H. S. Holmes Killed In Fall at Milling Co. Last Thursday

Hundreds of Chelsea citizens and friends from many other Michigan and out-state cities were present at funeral services held Sunday afternoon, to pay their respects to Howard S. Holmes, who was instantly killed in a fall at the Chelsea Milling Company last Thursday forenoon.

Services were held at the Holmes home on East Middle street, where tribute was paid to the man who had been a lifelong resident of the community, was the friend of everyone with whom he came in contact, either in a business way or through social connections, and who was highly respected as a leading citizen, as a progressive business man and as a benefactor of all worthy causes within the community.

Countless floral tributes were mute evidence of the respect and esteem of Mr. Holmes' large circle of friends and business associates. Added to this were the sincere expressions of sympathy spoken in behalf of the man whose death was a distinct loss to the community to which he had devoted his life's efforts.

Mr. Holmes was instantly killed about 9:30 Thursday forenoon, October 23, 1936, when he fell 70 feet down a passenger elevator shaft of a grain storage tank at the mill. Finding that one of the storage tanks had been overheating, he had gone to the top of the tower to read a meter, but what caused him to fall from the elevator has not been determined. His body was found by Wirt Ives, a workman at the mill.

Mr. Holmes was a lifelong resident of Chelsea, where he was born June 2, 1886, the son of the late Harmon S. and Edith (Cushman) Holmes. After graduating from Chelsea high school, he entered the University of Michigan, graduating from the Literary department in 1907. During his college days he was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, serving at one time as its business manager.

He was responsible for the presentation to the Chelsea high school of the University honor trophy.

As a recognition of his services to the University, he was elected as Alumni president of the class of 1907 for a five year term, thereby placing him in charge of his class activities during the University's Centennial celebration in June, 1937.

Mr. Holmes was president of the Chelsea Milling Co. and the Michigan Millers' association. He was a director of the Chelsea State Bank and a former member of the Board of Education.

CELEBRATE 25th ANNIVERSARY
Mr. and Mrs. David Mohrlock were pleasantly surprised on returning home Sunday noon to find that fourteen relatives and friends had arrived to assist in the celebration of their 25th wedding anniversary. A silver and white wedding cake surmounted by two doves centered the table, where a delicious dinner was served. Several pieces of silver and other gifts were presented Mr. and Mrs. Mohrlock as souvenirs of the occasion. Miss Grace Jamieson of Ann Arbor was an out of town guest.

SCHOOL HOLDS ELECTION
In order that they would not be outdone by their parents, students of Chelsea high school held an election Tuesday morning, using instruction ballots obtained from the county clerk. The vote that was tabulated resulted as follows: For President: Roosevelt 113, Landon 82, Lemke 8; Governor: Fitzgerald 118, Murphy 101; Senator: Brown 110, Brucker 95, Ward 8; Sheriff: Tisch 113, Andies 78.

REV. KOLB TRANSFERRED
Rev. Father Francis P. Kolb, who for the past two years was assistant at Holy Rosary church, Detroit, has been transferred to St. Mary Magdalen parish on John R. St. in Hazel Park, as assistant pastor to Rev. Fr. William Graber, which transfer has been in effect since October 20.

Sewage Disposal Bonds Sold Monday Night

At the regular meeting of the common council on Monday evening bids were opened for the purchase of the general obligation bonds, proceeds from which will be used for the construction of a sewage treatment works in Chelsea. It was voted to accept the bid of Stranahan, Harris & Co., of Toledo, Ohio, whose bid was at an interest rate of 2 1/4 per cent, with accrued interest, and a premium of $189.24. The bond issue is for $250,000.00.

The council has accepted the offer of the federal government for an outright grant not to exceed $27,000.00 as the FWA share of the sewage treatment works construction. It is expected that construction bids will be accepted and the contract let some time this month. It is hoped to have actual construction work started by December 15, with the completion date set for Dec. 1, 1937.

