Selfridge Field Plane Crashes at Jerusalem

Cadet L. S. Powell, 22, of Selfridge Field, who was returning Sunday evening from a flight to the home of his parents in Carbon, Ala., was forced to make a parachute jump from his plane when the motor stalled over Jerusalem, about five miles southeast of Chelsea, as he was flying at a height of about 4,000 feet.

He started downward, but falling in his efforts to straighten the plane, he decided to jump at about 2,500 feet, and landed safely in a field on the C. D. Jenks farm, northwest of the Jerusalem school. A wing of the plane clipped him as he jumped, tearing his clothes and just missing his head. The plane continued downward, crashing and imbedding itself in the center of the road in front of the Jerusalem schoolhouse, so that only the tail and part of the top were visible. It was a total wreck.

Capt. Powell, who was flying a pursuit ship, had left Chelsea earlier in the day, on his return to Selfridge Field. He had been flying about a year and a half and this was his first forced jump.

He was brought to Chelsea and later taken to Ann Arbor, proceeding by bus to Selfridge. The wreckage of the plane was removed in an army truck on Monday.

SEND REQUEST FOR GRANT
Applications for a Federal grant to aid in financing a sewage disposal plant in Chelsea were completed and sent to Washington Tuesday of this week, final action on the matter and approval of the applications being the order of business at the Monday evening council meeting. The estimate for the total cost has been placed at $54,000.00 by Geo. Champe, consulting engineer of Toledo. Mr. Champe's representative was present at the council meeting on Monday.

THANK YOU!
The members of Herbert J. McKune Post No. 81 of The American Legion wish to express their thanks and appreciation to the business men, the general public and all others who so generously contributed toward the success of the recent homecoming.

The rooms were lovely with large baskets of gold and lavender gladioli and talisman roses. The tea table was covered with a lace cloth centered with a bouquet of yellow snapdragons and gypsophylla flanked with gold colored tapers. Miss Mary Joan Walworth and Miss Martha Ann Bacon, granddaughters of Mr. and Mrs. Walworth, poured. A feature of the tea was a beautifully decorated yellow and white wedding cake which was cut and passed to the guests by Mrs. Walworth. The honored guests received many lovely gifts and cards.

Among those who were present at the tea on Sunday and attended the wedding 50 years ago were Mr. and Mrs. George E. Walworth of Hillsdale, the former a brother of Mr. Walworth, Mrs. E. S. Clark of De-

Proposals Sought for Postoffice Site

In this issue of The Standard will be found an advertisement in which the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department, Public Works Branch, asks for proposals for the sale of a lot of land in Chelsea, for a Federal building in Chelsea.

Dimensions of lots which will be considered must be 120 foot frontage with 170 foot depth for corner lots, or 145 foot frontage and 170 foot depth for interior lots. Proposals will be opened in the office of the postmaster at 9 o'clock a. m. on September 3. D. Withers, postmaster, has blanks which prospective bidders may secure upon application, giving all details as to requirements and instructions for preparing bids.

Proposals are usually accepted for the land and improvements. However, the buildings on the site or any portions thereof, may be reserved by the vendor if expressly so stated in the proposal accepted by the department, to be removed upon 30 days notice (usually) after title to the land is vested in the United States.

Whenever the department is unable to secure from the owner a proposal to sell the site desired for a reasonable price, a resort may be had to condemnation proceedings to ascertain the valuation of the property. If the price, so judicially determined, is satisfactory, the award is confirmed and payment made. If the damages are deemed excessive, however, the proceedings are dismissed and some other location is taken under consideration.

A number of local property owners have called at the postoffice for proposal blanks and it is expected that there will be several bids presented on or before the required date.

LAST CONCERT NEXT WEEK

The last of the series of concerts to be given by the Chelsea Band this season will be presented next Wednesday evening. The concerts have been financed by Chelsea business men and have attracted large crowds each Wednesday evening.

Celebrate Golden Wedding

The golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Orion J. Walworth, which occurred on Monday, was celebrated Sunday with a pleasant party and afternoon tea given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. Kent Walworth, with Mr. and Mrs. George Bacon of Fort Wayne, Ind., and Mr. and Mrs. George Walworth assisting.

The rooms were lovely with large baskets of gold and lavender gladioli

and talisman roses. The tea table was covered with a lace cloth centered with a bouquet of yellow snapdragons and gypsophylla flanked with gold colored tapers. Homecoming-Carnival Attracts Large Crowds

Chelsea's Homecoming and Carnival, sponsored by the American Legion, and held on Thursday evening, Friday and Saturday of last week, was attended by huge throngs, especially on Friday and Saturday nights, when it was almost an impossibility to accommodate the crowds.

True to the promise of the Legion, there was something doing every minute of the two days and three nights—and true to expectations, there was a large and responsive crowd to take part in all the events, beginning with the band concert Thursday evening and ending when the rides stopped their wheels early Sunday morning. The rides proved to be very popular with young and old alike, and of the three, the ferris wheel was most liked. Its popularity was due to the speed of its rotation and the resulting thrill given the rider.

After the band concert, the rides and concessions occupied the time of the Thursday evening crowd.

On Friday morning occurred the sporting events for children. The 100 yard dashes were both won by boys from Camp Lehman. The bicycle race for children 14 and under was won by Roland Spaulding. Charles Lane won the bicycle race for those 12 and under. The Soap Box Derby proved to be quite thrilling. It was won by Andy Folch and his partner, a boy from Camp Lehman.

On Friday afternoon, Malcolm Naves pitched the Chelsea Futures to a 22 to 19 victory over the boys from Camp Lehman. An eleven run rally by the colored boys in the seventh inning "most-heat Ed Miller's second string 'Futures' whom he had put in when his team was 14 points ahead, with only to innings to play.

In the second ball game of Friday afternoon the Chelsea All Stars were defeated by the Dexter Tri-County League team. The score was 9 to 5. Daredevil Dault gave his first performance Friday afternoon. It was quite thrilling, especially when he stood on his hands on a chair balanced atop four bottles placed on the top of three tables on the Chelsea Bakery building. The other two aerial performances occurred on Saturday.

