Will Celebrate 85th Anniversary at Salem

The 85th anniversary of Salem Methodist Episcopal church, Sylvan township, will be celebrated on Sunday, July 3. Five years ago the people and pastors of this church celebrated the 80th anniversary of the organization of the church. The celebration on Sunday will be known as "Founders Day."

After preaching for about one year, the Rev. John Schwesinger in 1853 succeeded in bringing together several families into an organization that has been a factor in the social, moral and religious life of this community. This first pastor had the privilege of serving Salem church three terms, 1853-1854, 1857-1859, 1869-1870. He also built the first church and parsonage.

Twenty-seven ministers have followed him, the present pastor, Rev. Henry Lenz, also serving the people for the third time. The present church building was erected during the pastorate of the Rev. George Mitter in 1888 and has stood for fifty years as the center of social and religious activities.

The second parsonage was built in the summer of 1929 while Rev. Fred Ross was pastor.

In "God's Acre" surrounding the church sleep many of the pioneer Methodists of this community. They have not labored in vain.

Next Sunday the pastor and members of the church shall be pleased to meet all who in former years were members of Salem church, friends from far and near, and all former pastors, to help celebrate this 85th anniversary. The first service will be held at 10:30 a. m. At noon the Ladies' Aid Society will serve a chicken dinner, and at 2:15 p. m. a splendid anniversary program will be given, consisting of musical and literary selections.

At this service a new pulpit Bible, presented by the members of the Ladies' Aid Society will be dedicated with appropriate ceremonies.

Facts for Fishermen To Keep In Mind

A glance at a digest of the state's fishing laws shows a number of points which sporting fishermen should always keep in mind.

Six inches is the minimum legal size for perch, bluegills and sunfish, among the most popular of the "pan-fish" species. Keeper size for both large and small mouth bass is 10 inches; 14 inches for pike; and seven inches for all three species of trout—brook, brown and rainbow.

The maximum number of perch which a fisherman can take in one day or have in his possession at one time is 25 for inland waters and 50 for the Great Lakes and certain inland lakes designated by law. This is the first year a limit in number has been applied to this species on the Great Lakes.

The legal maximum for pike is five, as well as for black bass. There is a limit of 25 on bluegills, sunfish, war-mouth bass, catfish, rock and strawberry bass, crappies and perch, which may be figured for any one of the species or for a combination of them, so long as the grand total does not exceed 25.

Under the new regulations, resident anglers who purchased licenses for the trout season are legally qualified for the pan-fish season, this permit being good for all species which are lawful take. Other anglers who do not intend to try for trout may obtain the "resident non-trout license" for 50 cents, which with an identification will entitle his wife to fish without additional charge. Provision for wives was not included with the trout license.

Out of state fishermen are offered two kinds of licenses. One is a "non-resident annual fishing" permit which costs two dollars and permits the licensee to take all authorized species. The other license, costing one dollar, is the "non-resident 10-day" permit which entitles the licensee to take all legal species for 10 days from date of issue. In both cases, wives may obtain the licenses for 50 cents.

All persons over 17 years of age must have licenses this year, the minimum having been reduced from 18.

Lansing—The greatest reforestation program in the United States is under way in the Upper Peninsula. A total of 110,000 acres of cutover waste land, left idle by lumber slashing, have been replanted with pine trees. Thirty thousand acres of trees are being added annually. Wholesale tree planting on such a large scale has never been achieved successfully elsewhere.

These facts were revealed this month to members of the Upper Peninsula Development bureau by Lyle Watts, forestry director for Michigan and Wisconsin.

To the people of the Upper Peninsula conservation and the tourist industry go hand in hand. Together, they offer the one and only hope of economic salvation. Many mines have closed. Lumbering has depleted nearly nine-tenths of the virgin forests. To the tens of thousands of unemployed residents, it is recreation rather than agriculture or industry that offers a ray of encouragement for their future.

Public Ownership

Public ownership of forest lands, both by the federal and state governments, is advocated by Forester Watts.

It is illuminating to know that a group of Michigan conservation enthusiasts, led by John Norton, publisher of the Escanaba Press, fathered the establishment of federal forests by congressional enactment.

On a commercial basis selective logging is difficult to put into practice, because of competitive conditions. As long as some lumber firms insist on cutting all merchantable timber in each acre, lumber men declare that the forester's dream of selecting logging will never be realized.

More than 600 million feet of lumber were cut last year in the Upper Peninsula—far in excess of what should be allowed if the forests are to be maintained permanently.

It is another case of free competition vs. public ownership. Again the Great White Father is being implored to solve our problems.

"Dead-end" Region

For years the Upper Peninsula has been on a "dead-end" street.

Because of the vast distance from the Soo to Ironwood the development of good roads has been slow.

Today, U. S. 2 is paved most of the way west from Sault Ste. Marie. This (Continued on next page)

Descendants of Early Settlers Hold Reunion

A get-together picnic, arranged by Walter Hummel of Lansing, was held Sunday at Island Lake, near Brighton, and was attended by approximately 200 descendants of families who came to Michigan in the early 40's from Holland, Bavaria and Alsace-Lorraine, settling in the vicinity of Chelsea.

These early settlers included: Frank Steffen, Michael Foster, Henry Merkel, Peter Hinkelang, Simon Weber, two Michael Stapischs, George Miller, Martin Keusch, Jacob Hummel and Henry Doll.

Guests at the picnic included representatives from Lansing, Owosso, Bay City, Detroit, Ann Arbor, Monroe, Jackson, Sable, Grass Lake and Chelsea.

A picnic dinner was served at noon after which the assembly was called to order by Walter Hummel, who introduced Carol Foster of Grass Lake as toastmaster.

A general history of the families was given by Louis Doll of Ann Arbor. Miss Ida Keusch of Chelsea also responded with a brief history of the Keusch family. Frank Stapisch of Bay City, of the Stapisch family, F. W. Merkel, the Merkel family, Herbert Foster of Detroit, the Foster family, and George Stoll of Ann Arbor, the Hummel family.

