Check County Farms for Federal Program

The farm reporters selected by and under the supervision of the County Agricultural committee have begun a check of Washtenaw county farms to determine the extent of cooperation with the provisions of the 1938 Agricultural Conservation program. Harry M. Cole, secretary of the county association announced this week.

These reporters will visit every farm in the county to find out whether any person interested in all, or a share of the crops or soil building practices performed on the farm wishes to participate in the 1938 agricultural program.

If the farmer desires to participate in the program, the farm reporter will prepare a report for the farm, carefully verifying measurement records of the various fields, or noting changes in field measurements or crop acreage that have occurred since the original measurements have been made.

The farm reporter and the farm operator will visit and inspect all fields on the farm and jointly measure the acreage. A complete report of all the crop histories and the disposition made of the crops or a description of the use made of the land will be recorded on the farm report and sent to the county office.

Information relative to the acreage of commercial vegetables grown (including potatoes, where an allotment is established), the number of milch cows producing milk, and a description of any soil building practices will be included in the report.

Only one check of performance will be made in 1938 unless additional soil building practices are carried out, or changes in land use are made which will effect the performance under the 1938 Agricultural Conservation program. Should any changes occur the farmer should notify the county office in writing, so that a further check of performance can be made.

Washtenaw was one of the first counties to have aerial photographs of all land in the county. The three aerial crews which photographed this county now have their planes stationed at Traverse City and will take advantage of all good flying weather to map the remaining northern counties in the lower peninsula.

When the crews are photographing, the planes fly about 160 miles per hour at an altitude of 14,000 feet. A picture is taken every twelve seconds. Each picture takes in an area two miles long and three miles wide. An aerial crew working steadily can photograph an area of 720 square miles in six hours.

Aerial photographs taken at this altitude of almost three miles show very clearly all farm buildings, boundaries of fields, bad cases of erosion, ditches, roads, etc., Mr. Cole said. One crop can be distinguished from another for each crop, due to reflection of the sun, and has its own peculiar shade on the finished picture.

"We were very fortunate," Mr. Cole said, "in having exceptionally good flying weather during June. As a rule there are only about five days each month which are clear enough for taking aerial photographs. During June, however, we had over twice that number of days when planes could be flying at least part of the day. If we should have as good a break in the weather for the next several weeks, we should have the entire lower peninsula aerial photographed by August 1."

HOLD JOINT MEETING

Kiwanians of the Chelsea and South Lyon clubs held a joint ladies' night meeting at Four Lakes Country club, near South Lyon, on Monday evening. The entertainment feature was a softball game between the two clubs, the Chelsea "lads" winning by a regular "Yankee" landslide, the final score being 17 to 6. Roy Wallis and Albert Johnson were the stars of the game, the former getting two home runs and the latter one. Ed Eaton looked pretty good as first baseman, and Percy Gueatall performed well on the pitcher's mound, with Peter Boehm as the other half of the battery. These two ball teams will have another encounter next Monday evening when the clubs hold a joint meeting at Mannie Sott's, Pleasant Lake.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

A surprise for Mrs. Ernest Fitzmiller in honor of her birthday was given Sunday at her home on Grant St. by her daughter, Mrs. Leroy Satterthwaite. Summer flowers centered the table, where a delicious supper was served. The birthday cake was in green and white. Mrs. Fitzmiller was presented with several birthday gifts. The guests included Mrs. Lydia Zahn, Charles Zahn, Mr. and Mrs. Alton Grau and son, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Schenk and family of Freedom, Mrs. Alice Nordman and Mrs. Minnie Plowe of Chelsea.

Lansing—Homer Martin's accusations of communistic influence in the ranks of the United Automobile Workers, second largest C. I. O. group, form an ironic climax to the sit-down epidemic of just one year ago.

It forms a fascinating chapter in Michigan labor history.

To the student of history, the pendulum is swinging back. In seizing private property and in defying constitutional law and order, the C. I. O. went too far. Instead of benefiting the cause of labor, radical leadership in the U. A. W. injured it.

Martin's purge is tacit admission that Governor Murphy was right when he declared a post-strike statement that communistic influences were to blame for labor's misdirected efforts at automobile factories. It recalls the overnight rise of the Lansing Law and Order League, headed by Dwight Rich, school superintendent and ego-headed Legionnaire, who inspired public opinion to demand law observance.

Rapid Growth

Yet, a glance at the phenomenal growth of Michigan's industrial life will convince you that a lack of labor trouble would be a miracle.

In 1910 the manufacturing plants of the state employed 362,414 persons, quite a good-sized army of workers. This compares favorably with the 1880 total of only 192,241.

After 1910 came the introduction of mass production methods, the so-called assembly line, and the constant lowering of consumer prices while the product was ever improved through scientific research. The next two decades saw the development of the "American plan" which became world-famous and induced commissions from all parts of the world to visit Michigan's automobile plants in quest of the secret of our industrial efficiency.

Bruce Barton, advertising authority, has said that the "American system" comprised research, mass production, and low prices.

Certainly living standards for consumer and employee alike were raised as prices went down, while the worker gained doubly through shortening of working hours and lifting of the wage level.

By 1930 Michigan industrial plants employed 736,031 persons. Of this (Continued on next page)

ROD & GUN CLUB MEETS

About 25 members of the Chelsea Rod & Gun club attended a meeting held last Tuesday evening at the J. V. Burg cottage, Crooked Lake. The lease committee reported that all leases, covering about 1400 acres, have been renewed for this year. They also stated that a survey shows that there are more rabbits and pheasants on leased farms than ever before. Following the business meeting games were enjoyed and refreshments were served.

LEAVES FOR EUROPE

Andros Gulda, Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. Andros Gulda, sailed from New York Wednesday, July 20 on the Bremen with a group of students from the University of Michigan. They will visit England, France, Germany, Italy, Switzerland, Belgium, Norway, Sweden and other countries, and will be gone several weeks. Dr. and Mrs. Gulda accompanied their son to New York.

Waterloo Project Work Will Be Continued

According to rumors circulated during the past week, work on the Waterloo project was to be discontinued on July 31 because of failure of the WPA to allocate funds to carry on the development.

However, following a conference on Monday between Louis M. Nims, state WPA director, and Paul V. Brown, assistant to the National Park service director, it was decided that work on the project would be continued.

WPA will increase its allocation from $108,000 to $250,000 for the next seven months, which will finance a working force of about 800 persons. About 300 have been employed on the project. The National Park service will continue direction of the work in the area.

Nims' order to withdraw finances from the project came when he met with opposition from the local park representatives when he asked that something be done to provide a greater number of relief jobs. With the agreement being reached whereby more men on relief will be provided with employment the additional WPA funds are to be released.

According to Nims: "The park service has been fooling around, and we just had to have projects for relief people. It seems to me 50,000 men could be employed in an area 10 miles wide and 15 miles long."

There are about 18,000 acres of land in Washtenaw and Jackson counties in the Waterloo project. It was conceived in 1934 as a project of the re-settlement administration. Later, the property was transferred to the National Park service, and since that time it has been financed by WPA. More than $1,000,000 has been spent so far in purchase of land and development.

Jas. Munro Has Supply of Use Tax Act Blanks

James Munro, Village Clerk, has received a supply of blanks from the State Board of Tax Administration, which are to be used by persons who make purchases outside the state which are not subject to the sales tax.

Under the terms of the Use Tax Act all tangible personal property purchased for use, consumption or storage in Michigan is subject to a three per cent sales tax, regardless of where it is purchased. The act is designed to eliminate tax-free, out-of-state competition.