Probably the most interesting events were the balloon ascensions and parachute drops by Wm. Henderson, the first of which took place Friday evening. On this flight, the balloon rose very rapidly and blew northwest until the rider appeared to be but a speck when he jumped. He landed near his balloon at the back of the Bollinger farm. Saturday afternoon's ascension was not so high nor rapid. Mr. Henderson landed just north of Mill Creek in the Holmes field.

Later in the evening was the exhibition by the Ypsilanti Drum and Bugle Corps—a martial array of interest to many.

Then came a surprise feature—the Ford Dixie Eight—a group of really fine singers who entertained with such harmonious numbers as "Dinah" and "She'll Be Coming 'Round the Mountain."

About 9:30 the younger folks began to leave the "midway" and go to the dance at St. Mary's hall where, despite the heat and humidity, everyone had a good time.

The ball game which was scheduled to be played Saturday afternoon between Lima Center and Chelsea was called off.

Rides and concessions, in addition to the aerial act and balloon ascension, took up Saturday afternoon, evening, night and early Sunday morning.

Of course the Rube Band wandered from place to place all day Friday and Saturday—and it was a mighty good Rube Band for a "rube band."

New H. S. Students To Enroll Next Week

Chelsea public school will open on Tuesday, September 3. Teachers' meetings will be held in the morning and enrollment will begin at 1 o'clock.

The superintendent will be at the schoolhouse on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, August 29, 30 and 31, and requests all students who are entering Chelsea high school for the first time to enroll during those three days.

A seventh grade teacher will be employed before school starts, and this grade will be in a separate room this year.

WILL START STREET WORK

Information has been received by village officials to the effect that the county road commission expects to start work on West Middle street next week. A representative of the Dow Chemical Co. will be here to supervise the mixing of the stabilizer. The road commission has been delayed in their schedule of projects because of the continued wet weather.

WILL AID FARMERS IN MARKETING OF RYE CROP

With a 1932 rye crop in Michigan estimated at 2,758,000 bushels, the best crop since 1924, Commissioner of Agriculture James F. Thompson, has taken steps to help devise a plan whereby distilleries will consume a great portion of this Michigan grown product. Commissioner Thompson's action was forthcoming after a conference with Representative Miles M. Callaghan, prominent agriculturalist.

Through the State Liquor Commission, Thompson hopes to encourage distilleries which market their products in the State to use more Michigan rye. Rye is now bringing only 50c a bushel. A year ago in August, the price was 80c a bushel which was the average price for rye over the 10 years during that month. The average yearly price over the ten years has been 75c a bushel. Thompson blames heavy foreign importations as being the primary cause for the low price of rye at the present time. For the year ending June 30, 1,250,000 bushels of rye were imported into this country. This is far in excess, Thompson claims, to the average yearly importations.

In 1934 Michigan had 148,000 acres of rye which yielded 9 bushels to the acre. There was 1,314,000 bushels produced. The crop had an average value of $5.85 an acre to the farmer. The average total yield for the past ten years has been 8,160,000 bushels. "There is no reason why American farmers should not be in a position to market this product as well as other farm products when there is a demand for them here in this country," Thompson said. "The situation becomes ridiculous when foreign grain growers are permitted to ship their products into this country to compete on such prices as are now being paid for grain."

The discovery was made Saturday when Andy was found in Detroit with Mrs. Correll to accept delivery of a plane which Andy had purchased. "Yes, we're really in the air now," Andy said, as he and Mrs. Correll and his flying instructor, Charles (Slim) Freitag, drove to the Stinson plant at Wayne where the plane was being tested. At the Stinson plant Andy espied a dozen men working on a plane. "There she is!" he yelled, and his eyes popped like those of a youngster viewing his first bicycle as he inspected the green and red cabin plane. Mrs. Correll looked on while Andy fulfilled the controls. Freitag said that Andy will make an excellent pilot. County Review.

Central-Heated Britain
Result of Gulf Stream

The famous Gulf stream, which makes the British Isles temperate when they ought to be sub-Arctic, is an ocean river, says a writer in "The Times" magazine. It keeps comparatively of the water of the North Atlantic on the move, and is computed to pour 400 million tons of water past Florida daily.

The difference of temperature between the stream and the adjacent water, even as far from its source in the Caribbean sea as Newfoundland, is 50 degrees, and the color is indigo blue. Its maximum speed of flow is four miles an hour. The cause of this flow is probably the difference in density, the stream water being much heavier for reason of excessive saltiness, consequent upon tropical evaporation.

Its direction is determined by the narrow passage it has to negotiate in escaping from the Gulf of Mexico. Its effect in tempering our climate is best illustrated by the fact that the coldest place in the world, where the thermometer is commonly 50 degrees below zero, in eastern Siberia, is in the same latitude as the Orkneys.

Buddhism
Buddhism was founded by the Hindu sage Gautama, who lived in the fifth century B. C. and was the son of a king. When about thirty he escaped from the palace and became a religious mendicant—searching for spiritual peace. For 40 years he preached his gospel over northern India, combating the teaching of the Brahmins and making many converts. His disciples continued his work, spreading his doctrine throughout India, Tibet, Ceylon, Burma and Assam. It was adopted in China in A. D. and extended from there to Korea, Japan, etc. In India proper it is now nearly extinct as a religion, except on the Himalaya slopes in the native states of Nepal and Bhutan.

Domestic System of England
The domestic system of England is the name applied to the system of household industry which preceded the factory system. There was little factory work previous to the early eighteenth century. Industrial projects, particularly textile, were largely manufactured in the home under the personal supervision either of the merchant or his agent. Due to this, home were variable and wages were unregulated. This resulted in a system known as sweating.

The Rif Country
The Rif country is located in northern Morocco along the Mediterranean littoral. Its native name is Re-Rif. This is the part of Morocco which forms a Spanish protectorate, the rest of the country being under French control. It is inhabited by fierce and warlike native tribes, who arose against the Spanish rule several years ago under the able leadership of Abdel Krim. Spain put down the rebellion at great cost and heavy loss of life.

Snow and Flowers

In a country which shows such a great variety of geological formations as Switzerland, the seasons cannot be clearly delineated or their time fixed as elsewhere. Here winter and spring always overlap each other, so that all fields and gardens in full bloom are neighbors, and startling contrasts are achieved by nature.

