Will Hold Special N. F. L. A. Meeting

All farmers of Washtenaw, Monroe, Livingston and Wayne counties who have federal land bank or commissioner loans will be invited to attend a special national farm loan association stockholders' meeting to be held at Ann Arbor.

Secretary-Treasurer R. A. Pence is now preparing letters which will go to every association member and commissioner borrower, inviting him and his wife to attend and be guests of the association at lunch on the designated day. Every invited farmer will be provided with a postcard on which to reply whether he will attend or not so that adequate preparations can be made for a large enough hall and for the lunch.

The meeting will be for all farmers whose farm mortgage loans are being serviced through the Ann Arbor office and it is intended to bring out points in which the farmers interested can be more conveniently or more economically served.

Secretary-Treasurer Pence says he plans to have a free-for-all discussion during the afternoon session and hopes that many farmers will come to the meeting with the definite purpose of taking part in the round-table talks. Various problems will be discussed with special reference to this particular territory, and the conditions prevailing here.

Operating Expense of Railroads Huge Sum

Lansing—It takes the receipts of five months and six days of the Michigan railroads to meet their annual payroll and 29 days of their income to satisfy the tax collector, according to a survey by the Michigan Railroads Association.

There are numerous other days each year when railroad income immediately becomes outgo, declares the survey which is based on 1936 I. C. C. reports. For instance, it takes 21 days of income to pay the roads' locomotive fuel bill; 55 days' work to pay the materials and supplies bills; 31 days for all other operating expenses and 67 days for interest, rents and other fixed charges. That leaves only five days each year whose income goes toward dividends. And 1936 needed to have an extra 10 days to have enabled the lines to meet their dividends in full that year, something they failed to do by that much margin.

Nationally, the 1936 operating receipts of the railroads were $4,052,784,139, of which $3,308,540,696 came from freight transportation; $412,378,982 from passenger hauling, the balance from mail, express and like hauling and services. The lines' wage bill was $1,738,026,186; their fuel bill $236,932,279, and the tax collector took $319,752,721, making the railroads America's single greatest tax payer. It cost the railroads $3,385,151,559 to operate and to pay their tax bills, and after paying all rents, interest and all other fixed charges, the lines failed by $5,199,249 to meet their 1936 dividend obligation of $169,829,290.

SURPRISE GRANGE PARTY

A pleasant evening was enjoyed when a surprise meeting of the North Sylvan Grange was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Broesamle on Tuesday evening.

The most pleasant part of the evening was the awarding of the "Silver Star" and certificate to Mr. and Mrs. P. Broesamle, who have been members of the Grange for 33 years, and Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Laird, who have been members for 27 years. These members then gave high-lights of the history of North Sylvan Grange.

The program of the evening was as follows:

Song—Onward Christian Soldiers.
My Trip to Kansas—Raymond Ives.
Guessing Stamps—By the group.
Auld Lang Syne—By Mrs. O. Kalmbach and Mrs. E. Lesser, accompanied by Mrs. Broesamle.
Poem—"Rest" — Mrs. G. Brettschneider.
Song—Closing Ode.

Following the program a pot luck lunch was served.

MASONS ENTERTAIN SONS

At their regular meeting on Tuesday evening, members of Olive Lodge No. 156, F. and A. M. entertained at a Father and Son program. Moving pictures contributed to the entertainment, features of which were films showing the growing of rubber trees and gathering of latex on the island of Sumatra, modern coal mining, and a cartoon comedy. Cards furnished amusement for the elders and games and stunts were provided for the sons, with prizes for the winners. Supper was served to 60 members and guests.

ANNOUNCE WEDDING

Announcements have been received of the marriage of Harvey O. Knickerbocker, formerly of Chelsea, and Mrs. Grace Adeline Clark of St. Petersburg, Fla., formerly of Detroit, which took place Thursday, January 27, 1938. Mr. and Mrs. Knickerbocker will reside in St. Petersburg.

Michigan Mirror

By Gene Alleman
Michigan Press Association

Lansing—Unheralded in the newspaper front page is a grim race of life and death between Michigan's medical science and Michigan's machine age as exemplified by high-speed automobiles.

The bombing of the American gunboat Panay with a loss of six lives is emblazoned in the headlines. Readers are shocked.

Yet the mere announcement that a total of 1804 persons lost their lives in Michigan during the first ten months of 1937 leaves us somewhat indifferent. We lose the true value of proportions when we deal with the commonplace. It is the unusual, like the bombing of the Panay, that arouses us to heights of indignation.

The 1937 automobile death toll in Michigan exceeded the all-time record in 1936 by 22 per cent.

Verily, here is massacre on our highways!

Science Saves Lives

And while the modern motor juggernaut continues to roll onward, Michigan's medical science is scoring a notable victory.

Figures of the state department of health show that the death rate in 1937 declined 3 per cent. It is 10.55 per 1,000 population compared with 10.87 the previous year.

Statistics are notoriously dull.

Significant is the news that this slight difference saved 1,323 lives of Michigan citizens. And while fewer people died, more babies were born—proof indeed that times are getting better. The birth rate, if you are interested, climbed from a depression low rate of 15.96 in 1933 to 17.73 per 1,000 population in 1937.

Heart disease and cancer came to a halt in 1937 and actually showed decreases. These two causes of death have been increasing constantly for a decade.

On the other hand, tuberculosis deaths increased slightly.

The long-fought battle against this plague is yet to be won.

Scan Orchards To Fix Spring Spray Needs

Middle of winter might seem unimportant to look over trees in an orchard, but the wise fruit producer can do this job profitably.

Three pests should be sought to determine if sprays for them should be applied, warns Ray Hutson, head of the entomology department at Michigan State College.

San Jose scale appears as a scurfy deposit on twigs and branches.

Red mite eggs are just large enough to be seen. They resemble red pin points.

Aphis eggs are black shiny deposits in masses on rough spots on the tree and also found on water sprouts.

Controls are not difficult. An oil spray containing at least three per cent actual oil will serve for treating scale and red mites. This spray can be put on as a dormant spray during suitable weather conditions before spring opens up.

For the aphis control Hutson says it is possible to obtain oil sprays containing materials that will cut down the aphis hatch, although the usual oil spray is not effective.

PAST CHIEFS ELECT OFFICERS

A meeting of the Past Chiefs club, with 12 members present, was held on Wednesday of last week with Mrs. Emma Leach. A dessert lunch was served at 7:30, which was followed by the business session. Officers elected for the coming year are:

President—Mrs. Josie Johnson.
Vice President—Miss Laura Hieber.
Secretary-Treasurer — Mrs. Ethel Haselswerdt.

Mrs. Amy Gentner was initiated as a member of the club.

Pedro furnished amusement for the evening.

Miss Jane Walker was the assisting hostess.

TAX SALE SUPPLEMENT IN THIS ISSUE

This issue of The Standard contains a supplement of 30 pages which lists parcels of property in Washtenaw county which will be sold at the State Tax Sale to be held the first Tuesday in May, 1938. Although there are some descriptions listed upon which taxes have been paid since compilation of the list was started several months ago, the Auditor General's Department at Lansing has made an effort to have the list as much up to date as possible. Parcels upon which taxes have been paid will of course be withheld from the sale.

Grove Brothers Admit Sons to Partnership

Announcement is made by Homer S. Grove and James M. Grove, who have operated the chain of Grove Bros. 5c to $1.00 stores for several years, that they have taken into partnership Harold Grove, son of the former, and James Grove, Jr., son of the latter.

H. S. Grove is in charge of the Chelsea store, where the main office is located; J. M. Grove is in charge of the Durand store; Harold Grove at Flushing, and James Grove, Jr. at Clare. Other Grove Bros. stores are located at Oxford and Vassar.

This firm has enjoyed a steadily increasing business during the past few years, catering to the needs of the public in medium priced merchandise.

Used Car Owners Should Own Titles

People who must transfer titles of cars to themselves before purchasing 1938 license plates or half year plates should not delay this action longer, Department of State officials have warned, as license plate sales continued to lag.

While a record for title transfers was established in 1937, there is every indication that thousands of people who have acquired used cars in the past few months, are still deferring title transfer until they are ready to buy their new plates or permits. As a rule, motorists defer this transfer in the belief they will evade the $1.00 fee for transferring license plates. However, this charge is collected regardless of the time of the title transfer.

Frank W. Carney, Director of the Motor Vehicle Division of the Department of State points out, that those selling cars to subsequent purchasers should see to it that the titles are transferred. Legal responsibility for damages resulting from operation of a motor vehicle, rests with the recorded owner, Carney has observed.

Indications are that more than a million motor vehicles will lack 1938 plates or permits on February 1, with the deadline fixed by law at March 1. Those who involve plate purchases with title transfer applications will not only slow down the whole process for themselves but for everyone else applying for plates, motorists are reminded

SCOUTS STRESS SAFETY

As their contribution to the cause of accident prevention and safety, Boy Scouts of this county, joining with more than a million Scouts and their leaders throughout the country, will devote the concluding day of their Boy Scout Week celebration, February 6-12 to "living" demonstrations of safety.

"Scouts are undertaking this visual safety education project not only to inform you and me and our friends of safety methods and to make the streets and highways of our county safer places, but they have in mind to render this public service as their "Good Turn", their thanks to us grown-ups, who, through our support of Scouting, make this program continuously possible," declared Walter MacPeek, Scout Executive.

"'Building a stronger generation' will be their slogan in developing "living" exhibits to demonstrate not only how to live safely, but how, through the Scouting program, they themselves are acquiring both worthwhile skill of finger and attitude of mind in preparation for the responsibilities of manhood just ahead," added Mr. MacPeek.

So that all may witness these demonstrations of Scoutcraft and Safety, Scouts will hold their "Live Expo"—in other words Scout exposition—in store windows, on street corners, upon sidewalks, where all may easily see without loss of time or personal inconvenience.

ORLA B. TAYLOR HONORED

Mr. Taylor has collected Napoleonic autographs and has done considerable research work. Among the guests who were present at the ceremony was Dr. Alexander G. Ruthven, president of the University of Michigan, and Mrs. Ruthven. Mr. Taylor is a former well known Chelsea resident.