There are heavy penalties provided for evasion or violation of this Act. Every purchaser of goods from outside the state must get a blank, list each item purchased and its retail cost, compute the tax at three per cent and mail the amount due the state to State Board of Tax Administration, 200 Tussing Bldg., Lansing.

Mr. Munro is in no way responsible for enforcing the provisions of this Act, but is merely cooperating with the state by distributing the blanks to those who are required to pay the tax in this manner. The blanks may be secured at Mr. Munro's home.

Eight-Dwarf Mystery In Farmers' Program

It's no longer Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, it's to be Snow White and the Eight Dwarfs at least for one day on the campus of Michigan State College.

For the annual Farmers'-Day program Friday, July 20, a mystery is being created by H. H. Musselman, head of agricultural engineering. He is in charge of a pageant of nearly 20 floats which will depict farm and home conveniences. The eight dwarfs will be in the pageant telling their own version of Musselman's mystery. This pageant is one of the highlights of the day's program, annual summer offering of the college which usually attracts more than 5,000 to East Lansing. Science and research and entertainment comprise the program.

In the morning the theme will be how Michigan farmers can help save their portion of the annual national loss in livestock of $12,000,000. Parasites, bruises and injuries all contribute to this loss. Proper phases of breeding and feeding and handling on the way to the market all are to be depicted. Prevention of livestock losses as the morning feature is being worked out by G. A. Brown, head of the animal husbandry department. Included in exhibits will be a neat display to show various types of injuries.

Three commercial livestock truckers will vie at 9:30 a. m. They will try to see which one can load with greatest rapidity and efficiency a mixed load of cattle, sheep and swine.

OUR NEIGHBORS

HOWELL.—Billy Foote, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Foote, and Keith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Richardson, put out one day last week from Milford for a canoe voyage down the Huron; their canoe loaded down with camping and cooking equipment, mosquito oil, etc. They ended their trip at Ann Arbor after six eventful days and mosquito fighting nights, but had the kind of time two young fellows might be expected to enjoy, and an adventure that will long be remembered.—County Press.

NORTHVILLE.—Clad in overalls and wearing dark glasses proved to be the source of interference with the work Monday afternoon of two Detroit Edison linemen near Ann Arbor. They were none other than William Higgins of the village and Harold Trotter of Ypsilanti. Their "business" clothes and the description sent by teletype of the two Farmington bank robbers "just fit the looks" of the two Edison men who were riding along, testing lines. They were followed several miles by police cruisers before they were asked to "pull up and answer a few questions." Higgins admits that he was "just plain frightened."—Record.

PINKNEY.—The Ford project here which has been dormant for some time on account of the numerous difficulties involved in acquiring the flowing right to certain pieces of property now show signs of activity. A letter received from Ernest Liebold, secretary to Henry Ford, by Norman Reason last week asked them to get a deed to water sewage rights of a portion of St. Mary's cemetery as soon as possible as the Ford Co. wished to start the installation of a hydro-electric plant here at once. The deed to the cemetery is held by the Bishop and due to forming of a new diocese at Lansing and transfer of Pinkney to this new district there has been some delay here. A delegation from here went to Lansing on Tuesday to see Bishop Albera concerning this.—Dispatch.

BROOKLYN.—Local fishing is not only good this season but it seems to be getting better. The fish are getting hungrier and are actually competing for the bait, all to the advantage of the fishermen. W. H. Hess of 319 Poinsetta, Toledo, O., was throwing a plug in the east end of Clark's Lake last Sunday when he got a strike. He thought he was seeing double when two tails flashed in the water, but he knew everything was more than all right when he soon brought two nice bass out of the water and into the boat. G. A. Sigler of 4436 Westway, Toledo, assisted in landing the twin fish, and says it is the first time in his experience that he has known of two fish hitting a plug at the same time. Both the fish were well hooked in the mouth and both were small mouth bass, one two pounds and the other a few ounces lighter.—Exponent.

CHILDREN IN COURT

Judge Malcolm Hatfield

Lenient Parents

A youth who was arrested in the act of robbing a gasoline station confessed his guilt in court.

At the conclusion of the trial the judge drew the father and mother aside and said: "In the past you have been too lenient with your son. You pleaded where you should have commanded. You coaxed and humored this child, when your own experience in life should have told you that it was necessary to adopt a firmer course of training. As a result of your negligence your boy frankly admits that he had lost all respect for your judgment and prefers to follow his own inclinations. Now the State is forced to step in and take over the responsibilities which you, as parents, failed to enforce."

Long Use of Horseshoes

Horses started wearing shoes when first domesticated. Tough as their hoofs appear to be, unless protected they break when the animal is made to do any hard work. Without shoes horses would never be able to run as fast nor work as hard, says the Washington Post. An ancient practice, long before the use of metal, was to shoe horses in a crude type of straw slipper. Japanese used this method up to the Nineteenth century, although metal shoes have been common for more than 1,800 years.

number, about one-half, or 342,000 by 1935 worked in automobile factories.

Management Problem

With the sudden spurt in payrolls, whereby tens of thousands of workers were put to work, industrialists began to realize, belatedly at first, that they were dealing not only with iron- and wood and other inarticulate things, but with human beings who, being human, did not always grasp the fundamentals of economics.

In the judgment of Walter Lippman, columnist, the sit-down strikes demonstrated to General Motors corporation that the management of hundreds of thousands of workers in its 15 far-flung plants was no small responsibility. It called for constructive leadership in making our industrial democracy truly democratic.

Putting its finger on the worker's pulse, General Motors became convinced that the so-called "spy system," whereby private detectives are employed as workers, created more trouble than it prevented. The detectives were discharged.

Management thus is moving toward mutual confidence between the employer and his co-worker, the employee. It is trying to restore the old relationship of "good neighbor" which once existed in the small plant where the boss knew his fellow workers by their first names.

Legion "Fascism"

American Legionnaires in Michigan are still laughing "up their sleeve" at the sensational report released to the National Education association by a research man at the Columbia Teachers' college to the effect that the Legion had gone "fascist."

Coming as it did just at the conclusion of a very successful "Wolverine Boys' State" at Michigan State College it prompted no end of merriment. The educator had charged that the war veterans were militarists. The citizenship school at the state college is a perfect answer, so Legionnaires believe, to this accusation.

Nearly 850 boys from all parts of Michigan were given a week's training in democratic government without so much as a glance at an army rifle or the sound of a military command. It was the antithesis of fascism. One of the Legionnaire workers, in fact, was invited to leave voluntarily when leaders found that he had imbibed privately on the side before bedtime. After all, the Legion is growing old.

Unemployment

Candidates for office in the mining region of the Upper Peninsula will burst in oratorical denials, but federal surveys have convinced those in high command that thousands of unemployed persons there will have to go elsewhere to find work.

The Keweenaw peninsula, for example, contains communities of unemployed residents.

Copper mines there have gone to great depths, making it unprofitable to compete with mines where copper is found near the ground. Under auspices of the State of Michigan, geologists are now seeking to uncover new veins and to revive the languishing industry.

How entire communities can be transferred to other fields is a problem that staggers the imagination of social planners. It is one of the tragedies in Michigan.

Politicians shake their heads. Facts run counter to pride. The answer must come as most answers do—from the fortitude and ingenuity of the American people themselves.

