain a similar license for 50 cents. Non-resident special 10-day licenses for men cost $1 and similar licenses may be obtained for the wives of applicants for 50 cents.

Old-Timers Invited To Picnic On August 10

All persons in Washtenaw county who are 75 years of age or older are invited to attend the annual picnic of the Three-Quarters Century club, to be held this year on Saturday, August 10, at Newport Bathing Beach. This is about four miles northwest of Dexter.

Sponsors of the picnic are hopeful that a large delegation from Chelsea will attend. Those without means of transportation will be taken to the picnic and home again if they will notify Miss Lillie Wackenhut.

The picnic will start about 11:00 o'clock, with a basket lunch, each group providing its own meal. Coffee, sugar and cream will be furnished free. Dinner will be followed by a short musical and speaking program.

Persons attending may expect to leave the grounds between 3 and 4 o'clock. Further details may be learned by writing the Washtenaw Post-Tribune at Ann Arbor, sponsors of the event.

GRANTS INJUNCTION

On Monday of this week District Judge Edward J. Molne granted a preliminary injunction in Federal Court, Detroit, restraining the collector of internal revenue from levying and collecting processing taxes on 34 petitioning millers, packers, tobaccoists, cotton processors and other plaintiffs. This means that all processing taxes collected by these plaintiffs will be deposited with the court until the constitutionality of the New Deal's AAA Act is passed upon by the Supreme Court of the United States.

HONORED ON BIRTHDAY

Mrs. James J. Munro was pleasantly surprised Sunday evening when a company of friends gathered at her home on Chandler St. in celebration of her birthday anniversary. At 7 o'clock a pot luck dinner was served, with covers for 20, and games furnished the diversion for an enjoyable evening, high honors going to Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Kern, Miss Ruth Russell and George Krumm receiving the congratulations. Mrs. Munro was presented with a gift.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC

A picnic, sponsored by the teachers of Zion Sunday school, Rogers Corners, will be held Sunday, August 4, at Herring's grove, Pleasant Lake, Freedom. A picnic dinner will be served at noon, and there will be games for the children.

Thousands Enjoyed Program at College

Five thousand farm folks gathered at Michigan State College for their annual inspection of the institution on Farmers Day, to see the contest between tractors built by farmers, and to hear Wheeler McMillen, editor, Country Home.

Fine weather prevented many farmers from bringing equipment in for the contests, as the day furnished too good an opportunity to work in the harvest fields. The winners for building rubber-tired farm wagons were Clarence Huhn, first, East Lansing, and Alfred Huhn, second, Eagle. The men are brothers.

The homemade tractors drew a great deal of attention and were a remarkable exhibition of the ingenuity of farmers in overcoming difficulties. Tractor, truck, and auto parts were assembled into workable units. The winners were G. D. Bothwell, first, Eaton Rapids; W. R. Quantrell, second, Charlotte; James W. Rowley, third, Comstock Park; Charles A. Burley, fourth, Flint, and Edward T. Miller, fifth, Lansing.

A bronze plaque commemorating the pioneer work of Prof. L. R. Taft on the control of insects and of plant diseases with fungicides was unveiled. Prof. Taft, still actively engaged in the management of his orchards, spoke briefly of this work done nearly 50 years ago.

Wheeler McMillen gave a hopeful view of the possibility of a future alliance of industry and agriculture in which crops raised by farmers would be used much more extensively than now in manufactured articles. Mr. McMillen stated that this use of farm goods is not new but such uses can be expanded tremendously through research work.

He said, "Let's grow on the farms of the United States every raw material we can that our factories require. Let's grow on these farms every single product needed by American people that our soils will produce."

"The dollars we send abroad are helpful—to foreign countries. The dollars we keep at home will circulate many times, creating purchasing power on the farm, employment for labor, and business for everybody. Let's insist that science be permitted to exert her extraordinary powers to release agriculture for the full employment of all energies, human and natural, that are latent upon the land."

"We shall then have prosperity for agriculture; give us prosperity for the millions who live on the soil, and no one needs to worry about prosperity for all the people of our country."

New Grain Contains Too Much Moisture

Excessive rains and high humidity during the present harvest season are apt to cause heavy losses to Michigan grain raisers unless great care is taken in handling the grain before threshing, according to the farm crops department at Michigan State College.

The losses will be in two classes, reduced prices due to excessive moisture content in threshed grain or losses of grain from sprouting in shocks in the field. A bushel of wheat testing 58 pounds must contain not over 14 per cent moisture to grade as No. 2. Discounts from prevailing prices of as much as seven cents a bushel have been made on wheat containing 17 per cent moisture.

Grain which contains too much moisture to bring top prices if threshed now can be stacked or placed in the barn and allowed to cure before it is threshed. Sweating in the stack or mow will bring the moisture content of the grain down to permissible limits, and the grain can be threshed during dry weather later.

The only treatment possible for grain already threshed is to use plenty of bin space so that the grain is not piled deeply, and to ventilate it by shoveling from one bin to another. One mill has already reported the offering of grain for sale which contained so much moisture that it could not be handled in the mill.

Formation of Lakes
The most common cause of the formation of lakes is the disturbance of drainage by glacial action. Lakes are generally abundant in mountain regions or within those areas which have been covered with ice.

Muck Plots Contain Answers to Puzzles

Sulphur, salt, and manganese are not usually considered to be needed to grow farm crops but owners of Michigan muck soils are invited to inspect the College muck plots either Tuesday, August 6 or Wednesday, August 7, to see the effect of these and other chemicals upon onions, mint, and general crops.

The program, of interest to muck farms, will be almost identical each day and is repeated to avoid having so large a crowd one day that it is difficult to closely inspect the plots. Michigan State College has 14 acres of muck which varies in reaction from slightly acid to alkaline. This variation makes it possible to do experimental work of value to owners of all types of muck.

The first group of visitors will be taken through the College plots at 9:00 a. m. each day. The tours will be repeated at 10:30 and at 1:30. Dr. P. M. Harmer, in charge of the muck soils work, will talk to the assembled groups each day following the tours. Other members of the College staff will also speak.

Several county agricultural agents are planning tours for farmers in their counties to attend these meetings. Farmers who plan to attend should find if their agent is going to conduct one of these tours.