Who cares about the right-of-way if an accident depends on it? Why worry about the right-of-way at an intersection, crossroad, private driveway, or other road entrance when a few seconds' delay will eliminate the possibility of a smash-up? Give the right-of-way to the other fellow and let him be on his way. In another two seconds you will be on the safe side. That is courteous driving. It is the safest way.

To drive openly and defiantly headlong into an intersection simply because you have the right-of-way is not an act of courtesy nor is it safe driving.

Just ordinary good manners in driving an automobile will prevent as many accidents as reasonable care. The two go hand in hand and are inseparable.

"Nixie," Poorly Addressed Mail

"Nixie," is to be found in the United States postal laws and regulations, and is defined as a piece of mail that is incorrectly, insufficiently or indefinitely addressed.

What Every Driver Must Know

SPEED

Some of the questions asked when you apply for a driver's license may concern speed. Here are the general limits in Michigan. Usually, 15 miles per hour in business sections and 20 miles per hour in residential districts are legal, although local or state authorities may alter them. Therefore, if signs designate a higher speed, you may drive faster, provided it is safe.

When on rural highways, you may usually drive at the speeds indicated by signs, or in their absence, as fast as safety will permit. But remember, any unsafe speed is unlawful. Keep your car under control so you can stop short of anything obstructing the highway. Your car is as long as the distance required to stop it.

FOLLOWING

The law requires you to keep in mind the speed of the car ahead and go slowly enough and far enough behind that you will avoid it if the driver stops suddenly.

Question And Answer Dept.

Ques.—What is the slowest speed an airplane can go in order to leave the ground in flight; and what is the minimum cruising speed for any plane?

Ans.—This question cannot be answered intelligently, because it all depends upon the gross weight and type of the airplane in either case. However, the average minimum speed in order to take flight from the ground is forty miles an hour for the average airplanes. The minimum cruising speed is sixty miles an hour, although they can throttle down to forty miles and still keep afloat.

Problem—A train (freight train), which was one mile long was standing with the engine at the railroad depot. The next stop was 20 miles ahead. When the engineer started this twenty-mile run he maintained an average speed of 40 miles an hour. When the train started, a brakeman at the caboose began walking toward the engine, and he arrived there exactly at the same time the engine did. Maybe you think he walked slow, but that's not the point. The point is: How far did the brakeman walk? (Answer elsewhere in this column).

Ques.—Do all the other stars shine from reflected light the same as the planets in the Solar System?

Ans.—No. The illumination of our nine planets of the Solar System is reflected light from our Sun. All other stars are hot and shine by their own light.

Ques.—In cruising across the Atlantic ocean from New York and sailing due east, in what nation would we arrive at?

Ans.—Traveling due east from New York you would first see land at the Azores, about 50 miles to the south, but you would arrive in Portugal and very close to Spain's boundary line.

Answer to train problem above—The brakeman was walking all the time, so he therefore walked 20 miles. Of course his actual strides wouldn't measure 20 miles, but he was walking that distance.

Ques.—How do they catch monkeys alive?

Ans.—Usually traps are set for them by placing sugar in a glass jar that has a mouth just large enough for a monkey to get his paw through. He gets a handful of the sugar and then can't get his hand out, not having sense enough to let loose of the sugar. Thus he is captured.

Ques.—What is meant by the "Appian Way"?

Ans.—The Appian Way is a famous road that connects Rome with the southern part of Italy. It was constructed in the five-year period between 312 B. C., and 307 B. C. It was paved with large, thick, square stones, and after more than 2,000 years, the road is still in good condition with most of the original stones.

Ques.—Is a buffalo and a bison the same?

Ans.—They are different species of the same family. The buffalo is an oxlike animal with long horns, found native in Asia and Southern Africa. The bison is found in Europe and North America, and are sometimes referred to incorrectly as "buffalo." They have short horns, shaggy hair of a dark-brown color and attains a height of about five feet. The American bison is now nearly extinct.

Ques.—When did P. T. Barnum get started in the circus business? And how did he start?

Ans.—P. T. Barnum was the proprietor of a small village store, and for some time sold lottery tickets. About 1830 he bought a Negro woman named Joye Heth, said to be 160 years old, and who was George Washington's nurse. He exhibited her for money, and was on the highway to success when she died. Following up this success, he discovered the famous Gen. Tom Thumb, whose real name was Charles S. Stratton, and who was the smallest man in the world. From that time on, his business venture grow and grew until he became the greatest circus showman until his death on April 7, 1891.

Ques.—Who invented the telephone? And what was his nationality?

Ans.—The telephone was invented by Alexander Bell in 1872. He was a Scotchman, but became an American citizen before starting work on his invention which was first exhibited in Philadelphia in 1876.

Zebus of Various Sizes

In India zebus are in practically all sizes. Some are as small as dogs; some are larger than any other cattle. There are all sorts of colors, from a cream to a gray-blue. But the most-prized zebus are white. These animals are sacred to Hindus, cannot be harmed, must be worshiped at all times. White zebus sprawl all over the sidewalks in Indian cities. Hindus never disturb them, passing in the gutter after bowing.

Adam Preferred Blonde

Travelers who have seen the frescoes on the walls of the Twelfth century cathedral of Viborg in Denmark report that Eve in Eden is represented with blonde hair.

DO THEY MISS ME AT HOME?

Do they miss me at home, do they miss me?
'Twould be an assurance most dear,
To know at this moment some loved one
Were saying "I wish he were here";
To feel that the group at the fireside
Were thinking of me as I roam,
O yes, 'twould be joy beyond measure
To know that they miss me at home.

When twilight approaches the season
That ever is sacred in song,
Does someone repeat my name over,
And sigh that he tarries so long?
And is there a chord in the music
That's missed when my voice is away,
And a chord in each heart that awaketh,
Regret at my wearisome stay?

Do they sit me a chair near the table,
When evening's home pleasures are nigh,
When the candles are lit in the parlor,
And the stars show in the sky?
And when the "Good-nights" are repeated,
And all lay them down to their sleep,
Do they think of the absent and waft me,
A whispered Good-night, while they weep?

Do they miss me at home, do they miss me
At morning, at noon, at night,
And lingers one gloomy shadow around them
That only my presence can light?
Are joys less invitingly welcome,
And pleasures less hale than before,
Because one is missed from the circle,
Because I am with them no more?

The old Attic Chest yielded this last week.—Arthur Carlton.

Old Age Insurance Rate Is Unchanged

"There is no change in the employee-employer contribution rate for Old Age Insurance under the Social Security Act," it was said today by Richard H. Hendrick, manager of the Jackson field office of this Federal Government agency.

"Recently many inquiries have come to our office as to the 1938 contribution rate under the Old Age Insurance plan," Mr. Hendrick said. "In some instances in Region V, of which this Social Security office is a part, it has been reported that employers are now deducting two per cent from the wages of their workers, for Old Age Insurance.

"This is in error as the contribution rate remains at one per cent throughout 1938 and 1939. Both the employee and the employer are required to contribute one per cent of wages which are covered by the Social Security Act. The confusion probably is the result of new contribution rates now in effect under state unemployment compensation laws," Mr. Hendrick added.

"As the Social Security Act now stands, the contributions for Old Age Insurance increase one-half of one per cent, for both employee and employer, every three years. Starting in 1940 the rate will be 1½ per cent, but there will be no change until that time as the law now stands," Mr. Hendrick said.

"All contributions under Old Age Insurance are paid to the United States Collector of Internal Revenue at Detroit. The contributions for the first three months of 1938 are due not later than the last day of April. An informational report of contributions showing the names and amounts for individuals also is required at that time," Mr. Hendrick said.

So far more than 4,500,000 Social Security account numbers have been issued in Region V, which includes the states of Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky. The Jackson office, which covers the counties of Jackson, Washtenaw, Lenawee and Hillsdale, is a district in which it is estimated that more than 35,000 account numbers have been issued to date.

Since the Jackson office became a typing center on Sept. 1, 1937, it has issued approximately 6000 account numbers.

CHILDREN IN COURT

Judge Malcolm Hatfield

A psychiatrist was assigned the task of assisting the parents of a delinquent girl in discovering how they themselves were responsible for her development of certain manifestations that led to abnormal behavior. This was the first time these parents had ever attempted to trace the source of such manifestations.

After the second interview the psychiatrist was able to point out certain conditions prevailing within the family which were responsible for her behavior. He emphasized the fact that these parents placed greater emphasis on physical hygiene and not enough significance on mental hygiene, symptoms which were indicated by their daughter's tendencies toward day dreaming, jealousy and self-consciousness.

Parental attitudes are exceedingly important, since the average child unconsciously adopts the viewpoints which the parents hold. Consequently parents frequently need assistance from a psychiatrist in working out their own goals of achievement, and also their own attitudes and relationships to each other and the other members of the family.

cials. The united theme was "Save lives in 1938 by reducing the highway massacre."

How the newspapers can aid the state in achieving this objective was the topic of talks by Dr. Eugene B. Elliott, superintendent, state department of public insruction; Murray D. Van Wagoner, commissioner, state highway department; Oscar Olander, commissioner, Michigan State police; and Leon D. Case, secretary of state.

That speed may be a major contributing factor to Michigan appalling highway toll was one conclusion advanced. State officials are inclining more and more to believe that a 50-mile-an-hour limit should be established on main traffic thoroughfares with provisions in the law to permit higher speeds over certain designated stretches of straight highway through sparsely settled territory.

25 Per Cent Drop

Michigan citizens may well expect to enjoy better health and have more time to enjoy life.

Take the problem of the deaths of mothers at childbirth. The American death rate for this single cause has been almost a national disgrace in contrast with improved conditions prevalent in European nations.

It is a matter of pride to Michigan citizens to know that this state made remarkable progress during 1937. Deaths of mothers dropped 25 per cent in 1937—the greatest single decrease in recent years. Only 276 mothers died in childbirth during ten months of 1937, compared with 370 in the same period of 1936. A new all-time low was recorded also for infant deaths.

For the first time, public health nursing services were extended to 21 counties in Michigan.

