YOUR NEWSPAPER BRINGS A MESSAGE

Twenty centuries ago a guiding star... a star of hope promising much to expectant mankind... led three Wise Men to a lowly stable in the little town of Bethlehem.

Twenty centuries, and today, as a world pauses, humble and shot with a glowing spirit of happiness, your newspaper comes to you asking that it may continue in its chosen course... tireless and unflinching service to you and your community.

It is our wish that this newspaper, dedicated to the provision of news, leadership, education, and the sponsorship of moral and civic idealism, be permitted to carry into your homes, not for this one time only, but for an entire lifetime, this same spirit of unselfish service to all.

We consider Christmas an institution successfully serving an inner need, an institution based on old, well founded precepts, as well adapted to the needs of today as it was twenty centuries ago, an institution capable of fulfilling an age-old requirement... that of joy to mankind.

It is our hope that from this day you will gain the full measure of joy. Merry Christmas!

THE PUBLISHER

May Your CHRISTMAS Be a Happy One!

In appreciation of the friendship you have shown toward us, we take this means of extending you the season's greetings, wishing you a very MERRY CHRISTMAS indeed and the happiest NEW YEAR you have ever experienced.

Children Warned on Dangers of Coasting

Several complaints have been received by village officials about children coasting down the hill on South Main street. The lives of many children are menaced every day while at play on this hill and motorists fear the consequences in case of accidents which they might be unable to avoid because of the slippery condition of the pavement.

Parents are asked to cooperate in preventing children from playing on the streets, which is always dangerous. The children are asked to go to the hill on the north side of Washington street for coasting. This is a better place for playing, and is certainly much safer. A light was installed there last year by the village so that the children may enjoy the coasting sport at night.

50th WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Davidson will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary on Tuesday, December 29, 1928. They will be at home to friends from 3:30 to 5:30 o'clock.

Our Wish For You!

During the year now closing we have greatly enjoyed the privilege of serving you. Without your loyalty and patronage we would have been merely "in business," but with your good will and friendship we have enjoyed the feeling that our effort to serve you well has received your approbation.

Hundreds of Kiddies Attend Legion Party

Excitement ran at a high pitch for 450 children from Chelsea and vicinity who attended the Kiddies Christmas Party given by Herbert J. McKune Post No. 31 of The American Legion at the public school auditorium on Monday evening of this week. A record crowd of children were present to enjoy this big annual event which is given by the members of the local Legion Post.

The auditorium was beautifully decorated with two large Christmas trees on the stage and evergreen mingled with lights was spread across the entire length of the front. On the sides of the hall were seen the familiar Legion banners which added to the color of the party.

A program under the supervision of Miss Lucile Boonsgaard, musical director in the public schools, proved to be very entertaining to the youngsters who joined in singing Christmas songs.

A representative of the Muller Bakeseries furnished her part in the party by showing a movie comedy which brought forth many bursts of laughter from the kiddies.

Gene Schaumann of Ann Arbor, with his accordion, also brought considerable pleasure to the crowd of young people. Songs popular with the kiddies were played and sung.

Even greater thrills were in evidence when Santa Claus made his appearance to greet the children and distribute gifts to each child in the audience.

Unfortunately, shortly after Old Santa arrived, the lights in the auditorium went out and the distribution of the Christmas packages had to be made by aid of flashlights.

Legion members wish to extend their thanks to all who participated in making this party so successful.

OUR NEIGHBORS

MASON—The Ingham County Farmers' club, organized 65 years ago, held its final meeting Saturday. The club has been disbanded. According to officers, it has outlived its usefulness. Community clubs, farm extension services, the publicity department at Michigan State College, newspaper coverage of agricultural problems and college radio service for farmers are among the organizations and agencies which have made the Ingham County Farmers' club no longer indispensable. "When the need ceases for an organization that's the time to quit," members of the state's oldest club decided.—County News.

BROOKLYN—Fishing through 8-inch ice at Clark Lake, fishermen who can obtain minnows for bait are having fairly good luck. The ice was like glass and the mild weather of Monday was ideal for fishing. Other lakes are having a good quota of fishermen.—Exponent.

TECUMSEH—A new guaranteed income wage system, whereby employees of the Quaker Oats Company of Tecumseh may know exactly the amount of their minimum income so long as they are employed by that company, was announced today by John Larsen, head of the local plant. Effective on January 1, Mr. Larsen said that all qualified regular employees will be guaranteed 140 hours wage income a month by the company, whether or not they are actually employed that many hours. Qualified employees on layoff are guaranteed 70 hours, he said.—Herald.

PINCKNEY—For the first time in the memory of man no township tax was spread in Putnam township this year. Supervisor Holsel informs us that it was not needed as there is sufficient money on hand to take care of the township finances. The county took over the last of the township roads last year, relieving the township of this burden.—Dispatch.

