DEXTER—The Chelsea Kiwanis Soft Ball team came to Dexter; they lost the game. And how they were! They had cleaned up on South Lyon and were all ready to add Dexter to their string. And lo! and behold! eight of the husky Kiwanis of Dexter swatted and carried at will, laid low the (so-called) mighty men of Sylvan township's metropolis to the tune of 8 to 5. And Chelsea played 10 men, too. And the interesting thing was that it was the first time in the history (reported) that there was a Chelsea-Dexter game without a fist fight. How come and burrah.—Leader.

SOUTH LYON—Andrew Stark of Detroit, a special investigator for the state attorney general's office, got out of his car to investigate when a traffic tieup confronted him on Grand River a few miles west of Lansing recently. Traffic was halted in both directions, with heavy trucks as well as passenger vehicles, waiting in line. The special investigator's investigation disclosed the leisurely progress of a hen pheasant trailed by 10 chickens, making their way across the highway, while drivers on both sides smiled tolerantly, perhaps thinking of the coming autumn and the hunting season.—Herald.

STOCKBRIDGE—Last Saturday night the large barn on the A. L. Mayer farm, about four miles south of Stockbridge burned to the ground. About 70 tons of hay was stored in the barn, also 1800 crates, and the paint which was to have been used to paint the barn which had just been remodeled. The loss was only partially covered by insurance.—Brief-Sun.

MORENCI—The Morenci fire department was called to the Glenn Hawkins farm one mile south and three miles west of the city yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock. The fire, which started by spontaneous combustion in the hay mow, was checked by the firemen by removing about seven tons of ground alfalfa hay. The excessive heat caused the paint on the exterior of the barn to blister. The loss of hay is covered by insurance.—Observer.

sel Engine Division), the Electro-Motive (diesel railroad engines) corporation, General Motors Acceptance Corp., the Yellow Truck and Coach Manufacturing Company, and has 307,951 shares of common stock in the National Bank of Detroit.

About 50 per cent of GM income is now derived from activities other than automobile production. Among the non-automotive products are air-conditioning units, refrigerators, locomotive engines, radios, and airplanes.

Furthermore, the corporation has a definite decentralization program, as the 1937 annual report explains in these words: "On every count, its (GM) policy should be to operate in the smaller communities and in as many communities as is economically sound and desirable."

Labor's Earnings

What has labor got out of all this? Recalling the widespread labor difficulties in Michigan plants last year, this is a pertinent question.

Get ready for a surprise! Wages in the automobile industry during the sit-down strike year were 30 per cent above 1929 when allowance is made for the changes in the cost of living. The average hourly earned rate for all manufacturing industries in 1937 was approximately 64 cents, while in the automobile industry it averaged 87 cents per hour and in GM was even higher.

Put on an annual earning basis, since seasonal unemployment makes the hourly rate an unfair basis for comparison, General Motors hourly-paid factory workers received an average annual wage of $1,618 in 1937. And that in spite of the adverse influences of labor troubles. This amount would have been higher if workers had not lost time due to numerous wildcat strikes. In 1936, GM workers received $1,587 for at least 46 weeks' work.

"Annual Wage"

From time to time you hear statements in Michigan about an "annual wage."

Consider this: In spite of the automobile industry's seasonal layoff for a large proportion of its workers, the annual earnings of the factory workers are much greater than those of the average full-time employed factory worker in the country as a whole. Statistically speaking, GM workers earned $1,618 for 46 weeks or more in the 1937 model year, as compared with an average of approximately $1,200 a year for the full-time (52 weeks) industrial workers of this country during 1936.

Since the cost of living was 15 per cent lower in 1937 than in 1929, when the comparable average earnings of such employees were $1,440, it will readily be seen that the worker's average annual real income was approximately 32 per cent greater in 1937 than in 1929.

Killing the Goose?

Why then all the strike trouble? In its quest for more golden eggs, is labor likely to kill the goose? The automobile industry has prospered, by following the formula of giving the consumer more for his money through research and lower prices and giving the worker a high wage and a short work week through mass production methods. You can't laugh off the fact that we Yankees, even in the depression year of 1933, possessed 72 per cent of the 33,330,000 automobiles used in the world.

Furthermore, according to the Department of Labor in its November, 1937, monthly labor review, the automobile industry is unique in having an actual increase in labor cost per unit of 9 per cent since 1929, while all other industries studied show either no change or an actual decrease in labor cost running as high as 48 per cent.

These are cold facts, but they ignore the prevalent distrust of big business, fanned into hatred by politicians. Depression, bank failures, and home foreclosures, cut deep wounds in human emotions.

Forgotten during this period of disillusionment was the reality that payrolls constitute about 75 per cent of the selling price of goods and services. Or, phrased another way, labor's wages come out of the consumer's pocket. When the consumer doesn't buy, the worker gets no pay check.

Wages and Taxes

And so the worker is affected directly by factors which increase the cost of the product. If costs rise in excess of the consumer's ability to buy, the worker suffers in loss of wages. The economic equilibrium must be kept balanced.

One unbalancing factor is taxes. General Motors' 1937 tax bill was $444 per worker, an increase of $106 in two years. It was 53.4 per cent of earnings, or $2.45 per share of common stock. Of the total tax bill of $78,704,000 in 1937, only $13,741,000 went for social security taxes as compared with $3,722,000 in 1936.

High taxes penalize everyone—consumer, labor and investor alike. Reduction of the tax load would greatly speed recovery which Babson foresees for the coming fall months.

Sam Patch, the Jumper

SCHLICHT-FELDKAMP REUNION

Members of the Schlicht-Feldkamp families assembled Sunday at Sodt's grove, Pleasant Lake, for their annual reunion. About 60 partook of the pot luck dinner, others attending in the afternoon. At the business meeting officers were elected as follows:

President—Ezra Feldkamp.
Secretary—Irene Feldkamp.
Treasurer—Lucile Hawley.
Table committees—Laura Buss, Birdie Buss, Amanda Horning, Lillian Buss.

Sports committee—Clarence Buss, Martha Elsemann, Henry Schlicht, Ella Buss.

During the past year there were recorded two deaths, two marriages and four births. The oldest member in attendance was Mrs. John Landwehr of Saline, the youngest, Edna Marie Kothe of Freedom.

Mrs. Ezra Feldkamp and Eldean Hawley were in charge of the contests, which were won as follows:

Running race for small children—Leroy Buss.
Corn-carrying contest—Katherine Miller, Doris Buss.

Banana-peeling contest—Edwin Horning, Clarence Buss.
Plate-walking contest—Marian Buss.

Pillow contest for men—Ezra Feldkamp, Edwin Horning, Clarence Buss, James Washburn, John Buss.

Clothes-pin contest—Mrs. John Buss.

Naming 74 varieties of flowers in a bouquet—Mrs. Nathan Alber.

It was voted to hold the 1939 reunion at the same place on the first Sunday in August.

RIEMENSCHNEIDER REUNION

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Broesamle on South Main St. was the scene of the Riemenschneider reunion, when about 45 members gathered Saturday for the annual event.

Following the dinner, the business meeting was called to order by the president, Fred Broesamle. An invitation for the 1939 reunion was extended by Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Kalmbach of Sylvan township and was accepted.

Mr. Kalmbach was elected president for the coming year, and Mrs. Kalmbach, secretary-treasurer. The afternoon program was as follows:

Singing—"What a Friend We Have in Jesus"—Assembly.
Prayer—Rev. Henry W. Lenz.
Solo—"Sunbeams"—Donna Lou Kalmbach.