Since social security funds became available in 1936, a total of 17 counties in the rural areas of Northern Michigan have been aided in organizing county or district health departments. These counties include Alger, Schoolcraft, Bay, Chippewa, Delta, Dickinson, Houghton, Iron, Keweenaw, Mason, Manistee, Mecosta, Osceola, Menominee, Ontonagon, Baraga and Sanilac.

Need of Dental Care

Dental hygiene surveys in Michigan public schools indicate that 67 to 95 per cent of all school children are in the need of dental care.

It is of interest to note that social security funds, made available to Michigan, financed an extension of public health work to the tune of $391,835.

And still there are 27 counties in Michigan which lack modern health protective services.

Medical science, aided by an awakened public consciousness, has made encouraging gains.

How about the highway massacre? Surely something can be done in 1938 to reduce this shameful sacrifice of life on our public highways!

Marietta

Marietta is Hebrew and means "little Mary." It is also a flower name, from the mariet, another name for the Canterbury bell, which in floriography means "acknowledgement."

Habits of the Lion

The black mane of the lion, which is not so noticeable as he lies at ease, bristles out conspicuously when he's mad. He also waves his tail over his back, showing its black tip.

Thirty-Seven Ton Meteorite Biggest

The largest meteorite in any museum is the 27½-ton "annighito" iron brought by Admiral Peary from Greerland.

OUR NEIGHBORS

NORTHVILLE—The announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Ethel Hinds, daughter of James Hinds of Sault Sainte Marie, and Roland D. Widmayer, son of Benjamin Widmayer, which occurred at 6 p. m. Wednesday, January 19, in St. Peter's Evangelical church at Plymouth. The vows were exchanged before the Rev. Edgar H. Hoenecke. Attending the couple were Miss Elleene Warra and Charles Pierce, both of Detroit. Following a visit with the bridegroom's father in Chelsea, Mr. and Mrs. Widmayer returned Saturday to Northville to make their home in the Ware apartment, 222 Hutton avenue. Mr. Widmayer is manager of the Kroger store here.—Record.

HOWELL—Last week under the supervision of Conservation Officer Barrow a fox hunt was staged in the northern part of the county. Dogs and men combined efforts to the end that the fox population might be diminished. At one time during the hunt six fox were on the run. Other hunts are planned for the near future as reports indicate that fox and coyotes are doing considerable damage in certain parts of the county.— County Press.

MORENCI—Curiosity on the part of Ohio people resulted in the death of the deer, which had leisurely wandered around Lenawee county for two weeks, feeding with cattle and playing around barnyards. A week ago the deer had traveled from the northeast corner of the county within a half mile of Morenci; then Thursday it was seen near Chesterfield. People began to gather to see the deer and the animal became frightened and ran. With the aid of automobiles and dogs the chase was begun, and the fawn soon became exhausted, jumped a fence and broke a leg. The sheriff's office was notified and a deputy put the animal out of its misery by shooting it.—Observer.

What Would Happen If

Stinky Steinaway really got a date with Ruth B.

Raymond I. and Valerie L. did not spend hours talking together every day.

Miss Allen kept order in her classes.

The Senior class was given a real opportunity to earn some money.

Betty V. ever did get that wish she's been wishing for about a month and a half. (Could it be that Crusty is getting the wish?)

Ted B. came down to the level of the other Seniors.

The basketball players who are ineligible were honest and truly forbidden to play.

Editorial

Attention, my sporting lads, and I shall endeavor to tell you the reason, or reasons, for our young sports men going to rot. One of the main reasons is their studies. They are either too hard for them and they are trying their hardest to pass their classes, or else they are not trying to get them. After extensive research we find it is usually the latter, and out of this arises the question of their importance on the team.

Don't get the wrong idea. I don't mean their importance as players on the team, but the importance they think they have on the team. Perhaps you are a good player but don't get the swell-head about it. It takes five men to make a basketball team and eleven to make a football team, and every one should have to do the same amount of work to acquire their positions on the team.

But, for example, if we should have two players who don't study and still they play, it isn't fair to the ones who study and work hard, both physically and mentally, and have to watch on the bench. The so-called fixing breaks down the morale of the school, the school spirit, and the players' interest in the game. I believe everyone should have a fair and just chance.

Basketball

Dundee Overpowers Chelsea Quintet

Chelsea high school's basketball team met its second defeat of the season at the hands of powerful Dundee. Dundee jumped to an early lead in the first few minutes of play and held that lead throughout the entire game.

The high point men for Dundee were the high scoring Davis twins, while Niehaus was high point man for Chelsea, all three having nine points each.

This defeat dropped Chelsea to a tie for third place with Tecumseh, while Dundee remained at the top with five victories and no defeats. It has been said that Dundee has an excellent chance of winning the state Class "C" title this year and just between you and me and the gatepost I'm inclined to agree with the critics.

News of the Day

Janet H. has been wondering ever since last Friday night what it is that Gretchen B. has that she hasn't got.

Did you know that R. B. had a Secret Passion? He is tall, with brown hair, blue eyes, and all together is very handsome. He wears a bright blue sweater and his initials are M. H. Can you guess?

Don't you love that strange relationship between Dan K. and Ruth R.? We all know she is just c-r-a-z-y about Helen.

We see that old "Hill-billy" Heim, that grand old woman-hater, has at last fallen for the charm of none other than Virginia Lehman. Well—you know the old saying, "When the cat's away, the mice will play."

Seeing that Rolly doesn't eat onions anymore, and that he is saving his money, and is often seen on the greenhouse hill, it looks like he has one more feat—To dispose of the Cassidy Lake boys.

Interview

Miss Brown is a graduate of the Normal College at Ypsilanti and of the University of Michigan. She has received an A. B. and M. A. degree in History. Miss Brown has taught at Adrian and Pontiac before teaching in Chelsea. She thinks Chelsea is a very nice town and the people are very pleasant. She believes she will like Chelsea.

Clubs

Journalism Party

The Journalism club, as you know, broke away from its old tradition. Instead of having the usual tea dance the club had a party in the gym. The members of the club invited a guest and came to the party—there they played cards, monopoly and danced—later, refreshments were served and everyone retired into outer darkness.

First Grade

We have 31 children in our First Grade now. Patsy Ruth Whitfield from Ann Arbor has joined us. We like her and hope she will be happy working with us.

Some of us pleased our mothers with the writing books we took home Friday. We have learned to write more words and can write stories too. It is fun writing stories at the board and easels. Mary Jane Jarvis wrote a letter to her cousin, Geraldine who lives in Monroe, Mich.

Miss Bollore is reading "City Child's Book"—a story about Jenny and Jim in San Francisco. Jenny and Jim dress like we do, but they travel many more different ways than we do. They promised their Big Brother Bill they would learn not to be "Back seat drivers". We want to be like them.

The eight people in Jane Merrill's reading class have another new book. It is The Alice and Jerry—Day In and Day Out book.

The seven people in Dean Wortley's Reading group have a new book too.

Second Grade

We have had an almost perfect attendance this past week in spite of the cold.

Patricia Keeny, Mary Lantis and Minnie Piatt brought in a nice collection of cocoons for us to watch.

We have a nice sliding place out on the school grounds and we are learning to be good sports in our play.

Valentine Day will soon be coming. We are already making plans to celebrate it.

Sixth Grade

In reading we read a story about "West Winds, the Yankee Clipper Ship". Some of the class have pictures of the history of ships. The story was very interesting. Our calendar of historical facts helps us very much. In it there is a picture of an American Clipper ship. In the sixth grade a few people are bringing pictures about boats to make a booklet about the history of boats. Others are bringing pictures to put on the bulletin board. We found in the dictionary a page of ships. We took it out and it is now on the bulletin board. The ships are in order from old fashion to the most modern.

The motto this week is "Fortune came and loudly knocked at my door with cheery hail; but alas for Fortune's labors, I was ever at my neighbor's, pouring out a hard luck tale."

Ants Grow Mushrooms

Leaf-cutting ants grow mushrooms for food, and when an ant queen flies away to found a new colony, she takes along a bit of fungus with which to start a new mushroom crop.

Why the Housewife Wants to Cook With Electricity!

It is CLEAN. No smoke, no soot, no blackened pots and pans, no soiled walls and curtains.
It is COOL. The heat is used to cook the food, not to cook the cook.
It is HEALTHFUL. No fumes, no products of combustion in the kitchen atmosphere. Tastier, better cooked meats and vegetables.
It is ECONOMICAL. Not only is the cost of operation reasonable in comparison to other methods, but there are many other savings such as less shrinkage of roasts.
It is MODERN. Nearly every housewife would like to have an All-Electric Kitchen.
It is SAFE. No matches, no flame, no chance for tragic burns of asphyxiation.
It is FAST. Modern electric ranges will cook as quickly as any other type of range—for some operations they are faster.
It is TIME SAVING. Less bother, less watching and with the timer control meals can be cooked while the housewife is away from home.
It is ACCURATE. The electric range accurate temperature control makes possible absolutely uniform results.
It is SIMPLE. Electric Cooking is now the easiest and simplest way to cook.

JERUSALEM SCHOOL NEWS

The school month of January closed for the Jerusalem school, January 28. Those neither absent nor tardy during January were: Joyce Eiseman, Robert and Norman Koch, Robert and Doris Trinkle, Lois Schlosser, Stella Valant, Arlene and Wilma Koengeter, Billy, Gilbert and Zella Forshee.

We all had our pictures taken. We exchanged pictures, and received one of the teacher.

Those of us who sold more than 25 Christmas seals received our prizes last week. The school also got a book for a prize.

We are very proud of our new electric stove which we received from the Detroit Edison Co. Jan. 20. We also have a new electric clock. We children paid for the wiring for the stove and for the new clock with some of the money we received from our exhibits at the Washtenaw County Fair. We also have a desk lamp for the teacher's desk.

Miss Collinge, the music teacher, visited our school Jan. 19. She said our music work was all very well done. We know all of our songs and the three dances. We have the records nearly finished and plans for the music scrapbook. Several of us are planning to take part in the Music Festival in May.

We have been taking our oral reading tests the past weeks. Some have good scores, above their grade, and a few need to work on their oral reading some more.