The oldest members in attendance were Simon Weber and Martin Merkel of Chelsea, while Theresa Klingler of Sylvan township was the youngest.

It was decided to hold a reunion in 1939.

Thirty delegates were chosen from the organization to attend the second district Republican convention at Adrian on July 8.

CHILDREN IN COURT

Judge Malcolm Hatfield

Dropping the Whip

The parents of a sixteen year old boy who was arrested for automobile banditry, should really have stood trial in his place, for, it developed, they were primarily responsible for the crime.

This young man's criminal career started some years ago when his parents let the whip fall from their feeble grasp. The boy soon picked it up, and from that day on, he never dropped it. His father and mother never realized that they had abdicated their authority and stepped down from their legitimate places as heads of the family. Consequently the boy was never taught to respect authority or the rights of others, and as a result, soon violated both the federal and state laws.

MORENCI—Robert Williamson, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Williamson of Hudson, lost the sight of his left eye Sunday as the result of a fireworks accident. Robert was returning from Fayette with his parents. He threw a torpedo from the window of the car. It struck on the running board of the car and a piece struck the boy in the eye. He was taken to the University hospital at Ann Arbor. —Observer.

MASON—The Rev. John M. Duffy, pastor of St. Cornelius and Cyprian church in Bunker Hill, has insisted for several years that the name of the township is Bunker Hill instead of Bunkerhill, as it has appeared in county records and newspapers for 99 years. Father Duffy is right. A few weeks ago he went to state records and there found the original act which set up the township of Bunker Hill. Act No. 25 of the Public Acts of 1839 is as follows: "Sec. 4. All that part of the county of Ingham designated in the United States survey as town number one north, of range one east, be and the same is hereby set off and organized into a separate township, by the name of Bunker Hill, and the first township meeting shall be held at the house of David Fuller in said township." —County News.

HOWELL—737 new American flags were placed on the graves of deceased soldiers for Memorial Day, May 30. 212 of these flags were placed by the Legion in the Lakeview and Mt. Olivet cemeteries at Howell, and were paid for by the Howell city council. 525 flags were placed by Legionnaires and patriotic citizens throughout the county who volunteered their assistance in this worthy cause. The flags placed in the rural cemeteries were paid for by the county and distributed through the services of the county cemetery commission. —County Press.

route is very scenic, skirting along Lake Michigan from St. Ignace west to Brevort within sight of blue water at all times. Eventually this beautiful highway may be extended west along the lake shore of Port Inland, near Manistique.

From Watersmeet to Ironwood this route takes you through a dense forest country without even a farmhouse in sight for nearly 50 miles.

Building of a bridge at the Straits will likely attract heavy transcontinental traffic through Michigan. The Port Huron bridge will be the gateway for westbound traffic. Ironwood will be the gateway for eastbound tourists.

Strange Contrasts

Until you have visited the Upper Peninsula, you do not know Michigan. It is a land of remarkable contrasts.

A few years ago it was one of the two worst relief areas in the United States. A large percentage of the entire population was on welfare. Poverty cast a shadow over idle mining centers.

Today, the Upper Peninsula looks to recreation—the tourist industry—as the hope for future economic activity. And recreation means sight-seeing, fishing and hunting in the daytime and entertainment at night.

We visited the luxurious Gateway Inn, Kuhn's $300,000 establishment on the state line near Land O' Lakes, Wisconsin, just a few miles south of Watersmeet. Imagine this: Eight of the finest bowling alleys you have ever seen; a dozen billiard tables; a huge restaurant with the gayest modern decorations and superb equipment; a club bar and a gaming bar; and the entire building outside outlined in red neon lights.

Fashionable city people, smartly attired in resort togs, mingle with lumberjacks—and all in a smart sophisticated atmosphere imported up into the "North Country," miles from a city!

Upper Peninsula people are the most hospitable people in the Middle West. They think nothing of driving 100 miles for an evening's entertainment together.

"Barefoot Charlie"

Two miles from the dazzling Gateway, which was built by a Detroit theatrical magnate, is a rustic log establishment built and managed by an eccentric "wood tick" by the name of "Barefoot Charlie".

"Barefoot" couldn't build a chicken coop if he tried.

He is a wizard, however, with an axe. His big wigwam is an artistic achievement. "Charlie" goes barefooted winter and summer, while his tourist guests dine of food and liquor. Outside is the unbroken forest country for miles and miles. Contrast these entertainment spots and there are literally hundreds of others catering to the same demand—with the tremendous problem of unemployment, and you begin to appreciate the lousy vitality of this Upper Peninsula region in Michigan. Again, we repeat, it is a region of remarkable contrasts.

Commercial Fishing

The steady decrease in the fish supply of our great lakes has been the object of much discussion during the past few years and recently has caused much worry among those of us who are interested in the same. This is a very serious matter, of equal concern to every man, woman and child of Michigan. Your president has read a considerable amount of written information, reports and predictions during the past few weeks and I am sorry that lack of space prevents me giving you the information in full.

In the first place, these great lakes were created with the original fish supply in abundance for man's use. Someone, back in the early years, started the idea of netting fish and shipping to market; followed in time by many others down through the years until at the present time we have too many fishermen, too efficient nets, and the same result, i. e., "A natural supply subjected to increased commercial activity, resulting in depletion." During all these years, the general thought has been that the great lakes fish were for the commercial fishermen only; our inland lakes and streams have furnished the sportmen's grounds. But, your attention is called to the fact that the fishing fraternity has increased annually by leaps and bounds; last year's increase was 65,000, and with every sign pointing to the years to come to bring this figure over the million mark and where to no one knows. With the return of improved economic conditions and everyone earning a full week's pay, every male in Michigan over 17 years of age is a potential license buyer. Add to this our steady increase in tourists, and then try to vision the problem of supplying this great army with fishing grounds where they can catch fish. We venture the prediction that before 1945 rolls around, we shall be regulating and using the Great Lakes, their bays and choice spots, for our sportsmen and needing them badly.

Question And Answer Dept.