The College muck plots are said to contain the most complete line of experimental work in the United States. They are located on Mt. Hope Avenue one mile south of the College buildings.

OUR NEIGHBORS

TECUMSEH—Corn, oats and wheat crops were damaged by the heavy wind, rain and hail storm that struck the rural district east, north and south of Tecumseh last Saturday afternoon, the storm spending the worst of its fury in the vicinity of Ellettsville where $2,000 in damage was reported to power lines. No damage was reported locally, although there was a heavy downpour. —Herald.

TECUMSEH—Peter, Toni, Mary Marko and Anna Marko, members of a band of gypsies, were arrested in Clinton and turned over to Kalamazoo county officers, where they were wanted. When searched they were found to have over a thousand dollars on their persons. —Herald.

HOWELL—After about six weeks experimentation with the recommendation of the state traffic authorities in having the two traffic lights work in unison, the council has authorized a change. The lights will alternate as before the adoption of the system of having both lights green at the same time. Witnesses, both official and otherwise, contend that the present system encourages speed in the business district rather than curbing it. The change back to the original plan will be made at once. It has been found that drivers respect lights to a greater extent than speed signs. —Republican-Press.

PINCKNEY—Pinckney seems to be becoming the week-end dumping place for all the undesirable elements of the rest of the state. Drunkenness and disorderliness seemed to predominate here over the week-end and all told the sheriff's department made four arrests last Saturday. All of those arrested were from Detroit who were week-ending in this section. Dispatch.

They'll Soon be Men

There's nothing "cute" about them any more; They've lost the cunning ways of baby days; The dimples and the curls they onetime wore No longer win for them such glowing praise— Our boys are getting big and growing strong; And, where they once were chubby, they are long!

Those gentle baby voices that we heard Have taken on a deeper, harsher tone; And, oftentimes, they use a phrase or word That, in their tender years, was never known; Where once we only taught them proper speech, We find it necessary now to preach!

They freely contemplate a broader view; Their longings and ambitions are proclaimed; They often show determination, too, In reaching an objective they have named; No longer do they readily depend Upon the aid or guidance we can lend.

The little ones that were our pride and joy No longer do the tricks of baby days; Each baby has become a husky boy, And has adopted boyhood's normal ways... I'd like to have our babies back again, But I'll be mighty proud when they are men!

TOURING BUREAU SET UP BY S. O. TO SERVE 13 STATES

Expecting motor travel, heretofore retarded by the prolonged wet season, to approach if not establish new record highs for the rest of the summer, Standard Oil Company has opened at 910 South Michigan Avenue, Chicago, a high-gear touring bureau for promptly furnishing motorists thru-out its thirteen states free, accurate, and detailed information on motor trips to any part of the North American continent traversed by passable roads.

All company stations are now supplied with form postage-paid cards addressed to the bureau upon which any motorist may quickly check the information desired. The bureau acknowledges the cards a few hours after their receipt, simultaneously supplying the requested information in all cases where it is immediately available. Answers to unusual requests are only slightly delayed to allow for the necessary research and compilation of material.

To prevent mistakes, the service man nearest the motorist's residence is notified by the bureau that the information has been mailed, and he makes a personal call to check whether any further information, maps, and routings are needed by the tourist.

Japan's Train Service Accurate
Train service in Japan is so accurate that nothing short of an earthquake or some great national disaster will delay a train for more than a fraction of a minute.

Electricity was known to the ancients. About twenty-five centuries ago Thales, a Greek philosopher, recorded the fact that if amber is rubbed it will attract light objects.

Animal and Insect Trials

Animal and insect trials were common in Europe in the Middle Ages. Before regular courts of justice were established, notes a writer in the Washington Post, offending animals were delivered to the person whom they had injured or to his relatives for punishment. Domestic animals were tried in secular courts and wild animals and insects in ecclesiastical courts. Of domestic animals prosecuted were dogs, sheep, pigs, horses and bulls. Among creatures hailed before ecclesiastical courts were rats, mice, locusts, wasps, flies, mosquitoes, snakes and caterpillars.

STORY OF A DIAMOND RING

A rich old man as we are told, Gave to his sons his goods and gold, But kept in store one precious thing, A large and brilliant diamond ring. The old man sent his sons away to travel, Till a certain day, when he who'd the noblest thing, Should have the precious diamond ring. Not a long time had passed away, When home they all came back, one day, And to their father, one by one, Described the deed that they had done. The youngest came: "Where torrents roared, I saw a child fall overboard; I plunged beneath the threatening wave, The life of innocence to save." The father said: "Twas bravely done, Nobly you risked your life my son, But though it was a gallant thing, Far higher worth should claim the ring."

The second came: "When I was sorely pressed for cash, A stranger lent me that I asked, I might have kept it all, but no! I would not serve the stranger so. I gave him back the sum he lent, with interest added, cent for cent. The father said: "I'm proud of you, But you have done that all should do." The eldest came: "Once shepherding a flock of sheep, My enemy was lulled to sleep, Close to a precipice; I left him not there to start, and die, I woke him, tho' my fiercest foe, And saved him from impending woe." The father cried with holy joy: "Take it! The ring is thine my boy. He who can banish from his heart revenge, And act the Christian part, Has fairly won the golden mead, I promised for the noblest deed."

BROOKLYN—Of the thousands of motorists that made up the heavy traffic over US-112 on Sunday nearly 2000 of them stopped at the Catholic church in the Irish Hills. Fr. Joseph Pfeffer says that 450 were present at the first mass at 8:30 and 400 at the second mass at 10:30. All day people visited the Stations of the Cross, under construction in the churchyard and on the slope toward Iron Lake. The remarkable and beautiful project has been in development for several seasons and by the last of August the most of the stations and the street scene will have been completed. —Exponent.

Question And Answer Dept.

Ques.—What relation was Theodore Roosevelt to Franklin D. Roosevelt? Also what was Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's maiden name?

Ans.—Franklin D. Roosevelt and the deceased Theodore Roosevelt were fifth cousins. The maiden name of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was the same as it is now—Anna Eleanor Roosevelt. Her father was a brother of Theodore Roosevelt. Therefore she is a blood relative of her husband—Franklin D.