September First is the last day to pay your taxes for 1932 and prior years without interest or penalty!

AND now, after years of postponement and delay, the time has come for you to pay your taxes.

You can't put off this duty any longer. Your peace of mind and domestic security demand it.

Fortunate, indeed, are the tax-payers of Michigan. A thoughtful legislature has acted boldly to lighten their burden. Never before has the tax-payer met with such prime consideration.

You, who still owe taxes for 1932 and previous years can now pay in the original amount. Although years have passed you need pay no interest or penalties, here alone saving yourself from 27% to 45%, and even more.

But your law-makers have not stopped at merely cutting interest and penalties. Well they know that debts piled up with the years can not be met over night, even if the totals are reduced. So They Created The "10-Year Plan"!

Now you can pay your back taxes for 1932 and prior years so as to take advantage of big and worthwhile savings. If you cannot pay in full at this time you can pay as little as one-tenth and pay the balance over a period of years, with only a small carrying charge.

September first is the last day to pay back taxes for 1932 and prior years without interest or penalties. Do not delay! Act Now! Your County Treasurer will quickly tell you the exact amount of your tax. He will accept your payments and restore you to good standing as a faithful tax-payer of a great State.

Question And Answer Dept.

Ques.—Does the United States or the Dominion of Canada own Niagara Falls?
Ans.—Both countries own Niagara Falls, since an imaginary line running through the center marks the boundary dividing the United States and the Dominion of Canada.
Ques.—Can you tell me the origin of the expression "Get your goat", or "Get my goat"? And what does it mean?
Ans.—This expression means "to irritate, annoy or make angry, etc." The word "goat" is a shortening of the word "goatee," the chin tuft or pointed beard. It is considered a most humiliating insult to pull one's goatee or beard, and from this circumstance we get the phrase "to get one's goat."
Ques.—I was recently criticized in my English for saying "the patient feels badly." What is wrong with that?
Ans.—There is often a doubt in the mind of a speaker or writer whether an adjective or an adverb should be used after such verbs as "seem," "look," "feel" and "smell." If the manner of the action is meant, then the adverb should be used. Otherwise the adjective should be used. In the case mentioned in your question the speaker does not intend to express the manner of feeling. He does not wish to say that the patient does his feeling in a bad manner. Therefore the proper expression would be "The patient feels bad."
Ques.—How did "G. O. P." come to be applied to the Republican party? And what does it mean?
Ans.—"G. O. P." as applied to the Republican party, means "Grand Old Party." Originally it was meant as an affectionate name to the party of Abraham Lincoln, but it is now applied to the Republican party by persons of all political affiliations without any regard for the literal significance of the meaning of "G. O. P." Its origin is not known for certain.
Ques.—Is it true that James A. Garfield, who was elected President in 1880, was a United States senator, a member of the House of Representatives and President all at the same time? If so, how could he serve?
Ans.—At the time Garfield was a member of the House of Representatives he was elected by the Ohio legislature to be a United States senator from that state (at that time U. S. senators were elected by state legislatures). But before he took his seat in the Senate he was nominated and elected President of the United States. Therefore, immediately after the election he was nominally a representative, a senator-elect and President-elect of the United States.
Ques.—How many national holidays are there in the United States? And what are they?
Ans.—There are none. Congress has not the power to fix national holidays. Christmas, Fourth of July and Armistice day are three that are universally observed by the United States government, but they are not legally national holidays.
Ques.—I would like to know if insanity or feeble-mindedness has a tendency to run in a family.
Ans.—Most forms of insanity originate in the individual. Some forms of mental weakness or feeble-mindedness are inherited. This condition is often the outcome of too close inbreeding, such as the marriage of a brother and sister, or first cousins.
Ques.—Do all Supreme Court judges in the United States wear robes when in session?
Ans.—No. The members of the United States Supreme Court sitting in Washington, D. C., are the only members of any court in this nation that wear robes.
Ques.—Does the President of the United States pay income tax on his salary?
Ans.—Yes. He pays approximately $25,000 income tax on a salary of $75,000 a year.
Ques.—I am told that the life of a mosquito is only 24 hours. Is this a fact?
Ans.—No. The life of mosquitoes varies in the different species, of which there are over one hundred. The ordinary biting kind can live several months without biting anybody.
Japan's Armament Industries
During the Nineteenth century there were in Japan no private industries of war. Government arsenals manufactured all of the arms. After the Russian war, however, the government permitted the founding of the Japan Steel Works, which was the first and only privately owned arms factor in the country. It was capitalized at 15,000,000 yen, and a considerable block of shares was acquired by Vickers.

Fish Must Have Air Bladder

FORD SALES INCREASE

Abruptly reversing Wayne County automobile sales trends in June, when sales generally showed a decrease in comparison with June, 1934 figures, Ford V-8 sales for July of this year registered an increase over those in the same month a year ago, according to official registration figures.
Ford V-8 passenger car sales led the way to the July boost, 2,807 being registered during the month, as compared to 2,718 in July of 1934. Sales of trucks and commercial cars showed a slight drop from last July, but the passenger car increase was more than sufficient to boost the total figure for July of this year above last July's mark—3,089 as compared to 2,972.
Official recapitulations for the state of Michigan revealed that Ford V-8 sales in the first half of 1935 were 60 per cent greater than those for the same period in 1934.

"SURE
I'M BRAGGIN'
ABOUT IT...
I DON'T SEE
HOW I EVER
GOT ALONG WITHOUT IT"

"How's it happen you think so much of that truck? What's it got that's different?"
"Well, for one thing, it has an 80-horsepower V-8 engine. That's different... and not only different but BETTER! What's more, it has torque-tube drive, a strong, husky frame, a big, new heavy-duty clutch and new brakes that stop quicker and wear longer. But the things that I like about it are the RESULTS of all these features. I'm here to tell you V-8 Performance and V-8 Economy are just what the farmer needs today."

"There's a lot in what you say. Ford ought to know the kind of truck the farmer needs. He's a farmer himself and he's always built a good truck for the farm."
"Yes... and he has built MORE trucks than any other manufacturer in the world. Don't forget that! If you're as smart as I think you are, you'll go see the Ford dealer and ask him for an 'On-the-Job' Test of the new Ford V-8 Truck with your own loads, over your own roads. He will let you TRY it before you BUY it!"