SOUTH LYON—A chicken hawk flew through the window at the F. A.

Holt cottage at Silver Lake last Friday morning and fell stunned beside Mr. Holt, who with his wife was eating breakfast about eight feet away from the window. Bits of glass from the 26x26 window pane were strewn all over the floor and table, but none hit the two occupants in the room. It was impossible to find a piece of glass as large as a person's hand. When Mr. Holt recovered from his surprise he took the bird out in the yard and shot it.—Herald.

WAYNE—Charles J. Correll, the Andy of Amos "n' Andy, in less than two hours Saturday flew to Detroit from Chicago, purchased a new plane and took off again. The ship, a five-passenger Stinson Reliant, was waiting at the Detroit City Airport when Correll and his wife stepped from a Chicago-Detroit plane at 10:17 a. m. A Stinson Aircraft Corp. pilot then flew the visitors to the company's landing field at Wayne. After a visit through the plant Correll and his wife, who also can handle the controls, began the return flight. William A. Mara, vice-president of the Stinson Aircraft Corp., said that the plane cost about $14,000. It is a single wing model, powered by a 325 h. p. motor.—County Review.

HOLLY—Fenton is to get $200,000 from the H. Rackham estate for a community house.—Herald.

Question And Answer Dept.

Ques.—Will you be kind enough to answer why most people have an instinctive fear of snakes?

Ans.—It is contended that a person's instinctive fear of snakes is attributable to the fact that the human race lived for thousands and thousands of years in some place (probably Central Asia) where poisonous snakes were common and had to be watched for continually. The fear of them was driven so deep into their minds that we still remember it subconsciously. Therefore most people think all snakes are harmful and poisonous. This is not true, as only a few species are dangerous.

Ques.—What day of the week did Washington cross the Delaware?

Ans.—George Washington crossed the Delaware on Wednesday, Christmas night, 1776, near Trenton. The following morning he gave battle, and the surprise movement netted a signal victory for the Americans.

Ques.—May I ask in your question column what causes the wind?

Ans.—Wind is caused by the air in one place getting heated, usually when the sun shines on the land underneath it. This heated air rises, making a partial vacuum. Air from all around rushes in to fill the vacuum and thus this makes the wind.

Ques.—In a race down-hill with two sleds will the heavier sled go faster or slower than the lighter one?

Ans.—The heavier sled will go faster. The force moving the sled down is nothing more than gravity. The heavier the sled the faster it will go—if otherwise all is equal.

Ques.—Is it true that soldiers break step while crossing a long bridge? Why?

Ans.—Yes, it is true. This is done so that the bridge will not be set into vibration by the regular and repeated tramping of falling feet. Sometimes this makes bridges sway and keeping time with the feet, and may cause a strain of the ironwork.

Ques.—Why are there some diseases which you will not take again after you have once had them?

Ans.—When you are attacked by a disease of this character the body automatically manufactures chemicals to repel germs by poisoning them. Some of these chemicals are left over and remain in the body. After the first attack of the disease and one of its germs gets into your body again, the chemicals that remain in your body will quickly poison the germ.

Ques.—Is mental telepathy or thought transference a myth or a fact?

Ans.—It is neither a fact nor a myth; it is a possibility. It is being carefully investigated by scientists because the alleged phenomena may possibly uncover laws of Nature or powers of the human mind of which we are still ignorant.

Ques.—What happens in a person's brain when he goes to sleep? And why does he dream wild, absurd dreams?

Ans.—Many of the little nerve fibers in the brain which connect one brain cell with another gets disconnected temporarily while asleep so that the messages between the cells cannot move about as freely and surely as when we are awake. Some of the messages stop altogether. Others continue to move in a rather uncertain and irregular way, and this is what causes dreams. The general confusion of the messages is what makes dreams so "wild and absurd."

Ques.—I was born on June 15, 1879. What day of the week was that date? What is my horoscope?

Ans.—June 15, 1879, was on Sunday. Sorry, but we cannot give personal horoscopes.

Ques.—When I was in Europe I saw large white storks in the midst of throngs of people in some cities where they moved about with perfect composure and weren't disturbed. Can you explain this situation?

Ans.—In most European countries the common white stork is protected by law, owing to its ability to destroy snakes, rats, mice, etc. They got so used to being unmolested that they can be picked up and petted without showing the slightest sign of fear. Formerly they reared their young on house-tops, but now the populace provide boxes for them. In Holland it is considered an omen of good fortune if a stork selects these boxes.