The first grade are doing quite a bit of reading now. They are enjoying the new library books. They displayed one of their stories in one part of the sand table. They have made their monthly seatwork book and put all their January work in it.

The first grade also made a farm book with pictures of farm life and work and wrote good stories for each picture.

The third grade have made their monthly seatwork books also. They have found some good pictures for our Health scrapbook and written good summaries for them. They have been studying about the flag in connection with reading, art, and music and language.

The fifth grade have made a cotton poster in connection with their geography. They have a lot of clippings in their geography notebook in connection with the regions studied. They have been studying about Lincoln and have pictured several stories of his life in the sand-box. They also added clippings to the Lincoln scrapbook.

The sixth grade are also adding many pictures to their geography notebook. They are reading books in connection with their geography about the people of the countries they are studying. In connection with language the 5th and 6th grades found a very good picture to match a story in their language book. They then used the picture to write stories of their own. Then placed the picture and the stories in order of quality on a poster. The results were very good and it was interesting, as they decided it all alone.

The eighth grade finished their study of Michigan. They added quite a bit to the scrapbook. They are now working on civics. They have performed several of the experiments in nature study. In English they made a "Good English" poster and some "Good English" rhymes. We are trying to learn to always speak correct English.

For art work we have drawn trees in winter form. We have drawn many kinds and learned much about their shape. We have also drawn pictures of good and poor posture in connection with Health. Each of us drew some one else to show them their posture. We then put this series of pictures on our moving picture machine.

We have looked up in various books about the posture of people in foreign lands and written stories about it.

We have also studied the problem of proper seating. We added pictures, stories, and clippings to our scrapbook on Health. We have studied the problem on colds also.

We have all had our eyes tested.

The girls are still leading in the Health Race. The president of our Civic Health club is Jane Schlosser; the secretary is Arlene Koengeter.

Grass 200 Feet Tall

If you saw grass 200 feet tall, you would be surprised; but a species of grass does attain that height. Only it does not look like grass, and we call it bamboo. It grows as much as a foot a day. The bamboo has a hundred uses. In the East, says London Tit-Bits Magazine, the tender shoots are cut with care, curried and eaten, and the dish is regarded as a great delicacy. But the uncooked shoot must never be allowed to touch the bare skin, for tiny hairs on it cause intense irritation to human beings. Among the articles into which bamboo is fashioned are poles, rugs, screens, milk containers, water buckets, gramophone needles, flutes and other musical instruments, water pipes, pipes for smoking, cigarette holders, sweets, kites, canes, swords, pens, fences, lances and scores of other things.

The "Roorback"

A "roorback" is a fictitious story or forged report, concerning a political candidate, circulated just before an election, when it is too late to prove its falsity before voting begins. It originated from a story printed in 1844 to injure the reputation of James K. Polk, candidate for President. Just before the election, the Chronicle of Ithaca, N. Y., printed what was supposed to be an extract from "A Tour Through the Western and Southern States in 1836," by Baron Roorback. The item contained a description of a slave-driver's camp and stated that 43 of the slaves had been purchased by Polk. This statement was printed in a number of other papers, but the part concerning Polk was proved to be a forgery. The description of the camp had been taken from Featherstonhaugh's "Excursion Through the Slaves States." There was no author named Baron Roorback.

"The Book of the Dead"

"The Book of the Dead" (Book of Going Forth in the Day), an Egyptian text, was established in its present form before 700 B. C. The greater part of it is found in pyramid inscriptions and in papyri of about 1500 B. C. It includes the prescribed funeral words, including magic formulas for the dead to use. There is also some description of the afterworld.

Lighthouses Wrecked by Waves

All over the world, the sea seems resentful of man's efforts to help mariners. Four times lighthouses have been built on England's Eddystone rock. The first, constructed in 1694, was torn to pieces in only ten years. The second lasted more than 50, the third more than 100. But in the end, the booming surf had its way.

Buttermaking Is Traced Centuries Before Christ

Buttermaking dates back to many centuries before Christ. Wherever the word occurs in the Bible it is "chemah," signifying curdled milk. Perhaps the first Biblical reference is in Genesis (8:18), "Abraham took butter and milk." Again in Deuteronomy (32:14), among the blessings which Jeshurum had enjoyed, we find "butter of kine" contrasted with "milk of sheep." Solomon is reported to have said, Proverbs (31:33), "Surely, the churning of milk bringeth forth butter."

From these Biblical references and others, observes a writer in Hoard's Dairyman, we learn that butter was in much use among the Hebrews and was prepared, as done today, by the Arabs and Syrians.

The Arabs of Hejaz put milk in a large copper pan over a slow fire and a little sour milk or portion of the dried entrails of a lamb is thrown in. Milk then separates and is put in a goat skin bag, which is tied to one of the tent poles and constantly moved back and forth for two hours. The buttery substance then coagulates, the water is pressed out, and the butter put into another skin.

In two days the butter is again placed over the fire with the addition of a portion of burgoul (wheat boiled with leaves and dried in the sun) and allowed to boil for some time, during which it is carefully skimmed. It is then found that the burgoul has precipitated all foreign substances and that the butter oil remains quite clear at the top.

This is the process used by the Bedouins, and is also employed by the settled people of Syria and Arabia. The chief difference is that, in making butter and cheese, the townspeople employ the milk of cows and buffaloes whereas the Bedouins, who do not keep these animals, use that of sheep and goats.

Alligators Named Incorrectly

Alligators are named incorrectly. Spaniards called them "una ligarta," meaning a lizard, though the alligator is not a lizard.

Bering Strait Found in 1648

The Bering strait, separating Asia from America, was discovered by a Cossack named Deshnev in 1648.

Oil Once a Nuisance

Oil was regarded as a nuisance by American brine-well operators in early days, because the fluid contaminated the salt beds, forcing abandonment of many salt sources.

A Cheerful Temper

A cheerful temper, joined with innocence, will make beauty attractive, knowledge delightful, and wit good-natured. It will lighten sickness, poverty and affliction; convert ignorance into an amiable simplicity; and render deformity itself agreeable.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—James Lambert tries in vain to dissuade his beautiful foster-daughter, Leonora, from marrying Don Mason, young "rolling stone," whom he likes but of whom he disapproves according to his conventional business-man standards. He tells her, "Unless a house is founded upon a rock, it will not survive." Leonora suspects the influence of her half-brother, Ned, always jealous of the girl since the day his father brought her home from the deathbed of her mother, abandoned by her Italian baritone lover. Don arrives in the midst of the argument, and Lambert realizes the frank understanding between the two.

CHAPTER II—Sitting up late into the night, Lambert reviews the whole story, of Nora as a child, at boarding school, studying music abroad, meeting Don on the return trip. In the morning he delivers his ultimatum, to give Don a job with Ned for a year's showdown. When Nora suggests the possibility of running away with Don, Lambert threatens disinheritance. Don agrees to the job, but before a month is over, his nerves are jumpy, he cannot sleep at night, he is too tired to go out much with Nora, and admits to her that he feels stifled. Nora soothes him with her music. He falls asleep and his face is more peaceful than it has been in many weeks.

CHAPTER III—Nora grows quieter, and broods over Don, complains to her father of Ned's spying on him, and decides that rather than see Don's spirit broken, she will run away. She urges her father to put an end to the futile experiment. James Lambert is obdurate and angry. Lambert tells her that if Don quits she will quit with him; that he will be through with her. He adds that if she tires of her bargain it will be useless to come to him for help. Later Don and Nora discuss the situation. Don promises to buck up and take life more calmly. "We'll stick it out," he says.

CHAPTER IV—With the coming of spring, Don is full of unrest and wanderlust, and takes long walks at night. One evening a poor girl speaks to him, and in his pity for her, he gives her money. A car passes at that moment, flashes headlights and moves on. A terrific heat wave ushers in the summer, and Nora refuses to go to the country with her father. Ned, meanwhile, insinuates to his father about Don's evenings away from Nora, but Lambert refuses to listen. Meanwhile, Don broods over the undermining of his morale.

CHAPTER V—At the height of the heat wave, when Don is finding everything insupportable, Ned speaks of having the goods on him, having seen him give a girl money. When Ned scoffs at the true story of the episode, Don knocks him down, and is through. He calls Nora, who insists on running away with him to get married, realizing it is her job to restore Don's faith in himself. Her good-by to her father is met with complete silence.

CHAPTER VI—Don and Nora go to Maine and settle down in the studio of Carl Venable, a famous artist friend of Don's, whose daughter he saved from drowning. Nora writes her father. There is no answer, except her baggage, containing her entire wardrobe, and $1,000 hidden in a gold mesh bag.

"She will to me," Don countered. "Beauty is more, so much more than skin deep, Nora. I wasn't referring to that patrician nose which you're so proud of, or your level brows, or those starry eyes that transform you into a sort of dream come true; but to something intangible—something deep down within, dearest: the thing that made you relinquish a fortune for a tramp like me. There!" he exclaimed, slipping lightly from the packing case, "that's off my chest. I've wanted to say it for a long time and was too shy."

"You shy?" scoffed Nora; but the eyes she lifted to him were indeed stars.

"And now," said Don, "I'm going to find that pendant. Jade is a symbol of virtue to the Chinese, you know; and unless my eyes deceived me when I bought the thing from an impoverished coolie (more loot, I fear!), it's lovely enough for that most virtuous of wives—my own."

He made her a formal little bow, and Nora retaliated, laughing: "You talk like a book! And you must have learned that bow in dancing school. But you've aroused my curiosity regarding the pendant, Don. Where shall we look?"

They found the pendant: a thing of such rare beauty that the girl declared she should regard it as her wedding gift. They found an ivory elephant from Belgium; and a vase from Dresden so feminine and dainty that Nora laughed at the thought of a mere man's buying it.

"But I bought it for my wife," explained Don soberly. "She must have been in kindergarten at the time."

"While her husband, a kiddie of eleven, toured Germany alone?" asked Nora, rising to put the teapot back in its case. "This jade is too valuable to be left here indefinitely, Don. What shall we do with it?"

"Ship it to Ven's studio in New York. A friend of his looks after things while they're abroad. He's got my rugs. I couldn't leave 'em here for fear of moths, you know."