First maturity date on the bonds which will be issued is Nov. 15, 1938, when $3000.00 will be paid, with a like amount maturing each year through 1940. From 1941 to 1945 the annual payment will be $4000.00, which will retire the bonded indebtedness at that time.

Village officials feel very fortunate in selling the bonds at the low interest rate of 2 1/4 per cent. The sewer bonds, the last of which will be retired April 1, 1937, were issued at an interest rate of 4 1/2 per cent.

In conclusion, delicious ice cream from this factory was served to the members, also dainty cakes prepared by the hostesses, Mrs. Grant Schooley, Mrs. Julius Elsiele and Mrs. Floyd Rowe, who were instrumental in bringing this interesting program to the Auxiliary. ## SCOUTS SEEK AWARD

Scouts of Chelsea are striving to acquire the President Walter W. Head Acorn Award. This award is given to those Scout Troops who recruit new Scouts for a Patrol or Troop where additional membership is desired.In the Washtenaw-Livingston Council of which Chelsea Scouts are members, the membership has grown from nine hundred and twenty-one boys served by Scouting on January 1, 1936 to one thousand three hundred two on September 1, 1936.Scouts of the Washtenaw-Livingston Council have gathered red acorns until in the Council office in Ann Arbor there are many baskets heaped with acorns. This has been done not only to dramatize the new award, but to gather the seed for a municipal forest in keeping with the conservation ideas in Scouting.The award which is a button for a Scout and a ribbon for a troop is symbolic of the growth of Scouting. Lord Baden-Powell, founder of Scouting, whose report of the growth of Scouting inspired the award, reported that from an original experimental group of twenty-one, the movement has spread until in 1929 the movement included Scouts to the number of two million in forty-two countries.Large Number of Lambs Will Be FedWith indications that farmers in Michigan again will feed around 300-000 lambs this year, warning is issuedby George A. Brown, head of the animal husbandry department at Michigan State College, that the underweight condition of these animals from drouth areas and the fact that fall rains have stimulated a luscious growth of grass may cause heavy death losses when lambs are turned immediately into pasture."Many of the lambs are light in weight, thin in flesh and decidedly undernourished. Such lambs are sensitive to feed conditions and must be handled carefully to prevent losses."Lambs which have just arrived after a hard shipment should not be turned directly on to pasture without conditions as they are this fall," says Professor Brown. A safer place is the feedlot or barn where the lambs have access to first cutting alfalfa and some oat straw."Even in dry lot the salting must be done carefully. Frequently these western lambs have not had salt for several weeks or have had block or rock salt. Sprinkle a small amount of salt on the bottom of a feed rack where they are fed hay several days before providing salt liberally. A small amount of lime or baking soda in the drinking water is a practice recommended by many successful feeders to help get the sheep in shape."More hand feeding may be practical in Michigan this year, Brown estimates. Self feeders imply maximum use of grain and minimum use of roughage. In self feeding about twice as much grain as roughage is consumed, whereas the reverse is true in hand feeding. The arithmetic involved, according to Brown, is that with hay at $8-a-ton self-feeding would not seem practical unless corn is less than 56 cents a bushel. For profit, even with hay at $12.50-a-ton, corn must sell at 85 cents a bushel or less if the gains on the self fed lambs are to be as economical as those gains made by hand feeding."Greenback Salve" Doesn't Sooth CopsEast Lansing—Pale-face dollars are the basic ingredient of the "cure" of an Indian "medicine-man" for whom Michigan State Police are searching.
"Greenback salve—a cure for more ills than any snake-oil ever passed down from a medicine-show platform —is the product which caused Captain I. H. Mannon of the state police detective division to start his quest.Several instances in which the "medicine man" came to the attention of state police involve trickery in connection with sickness in the family of the victim. Though his methods vary, one circumstance is identical in every case—money was missing after the man departed.In one case on the state police report, the "medicine man" folded the family fortune of greenbacks into a package. The sick one was to wear it, pinned to the body. Several weeks later, the family opened the package for money required for a bill. It contained only folded paper.In another case, a salve was prepared and corners were required from all greenbacks in the family sugar-bowl. The money was returned, supposedly, and the preparation of the salve went forward with great ceremony. Too late, it was found that more folded paper had replaced the family roll.Lights In Yards Hit Farm ThievesDesire for better lighting in the farm home and other farm buildings is the principal motive which actuates farmers to secure electric service.