Reading—"It Is Sweet to be Remembered"—P. H. Riemenschneider.
Piano-violin duets—Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Riemenschneider.
Solo—"There Is No Death"—Rex Broesamle.

Talk—Rev. Lenz.
Song—"The Lord Hideth Me"—Mr. and Mrs. Edward Broesamle.
Quet—Mrs. P. M. Broesamle, Miss Lucile Broesamle.

Closing song—Auld Lang Syne.

CHILDREN IN COURT

Judge Malcolm Hatfield

Needless injury
The failure of a parent to heed the repeated warnings of juvenile authorities resulted in a serious accident when a seventeen year old boy lost both his legs after falling under a box car.

Three thousand men and boys lose their lives annually in the United States by stealing rides on freight trains, or by illegally trespassing on railroad property. Furthermore, children playing in the streets contributed 1,410 accident cases, or 8.7 per cent of the 16,160 pedestrians killed by automobiles in the United States last year; they are also responsible for 41,940, or 14.3 per cent of the 93,350 pedestrians injured. Such careless persons frequently become wards of society, and must be supported at public expense.

THERE WILL ALWAYS BE SOMETHING TO DO

There will always be something to do, my boy,
There will always be wrongs to right;
There will always be need for a manly breed

And men unafraid to fight.
There will always be honor to guard, my boy,
There will always be hills to climb,
And tasks to do, and battles new
From now till the end of time.

There will always be dangers to face, my boy,
There will always be goals to take;
Men shall be tried, when the roads divide,
And proved by the choice they make.

There will always be burdens to bear, my boy,
There will always be need to pray;
There will always be tears through the future years,
As loved ones are borne away.

There will always be God to serve, my boy,
And always the flag above;
They shall call to you until life is through
For courage and strength and love.

So these are things that I dream, my boy,
And have dreamed since your life began;
That whatever befalls, when the old world calls,
It shall find you a sturdy man.

In Doubt About North Sea

Geographers are in doubt as to whether the North sea is a branch of the Atlantic ocean or an extension of the Arctic ocean. Relatively shallow, save along the Norwegian coast, winds ruffle it easily. Tidal action builds up sand banks as menaces to navigators. Heavy fogs are another peril.

DIETS INCLUDE BREAD

In her talks before women's groups throughout the state, Miss Ruth Weir of the Home Service department of Michigan Bakeries, Inc., advises that bread should not be omitted from the balanced reducing diet. She quotes Donna Grace, beauty editor of the New York Journal-American, who stresses that bread is included in nearly all such diets.

"The average home woman," says Miss Grace, "eats more bread than other foods, and it is natural for her to do this, too. Every home will have more bread than any other food. They class it as the 'staff of life'. It needs no preparation and can be used not only for every meal, but all the snacks, and children's lunches."

Miss Weir also refers to the recently issued booklet, "The Physician and Our Daily Bread", repeating the statement that carbohydrates are necessary to burn up excess fat in a reducing diet, and calls attention to the place of bread in the diet as a source of excellent food energy and also of protein. Pointing out that one slice of bread represents only about 65 calories, Miss Weir approves the statement that the right way to reduce is to lower the daily intake of calories, without omitting good bread from the diet.

State's Fruit Foliage Raided by Red Mites

Nature seems to be having a grandstand seat this summer in the battle between fairly bountiful crops of agricultural products and insect pests.

Take the word of Professor Ray Hutson of the entomology department of Michigan State College. The newest warning is against the red spider or red mites which threaten to defoliate enough fruit trees to cause tremendous loss in quality and size of fruit as well as tree vitality.

Sprays to control the red spider are advised. The insects are far more prevalent than usual, feeding upon the underside of leaves. The foliage turns pale and sickly and soon drops off. Consequent loss in vigor of the tree is reflected in the size and quality of the fruit.

Control is not too difficult, says Professor Hutson. A summer oil and nicotine spray is considered effective. This is the same type of spray now being used and recommended for use by those attacking the second brood of codling moth.

Orchard owners who have used a lime-sulphur spray within the last two weeks can use bill poster's paste for control of the red mites. This material differs from just flour and water paste as bill poster's paste is cooked under pressure.

So the battle continues. The year 1938 is giving entomologists worry that Dame Nature may be taking the side of the bugs this summer. Weather conditions, for instance, have induced three broods of the codling moth to appear, instead of the customary two broods.

Habits of the Bindweed
Field bindweed owes its persistence to its exceptionally deep roots. By these it is able to draw upon water supplies far out of reach of ordinary plants. In these deep roots it can store a large amount of reserve food upon which the plants can draw when the leaves are destroyed.

Weekly News Review

Big Asia May Be Too Small For Stubborn Russia, Japan

by Edward W. Pickard

Foreign

Joseph Stalin once said Russia wanted "not one inch" of foreign soil. Last week Japan decided Dictator Stalin had either changed his mind or was, at last, throwing open support to beleaguered China. But best explanation of all was that Big Asia is still not big enough to hold two stubborn powers.

Since 1931, when Japan marched into Manchuria, American newspaper readers have heard periodically that Tokyo and Moscow were "on the brink of war." Only Russia's autonomous Siberian army kept land-hungry Japan from moving into Soviet territory. But even that was not enough to prevent periodic outbreaks along a thousand miles of ill-defined border, where last month the five-year "secret war" crept into the open.

JAPAN'S KAZUSHIGE UGAKI
He wanted less lawlessness.

At 8 p. m., one night last week, eight Soviet tanks stormed over a hill near Changkufeng at the roughly-defined junction of Manchukuo, Russian Siberia and Japanese Korea. Behind them in a pall of smoke came Soviet infantry, while overhead soared planes that severed rail connections between Manchukuo's inland Kirin and coastal Yuku. At battle's end, Tokyo boasted 800 Russian casualties. Moscow admitted 60.

Next day, while eastern Japan went under emergency regulations, the war started again. By nightfall the third day, Russia claimed undisputed capture of Changkufeng but it appeared the fun was just starting. Tokyo rushed 35,000 men and 400 war planes to the frontier while the Soviet pointed war trains eastward along its Trans-Siberian railroad.

Neither nation appeared to be giving an inch, which supported the theory that one or the other must eventually get out of Asia. At Tokyo, Foreign Minister Kazushige Ugaki daily sent fresh instructions to his Moscow ambassador, demanding that Russia prevent "recurrence of lawlessness." Moscow simply sent back the same demands.

At Washington, the state department hoped it would end in armed truce. In Paris, the foreign office said Russia had sent assurance that no "actual warfare" would develop. And by week's end a ray of hope appeared in Japan's proposal that time out be taken for peace talk.

Japan's other war pushed closer to Hankow last week as China once more moved its government westward, this time to ancient Chungking, 1,800 miles from Shanghai. At Hangchow, Jap troops methodically walked into a British-owned hospital, removing 103 wounded Chinese soldiers. What happened to them, nobody knew.

Last winter Great Britain broke off diplomatic relations after Mexico seized oil properties. On July 15, the United States state department demanded prompt payment for American land seized since 1915. Mexico's total oil debt to United States-British interests is $400,000,000. Last week President Lazaro Cardenas answered, acknowledging the debt, but claiming there was no obligation to make payment. To say the least, Mexico's stand set a precedent.