Old-Age Assistance Doubles In Michigan

Assistance given aged, needy persons by the State of Michigan nearly doubled during the past fiscal year with a total of 70,558 persons on the rolls of the Bureau of Old Age Assistance June 30, 1934 as compared with 35,883 at the close of the previous twelve-month period. James G. Bryant, State Welfare Director, stated. Total assistance payments increased from $603,452 during the month of January 1937 to a total of $1,285,598 during the closing month of the past fiscal year.

A total of $3,821,250 was distributed to recipients during the 1937-38 fiscal year or an average of $151,754 each month with the average payment to each recipient amounting to $18.50 per month or $2 more than the previous year.

The total amount expended during the fiscal year of 1936-37 amounted to $7,073,416 and the average monthly grant per recipient was $16.57. Administration costs during the fiscal period averaged 5.6 per cent of the entire bureau expenditure including burial expenses which approximated 2 per cent of the costs. The average administration expenses show a slight decrease during the twelve month period averaging 5.0 per cent of total costs during the first six months as compared with 5.3 per cent during the latter six months.

The federal government, which matches state funds dollar for dollar in payment of old age assistance benefits, allocates five per cent of federal funds for administration purposes which sum approximates 46 per cent of the total administrative cost.

Folklore About Stars

Folklore of many peoples tells that when a child dies God makes a new star in the sky. German peasants in ancient days believed stars and angels' eyes, and in old England it was thought wicked to point at stars.

WHISPERINGS OF JESUS

When heart is weighted down with care,
With sorrow and with grief,
To know that Jesus understands,
Oh how it brings relief.

When those we love, yet cannot sense,
Anxieties we feel,
The whisperings of Jesus come
To gird us and to heal (1 Peter 1-13).

From strength to strength—from day to day (Psalm 84-7),
Thru grace we've proved it true,
Our Saviour understands it all
And He will take us through.

"This I, be not afraid," he said,
When mountain billows roared,
How soon the storm abated, when
The Master came on board.

So when my heart is weighted down
With sorrow and with grief,
To know that Jesus understands,
Oh how it brings relief.

—Arthur Carlton.

Here is a Safetygram for housewives:

Delivery men as a rule are efficient and safe drivers, not just because of long training and intensive safety education, but because they have been taught to be patient, courteous, and tolerant. Problems and questions that would try the patience of Job are put in their path a hundred times a day. For example:

Mrs. Smith asks for a special rush delivery, then forgets about it and leaves home.

Mrs. Brown asks the driver to wait while she inspects the goods, and then decides she doesn't want the package after all.

Mrs. Jones calls at five minutes to six and insists that the meat market deliver immediately an order of meat which she must have for dinner.

Mrs. White complains that the material was not what she ordered, so she takes her spite out on the driver.

Every one of these cases means more bookkeeping and more worry for the driver.

Help him by being just a little more considerate. Give him time to deliver your goods so he will not be rushing through the streets with the possibility of injuring people. It's smart to be careful.

FLIGHT AROUND EARTH

Howard Hughes and Companions Set New Record of 91 Hours . . . Japan Cancels 1940 Olympics

Hughes' Great Flight

HOWARD HUGHES and his crew of four completed their remarkable flight around the world when they landed at Floyd Bennett airport, New York, 3 days, 15 hours and 17 minutes after starting from that place. They had covered 14,824 miles and made six stops for refueling—at Paris, Moscow, Omsk, Yakutsk, Fairbanks and Minneapolis.

They cut more than three days off the record made by Wiley Post in 1931, but Hughes said after landing that he still considered Post's solo flight was the most remarkable job of flying ever done.

On the hop across the Atlantic the time made by Lindbergh was nearly halved.

With Hughes, wealthy sportsman and aviator who financed and organized the flight, were Harry Connor and Thomas Thurlow, navigators; Richard Stoddard, radio operator, and Ed Lund, flight engineer.

Hughes himself was at the controls all the time, but said the robot pilot did all the flying except the takeoffs and landings. Much credit also was given the automatic navigator loaned by the army air corps.

The chief perils encountered were on the flight to Paris, because they had barely enough fuel to reach Le Bourget airport; and the trip over Siberia where they had to go to an altitude of 17,000 feet and accumulated much ice. Radio communication with the land was maintained most of the time except for six hours before Minneapolis was reached.

During that period their transmitter was out of commission. The monoplane, named "New York World's Fair, 1940," was welcomed at New York by Mayor La Guardia and Grover Whalen and a tremendous crowd. The weary fliers soon got to bed, but next day the metropolis gave them one of its customary ticker-tape receptions with a parade.

The wives of Stoddard, Connor and Thurlow were at the airport to meet their husbands. Katherine Hepburn, the movie star, bade Hughes good-by when he started and welcomed him back. In Hollywood it is rumored they are engaged or possibly secretly married.

Another woman deeply interested in the flight was Miss Elinore Hoagland of New York, fiancée of Ed Lund.

Deficit to Be 4 Billions

IN REVISED budget estimates for the current fiscal year, given out in Washington, the President forecast a net federal deficit of $3,982,887,690, an increase of $2,525,639,500 over last year's deficit and $3,038,000,000 more than he had estimated in January for the 12 months ending next June 30.

The deficit, which will increase the gross public debt by $3,435,000,000, will be financed, the President indicated, by a reduction of $500,000,000 in the working balance of the treasury's general fund; by the use of $680,000,000 in special issues of government obligations and by $2,805,000,000 in new federal financing.

The gross deficit was estimated at $4,084,887,700, in which is included $100,000,000 for debt retirement. The business slump, which grew sharper after Roosevelt submitted his budget estimates to congress last January, was blamed by him for the inaccuracies of his forecasts.

Japan Cancels Olympics

JAPAN evidently thinks the war in China is not near its end. The Tokyo government has cancelled the Olympic games of 1940, dropping all plans to be the host of the world's athletes. The announcement, made by Marquis Koichi Kido, public welfare minister, surprised even the Japanese organizing committee, and the members of that body declared the games would be held, "whether or not the government supports them."

In Tokyo it was said the government's action was due to the cost of financing the games and to military leaders' opposition to a growth of nationalism among the Japanese people.

Though the government lacks money and materials for the necessary sports structures, it had prepared to contribute $1,250,000 toward the cost, and only a few days ago 40 men for the Japanese football team were selected and started training.

Count Michimasa Soyeshima, member of the International Olympic committee, said Japan might bid for the 1948 games.

"I hope Japan can bid then," he said. "Apparently it is impossible to bid even for the 1944 games. The cancellation was inevitable under the present circumstances."

It was expected the international committee would meet soon to determine the next move. London and Helsinki, Finland, were mentioned as possible sites for the 1940 games.

Senator Thomas Wins

VICTORY of Senator Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma in his fight for renomination by the Democrats was hailed by the New Dealers as a direct result of the campaign speaking tour of President Roosevelt.

The President told the Oklahomans what a help the senator had been to him and how much he had done for the state; and he gave some swipes at Thomas' rivals, Governor Markland and Representative Gomer Smith. So the Oklahomans picked Thomas by a good majority. For governor they named Leon C. Phillips, much to the disappointment of Alfalfa Bill Murray.

In the course of his trip across the country, Mr. Roosevelt, in his capacity of head of the Democratic party, first boosted the cause of Senator Barkley of Kentucky, his staunch supporter, and cleverly avoided hitting too hard at Governor Happy Chandler, who seeks Barkley's seat.

In Arkansas Mr. Roosevelt found time to say kind words about Senator Hattie Caraway.

Passing through Colorado and Nevada, he avoided politics in his talks, for Senators Alva Adams and Pat McCarran, both of whom have opposed some of his chief policies, are mighty strong in their states. Both of them boarded his train but their reception was decidedly cool.