Start right, keep to the right, and you will probably finish right. Some people feel that the middle of the road is meant for them. I have heard drivers argue that they like to drive in the middle of the road so that in the event of a blow-out or tire trouble, they will have enough room on either side to keep the car on the road. This is poor reasoning. Keep to the right and drive your car at a safe speed, and you will never be faced with the possibility of your car leaving the road because of a blow-out. Safety is 99 per cent common sense—accidents are 99 per cent thoughtless hurry.

The Christmas Party

By Katherine Edelman

IN SPITE of the gay music, the Christmas atmosphere, Doris Brian was miserable. For the first time in his life Dick was neglecting her for some one else. Ever since the first dance he seemed to have eyes and ears for just one person—Barbara Overton, a visitor from Chicago. Doris couldn't understand it; Barbara was not even pretty. But there was Dick, hanging on every word she was saying, and leaving Doris unnoticed.

Only yesterday he had been suggesting that they get married. There was his writing; he had told her something would come from it before long. Editors couldn't keep saying "no" forever. But now he seemed to have forgotten that she even existed. Doris had heard of men growing suddenly infatuated like that.

Snatching a wrap she hurried out on the veranda. She couldn't bear the gayety another moment. Suddenly she felt herself whirled around. Dick had come quickly through the doorway. "I've got the whole dope from her," he was saying excitedly. "I'm on the way to riches. Don't you know she's THE Barbara Overton who took first place in the biggest contests last year—and, honey—she's put me right on the track. I'm going to win big money next year—you see if I don't. Doris, are you willing to take a chance, and marry me right away—to make it a Christmas wedding?"

Which was exactly what Doris did.

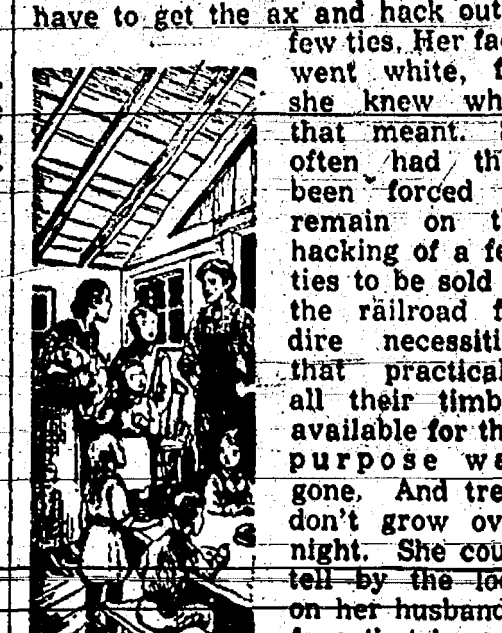

When Christmas Comes

Francis Grinstead

HE WAS a small boy named Tim who had never been more than ten miles from his home in the Ozark hills. His teacher said he couldn't even bound Arkansas, his own state, but what his teacher didn't know was how well he knew the mountain "crick" and the hill slopes circled with green-gold pine trees that bounded his father's tiny farm. He also knew what it took to keep a family of six children, and that for as long as he could remember his father's farm had scarcely been able to produce enough to stretch over every need.

It was just before Christmas time that he heard his father tell his mother that if there was to be anything "extra" to give the day its meaning for the children, he'd have to get the ax and hack out a few ties. Her face went white, for she knew what that meant. So often had they been forced to remain on the hacking of a few ties to be sold to the railroad for dire necessities that practically all their timber available for that purpose was gone. And trees don't grow overnight. She could tell by the look on her husband's face that he was taking a desperate ate and back-breaking chance of finding a few logs tough enough for the commission man to buy.

As she looked out of the window and saw the passing cars of winter "tourists" on the new scenic road the government had built through the hills, she wondered by what magic folks could come to own automobiles and take time off like that to go traveling. But she hadn't many moments to spare on such thoughts, for her husband had returned to say that the ax was gone. Could one of the children have taken it?

The father had borrowed an ax from a willing neighbor but on the day before Christmas he was silent as he unhitched his team in the wagon lot. Christmas tomorrow and he had been forced to bring back the load from town. The commission man had been truly sorry, for he did need ties; yet none of these were large enough.

He crept up to a window, lost in the sense of failure that made him ashamed to walk to his own door. There an odd sight straightened him. Inside were Tim and his mother joyously trimming a Christmas tree. Tim raced to the door to keep the younger children from bursting gleefully into the room and learning his great secret.

When the father entered the house, no one asked him about the ties. "Dad, dad!" Tim shouted. "Do you know those red berry trees that grow way up the crick? A awful hard to get to, but when I found 'em I thought they were so pretty I took some to school. The teacher said, 'that's holly' and then I read about holly and learned that folks will pay for it to have it for Christmas. So I gathered a lot of it and made me a holly stand up on the new road just hopin' they would. And dad, they did buy it! Stopped their cars and said, 'Why it's holly, who would have thought we'd find it here!' They wanted so much I had to work awful hard getting it, but gee, it was fun! I wanted to surprise mom and you, and now I'll tell you both that I made $27.82. There's $20 right now in that bureau drawer left after buying our Christmas. Gee dad, I love this old farm! It's got lots of surprises on it yet. This ain't the last one."