Domestic

Up through Panama canal and homeward last week sailed Fisherman Franklin D. Roosevelt aboard the U. S. S. Houston, where last week he played Good Samaritan for Machinist's Mate Oliver W. Halliwell of the escort destroyer, McDougal. Stricken with appendicitis, Halliwell was shifted to the Houston on presidential orders, later going under the knife of White House Physician Ross T. McIntyre.

If Franklin Roosevelt had his fill of fishing last week, he did not have his fill of traveling. Announced at the White House was a list of speaking engagements that will keep him jumping until late September, from Georgia to Ontario, from New York to Michigan, from North Dakota to Tennessee.

Only Brian Boru, Finn MacCool and the Great Cuchulain were more important to New York Irishmen last week than Douglas Corrigan. Arriving on the S. S. Manhattan, America's "mistake" Atlantic flier got his Broadway ticker tape show, city hall ceremonies and luncheons after competing Manhattan and Brooklyn committees ironed out their disputes. Ahead for Douglas Corrigan was all the excitement he could stand in any American city he will agree to visit.

Politics

Long before Tennessee Valley Authority was a household term, Tennessee's Senator George L. Berry bought a large block of land in his home state. When TVA's expansion required the land, Senator Berry tried to sell out for $5,000,000, finally heard a court decide the property was worthless. The stunt placed him in Franklin Roosevelt's disfavor.

Last week George Berry fell in his own state's disfavor. From Memphis the powerful Crump political machine swept over Tennessee, nominated one Thomas Stewart for senator in the Democratic primaries. Also defeated was Gov. Gordon Browning by a political amateur, Prentice Cooper. Republicans, still hopeless in the South, held no primary.

Franklin Roosevelt had kept his hands out of the Tennessee family squabble. But as America went to the polls last week in other states, first primary returns to reach New Deal headquarters showed the score tied 2-2, the alleged "purge" having failed to jell.

● In Virginia, Sen. Harry Flood Byrd's machine defeated two "100 per cent New Deal" congressional aspirants, William E. Dodd Jr., and R. Bruce Shafer. Winners, who will probably be elected next November, were Rep. Howard W. Smith and ex-Rep. Colgate W. Darden, who beat both Shafer and the incumbent Norman R. Hamilton.

● In Missouri, Sen. Bennett Champ Clark was renominated after helping scuttle the Roosevelt judiciary and reorganization bills. Most important result, though, was Gov. Lloyd C. Stark's successful challenge of the Federalist machine's supremacy. Stark's candidate for the state Supreme Court, Judge James M. Douglas, easily felled the Federalist nominee.

● In Kansas, New Dealer George McGill won renomination to the senate. But chief interest centered in Former Gov. Clyde M. Reed's successful G. O. P. senatorial fight against Radio Evangelist Gerald B. Winrod.

● In West Virginia, New Dealer Jennings Randolph, John Kee and Joe Smith won congressional renomination hands down.

Crime

When youthful Thomas E. Dewey became New York's district attorney, Manhattan expected fireworks. Many a bombshell has fallen in pre-trial accusations against Tammany's James J. Hines, one-time New Deal patronage distributor and alleged political fixer for the late Dutch Schultz's policy ring. Last week came two more bombshells.

First was an agreement that J. Richard (Dixie) Davis, disbarred attorney and alleged mouthpiece for the Schultz gang, would turn state's evidence and testify against Hines. Second was a bill of particulars in which Tom Dewey's predecessor, William C. Dodge, felt more the lash of New York's ambitious crime buster. Not waiting until August 16 for the opening of Hines' trial, Dewey presented his particulars last week before famed Justice Ferdinand Pecora. One particular: That ex-District Attorney

WILLIAM C. DODGE
For the moment, unimpaired.

Dodge was among public officials "influenced, intimidated or bribed" by Jimmy Hines.

Tom Dewey's mistake apparently lay in insufficient particulars. Because the bill admitted there were other alleged intimidation victims "not at present known," because Dodge and two New York magistrates were not specifically charged with a crime, Justice Pecora next day directed the district attorney to show cause why it should not be barred.

Unintimidated for the moment, William Dodge thundered: "This outrageous and malicious assault upon my character is unjustified!"

The Crawl Stroke

(By G. Robert Mowerson, Director Life Saving and Water Safety, Washington County Chapter, American Red Cross)

One of the most frequent questions asked of me is, "What is the best swimming stroke?" I have only one answer for such a question. The best swimming stroke depends entirely upon the individual using it. For some the side stroke is the best, for others the breast stroke is the easiest, for still others the crawl stroke is by far the most efficient, but one thing is certain if you become accustomed to the crawl stroke it is far superior to the other forms of swimming. For proof of this statement we have merely to look at our outstanding speed swimmers as well as our great distance swimmers and we will see that they all use the crawl stroke.

Gertrude Ederle used the crawl stroke all the way across the English channel when she swam it a few years ago, and it stands to reason that if it can be used for a distance of twenty-one miles that it is not a tiring stroke.

The crawl stroke has the advantage of getting you farther through the water with the same amount of energy you would expend using any other stroke. Accordingly I always recommend that the crawl stroke be taught to the beginner before any other stroke, for you might just as well learn the correct and best method first. The only difficult thing about this stroke is the breathing, but once you master the rhythm of the stroke and breathing you will find that you have no more trouble with the crawl stroke.

At this point I would like to give you a few hints on learning the breathing that might make it a little easier for you. The first thing to remember you must do all your inhaling through your mouth. Don't at any time try to get your breath through your nose. And in exhaling you can let all the air out through your mouth, or through the mouth and nose. Try it first by hanging on to the side of the pool, kicking your feet, and getting your breath by blowing out into the water through your mouth, making a lot of bubbles, then turning the head up to the side opening the mouth wide and inhaling a deep lung-full of air through the mouth. Remember too that you turn the head to one side only in getting your breath. If you try these things I know that your breathing difficulties will soon vanish and you can enjoy the full benefits of the crawl stroke.

Swimming instruction by Mr. Mowerson continues at Newport Beach until August 20, with the following schedule:

1:00-2:00—Beginners and swimmers, ages 5 to 12 years.
2:00-3:00—Beginners and swimmers, ages 13 and up.
3:00-4:00—Advanced swimming, all ages.
4:00-6:00—Junior and senior life saving and water safety.

Composers Used Same Titles
An astonishing number of musical works with identical titles have been written by different composers, states a writer in Collier's Weekly. The index of the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers, shows that "Lullaby" is the title of 721 pieces, "Romance" of 329, "Reverie" of 315, "Nocturne" of 549, "Barcarolle" of 498, "Memento" of 536, "Longing" of 313, "Maybe" of 291 and "Someday" of 190.

It is a lot easier to back into trouble than to back out of it. Backing dangers are a source of worry to truck drivers who do not have helpers. Statistics prove that there is good cause for this worry.

Whenever possible, backing up should be avoided. For example, where you can park parallel instead of at an angle, do so.

If you must back, KNOW the way is clear for you to do so. Always back slowly.

Scapa Flow
Scapa Flow is a small body of water, an arm of the ocean which lies between the Orkney islands of Pomona and Hoy, north of Scotland. It is about fourteen miles long and nearly inclosed. Scapa Flow offers a deep, safe harbor and was the operating base of the British grand fleet during the World War. It is also the place where the captured German battleships were sunk.

"Strike When the Iron Is Hot!"

We don't blame any woman for not wanting to stand over a hot, old-fashioned ironing-board on a real hot day.

Ladies, you're right. The modern electric ironer is as important to your beauty as the iron that waves your hair.