Trouble an' Sunshine
by Lawrence Hawthorne

It takes a bit o' trouble now an' then
To help us learn the ways o' life, I guess;
A spell o' cloudy weather teaches men
To understand what brings 'em happiness.
No person ever yet has seen it rain
Without the sunshine comin' later on;
But some folks get the notion grieved an' pain
Are here 't' stay, an' every joy is gone.

Seems like there's plenty more o' cheer than care
For them that keep their spirits brave an' true;
Seems like the days 're mostly bright an' fair,
An' clouds don't often cover all the blue!
An' so, a bit o' trouble now an' then
Should help us prize our bleasin' all the more;
An' when good-luck is growin' us again
We'll find things even brighter than before!

Veterans Lead Busy Life at CCC Camp
According to A. R. Vogel, Camp
Supt. of the Portage Lake CCC Camp on the waterway project, the veterans constituting the personnel of the camp, who moved in about two weeks ago, have started their first week with the same determination they demonstrated in 1917 and 1918. They have shown a willingness to lend a hand that, as stated by Mr. Vogel, "will eventually make this park one that the National Park Service can ever be proud of."
Their first week of effort has resulted in the following achievements:
Belden Koch house wrecked and material salvaged for permanent park buildings. First in Waterloo project to be dismantled.
One and one-half miles of power line completed to camp.
Three-quarters mile temporary road
to camp completed.
Two hundred acres of poison ivy eradicated.
Fifty half completed in low area separating two woods at permanent camp parking.
Survey completed for beach and entrance road.
Occupancy of the Mill Lake CCC Camp continues to be delayed by the failure to strike water in the well that is being drilled. The drillers are now down more than 200 feet and it is believed they are near water.
According to H. A. Tamsley, Camp
Supt., as soon as the well is completed a detail of 85 Veterans will come to the camp to prepare for the full contingent which will arrive about one week later.

Twilight League News
Mayor Electric and Congregationals will play Friday evening for the playoff of the second series.
The game between the Congrega-tionals and Trojans on Monday evening was called at the end of four innings on account of darkness, and will be played next Monday evening.
If the Trojans win this game it will make them champions of the third series. If the Congregationals win, St. Pauls and Trojans will be tied for first place and it will be necessary for them to play for the championship, and the game would be played Tuesday night.
The first series was won by the Trojans.
At the beginning of the season it was planned to play a "Little World's Series" at the close of the season, with the winning teams of the three series participating. If this plan is carried out it will no doubt be necessary to schedule daytime games because of the short days. Final decision in the matter will be made by officials of the Twilight League.

Payment of Delinquent Taxes Shows Increase

Michigan's thousands of homeowners, responding to the State's appeal to "pay back taxes and save your homes," are rushing to redeem their properties before September 1, deadline for payment of taxes for 1933 and prior years without interest or penalties.
Payments of delinquent taxes throughout the state are twice as heavy as they were a year ago, according to Gus T. Hartman, Deputy Auditor General.
"Fifty-five counties show payments totaling $588,314 for the week ending August 10," Hartman reports. "In the same period last year, these counties collected only $288,451. The money is rolling in faster every day."
"Actual tax payments do not tell the real story," he said. "While a majority of property owners are paying their back taxes in full, many are taking advantage of the Moore-Hol-beck plan, which permits payment of taxes for 1933 and prior years over a period of 10 years without penalty.
More than $4,000,000 in delinquencies have been put back in the paying column under this plan in the first half of this month and the rush has just begun. This means that small homeowners are taking advantage of the easy payment plan and reclaiming properties which have long been threatened with sale by the Auditor General."

County Treasurers All Over Michigan

report they have their forces working nights and Sundays to keep up with the rush. Many of them have issued appeals to the public to mail pay-

To Grow More Wheat Under New Contract

An estimated decrease in the domestic wheat crop for 1935, as reported August 9, has caused officials of the agricultural adjustment administration to change the requested reduction of wheat plantings for 1936 from 15 to 5 per cent, according to H. A.
Wallace, secretary of agriculture.
A plan to continue the crop control program for wheat during the next four years was announced recently.
Under this plan, growers would sign contracts to grow the percentage of their basic acreage that appeared to be needed for domestic consumption and for export. The reduction announced at that time as 15 per cent but the latest crop reports indicate that a larger proportion of the basic acreage possibly may be needed.
This change in the amount of wheat to be grown is in line with the federal policy of making ample provision for all possible needs but to avoid the production of unmarketable surpluses.
The carry over of wheat on July 1st was the nominal amount of 152,000,000 bushels. Severe frost damage to spring wheat in the West lowers the prospects of yields for the present harvest, according to George R. Parrell, director of the grain division of the AAA.
Contracts between the secretary of agriculture and Michigan wheat growers for the next four crop years will be ready for signatures within a short time.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Kentucky Jones, veteran cowboy, attends the inquest into the death of John Mason, banker and landowner, in the town of Waterman, Mich. The majority of the district, which is supposed to have been accidental, Jean, daughter of Campo Ragland, owner of the Bar Hook ranch, with a strong desire to see the murderer, mysteriously passes to him the bullet which had killed Mason. She is attracted to him from the evidence during the inquest. Kentucky goes to work on the Bar Hook ranch.

CHAPTER II.—The verdict is accidental death. Sheriff Hopper, apparently dissatisfied, invites Jones, knowing his shrewdness, to investigate the case. Jones has decided to do that on his own hook, and refuses to work with the sheriff. Bob Elliot, owner of the "Red" ranch, adjoining the Bar Hook, apparently saw Jean pass the bullet to Jones, and starts an altercation. Jones knocks him out.

CHAPTER III.—Bob Elliot, with a shadow of legal right, drives his cattle on the Bar Hook range. Lee Bishop, Ragland's ranch boss, expostulates, and Bill McCord, Elliot's foreman, insults him. Jones, seeing an opportunity to kill him in "self defense," but Bishop is unarmed, and a tragedy is therefore averted.