The father brushed a tear from his eye and kissed his wife. Then he shook hands with Tim. "You're the kind of son a man can be right proud to own," he choked.

"But dad, will you forgive me?" the boy suddenly implored.

"Why Tim, forgive you what?" the father asked in surprise.

The boy led the way to the kitchen. "You see dad, I just had to have it!"

The father pretended to frown as Tim pointed and then he winked. "Well, being as it's just about Christmas for us, as well as the rest of the world, I guess I'll have to overlook it." For there in a far corner of the room stood the ax. It was Tim who had borrowed it.

Tortoise Carries Water in Travel Over Dry Land

The word tortoise is applied to the land turtle. Sometimes called the ground hog of California for his habit of hibernating during the rainy season, there is still another nickname that might be given, "The little camel of the desert." Located under the hard shell is a membrane sack in which they store a supply of water to carry on their travels far from streams and ponds. From plant life growing on the wastelands they obtain more than enough moisture for their daily use and are able to store up a supply so large, that if a person suffering from thirst could locate the animal, they would be able to obtain enough water to carry them over a period of two or three days.

Possessing no teeth, states a writer in the Los Angeles Times, their jaws are hard and sharp on the edge, forming a beak. This is the means they use to grind their food—small enough to swallow. The large shell protects them from any attacking enemy. They are in reality their own foe. The miles when fighting strive to overturn the opponent. When this occurs, they have no means to right themselves and are left to die by the victor. Land turtles are sun creatures and when night comes or the day is dark and gloomy they seldom put in appearance.

Rembrandt, Fooled Public
The famous Dutch painter, Rembrandt, being at one time hard up for money, gave out that he was dead and his paintings, finished and unfinished, would be sold at auction. Crowds flocked to the auction to buy some of the last works of so famed an artist, the most trifling work fetching handsome prices. When the people found the trick out he was never esteemed or trusted again.

G. Kimmel Convicted for Attempted Murder

After a trial which lasted more than a week, a circuit court jury of ten men and two women, convicted Grant Kimmel, 66-year-old Lyndon township farmer, of assault with intent to murder his stepson, John Sheets, 32, on September 24. The jury deliberated more than four hours, the verdict being reported Saturday afternoon.

Both Kimmel and Sheets were wounded in a gun duel at the Kimmel farm home three months ago, when Sheets, a Detroit policeman, went there to take his mother, Mrs. Kimmel, away. Sheets was not expected to live following the duel, but recovered and appeared to testify that his stepfather had been the aggressor in the struggle.

Judge George W. Sample remanded Kimmel to the county jail and on Tuesday sentenced him to a term of 12-15 years to life in Southern Michigan prison at Jackson, recommending the minimum.

DEAR'S CHRISTMAS DOLL

By Helen Galsford Waterman

DEAR was really too big to play with dolls. Yet, when she said that all she wanted for Christmas was a really nice doll, of course mama and every one gave in.

People always were nice to Dear, probably because Dear was so nice. That was why everyone called her "Dear" instead of by name.

Such a doll, on Christmas morning, with real eyelashes, and long curls. It could walk, talk, and sleep. And it had a whole truck of new dresses and shoes, and a little fur coat.

Dear dashed down to see it first thing Christmas morning, and then, when breakfast was over, she got her wraps, dressed the doll in its fur coat, and set out with its trunk under one arm, and it in the other.

"She's so proud, she has to show it to her friends," smiled mama. But when Dear returned, she had neither doll or trunk. "Why, Dear," said mama, "where's your doll?"

"I gave it away," Dear answered. "I do hope you won't mind. You see, I knew a little girl who had never had a doll in her whole life, and I wanted so to give her one on Christmas."

"But Dear, why didn't you say so? We could have bought one that would have been good enough, and you could have kept yours."

"That's why, mama," Dear explained. "It had to be just the nicest doll ever, to be fun. And oh, mama," she cried, her face beaming with happiness, "did you ever see a poor little girl with her first lovely Christmas present?"

State's Auto Toll Shows No Big Jump

Increase of Michigan's traffic death rate in 1936 over that of 1935 is only .8 per cent, rather than the 9.2 per cent increase indicated by failure to consider vital factors involved, Orville E. Atwood, chairman of the Michigan State Safety Council points out.

Traffic deaths jumped 109 for the first 10 months of 1936 as compared with the corresponding period of 1935, for an increase of 9.2 per cent, but increases of both motor vehicles and of the state's gasoline consumption change the picture.