Ques.—I would like to know if it is unlawful for a person to make an ornament out of United States silver coins?

Ans.—No. Since it is not illegal to melt, destroy or otherwise mutilate a United States coin it would be permissible to use them for making ornaments. The law violation would occur if someone tried to put the coins back into circulation if they had been defaced or mangled in any manner, which probably they would be if used for this purpose.

Ques.—Why is the word "radio" used with broadcasting? What does it mean?

Ans.—"Radio" is a combining form which means a connection or relation to a ray, a radius or radiation. When it is applied to radio-communication it refers to the transmission or reception of signals or sounds by means of "radiated" electro-magnetic waves.

Ques.—I want to ask you if the letter "W" appearing on the 17-year locusts means "war"?

Ans.—No. "Many people believe that if the letter 'W' appeared on the wings of the 17-year locust it was an adult locust of this variety are marked with a crop of 17-year locusts appear in some section of the country every year we would be having war constantly if the theory that the 'W' meant war is correct.

Ques.—When did Edgar Allan Poe die? Are any of his children or descendants now living?

Ans.—Edgar Allan Poe died on Oct. 7, 1849, as the result of excessive drinking. Poe, when two years old, was adopted by John Allan, a wealthy merchant of Richmond, Va., but was finally disowned as a prodigal. In 1822 Poe married his cousin, who died fifteen years later, preceding Poe's death by two years. Poe's wealthy foster father bequeathed him nothing and he died a poor man. He and his wife were childless.

Ques.—Why are glass knobs used to support electric wires on poles?

Ans.—This is because the electrons will not pass through glass. Accordingly the glass keeps the current from leaking away out of the wires.

Ques.—Why is a horseshoe considered an emblem of good luck?

Ans.—This superstition dates back to about the second century A. D., and its origin is a matter of doubt, but the most plausible conclusion is that the horseshoe is supposed to owe its protective powers to its fancied resemblance to the nimbus of halo pictured about the heads of saints, or angels.

Ques.—I would like to know just what is the difference between direct current and alternating current in electricity?

Ans.—In direct current the stream of electrons moves continually in one direction through a wire. The alternating current moves first in one direction and then in the other. The alternating current commonly used is reversed at the speed of about sixty times a second.

Ques.—I would like to ask in your Questions and Answers if it is known how much the earth weighs?

Ans.—Yes. The earth weighs, according to the mathematical calculations of scientists, a little less than six sextillion tons.

Ques.—What is the full name of Braddock, the present world's champion heavyweight prize fighter?

Ans.—The full name is "James Jay Braddock." However, according to our best information, he was christened "James Joseph Braddock."

Ques.—Will you kindly tell me the name of one or more newspapers printed in Sitka, Alaska?

Ans.—There are no newspapers published in Sitka, Alaska, except an Indian school paper which is published only during the school year—not published during June, July and August.

MASON.—Fire of unknown origin destroyed the plant of the Island City Electric company in Eaton Rapids early Thursday morning. The blaze was discovered by a resident of the neighborhood about one o'clock. The Eaton Rapids fire department summoned aid from Charlotte and after a long fight succeeded in saving the pickle vats, the office records and equipment and much of the canning and bottling plant. Loss is estimated at upwards of $15,000. The buildings were old but the equipment was modern. The loss is well covered by insurance. J. Manley Card, owner of the plant, stated Thursday morning that rebuilding of a modern factory will be started just as soon as the ruins of the present plant are cleared. About 35 employees will be thrown out of work by the blaze.—County News.

Twilight League News

The rains of Thursday afternoon and evening ceased just in time to allow St. Paul and the Congregationals to play their game on schedule. St. Pauls were victorious, and the score at the end of the six innings was 4 to 2.

The batteries were G. Novess and Schneider for St. Pauls, against Baxter and Smith for the Congregationals. Each pitcher allowed five hits. Novess fanned five men, and Baxter four. Only one man was walked—by Baxter.

With the score tied at two runs when the Lutherans came to bat in the last of the sixth, H. Niehaus drove the ball into deep center field where the Congregationals were unable to find it. As a result, Niehaus scored a home run, and drove in ahead of him G. Novess, who had previously singled. The ball lost, and darkness having come on, this was decided to be as good a time to stop playing as any—so they did.

Mayer Electric and Spaulding Chevrolet finally played off their postponed match on Friday evening. The Electric came out on top with a score of 6 to 2 at the end of the five and one-half innings.

The Mayer battery consisted of Hoffman, Hulse and Crocker. Hoffman pitched five innings, and Hulse one. Hoffman allowed four hits and fanned nine men. Hulse struck out the first three men at bat in his inning.

Schiller and Barnes made up the Chevy battery. There were only three hits off Schiller, but two of them were consecutive, and resulted in two runs. A bad fifth inning was the cause of Schiller's defeat.

The Electric started off with two runs in the first frame when Hoffman lined over shortstop, took third on Dvorak's safe hit, and scored on Hulse's sacrifice bunt. Dvorak tallied on a wild pitch.

The Chevys finally tied the score in the fifth on two hits, a walk and a couple of errors. But the Electric responded by cinching the game with three runs in their half of the fifth when three walks and an error were followed by a hit. It was too much for the Chevys; the first three men fanned in the first half of the sixth, and the game was called on account of darkness.

In a one-sided encounter on Monday at twilight, the Trojans swamped the Sea Scouts in a seven inning game in which the score was 8 to 2.

Kern and Winans comprised the battery for the Trojans. The Sea Scouts used an array of pitchers—Hart, C. Panarites and Stanley. Hart pitched five and one-half frames, Panarites one-half, and Stanley one. Panarites caught for all three hurlers.

Kern pitched well. He allowed only two hits. Hart allowed eight hits, and suffered from a paralytic influence as well—he walked eight men.

It was, of course, this barrage of hits that won for the Trojans. A man would walk, and would be driven home by a hit or two. For instance, in the first inning, Winans walked, and scored on a single by Wallace, who scored on a double by Kern. In the second, Howe singled, took second when Parsons grounded out, stole third and scored on the overthrow at third. Hulse walked, stole second and third, and scored on Lyons' nice tap over second base.