This better lighting however is too often confined to the interior of the buildings only. On many of the so-called electrified farms the kerosene lantern still serves as the only source of light in the yard.Yard lighting is desirable on every farm, says D. G. Ebinger, agricultural engineering department at Michigan State College. Light makes it possible to do the farm chores after dark with ease, in less time and with greater safety to the worker. It sometimes becomes necessary to guard against thieves and other night prowlers.
Properly located yard light helps serve this purpose. The cost of these lights is often paid back several times by a noticeable decrease in theft. Wherever they are installed they should flood the barnyard with light."The proper number and location of yard lights will depend largely on the farm layout," Ebinger suggests.
"They should be placed as high as is practical and may be mounted either on a pole or on the side of the house or barn and should be fitted with a shallow dome or angle type reflector to obtain the most satisfactory illumination. Lamps of 150 to 200 watts are recommended. The yard lights should be controlled by three point or four point switches. One of these switches may be located at the rear door of the house and the others at the garage, barn, poultry-house or wherever needed."Some farmers are now using, and others are contemplating the installation of burglar alarm systems. It is possible and practical to have the circuits so arranged that when the alarm is given by the opening of protected doors or windows, the yards at the same time will be automatically flooded with light."Inquiries regarding the installation of yard lights either separately or in combination with a burglar alarm system, should be sent to the Agricultural Engineering Department, Michigan State College, East Lansing.State Farm Incomes Show Sharp IncreaseFarmers in Michigan are in a fairly advantageous position financially this year when compared with agricultural producers in many other states. In comparing crops and prices to estimate cash going into rural pockets, books, R. V. Gunn, extension specialist in economics at Michigan StateCollege, finds reason for optimism in comparing 1936 with the year 1932 when Michigan farm income was down to 119-million dollars.In this state 60 per cent of the farm income is derived from livestock and livestock products, with less than 40 per cent from actual sales of crops and miscellaneous products, Gunn finds.Gunn's figures on the division of the 1935 income of 185 million dollars received by farmers are as follows: Dairy products, 55 millions; sales of livestock, more than 80 millions, with cash sales from cattle and calves more than half of this livestock income, hogs second in importance and sheep and lambs third.Poultry is the third important source of Michigan farm income, with over 21 millions or almost 12 per cent of the 1935 total. In 1929 over 85 millions was received from poultry, while only 13 millions was derived in 1935 from poultry.Cash field crops are next in bringing in the dollars. Beans, potatoes, wheat and sugar beets are included.
Last year beans and potatoes each contributed about 9 millions, wheat 8 1-3 millions but sugar beets were cut down by low yields to 4 1-2 millions. Fruit and truck crops added about 11 millions each. Apples obtained 40 per cent of the fruit dollars, and peaches, cherries, grapes and strawberries followed in order. Peppermint contributed about a million dollars.Atwood Seeks Early Auto Plate SalesIn an effort to stimulate the sale of automobiles at the time when for years manufacturers have closed their plants to take inventory, Orville E.
Atwood, Secretary of State, has written to proper officials of every state in the Union, notifying them that 1937 license plates were placed on sale October 21. He notified these officials that he would do all he could to cooperate with them, in the event they saw fit to release their 1937 plates early this year.It is the belief of Atwood that labor in Michigan, as well as everywhere else in the nation where automobile or allied industries are located, will be immeasurably benefited by every move to overcome the seasonal slack in the automotive industry.This is the second successive year in which motor vehicle license plates have been placed on sale on October 21, Atwood pointed out when he set the date. It was made as early as practicable in order to aid the manufacturers in their drive to bring out models for fall trade. It was believed that with the placing of license plates for the succeeding year, on sale co-Incidentally with the bringing out of new models, one factor of sales resistance would be overcome for the motor industry.