Problem—If a match is cut in two pieces, each being exactly the same length, which is the heavy end? Answer elsewhere in this column.

Ques.—Why is water necessary to life?

Ans.—Protoplasm, which is the essential thing in living matter, is more than half water. If any large fraction of this water is removed from protoplasm the protoplasm died. This is why all plants or other living matter requires so much water.

Ques.—Can fresh water be made out of salt water? If not, what do those aboard ship do if the water supply gives out?

Ans.—All ships carry a large quantity of fresh water. But in the event the supply becomes exhausted they have the equipment for making fresh water from salt water. This is done by distilling it—that is, make steam of it and then condense the steam back into water again. Salt cannot be made into steam. It stays behind and thus is separated from the water.

Ques.—Why are so many proposals for marriage made in the moonlight?

Ans.—This seems to be a survival of a subconscious memory, which has come down from prehistoric times. The cave-man courting had to be done out of doors; the hut or cave were far too crowded. But dark nights were unsafe because of wild beasts, and so for millions of years most of the love-making was done on moonlight nights. Our subconscious mind remembers this age-old association of amorous intentions with the moon.

Ques.—Is there such a thing as auto-suggestion?

Ans.—Scientists are agreed there is auto-suggestion, which is a process of impressing something on your mind—especially on your subconscious mind—by repeating that something frequently to yourself. It is a good deal the same sort of thing as repeating a moral maxim or a rule of conduct until it becomes second nature and is obeyed instinctively.

Answer to problem—The end that produces the fire is the "light" end.

Ques.—Can you tell me what causes an echo?

Ans.—An echo is caused by the waves of sound striking against something hard and smooth, like a wall or the side of a cliff, and are reflected back again, much as light waves are reflected when they strike against a mirror.

Ques.—I would like to know how fish can breathe under water?

Ans.—Fish breathe the water. When we breathe we get oxygen out of the air. There is also oxygen dissolved in water, and the gills of the fish take up this oxygen just as our lungs take up the oxygen of the air.

Ques.—Why do people wear jewelry?

Ans.—Undoubtedly this is a tendency of the subconscious mind preserved from prehistoric times, when the wearing of gold buttons or amulets or nose rings was both as a precaution for protecting one's wealth and a visible sign of consequence and authority. Also for magic to insure good luck.

1938 Egg Profit Depends On Care

Four mainstays for those Michigan poultrymen who want to steer their flocks into the profit column in spite of comparatively low egg prices are listed by J. M. Moore, extension poultryman of Michigan State College and secretary of the Michigan State poultry improvement association.

Gathering eggs three times a day is one summer job that should not be neglected, Moore contends. Eggs begin to incubate at 68 degrees Fahrenheit. To avoid poor quality the newly laid eggs should be taken out of the nests soon after they have been deposited by the biddies.

Second pointer is to immediately cool the eggs to 60 degrees or lower. A cool moist cellar is considered a good place to put eggs to cool, spreading them out in a thin layer so that air has a chance to circulate.

Moore offers profit pointer number three in the advice to produce and market only clean eggs. Dirty eggs absorb odor through the shell, affecting quality. Michigan has a state egg ruling that no dirty egg can be sold as fresh or put in any market grade. Premiums are paid for quality eggs but these eggs must be clean. Sufficient nests, wire netting under perches, clean nesting material and placing nests in dark corners where the hens will not congregate are suggestions.

Fourth idea is to market often. Although eggs are in a shell they are just as perishable as meat and butter. To facilitate recognition of better quality, an egg candling and grading school is scheduled at the college July 11 to 15 for the first 15 who enroll for the training.

The Boxer Rebellion

The Boxer uprising of 1900 was a blind attempt, largely popular, but sanctioned by the extremists, to oust the foreigners from China. The government, in an attempt to provide for the national defense against foreign aggression, ordered the revival of the village train-bands or militia and put the plan into effect first in the northeastern provinces. Into these train-bands came many of the local rowdies and here and there disorderly secret societies affiliated with them. The members practiced rites which they believed would make them invulnerable to bullets and came to be known to foreigners as Boxers—a loose translation of the Chinese name for the bands.

Fly Fishing in Third Century Martian, Latin author, mentioned the use of the trout fly in fishing as early as the Third century, A. D.

Boys Make Friends at Scout Camp -- Horizons Widened at "Boy Community"

Boys who attend the Scout camp on the edge of Dexter make many new friends but in many cases the first new friend they meet on arrival at the 43-acre Southaven is "Scout", the German Shepherd dog who is the one year-round resident of the Scout reservation.

Staff of Twelve Men

Camp Newkirk has been called a "Boy Community" where boys learn citizenship by living as good citizens. There are no policemen at camp. There are, however, twelve adult leaders who travel along the Scouting train with boys and help to interpret camp and citizenship to the boys in the camp.

Safety Stressed

The first policy and practice of the camp is Health and Safety. This comes first in the consideration of any activity. Swimming, boating and canoeing are carried on only under the most careful supervision. Ralph Kuhl, in charge of the waterfront, is an American Red Cross examiner. His assistants are especially skilled and trained.

Fun and Food

Then too the policy of the camp is to help boys have lots of wholesome fun and new experience. The camp staff recognizes that boys must have lots of good wholesome food three times a day, and accordingly a strong staff is on the job to assist Dick Ellery, the camp chef, to see that everybody gets plenty to eat. A new electric stove in the huge camp kitchen helps here.

Still More Room

While enrollments are being made daily, at the present time there are still more places available. Further information may be secured at 324 East Huron St., Ann Arbor or at the camp itself on 7651 Huron River Drive on the edge of Dexter.

11-Year-Olds Eligible

Chelsea boys who are 11 years old or over may attend the Newkirk Scout camp at Dexter for a period of half a week or longer by filing their enrollments now, Camp Director Jas. J. McLaughlin announced this week.

Not only Scouts but also 11 year old boys who are preparing to be Scouts when they reach their twelfth birthday may attend.

A new group of boys arrive in the camp each Wednesday and Sunday afternoon.