The President delivered the only set speech on his program at the San Francisco world's fair administration building. He then reviewed the United States battle fleet of 66 vessels, and spent several hours aboard the cruiser Houston. Next day he spent in Yosemite National park.

After three days in California the President boarded the Houston at San Diego and went to the Galapagos Islands for some fishing. Thence he was to pass through the Panama canal and come back home by way of the southeastern states.

Alchemy a Mystery

The alchemists or chemists of the Middle Ages were obsessed with the problems of the transmutation of metals, the search for the elixir of life and the universal solvent. It is hard to find their records of discoveries, if any, for there was a secret art and they left few written records; what they did leave in writing is in language so mysterious as to be almost impossible of interpretation to us.

Earliest Workers' Association

The earliest known workers' association in the United States is that of the Philadelphia Shoe Workers, who were organized in 1782.

PHILIP GRUNER

Philip Gruner, 64, died Friday at his home in Grass Lake township. He was born near Grass Lake, April 19, 1874, the son of Jacob and Christina Gruner. His wife, Paulina, died a year ago.

Surviving are three sisters, Mrs. Julia Hoffman of Munith, and Misses Hilda and Frederika Gruner of Jackson.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at St. John's church, Francisco, with Rev. P. H. Grabowski officiating. Burial was in Munith.

Search by Smell

Some authorities assert that reptiles employ the sense of smell to locate their kind, especially at the approach of the hibernating season. Observations on newts and allied creatures have shown that they nose about in a manner which strongly indicates search by smell. Perhaps the greatest trackers among the smaller animals are members of the cat and weasel families. A mink can follow the trail of a rabbit even after it is an hour old and will tenaciously stick to it until the prey is finally run down.

Don'ts for Tourists

Don't look for the Sistine Madonna in the Sistine chapel at Rome; it is in Dresden. Don't look for the Mons Meg, the great cannon, at Mons in Belgium; it is in Edinburgh castle. Don't look for London derry near London; it is in Ireland.

Every Day . . . in Michigan . . .

5 People are KILLED in Auto Accidents ... You May Be Next!

A dead man never gets a second chance! Let's use our brains while we're still living—the trouble with us motorists is that we think we're pretty good drivers—accidents can't happen to us. But don't kid yourself, that's just the attitude that death grows fat on—overconfidence! Overconfidence is just a ritzy word for carelessness—carelessness that will send you to your grave or years of crippled living. But your life isn't the most important thing—no sir, we know plenty of motorists who'd give their lives and more if they could bring back to life those they had killed.

Let's knock some sense into our heads—let's drive carefully—let's save 5 lives a day! Or would you rather learn by experience—all right, go ahead—kill yourself . . . that will teach you a lesson you won't have to worry about forgetting. But listen—don't kill an innocent victim—because living as far as you're concerned is all washed out. You'll always hear the sickening impact of flesh against car—a heart-rending scream—a bloody body and gruesome death—you'll wish it was you who had died. We know people who had that experience—some of them went crazy!

LIBRARY NEWS

Some of the top-notchers from your local library shelves are standing out for recognition from some of our book lovers. They have already made friends with many of the library patrons and below you will find just a few of the servants at your disposal:

Juvenile Books

The Nuggets of Silver Creek—Grace Dawson was Californian-born and like most natives, early learned the traditions that make for interest and background. There have been many gold rush romances but few that reach the juvenile reader as does "The Nuggets of Silver Creek". Grace Dawson understands the nature of children that prompts them to delve into the pages of adventure that are coining with Lordships and hazards which the adolescent loves to experience. Imagine David finding a pocket of nuggets all by himself. Wouldn't it be fun to know what he did with them? This book tells you all about it.

Adventure in Africa—Would some of you boys like to sit right down in a comfy chair and listen to Herbert Best tell you something about Africa? If you would like to tramp across a hot prairie through a heavy tornado with the hope of quieting the natives; if you would like to see and hear a war—dropping around you and singing against the rocks; if you would like to conquer the people of an African village and see them prove themselves good losers like you would be in a baseball game—just follow the Adventures in Africa to find a clean thrill of fine proportions measured up with many humorous situations to give it balance.

My America—Louis Adamic calls this book his most mature and moving book since the memorable best seller, "The Native's Return". He has learned to know and love America and calls it "My American Adventure in Understanding". It is a picture of people, places and forces he has known during the past decade, summing up what has influenced his life as an American.

Bowlegg Bill, by Jeremiah Digges—This has been called the most important literary contribution of the month as well as the funniest to appear in many months. By his own frequent insistence Bill was always a wrangler for Laramie County, Wyoming, but his real fame was won at Sea and has been kept alive in the Down East ports from which once sailed his mates. Legend has it that Bill, his eight feet four inches (with bow-legs and without his boots), having caught the eye of a daring crimp, was shanghaied aboard the whaler "Sawdust Sal" to begin a series of unheard of exploits. And here they are, just as Mr. Digges heard them from descendants of the whalers who knew Bowlegg Bill, with only such slight individual embroidery as is the right of any good teller of old tales.

FRANCISCO

Lovely in every detail was the family dinner given Sunday in observance of the 50th anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. James Richards, at the homestead north of town, in Waterloo township. The dinner was prepared and served by the three daughters, Mrs. Rex Dorr of Grass Lake, Mrs. Irwin Klump and Miss Irene Richards of Chelsea.

Above the table where sat the bride and groom, hung a wedding bell, from which were yellow and white ropes reaching to the side walls, forming a canopy.

Cut and garden flowers were placed throughout the rooms, as well as potted plants.

As a centerpiece on the bride and groom's table was a pyramid cake in white and gold, mounted by a miniature bride and groom; and the place cards were nut baskets with a bride and groom standing beneath an arch. Following the sumptuous repast, ice cream, featuring a wedding bell, was served along with the bride's cake, which Mrs. Richards cut for her guests. Angel food and sunshine cakes were also served.

The honored couple received lovely gifts from the 55 present, chief among them being $50.00, a gift from the three daughters.

Relatives were present from Detroit, Whitmore Lake, Chelsea, Grass Lake and Francisco, who wished the couple many more years of health and happiness.

There was a large funeral Sunday at St. John's church, for Philip Gruner, who passed away suddenly at his farm home Friday. Mr. Gruner had been as well as usual and had been to the field Friday morning to supervise some work and when he returned to the house, complained to Mrs. Katz that he was dizzy and before she could offer much assistance, he died. Mr. and Mrs. Katz had been operating the farm since the death of Mrs. Gruner in April. Mr. Gruner is survived by three sisters, Mrs. Julia Hoffman of Munith, and Misses Friedericka and Hilda Gruner of Jackson. Burial was in Munith, beside his wife, Paulina Gruner.

Mrs. Lewis Lambert spent a day recently with her parents in Jackson.

Mrs. Eva Moore of Chelsea spent the week-end here with the home folks.

Several from here attended the band concert in Grass Lake on Wednesday evening.

CHAPTER I

Barbara, dancing with Robb Morrison and more and more distressed by his too obvious devotion, met Helen Frayne's eye as they passed on the floor; and Helen laughed at something her partner had said, in a metallic, mirthless fashion, and avoided Barbara's glance. Barbara looked around for rescue; and Robb said, whispering in her ear:

"Say, Helen's got her eye on me! Let's duck, go outside."