It'll do more work faster. Gives you more time for the garden and the girls. Smoother on the clothes and the disposition. As necessary in the modern home as the clean linen it irons.

Phone your dealer today for a demonstration. Now's the time you'll enjoy an electric ironer, while the weather is really hot!

Octopus Is Most Feared

by Small Sea Creatures

Dreaded by all small sea creatures is the octopus. It likes to hide in crevices on the seabed and lie in wait for unsuspecting crabs and lobsters. Whenever a shellfish is within reach to go the long tentacles, quietly but swiftly, to fasten upon the food, and there is very little chance for any sea creature thus caught to escape. The octopus has a powerful, beak-like mouth, and below two uninking eyes, set in a soft body; eight arms, or tentacles, curl restlessly about in the water. These whiplike arms are covered with rows of strong suckers along the undersides, and they hold their victims by suction. When an octopus is sitting in its den the arms are coiled up underneath the body with the suckers outward ready for a pounce.

But one of the strangest facts about the octopus is the way it breathes. Its whole body throbs slowly with breath-beats, and water is taken in at the same time to be forced out again through a small, funnel-shaped tube behind its head. The creature swims as it breathes, by taking in water through its gills and forcing it through a tube with a sudden powerful spurt. This sudden rush of water often drives the octopus along in six-foot leaps. To make the journey more comfortable, too, the arms are held together so they trail behind the body—but even then the octopus travels backwards. Thus, in order to go forward, the creature must face opposite to the direction it wants to go.

'WAY BACK WHEN'

GARBO LATHERED FACES IN A BARBER SHOP

If you had walked into a certain Stockholm barber shop 'way back in 1920, you would have seen a little Greta Garbo working up a lather and preparing hot towels for stubbly faces as she assisted the local barber. Later, in Bergstrom's department store, you might have taken a second look at the pretty little clerk who sold you a hat. But if someone had told you she would one day be world famous in pictures for her portrayals of romance, passion and ecstasy, it would have seemed too fantastic to believe.

Greta Garbo was born in 1905 in the mill district of Stockholm. Her father was a poor machinist, and her mother an uneducated farm woman. The mysterious air and aloofness of the great Garbo of today are natural, for they were traits of the sensitive little daughter of this poor family. Her father died when she was fourteen and she went to work in the department store to help support her penniless mother, her small brother and sister. The manager of the millinery department chose her to model hats and, through publication of photographs made then, she was given a chance in motion pictures. Her rise to fame was rapid, and the little-lather girl of Stockholm became the greatest example of modern motion picture publicity.

One of her very first pictures was awarded the Nobel prize, and she received the medal of the New York Film Critics for her performance in "Anna Karenina." Men fought duels over her, and famous directors, writers and actors have sought her favor. So, think twice before you laugh at that neighbor's child with the theatrical ambitions. The great Garbo was once a lather girl!

Branch Offices Ready for License Plate Rush

Branch managers throughout the state are preparing for the rush to purchase license plates, when some 600,000 motorists will trade their black and white half year plates for the black and green full year plates.

In the past more plates have been sold in the last three day period before the dead line than in the whole period allotted for the sale of license plates at half price.

Motorists are urged to purchase their plates as early as possible. They will not only benefit themselves by not having to stand in the line but will enable the department to operate without hiring extra help.

Every rush means the spending of hundreds of dollars for extra clerk hire.

Branch managers throughout the state are preparing for the rush to purchase license plates, when some 600,000 motorists will trade their black and white half year plates for the black and green full year plates.

In the past more plates have been sold in the last three day period before the dead line than in the whole period allotted for the sale of license plates at half price.

Motorists are urged to purchase their plates as early as possible. They will not only benefit themselves by not having to stand in the line but will enable the department to operate without hiring extra help.

Every rush means the spending of hundreds of dollars for extra clerk hire.

Famous Steamer, Robert E. Lee, Ruined in Race

Although the Robert E. Lee was the most famous boat on the Mississippi river, her race with the Natchez June 31 to July 4, 1870, unfitted her for much future service.

The driving trip against the speed of the Natchez did not injure her machinery, but she was so badly shaken up she had to be placed on the marine ways at Mounds, Ill., for a general overhauling before she could re-enter her run from New Orleans to Vicksburg.

The Natchez returned to New Orleans from St. Louis and, although she had been beaten, she served shippers in the lower river trade several years before dismantled.

Old government records in the offices of the United States steamboat inspectors' office at Memphis show the Lee sank opposite Natchez, Miss., December 21, 1870, just six months after winning her race, writes Joe Curtis in Memphis Commercial Appeal.

It was a cold stormy morning when the Lee collided with the steamer Potomac and injured her so badly she was beached on a sandbar by her pilot and there she sank in nine feet of water. So far as known, this was the only accident to the first Robert E. Lee.

She was raised a few days later and sent to the ways. After being repaired she resumed her regular runs and remained in service until 1876, when she was taken to Louisville and dismantled. Her machinery was placed on a new Robert E. Lee and her hull towed to Vicksburg, where it became a wharf boat.

METHODIST HOME

Last week Miss Allen spent a couple of days at Portage Lake, visiting the family of Dr. Georg.

Miss Switzer returned on Friday from a visit of nearly three weeks with friends in Ypsilanti and vicinity.

Mrs. Williamson was visited on Sunday by Mr. and Mrs. Barney Wellert and their sons, Norton and Wilber, also Mrs. Wellert's sister, Miss Louise Bira, all from Detroit.

They took Mrs. Williamson for a long auto ride.

Mrs. McClellan of Ann Arbor called on Miss McCowen one evening last week.

On Sunday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Leeman and Miss Martha Leeman from Sharon called on their sister, Miss Emma Leeman. The Home family are indebted to another sister of Miss Leeman, Mrs. Jas. Struthers, for the delicious blackberries which we had for supper Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Sopp of Muskegon and Mrs. J. T. Rickett and Mrs. Floyd Rickett of Howell called on their sister, Miss Sopp, on Wednesday.

On Sunday, Mrs. Tuck was happily surprised by her friends, Mrs. Harvey and Mrs. Alexander from Flint, who took her away to Cavanaugh Lake, where they enjoyed a delicious picnic dinner.

On Saturday, Mrs. Hugh McCormick, Mrs. P. Durham and Miss Loretta Waite, all from Clio, called on Mrs. McCormick's aunt, Mrs. Turnbull.

Miss Ostrander returned on Sunday from spending a few days at the home of her brother, C. H. Ostrander of Marshall.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Gettel from Pigeon, with their daughter Anne and her playmate, visited Mrs. Gettel's aunt, Mrs. Wellock, one day last week.

Mrs. Bennett's Sunday callers were her son, Francis Bennett of Detroit, her daughter, and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Zook, also of Detroit.

Miss Esther Zook of Crawfordville, Indiana, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Zook and daughters, Mary Lou and Joanne from Fort Wayne, Indiana.

On Friday, Mrs. Ida Penniman, Mrs. Florence Kenny and Miss Clark, all from Ypsilanti, called on Mrs. Babbitt. Her Monday callers were Mr. and Mrs. John Perrin and daughter Helen from Ann Arbor.

On Monday, Mr. Drake had as dinner guests his brother-in-law, Alexander Rodgers of Saline.