The really disastrous inning for the Sea Scouts was the sixth. Hulse started off with a hit to left field. Lyons walked. Wallace walked, filling the bases. Kern was hit by a pitched ball. Hulse scored. Canine walked, scoring Lyons. Wallace scored on a wild pitch. Howe walked. Kern scored on a catcher's error. Four runs on five walks and a hit. Such was Monday evening's ball game.

Spaulding Chevrolet went down to defeat before the spirited attack of St. Pauls in a six inning game Tuesday at twilight. The score was 8 to 1.

The score bespeaks the quality of the game—it was hard fought throughout. Though Fowler was the losing pitcher, it must be said in extenuation that he pitched a fine game. He allowed only four hits, walked three, and fanned eleven. G. Novess was the winning hurler despite his sore finger. He allowed only three hits, walked four, and fanned six.

The Lutherans made all their runs in the first inning when P. Novess singled to left field, stole second, and took third on D. Adams' sacrifice bunt. Soils then got on by fielder's choice. G. Novess was safe in his manner, filling the bases. P. Novess scored on Grossman's fumble at third during an attempt to catch Novess off base. Blannan then drove out a hard single. Belts and G. Novess scored the St. Pauls' second and third runs.

The Chevys' only threat to this lead occurred in the fourth when, with one down, a double, a single and a walk filled the bases. Then, however, Acker struck out and Grossman fled to right field, retracing the slide, and ending the Chevys' chances for victory.

Fat Man Reduces 53 Pounds—Oh Boy!

Don't be stubborn, you big fat man—throw off your fat before your fat throws you into the discard. Dr. S. A. Lanier of Sawtelle, Calif., did read this letter:

"I have used two reducing belts in no benefit but since using Kruschen Salts each morning in my coffee I have taken off 7 lbs. in a week and eat most anything I like. I weighed 243 lbs. 6 months ago and now I weigh 190 lbs."

Take one half-teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning—out down on fatty meats, potatoes and sweets—now you know the safe way to lose weight!

For a trifling sum you can get a bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts a week at Burg's Corner Drug Store or any druggist in the world—but be sure an get Kruschen—your health comes first.

IT'S SMART

TO TRADE AN OLD CAR ON A RECONDITIONED USED CAR

PALMER MOTOR SALES

Many times, trading purchasing power on the farm, employment for labor, and business for everybody. Let's insist that science be permitted to exert her extraordinary powers to release agriculture for the full employment of all energies, human and natural, that are latent upon the land.

"We shall then have prosperity for agriculture; give us prosperity for the millions who live on the soil, and no one needs to worry about prosperity for all the people of our country."

New Grain Contains Too Much Moisture

Excessive rains and high humidity during the present harvest season are apt to cause heavy losses to Michigan grain raisers unless great care is taken in handling the grain before threshing, according to the farm crops department at Michigan State College.

The losses will be in two classes, reduced prices due to excessive moisture content in threshed grain or losses of grain from sprouting in shocks in the field. A bushel of wheat testing 58 pounds must contain not over 14 per cent moisture to grade as No. 2. Discounts from prevailing prices of as much as seven cents a bushel have been made on wheat containing 17 per cent moisture.

Grain which contains too much moisture to bring top prices if threshed now can be stacked or placed in the barn and allowed to cure before it is threshed. Sweating in the stack or barn will bring the moisture content of the grain down to permissible limits, and the grain can be threshed during dry weather later.

The only treatment possible for grain already threshed is to use plenty of air space so that the grain is not piled deeply, and to ventilate it by shoveling from one bin to another. One mill has already reported the offering of grain for sale which contained so much moisture that it could not be handled in the mill.

Rural Electrification Scheme Misleading
For several months government agents have been making a house-to-house survey in a number of Michigan counties leading the farmers to believe that rural electrification was but a matter of a few months away. According to their story the government was launching a gigantic rural electrification project that would bring them light and power at practically no cost, even in the thinly settled districts. So persistent and so plausible were the stories told that it finally became necessary to call a rural electrification conference at Lansing to clarify the atmosphere.
At the conference, which was attended by several hundred farmers, some pertinent facts were disclosed: Michigan's share of the $100,000,000 set aside by the government would be between three and four million dollars; furthermore the grant would be a loan, not a gift as the farmers supposed; it cost private utility companies between thirty and forty million dollars to extend power lines to 45,000 farms, and that they would be glad to enlarge this field of service wherever the density of farm population warranted.
Thus the farmer's vision of an electric light in every pigsty has vanished like a bad dream; just as other projects of a similar nature have failed to meet the claims of politicians down Washington way.

URGES USE OF LONE SCOUTING
"Even if he lives too far from a Scout troop to attend meetings, a boy can still get the benefits of the Boy Scouts of America as a Lone Scout," Walter MacPeck, Scout Executive of Washtenaw-Livingston county said this week in discussing the fuller use of the Scout program in this county. Any boy who wants to be a Scout can secure a man—his father or other man of the county—to be his adult friend or counselor. Occasional rafting of Lone Scouts are contemplated.
"The Home Patrol too is a practical plan whereby three or four or five boys may carry on Scouting in the home of one of the group with a man of the community serving as the leader of the group," he said.

On one of the shore trips the passengers are carried in flansanes, which are chairs swung between 10-foot poles carried on the shoulders of stalwart natives. The main street of the town is called the Avenue d'Ambovo.

Clark offered prayer; Rev. Leeson, after a short talk, introduced Rev. Field as speaker. He gave a very pleasing, friendly, inspiring talk. Rev. Leeson made some glowing remarks, and in answer to questions, explained how people enter the Home. Also many of our rules and the working schedule of the daily life here. The meeting closed with singing. The visitors were invited to go through the Home and grounds, as they wished to get acquainted, which they did. They had brought their picnic supper with them, and enjoyed it at the table in the shade of the trees on the lawn.

"A little, and maybe a little about banking. But with Mason dead all confidence has collapsed. Clive Pearson is scared stiff—ready to stampede. Some think already that he'll break half the outfit on Wolf Beach, and the bank, too, if he can once the matter he's got his money in. No man knows where his brand gets off. Nobody trusts his neighbor."