New this party was Helen Frayne's, at the Club in Essex; and Robb was Helen's too, as everyone knew. But tonight—he met Barbara before dinner for the first time—he had made Barbara and himself conspicuous by his attentions. So she was at once uncomfortable and unhappy—and a little afraid of what Helen might do. Helen was nice enough; yet she could be cruel too.

Barbara declined Robb's invitation to promenade; she said: "No, let's not! Robb, find Johnny, will you please? He has my compact in his pocket."

"Come on," he urged. "We'll both go hunt for him!" He took her cheerfully by the arm.

But she freed herself. "Sh-h! Not!" she whispered. "You must go rescue Helen. See! She's stuck with Luke Tydings."

He laughed, shook his head. "Don't want to be a rescuer," he protested, a little thickly. "Just want to dance and dance and dance with you, forever and ever. How about a little punch?"

"No, thanks!" Barbara had accepted one cocktail before dinner, since it was easier to do so than to refuse; but she used that one as a shield, barely tasted it, so that her full glass protected her against persuasions to take another. Not everyone had been so discreet. Robb, for instance, was certainly in no need of another glass of punch. "Do run along," she insisted now, good-humored but insistent; and she turned and gave him a small thrust toward Helen yonder across the floor.

She realized, too late, that Helen was watching them, had seen her do this. Worse, Robb marched straight to Helen, saluted, and said—much too loudly, "Barbara says I must report for duty, Helen!"

So—naturally, some people laughed; and Helen was red with anger. Her eyes met Barbara's across the floor.

And that was why Helen deliberately set to work to get Johnny Boyd drunk. For Barbara had come with Johnny, driving down from Boston. She liked him well enough. He was a gay youngster, still at Harvard, gentle and amusing and good fun; and he usually remembered his responsibilities. Tonight he had cut in on Robb once or twice, till Robb began to cut back so quickly that people noticed and laughed; and Johnny got a little mad.

"I'll knock him endways if he cuts back this time," he told Barbara; and she said in pleading urgency: "No, Johnny! Don't have a row! I'll get rid of him. Here he comes now."

Johnny obeyed her; but when a little later Barbara sent Robb to Helen, Johnny had disappeared; and someone else danced with Barbara, and before she could escape, Helen captured Johnny. They went out of course somewhere, and Barbara could only wait for them to return; and when they came back again and began to dance together, Barbara saw what had happened. Helen had done her work well. Johnny was first red, then pale, then red again; and his feet were stumbling and uncertain.

Someone cut in on them and took Helen and left Johnny tottering in the middle of the floor; and Barbara guided her partner that way, thanked him, dismissed him, turned to Johnny.

He said, "Hi, Barb!" His arm encircled her. "Where you been all evening?"

She steadied him skillfully. "I've a frightful headache, Johnny! And it's so hot in here; I'm just stifling. Would it spoil your fun if we started home?"

He looked down at her in bemused suspicion. "Wait a minute! Trying to play nursemaid, are you? I'm all right, Barb!"

"Of course you are! You're fine. I hate to drag you away, but I'm simply exhausted, Johnny."

He said elaborately: "Well, of course in that case! Always the gentleman; that's me. Damsel in distress! Women and children first. Don't spare the horses. Let's go!"

"Thanks, Johnny. I'll meet you in the hall."

They went to say good-night. Helen said mockingly, "Oh, going so early, Barb?"

"It's been a lovely party," Barbara assured her.

Johnny swayed at her side; and Helen laughed and touched his arm and said: "Poor Johnny! And you have to drive? Never mind; just take the middle road!"

Fresh air a little sobered him. Barbara was wondering how to persuade him to let her take the wheel; but when they came to the car, he said:

"Thanks for getting me out of that, Barb! I'm drunk. Cocked as a mink! I'm sorry as the Devil. But—do you mind driving? I don't want to hang you on a telephone pole somewhere."

She said gratefully: "Of course not. I'll drive, but you'll be all right presently. We'll open the windshield, get a lot of air."

"Sorry to make a show of myself. It hit me all of a sudden."

"I understand." When they were under way, he slumped beside her and was presently asleep. The night was cool, in early fall. She stopped the car once to turn up his coat collar and adjust his scarf against a chill. He snored heavily; and as she drove on she considered the problem now presented. This was Johnny's car. If she took him to Cambridge, she would have to find a taxi to her home. If she went directly to her home, Johnny would have to drive to Cambridge alone—and for that he was in no condition.

She decided to try to bring him back to sobriety again, before they came to Boston; and she turned off the main highway down a short spur road that ended above the rocky shore, and stopped the car and tried to wake him up, to make him get out of the car and breathe deeply and walk up and down. But when she shook him, he only roused enough to mumble protests and go back to sleep again. She remembered hearing that you could wake a drunken man by slapping his face, and she tried this; and Johnny muttered to himself, and someone beside the car said harshly "What's going on here?"

Barbara turned and saw a policeman standing at her elbow, peering in at them. She said, "It's all right, officer."

But Johnny was awake now. "Sure's all right!" he declared; and in alcoholic belligerence demanded, "What do you want to make out of it?"

The policeman said, "All right, buddy, pipe down." He asked Barbara, "Handle him all right, can you?"

"Oh, yes. I just want to get him out of the car, get him to walk up and down."

"He's a fine one to get in this shape with a nice girl on his hands!"

"It isn't quite all his fault, officer."

"I'll help you cool him down," the policeman decided. He went to the other side of the car and opened the door and said, "Come on, buddy, a little fresh air will fix you up all right."

He half dragged Johnny Boyd out of the car, set him on his feet. Johnny promptly hit him. He flung himself at the officer so violently that the policeman was borne backward and fell, and Johnny swarmed on top of him, and Barbara tried to come at them and was tossed aside by the violence of their movements, and the officer got to his feet and dragged Johnny upright, and said angrily, "Hey, buddy, behave!"

Another car, turned down the road, its lights upon them. Barbara cried, "Please, Johnny!"

But Johnny was violent; the policeman said wearily, "All right, if you want it." His blow landed with a sharp, snapping sound; and Johnny went limply down, and Barbara protested unhappily.

"Oh, did you have to do that?" The officer was apologetic. "Best thing for him, Miss. He'll wake up in the morning with a head, that's all." He added, "But I'll have to take him in!"

"Can't I take him home, please?" "He's tore my uniform! I'll have some explaining to do. And it might teach him something, to wake up in jail!"

"I'll go with you. I can't leave him."

Someone touched her arm, and she whirled, and a man said, "Can I help in any way?" There was a moment's silence of surprise. The newcomer explained: "I'm Professor Brace, Harvard Business School. If I can be of service?"

It was the officer who answered him. "You might take the young lady home, Professor," he suggested. "The boy here has had a drop too many. I had to slap him down. He'll sleep it off in the station; but it would be too bad to have a nice girl—"

"But I want to take care of him," Barbara insisted. "I can't run out on him."

Professor Brace said, "You seem sober."

"Of course I am!" "Then you ought to be sensible. Come along. I'll see you safe home; and the officer will give your gallant young escort a break in court!"

The policeman added his urgent cries. "Yes, ma'am, you do that. Drunk and disorderly, five dollars. That's all."

"But he can't go to court in dinner clothes!"

The professor's tone held a grudging approval. "You're a loyal young woman. Suppose we do this. You tell me where he lives. I'll take you home, then bring him some clothes in the morning before he has to go to court. There's no need of your being mixed up in this. There's nothing you can do that we—the officer and I—can't do better."