The human element in driving is the problem on our highways today. Construction of highways is constantly being improved, especially along safety lines.

The human element must be educated. The driver of a car must realize his responsibility. Schools, clubs, safety organizations, societies, and many other groups of people are trying desperately to instill into the mind of every automobile driver that proper training in the handling of an automobile is necessary. It is easy to train the higher types of apes, dogs, cats, and even lower animals to operate a car in a circus ring to the satisfaction of an audience, but it is sometimes humanly impossible to instill the minds of some drivers the absolute necessity for safe driving.

When the day comes that automobile drivers realize their responsibility, we will have a reduction of accidents on our highways.

Question And Answer Dept.

Ques.—Will you please answer what are they fighting about in Spain in which both royalists and republicans seem to be united?

Ans.—The government of Spain is in the hands of the Socialists. The republicans and royalists are endeavoring to overthrow the Socialists and gain control. If they succeed, the royalists will seek to re-establish the monarchy, while the republicans will try to establish a fascist government similar to that in Italy.

Ques.—Are water-snakes poisonous?

Ans.—Yes and no. Sea-water snakes are generally poisonous. Fresh water snakes are harmless. Their mode of defense is their swiftness in getting away from their enemies—both on land or in water. They will bite if wounded, but their bite is nothing more than a pinch.

Ques.—Where do we get sponges from? And how are they obtained?

Ans.—Sponges are sea-animals. They grow in both deep and shallow water and are fixed in mud or to rocks at the bottom. The largest forms are common to the tropics. The sponge as we know it, is only the skeleton after all the fleshy part has been removed. The fresh sponge dries by prolonged exposure to air, and the fleshy matter is then separated by burial in the sand for several days, after which a process of soaking and washing follows.

Ques.—I am writing to ask you what "static" is?

Ans.—Static is the branch of dynamics which treats of the forces that counterbalance one another, hence produce no motion or change of motion.

Ques.—Can you please tell me what the regulation size of a tennis court should be?

Ans.—The regulation size of a tennis court is 90 feet long and 38 feet wide, enclosed with a wall or fence sufficiently high to prevent the loss of balls by ordinary strokes. The net in the center is 3 feet high.

Ques.—What is the origin of the word "thug", as applied to criminals?

Ans.—The word "thug" is a survival of the name of a class in religious thinkers numerous in India in the thirteenth century. The class was known as "Thugs", so called from a Sanskrit word meaning "a cheat." The members of this sect formed a secret society made up of gangs numbering from 10 to 200. They were banded together and traveled under various disguises with a view of attaining the confidence of the wealthier travelers and traders, and at a favorable opportunity strangled and robbed them. With the passing of time the word is now applied to any person who is originally inclined.

Ques.—Do toads die at the advent of winter? If not, where do they go?

Ans.—The common toad spends the winter in a hole or other hiding place, in a torpid state, from which they emerge after the return of warm weather in the spring. Eggs are laid which are held in a gelatinous tube called spirally in the water. Tadpoles similar to those of the frog soon develop, and become toads on shedding their gills and tail. The foregoing process is followed by the younger toads.

Ques.—Why were some Americans called Tories during the American Revolutionary War?

Ans.—At the time of the American Revolutionary War "Tory" was the name of a leading political party in Great Britain. Any American who was not in sympathy with the American Revolution was therefore dubbed a "Tory."

Ques.—What is the longest navigable river in Scotland?