There were 195,472 more motor vehicles registered with the Secretary of State during the first 10 months of 1936 than during the corresponding period in 1935, and total gasoline consumption rose 8.9 per cent.

Calculations of the resultant death rate increase were submitted to Atwood by Trooper Cornelius F. Van Blankensteyn of the Michigan State Police, Secretary of the Council.

CHRISTMAS "INSIDE"

By GERTRUDE H. WALTON

THE LARGE house interested Celia. There seemed little life within, no Christmas decorations in the windows as in many dwellings on the streets. Tonight a dim light in the back, with the early Christmas eve twilight, heightened its drabness.

"One may be excused for inquisitiveness, tonight," Celia led Ann, her roommate onto the porch. "This house, outside, looks gloomy but no more than is my heart. I'll admit being disappointed because of no opening, after our singing audition over WGQ this afternoon."

Celia, slipping to a side door, with Ann, began singing Christmas carols. A door opened and a dignified woman said:

"Come inside, girls, and sing. I'm Mrs. Ashby. There's a piano, not opened since Beulah—"

"We'll sing 'if you join us,'" Celia answered. After singing, Celia told of ambitions for her voice and of the afternoon's disappointment.

"Girls, you have given me a happy pre-Christmas eve and birthday, as well. Many of my club members have birthdays at this season. Please come again, tonight, if you wish. You're across the street."

Celia and Ann, at home, were eating, when, answering the telephone, Celia swung Ann around into dizziness.

"We're to report for a program tomorrow afternoon over WGQ! Someone not filling engagement! We'll practice on Mrs. Ashby's piano. Let's decorate her windows with these wreaths," Celia cried.

During the Christmas day program, dedicated to those with birthdays of the season, when Mrs. Ashby's name was mentioned, the announcer said:

"Mrs. Ashby will enjoy this program. She called us last evening—asked that you girls sing for birthdays of her club members—other members asked for you, too. Mrs. Ashby travels, gives of time and money to a shut-in club of which she is national president."

Her daughter is the wife of a famed doctor in India. You probably will have a permanent program for birthdays of listeners."

"Maybe that house interested me because, even through boards and stone, human kindness, character, oozes through. Her windows look pretty, though, with our wreaths," Celia told Ann.

Luke's Christmas Money

by Martha B. Thomas

LITTLE LUKE, watching his father splice rope, was suddenly struck with an idea. "It's just one strand after another, isn't it dad?" "Yes, just one strand after another that makes the rope that holds the ship. It's the way most things are accomplished, boy, when you come to think of it."

A cold wind blew around the fish shed back of the wharves. Other men were busy, too, tying snood-knots on trawls, hoping a good day would come for fishing tomorrow.

Luke walked away and up the hill. Christmas coming in a week. He knew his father and mother had been busy planning something for his happiness then. But what had he done? Nothing at all. He stood stock still, his thoughts all mixed up in a queer way, with the strands of rope that made the line, the hundreds of snood-knots the fishermen were tying. "Just one thing done, and then another to make the whole," he reflected.

Then, walking slowly again he seemed to see a one-dollar bill folded away in his pocket-book. And trailing back from the money a row of different pictures of himself, working hard to earn those two dollars. Planting seed potatoes in the spring, hoeing them, weeding in the hot sun, even watering his own plot when the weather was dry. Then, in the fall digging them up. Selling them for two dollars. One bit of work after another. What next? He took more steps. Money was earned by the work of one person to buy something which was the work of another. Luke smiled. He knew "what next," very well indeed.

So, on Christmas morning, though Luke was delighted with his own gifts, he had an almost dizzy pleasure in watching his father and mother unwrap a pair of bedroom slippers and an apron he had given them. "My potato money!" he shrieked. "I got it by doing one thing after another . . . just the way the rope grows, strand after strand."

Luke's father looked puzzled, but his mother kissed him and said "Merry Christmas, dear!"

A MERRY CHRISTMAS

The week before Christmas, Coming home from the store, Met a bunch of young fellows In happy galore;

No thought of discourtesy entered their mind—

Just bunching down street To have a good time.

They gave us the sidewalk, "Twas more than we asked, And smiling we said: "Merry Christmas!"—and passed;

Hello Daddy—Say—Say! We wish you good cheer—

Old-time Merry Christmas—A Happy New Year.

They hiked it down street And were soon out of sight, While this old heart of mine Felt a twinge of delight.

Though years may bespeak, Or betoken of care, Lines of age deeply furrow, Tho' snow white our hair,

We'll keep every heart-string Attuned to Good Cheer—

A right Merry Christmas, And a Happy New Year.

TELEPHONE ALMANACS READY

Among the first almanacs for 1937 to make their appearance is the tenth issue of the Telephone Almanac, which is ready for distribution at the local offices of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company, according to C. F. Schaefer, manager for the Company in this area.