"Maybe it'll adjust," Kentucky offered. "The sheriff burst out at him with something very like fury. 'Adjust? It'll adjust like a dog's tail to a wolf! This throws the whole d—n range out of balance! And you stand there and tell me—' He paused hopelessly, out of words. 'There you have it.' He lifted his hands and let them fall with a gesture of morose futility. 'This is a good sample of the raw edge of temper the whole rimrock is on. I call you up here to ask you a favor, and in two minutes we're jumping down each other's throats.'

"That's all right," said Kentucky. "If disorderly conduct was my field, I expect I might be feeling somewhat satisfied under the undershirt myself."

"Disorderly conduct is right," the sheriff said. "Man, you'll see plenty now! Half the range is sore at the other half already. Take the Circle Five and the Lazy Deuce. Or the Three Bar and the Humming-M. today, then two owners met face to face and never spoke. Or take—"

"Take Bob Elliott's 88 and Campo Ragland's Bar Hook," Kentucky prompted. "There you are—maybe the worst case of all. Those outfits have always jangled. And now look at it. Elliott doesn't own a fifth of his range. The rest is leased Indian land. Now Elliott's lease is out. These leases have to be bid for—and everybody knows that there's more than one big outfit will never let that lease go cheap. Elliott depended on Mason to let him take the money for his bid. Now it's all over the range already that the bank won't back him. Elliott can't get any quick price for all that landless stock; he's through."

"And what about Ragland?" "Ragland's Bar Hook could probably stand through the storm. If it wasn't for the misfortune to Elliott. But Ragland's open range is the open range nearest to Elliott. What if Elliott turns and floods his cattle onto the Bar Hook range?"

Jones already knew that the Bar Hook was at least half on public domain. By the common code Campo was entitled to the use of that range because he had developed water upon it, but he had no legal hold upon the unfenced.

"Are you convinced in your own mind," Kentucky asked him, "that Elliott will dare shove his herds onto the Bar Hook range?"

"I know this," said Floyd Hopper, heavily, soberly. "Elliott don't need more than four or five riders to take care of his winter work. Yet he's laying on extra hands. He's hired on at least six more men just in the last couple of days, since the death of Mason. You know how it looks to me? Like he's not waiting for the day he'll have to move. Like he's not even going to wait the winter out before he starts filtering into the Bar Hook range."

"In that case," said Kentucky, "Bob Elliott is sure a man who enjoys to grab a bear by the tail and go round and round. Campo Ragland will fight like a whangdoodle in defense of his first born."

"Sure, they'll fight. They'll fight to a standstill. I'll have a full fledged cat on my hands within a month. And what can I do about it? Nothing. By G—d! Off in the hills somewhere three or four cowboys meet three or four others, and start trading private opinions. Then—when! The guns come out, and one or two, or three go down. No one bears witness, no one judges a complaint—there's just those good boys dead, and that's all. And two days later there's another killing somewhere else."

"I know," said Kentucky. "Hell about and no blotters." "The sheriff grunted. Suddenly a new grievance seemed to occur to him, and the explosiveness came back into his voice again. 'I'd give a hundred dollars to lay my hands on the son of a gun who swiped that bullet out of the inquest. Night out from under my d—n nose, by G—d!'

"Well," said Kentucky, "lead a cheap! Sheriff Hopper savagely pulled off his hat and slammed it on the edge of his desk; it fell unnoticed to the floor. 'It'll be no good,' he declared. 'It isn't as if we didn't have the—' He stopped."

"The other bullet," Kentucky asked. "The sheriff seemed to go relaxed and cold, all of an instant. He studied

Kentucky with a questioning eye. "Why did you say that?" he said at last. "Well," Kentucky apologized, "you were just remarking you had something on hand that would take the missing bullet's place."

"The sheriff's steady stare did not drift from Kentucky's face. 'We took a bullet out of the inquest, didn't we?' 'That was a smart thing to do,' said Kentucky."

"I expect," said the sheriff. He dropped his eyes, and his hands fidgeted with the miscellany on his desk. "Just the same," he said, returning his eyes to Kentucky's face in a cold and smoky gaze, "that was a very strange question, Mister, for you to ask. I had a bound dog once, that got in trouble that way."

"Trouble, sheriff?" "By sight, running." They looked at each other, two men who had said more than rested upon the surface of their words—one of them unwillingly. Kentucky Jones began rolling a leisurely cigarette, and he grinned the slow infectious grin that could make a dog follow him, or a woman remember him, or could make a man forget why he had meant to paste him a couple. "Sheriff Hopper stirred restively and dropped his eyes. 'I was just thinking of something,' the sheriff said. 'What was that?'

"You're a sight runner," said the sheriff again. "But I don't know but what you're a good one. Sometimes there's a use for a feller like that. And that was what I wanted to see you for. That was a good job of scouting you did for the cattle association last year; and I—"

"Who told you I ever did any scouting, as you call it, for the Cattlemen's association?" "Old Man Coffee told me, upcountry in the Fryling Pan."

"Sometimes Old Man Coffee gets too d—n eloquent," said Kentucky Jones, exasperated. "Well, anyway," said the sheriff, "I was hoping to find you kind of at loose ends around here, like as if you might be able to take and do something different from what you'd started to do."

"As for instance?" "The sheriff nodded. "There's an end hanging loose in this Mason case," he admitted finally. "So I thought it was all decided that Mason committed suicide by mistake."

"Hopper made an annoyed gesture. 'The case is closed, John Mason died of the accidental discharge of his own gun—that's established. But I just happens that there's a man has come in with a perjury.'

"He paused. 'Yes,' said Kentucky Jones after a moment. 'To what effect?'

"Well—we questioned him about Mason's death; and later I found out he wasn't where he said he was—"

"You sure you want to tell me this?" "I'm not telling you anything that does you to anything—yet. Now this feller—maybe he was in sight when Mason got killed. Or maybe in earshot. Anyway he lied about where he was—tried to make a fool of us, by G—d! And I mean to look him for it."

"Hardly seems important," Kentucky said skeptically. "If there's no question about how Mason died."

"It isn't that," said the sheriff gloomily. "There's some awful bad times ahead of us here, Kentucky, and we got to show that the law has teeth in it while we still can. Now, if you don't mind taking the time, there's a thing you could do for me that would be an mighty favor."