Honestly now, what's your hurry? Have you ever been confronted by an officer of the law who asked you, "Where is the fire?" or, "What's your hurry?"

Some countries handle speeders entirely differently from the way America does. In Yugoslavia traffic officials don't ask questions. If an officer finds a speeder, he maneuvers the driver over to the curb and politely lets the air out of all four tires. No ticket is issued. Pumping air back into four tires leaves a lasting impression with any driver.

It is a good lesson in safety. Too many times people pass up fifty feet from a stop light which shows red, only to have to wait until they get the signal to go ahead. How silly, and how dangerous! It's smart to be careful.

Fruit Bulletin Is Useful In State

Michigan's residents live in a land of milk, fruit and honey, so steps have been taken by the home economics division of Michigan State College to help families enjoy year around use of the state's bountiful fruit crops.

A new bulletin in color, "Fruits for Year Around Use," is available by writing the Bulletin Room, Michigan State College, East Lansing. The number of the publication is Circular Bulletin No. 164.

Ruth Griswold, author, points out reasons for writing the bulletin and compiling the recipes, by summing up five reasons for eating fruit.

"Their delightful color and delicious flavor stimulate jaded appetites," Miss Griswold says.

"They are easy to prepare, fresh or cooked, alone or combined with other fruits."

"They add minerals and vitamins in a universally well-liked way."

"They supply bulk in a desirable form."

"They combine well with other foods and add zest to everyday meals."

Four of the most popular Michigan fruits are considered. Recipes tell how to utilize cherries, blueberries, peaches and grapes. Many of the recipes call for the use of either fresh or canned fruits.

Mr. "Watts-His-Name" says

"If your kitchen is like an oven here's the electric range you need."

We've had housewives tell us that there is no use dressing neatly every hot day they have to work over a hot old-time stove—for in half an hour they're as wilted as a faded flower.

Contrast how different it is cooking by electricity. No heat in your face—but lots for your food. Your kitchen is as comfortable as a dark, cool basement.

Cost much to change-over? No—that's the beauty of it. For a few cents a day you can start now to enjoy working for the family and be the sort of a wife and mother that families enjoy talking to.

WHY DID RURAL PATRONS
CHOOSE EARLY DELIVERY?

Just a little food for thought. In the June 16th issue of the Chelsea Standard there appeared a news item stating that by the early departure of the carriers (8:30) ordinarily every patron receives his mail by noon. We would assume by this that 3 1/2 hours are required to cover the routes. Why does it take from 11:30 to 3:00 or 4:00 if they wait for the morning trains and why does it take until 11:30 before the carriers can leave the post office when the trains arrive at 9:04 and 10:01? During the week of late delivery trial the trains arrived in Chelsea on time as reported by train dispatcher. Why do our neighboring post offices hold their carriers for the morning trains?

Some MANIACS Murder with guns---others KILL with SPEEDING CARS

"BANDITS HOLD UP BANK, TWO KILLED" . . . "BYSTANDER IS KILLED AS POLICE AND GANGSTERS SHOOT IT OUT"—the headlines scream—and you shudder! But, my good citizen, your car can deal death far more brutally than a gun in the hands of a gangster. Deaths resulting from automobile accidents are far more numerous each year than death resulting from gang murders.

To you, Mr. and Mrs. Citizen, is entrusted the privilege of handling a dangerous weapon. The automobile, though one of the greatest boons to mankind in history of the world—can be its most destructive peace-time weapon. Are you worthy of the trust placed in you? You have been given the privilege of driving an automobile on our highways. In order to protect you—your life and the lives of others—certain traffic rules and regulations have been laid down—not for the other fellow, but for you—for everyone! Do you know them—do you know what you can and cannot do? If you don't know—and if your ignorance is responsible for your killing someone in traffic—then you are guilty of murder—Drive carefully!

WATER SAFETY PROGRAM

The Washtenaw County Chapter of the American Red Cross has started a Water Safety Program, with instruction which emphasizes not only methods of rescue and resuscitation, but also the dangers of swimming in hazardous ponds, pools, and creeks where there is no supervision, in swimming alone, and in the attempted rescue of the drowning by any other than one qualified to perform the rescue.

Courses, which started on Monday, are open to boys and girls, men and women who desire to attend regularly in order to pass the requirements satisfactorily. G. Robert Mowerson is the director of water safety, in charge. Courses will be given at the following points:

June 27 - July 10—Municipal bathing beach, Ann Arbor. 1-2 p. m. Beginners swimming, ages 5 to 12 years. 2-3 p. m. Beginners swimming, ages 13 years and up; 3-4: Advanced swimming, all ages; 4-6: Junior and Senior life saving and water safety.

July 11 - July 24, pool at the Ypsilanti high school—1-3: Girls, beginners and swimmers, also diving; 3-5: Boys, beginners and swimmers, also diving; 5-6: Girls and boys, life saving.

July 25 - August 7, Intramural pool, Ann Arbor—Junior and Senior life saving taught six evenings. Those interested should call the Red Cross office regarding hours.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—The congregation of the Old White Church in Locust Hill turned out in force to look over the new preacher, Dr. Jonathan Farwell, and there is much speculation among the communicants as to what sort of man he will be. Absent from the service is Cassius Brady, treasurer of the church who had recommended Dr. Farwell for the post after hearing his baccalaureate sermon at the graduation of Dale Farwell, his son, who is attending college at the University of Michigan.

CHAPTER II—Dr. Farwell meets the members of his congregation personally, except their tributes, but refuses to be impressed by the banker's family, the Marbles, whose daughter, Evelyn, obviously sets her cap for Dale. Meanwhile the women of the town are curious about the mystery of the Farwell womanhouse housekeeper, the dinner table and the private life of the pastor by bringing the men a pan of home-made doughnuts in the privacy of the room Dale has inscribed in childish lettering "Elaine."

CHAPTER III—The Marbles invite the Farwells to dinner. Dale, known as "Lee," is away at the time with his mother, who is in poor health. Dale takes Lee for a drive around Locust Hill, where he has only one friend in Locust Hill, and she is Lee Brady's Marbles, who bluntly quizzes Farwell about his womanhouse message. Brady attempts to divert the conversation and the Marbles admits that the housekeeping arrangements are temporary, to be relieved shortly by the arrival of a hired housekeeper.