Made up, illustrated and printed in the style of the old time almanacs, the Telephone Almanac is highly interesting and attractive both as to contents and appearance. There are shown the usual monthly calendars found in all almanacs, a historical reference of importance being noted opposite each day of each month. There also are shown the twelve astronomical monthly calendars for the coming year, including the calculations for sunrise and sunset, moonrise and moonset, and the phases of the moon.

Instructions as to the use of the astronomical calculations also are given. Tables of normal temperatures and rainfall data for representative cities in the general states are shown, as are the signs of the zodiac, information as to eclipses during 1937, a statement as to the chronological eras, and other valuable information. Contrasted throughout its pages are illustrations picturing events and customs of the early years of the nation's history, and scenes from modern times, together with interesting descriptive matter pertaining to both. A rebus for the young folks occupies two pages.

There are presented, also twelve historical events in the history of the United States which serve to illustrate the importance of communications in shaping the destiny of the nation and in bringing its several commonwealths together into a single, united national community, together with items relative to the part the telephone has played in bringing America into closer touch with the other nations of the world.

CHRISTMAS BUCKLES

By Luella B. Lyons

TIMOTHY BROWN knew not a soul in Hartsburg well enough to merit an invitation to a Christmas dinner, for he had opened the little shoe repairing cubby hole in the postoffice building only ten days previous to the holiday. And the little restaurant served no turkey either, for they had probably figured everyone would be eating elsewhere.

Rather blue and unhappy, Timothy slipped back to his workbench, there to get caught up on the avalanche of work that had poured in upon him. The first pair of slippers—yes, he remembered the pale, thin little girl that had brought them in. "My aunt bought them for 25 cents at an auction of second-hand things in the city and sent them to me; but they do need repairing before I can wear them. But I've only 25 cents to my name—could you repair them for that amount, Mr. Brown?" Of course, he assured her that it wouldn't cost that—not to her, of the sad and wistful eyes!

"Why, I may be a shoe rebuild-er, but if those buckles aren't worth a fortune then I'd better get out of this business," he shouted to the empty little room as he suddenly discovered the winking little buckles were not of the dime store variety.

Luck was with him when he sent a messenger for the poor girl owner of the second-hand slippers, and at the jeweler's home the pair were in luck—the expert in gems told them that the buckles would positively remove the girl out of the pauper class, for they were really worth a fortune.

Happy and merry Christmases may come and go, but Timothy will never be lonely again, for the lucky little girl later said "yes" to Timothy, not out of gratitude but because of love at first sight.

CHELSEA ELECTRIC & WATER DEPT.

SAM LINCOLN walked slowly along the street gazing into store windows. An icy wind caught him at the corners but he hurried across to the next curb intent on his mental shopping. He was thinking hard of Cora. Though not a word had been spoken between them on the subject, it was quite understood that he should buy her warm gloves, a warm sweater and stockings for Christmas. He'd saved a fair amount for this very purpose. When you gave up your city living for the country, you thought in terms of wool. Cora needed all these things. Her gloves were worn down to thin spots. Her sweater had been mended a good many times and her stockings—well, Cora just laughed about them. Cora would be about changing their home, from the dreadful wheezy pump in the kitchen, to the way the floors slanted in the bedrooms, so that no pencil would stay on a table, and books continually slid off on the floor. Cora was a thoroughbred and a good sport. Sam looked at a green sweater. That would be becoming to Cora's light curls. Or that cheerful red one. Nice on snowy winter mornings. The very chickadees would sing with pleasure at sight of her in that sweater. He took a few steps toward the shop door when his eye fell on a black-and-yellow silk kimono. Of course he would not get it; just inquire the price so that he might look at it. The moment Sam touched a reverent hand to the exquisite silk he was lost. Thrifty, hard-working Sam! How could he have done such a thing? And so calmly, too. "Please wrap it up," he said. The price had been reduced in order to sell quickly. He walked out of the shop with the light bundle under his arm, and slunk by windows filled with warm woolen clothes. The kind Cora so sorely needed. All the way home on the train his heart sank lower and lower. He