And Barbara in the end surrendered; and the officer approving, she and Professor Brace got into his car and drove away. After they had been some silent moments on the road past Revere toward Boston, he said:

"We're a pretty decent lot," she assured him. "The people ten years older than us did run wild; but the girls I know don't drink too much, and they're level-headed and responsible. My older sister works every day in the hospital. She's going to marry a doctor and be a medical missionary. Mother does a lot of club work, things like that. We're the sort of family that doesn't get into the society columns very much. We don't telephone the editor every time we have people to dinner. But we're all right. Doing our jobs, behaving ourselves."

She hesitated, laughed a little. "I don't know why I'm telling you the story of my life except that I sort of want you to—well, to not be so sure I'm just a crazy kid."

He said, "I don't! I did at first, naturally; but I can see you're not so bad as I thought." He smiled. "I suppose yours is what we think of as a 'fine old Boston family.' Your father's turning at the next corner. Shall I follow him?"

"Let him go," Barbara directed. "We'll take the next turn. Yes, I suppose we are. I never thought much about it. My sister and I do the usual things. Of course my brother's in Yale instead of Harvard, but the Sentries have been Yale for a good many generations. And mother and father—"

"By the way," the professor suggested, "why not tell your father about this scrape tonight? I expect he'd like to feel that he had your confidence."

"No, he'd just disapprove and be stern," she said. "He's always been pretty strict with himself, and with us too. He keeps telling me how girls behaved when he was young!"

"It wasn't a bad way to behave!" He laughed. "I'll bet as many girls were kissed in buggies then as in automobiles now. Turn here. Our house is two blocks ahead. And then she exclaimed: "That must be father just turning into our drive! He drove awfully slowly, didn't he? Switch off your lights. Stop in the street, and we'll wait till he has gone to bed."

They stopped in front of the house, hidden behind a high hedge, and Professor Brace stilled the engine. In the sudden silence they heard steps on gravel.

"He's coming back from the garage," she whispered; and a moment later: "There! He's opened the front door! Light shone out, then was dark as the door closed again. 'We'll wait till he's gone upstairs,'" she directed. "Do you

He did not mind. He asked where Johnny lived, how to get clothes to take him for his appearance in court in the morning. She gave him the number of Johnny's dormitory room. "But probably one of his room-mates will do it," she suggested. Then an upstairs light came on.

"There!" she said. "Father's undressing. He must have gone to the kitchen for something before he went upstairs." And when presently the light went out, "Now he's in bed!" She opened the car door. "You've really been awfully kind. Thanks a lot." She extended her hand.

He said, "See here, Miss Sentry. May I drop in, one of these days? I'd like to know you better."

Her eyes twinkled. "Then you don't think I'm hopeless?"

He chuckled. "Maybe I can reform you!"

"Do come. Sunday evening?" "Thanks. Count on me. Good-night!"

Their hands clasped. He started the car and drove away; and Barbara, walking for silence's sake on the turf beside the gravel drive, went toward the house.

She wondered why her father had been downtown so late tonight; wondered what time it was; looked at her watch.

It was quarter of one.

Mrs. Sentry, Barbara's mother, roused when her husband turned on the light in their bedroom and got into his bed beside hers. She did not fully wake; just asked drowsily, "Everything all right, Arthur?"

"Of course! Perfect!" "What time is it?"

"Quarter past eleven," he said, and she heard the rustling of the paper as he began to read. She thought sleepily that he was home early. He always dined at the Club on Thursday evenings, with bridge before and after dinner; but usually he was later than that in coming home. He was still reading when she drifted back to sleep.

When Nellie knocked on the door at seven next morning, Mrs. Sentry had been some time awake, planning her day. The sempstress in the forenoon, lunch at Mrs. Furness to hear Miss Glen speak, dinner at home this evening. Mr. Sentry did not rouse at Nellie's knock; and Mrs. Sentry saw that he lay on his side, his back toward her; and she noticed with a faint jealous resentment of his continued youthfulness that his tumbled dark hair was not yet thin even on the top of his head. They had been married almost thirty years. The children, babies so short a time ago, were young men and women now. Mary, so like Mrs. Sentry herself, absorbed in her work at the Hospital, taking it with a severe seriousness. Phil, a Junior at New Haven, closer to Mrs. Sentry than either of his sisters, apt to tease her about her pride; her high head. Barbara, Mrs. Sentry reflected now that Barbara, the youngest, was almost like a stranger in the family. Only between Barb and Phil, both with a gift for laughter, was there close abiding sympathy. Mrs. Sentry wondered—lying half asleep—what their other children would have been like if there had been others. But of course there could not be. She had, so far as outward appearances were concerned, forgiven Arthur that old offense readily enough. "At least," she told him jolly, that day a few weeks before Barbara was born when he came to her in confit confession, "there has been no scandal. I could not forgive a scandal. So, since no one knows—unless she—"

And the matter was never mentioned again between them. But the forgiveness, naturally was only on the surface. Yet they continued to preserve the outward forms, even to sleep in beds side by side, so that not even the servants ever knew.

Mrs. Sentry thought this morning that her ancient tolerance had been repaid. Their lives had always been outwardly serene; were serene as they grew older now.

She rose, leaving Arthur abed; but while she was dressing, she heard him stirring, and called, "Thought you might want to sleep."

He said, "No," rather curtly. "Do well last night? Have a good game?"

"Didn't hold any cards." The Thursday night bridge was in the nature of a tournament, four rubbers being played after dinner. He referred to this as he explained now: "They finished us off by half past ten. I hung around for a few minutes, and then came along home." He added: "And I forgot your package from Butler's, Ellen. They delivered it about four o'clock, but I left it on my desk at the office."

"It doesn't matter," she said. "Today will do." She repeated, "It doesn't matter at all," and she wondered why she went to such pains to reassure him, realized that there was something like apprehension in his tone, as though he were afraid what she would say. She asked hurriedly, "Who did you play with?"

"Dean Hare," he said. "Against Carl Bettle and Bob Flood."

She came into his dressing-room, herself ready for the day, and watched him knot his tie, brush his hair, trim his mustache. "What a time you have with that, don't you?" she said, amused at his intensity as he leaned close to the mirror, his jaw depressed to draw his upper lip taut, holding his mustache fast with one finger while with many grimaces he trimmed its ragged edges.

He nodded, and put on coat and vest, stowed odds and ends in his pockets, said, "Well, ready?"

She felt taunted in him, a need for reassurance. "You look about twenty-five," she told him dutifully. "Not a day older than Mary. You make me feel as though I had four children instead of three!" He smiled; and she thought she had succeeded in putting him in better humor for the day. She had always administered praise to him like a medicine, skillfully.

The house was old, of brick, four square, with a French roof, the slopes broken by gables that admitted light to the servants' quarters and storage rooms on the upper floor. It had been built by Arthur's grandfather, in what was at that time open country; but now it was crowded among others, most of them of a later period, and retained only a narrow area of lawn and garden, with room for a tennis court beside the garage in the rear. A sluggish stream meandered behind the garage at an angle across the rear of the lot; and there was a pergola of brick and stone behind the tennis court, built by Arthur's father, on the bank above the water where ducks came to feed. Rhododendrons ten or twelve feet high screened the house from the street in front, and there were hedges along the lot line on either side. Outside the house was as it had been built, save for the English ivy which cloaked the walls; but inside there were changes. Arthur's mother, when she was mistress here, had torn out walls, installed bathrooms, dressing-rooms, closets; redecorated again and again.