CHAPTER IV.—Ragland's Elliot's turning his cattle onto the Bar Hook range, Bishop and Jones are astounded by Ragland's indifference. Ragland, Kentucky to try to induce Jean to arouse her father, Jones, sensing that the girl is in love with him, offers sympathy. He tells her that the bullet which killed Mason was his own. He tells her that the bullet which killed Mason was his own. He tells her that the bullet which killed Mason was his own.

Yet, until the sheriff could be contacted, there seemed to be nothing that they could do that night but wait.

Kentucky had hoped to satisfy him self as to what had actually happened in the Mason case before the first sizable march of events brought disaster to the Bar Hook. Instead, all the time would know tomorrow that the Bar Hook had been the scene, not of an accidental death, but of a murder, the result of which promised to ruin half the brands of Wolf Bench.

He was unable to make headway toward rearrangement of what he knew. It would have been easy to suggest that Joe St. Marie, who had died about his whereabouts at the hour of the crime, might have killed Zack Sanders as the result of some obscure quarrel and that Kentucky Jones, because Mason was a witness. This did not, however, explain Jean Ragland's theft of the bullet that killed Mason; nor her alarm over the fact that a picture had been stolen from a frame; nor her anxiety to conceal this loss from her father.

What he knew was that Jean was mysteriously involved in a murder which was a disaster to all of Wolf Bench; and that as a result of this murder the 88 brands were pouring across the Bar Hook range. For the present he had to admit that he was sure of nothing more. He closed his mind to the puzzle and tried to drowse. But presently he found himself roused sharply to a new wakefulness. For some moments he lay listening intently, unable to decide what was wrong. Then there came to his ears the slip of cold wood on wood. He knew at once that someone's hand had fumbled in an effort to take down the bars of a gate in silence.

Kentucky Jones stepped to the open window. Against the clean sparkle of the snow all snowless objects stood out in etched relief. Near the down-country trail a horse and rider appeared, to disappear at once behind the stone pump house. Kentucky swore under his breath. He had been unable to recognize the rider, but the horse he knew—a tall black with a long white stocking on the off fore leg. It was the horse Joe St. Marie had ridden that day.

Kentucky Jones returned to his blankets with his nerves on a peculiar edge. He rolled a cigarette, and thought of Joe St. Marie.

The crack brone rider was a man of peculiarly mixed type. Almost no trace of accent or guttural came into his speech. St. Marie was unusual in that he made no effort to conceal the dark stain in his blood. The big steel conchos on his five-luch belt and the silver work of his spurs and bit were barbarian touches hardly ever seen in the Wolf Bench hindrock any more.

So little further insight into this man was afforded by better acquaintance that many must have supposed that this was all there was to know about Joe St. Marie. But Kentucky was not so sure. St. Marie was too compactly self-sufficient, he thought, to be so easily known.

He was able to fix upon one immediate probability. If Joe St. Marie had gone out, he would presently return. And he meant to jump the range before he could have used any number of subterfuges for giving himself a long start before his absence was noted. St. Marie would be back that night; and, since he had not bothered to pick a fresh horse, he probably did not mean to be long gone. Kentucky dressed, and propped himself up in the corner of his bunk to watch the pump house trail.

An hour passed; more than an hour. Looking at his watch he was astonished to learn that it was only quarter past eleven o'clock. Sometimes he had dozed, but he was certain that he would have heard St. Marie's horse if it had come in. He smoked again, and waited ten minutes more.

Upon the snow, a spot appeared. It puffed up, shifted and separated, and he saw that it was not one horse but two, and the watcher made out that the second horse appeared to be a pinto, for he could not see the animal's fore legs, and thus knew that they must be white. Suddenly he knew that he was looking at the pinto horse of Bob Elliot.

Kentucky Jones spat through his teeth, and anger rose into his head like a rising wind. Here was something definite and conclusive upon which a man could lay his hands. The Bar Hook rider, whom he was now certain was Joe St. Marie, had ridden out to confer with the boss of the 88. He promised himself that within five minutes he would know exactly what that exclusive saddle conference meant.

The pinto horse now turned, going back the way it had come, and the other rider, cutting on, was lost to view again in the dip of the ground.

Kentucky Jones took up the long barreled Colt which had so suddenly emerged from the bottom of his war bag, stepped through the window, and ran to the corner of the house. Against the far wall stood a stable shed of plastered pine. To this he made his way, keeping it between himself and the trail.

Within the long shed, across one end, was fixed a horizontal log, used as a saddle rack. He knew the rider would return his saddle here. Beside it, in black shadow, he took his post.

It seemed to him that the night was silent for a long time before finally he heard again, close at hand, the small crunching complaint of the snow under the hoofs of a walking horse.

Flattening himself against the wall, he could see neither horse nor rider, but the pony was so close to the stable shelter. The animal was still out of his angle of vision as he heard the rider drag the saddle off, not three yards from where he stood.

"Put Up Your Hands."

Then close beside him the rider appeared, and for a moment was a silhouette against the snow; a figure made shapeless by the shouldered saddle.

Within the stable he could see nothing at all, though the other eased the saddle upon the rack so close at hand that a swinging stirrup struck his knee. So little space separated them that he could hear the rider breathe, could have reached him by raising his hand.

Kentucky Jones said softly, "Put up your hands."

He heard the breath jerk in the other's throat; and for a moment they stood in utter silence, as if neither of them any longer breathed at all. He could not tell whether or not he had been obeyed.

The other said, "Who—who is it?" The wind went out of Kentucky Jones. The voice was hardly more than a whisper, twisted almost past recognition by shock and strain; but he would have known it anywhere in the world as the voice of Jean Ragland.

definitely had he expected Joe St. Marie. Then he saw her away; and he stepped forward in time to catch her in his arms.

Even then she would have slipped to the ground if he had not held her up. The starch had gone out of her and she stood limp, not inert but trembling violently.

"Don't—don't ever do anything like that again," she gasped at last.

"Good Lord! Do you think I had any idea it was you? I thought—I thought you were Joe St. Marie."

"I saw someone slide out of here on the horse St. Marie rode today. I saw that horse come back, and I saw its rider talk to Bob Elliot, on his big pinto."

The shock of surprise she had sustained in the dark was turning into anger. "And what did you think you were going to do about it?" she demanded.