CHAPTER IV—Constant Kenney is perturbed by the arrival on the train of a suspicious-looking little man and shadows him. He is further mystified when the stranger goes to the parsonage. There the newcomer is warmly greeted as "Pink." Mulgrew and take to this ducky as a housekeeper, adding to the local speculation on the return of Mrs. Brady and her daughter to Locust Hill. Dale calls on the Marbles, who are in the house, and Dale is immediately by Mrs. Brady's delicate charm.

CHAPTER V—Evelyn Marbles gives a party in honor of Dale and is obviously annoyed at his marked attentions to Lee. Lee has been elected to the party by Pliny Morehead, a young man for whom Dale forms an immediate dislike. Later, Dale takes Lee for a drive around Locust Hill, where he has a student's interest, and he confides in her his ideal of Elaine, his mother, who died when he was a baby, and who is still deeply mourned by his father. Lee is sympathetic and understanding and the two are drawn more closely together.

CHAPTER VI—Dr. Farwell invites the Marbles to his first formal dinner. Dale has already accepted an invitation to attend a birthday party in honor of Lee, but his father sternly insists that he stay at home and help with the dinner. Dale, although understanding, is hurt, and Dale spends a miserable evening. Against his will, Dr. Farwell, prevailed on to play the piano and later, exacts from Dale a promise never to make it necessary again. When the Marbles, who have been to the party, return to the house, Dale drives over to the Brady's and finds Pliny Morehead's car out in front.

CHAPTER VII—Evelyn hurries to tell Lee the details of the dinner. Dale, who has been curious to see the Marbles, is surprised to find that the party and the calls on Pink in the Farwells' absence, extension to recover her doubts. Dale tells her that he has never seen Mrs. Farwell, that Dr. Farwell saved his life in the World War, that he himself is a former lightweight prizefighter, too late, Pink realizes he has said too much to the town gossip. Dale explains to Lee and make amends, is defeated in his purpose by his father's out-of-town speaking engagement.

CHAPTER VIII—Pink, finding the doughnut pan left behind, returns it to Abbie, but flees from meeting her mother, realizing the women's gossip curiosity. Meanwhile, Dale calls on Lee and after a preliminary coolness on her part, confides his plans to return to college after Christmas. Dale, who is head of the sociology department, is the young couple exchange Christmas presents. Dale's new gift is a present of his trip around the historical countryside.

CHAPTER IX—Marbles, urged by his daughter, offers Dale a position in the bank and confides the news to Brady. Dale promises to consider the offer and keeps it secret. Dale is roused from sleep by a phone call from Lee, anxious about her mother and father, whose conversation has been heard on the road to Fronton whether they went on a secret business trip. Dale drives her there, where they find Brady in a hospital as a result of an accident. Mrs. Brady is unhurt.

CHAPTER X—Over their coffee on their return, Lee and Dale discover their mutual love. Pink advises Dale not to tell his father of the romance yet, but when he finds Lee's family warmly approving, he decides he must tell his father that night.

CHAPTER XI—Dr. Farwell's first reaction is disappointment, because of Dale's career, but the sensible stand of his wife pleases him, and he wishes him happiness. Back at the university, Dale is recommended by Dr. Payne, a friend of her father, to a northern Ontario, backed by a man named Wade Kelsey, and agrees to go early in the summer.

"You see, I've never had a real job," Dale explained modestly to Kelsey when the subject came up during their talk at the hotel. "If you think I can handle the work, I'd much rather let you decide what it's worth. Whatever it is, I'll try to earn it."

"And I think I'll take the chance," Kelsey decided swiftly. "We can thrash out the details when the time comes. There are a few things, however, we'd better go into now, suppose you don't want to leave here until your work is finished."

"I would rather not."

"When will that be?"

"About the first week in June, I think."

"We ought to make it earlier. However, let's figure on that. You should plan to come direct to Minneapolis to see me. Start from there. Just where do you live?"

"In New Jersey, Locust Hill."

"Then you'll have to come straight up, I think. We'll outfit you and all that. You'll go in by way of Fort William and lose very little time. Can you do that?"

"Yes, sir," Dale made the decision with equal promptness.

"I thought you might have to go some first," Kelsey said.

"Not necessarily. I will try to make a flying trip before that. We are almost to the Eastern holiday and I think Doctor Payne will let me have a few days extra."

"Are both your parents living?"

"No, sir. Only my father."

"Too bad. When did you lose your mother?"

"When I was a baby. About two."

Dale hesitated a little over his answer.

"Well, Farwell, your name is Dale, isn't it? We'll call it more or less settled, I think. I'll see you in Minneapolis, if not sooner. You'll probably be hearing from me. Payne has my address. He might even give me a recommendation."

Dale laughed at the idea.

"I wish I could tell you how much I appreciate this, Mr. Kelsey."

"That's all right. I wouldn't be surprised if you and I might hit it off pretty well. We'll see."

CHAPTER XII

Some three days later, Pinkney Mulgrew was interrupted during the washing of his luncheon dishes by an insistent ringing of the parsonage doorbell.

Muttering dark threats, in case the caller proved to be a book agent, the houseman wriggled into his jacket and patterned to answer the summons.

Dale stood before him, suitcase in hand and smiling broadly.

"For the love of Mike!" Pink shrieked unbelievably. "Kid! Where'd you blow from?"

"Phillie and points west," the traveler laughed, seizing the little man's hand with a crushing grip. "Is father here?"

"Sure. Sure. He's upstairs. Got a funeral or somethin' on. You'd'a missed him in a minute. Didn't get throwed out, did you?"

"Not a chance. Dale already was bounding up the stairs. 'Tell you later,' he called back over his shoulder.

Jonathan Farwell had heard the voices and was in the upper hall, one of his arms thrust into the sleeve of his long black coat.