Ans.—The longest river in Scotland is about 120 miles in length. It, however, is navigable from its mouth at the North Sea to Perth for vessels drawing ten feet or less, and this river is known as the Tay.

Ques.—Can you tell us the names of the two brightest stars seen in the heavens—one about two hours after sunset and the other about two hours before sunrise?

Ans.—The star you see in Venus. She appears brightest of all the stars about two hours after sunset, and again before sunrise. That is the only time Venus makes her appearance to the naked eye.

Cole Slaw

Cole slaw is a transliteration of Kohl salat, a German term that is correctly translated as cabbage salad. Cole is pronounced exactly like Kohl and slaw closely approximates salat. The American name of cole slaw is among the Pennsylvania Germans.

CHEVROLET ON DISPLAY SAT.

Cheelsea and vicinity will get their first view Saturday of the new 1937 Chevrolet. It will go on public display at the Spaulding Chevrolet Sales immediately after the breakfast which Mr. Spaulding is holding in honor of his organization.

The breakfast is one of some 10,000 similar affairs being held throughout the country just before the new models go on view. It was arranged in acknowledgment of the unusual cooperation displayed by Chevrolet dealer employees this past year. Their emphasis on owner satisfaction, Mr. Spaulding asserted, has been an important factor, not only in the year's sales record, but in the unparalleled bank of advance orders received for 1937 models. An exceptionally large bank of such orders is on file this year, he said, as a result of the public's experience with the 1936 Chevrolet.

Immediately after the breakfast, the salesroom will be thrown open, and an open house atmosphere will prevail all day. Cars will be delivered to purchasers in the rotation in which the orders are received. Mr. Spaulding said, adding that production in the 10 Chevrolet assembly plants is now going on at a rate which assures prompt delivery on all orders.

Origin of Corn Unknown

Indians First Growers

The origin of corn is unknown. No plant of it has ever been found in the wilds, declares a writer in the Los Angeles Times. When the first white men set foot in the New world corn was cultivated by the North American Indians on the Atlantic coast. It was their main reliance on hunting trips or in warfare against rival tribes. They carried it as parched corn in buckskin pouches. Often it was their only food for a long time. The Indians grew it in small fields, sufficient for each tribe. They were the first American farmers.

Corn's origin is no nearer solution today than it was then. Plant explorers have searched every bit of the available wilds of the western hemisphere without finding a trace of a caw. The average garden enthusiast's guess is as good as that of the most noted scientist. The first explorers found corn cultivated on down to Peru and Chile. It is not native to the United States, for it is easily harmed by frosts and cannot be planted early in the corn-growing states, for cold wet spring weather rots the seeds and fields must be replanted. It was, therefore, of more tropical origin.

Oyster Three Years Old

Before Yielding Pearl

An oyster cannot be expected to turn out a pearl until it is at least three years old, according to a writer in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. It will do it naturally only if some foreign matter accidentally gets under its skin. Then as a form of protection it begins to secrete nacre, which coats the irritant and makes a pearl out of it in time. First of all, the oysters are brought up from the sea bottom, by women divers, scantily clad in winter, and completely nude in the warm months. Then by a delicate surgical operation the shells are partially opened and the foreign nucleus, a piece of mother-of-pearl, is inserted between the valves of the mollusk.

The oyster is returned to the water and allowed to remain for about seven years. At least, it takes that long at the culture station at Toba, in Japan. The pearl-bearing oysters are carefully selected, protected in wire cages as they rest on the sea bottom, and brought up twice a year for a thorough rub-down.

In spite of such vigilance, only about 60 per cent of the oysters will form pearls, and of those not more than 4 or 5 per cent are marketable.

Contents of Malleable Iron

Malleable iron contains from 1.5 to 2.0 per cent carbon and is cast iron that has received a heat treatment for a week or more, which changes the form of the carbon, making it tough and capable of withstanding considerable twisting and bending. It can not be welded successfully, but is easily and satisfactorily brazed with torch. It is used extensively in farm equipment as well as for pipe fittings, harness hardware, etc. A broken malleable casting has a smoother appearance than ordinary cast iron and bends before breaking.