"Come to cases," said Kentucky. "This man I'm telling you about is out at the Bar Hook. Now, I realize you're a cattle trader; but sometimes a feller like you will take a riding job to fill in with over the winter, or something—especially in times like this. Now, if you'll go to Campo Ragland and get a job, you can find out about this feller for me in a way that I couldn't myself, nor the deputies neither."

"You want me to hire on at the Bar Hook and root this feller out for you—is that it?" "That's the idea."

Kentucky Jones was looking out the window, down the snowy street. Half a block down, in front of the hotel, Jean Ragland's pony stood.

He had seen this girl but half a dozen times in his life; yet she had singled him out today to bid her in a thing which he did not yet fully understand. She had been surrounded by friends, by men she had known all her life; even her own father had been there. Yet, for some obscure reason she had turned to him.

Jean Ragland sat her pony with the easy lax grace of young muscled raised in the saddle. Now that she was in her own element again she no longer looked frail and small, as she had in the crush of the inquest, but competent and at home on her horse, as he had known her before. As she paused she looked straight at the window where he stood, and Kentucky believed that she saw him there; but she gave no sign. He turned back to the sheriff.

Floyd Hopper smoked morosely in the shadows brought by the closing of the early dusk. "If you want to go out to the Bar Hook for me, I can make it worth your while. What we got to do is—"

"I wouldn't touch it," said Kentucky, "with a ten-foot pole." "Floyd Hopper stared at him irritably. 'Just because you're gone on Campo Ragland's girl doesn't have anything to do with this job. This is for the protection of the Bar Hook people, as much as anything else.'

"Protection or no protection," Kentucky Jones said shortly. "I won't touch it. As far as Campo Ragland's girl is concerned, I'll tell you straight and plain that if Mason hadn't been killed within fifty yards of her door, I wouldn't be here now."

"I guessed that," said the sheriff drily. "You guessed it, and now you know it; and beyond that—to be—I with you!" "Floyd Hopper made a disgusted gesture. 'All right, I don't blame you. I'm not out of it,' said Kentucky Jones."

The other looked up at him, startled. "I've already talked to Campo Ragland," said Kentucky. "He's given me a riding job. I'm going out and ride for the Bar Hook until this thing clears up."

The sheriff said with annoyance. "You just now said you—"

"Hopper," said Kentucky Jones, "how long have you known that John Mason was murdered?"

"It took a moment or two for the sheriff to convince himself that he had correctly heard; but when it had sunk in he came to his feet with a jerk. His eyes flared narrowly, but his face was grim and tight. 'You accusing me of lying at the inquest?'

"Yes," Kentucky Jones said. "Floyd Hopper's leathery face turned a deep maroon, and in the shadows his eyes seemed like points of light. 'Then,' he said, 'it's because you know a whole lot of a lot that I don't—'

Kentucky Jones returned faintly, rolling his cigarette," said Bob Elliott, "I'm not sure that I saw that done."

Floyd, said Elliott, disregarding Kentucky now, "but I think maybe that I did; and I think so more and more."

Sheriff Floyd Hopper came awake. "Who was it?"

"I don't want to name a name," said Bob Elliott, "unless we can make a test to see if I'm right. If I'm right, the party that took the bullet passed it on to another; and I don't think that second one passed it on. I don't know but what he's just dumb enough to have it still."

"And where is it?" said the sheriff. "I think," Bob Elliott said, "that you'll find the bullet that killed Mason in the clothes of this man, here—Kentucky Jones."

The three were motionless for a moment. The sheriff stared from one of them to the other. "Look here—"

"That settles it," said Kentucky. He smashed Bob Elliott across the face with his open hand.

The owner of the 88 staggered against the wall, spun half around with the weight of that open-handed slap. Jones said, "Take care of yourself."

Elliott's hand landed a whipping snatch at the gun at his right thigh as Kentucky struck again; this time with his closed left hand. Elliott's head snapped back; he seemed to teeter for a moment, face upward, then buckled at the knees and went to the floor like a dropped saddle blanket.

"For G—d's sake get out of here," said the sheriff. "Get out of this town! He'll kill you when he comes up."

CHAPTER III

Campo Ragland struck a match, and as the light of three or four lamps filled the room the faces of the riders likewise lightened. From Waterman, Kentucky Jones had pushed his horse steadily, and as darkness closed down he had overtaken the Bar Hook people. With them he had ridden the long Bar Hook horse trail across the Bench, until they came out at last upon long rolling reaches, and the rambling buildings of the Bar Hook loomed before them, dark and shadowy.

The kitchen wing in which they now gathered was built of big square-hewn logs; but the interior was neat.

Jean Ragland said, "There's no fire made." And Kentucky noticed the odd way in which they all fell silent for a moment, as if it was a strange and uncommon thing that a fire should not spring into being and set coffee on it, itself, at a deserted ranch.

"You see," Campo Ragland said to Kentucky, "we generally have a cook around here; lately it's been a 'lame boy' named Zack Sanders. Used to be a rider, but his horse fell on him and turned him into a cook. But this boy is kind of gone missing on us, it seems."

"Been missing long?" "Last week he was supposed to take two days off, and he rode over to see a girl he has over here thirty, forty miles," Ragland said. "I didn't notice it so much Saturday, when he didn't come in, that being the day that this—"

accident happened to Mason. But in Waterman today his girl said he left there Saturday sun-up. That's four days gone."

"Hell, probably she's up," Lee Highop grunted. "Oh, I suppose so." Campo Ragland jerked himself into activity again, and began throwing wood into the great stove. "The way things have been going around here, it gets a feller nervous, I guess."

In a little while the big stove began to fill the room with a lazy warmth, and the hot smoky smell of frying beef and potatoes began to thaw the mood of the Bar Hook changed, so that for a little while it could have been any ranch house, anywhere except that the presence of Jean Ragland made a difference here. That girl could subtly change the time and place, picking it different from any other ranch house and any other night. Perhaps no cowboy ever rode for the Bar

Hook without feeling that he was in some part riding for that girl. Looking at her now Kentucky Jones would not have guessed that she had today realized concerning a death that had occurred within fifty yards of this door; and that to the midst of these proceedings she had felt impelled to there the heart out of the evidence of that death.