"That hardly matters now, does it?" "I asked you a question," she said hotly.

"I'll answer it then. If anybody but you had gone wolf prowling out of here in the night to powwow with your father's worst enemy, and I caught him at it—I'd have had the reason for that out of him if I had to choke it out of him with these two hands."

Jean's anger wilted. "You're bad luck for me," she whispered. "Everything that you have anything to do with goes wrong for me."

"Maybe," he said, "that's because I don't know what you're trying to do."

"Why should I tell you what I'm trying to do?"

"No reason; except that it seems to work out badly when you don't."

She turned to him sharply. "I can tell you this," she said. "I know what I'm doing here. I know more about what's happening here than you can possibly know. Can't you trust that?"

"Haven't you any faith in me at all?" "You still won't tell me what you're trying to do?"

"I can't! I can't possibly do that."

All day long the Bar Hook had tried to reach Sheriff Hopper without success. The land itself seemed somewhere among the ranchers who had no phones. Campo Ragland, yes, unwilling to take up the death of Sanders with its definite implication that Mason had been murdered—with all of the deputies—And the case hung fire, awaiting Hopper's return to Waterman.

But when word reached the sheriff at last, two hours after Jack, he lost no time in getting on the job. He drove steaming into the Bar Hook within an hour of his first notice.

Floyd Hopper came into the kitchen briskly. His eyes were wary, and he did not smile at all.

"So poor Zack has turned up at last," he said, warming his hands over the stove. "How come you to find him, Lee?"

"My horse kept shying one particular place," Lee Bishop said. "Soon as Kentucky called it to my notice I began to wonder if there wasn't a dead coyote or something under the snow. So Kentucky and me looked, and there he was."

Soon as Kentucky called it to my notice," the sheriff repeated. "So it was really Kentucky Jones who thought of looking in this place—is that right?"

"Well, yes, though he only said—"

"All right. Could you make out how he died?"

"Fighting," said Bishop. "He was lying in a kind of heap, face down, but partly on his side. He'd been shot twice, once in the left side, and once in the back. His gun was under him in his right hand, and it was fired three times."

"His gun belt?" began the sheriff. "He didn't wear a gun belt—didn't own one, far's I know—just carried his gun in his pocket, I guess."

The sheriff nodded. "Let's see his gun, then." As Lee Bishop went out, the sheriff turned to Kentucky Jones. "Could you tell which way Zack was firing when he went down?"

Kentucky exhaled smoke and shook his head. "A man's liable to spin and fall most any way, when he's hit."

"Zack was lying beside a rock, wasn't he? Now, the trail from down-country comes past that stone pump house. Did it look to you like he might have took cover behind that rock, to fire down the trail?"

"That could hardly be," Kentucky answered. "Because he lay on the down-trail side."

"Which way?" The sheriff broke off abruptly as Lee Bishop returned to the room with Zack Sanders' six-gun. He took a quick stride forward and took the gun in his hand.

"What's the matter?" Campo Ragland demanded instantly.

The sheriff drew a deep breath and blew it out through puffed cheeks. The eager intensity of inquiry had gone out of him. "I never have any luck," he grunted. "This d—n thing has sure worked out to make a fool of everybody!"

"Nothing, except the caliber," the sheriff said. "It's a forty-five, that's what's the matter with it. How much snow was there under Zack Sanders?"

"None," said Bishop.

"Lee," said the sheriff, "you found Mason too; could you judge which was killed first? Sanders or Mason?"

"I wouldn't be able to draw any difference."

"Uh, huh," said Sheriff Hopper. "This here is the devil. When I first heard of this, I was hopeful we were out of the woods. Naturally the first thing that came to mind was that Mason and Sanders shot it out, and both dropped. But the caliber of Zack's gun—it throws that theory out."

"Shucks—right back on the double suicide theory," said Kentucky. "But wait a minute!"

"What's the matter?"

"The gun Mason carried was the same caliber as this gun of Sanders' here," Kentucky pointed out. "It passed at the inquest that Mason was killed by the accidental discharge of his own gun. How is it we're so certain now that Mason was not killed by that caliber?"

"The sheriff pulled a pipe from his pocket and rammed tobacco into it with a disgusted thumb. "Because," he said, "Mason was not killed by the discharge of his own gun. John Mason was murdered."

They stared at him, and Kentucky Jones heard the breath catch in Jean Ragland's throat.

"How long have you known this?" Campo Ragland demanded at last.

"I've known it," said the sheriff, "since the day of Mason's death."

"Then you knew at the inquest—" Sheriff Floyd Hopper did not avoid the challenging stare of the cattleman. "Yes," he said, "I knew it at the inquest."

"I'm d—d if I see your idea, Floyd!" said Campo. "What I want to know is how much more you didn't tell the jury!"

"Not much, Campo. John Mason was killed by two shots—not one from a gun of lighter caliber than forty-five. Tomorrow the whole country will know that—and our chances of getting the killer are cut in two." He extended his hands over the stove, but promptly withdrew them again—and instead peeled off his coat.

"Naturally," Kentucky put in equally. "It's easier to catch a criminal who thinks he's safe."

"And easier yet," said Campo irritably, "to explain away a killing as an accident!"

"Yes," said the sheriff without heat. He returned Ragland's stare through the smoke cloud from his pipe. "But I also had one or two other reasons. For one thing, this is some worse than just a one-man killing, Campo. It's killed the whole of Wolf Bench out of the edge of a general smash."

"We all have reason to know that," Ragland growled.

"All right. Suppose now somebody that don't know much about it picks himself out a first-class suspect. Suppose, for instance, somebody just goes around Wolf Bench pointing out that Lee Bishop just happens to be the man that found both Mason and Sanders—both dead hidden under the snow. There's been many a blow-up on less evidence than that—and with less feeling back of it than this is going to raise up here!"

Lee Bishop said nothing. Campo was eyeing Sheriff Hopper narrowly. "Somewhere, Floyd," he said, "it seems like to me you haven't come to your real reason yet."

"No?" said Sheriff Hopper. He took a deep drag on his pipe. "Then I'll give you just one reason more. Maybe you've forgot, Campo, that John Mason was shot down within a dozen horse-jumps of your own house here; and—by singular coincidence—that neither you, nor your daughter, nor a single one of your hands, was even within earshot of the gun."