The Word "Comet"

The word "comet" comes from the Latin through the Greek comesos, a word meaning long hair. It is a characteristic of the vagaries of English pronunciation that we pronounce the "o" in comet quite differently from the "o" in come.

BEEMAN-SMITH WEDDING

A pretty fall wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Weston Smith of Solway, Minnesota, formerly of Jackson, when one of their twin daughters, Daisy, was united in marriage with Orson Beeman, Jr., eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Alva Beeman of Lyndon township, on Tuesday, Oct. 20, at two o'clock. Rev. Roy Boldt of the Baptist church officiated.

The couple were attended by a brother Claud, and the twin sister of the bride, De Etta. The girls were dressed alike in rust color crepe with rhinestone trimming, with brown suede slippers, and wore corsages of Johanna Hill roses and baby mums in cream color.

At 5 o'clock a chicken dinner was served to the group, with a four-tiered wedding cake centering the table, made by Mrs. Roningen, a friend. On Wednesday evening a wedding dance was given in Solway. At this time friends and neighbors gave them a surprise miscellaneous shower.

Mr. and Mrs. Beeman will make their home with the groom's parents. Mildred Beeman accompanied her brother west for the ceremony.

Identifying Animal Noises

A little practice in the art of listening will enable you to identify the various creatures of the woods without seeing them, writes Archibald Rutledge in Nature Magazine. The wild turkey has the tramp-tramp tread of a man interspersed with a sedulous raking of leaves as he pauses to scratch for food. A deer, despite his size, makes less noise than the turkey. His approach is usually heralded by a subdued stirring, the separate footfalls being hardly distinguishable. Squirrels can always be identified by their habit of frisking around in the leaves and then jumping. He will make a great scurrying and then give a leap.

DON'T WORRY FRIENDS WITH PERSONAL TROUBLES

Janet first tells you she can't afford the trip or the matinee or the hair-do and then proceeds to indulge in all of them.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

IT IS a strange truth about our muddled lives that usually there is just one thing that is worrying us profoundly. If that one thing could be settled or changed everything would be wonderful.

The simplicity with which women admit this would be funny if it wasn't somehow so pathetic. They go on from school days to young womanhood, from bridal hours to the serious business of home-making and child-bearing, from youth to age, eternally explaining that it is just this or just that, that keeps their minds from being completely at rest.

We never seem smart enough to learn that it always will be this way. Then even when the last hour of all arrives, and the family gathers for the long parting, and the doctors are packing up their little bags to go on to the next case, that there will be still just that one thing between us and peace—one child or grandchild about whom to worry, one unwritten letter or undelivered message to haunt us as we start on the long journey.

Lucy, for example, doesn't like the Morrison house. Lucy married Harry Morrison seventeen years ago, and his parents gave them the big, ugly comfortable old place for their home. Lucy's children have been born there, they've had Christmas trees and measles and birthdays and picnics, they've turned the old sewing room into a sleeping porch and put in extension telephones and radios and new bathtubs, but still Lucy doesn't like the Morrison house! "We're still in that dreadful old red-shingled mansion," said Lucy to me in 1914, when she had been married about a year. "You know we're still in the old place, and it never will seem like home to me!" she told me again last week, when I met her in the market.

Janet, on the other hand, has lived in all sorts of fascinating houses and countries. But Janet never has enough money. She never forgets for one second that she and Tom haven't enough money. If they go abroad she explains it in a scandalized aside: "Imagine being like us on the 'Paris'!—if they stay at home every phase of every subject upon which Janet's brilliant conversation touches is the money phase. Her daughters have been well educated in private schools. "Don't ask me how we did it," says Janet, "for, of course, we were miles in debt!" Whether she has one servant or seven Janet is always poor. She first tells you that she can't possibly afford the trip or the matinee or the hair-do, and then proceeds to indulge in them. She never gives a penny to charity, "because we simply haven't got it!"