"You're So Lovely I Want to Kiss You Very Hard." felt so chilled and miserable at the thought of his weak behavior, that Cora rushed at him as he opened the door, exclaiming, "My dear, what dreadful thing has happened to you?" They had an excellent if frugal dinner. Cora chatted happily of this and that, looking unusually pretty and gay. Sam tried to meet her laughter, but actually shivered along his spine. "Idiot! Fool! Wretched unspeakable lunatic that he was! Would a yellow-and-black Chinese kimono keep Cora warm? It would not. Justice demanded that he confess. Cora would be kind, and that would hurt more than anything. Cora would be kind and keep right on feeling cold on the crisp mornings after Christmas. But he must do it—muddle through it somehow. After dinner he came close to Cora muttering something about a gift, and how darned sorry he was, and please, please not to look at him so sweetly. Cora unwrapped the bundle. Sam waited. The lovely shining thing fell to the floor with the lights gleaming on it. "Oh—oh—I never in all my life saw anything so magnificent! For me? Surely, surely not for me, Sam? But how I'd adore it! I'm sure I wouldn't mind anything if I knew such a gorgeous garment were hanging in my closet. But of course you're teasing me. "No," said Sam heavily, "it's your Christmas present. I feel like a cad. I know you need the warm things. I don't be so darned sweet about it!" he commanded crossly. Cora flung on the robe, and threw her arms around Sam's neck. "I don't know why you're acting this silly way, but if you're so dead set on warm things, I'll get you a whole box of them this afternoon from Uncle Horace." Sam sank weakly into a chair. "You're so lovely I want to kiss you very hard." "Why not?" inquired Cora, representative in the yellow-and-black kimono. "This is simply the most wonderful thing you ever did for me."

Diet of Japanese Beetle
The Japanese beetle was introduced into the United States in larval form in earth around the roots of a plant from Japan. The adult beetle, which is about three-eighths of an inch long and about the same width, prefers to eat apples, quinces, peaches, sweet cherries, plums, grapes, blackberries, clover and corn. When these are not available, it attacks the foliage of shade trees and ornamental shrubs. The adult beetle is bright metallic green in color, with coppery brown wing covers. It flies easily and has a voracious appetite. There is only one generation each year, five-sixths of the time being spent in the soil as egg, larva or pupa.

No Rifles at Bunker Hill Although the so-called Kentucky rifle, a highly accurate weapon within the limits of its range, had been in use in America since 1730 and was employed to some extent by colonial soldiers in other battles of the Revolutionary war, it is recorded that there was not a single rifle on the field at Bunker Hill, observes a writer in the Chicago Tribune. All guns were smoothbores, those of the British muskets, those of the Americans either old, heavy Queen Anne's muskets, Spanish fuseses, antiquated French pieces, or home-made weapons. Very few of the Americans had bayonets.

Christmas Carols

By Katherine Edelman

WARREN ELMORE was mad—angry through and through. For the first time in his business career he had had a quarrel with his partner. Of course it had been all Peter's fault, but even that thought didn't help so very much. The old saying, "It takes two to make a quarrel" kept bothering him.

What was it that his wife had told him to get at Grant's? He asked himself the question as he entered the big department store. Hose for Muriel, that was it! Both Christmas shopping, anyway; why didn't Beverly tend to things herself?

As he walked down the crowded aisles, he was conscious of music from the balcony. An orchestra was up there playing Christmas carols. Warren Elmore forgot his peeve against the world; he hurried up and joined the happy crowd. His voice joined in "O Little Town of Bethlehem." It was followed by the glorious "Adeste Fideles." Then came "Silent Night." As its beautiful strains filled the store Warren Elmore was conscious that all anger was disappearing from his heart.

He wanted to get back to the office to slap old Peter on the back, and tell him they were a pair of fools for letting such a small thing interfere with their friendship.

And man-like, he purchased six pairs of hose for Muriel instead of three on the way out. A store that took time and thought for Christmas carols should be rewarded a little bit, he believed.

The Mistletoe Hunt

By FRANCES GRINSTEAD

"Eye-O Baby Bunting, Daddy's gone a-hunting!"

WHEN the mothers of young children in the east Oklahoma countryside sing this nursery song to their little ones they may out of loyalty to Mother Goose add the next two lines:

"For to find a rabbit skin, To wrap the Baby Bunting in."

But that isn't exactly what daddy does down there. When it comes the time of year that the baby needs warmer covering, daddy takes his gun and goes out to shoot down mistletoe! This he sells for the Christmas trade and buys Baby Bunting a different kind of garment. For mistletoe, with its well-known holiday meaning, grows in abundance there and is always found high among the bare winter branches of the native elm. Little boys climb for it, of course, but the quickest way to gather it for commercial use is to shoot it down.

"Open season" for mistletoe hunting begins about the last of November and the demand increases steadily until Christmas. Truck loads of the green sprigs with their wax-white berries are driven to the cities of the north for the holiday trade. As the mistletoe is not always uniformly ripe at the time it is wanted, much hunting is required to find sprigs whose berries are at a stage to suit the demands of the buyers. At such times the roadsides may be strewn with discarded mistletoes, for the condition of the berries cannot be seen until the sprig has been shot down. But such waste is not lamented, for mistletoe is a parasite that reappears in abundance each year; however ruthlessly it may be treated.