Late Sunday afternoon the Home family was given a most unusual treat. We were entertained by a group of twenty-four most delightful youngsters who sing regularly in the Federated church of Grass Lake under the training and leadership of Mrs. Lois Schlottman. Chairs were taken to the lawn for those of the audience who did not feel the need of a roof over their heads, while those who did not venture out on the lawn crowded the porches and windows overlooking the singers. The children sat in rows on the grass when not taking their parts in the singing and reciting. The selections were well chosen and beautifully rendered and we are very appreciative of the kindness of Mrs. Schlottman and also the parents and friends who brought the children to us.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Barbara Sentry, seeking to sober up her ex-boy, Johnnie Boyd, on the way home from a party, slips him, and attracts the attention of a policeman, whom she knocks down. As he arrests him, Professor Brace of Harvard comes to the rescue, and drives Barbara home. On the way they see Barbara's father driving from the direction of his office at 32-45, but when he gets home he tells his wife it is 11:10 and that he's been playing bridge at the club. Next morning, while Barbara is telling her mother about her adventure, an urgent phone call comes from Mr. Sentry's office after his departure.

CHAPTER II—Arriving home in the late afternoon, Sentry reports his office has been robbed and a Miss Wines, former temporary employee, killed. The evening papers luridly confirm the story, and Sentry takes it hard. Mary, elder daughter, in love with Neil Ray, young intern at the hospital where she works, goes off to dinner at Gus Loran's, Sentry's partner, with Mrs. Loran's brother, Jimmy. Sentry, Mr. and Mrs. Sentry call on old Mrs. Sentry, and Barbara, alone, receives Dan Fisher, reporter, who advises her not to talk, but to refer reporters to her father.

CHAPTER III—Phil Sentry, son at Yale, disturbed at the possible implications and suspicion of Miss Wines' absence from her room for three days during August, goes home to help. Sentry is arrested and booked for murder, and Dan Fisher explains the evidence against him—that the robbery was a fake, the safe opened by one who knew the combination, changed since Miss Wines' employment there—that a back door key, a duplicate of Sentry's, was found in the girl's purse; and that Sentry, too, had been away those three days in August. Bruce calls and backs up Barbara in her denial—that Sentry could have done it, because of the discrepancy of time between the slaying and their seeing Sentry on the road.

And she remembered with a terrible and conclusive certainty—he had replied, "Quarter past eleven." But if Barbara told the truth, then Arthur had lied. And if he had lied—her thoughts rebelled, refused to answer the hideous, damning question.

CHAPTER IV

Mrs. Sentry slept not at all till a little before dawn; she woke to face a naked sun just rising in a raw, and aching glare above the eastern horizon, leaning at her through the trees whose foliage had thinned even during the night. Her eyes opened, but not to full consciousness; she lay for a while, turning her head sideways to avoid the glare, watching small shadows shift and change on the rough-plastered wall.

Then she turned to look toward Arthur's bed, and saw the spread and pillow cover crumpled as though someone had lain there; and she remembered that Mary had come in to her last night, weeping in furious and passionate revolt, in hurt, tormented pride.

And little by little she remembered all the rest, picking up this fact and that circumstance, and setting them in their proper relation to one another. I'm glad I'm alone, can be alone for a while, she thought; and she decided that if any one came to wake her, she would pretend to be asleep. Mary had seemed to blame her father, with a raging bitterness, had been filled with anger more than grief, like a mother robbed of her child; a girl of her lover.

Thinking of Mary, Mrs. Sentry thought of Neil Ray. Mary had not mentioned him last night; yet there had been something like terror as an undercurrent to her wrath. Mrs. Sentry wondered what Neil Ray would do or say to all this. Remembering his anxiety to escape from the house the other night, she thought there might be something of the prig in that young man, a tendency to deplore—

Deplored? The District Attorney she remembered, had deplored something last night. "Deplored the necessity!" That was it. He had asked her to promise that the children would all remain available as witnesses if needed; and he had admitted that he could not require her to testify, but she had said of course she would stay near Arthur. "Near my husband," she had said, and remembered now that when Arthur gave her the new ring, the emerald, on her birthday three or four weeks before, he had signed the enclosed card "Your Husband," and she had felt a sense of strangeness at the time, because he usually used his name just Arthur. And also the ring had been a lavish present, without precedent in recent years, so that she had smilingly accused him of a guilty conscience. Her birthday in September! Miss Wines had worked for her husband's firm during the summer; and that mysterious absence of which the papers spoke, when the girl was supposed to have gone to New Hampshire, was in August; and then when they all came home from York Harbor for Mrs. Sentry's birthday, in September, Mr. Sentry gave her that beautiful emerald and signed himself "Your Husband."

She understood now. He must have sought to ease his conscience so, and she thought with more tenderness than she had felt toward him for years how unhappy he must have been since then, playing a part, suffering through sleepless nights. Insomnia. I wonder, she thought, whether I'll have insomnia now. I slept last night, a little. I'm still half asleep. It doesn't hurt, so I must be. Why am I so sure Arthur did it? If I were a young girl, his bride, I should be loyal, blindly sure of his innocence; but I'm an old woman, old, old. Barbara is sure he is innocent. Does Mary know, I wonder? And Phil? I wonder whether I shall see Arthur today. I can't help him. It's the children who need me now. What time is it? I ought to keep my traveling clock on the bedside table here, so that Mr. Flood asks me how I knew it was quarter past eleven, when Arthur came home that night. I needn't say Arthur told me. I needn't actually lie. I can say, "There was a clock on the table between our beds." I needn't say I looked at it.

She rose at the thought and went to fetch the clock from her dressing-room and set it on the table here beside her bed; but she did not lie down again. The household—the servants, would be excited when they saw the morning papers. She must control the situation. She dressed, and rang, and when Nellie came, pale and shaking, she asked crisply, "Are the children down, Nellie?"

"Phil is."

"Neither of the girls?"

"No."

Will you ask Oscar and Emma to come up here, please, and you come with them."

Five minutes later they filed in, and faced her. Oscar stood stolidly. Nellie wrung her wretched hands. Big Emma, the cook, was crying openly, her lips mumbling nervous blubbering sobs.

Mrs. Sentry said, "That's not necessary, Emma!" And she added: "We are all going to have an unpleasant time for a while. Of course I shall not be surprised, or blame any of you, if you wish to leave." She felt grateful for their quick expressions of loyalty. Grateful for the loyalty of servants? Was she already brought so low? "You're quite free to go," she insisted stiffly. "But please understand, if you stay, I shall expect a perfectly normal household—as if nothing had happened."

She hesitated, then went on: "You must, of course, help the police in every possible way, be completely frank, truthful, hide nothing!" It was useless and dangerous to try to drill the servants in lies or denials; and there was nothing they could really know or tell. She added: "That is all. I count on you."

Emma wiped her eyes, and they filed out. Later, after she was dressed, Phil came in and said, "Morning, mother. He kissed her awkwardly, an unaccustomed gesture. "Dean Hare's downstairs. I wasn't sure you were awake."

"Perhaps he will have breakfast with us," Mrs. Sentry suggested. "Is Mrs. Hare with him?" Mrs. Hare was a cheerful, chuckling, loyal friend, but Mrs. Sentry hoped she was not here just now.

Phil said, "No, he's alone." They went downstairs together. Dean Hare was in the living-room, and Mrs. Sentry greeted him almost with a smile.

"Good morning, Dean," she said. "I hoped you would come."

"I came last night, after I left—Arthur," he explained, "but the house was dark. I thought, if you were asleep, better not to wake you; so I didn't ring."