Those who love Janet get sick of the topic of money. What her bridge losses were, what her doctor bills were, what she lost at contract, what Nancy's teeth-straightening is costing, what opera seats are—these are all you hear from Janet. For thirty years she has had no other topic of conversation, or rather all topics have led straight to this one. "My dear, I had enough money I'd be the happiest woman in the world!" Janet says.

Mary's trouble is Jacky. Her other four children are perfect specimens, her husband is successful and devoted and charming, married sisters and her mother live near, and adore her—but in Mary's story there is always the tragedy of Jacky. Something in Jacky's bone-structure is wrong, and Jacky, nine years old now, will never walk.

He is content, busy, he works and studies and laughs and makes models of ships and airplanes and reads about Nils and Tarzan and Mowgli like any other boy; every one in the family adores him. Jacky is a completely happy child. But Mary can't leave it that way. "Why did God send me so much and then give me this bitter cross?" she asks her friends, over and over again. "I could have given him up in death. But to have my beautiful baby run and play and swim and race with the other kids, and I wish I had never married, and never had a child!"

Thousands of persons in the last five years have made their one individual grievance the bad luck now, and they are eating and sleeping comfortably, everyone has somehow gotten through. But they can't forget those thousands—those beautiful thousands—that were lost in bad investments. Why, they could all have gone abroad for a year, they could have bought the house and the car and built a brick wall and put Georgiana through college with that money!

It seems too horrible that it was THEIRS they HAD it—and now it's gone forever. I know one woman who has reproached her husband with the loss of their fortune every day for five years, and I suppose there are many like her. All the events of these sixty vital months, the changes and changes and ups and downs have been colored for her by the memory of that money. "Lewis WOULD invest it that way—it was oil, and oil couldn't fail," she says bitterly. "I couldn't say a thing—how did I know it was like throwing it away!"

She reminds her children of it. "You could do it ten times over if Dad hadn't lost all that money!" she says. Her friends can hardly venture a conversational opening without eliciting her patient: "Well, we lost everything in 1929, you know."—in reply.

"To thousands of other women the necessity of having some other person in their lives is the unendurable thing. If Mama, or Cousin Ella, or Grandpa was just—well, pleasantly settled somewhere else, the house would run so easily, there would be nothing amiss!"

Everyone of us has something—something small and annoying and burdensome, just the one thing of all others with which we feel ourselves least able to bear. Not a great sorrow—we can rise to that. But just something—something that stands between us and the full sunlight.

It is a wise woman who learns to expect this small percentage of imperfection in her life, and accepts it. It is a wise woman who learns that if it disappears in one form it will most certainly present itself in another, that no life is lived without galling conditions of one sort or another. The real difficulty is perhaps that being imperfect ourselves we create imperfections in our separate schemes. Or perhaps our defective ideals of civilization leave these gaps.

Whatever the cause, since a constantly changing program of small troubles is an inescapable part of our lives it is sensible to train ourselves to bear them with dignity and courage, and to spare our friends as much of them as we can. There is no pleasure in the world any keener than to meet a friend known to be having difficult times and to realize that she is more than adequate to the demand Fate is making of her; to find her cheerful and resolute and busy where we expected to find her crushed and helpless.

Many, many years ago a fine old Englishman who used to live in our part of the California mountains told me that for a certain time in his life he used to turn his diary's pages three months ahead and write down specifically what was worrying him at the moment.

He said it was absolutely shocking to work through the days and weeks to reach those entries, and discover that the shame and anxiety of April were forgotten completely in July, that July had its own now set of humiliations and worries. The habit perhaps helped to make him the philosopher he became in his old age; nothing troubled him when I knew him, and it was he who gave me the phrase that I have said to myself almost every day for more than thirty-five years.