"Dale! This is a surprise! His hand came out. 'I trust nothing is wrong.'"

"No, sir! Everything's as right as can be, Father. I was going to wire you, then I thought I'd surprise you instead. I've got a job!"

He announced exultantly.

"You mean that you have left the university?"

"Oh, no. But I have to report as soon as school's over and I won't have a chance to get back here. So I thought I would run out for a few days and tell you."

"That is news. Where are you going?" Farwell glanced at his watch.

"Hudson Bay or not far from there. Pink said something about your going out."

"Yes. I have a funeral this afternoon. I am afraid I must leave now."

"Who's dead? Anybody I know?"

"Miss Emmens. The burial is to take place in the country and I will be away most of the afternoon. Perhaps you will go with me."

Dale's face fell. His father must know that he had to see Lee the first minute he could.

"I don't believe I can manage it," he began hesitatingly. "You see."

"Quite," Farwell answered shortly. "Perhaps you will arrange to be here for dinner with me."

"Why, of course I will, Father. I'm anxious to tell you all about it."

Dale followed his father down to the door feeling a trifle conscious-stricken at this turn of events. Too bad. But to spend the afternoon at a funeral—Lee didn't even know he was in town. He must call her at once and arrange to see her.

"Can you stick around here long enough to let a guy in on the excitement?" Pink demanded from the rear of the hall as soon as he heard the receiver click in its bracket.

"Sure! I'm not going out for an hour. You don't happen to have a slab of cake that I could worry with before I clean up, do you?"

"Cake? How do you get that way? A cake lasts two weeks instead of two days when you're gone. I'll hassle one together this afternoon, if I haven't forgot how. How'd a piece of rhubarb pie hit you?"

"Try me."

"There you are," the chef announced, as he produced a plate bearing a generous wedge of pastry. "Tell me what it's all about while you're wolfing."

"I've got a job, Pink."

"Yeah? Not around here, I hope."

"No. It's up in Canada. I'm going there as soon as school's over. And that's some swell pie."

"Shucks! Hope that job's a long ways off and tough going."

"Why so?"

"'Cause it might knock some of the foolishness outa you. Wild country, maybe?"

"So they tell me. All woods. Indian guides, and that sort of thing. I'll be going in a canoe a lot of times, making portages and camping wherever I can."

"Pity I didn't learn you to cook more. If I was a little spryer on my legs and the dominie wasn't alone, I'd ask you to take me along. You want to watch out for them Canucks. A reminiscent look came into Pink's gray eyes. 'You know, I joined up with a bunch of 'em during the late ruckus. They're the devil's own in a scrap. Don't you go startin' anything with 'em unless you want to finish it.' And say, I don't know how long you're goin' to be around here, but I hope you don't have to spend all your time with the girl friend. We may not have a chance to be together again for a while. More pie?"

"No thanks. I'm going to have a shower."

"Well, don't forget what I said about the dominie. Pal around with him some. He's been missin' you a lot."

"Do you think so, Pink?"

"I know it. He don't talk no more than he ever did. But he's one lonesome guy. Guess I shouldn't spill this. He's got quite a way of dropping into your room late at night—sittin' there. I'm wise to it. And I hear him playin' the piano other nights. I don't like it. Not knockin' his playin'—it's all right. But the tunes make me jittery."

"I know. I'm glad you told me that, Pink. Of course I'll give him all the time I can."

"Count on you for dinner, can we?"

"Of course. I'll be here."

"Fine. I'll be barbecuin' the fat-cat cake. Got that one? I been churchin' a bit since you went away. Thought maybe the dominie would feel better if he saw some of the family under his nose."

"Mighty thoughtful of you, Pink."

"Forget it. He never nagged at me none to hear his sermons and he never said a word when he seen me there. Funny thing, I'm gettin' so I rather like it."

"I guess it doesn't hurt anybody. And I must beat it. See you later."

Later in the afternoon, when Jonathan Farwell returned from the funeral, he came directly to the kitchen where Pink was bustling about.

"Has Dale returned?"

"Not yet. I guess he's fussin' at the cook decided, closing his oven carefully. He turned to look at the wall black figure in the doorway.

"Well, Dominie, I hear us old folks is goin' to be left at the fireside again."

"Yes. Dale plans to go north in June."

"Well, that's what guys can expect when they raise a family. I was telling the kid how he wanted to keep an eye on them Canada boys. I wouldn't mind meetin' up with some of them buddies once more. They could take it. I'll say that for them."

"They did well. A note of harshness almost in Farwell's voice. 'Do you expect Dale for dinner?'"

"Sure. He'll be on hand. He promised me."

Lenora Brady was slightly incoherent when she flung open the front door for a young man who came bounding up her porch steps.

"Dale! Dale! Is it really you? Come in quick. Shut that door!"

There was a brief interval without words.

"You'll have to excuse me. I'm a cry-baby. Lee winked back her tears with a laugh. I think I came very near fainting with excitement when I heard your voice. I never dreamed of it being you! Why didn't you prepare me?"

"There really wasn't time. I came away on such short notice. Do you mind?"

"Mind! I'm so excited I can't talk," she patted his hand. "I was writing a letter to you when the phone rang. And when Hattie said some man wanted to speak to me."

"You thought it was Pliny," Dale volunteered. "I want that letter just the same."

"This is better than a million letters!"

"I kept my promise, didn't I?"

"So wonderfully, dear. I believe you always will."

"I'll do my best, Lady Lee."

"It does sound thrilling. Indians and everything. Maybe you'll fall in love with a squaw, Dale."

"I just wouldn't wonder. Now, let's plan for this afternoon. It's gorgeous out. Couldn't we run off?"

"You saw the car out there, didn't you? I'll go, if you'll drive."

"Bargain. We can have several hours to ourselves. I promised father I would show up for dinner. We had only a moment. And I want to see your mother before we go."

"Of course. I'll send her down. She's waiting upstairs for me to get over the shock. I won't be but a minute."

"Dale! What a pleasant surprise this is!" was Mrs. Brady's greeting, when that young man planted an impulsive kiss on her cheek and escorted her to her favorite chair.