"Rugs!" gasped Nora, sinking limply into the priceless chair. "On top of all these treasures do you possess rugs?"

"Only three, lady." Don spoke as if confessing a grave fault. "But rugs, if you must know the bitter truth, are my pet weakness; and the three in question—well, wait till you see 'em!"

His wife drew in a deep breath of astonishment.

"Is—is there anything more?"

Don had to laugh as he responded: "Books, my dear. Too many of 'em to unpack here. I lose my mind when I go into a bookstore; and unless you want your children to go barefoot, Nora, you must lead me gently but firmly away from such temptation."

She smiled; then after a moment observed thoughtfully:

"I seem to have married a most surprising individual. But why, may I inquire, when Father was probing your deplorable lack of bank balance, didn't you mention these treasures you've collected?"

The young man stared at her, eyes widening.

"Do you know, dear girl, such a proceeding never occurred to me. That may have been because I haven't regarded these things as property to be disposed of in an emergency. They seem a part of myself, Nora, because each one recalls some memory I wouldn't exchange for any amount of gold. But I confess to being rather dumb, all things considered. Your father has a nice taste himself. He would have been impressed."

Don's voice was rueful, and Nora promised: "We'll impress him yet! I'll make the most of these assets in my next letter."

For despite James Lambert's continued silence, Leonora's chatty chronicles of her own doings had been unfailing. They seemed to bridge the gap a little—to bring him nearer.

"And to know that he knows we're well and happy, is something, isn't it?" she asked Don wistfully one day in late September.

"It's a great deal—to a loyal soul like you," he answered, and turned away because the momentary sadness in her eyes had hurt him. "Come on, Nora," he called with cheer from the porch five minutes later. "Tide's out. What say we tramp a mile or two on the hard sand?"

It was an hour later when they discovered the stable beyond the dunes. Its ugly cupola, with tiny windows of red, amber and purple glass, caught Nora's eyes, and turning inland they explored what once had been a homesite.

"House must have burned," said Don, looking into a gaping cellar hole now overrun with fireweed. "A pity the barn didn't go too, Nora. It's a blot on the landscape."

"But the view from here is glorious. Come and see." Nora was standing before the stable door. "It's queer the owners didn't rebuild after living in such a heavenly place."

"And queerer," grinned Don, his eyes lifting to the cupola, "that those gay, enticing windows have escaped the stone-throwing prowess of some small boy. In a village the same temptation would have been fatal—to the windows, I mean!"

"I never could understand that destructive trait in the youthful male," said Leonora.

"That's only because the youthful female can't hit a target if she tries, my dear. Gosh! Nora, you're right about this view. I never saw a finer stretch of ocean. It's a big barn, isn't it? This doesn't look like farm land, either. Well, we must be getting on if we're to return via the post office and finish our supper before dark."

The postmaster produced one letter. Nora's heart quickened as he held it out, quickened until she saw the foreign stamp.

"Is it from Mr. Venable?"

Don nodded, tearing it open eagerly, for once unmindful of her disappointment.

He read it sauntering along the village street, his wife's hand on his arm preventing him from colliding with trees or light posts. He smiled as he read—chuckled—lost to everything save this message from his friend; and for the moment Nora felt strangely shut out—forgotten. Then Don turned, and she saw that his eyes were shining with some awakened interest.

"I just skimmed through the thing," he told her happily. "I'll read it aloud soon as we reach the shack. Ven writes a bully letter. He wants us to join them in Italy next month, Nora. Says there's no end of things I could do and write about — knows an English editor who's keen for that sort of stuff and will pay well for it—says that Constance wants to know"—Don grinned at the thrust—"if I'm still oblivious to the necessity of filthy lucre! What do you think of the plan, darling? How does a winter at Capri appeal to you? You're sure to fall for Ven and Connie and the youngsters. And they'll love you, Nora. They'll bow right down and worship or I miss my guess. We're foot-loose now. I can't perceive a single reason why we shouldn't do it. Let's go."

And Nora, who was beginning to suspect a good and sufficient reason for staying home, looked into her husband's eager face, lighted once more with the love of roaming that was so much a part of him, and answered gamely: "Let's!"

On a crisp October day some three weeks later they sailed for Naples. Despite a promise of winter in the air, Nora left the "shack" almost reluctantly; and remembering the dismay with which she had regarded the place a few months earlier, was forced to smile at her changed attitude. But it was home to her now. When, the girl asked herself, and with just cause, perhaps, would they have another?

Don, absorbed in eager preparations for the new adventure, felt no regrets—no visible regrets, at least. This hurt Nora a little, foolish though she knew the hurt to be. Perhaps, she mused, her husband would feel differently were he aware of the secret she was guarding. But it must remain a secret until they got away. On that Nora was resolved. Otherwise Don might sense her ridiculous dread of starting out for a foreign country at just this time—might even insist on changing all their plans; and that, she argued, wouldn't be fair to him. After all, hadn't she married this "soldier of fortune" with her eyes wide open? Hadn't she known he'd never be happy tied to a home? And there was no sane reason why they shouldn't go. If she had a mother to be near her here—a sister—but there was no one, not even a father as things stood now. Why should she care?

And like a beacon light, its cheerful rays piercing the fog, was the steadying thought of Constance Venable. Leonora was pondering on this one afternoon when she tramped alone up the deserted beach. The shack was in order, ready for their early departure in the morning. Don had accompanied Jim Perkins to the station with their luggage ("Such swell luggage, darling," he said gleefully, "thanks to your father for sending on those steamer trunks!"); and Nora, overcome with what she considered an unwarranted attack of homesickness, was making a gallant effort to walk it off.

Yes, she was thinking as she watched a gull dive gracefully down in search of sustenance, there would be Constance Venable. Don had told her so much about the older woman that she seemed a friend. Constance had had four children. Philip, the youngest, was born abroad. It was silly to worry, even for one minute. Connie would tell her what to do, of course.

Nora moved softly, not wishing to disturb a flock of sandpipers hurrying along in the wake of a receding wave; but at her cautious step they seemed to sense some danger, lifted their wings and "like the famous ladybug," thought the girl whimsically, "flew away home." Watching their swift, sure passage she found herself envying those birds a little. They recalled some words she must have heard in childhood. A verse out of the Bible, wasn't it? "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head."

How true that was of a vagabond like Don! And how long, wondered Don's wife, had those old, old words lain dormant in her brain, waiting to stir at sight of a flock of sandpipers flying to shelter?

Nora turned toward the dunes, wishing (although she couldn't have said why) to gaze on something less restless than the sea; conscious that nostalgia still had the upper hand. Somehow, it must be vanquished before Don returned. Their last honeymoon supper must be a happy one—happy for both of them.

"But I'm pretty tired and shouldn't have walked so far," she told herself as the stable they'd explored not long before came into view, its varicolored cupola windows sparkling like jewels in the sunlight. There was a seat in front of the old barn: a pew from some abandoned church. Why not rest there for a while—feast her eyes on that matchless vista of curving shore beyond the bay—get back her calmness, and then go home to Don?

What a beautiful place! Nora breathed deeply the sweet scent of balsam. How her father would love it! And with this thought she saw into her own heart, facing the knowledge that her reluctance in going so far away lay in the fact that she could not reach James Lambert should he need her. True, he had been curiously unforgiving for one who had forgiven so much in others. In their tragic parting he had been neither fair to Don nor generous to herself. Yet the girl knew that if anything happened (that fateful "anything" we cannot voice), her father would send for her. She knew that should she fail to come safely through the "valley of the shadow" which lay ahead, he would be at her side—with Don—when the lights went out.

And she was going away, far, far beyond the reach of those steady, comforting hands she loved so dearly. Nora's eyes misted. The lovely, distant shore became a blur. A lump rose in her throat. She could not swallow it; and said, aloud, a valorous effort to pull herself together: "Hold tight, Nora! Don't be a baby. Everything has its price, hasn't it? Did you really expect to avoid paying? Be your age, can't you? Remember you're not a butterfly any more. (It's just as well Dad kept those silver slippers!) Don't you dare cry or I'll be ashamed of you. I—"

She sprang up, startled, hearing nothing, yet cannily aware of an approaching presence. Then she saw Don emerging from between the highest dunes. He waved; came toward her rapidly. Not even that dragging sand, she noticed, could take the lightness from his tread.

"Gee! woman, you gave me the dickens of a scare!" He sank quite breathless onto the old pew, drawing her down beside him. "I actually wondered for a moment (a terrible moment, Nora!) if you'd been kidnaped. Then I discovered your footprints in the wet sand and the rest was easy. But don't you dare run off like this again and leave no message. I've got a—a palpitation! Feel my heart."

"You goose!" said Nora; and at something in her voice Don turned, scanning her closely.

"Why, what's the matter?"

"Nothing. I'm just a little tired."

"Nonsense! I think you're homesick."

"Only—only a bit. We've been so happy here."

He smiled at that.

"Is happiness a matter of location, silly?"

"Of course not, but . . ."

She hesitated, and Don said with mock severity: "Listen to me, Madam. Something has given you the blues—our last day, too! I sha'n't allow it. What does it matter where we are, if we're together? Why, we're going to have a wonderful winter, Nora! Italy. The narrow streets of Capri. Warmth and sunshine. Good friends like Ven and Connie when we want 'em; and always each other, sweetheart. Why are you sad?"

"No reason," admitted Nora, smiling at him. "No reason at all." Then in a defensive effort to change the subject: "Don, do you realize what we're sitting on?"

He turned, stood up, regarding a carved post with interest.

"It looks like—it is a pew out of some old church, Nora. Do you see this carving? It must have been done in the days when carpentry was an art, and a man worked for the love of his task, as we all should now. A pew! A real old-fashioned pew, isn't it? Say! can't you imagine the family that used to occupy it? First Mother, rustling up the aisle on Sunday morning in her best black silk, followed by three—no—" (his eyes were measuring the seat's capacity) "four kiddies, hushed and important, each one clasping his penny for the contribution box. And lastly, Father—very dignified, you know, and a bit uncomfortable in his Sunday suit—shoes squeaking a little; while some prim old maid (the village music teacher), plays soft music on a melodeon. . . . See it, Nora?"