Monument to a Leg
A monument is to be found in a corner of the battlefield of Saratoga, N. Y., where it was erected in 1877 by Brevet Major-General John W. de Peyster, second vice-president of the Saratoga Monument Association, in memory of the "most brilliant soldier of the Continental Army, who was desperately wounded on this spot, the salty port of Burgoyne's Great Western Redoubt, 7th October, 1777, winning for his countrymen the Decisive Battle of the American Revolution and for himself the rank of Major-General."

Arnold's name is not mentioned on the monument. One side of the marble slab carries in relief a column carved like a Revolutionary cannon, over which are a boot, an epaulet and a wreath, with no inscription. The other side has the inscription quoted above.

Rebuilt the Capital
Benjamin Henry Latrobe was the engineer and architect who rebuilt the Capitol after it was burned in 1814 and it was his son, John Hazlhurst Latrobe, who invented the stove.

Her Happiest Christmas

FOR many years Marelu had not been exactly happy on Christmas; somehow she had never received the pretty things bestowed upon other girls. "If they all only knew how I have secretly longed for those soft, dainty luxuries," thought Marelu, as she sat before the fireplace, just three days before Christmas.

"There are those kitchen aprons, for instance, from dear old aunt Lucia. Every year, as far back as I can remember, it has always been aprons. I must have almost a dozen by now. Then there is cousin Marie, who has been sending the inevitable handkerchiefs—right along, year after year. There must be quite a collection of them, too."

While she had been grateful and thankful for these kind remembrances, she had not been exactly thrilled.

A happy Christmas thought suggested itself to Marelu as she gazed out at the slender icicles shining like silver in the moonlight. "I know what I'll do. I'll start right now and wrap up all those things into pretty Christmas parcels and give them to someone who really needs them."

When Christmas day arrived Marelu started out with her basket brimming full of beautifully wrapped and tied Christmas gifts. Every step she took over the holiday carpet of snow represented a kindly thought of cheer.

"Merry Christmas," she cried, as she handed a bright-colored parcel to dear old Linda Larsen.

"The very same to you," said she, with a questioning look of surprise. The next moment she was proudly unwrapping a pair of pretty bath towels. Marlene and Dolly, two little girls around the corner, danced up and down with joy when they saw the snowy handkerchiefs with colored borders. Marelu smiled happily as she left the little girls and proceeded to her next stop. Effie Lynn was overwhelmed with surprise when a gift was handed her. She explained that it had been years since she had received a Christmas present.

After several other interesting calls Marelu started for home. The street lights flashed on and the glimmering Christmas trees joined in the ceremony on all sides of her. As she drew near her own home she stood still a moment and admired the grandeur of the dark pines encircling the house under a white burden of snow. The variations of colors gleaming from the windows seemed to be stretching out to meet the pines.

Inside the house was warmth and joy and Christmas cheer as the family gathered about the Christmas tree, pointed with the star of Bethlehem.

Marelu was just in time for the celebration. Bobby had been chosen to read off the names upon the gifts and all eyes were centered upon the huge basket containing them.

"First on the program," shouted Bobby, "is for mother." All wondered what it could be.

"A gorgeous lamp shade," cried mother, as she held it up for all to see. While still admiring this thing of beauty, Bobby shouted louder than ever, "Something for the governor, himself. Get ready, pop, for your surprise."

"What can the strange package be for goodness sake?" said father, his eyes popping with interest. "Well, I do declare, if it isn't a golf set. Just what I have wanted for a long time," as he started to examine it.

"Oh boy, hold out your hands and catch, Dot, a ducky package for you, all tied with silver cord. What is it? Open it quick!"

Dot removed the bright red tissue and disclosed a white wool skating outfit.

Marelu had been so absorbed in what the others were receiving that she had forgotten all about herself. For the first time in many years she had received the things she really adored. With a heart full of appreciation and joy, she suddenly shouted, "Merry Christmas!"

The others did not quite comprehend the extent of Marelu's enthusiasm, but she, herself, felt, somehow, that this had been the very happiest merriest Christmas she had ever had.

First Iron Works
The first iron works were erected at Falling Creek, Va., near Richmond, in 1610, by the Virginia Co., but Indian troubles and the revocation of the charter of the company in 1624, caused the foundry to close. The first successful iron works were located on the Saugus river, near Lynn, Mass. There were built in 1643 by John Winthrop, Jr., and ten other Englishmen, forming the "Company of Undertakers for the Iron Works."

A True Prophecy
The fate of the kingdom of the Rajas of Gonda, India, was said to be bound up with a Chibil tree which, like many of the sacred trees of India, had sprouted from the tooth-twig of a saint. The kingdom was to last till the day a monkey was to be seen sitting in one of the trees. This occurred on the day the Indian mutiny broke out, which ended in the ruin of the dynasty.