"Isn't it, though?" he beamed. "I'm the one who's lucky."

"We are so delighted to hear of your good fortune. Lee was so excited and scarcely could tell me about it. She insisted that I call her father and tell him. He is very much pleased and anxious to see you."

"I do wish we could drive over to Locust Hill," said Lee when he helped her into the car. "But it's too far. Where shall we go?"

"I was hoping you would want to go there. We will before I go away. What do you say if we run out and park on the top of Allen's Hill for a time? I like the view there."

"I'd love it."

"Then I shall take you up into an exceeding high mountain and show you all the kingdoms of this world and the glory. There are some special peaks to see today."

"You mustn't tempt me too far and. Watch out for that car, Sir Lucifer. He's going to try to pass us. This steering wheel has too much play. You'll have to get used to it—and back-seat driving."

Sudden silence stifled their lively flow of talk when Dale parked the car on the summit of Allen's Hill and the two sat watching the landscape unrolled at their feet. Woods and farm lands basking in the early afternoon sunlight. Locust Hill among its trees, two miles to the east. The slender spire of Old White thrust above a sea of green.

"What are you so busy thinking about, Dale?" Lee asked it gently. For some minutes she had been watching his contemplative eyes looking into the distance.

"Oh—things," he admitted, without shifting his gaze. "I suppose it sounds queer. But just now it was about the funeral over there."

He nodded in the direction of the church. "That's where father went this afternoon."

"I know. It's Helen Emmens. You remember her, don't you?"

"Of course. She was one of those sisters. Always together and always dressed in black. I sat in the pew with them the first Sunday I was here."

"Did you ever hear anything about them?"

"Can't say that I did."

"I've often wished I knew the whole story. They say that Miss Helen—she was the oldest—was engaged to be married when she was a young girl. Her lover died. Her sisters have never left her through all these years and all three have worn mourning. It makes you wonder about Miss Eloise and Miss Jane. They gave their lives to Helen. And now she has gone. Why did you think about her just now, Dale?"

"Just how strange it all is. Father standing in the pulpit and telling people what a good woman she was. Miss Emmens there, too. Perhaps she knows more than anybody in the world, what it's all about."

"I hope so."

"That's what I was thinking of. She's on the way out. You and I really are just coming in. I suppose it's that way all the time."

"Dale, dear! Lee's hand came out and caught his in a fierce little clutch. "Don't talk like that. I—I can't bear it. If anything happened now, I—I think I'd die! The mossy-gate eyes were brimming with sudden tears."

"Lady Lee!" Dale exclaimed remorsefully. "I didn't mean to."

"I know," she murmured a smile. "You see, I love you so much. It makes me that way."

"Well, nothing is going to happen. It couldn't. Not now."

"I don't believe it could. It seems to me that I have known and loved you always. And it's really been but a few months, hasn't it? After you went away I used to find myself wishing that I had told you about it sooner. But I couldn't have very well. Just the same, I feel that we wasted time."

"We'll try to make it up, Dale smiled. 'We have years and years coming to us.'"

"Do you suppose that you'll ever be sorry?"

"No. I never will be sorry. I love you more than anybody in the world. It will always be like that."

"I know. But my chin gets wobbly every time I think of you going so far away. I've got to worry some. Dale. You'll be away from everybody. There won't even be letters. If you were hurt or sick, I might know nothing about it for a long time."

"Don't worry, dear. Nothing can happen to me as long as you love me. And I know you do."

"So terribly. I'll try to keep my chin up while I have you here and can see you every day. Oh, Dale, I have some gossip for you. It's bad news."

"Go on. Break it."

"Evelyn is away. She and her mother have gone to Europe. I was going to tell you in the letter."

"Tough."

"And that isn't all. Pliny resigned his position with the gas company and has gone into the bank with Mr. Marblesome. So."

"I'm resigned, too. Pliny hasn't a thing on me."

"Sure, you're not sorry?"

"What's the use?"

"And so lengthening shadows found them, watching the world at their feet."

"I'm afraid we should be going," Lee sighed regretfully. "I hate to see this day go. It's the happiest I have ever known, Dale."

"I know. I feel the same way. But it isn't gone. That is, if you'll let me come over for a little while after dinner."

"I was almost afraid to suggest it. Of course I want you to. I'll drop you at your house as we go in."

"Some day we'll be going home together. Just you and I. Perhaps it will not be so long now."

"You know I'll be ready whenever the time comes," Lee answered softly. "Nothing can ever separate us now. Tell me it can't," she entreated. "Just once more."

"Funny girl! What could separate us?"

CHAPTER XIII

When Dale reached the parsonage he went directly to the study. As he had hoped he found his father there. Farwell laid aside his pen and leaned back in his chair.

"Let me hear something about your new position, Dale," he suggested. "Just where are you going?"

"Into the Missinabi country, is the atlas handy? I'll show you."

"There beside you. On the lower shelf."

Dale laid the volume on the table and leafed through it until he located the desired map.

"I'll be starting from Minneapolis," he began importantly. "Then go up the north shore—like this. I don't know the exact route yet. But I'm to strike for the Missinabi River and follow it to some point along here."

"It looks as if it might be rough and sparsely settled country."

"It is. I'm going to make a hunt for gold. But no one is supposed to know that." Dale's blue eyes were alight with excitement. "I'll have to use a canoe and Indian guides. Mr. Kelsey says."

"Whom did you say?" Farwell broke in sharply. His head still was bent over the atlas.

"Oh, didn't I tell you? Wade Kelsey. He's the man who is sending me up there. He's a mining man. A great friend of Doctor Payne."

"Then you met this man?"

"I'll say I did. He came down to the U to consult Payne on the proposition. He wanted to send a man up there to make a report and the chief suggested me. I'm to make a survey while the snow is off the ground and to take all the time I need."

"Of course all my expenses are paid and I get a fair salary in addition. I may have to lay out some money for my outfit, but I guess I can manage that."

"Let me know if you need anything."