"See it!" Nora's troubles were lost in this picture of Don's imagination. "Why, it's every bit as plain as if I'd been there. Do you know, Don, I—I believe you could write a book!"

Don laughed at the thought, his eyes still on the ancient carving.

"Maybe I could—a book that nobody but you would read. Do you know," he added after a thoughtful moment, "it goes against everything in me, leaving a splendid piece of work like this to be battered by the tempests of a New England winter. Why, it'll be buried in snow for weeks and weeks, Nora! Doesn't seem right, does it—a pew out of an old church? If I knew who owned the thing I—I believe I'd buy it and cart it to the shack. What say we set it inside the barn, dear? This door's not locked. I tried it the other day."

Already he was lifting the rusted hasp—putting his shoulder to the heavy door. Then he turned, and Nora saw that her husband's thoughts were far away from that weather-beaten stable beside the sea.

"I can't help wondering about the man who carved these posts," he observed dreamily. "I can't help thinking how I'd feel myself if, after creating anything so good, it was left neglected in such a place. You see, the chap who did this carving put his heart into it. He must have, or the work wouldn't be so perfect. For all we know, it may have been his masterpiece. And he was carving to the glory of God, Nora—something he thought permanent—something he thought would be a part of that old church long, long after he was gone and perhaps forgotten." Don paused, flushing a little as he met her eyes. "Am—am I an idiot, Nora, to want to save it for him?"

She answered, rising: "You are a dreamer; but I love you for it, Don."

Don lifted the rusty hasp and putting his shoulder to the heavy door, found it unlocked.

"And you're a marvel to understand," he told her ardently. "Most any other girl would think me crazy. Lend a hand with that end, dear, and we'll have it safe inside in no time. Gee!" (as they laid their burden down) "what a peach of a barn! I'm going to climb into the cupola. I've a longing to look out of those colored windows."

"And risk breaking a leg so we can't start tomorrow?" retorted Nora. "Really, Don, I believe there's no one in the world just like you. One minute you're a thoughtful idealist; then—presto, change! A bit of colored glass transforms you into a little boy!"

Yes, that was Don! Nora was thinking of this when, hours later, she lay trying to sleep, yet unable to close her eyes as she watched a harvest moon brighten the room. That was Don—a dreamer who saw into the hearts of others. His imaginative sympathy might run away with him at times, as it had today, perhaps; but without that quality—without his unfailing capacity for seeing "the other fellow's side," would he be able to regard her father without bitterness?

Her father! Leonora had put the thought of him behind her during the last few hours. Their supper had been a gay affair. A bowl of late purple asters adorned the table; her biscuits were fluffy as could be desired, and even James Lambert would have praised the soup! Since they must rise at six o'clock they had turned in early; but it is one thing to go to bed, and quite another to drop at once into refreshing slumber. And now the old ache—the nostalgia of the afternoon was back again. Strange, she pondered, that Don, sleeping so peacefully beside her—Don, who understood people so well, so quickly, shouldn't have known by instinct that to go so far away while the black cloud of her father's anger lay between them, would hurt his wife. Yet she was glad, too, that he hadn't guessed, thought Nora, with all the inconsistency of woman. Why mar his happiness in the adventure? If she could keep a stiff upper lip till they were once away . . .

"Nora—are—are you awake, dear?"

Don's voice was cautious, as if he feared to rouse her, and Nora turned.

"I thought you were asleep yourself, Don."

"I wasn't! I've been lying here thinking—trying to see the thing we ought to do. I know what's troubling you, dearest. I knew this afternoon, only I wanted time to think a little before I spoke. It's your father, isn't it? You hate to leave him?"

"Oh, Don!" breathed Nora, turning her face into the shadows. She must not cry. He mustn't know how much she wanted to.

He said, gently: "I understand, dear. It's only because he is still angry. You're afraid something might happen to him—that he might need you when you couldn't come. Isn't that it? If you were friends the parting would be so different. It's the terrible misunderstanding that makes it hard. I was a dumbbell not to see it sooner, Nora. Why didn't you tell me?"

"How could I?"

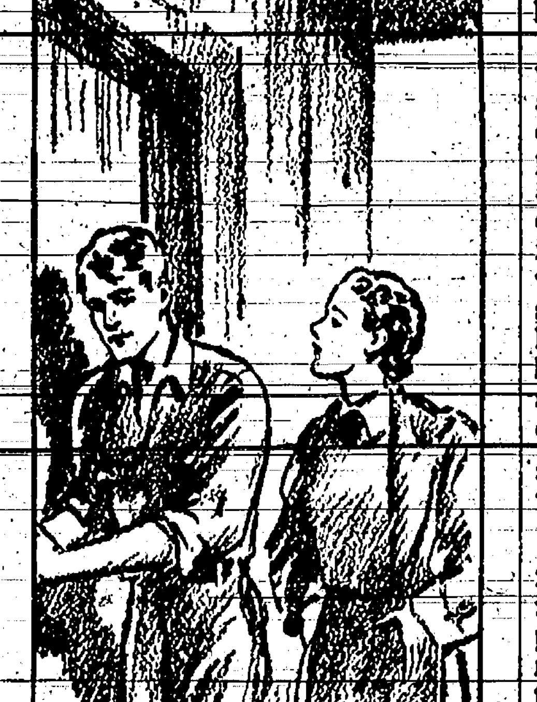
Don managed a little laugh which broke the tension.

"You couldn't—you being yourself—and I being I! But you should have, Nora. As I see it, marriage is a sort of compromise. We can't, either of us, expect to have our own way eternally. But until this afternoon I didn't imagine for one minute that you weren't crazy for an Italian winter. You're a better actress than I thought, my dear; and in the future I'll have to watch my step! But it's never too late to change our plans, you know. That's one of the reasons life's so thrilling. And I've been thinking about the West. There are places—"

Nora sat up suddenly, drawing his head down against her breast.

"If you think that I'll let you change . . ."

She was crying now. Somehow Don raised his head and got his arms about her. He said, with more unselfishness than truth: "But I won't mind changing—not a little bit! There's a lot to interest us in the Southwest, and you've never been there. If those tears will help you, Nora, why keep right on, but they're almost killing me! As I was saying—"



Don lifted the rusty hasp.

Then Nora laughed. It was an hysterical laugh, perhaps, but it cleared the atmosphere.

"You can keep on saying things all night," she told him, "but we're sailing tomorrow. Once we really get away I shall feel better. Have you forgotten those articles you're going to write for that London editor? Have you forgotten you've a family to support? Of course we're going to Capri!" With every word she was getting back her courage. "And besides, I wrote Dad we were sailing. I thought perhaps he'd come to the boat, Don. Don't—don't you think he might come to the boat?"

"He might," Don echoed; and to himself: "How can he stay away? How can he hurt her so? How can he?" Yet somehow, he knew instinctively that Nora's father was not yet ready to forgive.

They sailed next afternoon, a bright, clear, sparkling day that cheered Nora immeasurably, despite James Lambert's absence from the scene. Standing beside the rail, her eyes searching the thronged pier hungrily, hoping until the final whistle sounded that she would catch a glimpse of his familiar face, the girl's mind went back to her last sailing. She saw again the crowd of youthful friends waving farewell—Ned, moved by one of his rare impulses (those impulses which made him almost lovable) arriving breathless with a box of roses—kissing her like a real brother . . . And her father—dear Dad! trying so hard to put a cheerful face upon this parting she knew he hated—saying: "Don't stint yourself, Nora." (As if she ever had!) . . . "Remember my London bankers if you need money." (As if she wouldn't!) . . . "Be careful about the drinking water in those filthy places." (To Dad all Europe was unsanitary) . . . "Be sure to cable as soon as the boat docks."

It all came back; and suddenly Nora was conscious of a great loneliness. Her carefree girlhood seemed left far, far behind. Ahead lay motherhood—mystery—that ultimate struggle which she must face alone. The thought frightened her, as one is sometimes frightened at a stark glimpse of the inevitable. She turned, seeking the reassurance of Don's presence; but he had discovered a friend among the passengers: a little woman who, Nora thought, looked like a missionary.

And then, almost weirdly in that last confusing moment—breaking through shouts of "All ashore" and shrieking sirens, the certainty that though she could not see him her father was somewhere amid that throng—too proud to speak, yet loving her too greatly to stay away, fell on the girl's bruised heart like balm.

The gangplank was up now—the boat moving. Nora pressed closer to the rail—raised her arm high—waved a white wisp of handkerchief and shouted with a hundred others: "Good-by . . . Good-by . . ."

"Who was it, dear?" The voice was Don's. His hand closed over her possessively. Such a strong hand! "Who was it, Nora? I saw you waving. Find someone you knew in all that jam?"

His wife looked up. Her eyes were wet, but with a deep sense of thankfulness Don saw that they were happy eyes.

"I—I was just—waving," said Nora simply.

CHAPTER VIII

On the evening of the day when Don and Leonora sailed for Italy, Ned Lambert looked up from a leisurely perusal of the evening paper, and exclaimed: "Of all things! Mr. and Mrs. Donald Mason on the passenger list of the Larino! They sailed today. Do you suppose Dad knew it?"

Corinne, painstakingly wading through the most talked of novel of the month and bored to death by it, laid down the book with a sense of momentary release.

"He must know. I dare say he's paying for the trip. How else could they manage it? Your father may pretend he doesn't help them, Ned; but can you see him denying Nora anything she may have set her heart on? Of course he knows."

"I'm not so sure." Ned arose, walked uneasily across the room and back again, pausing beside her chair. "I'm not so sure," he repeated. "Dad never speaks of Nora; and once, when I ventured to ask a question about Don, he shut me up in a way he hasn't done since I was twelve years old! That's straight, Corinne. I don't know that he ever hears from her; but if he happens to see this passenger list and discovers that she's left the country, it may upset him. Want to go 'round and see how the land lies?"

Corinne glanced at the novel.

"I really can't, Ned. This book is to be reviewed at the club tomorrow, and unless I'm willing to appear a—a moron, I've got to finish it. And it's the dullest thing I ever tackled. Long, solid pages without a word of conversation. Run along by yourself. I'll try to get through it before bedtime."