After a moment Campo said in a low voice, "Floyd, what do you mean by that?"

"Campo, I know that John Mason was your close friend. I know that you and your brand are as bad hurt as anybody, is, almost. And with my experience, I can reason that the thing couldn't have happened if any of you had been here. But most people hate coincidences, Campo."

Ragland stood up, his face blank. "Floyd, if you're saying you smothered that inquest as a favor to me—"

"Maybe," said the sheriff, "I should just have let you explain all that to the rimrock in your own way."

Campo Ragland sat down, his combative snarl abruptly deflated. "Floyd," he said, "you shouldn't have done it." "Of course to h—I shouldn't have done it!" said the sheriff, his irritability coming to the surface again. "A fine box I'm in, now that Zack Sanders is found!"

"Well, anyway, Floyd," Campo mumbled, "I appreciate what you tried to do."

"All right," the sheriff accepted, "but that you don't seem to me, Campo, that after this you'd be justified if you'd stop holding information back."

"What do you mean by that?" "Tonight over the phone I asked you if anything else peculiar had happened. You told me 'No.' But I happen to know that you got home here

"Tuesday to find that this house had been searched."

Kentucky Jones had never seen Sheriff Floyd Hopper show so good advantage as he did tonight. He was the man in the saddle here. He sat now sprawled behind his smoke, his eyes early and red like the eyes of a bear.

"What house?" said Campo Ragland at last.

"This house," said the sheriff. "What are you trying to do, Campo? It doesn't get you anything to stall with me. This house was searched and something was taken from it."

"If you know that something was taken from this house," Campo Ragland said, "it's because you had it taken yourself."

Hopper shook his head. "All I know is that something is gone from here—and never mind how I know that. I'll have to satisfy you that I do know it."

"It seems," said Campo Ragland, "that you know a lot of things that nobody thought you knew. I'm thinking that maybe you know a lot of things more."

"What you'd better be finding out is this, Campo," said Sheriff Hopper. "I'm no fool, even if I am the duly elected sheriff of Waterman county."

"You could do a whole lot worse than play a straight game with me."

Campo's retort was mildly explosive. "Straight game? Of course I'm playing a straight game. I'm willing to turn face up with cards I hold—they're always face up. It's not my fault when I hold very d—n few cards."

"What I'm saying is—" The sheriff was interrupted by the opening of the outer door. For a moment he hesitated, hand on the latch, obviously startled by the presence of the sheriff.

"Shut that door," said Campo; and Joe St. Marie came in and closed the door slowly behind him.

"What are you doing here?" Joe St. Marie swung off his hat and stood staring blankly from Ragland to Hopper and back again. "I lamed my horse," he said. "I had to leave the other boys to take the beef on to Waterman. It would have spoiled the cayuse to go on."

Now Campo Ragland seemed to notice what Kentucky Jones had perceived at once; that Joe St. Marie's face was the color of half-cured clay; and the brace-rider's explanation of his presence, if not altogether satisfactory in itself, had served to draw attention to the quickness of his breath. Campo said sharply, "You hurt, Joe?"

"No sir. I'm all right. Well—I don't feel so good, at that."

"You never feel so good," Lee Bishop grunted.

Campo Ragland hesitated, puzzled. "You want to speak to me, Joe?" he asked at last.

"Who? Me? No, sir."

"Well, see what you can find your self to eat. Wait a minute—what have you given your horse?"

"Nothing yet, Mr. Ragland, sir."

"How many times do I have to tell you fellows," Ragland began, "Well, let it pass. Go feed your horse."

"Now?"

Joe St. Marie moved reluctantly at Ragland's command, and at the door he stopped, hesitating. "Though he seemed unable to speak, it was as plain as if he had spoken that there was in his mind a protest which he could not—or did not dare—put into words."

Kentucky Jones thought he had never seen the Indian blood of the man stand out so strongly. The breadth of face at the cheekbones and the surface lights in St. Marie's eyes suggested the Indian always; but the blunt strength of his features ordinarily offset this impression. Just now, though, a great part of that strength had been no better than a mask.

"Well?" said Campo softly.

St. Marie opened the door and went out, shoulders lunched as if against the great unseen pressure of a non-existent wind.

When he had left the room there was a moment or two of silence. Then the sheriff asked, "What's he afraid of, Campo?"

"Floyd, I haven't got the slightest idea. It might be the man is sick."

"That man ain't sick," said Hopper. "The blood was already coming back to his face. Campo, something has happened to that man, just a few minutes before he came into this room."

"Do you suppose—" Campo began.

Somewhere outside the house a gun crashed; and though they could not judge either its exact direction or distance, they knew that it had been fired within a hundred yards. For a moment they listened. Then Lee Bishop jumped for the door, and they all seemed to move at once.

"Wait, Lee," Campo Ragland snapped. "Blow out those lights."

Floyd, Kentucky! Jean, you stay in here, you hear me?"

Campo Ragland, unarmed, led the way to the corral where Joe St. Marie was most likely to have left his horse. This horse was there, head to the bars, waiting for the feed that had not yet come; but Joe St. Marie was not in sight.

Campo's voice raised in a hoarse shout, an abrupt strange sound in all that silence of snow and rock and stars. "You, Joe! St. Marie! Where you at? Sing out, man!"

The silence held for a moment more, and Campo had whirled upon the sheriff, when Joe St. Marie spoke in an odd muffled voice, unexpectedly nearby. "Yes, sir—here I am."

Tea From China

The use of tea from first discovered by the Chinese in the third dynasty, at the close of the Han dynasty, and history is full of quaint legends regarding its inception. Though tea growing has been transplanted to almost every Asiatic country, the Chinese still claim that there is something in the climate and soil of that country that produces tea with special fragrance and flavor.

Two Sabbaths a Week

The Abyssinians are the only Christians in the world who observe two Sabbaths each week—Saturday as well as Sunday—and who have made a saint of Pontius Pilate, the Roman procurator who ordered the crucifixion of Christ, writes C. I. Barrows, Providence, R. I., in Collier's Weekly.