"How is Arthur?" "Shocked and shaken, but—all right," he added. "I arranged about the telephone at once, after Phil called me, so you won't be bothered." He told her the new number. "You can give it to your friends," he said, and continued, "Then I went to him, to Arthur. He hesitated, said thoughtfully, 'You know, Bob Flood and Arthur and I played bridge together that night, Thursday night.'"

Mrs. Sentry started to speak, then said to her son, "Phil, tell Nellie Mr. Hare will have breakfast with us."

"I've had breakfast," the lawyer replied.

Hare nodded. "Yes, he told me he came straight home; and that of course makes it impossible that— he could have done this. He couldn't have left the Club when he did, and—gone to the office, and still got home so soon."

She said, "You don't need to convince me, Dean!" But she was thinking: So Arthur has lied to Dean Hare as he lied to me. I suppose he thinks—hopes—no one saw him come home.

Then Phil returned to say breakfast was ready. They went into the dining-room, sat down. "I must see Arthur today," she said.

The lawyer hesitated. "It might be as well to wait," he advised. "In fact he told me to ask you to wait; that he wouldn't be there long, that it would be unpleasant for you."

"Nonsense! I'm no timid girl! I shall see him today. Will you arrange it?"

Phil said, "I'll go with you, mother."

"No, Phil. Not this time." What she had to say to Arthur none must hear.

Dean Hare said tentatively: "I don't know whether you care to hear the reasons the police give for the arrest. Of course, the newspapers—"

She thought of Fisher, the reporter, but—let Dean tell her if he wished. She could think while he talked.

She said, "I don't read newspapers!"

Hare nodded. "I suppose not."

And, choosing his words, he went on: "You see, the girl had a key to the back door. Inspector Irons came Sunday—morning to ask Arthur where she could have got it, and Arthur suggested that Miss Randall might have given it to her; but Irons found that Miss Randall didn't have a key to the back door herself. There was a new lock put on two or three years ago. Ike Torny, the janitor down there, put it on, and gave Arthur and Gus Loran keys."

"The Inspector took Arthur's key, and he went out to get Gus Loran's. Gus was in New York, went over Thursday and didn't get back till late last night; but Mrs. Loran found his key book and Irons picked out the key. He found that the key Gus had was different from Arthur's, and from the one in Miss Wines' bag. But hers was a duplicate of Arthur's; and her key seemed pretty new, but—Arthur's was older than the other two, more worn."

"The Inspector went back to try the keys. They all worked in the lock. He asked Ike Torny why they were different. It turned out that when Ike put the new lock on, a year or so ago, only two keys came with it; so he took an old key that was something like it, and filed it down himself till it fitted the lock. Ike takes pride in saving money for the firm; did it to save having a new key made, to save 75 cents or whatever it was. And he gave Arthur the key he made, kept one of the originals himself, gave the other to Gus Loran."

He hesitated, and Mrs. Sentry said automatically, "I don't see anything in that."

Hare was uncomfortable. "Well, Irons believed," he told her, "that the dead girl's key must have been made from Arthur's, because they matched perfectly, while her key didn't match Loran's; so he had all the locksmiths canvassed, and late yesterday afternoon they found a man who remembered making the key. He remembered it, because he noticed on the key that was given him for a pattern that parts of it had been filed off later than other parts; so he knew it had been made out of a key originally meant for another lock. He asked the customer whether he wanted an exact duplicate; and the customer said 'Yes.'"

He hesitated; but no one spoke, and he concluded: "They brought this chap to Headquarters last night. He picked your father out of a lineup as the man who had the key made."

Mrs. Sentry said nothing; but Phil cried, "Probably the police tipped him who to pick!" Mrs. Sentry thought; Phil is so young. Mr. Fisher told us all this. Phil must remember.

Hare said regretfully: "Well, Arthur admitted last night at Headquarters that he did have the duplicate key made. He said he kept it in his desk in case he lost the other. He thinks Miss Wines must have stolen it."

"Arthur was always losing keys," Mrs. Sentry assented, and realized with a faint shock of terror that she had spoken of her husband in the past tense, and then, with a deeper tremor, that Hare seemed not to have noticed, as though it were natural for her to speak of him so.

She said hurriedly: "I hear the girls coming downstairs. Let's not talk about details, Dean!" Her eyes met his for a moment; held his; and his after a moment were lowered, as though some word had passed between them.

Phil argued, "But just the same—!" Then he stopped as Barbara and Mary appeared in the doorway.

"Morning, children!" Mrs. Sentry said lightly. "Sleepy-heads!"

Barbara saw Dean Hare; she cried: "Oh, have you seen father, Mr. Hare? When will they let him come home?"

"I'm afraid not right away, Barbara," he confessed. "You know, these things take time."

"But they know he didn't do it!" Barbara insisted.

"Well, of course we know—" "They know it, too!" the girl urged. "I told Mr. Flood— Mrs. Sentry spoke quickly, almost desperately. She knew what Barbara was about to say; that Mr. Sentry had come home on the night of the murder at a quarter of one. But if Barbara said that, Dean Hare would know Arthur had lied to him. She fought instinctively to protect Arthur from that discovery.

"Sit down, Barbara, Mary," she said. "After all, there's breakfast to be eaten, our routine to go on." Barbara insisted: "But mother, I—"

"Barbara!" Barbara sat down, puzzled by her mother's manner; and Mrs. Sentry thought, amazed at herself: I'm like an ostrich—hiding my head in the sand, trying to pretend, to blind myself— She said: "We've got to keep our heads, our sense of proportion. We must go on eating, for instance!"

Mary said in a low tone: "Must we? Pretend nothing has happened? We won't fool anyone but ourselves."

Mrs. Sentry ignored her. She asked the lawyer, in polite and empty tones, as one makes conversation with a strange dinner partner, "How's Olive, Dean?" Olive was Mrs. Hare.

"She wants to come over this afternoon—if you'd like."

"Of course!"

Mary said grimly: "I'm surprised she's willing to. I expect most people—"

Barbara cried, furiously: "Mary! You talk as though you thought fa—"

"Morning, children," Mrs. Sentry said lightly.

ther really did it!" And she said: "We must all go see him, right away! We'll all go together."

Mary said, "I want to see Nellie!" She added, "This—he and I must decide what to do."

The doorbell rang, and Oscar went to answer it. And Phil followed him into the hall. Mrs. Sentry suggested: "Ask Nell to dinner if you like, Mary. Or to tea?"

Mary hesitated, nodded; then Linda Dane came in with Phil. "Mother said it was too early for me to come," she confessed quietly. "She's coming a little later, Mrs. Sentry. But I didn't want to wait. I knew you'd be up."

"There's nothing to see!" Mrs. Sentry told her coldly. "We're not a side-show!"

Mrs. Sentry protested, "Mary!" But Linda said: "It's all right, Mrs. Sentry. I know how you all must feel; but I didn't come to be curious, Mary. Please don't feel I'm prying. We've always—at least, Barbara and Phil and I—have always been such good friends."

Barbara said, "Darling!" And Phil said, "Good kid, Linda!"

Dean Hare rose to go, and he nodded to Phil so that the boy went with him to the car.

"Phil," he suggested then, "don't let your sisters or your mother go to see your father yet. Not today. I shouldn't even go myself, if I were you. In a day or two, yes; but just now he's terribly shocked. It would distress any of you to see him; and I think it would be harder for him to keep his self-control."

"Gosh! I suppose so," Phil agreed, shakily. He urged, "I want him to know we're—with him, though!"