Ned laughed. Though he kept it well throttled, he was not without a mild sense of humor, and his wife's struggle to do the proper thing sometimes amused him.

"I'd rather be considered almost anything than to read a book which bored me to that extent," he told her frankly. "Sure you won't go? I sha'n't stay long; and we both need exercise. Mustn't get tubby as we get old, Corinne."

"Tubby!" Corinne, who was proud of her expensively corsetted figure, bristled with indignation. "You'd better compare me with other women of my age, not with those slinky stenographers in your office. But I can't go anyhow, even if I do need exercise. I must write to Junior. He may be homesick these first days at school."

"That's right," said Ned. "Give the kid my love, dear; but please don't send him any money. His allowance is ample; and it isn't good for a boy of his age to have too much."

Corinne smiled pleasantly; nodded good-by; and said to herself as the front door closed: "Well, I didn't promise, and it won't do a bit of harm to slip in something. A boy likes to make a good impression on his schoolmates; and considering our position in society Junior's allowance isn't what it should be. That's Father Lambert's doings. He's forever harping on the notion that too much spending money spoils a boy; yet when it came to Nora nothing was too much for her to throw away. I'll write the letter now, before Ned gets back."

Ned Lambert reached his father's house and, inserting a latch key, opened the door quietly, dropped his hat onto a chair, and went toward the living room. Nobody here! Perhaps his father was in the library. Ned moved down the hall. A fire blazed cheerily on the hearth in this smaller room, but the davenport with its gorgeous Bokhara covering on which James sometimes threw himself for an after-dinner nap, was now unoccupied.

Dad must be away, thought Ned. It was stupid not to have called up before walking over; but his father hadn't mentioned an engagement, and he seldom went out evenings these days. Perhaps one of the maids would know. Ah! here was Martha. Good old Martha, ever on the alert for burglars! She'd heard his prowling and . . .

"Oh, it's you, Mr. Ned! I thought it might be someone who didn't belong here."

Ned smiled.

"You're a good watchman, Martha. Is Father out?"

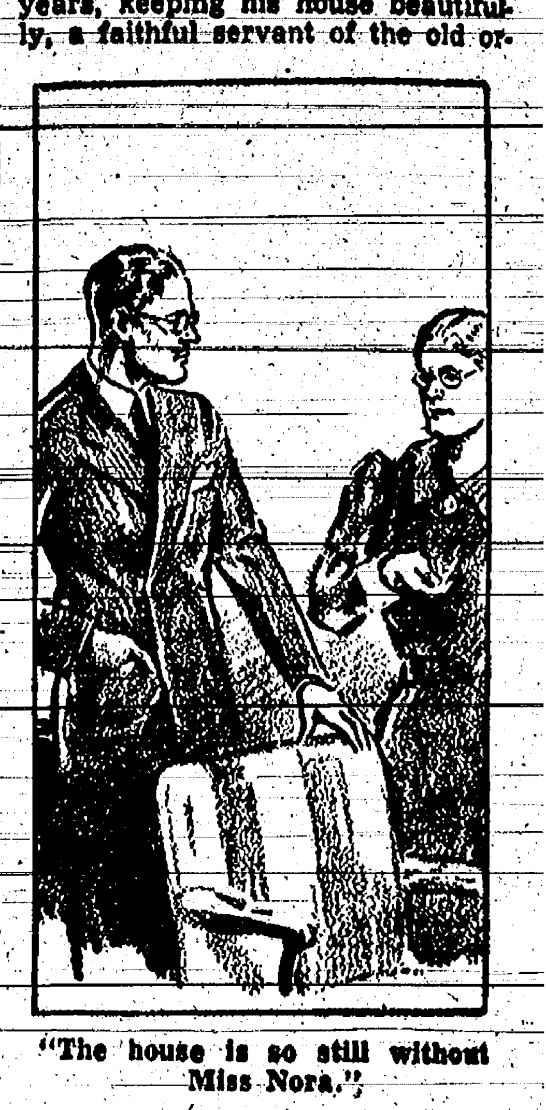
"He's upstairs, Mr. Ned."

"Upstairs! Isn't he feeling well?"

"He had John light the fire in Miss Nora's room. He's taken to sitting there quite often."

"He has?"

Ned's eyes looked puzzled, and with a cautious glance toward the wide stairway, Martha closed the door. Corinne once said that Martha Berry was as much a part of James Lambert's fine old house as the front door was. She had lived there for half of her more than fifty years, keeping his house beautifully, a faithful servant of the old order, and a friend to all who bore the name of Lambert. She said, reading the question in Ned's eyes:



"The house is so still without Miss Nora."

"It's this way, Mr. Ned: The house is so—so still, you see, without Miss Nora. It's like a tomb. Even my cook notices the difference." (To Martha Berry James Lambert's servants were her own.) "She would have given warning weeks ago if I hadn't scolded her. I said: 'Don't be a fool, Sally. There's no one else can make a black bean soup that sets well on Mr. Lambert's stomach, and he's very fond of it,' so she stayed on. But she says the stillness makes her nervous, Mr. Ned, and I think she's right.

"The coffee wasn't clear this morning. Your father likes old-fashioned coffee, made with an egg. There's none better, but it has to be made with care or the grounds won't settle. Sally's as good a cook as I ever had. She knows your father's ways, and she's good tempered; but she misses Miss Nora. Your father likes her cooking but he doesn't tell her so. Why should he? But Miss Nora was always running into the kitchen. She'd say: 'Oh, Sally, that cream pie was simply wonderful!' or, 'Don't you ever dare get married and leave us, Sally. I could die happy eating your potato puff. —You know her way, Mr. Ned—not dignified maybe, but my girls loved her and it kept them happy. My housemaid cries now when she dusts the piano. She always left the door ajar when Miss Nora was playing, and many's the time Miss Nora asked her in to listen.

"You can see for yourself that it's not the same place without your sister; and Mr. Lambert feels it. That's why he sits there in her room so much. It makes her seem nearer. I know as well as if he'd told me, which he'd die rather than do, or my name's not Martha Berry. He's stubborn, your father, if you'll excuse my saying so. Not that he isn't the finest man that ever lived, as I've reason to know if ever anybody had.

"You were a boy at the time, but in my mother's long illness he paid all her bills. If she had been his own mother he couldn't have done more; and he sent my nieces to business college, too. But for all that he can be stubborn when he gets a notion into his head; and there've been times during the last 30 years when if I hadn't known my place, Mr. Ned, I would have thrown things at him."

The Double Tragedy

A FEW years ago a group of forty Chicago and Milwaukee newspaper men were guests of the Milwaukee railroad and Rocky Wolfe, now a widely known radio sport commentator, on a week-end outing in Manitowish, Wis.

Among the extraordinary sights of the resort town were live porcupines strolling about a nine-hole golf course played by the scribes and a mother hawk, whose broad back and spread wings were used by three baby hawks as a landing stage, high above ground.

A dormant appreciation of Nature having been awakened in the minds of the visiting city folks, they were treated by Wolfe to the prize story of the vicinity.

A Manitowish hunter, according to Rocky, reported that he had shot a fox which had a dead porcupine in its mouth. The fox was already dead when shot, for the spines of the porcupine had killed it.

It was learned later, Rocky averred, that the porcupine had been a pet which earned a living by carrying fruit on its back from its owner's orchard to the cider mill.

"And I am ashamed to report, gentlemen," Wolfe concluded, "that both animals were intoxicated when the double tragedy occurred."

FAMOUS SONG WRITER WAS NEWSBOY

PEOPLE who are able to help others express happiness and those who amuse us always have a chance for success far out of proportion to circumstances of birth or environment. So, rightly, the world sees to it that persons who can drive away care have no financial worries.

Irving Berlin was born in Russia in 1888, the youngest of eight children. His father, a cantor or psalm-singer in the village synagogue, brought the family to New York's East Side tenement district when Irving was four years old. The boy loved to sing, but his first jobs were as a newsboy, and a telegraph delivery boy. His was the depressing life of the slums child, street-fighting, swimming in the dirty East river, dodging traffic in the streets at play. At fourteen, he left home to sing in saloons for pennies the patrons tossed to him. He was in the chorus of a musical show, was a waiter in a Chinese restaurant, and a singing waiter in a couple of night clubs.

Up to this time, the happiness Irving Berlin brought to others was limited to the few people who could see and hear him. His voice was not unusual enough to bring him to the top rank of entertainers. Then, he started writing songs. The first one brought him only 37 cents, the next, $25; but thereafter he advanced rapidly. He worked often until two or three o'clock in the morning, and by the time he was thirty-six, 300 songs had been published under his name, including such world-known hits as "Down on the Farm," "Everybody's Doin' It," "My Wife Has Gone to the Country," and "Alexander's Rag-time Band."

Peanuts Really Legumes

Although they are called "nuts" and included in some food definitions as such, peanuts are really legumes, members of the pea family. The fruit or pod matures in the soil instead of on the vines.

Flat Stones Used as "Money"

Round, flat stones, the height of a man in diameter, are used as "money" in the island of Yap, a South Sea territory governed by the Japanese. These strange coins are carried by thrusting a pole in the center of the stone.

LEGION AUXILIARY MEETS

The February meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary was held Tuesday evening in Kolb's hall with 27 members and two guests present. All committee chairmen responded with excellent reports. Mrs. Paul Maroney gave a report of the Second District meeting which she attended in Monroe on Sunday. Information was given in regard to a state-wide tennis tournament which will be open to all girls of the community who are under 18 years of age. The Unit voted to sponsor this tournament in Chelsea and it is hoped that much interest will be created.

Two interesting papers were read: "Americanism", by Mrs. John Hummel, and "What a Membership in the Auxiliary Means", by Mrs. Grant Schooley.

The Child Welfare committee continues to be very active and on their recommendation we plan to purchase milk for an undernourished baby. This committee also requests that at our next meeting all members bring clothing or anything which can be used in a home. These articles will be repaired, if necessary, and distributed by the committee in charge.

Mrs. G. Schooley, Mrs. C. Ulrich and Mrs. Albert Doll were named hostesses for the next meeting.