Invention of Friction Match

The first true friction match was not invented until 1827 by a man named John Walker of Stockton-on-Tees, Durham, England. Ignition of sulphur and phosphorous by friction was discovered by Godfrey Haukwitz in 1780, but it was 150 years after this discovery was applied to matches.

Ford 'Guest House' 35 Per Cent Finished

DEARBORN, Michigan.—To accommodate the increasing number of tourists who, the year around, travel to Dearborn to see Ford basic operations at the Rouge Plant, Henry Ford is re-erecting there what was the huge, gear-shaped rotunda of Ford Exposition at the Chicago World's Fair. It will form, when finished, the visitors' entrance to the plant, which, in itself, is a veritable permanent world's fair, and the greatest single industry in the world.

No Running Over Bridge
When, long ago, the city fathers of Luray built themselves a bridge across a nearby creek they must have built a flimsy structure. For they made a law, still on the statute books of the Virginia state, which stated that no boy should trot or run across the bridge even if he were barefooted.

The Beautiful Mosaic

SLOWLY and painstakingly the old Florentine mosaic maker placed the tiny pieces of glass in the hollow in the black marble. Before him was a picture of a great cathedral; and it was this picture which he was reproducing. Oblivious to all about him, the artist studied the details of his model. Now and then he surveyed the pieces of colored glass upon his table. Then, carefully selecting by color and texture, piece by piece, he fashioned and fitted the materials into place. Some of the pieces were so small that they were hair-like in size and delicacy. It was observed that he spent a great deal of time studying his model.

An interested watcher during one afternoon was told that it would require many months to complete the small piece of mosaic which was then being made, and another completed piece of work was displayed. The work was so well done that even with a strong magnifying glass it was almost impossible to see where the tiny bits were joined together. Into one harmonious whole the colors, the lights and shades, were blended, and the picture of a beautiful cathedral had been reproduced in glass.

The thinker will find herein a very inspiring and valuable lesson. It may be said that we are all fashioning our lives and experiences into some sort of a mosaic, and that each one is copying a model of his own choosing. One need not think, however, that anyone is a helpless victim of circumstances. Instead, many are proving daily that human experiences may be made more beautiful and harmonious and more free from discord, by diligent effort along right lines.

Christ Jesus gave all mankind the model by which to be guided in daily experience when he said, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect."

(Matthew 5:48). The perfection of the Father in heaven is never disputed, and through one's application to the study of the nature of this perfect Father one may learn to think more truly and to follow a greater sense of peace and harmony.

The teachings of Christian Science, insist upon perfection as the goal of all endeavor. Mary Baker Eddy writes in her textbook of Christian Science, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 250), "The Christlike understanding of scientific being and divine healing includes a perfect Principle and Idea, a perfect God and perfect man, as the basis of thought and demonstration."

Those who have accepted this statement, and have persistently worked from the standpoint it presents, have been healed physically, financially, morally, and have found their homes becoming more harmonious and their days more joy-filled.

Are we satisfied with anything which is imperfect in our activities, in our characters, in our experiences? If we are not, then it is comforting to realize that each one, if he desires, may improve that which is lacking in right results. Some need to be healed of sickness, some are experiencing limitations along different lines, some are lonely, and some would like to know how to be and to do good. Any inharmonious condition can be improved or healed by insisting upon perfection as the goal, and by persisting in efforts to reach that goal.

After the mosaic maker's careful, painstaking study of his model, he gave his attention only to the materials which he had placed upon his work table, and which he knew were sufficient to reproduce the beautiful picture. If he had looked out of the window at the broken glass and stones in the dirty street, and if he had thought of making mosaic with them, he might have been discouraged at the outset. But he was interested only in the proper materials for his work.

If we have perfection for our model, and if we are carefully and prayerfully depending upon our perfect Father in heaven for guidance, then we, too, are working only with correct materials and shall gain the desired results. Our Father has provided an abundance of right ideas with which we may work toward perfection, and these ideas include kindness, joy, consideration, patience, wisdom, and love. We need not allow our attention to be attracted to false beliefs such as fear, hurry, irritation, impatience, apathy, idleness any more than the mosaic maker allowed his gaze to wander to the common glass and stones in the street.

Nor can we forget the very tiny, sometimes hair-like pieces of glass which were fitted into the marble. Sometimes apparently trivial things need serious attention, but as our thoughts become habitually more considerate, more kind, less fearful, we shall realize that all our efforts will become wiser and more worth while. As unnecessary and undesirable experiences are eliminated, the joy of greater harmony becomes apparent, until, even as the picture grew under the hand of the artist, so the blending together of progressive experiences will bring to us and to others peace and harmony, joy and inspiration.—The Christian Science Monitor.

The Last Duel

No definite information is available on the date and place of the last duel in this country. A bill prohibiting dueling in the District of Columbia was passed in 1890 and since the Civil war stringent laws have been passed in all the states against dueling. The practice became obsolete in this country decades ago, but it was a gradual disappearance and no doubt many duels were fought secretly even after the passage of some of the state laws.

Ingratitude to the Horse

Man's ingratitude to the horse, his aged servant and companion, is recorded in a number of cases in which whalers, explorers and other expeditionary parties have deserted their animals on barren islands. In 1924 a whaling ship, stopping at a small, uninhabited island off New Zealand, found a friendly old horse that had spent ten lonely years there by himself, having been left behind by his "friends" when they sailed for home just before the war.—Chittler's Weekly.

Bounty Jumpers

During the Civil War premiums on bounties were paid for enlistments. Bounty jumpers were those who enlisted and deserted soon after they received the reward. Many of them enlisted several times under different names.

Reveries in Architecture

A reverie in church architecture is usually the barren back of the altar which is adorned with sculptured work comprising the tabernacle, niches, statues and the like. In some great cathedrals in England, such as Durham, Winchester and Saint Albans, the reveries in a mass of elaborate carving which reaches nearly to the vaulting.

Meerschaum is Stone

Meerschaum (the material from which smoking pipes are made) is not wood—it is stone. The word "meerschaum" is a Dutch word meaning "sea foam." It is a clay-like stone of magnesium which, when thoroughly dry, will float on water. Meerschaum is exported from Kerkira in the Minor, where it is dug from shallow pits.