"Thanks, Father. If I do, it will be a loan this time. If I have real luck, Mr. Kelsey rather hinted there might be something."

"Dinner!" Pink's strident voice interrupted from the lower hall.

"I must wash up," Dale remarked hurriedly. "See you downstairs, Father."

A few moments later, he was in the dining room chatting with Mulgrew as they waited for Doctor Farwell to put in an appearance.

"Didn't the dominie hear?" Pink demanded. "The calf's goin' to be havin' a chill pretty quick."

"Why, yes, he heard," Dale said. "I was telling him about the job up north when you called. I'd just been giving him all the dope I had from my new boss, Wade Kelsey, and."

"Gawd!"

Mulgrew's small face was ashen. His gray eyes stared helplessly.

"Pink!" Dale leaped forward and caught the man by his white shoulders. "What's happened? What is it?"

"Kid. . . . Pink's tongue wet his lips. They were trembling oddly,

"Kid, you'd best go up and see your dad."

Dale hastened upstairs. "Father, I must ask you something."

"Well, . . ." came a muffled voice from the man facing the window. The swivel chair swung about reluctantly. Dale caught his breath at the sight of his father's face, the black eyes peering up at him in a jackal-like stare.

"When I went down," Dale began, "I felt that something was wrong. I was talking to Pink and."

"What did he tell you?"

"Nothing. But he . . . Father, who is Wade Kelsey?"

Farwell sighed wearily. He pulled himself to his feet, holding to the table with both hands. His face was a white mask of misery. "Sit here on the bed, Dale. We will talk as two men." He dropped heavily to a place at Dale's side and sat in brooding silence.

Bankers' Association Awards Scholarship

In December, 1937, the Michigan Bankers' Association announced an essay contest open to any senior student of a Michigan high school. The winner of this contest was to receive a $500 scholarship to the University of Michigan, available in September, 1938. The subject of this essay was to be "How a Bank Serves Its Community."

This Association announces that winning essays were sent in from 131 senior high school classes, and that the winner of this contest was: James H. Garvin, Petoskey high school, Petoskey.

First Alternate: Miss Betty Rae Hileman, Redford high school, Detroit.

Second Alternate: Howard Griep, Cadillac high school, Cadillac.

The winner of this contest appeared on the annual convention program of the Michigan Bankers Association at the Panti Hotel, Grand Rapids, on Friday morning, June 24, at which time he delivered to the delegates assembled, the winning essay. It was a very well thought-out paper and was enthusiastically received by those attending the convention.

Undoubtedly, the Michigan Bankers Association will again operate an essay contest for the year 1938-39, at which time the scholarship will be made available at Michigan State College.

The officers of the Association are very much pleased over the enthusiastic way in which the first contest was received throughout the senior classes in the high schools of Michigan.

Coal Known by Ancients

Coal was known long ago. The Romans used it some. Cinders were found in a ruined section of the Roman wall. Reference to coal is also found in documents of later times. But while coal was known it was used but little until commercial mining began in this country in 1820. The results of its application since then constitute one of the most amazing stories of all time.

METHODIST HOME

On Thursday, Mrs. John Baslock of Ann Arbor, Mrs. Claude Shaw of Snover and Mrs. D. W. Marklewitz of Detroit called on Mr. Palmateer.

Rev. M. Carley returned to us Sunday night after making an extended stay in Oxford, Seymour Lake, Clarkston, and other places of former ministerial labors.

Mrs. Bliss returned Friday afternoon from an absence of about a month, spent chiefly in Davis and Port Huron, during which she was privileged to attend the graduation exercises of a niece and a grandniece. While in Port Huron she made several trips to the Blue Water Bridge, connecting Port Huron and Sarnia, and enjoyed watching the steamers on the St. Clair River as they passed under the bridge. Another great pleasure for her was the delightful visit she had with Dr. and Mrs. Balmer.

Mrs. Macauley returned Sunday evening from spending two weeks in Royal Oak and Highland Park; while in Highland Park she greatly enjoyed attending the session of the Detroit Conference held in Trinity church.

Mrs. Burton Poor of Jonesville spent Thursday and Friday with her sister, Mrs. Brown. Dr. Brown is reported as doing well in St. Joseph's hospital in Ann Arbor.

Mrs. Tolls of Ypsilanti called on Miss Smith on Sunday afternoon.

Miss Cleantha Parke and Miss Della Nunnely, both from Detroit, visited Miss Harris on Friday. Her Monday callers were the Misses Bessie and Mary Carpenter of Pontiac.

On Saturday, Mrs. Randall returned from a very happy three weeks spent with relatives in Detroit.

Sunday morning the Home family had an unusual privilege. The Trinity Sunday school class from the Metropolitan M. E. church in Detroit sent out a delegation of young people to give us a gospel service at 10:30 a. m., which we greatly enjoyed. The address, given by Miss Eleanor Strickler, was especially good.

Again death has entered our family. On Saturday morning Mrs. Flier was released from her long suffering. She was ninety-two years of age last December and for about three and a half years had been confined to her bed, unable to sit up or greatly change her position. She had been in our Home about eleven and a half years and was honored by the entire family for her unflinching patience and her beautiful Christian life. Funeral services were held in the Home assembly room Monday afternoon, Rev. Henry Perkins of the Case Avenue Community church in Detroit being in charge. He had been her pastor before she entered here. Burial was in the cemetery at Hudson, her former home.

On Saturday, Lovel Turnbull of Harrow, Ontario called on his mother, Mrs. Turnbull, and took her to Ann Arbor. Mr. Turnbull brought a supply of delicious peaches to the Home family.

Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Starr of Detroit called on Mrs. Draper on Sunday afternoon.

Sunday is the recognized and accepted day for visitors here, but last Sunday morning Mrs. Brewer objected to an unexpected and self-invited caller who came before breakfast. With her usual efficiency, Nurse Miller put up a valiant fight and captured the intruder, gave him some professional attention, identified him as a baby robin and placed him in the custody of his parents. Judging by their excited remarks they lost no time in sternly warning him to never again set claw or wing inside that big brick nest.