A social hour was enjoyed, with dainty refreshments being served by the committee, Mrs. Paul Maroney, Mrs. Ed. Frymuth and Mrs. L. D. Fox.

LECTURES ON BOLSHEVISM

A lecture on Bolshevism in Russia and Communism in the United States was given by Rev. M. B. Hinkle of Jackson on Sunday evening at the Methodist church. The lecture was illustrated with pictures taken during the Russian Revolution, showing with distressing frankness some of the cruel methods employed to eliminate the enemies of the Bolshevist regime.

The blasphemous nature of Bolshevism which ridicules the Christian religion, caricatures the Church, the Trinity, and God, in a disgusting manner, was shown by copies of cartoons and pamphlets circulated in Russia and also in the United States.

The lecturer seems not to have visited Russia personally and most of the pictures seem to have been taken before 1930. If the Soviets wish to interest the American people in their program they will have to demonstrate their ability to give us "A more abundant life" than Russia has so far been able to enjoy.

Rev. Hinkle is a forceful speaker and the lecture was well attended.

ENTERTAIN AT CARD PARTY

The Herbert J. McKune Unit No. 31 of the American Legion entertained the Post and their wives at a card party last Friday evening in Kolb's hall. A most delightful time was had by the large crowd in attendance and it is hoped that another party will be held in the near future.

Winners of the prizes were as follows: Bridge, Mrs. E. W. Eaton and W. G. Kolb; 500, Mrs. Carl Mayer and E. C. Hill; euchre, Mrs. John O'Hara and Clarence Ulrich. Other prizes were awarded to Mrs. A. L. Brock, Mrs. G. W. Walworth and Mrs. Merle Barr.

A delicious two course lunch was served by the committee in charge of Mrs. W. G. Kolb.

Seven Chief Units Guide Electrical Measurement

There are seven units of electrical measurement, such as ampere, ohm, volt, etc. The names were arbitrarily applied, being adaptations from the names of pioneers in the field of electrical science.

The ampere is named for A. M. Ampere, a French electrician; the ohm for the German G. S. Ohm; the volt for Alessandro Volta, while the others take their names from Charles A. de Coulomb, Michael Faraday, James P. Joule and James Watt.

The ohm is a unit of resistance; it represents the resistance offered to an unvarying current by a column of mercury at the temperature of ice, 14.5421 grams in mass, of a cross-sectional area of 1.00003 square millimeters and of the length of 106.3 centimeters.

The ampere is a unit of current. An ampere decomposes .0009324 of a gram of water in one second, or deposits silver at the rate of .001118 of a gram per second, when passed through a solution of nitrate of silver in water.

The volt is a unit of electromotive force. One volt equals one ampere of current passing through a substance having one ohm of resistance.

The coulomb is the unit of quantity; the amount of electricity transferred by a current of one ampere in one second.

The farad is a unit of capacity; the capacity of a condenser charged to a potential of one volt by one coulomb.

The joule is a unit of work. It is equivalent to the energy expended in one second by one ampere current in one ohm resistance.

The watt is the unit of power. It is equivalent to work done at the rate of one joule per second.

Have Copper Base

Sheffield plate articles have a silver coating on a copper base. In most other plated ware the base used is nickel.

First Expedition to Arctic

The first American expedition to the Arctic left Philadelphia in 1753.

FAMED TENOR MIGHT HAVE BEEN A CLERK

SOMETIMES parents despair unnecessarily about their children. Just because a youngster shows no aptitude for the job his parents may choose for him is no indication that failure awaits him.

If John McCormack had followed the plans of his father he might have been a Catholic priest. The famous tenor was born in Athlone, Ireland, in 1884, fourth of eleven children. His father worked in the woolen mills of the town and the family was very poor. John attended the Catholic schools and was an excellent student, winning a scholarship to college. There he studied for the priesthood.

At an early age John McCormack's voice showed promise and at the age of nine he sang in a school entertainment. Music was not one of the subjects offered at college, and so John had no opportunity to receive training for his voice. It did not occur to him at that time that singing would be his profession. However, he did decide against becoming a priest, which must have been a hard blow for his father. But the man did not lack understanding and he encouraged the boy in his desire to become a civil service clerk. When John failed in the entrance examinations at the school where he would receive his training, and when given a second chance forgot the appointment, his father must have truly despaired.

Then it began to dawn on John McCormack that singing was his true vocation. He had loved to sing all his life. He went to Dublin and got a job in the Marlborough Street cathedral choir at $125 a year. He began to gain more and more recognition, sang for recordings of the Edison and Gramaphone companies, and eventually became a star of opera. Today he is known the world over for his golden tenor.

Pipe Organ Believed to Be of Pan's Pipe Family

The pipe organ, which is the largest and most powerful of wind instruments, generally is conceded to have had as its antecedent the Pan's pipes, consisting of a series of hollow reeds of different lengths, fastened together, and played by blowing in each tube separately. The mouth organ is practically a Pan's pipe. The Roman's had an organ called the "hydraulis," in which water was used to equalize the wind pressure. The calliope used in circuses, which is worked by steam, is a kind of pipe organ, notes a writer in the Indianapolis News.

During the Seventeenth century air was furnished for the pipes of church organs by a series of bellows, each pair equipped with wooden shoes inside of which the blower placed his feet, raising and lowering them alternately.

Keys first were used in the early organs toward the end of the Eleventh century, 16 at first and later 32. Players of the first keyed organs were known as "organ beaters" because the large keys were so stiff and clumsy that they had to be pressed down with the fist. The addition of foot pedals in the Fifteenth century, used for holding long sustained sounds similar to what is called "organ point," added to its musical resources. In the Seventeenth century stops were added to imitate orchestral instruments, and the "swell" invented to increase or diminish the sound. The melodeon is another form of organ.

The organ first is mentioned in the Bible in Genesis 4:21. It was introduced into religious services in the Seventh century and became popular in Europe in the Ninth and Tenth centuries. The Puritans were very much opposed to its use in the church. The Protestant Episcopal church was the first in this country to install one; in its place of worship, in Port Royal, Va., in 1700. The first installed in Boston, Mass., was at King's chapel, in 1714, after the Brattle Square church had refused it as improper for public worship.

First to License Automobiles

New York was the first state to license automobiles. Way back in 1901 some lawmaker saw a "horseless carriage" and, presumably, said: "Aha! Chance for taxes, eh?" Every other state and every other country followed suit soon thereafter. The first driver's permit, same year, same state, according to the American Automobile association, was termed an "engineer's license."

Georgian Bay covers a lot of territory, both wet and dry. This body of water is so big that it might well be regarded as another of the Great Lakes. But its shoreline is uniform. Pitched in the South Pacific ocean, 2,000 miles from the South American coast, Easter island fittingly has been dubbed an "island graveyard." Neither can anyone account for the colossal stone statues, one 37 feet high, which are scattered about. Some believe the people who carved those statues were the remnants of a mighty, skillful race, dwellers on a continent in the Pacific which was suddenly swallowed by the sea.

Fever Therapy for Organs of Body May Be Developed

Pasadena, Calif. — New researches at the California Institute of Technology here hold the possibility of offering the long-sought goal of selective treatment of various organs of the body by those ultra-short radio waves now being employed to produce artificial fever in the therapy of disease.

Cancer, rheumatic fever, arthritis, syphilis, gonorrhea, St. Vitus Dance, and certain ocular diseases are among the afflictions of mankind which have been treated by artificial radio waves. They all represent potential directions in which the treatment may be extended with new and, perhaps, more successful results.

Wave Absorption Studied.

Prof. G. Potapenko of the physics department is the man whose findings may yield these important practical results. For more than a year he has been investigating the absorption of short radio waves (8 inches to 4 feet in length) as they pass through many substances.

Contrary to present-held theories the point of maximum absorption seemed not to depend greatly on the size of the molecules in the substance, but rather on the size of part of the molecule which can be called the "tail." This "tail" seems to rotate freely about the axis of such molecules as those of alcohol.

To Produce Selective Heating.

The exact knowledge of the maximum of absorption is necessary to produce the selective heating of specific organs or parts of the body. Those parts containing molecules with orienting "tails" can be easily administered the sought-for selective heating treatment.

All that is necessary, points out Professor Potapenko, is to tune the radio wave generator to the wavelength corresponding to the maximum of absorption. Otherwise the effect is one of general heating like that now used to produce a general artificial fever in the whole body.

Ball-and-Socket Joint in Skull of a Dinosaur

Washington.—What use was there for a ball-and-socket jointed bone at the back of a dinosaur's skull? Charles W. Gilmore, curator of vertebrate paleontology at the United States National museum, would like to know.

At the back of the skull of a hadrosaur, a rooster-crested monster that lived in Montana about a hundred million years ago, he has found a bone arrangement that has never been found in any other kind of skull. A relatively small, triangular bone bears on its front edge a socket or cup, which fits neatly over a ball-shaped projection on the bone in front of it.

Whatever was the use of this unique skull joint, it could hardly have been to make room for the hadrosaur's massive brain. For the hadrosaur's brain was anything but massive. It couldn't have weighed more than two or three ounces. It was enough to see, hear, and probably smell with, but that was about all. But then, very likely a dinosaur never bothered to think—except possibly once in a while about another dinosaur.

Normal American Man Doesn't Look So Good

New York.—Homo Americanus (male) took a debunking at Cooper Union here, at the hands of Dr. John Dollard of Yale, who has studied the species intensively, taking thousands of measurements of attitude both physical and mental.

Here's what you look like, Mr. Proud American Man:

Physically, you are potbellied, flat-chested, round-shouldered.

You believe what you read in the papers. You think the competitive system is all right, and expect to thrive thereby yourself, but you'll take your beating without whining if you do chance to lose out. Win or lose, you're for the status quo.

You are married or expect to be. But you're not averse to a bit of philandering before marriage, or even after.

On the credit side: You don't like too much talk. You keep clean. You believe in education and in democracy.

Almost a Vacuum

Berlin.—The most nearly complete vacuum ever achieved under laboratory conditions, states Prof. C. Ramsauer of Berlin, is represented by a pressure of one five-billionth of a millimeter of mercury. (Ordinary atmospheric pressure is about 300 millimeters.)