"To him that loveth God all things work together for good."

LOVING THE LITTLE CHAP

I'm glad I loved the little chap while he was here on earth. For now that he has gone away, I realize his worth. I'm glad that I was good to him and did not chide him when he asked for stories I had told him time and time again. I'm glad that I was never too much occupied to play.

And romp about the yard with him now that he's gone away. His little face, his happy smile in dreams at night I see.

I'm glad I loved the little chap while he was here with me. I seem at times to feel his wee hand snuggling mine.

I hear once more his cheery voice, and see his glad eyes shine. I listen for his footsteps, and at night alone I wait.

Just as I did when he would come to meet me at the gate. The little hat and jacket which at play he always wore.

Are there just as he left them, hanging on the kitchen door. I hope that he is happy in that summer home above.

I'm glad I loved the little chap while he was mine to love. I'm glad I was permitted for a little time to share.

The little chap's companionship, and give him tender care. I'm glad he never came to me heart-broken for relief.

But that I took him in my arms and soothed his childish grief. I'm glad the prayer he whispered, every evening at my knee.

Was one his rosy lips, repeated after me. And now that God has taken him, it comforts me to know.

That I was always good to him, while he was here below.

—Arthur Carlton.

WHO ARE YOU?
The Romance of Your Name
By RUBY HASKINS ELLIS

An Allen?
THE name Allen has passed through many changes in spelling, but the present well-known form has been in general use since the Thirteenth century.
The name has been found in a very early period, even before the Christian era, spelled Aja, from the Arya word "aj," meaning mountainous. The first-place name was Mount Alonum north of the Caspian sea, and the people of this locality were known as the Alani tribe.
Later, this name is found in Britain, then it was transferred to Britain where it flourished for many centuries and finally brought back to Britain by Alan I, a general in the army of William the Conqueror, who, after the historic battle of Hastings in 1066, was created Earl of Richmond. At his death this title passed to his brother, Alan II, and from him was handed down for many generations.
One of the first members of the family to use the name, as it is now spelled, was Henry Allen, Lord of Buckenham, Staffordshire, England, 1272. Robert Henry Allen, high sheriff of County Devon, 1851, traced his descent in a direct line to Henry, Monarch of the branches spelling the name Allen, Allyn, Alfeyn and Alfeine can trace to Henry.
John Allyn, a canon of Windsor, was born 1375. William Allen, born 1538, was made a cardinal in 1587. Henry Allen was built of Yarmouth, 1277. Johannes Allen was a member of parliament from Yarmouth, 1314.
An English writer states that in 1851 there were 32,000 persons in England by this name distributed over 20 counties.
In London, 1240, Pyers Alfeyn was Lord Mayor of that city. There were many of this name with titles of high degree, dukes and lords, who are found in every period of England's history.
There were many "first settlers" of this family in America. Too many to recount here, but one of the earliest arrivals was Edward, who left London in 1690. His vessel was attacked off Portsmouth, N. H., by pirates, a common occurrence in that day, but he effected his escape and made his way to Nantucket, R. I., where he settled. He served his community as juror, constable and trustee.
The great number of the Allen pilgrims who settled in New England in the earliest days of the colony is sufficient evidence to warrant the vast number of descendants in every part of the United States today. There were Alens who were of the Virginia colony also.
From the earliest days of heraldry this family has been generously honored by the bestowment of coats of arms, a signal mark of distinction when knighthood was in flower and a distinction which continued through the years.

Largest Oyster Ever Found
A giant oyster that was hauled out of the South Pacific off the coast of Thursday Island a few years ago by a shell-fishing boat is believed to be the largest ever found. The shell was 16 inches in diameter and 4 and one-half inches in maximum thickness, while the meat was sufficient to furnish a full meal for the crew's dinner men.—Collier's Weekly.