Mary was at the table when Mr. and Mrs. Sentry entered the dining-room; rose punctiliously to greet them. She was a tall, lovely girl, her cheeks a little hollowed so that her cheekbones and the line of her jaw showed firmly; and her eyes were apt to be grave, even when she smiled. She wore this morning a suit of blue-gray homespun, and her father, seeing this, commented: "Looks as though you're dressed for business."

She nodded. "Yes," she agreed. "I'm going to the hospital." She spent part of every day there as a volunteer, tending convalescent patients, learning something of nursing and medicine in the process. The hospital was Mrs. Sentry's pet charity; but Nell Ray, rather than her mother, was responsible for the fact that Mary's interests were thus directed. Nell was studying medicine, planning to follow his father as a medical missionary in China; and he wanted Mary to marry him.

"I told him," she confessed to her mother the night he proposed to her, "that I was no kind of wife for any kind of missionary!" Yet she had thereafter plunged into this work, as though—thus she might deserve him. That was months ago. Mrs. Sentry had long since realized that Mary loved the young doctor. She herself disapproved quite heartily. Mary was Boston, belonged in Boston, had a rightful and a suitable place here. If Nell chose to practice in Boston and showed promise of becoming distinguished, that might be another matter. But Mrs. Sentry thought him virtuously conscious of the altruism of his proposed career. Also there was, she realized, something of the martyr in Mary. The girl took Nell seriously. They both seemed to feel that Mary was on probation; that if she proved herself worthy, then he would marry her, take her away with him to China.

Mrs. Sentry had spoken her mind to Mary, with the frankness upon which she prided herself. "Ridiculous!" she said. "To go way off to China! And preposterous for him to let you humble yourself! You've lost your head over this young man."

But the only result of her advice had been to awaken in Mary a defensive and antagonistic attitude, now.

She rose, leaving Arthur abed; but while she was dressing, she heard him stirring, and called, "Thought you might want to sleep."

make her increasingly critical toward them all. Thus she said to Mr. Sentry now:

"And speaking of hospitals, you look as though you ought to be in one, father. Been burning the candle at both ends?"

"Had a bad night," he explained. "Lay awake, fighting to get to sleep, for hours."

"You don't look sleepy," Mary commented, in a dry, professional tone. "You look as though—well, you look as though your nerves were all shot," she smiled. "Probably liverish," she suggested. "Stick out your tongue!"

Mrs. Sentry said in a dry tone, "Mary, I'm beginning to object to this clinical atmosphere in the home."

"You find so many objectionable things about me lately, mother!"

Mrs. Sentry poured coffee, and Oscar, who had served them for a dozen years, hesitated at the table as Mr. Sentry said: "Oscar, tell Ellen he'd better take me in today. I'll be ready in five minutes." He began to eat, hurriedly "Barbara not awake?" he asked.

"Oh, she may sleep till noon. She was probably late getting in. Did you hear her, Mary?"

Mary shook her head. She asked her father, "Can you drop me at the hospital on the way to town?"

"Of course!" he told her. He asked, a little impatiently, "Paper not here yet, Oscar?"

"I think the boy forgot us this morning," the man replied. "Nellie says she saw him go by, but when I looked, just before you came down, the paper wasn't there." He added, "The car is ready, sir."

"All right. Thanks," Mr. Sentry agreed. "Ready, Mary?"

"Soon as I get my hat on." She went into the hall.

He rose, stooped to kiss Mrs. Sentry on the cheek she turned to him; and she followed them to the door to watch them drive away, in the high-topped old limousine, with brass side lamps, and with old Eli, gardener, chauffeur, and general handy man, who had served them through all the years of their marriage, at the wheel. Mrs. Sentry liked old things, things with dignity, about her. The Sentries were an old, fine family. Mrs. Sentry had been a sea captain's daughter, had met Arthur during his youthful summers on the Cape. She thought this morning with a familiar content that she had married wisely and well.

Turning back into the house, she heard a warning hiss, and Barbara peered down at her from the upper hall. Mrs. Sentry said: "Oh, awake, are you? Why didn't you come down to breakfast?"

"Is he gone?" Barbara demanded in a dramatic whisper. "The coast clear?"

Old Hindu Custom

By long-established tradition, once a year all the members of a Hindu family arrange to meet in the house of the eldest in the family. Even great-nieces and nephews are included. The doors and windows having been tightly closed, says London Answers Magazine, everybody begins to hurl abuse at everybody else. Brothers, sisters, aunts, uncles, and parents pour out of their hearts the accumulated grouches and bitter thoughts of the past year. Having said their worst, the family members cleared of all poisonous thoughts and hatreds.

Young of Some Animals

Weigh Little When Born

It is claimed that new born opossums weigh about four grains as compared with the mother's weight of ten pounds. The young are born with well-developed forelegs that enable them to crawl into the maternal pouch immediately after birth, where they remain for some time.

It is stated that the kangaroo perhaps heads the list in this respect. The mother, sometimes taller than a man, gives birth to young that are less than one inch long. Both the opossum and kangaroo are the best-known members of pouched animals, called marsupials.

The young of the common black bear, that are born in hibernation, weigh about ten ounces as compared with the mother's weight of two hundred pounds or more.

These three animals undoubtedly produce the smallest young in comparison to the weight of the parents of any wild animals.

Virginia white-tailed deer give birth to fawns weighing about four pounds while the mother tips the scale at 100 to 150 pounds.

About the Swastika

The swastika, oldest of all Aryan symbols, is definitely pre-Christian and many specimens of it have been found in the diggings of old Troy. From its rough likeness to a wheel it is associated by some with the solar motion and early worship of the sun, through the most important of its attributes, in ancient usage, is its character as a charm, a sign of benediction, of long life and good luck.

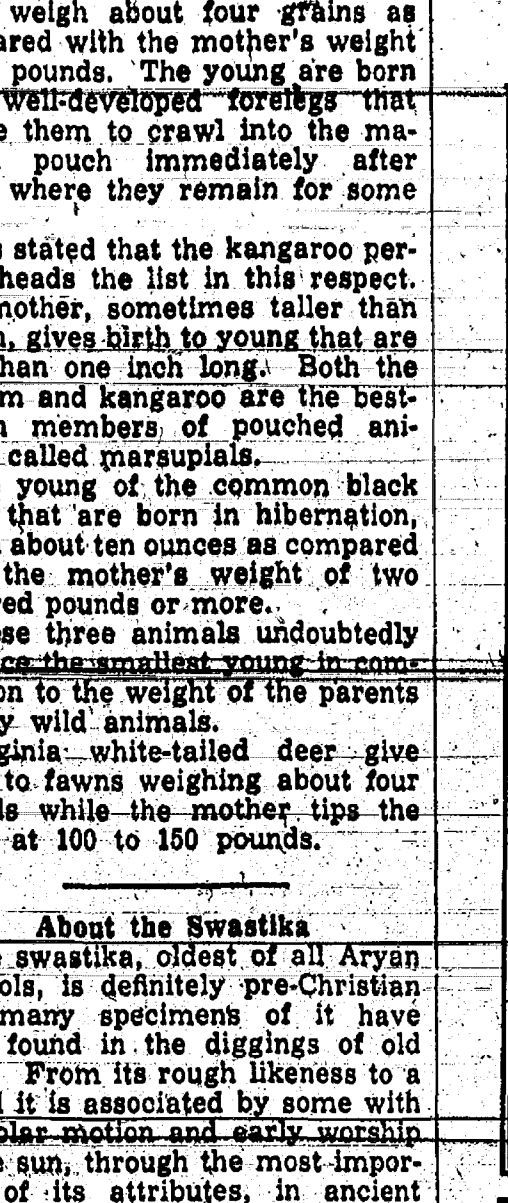

It is the sacred symbol of one Buddhist sect, and from time immemorial has been known to all peoples of Asia. The fact that it was not unknown to the American Indian is held to point to early communication between the hemispheres.