"I'll tell him," the attorney promised.

But then Mrs. Sentry came to the open door. "Oh, Dean," she called, "will you arrange for me to see Arthur, let me know when I'm to come?"

Hare looked to Phil for support; but Phil said, "I know it will do him good to see mother, Mr. Hare." And the lawyer surrendered.

"Very well," he agreed. "If you—"

Oscar came to summon Mrs. Sentry to the telephone. "Mr. Loran calling," he explained. She departed, and Hare said doubtfully:

"I still think it's a mistake, Phil, for her to go. Mr. Loran came last night while I was there. He was just back from New York. Your father almost broke down, just talking to him. Mr. Loran was sympathetic, of course, and loyal, and indignant at the police; but—it does no good to take that attitude. The police aren't to blame." He hesitated, said then, "We have to face the fact that there's a lot of circumstantial evidence against your father."

Phil said explosively, "You know darned well my father wouldn't kill anyone!"

"It's not a question of knowing. It's a question of proving."

Then he turned, for a police car came up the drive. Reporters on duty like guards at the entrance trotted after it; and Dan Fisher was among them. The police car stopped behind Dean Hare's; but Dan came along to where Phil and the lawyer stood, and he said in a low tone: "Sentry, if you and Mr. Hare are interested, Flood waited outside last night till Professor Brace came out, questioned him."

Phil nodded, only half hearing, staring at the police car, from which officers alighted. Fisher asked softly, "Who was the young lady who came in a few minutes ago?"

"One of my sister's friends."

"What's her name?"

Phil hesitated, but Dean Hare said: "Phil, the heat rule with reporters is, if they're going to find out anyway, tell them."

Phil nodded ruefully, "I suppose so. She's Linda Dane."

Fisher said, "Oh! I know her brother, Joe." Someone else demanded, "Not engaged to her, are you?" Phil shook his head, coloring with anger, and Inspector Irons alighted from the police car and said to the reporters:

"All right, boys, outside. Give these folks a break. I'll see that you get anything that you ought to have."

They obeyed him, moved away, and Dean Hare asked: "Anything new, Inspector?"

"I want to have a look around inside," the Inspector explained. "If that's all right?"

"Of course."

"And I might ask some questions. I suppose you'll want to be in on that?" He added, as though apologizing for his own turbulence, "It's not the way I usually handle things, but the D. A. says to keep you in touch as we go along."

The lawyer nodded. "Thanks."

He said: "Mrs. Sentry wants to see Mr. Sentry this morning. I'll be with her. Could you hold off on the questions till this afternoon?"

Irons reflected: "Well, the Grand Jury's sitting, and the D. A.'s idea was to give them the evidence we've got tomorrow." He looked at Hare, "I understand you and Mr. Flood agreed not to arraign him before?"

"Yes."

Irons looked at Phil apologetically. "It was hunch, as much as anything, when I booked him," he confessed. "But the D. A. got some stuff last night, and I'll want to have all the dope I can get, for the Grand Jury."

"Of course," the lawyer agreed. "But this afternoon will do, to ask your questions. Suppose I meet you here at two?"

Phil, listening, felt himself shiver; his teeth pressed hard together to keep them quiet. There was something in their tones deeply terrifying. He was almost relieved when Dean Hare drove away, and he himself was left with Inspector Irons.

When Hare departed, the other men who had come in the police car approached, and Irons introduced them to Phil, Inspector Hays, Sergeant Kane, Officer Regan.

And the Inspector suggested then, "Mr. Sentry, you want to show us around?"

"Glad to," Phil agreed.

"I'd like to have a look at the garage."

Phil led the way, watched the Inspector note the cars, study the garage. "Chauffeur sleep up above?" he asked. Phil nodded. Old Eli was burning leaves by the tennis court, and they went that way. Irons asked the old man:

"You usually hear a car come in at night, do you?"

Eli said, "Hey?" And Phil explained: "He's pretty deaf. You'll have to talk louder. But he wouldn't hear anything at night. Takes an earthquake to wake him."

Eli demanded querulously, "What you say?"

Irons nodded. "Skip it," he decided. He crossed to the pergola, looked down at the water just below them here. Two ducks sunning themselves on the bank waddled into the water and swam warily away.

"All right," said the Inspector. "Let's go in the house."

Indoors, with his mother and sisters looking to him for strength, Phil himself was stronger. His grandmother had come downstairs, they were all in the living-room. Phil explained what the Inspector wished to do, suggested they stay where they were. Inspector Hays and Sergeant Kane went toward the kitchen. Regan had remained outside. Inspector Irons and Phil went upstairs.

Phil suggested, "If there's anything special you're looking for, I might help you."

Irons hesitated. "I don't want to put anything over on you," he said gently. "I told Mr. Hare I wouldn't ask you any questions unless he was here."

Phil colored. "We've nothing to hide!" he protested.

"Sure, I know," the Inspector agreed. "But I'll just look around. I want to see everything. Whose room is this?"

"Mine," said Phil. The Inspector nodded; he opened the drawers of the chiffonier, the desk, the closet, the recess under the window seat where Phil kept rods and fishing gear.

Phil, looking over the other's shoulder, saw something there; a japanned metal box with a combination lock. And the cover of the box had somehow been forced open.

His thoughts went racing. In the summer after his Freshman year, at a dude ranch in New Mexico, one of the cowboys had given him an old single-action .45 revolver.

with cartridge belt and holster; had told him that the weapon had been taken off the body of a man killed in a gun battle, years before. Phil brought it home; but because Mrs. Sentry was afraid of firearms, he never showed it to his mother or his sisters, kept it here in this locked box. Only, he had showed it to his father. His father had known it was here.

Irons picked up the box, now empty, and he held it to his face and sniffed at it. The old holster had been heavy with grease and oil. Phil remembered the rich smell. He heard himself now, saying hurriedly: "That's my old tackle box. Used to keep a couple of reels in it, in leather cases." The Inspector did not turn. "I forgot the combination, had to break it open with a—"

He tried to think what tool his father might have used. "With a chisel," he said, and repeated: "Couple of reels, and some bass plugs—"

"Must have been hard on the chisel," the Inspector commented, and turned, the box in his hands, and looked at Phil. Phil saw sympathy and understanding in the older man's eyes, and was sick with fear. Then Sergeant Kane said from the doorway, in an intent tone: "Hays wants you, Inspector. Down cellar."

Irons nodded. "Right," he said. With the broken box under his arm, he followed Kane.

Phil followed them. Irons once looked back, as though to bid him stay behind; but he did not speak. In the cellar, Inspector Hays stood by the furnace. The furnace door was open. The fall had been warm, these last few days unseasonably so; and there had been here no recent fire.

Irons went toward the other Inspector. Hays said quietly: "See if you see what I see."

He turned a flashlight's beam into the fire box of the furnace. Irons stooped to look in. After a moment he stood up.

"Close the door easy," he said crisply then. "Close the draughts. Any air might make the ashes crumble or muss them up. I'll get Peters and Knobble right out here. They can handle it."

Phil touched his arm. "What is it, Inspector?" he asked.

Irons looked at him for a moment soberly. Then he took Phil's arm. "Steady, Mr. Sentry," he said. "The folks upstairs will need all you've got."

Phil said chokingly, "Damn you, what is it?"

"Somebody's burned a lot of money in the furnace," the Inspector told him. "You can still read the printing on the ashes of some of the bills."