He had come here to find out the exact nature of the shadow which had fastened itself on the Bar Hook, and upon Jean Ragland as a part of the Bar Hook; and accordingly he turned now to studying the others as they ate. Lee Bishop, the solid, square-set foreman, undoubtedly would stand steady as a rock in a pinch. Evidently he was a man born at a branding and raised in the saddle; for he would hardly have attained a foremanship at thirty had he been handicapped in experience.

The other two cowboys Kentucky Jones classified as a couple of kids. Jim Humphreys, though only five years younger than Bishop, would perhaps always be a kid. And Billy Petersen was the youngest, essential to every outfit, who would be given the undesirable jobs of horse-wrangling and night herd, and errands which were a nuisance.

Campo Ragland remained silent throughout the meal; and for the moment Kentucky could make out no more about him than he already knew—which was little enough.

"Sure miss Zack Sanders around here," Campo said at last, getting up. "Might's well set out what we'll need, handy to breakfast, I guess."

"Dad," said Jean, "I'll take care of all that."

"You get along to bed," her father told her gruffly. "I want you to get some sleep."

Jean obediently picked up a lamp. Kentucky Jones moved efficiently about making ready for morning. Out in lonely camps upon the range these men would have got their own breakfasts effortlessly, without thought; but here, where a cook was supposed to be, a cookless breakfast loomed as an ordeal untold.

"I wish I knew—," Campo began; he was ladling fresh coffee into a big pot with an enormous spoon—"I wish I knew—"

Suddenly he stopped, and stood staring, while from the poised spoon a thin trickle of dry coffee dribbled to the floor.

Jean Ragland had returned, and was standing in the broad doorway. She still carried the lamp, and its sharp near light, illumining her face remorselessly, showed that her features were drawn by a hard and unaccustomed emotion. It took a moment or two for Kentucky Jones to realize that what he saw in the girl's face was fear.

For a moment no one spoke. Then Ragland said, very low, his coffee spoon still motionless, "What is it, Jean?"

Jean Ragland's voice could hardly be heard. "Someone's been through the house."

"Been through the house?" "Ransacked it—through and through!"

Her father let the big spoon splash into the coffee pot. Jean turned, throwing the light into the room beyond, and for a moment father and daughter stood together in the doorway, staring at what the others could not see. Then, slowly, with a curious uncertainty, Campo Ragland moved out of their sight. Jean followed him with the lamp.

Kentucky Jones, with the others, went to the door through which Campo had disappeared.

The room was long and broad. In one end a huge fireplace with a six-foot opening was built of rugged chunks of the native rock, and near this Campo stood, holding up a second lamp.

They heard him say, "You're right, there's no question about it."

Jim Humphreys said, "Is there anything we can—"

Ragland shot them a quick glance, as if momentarily he had forgotten that he was not alone. "It's nothing much, I guess," he said in a rocky voice. "This dump has been searched, all right. That's all. Wait back, you."

Jim Humphreys and Billy Petersen returned to the kitchen. At the doorway Kentucky Jones turned and stood for a moment in a final survey of the main room. He saw Ragland pass on into the next room. Jean moved to follow him.

Then suddenly the girl stopped and stood rigid. Following her eye, Kentucky Jones saw at once what she was looking at.

On the wall hung a cheap picture frame, perhaps ten inches in its longer dimension, made of narrow dark wood. And it was distinguished from other picture frames by the fact that there was no picture in it. Through its glass could be seen the torn manilla paper which had backed the frame, and a section of the wall.

Jean Ragland set her lamp down, stepped forward and jerked the empty frame from the wall. For a moment she stood irresolute, glancing quickly about her.

"Do you want me to wrangle that for you, too?" said Kentucky from the doorway.

For an instant she stared at him, her eyes wide and hostile. It was surprising to him—a little. That afternoon, at the inquest, she had pressed into his keeping the bullet she had taken from the evidence. But now he knew that she had not elected him as her ally, nor wanted more than momentary aid.

Her father's step sounded close at hand beyond the other door. Jean dropped the picture frame behind a wooden chest that stood against the wall, and picked up her lamp again, as her father re-entered.

Buffaloes Followed the Grass
In the days before the white man, immense herds of bunched buffaloes would leave Texas, Arizona and New Mexico in the spring of the year and leisurely follow the grass, probably into Canada. When cool weather came they would retrace their steps, before the advent of the railroad, Texas cattle men following the buffalo herd, drove their herds over the old Chisholm trail. They found that by adopting the habits of the buffalo, the cattle would be as hardy as the buffalo and would not require as much care.

Colors of Great Dane Dogs

Cause of Suicide
A predominant cause of suicide among both civilized and savage peoples, according to one authority, is an accumulation of aggressive, destructive instinct in the race which cannot find an outlet otherwise. Thus it is less in wartime than during peace, when there is no way to express the pent-up aggressive energy by killing somebody else.

Round Towers in Ireland
The round towers found in Ireland are tall, narrow and circular, tapering gradually from the base to the summit. They are among the earliest relics of the ecclesiastical architecture of the British Isles. About 118 towers of this description are to be seen in Ireland, notably at Ardmore in Waterford, Clondalkin in Dublin, and Doreenish in Fermanagh. Scotland possesses three similar towers.

Content Without Women
In various parts of the world there are large groups of men, excluding those in prisons and monasteries, who apparently are content to live without women. Written by Paul S. Gilman, New York City, in Collier's Weekly. One outstanding example is the population of South Georgia, an island in the South Atlantic ocean, which is composed of about 600 men and one woman.

Propulsion of Fish
Propulsion of a fish, for the most part, is derived from the posterior part of the body and the caudal fin, due to a series of alternate contractions of the strong muscles on the side of the trunk to the tail extremity. The tail moves to and fro not unlike an oar blade being used in sculling a boat.

Mind and Body Must Be Busy
The human mind and body cannot be happy except in action. Even in our leisure our idea of fun is to find something extraordinary hard to work at—swimming, boating, tennis, ball games, etc., which work the body, or reading, bridge, golfing, etc., which work the mind.

Euthenics
Euthenics refers to the science of or study of improving living conditions in order to better the human race and make people more efficient.