The word, swastika, says the Detroit News, derives from the Sanskrit "su" meaning well, and "asti" which means being. On the bust of Apollo in Vienna's famed museum of historical art is a large and unmistakable swastika, which bears out the supposed solar significance, and identifies that god, perhaps, as the first of the Aryan Nazis.

Used Pans for Slaves In the eighteenth century, slave traders had their strongholds along that part of the West African coast now called French Guinea. Many a barracoon, or slave pen, was built there, with cannon for defense. And the European traders avoided the section because it was hard to navigate.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

ANIMAL AND PET PICTURES

The very fact that animals and pets don't pose makes them ideal photographic subjects.

FROM household pets to giants of the jungles—animals are ideal 1/25th of a second or faster, to catch fleeting poses and expressions. Unless the light is exceptional, better work with the lens wide open.

To snap less controllable animals—squirrels, birds, and such—you'll need greater patience and cunning. Much depends on background and on your distance from the subject. At more than ten feet, for example, a squirrel becomes almost invisible UNLESS it is sharply revealed on a branch, with the sky for background. Obviously, you'll need to use a fast shutter; squirrels move too swiftly for slow speeds.

The zoo can be a happy hunting ground, too. In many cases, you'll be able to shoot through or over the bars of cages, obtaining clean, unobstructed snaps.

Use a modern, color sensitive film. You'll need all the detail you can get and the utmost in color value rendering.

Problem—A "Five Hundred" Club was organized, and it was divided into eight equal divisions. In the fourth division two-thirds of its members resigned for cause, and only one remained in that division. Now then, how many members were in the Club originally? (Answer elsewhere in this department.)

Ques.—What is the chemical property of protein?

Ans.—Nitrogen; or the nitrogenous material in vegetable or animal substances.

Ques.—What President of the United States said: "I do not choose to run" when he was sought for re-election?

Ans.—That brief statement was made by Calvin Coolidge in 1928, refusing to run for re-election.

Answer to problem—There were 24 original members—three in each division.

Ques.—What animal in the world has the keenest sense of smell?

Ans.—The deer. It can detect the location of a human nearly a hundred yards away. The deer's sense of smell and its fleetness are its only means of defense, if escape is possible.

Ques.—Are any of the modern wild animals descendants of so-called "prehistoric animals"?

Ans.—Science does not believe so. All prehistoric animals are extinct, and nothing has been found that serves as a definite link between modern animals and those of pre-historic times.

Ques.—Where was William Penn born? And what was the date and day of the week?

Ans.—William Penn was born in London, England, on Friday, October 14, 1644.

Ques.—I would like to know what aspirin tablets are made of. Can you answer in your good paper?

Ans.—Aspirin tablets are made of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen.

Ques.—How much does the blood of a man weigh, if it is known?

Ans.—The weight of the blood in the human body varies according to the size of the man. About 5 per cent of the bodily weight is blood.

Ques.—I wish to ask you if honey bees of different colonies mingle—that is, enter a different hive from their own?

Ans.—No. They know their own queen and hive by instinct, and if a recalcitrant bee enters a hive other than his own he is quickly executed by stinging.

Ques.—What makes a person turn yellow from yellow jaundice?

Ans.—He turns yellow because the weakened system absorbs bile into the blood.

Natives Dive for Sponges

In some parts of the world, sponges are obtained in a way that was known to the Phoenicians. Holding a heavy stone tied to a rope, natives dive to the sea-bed, where they gather into a bag as many sponges as they can before releasing their "ballast" and letting themselves rise to the surface. Some experts have been known to stay under for four minutes. A freshly gathered sponge resembles nothing so much as a piece of raw meat. Some days after collection, the flesh decays, and after washing the sponge is ready for market.

Jumping Wild Deer

Wild deer do not generally jump much more than eight feet high, though they may jump considerable distances along the ground. There have been reports of deer which have jumped fences 10 to 12 feet high.

The Church of Christ has three phases of its being. One is its worship. The second is its fellowship. And the third is its service. All three should be attractive to Christian people. In its worship it adores God, the Creator and sustainer of all life, the inspirer of all living. In its fellowship it seeks to create a friendly group of associates who find pleasure and profit in each other's company. In its service it seeks to translate this friendship into the attitude of the helping hand for all people. We are seeking to make this church that kind of an institution, and we invite your attendance, your interest and your membership with us.

Prevent Beach Accident

(By G. Robert Mowerson, Director of Life Saving and Water Safety, Wash. County Chapter, American Red Cross.)

Do you know that practically everyone who gets hurt or cut while spending a day at the beach, does so as a result of someone else's thoughtlessness or selfishness?

None of us would be willing to admit that we would deliberately do things to cause suffering, pain, or discomfort to others, and yet that is why most beach accidents occur. The glass bottles, and jars and sharp tin cans of a picnic have a way of working to the surface. Presently someone steps on them or falls on lies on them while taking a sun bath and a jagged cut or tear results.

Now everyone of us who go on a picnic at a beach should assume the responsibility to see that all the mess of a lunch at the beach is picked up and properly disposed of. In that way only can we be sure that there will be no unpleasant accident to mar an otherwise perfect day. The beach belongs to the people and therefore the people are responsible for keeping it as clean as possible of all items that might prove dangerous.

All glass bottles and jars, empty cans, etc. should either go back into the lunch basket from which they came or be collected and carried to the official garbage boxes or cans that every well regulated beach is equipped with. The papers too should be picked up and burned.

It is highly disconcerting as well as annoying for nature lovers in search of an outing to stretch out on a nice section of a popular bathing beach and find gobs of sodden newspaper, pasteboard, or some tin cans mixed with the sand.

Let's all join in a movement to help clean up our beaches and make them safer than they now are.

Winged Bulls Not Bulls

The winged bulls which stood at the entrances to Assyrian temples were not bulls. They were intended to represent divine beings—other gods of the holy places. The human head attached indicated that the creature was endowed with humanity, and the bull-like body symbolized strength. The word Bull in the current language of the country meant hero, or strong one.

Fishermen Report Good Catches for This Year

Fishermen who have failed to get satisfying strings may doubt it but reports received by the department of conservation indicate that the 1938 summer pan-fish season has been good to date in virtually all parts of the state.

Of course, there have been days when the fishing was poor, and there are lakes which have not yielded as good a harvest as expected. Likewise, there have been anglers who have used the wrong kind of bait, or whose luck hasn't equalled those of other anglers around them.

Nevertheless, the reports from both the upper and lower peninsulas have included good catches of bass, bluegills and perch, such as the string of 25 bluegills caught in Brophy lake, Livingston county, which weighed 21 pounds, and 19 of the same species taken out of Lake Mitchell, Wexford county, which weighed almost 20 pounds. A number of large catches of bass also have been reported.

In general, the department's weekly reports indicate that the opening day of the lake season was better than the next few days. Then, as the weather warmed, the fishing appears to have improved steadily and has ranged from "good" to "excellent" this month.

Lake trout trolling, as reported from Traverse City and Lake Superior, also has been rated as good, but brook, rainbow and brown trout angling in the streams has been rated as fair to poor.

Fishermen who have been using flies, plugs and live bait for bass, bluegills and perch appear to have been having better luck on a number of lakes than those relying on worms.