Few Banks in Colonial Times; One Known in 1800

A few banks were in operation in Colonial times, but no commercial banks as we know them of this day, asserts an authority in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. One of the earliest is said to have been established in South Carolina in 1690 for the convenience of a group of planters. Not much is known of this bank and it did not long survive, but William Paterson, who afterward promoted the Bank of England, is said to have investigated it. In 1680 a number of citizens of Boston united to establish a bank of issue, in disregard of the British laws.

But largely because there was not a stable monetary system there was little banking done in this country prior to the adoption of the Constitution in 1787. On July 17, 1790, an institution called the Pennsylvania bank opened in Philadelphia, supported by about a hundred subscribers and intended chiefly to assist in procuring supplies for Washington's troops. This bank, formed at the instance of Thomas Paine, continued duty about a year and a half, after which the special need for it had tapered.

The first modern commercial bank in this country was the Bank of North America, in which Robert Morris was a leading figure, and which was organized November 1, 1781, and opened its doors on January 1, 1782. In 1804 it entered the national banking system. In view of its history and traditions, it alone among national banks was not required to include the word "National" in its name.

Philadelphia First Had Naval Academy in 1831
In 1810 congress passed an act creating a naval hospital fund. At the same time, says a writer in the Philadelphia Inquirer, Paul Hamilton, secretary of the navy, advocated that hospitals for seamen and the widows of seamen killed in action be established. He believed that missionaries should be sent to these hospitals, which were hospitals in the ancient English sense of the word, for a period of instruction in navigation and general learning. This was the beginning, not only of the naval academy, but the naval school, or academy. In 1823 a plot was purchased at Gray's Ferry road at the corner of Bainbridge street for this purpose, and the main structure was formally occupied in 1831 as the United States naval academy. Between 1839 and 1842 when Commodore James Biddle was commandant of the academy, the naval school was established there. In 1845 the naval school, now called academy, was removed to Annapolis, Md.

Singing Sands
Recently a patch of sand has been discovered in the United States which emits a melodious whistling noise when anyone walks on it. In the entire country there are some seventy similar areas, but most of them make singing noises. America is not the only country where the earth has a voice. Travelers in the deserts of North Africa have been misled by a hideous, mocking laugh. In Chile, there are sands that rumble, and a mountain that moans and groans, which the natives say is haunted. Nevada has a mountain that emits a distinct, bell-like note, and certain portions of the Hawaiian beaches make harking sounds. Many plausible explanations have been put forward by scientists for these phenomena, but there is nothing that covers the riddle satisfactorily, especially as echoes are practically non-existent on sandy stretches. —The Bits Magazine.

Oldest Farm in U. S.
What is believed by census enumerators to be the oldest in the United States is a government farm near Valera, Texas, which has been operated continuously since 1530. The farm was established in that year by the Franciscans, who came to the New World with Coronado, and in 1550 the tract was granted to the church by the king of Spain. It is still owned and operated by the Franciscan Fathers.

Singing Fish
There are several varieties of fish which can produce sounds. One of the most interesting is the little Mexican canary fish, which can make as much noise that it can be heard through the half-inch thick glass of an aquarium tank at a distance of ten yards. In their native Mexican streams these fish migrate in large schools, and the noise produced by them all walling in unison carries long distances.

Rivers Are Property of States in Which Located

Rivers are the property of the states in which they are located. The limited jurisdiction of the federal government over navigable streams is merely incidental to its constitutional power to regulate and improve navigation for interstate and foreign commerce, states a writer in the Indianapolis News. When a river forms the boundary between two states the title of each state is presumed to extend to the middle of the main channel, provided there is no legal arrangement to the contrary. Sometimes two states agree, for police purposes, to exercise concurrent jurisdiction over a river which forms the boundary between them.

The Ohio, Chattahoochee and Potomac rivers are notable exceptions of the general rule. Kentucky and West Virginia have absolute jurisdiction over the entire Ohio river along their shores as far as the low-water mark on the Ohio, Indiana and Illinois banks. If a person commits a crime on that river near the Illinois, Indiana or Ohio shore he is amenable to the laws of Kentucky or West Virginia, and the same and fishing laws of the latter states are enforced to the northern bank of the stream. Thus it is possible for a person to violate a Kentucky law by fishing on the Ohio side of the river. This boundary line has been judicially recognized many times by the Supreme court of the United States and the Supreme courts of the states involved.

The Northwest territory, from which Illinois, Indiana and Ohio were carved, was ceded to the federal government in 1784 by the Commonwealth of Virginia. The resolution of cession retained title and jurisdiction over the Ohio river to the low-water mark on the northern bank, and these rights were transmitted to Kentucky and West Virginia when they were later formed from Virginian territory.

Only One Maple Sugar Tree
About seventy varieties of maple trees are found in the world, but only one yields sugar in commercial quantities.

Classes in Art
We often speak of the classics in art, poetry, literature and music, as if they all belonged to the same period of time. This, however, is not the case, asserts Henry Graves, Mus. B., L. R. A. M., in the Montreal Herald. The classics of Greece and Rome are a thousand years older than the classics of music. The earliest music (of a kind) was in all probability Egyptian, and we cannot form a correct idea of what it was like. We can only get some notion of it from the only scales that were then known: harmony, as we understand the term, was unknown. Their conception of harmony was an accompaniment to voices of notes played an octave higher or lower, or a fifth or fourth below or above.

Harmony in Music Found in 1300, Authority Says

The most noted Greek musicians were Pythagoras, Lasos, Olympus and Tyrtaeus, who flourished about 600 B. C. The Romans were no better off, musically, according to a writer in the Montreal Herald. They were a martial race and left no records of any musical culture. About A. D. 380, Pope Sylvester founded a singing school at Rome, and two or three centuries later, Pope Gregory the Great reorganized church music, introducing four new scales, which he called "plagal modes." (Plagal: having its final, or keynote, in the middle of its compass). Still there was no harmony, and there was none until about A. D. 1300, when Adam

Hale and Marchettus established the correct principles of concord and discord. Once these principles were known, a rapid advance in music was made, all over Europe.

In 1685 Henry Purcell, an Englishman, astounded the world with his musical compositions. He was organist of Westminster abbey. When he was nineteen, he composed his first opera, which was followed by seven other operas, and twelve sonatas for the violin, some of which are still heard, as well as his melodious songs.