"What of it?" Phil insisted.

"And there's an envelope, a long one, only half burned, with the firm name on it. Sentry and Loran. Whoever tried to burn it was in a hurry, didn't finish the job."

Phil protested, "But I don't see—"

Irons said quietly: "Someone took some money out of your father's safe, Thursday night. We've been wondering what they did with it. Where it had gone."

"Glad to," Phil agreed.

For the rest of that day, Phil was like a man dazed by an actual physical blow. He had, till he saw that rifled metal box in the recess under the window seat, not even contemplated the possibility of his father's guilt. That possibility had been, perhaps, in the back of his mind; but he had not faced it. His faculties had been concentrated upon the fact of Mr. Sentry's arrest, with all the terrors that arrest implied; and upon the fact that his sisters, his mother, his grandmother looked to him now for strength and heartening.

He felt himself young and futile and inadequate to the task imposed; he tried to grow in a moment from an irresponsible boy into the man the situation demanded. He thought more of them than of his father till, looking over the Inspector's shoulder, seeing the metal box that had been forced open, remembering what it had contained, remembering that Miss Wines had been shot, he heard himself lying by instinct, blindly, clumsily. And he saw a moment later that the Inspector knew he had lied; and while panic filled him, Sergeant Kane appeared and led them to the cellar—where worse appeared.

Someone had stolen his gun, and none but his father knew where it was! Someone had burned money in the furnace, and none but his father could have done that! And Inspector Irons had felt this evidence to be conclusive. That certainty was clear in the older man's eyes, plain for Phil to read.

The Inspector's sureness, more than his own senses, convinced Phil; drove home to him the shattering realization: His father was a murderer.

Phil might have been proud of his bearing that morning. When he and Inspector Irons came up from the cellar, Oscar spoke to him, said Mrs. Sentry would like him to drive her to town to see Mr. Sentry; and Phil said, "Right!" He could not for a moment face his mother, so he called to her from the hall, "I'll bring the car around."

He went to do so, brought the small car, the one his father always drove. At the front door he blew his horn; and his mother and Barbara presently came out, and Barbara kissed Mrs. Sentry, hugged her tight.

"Give father a big kiss for me," she directed. "Tell him I love him, and I think he's grand and I'll come see him tomorrow, sure!" And she called to Phil, "Drive carefully!" Phil tried his voice, and its very familiarity was reassuring. He thought the world was changed. "Sure," he promised; and as his mother got in beside him, "All right, mother?"

She pulled the door shut. "Ma, Hare said to come to his office," Phil, she directed.

And Phil got the car under way, and he told her how much seeing her would cheer his father. "You're always so strong and steady and"

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of money secured by a mortgage dated the 15th day of June, A. D. 1937, executed by Julius J. Mayer and Maud Mayer, husband and wife, of Ann Arbor, Michigan, to Ann Arbor Savings and Commercial Bank, Michigan Banking Corporation, which said mortgage was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for Washtenaw County, Michigan, in Liber 212 of Mortgages, on page 285 at 9:45 A. M. on June 19th, 1937.

And Whereas, by the terms of said mortgage, it is provided that in case default be made in the payment of any installment of principal or of the interest, taxes, assessments or insurance or any part thereof on any day or days, the same is made payable, and should the same remain due and unpaid for the space of thirty days, and thereafter, the principal sum of said mortgage, together with all interest, taxes, assessments and insurance, shall at the option of the mortgagee, become and be due and payable forthwith, and default having been made in the payment of the interest provided in said mortgage, such default has continued for more than thirty days, the said mortgagee hereby exercises its option to declare the principal sum of said mortgage and all arrearages of interest, taxes due, and payable.

And Whereas, the amount claimed due on said mortgage is the sum of $2900.00 principal and interest in amount of $155.05 and the further sum of thirty-five dollars as an amount due stipulated for in said mortgage, and the whole amount claimed to be unpaid on said mortgage is the sum of $3,055.05, and no part thereof having been paid at law to recover the debt now remaining secured by said mortgage, any part thereof, whereby the mortgage of said mortgage has become operative.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the said mortgage of sale, and in pursuance of the terms of said mortgage, and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described, at public auction, to the highest bidder at the south front of the courthouse of the city of Ann Arbor, in the County of Washtenaw, Michigan, on the 21st day of October, A. D. 1938, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, Eastern Standard Time, at the south outer door of the Court House in the City of Ann Arbor, County of Washtenaw, and State of Michigan, to-wit:

Commencing at a point on the westerly line of Detroit Street sixty-six feet and six inches from the intersection of said westerly line of Detroit Street with the east line of Lot number two in block number four north of Huron Street, range number six, and running thence southerly along the westerly line of Detroit Street, 78.5 feet; thence northerly at right angles with said westerly line of Detroit Street until it intersects a line parallel to and 99 feet east from the east line of North Avenue; thence north along said parallel line, 73 feet and 6 inches; thence east, parallel with the north line of lot two in said block 32 feet and 8 inches; thence on a line at right angles with the westerly line of Detroit Street to the place of beginning, to beginning at a point 90 feet east from the northwest corner of lot number two in said block; thence running along the east line of Martin's 49 feet and 6 inches; thence east parallel to the north line of said lot, 73 feet and 2 inches; thence north to the east line of Martin's 49 feet and 6 inches to the north line of said lot two; thence west 42 feet and 2 inches to the place of beginning, all being a part of lots number one and two in block number four of Huron Street, Range number six east, according to the Original Plat of the Village (now city) of Ann Arbor, Washtenaw County, Michigan.

Also, Part of the northeast quarter Section 18, Superior Township, Washtenaw County, Michigan, which said part may be more particularly described as follows:

That is to say, beginning at the northeast corner of Section 18; thence with 1 degree 30 minutes and 00 seconds west along east line of Section 18, 235.10 feet to the southerly line of highway, T. L. No. 153 and the line of beginning of this description, thence continuing south 1 degree, 30 minutes 00 seconds west along east line of Section 18, 177.40 feet; thence with 88 degrees, 27 minutes 30 seconds west, 935.49 feet; thence north 22 degrees 20 minutes 00 seconds east, 80 feet to the southerly line at highway T. L. No. 153; thence north 88 degrees 52 minutes 30 seconds east, along the southerly line of T. L. No. 153, 819.47 feet to the line of beginning, containing 2.88 acres. Also excepting that portion of strip of land fifty feet in width reserved for a channel change located in the above described parcel. Said channel change is described by its line as follows: Beginning at a point on the north line of Section 18, 40 feet west of the northeast corner of section 18; thence south 2 degrees 15 minutes 00 seconds east 235 feet 16 minutes 00 seconds east 30 minutes 00 seconds east, 120.0 feet to the line of ending. In this cause it appearing from affidavit on file, that Bruce B. Horn, defendant, is a resident of the State of Michigan and that the process issued for his appearance in said cause could not be served by reason of his continued absence from, or concealment, within this State, and by reason of his continued absence from his place of residence.

On motion of John P. Kusch, Attorney for the Plaintiff, it is ordered that the said Defendant, Bruce B. Horn, cause his appearance to be entered in this cause within three months from the date of this order and that in default thereof said Bill of Complaint will be taken as confessed.

It is further Ordered that within forty days, this order shall be published in the Chelsea Standard, a newspaper published in the County of Washtenaw and that such publication be continued therein at least once in each week for six weeks in succession, or that said plaintiff cause a copy of this order to be personally served on said defendant at least twenty days before the time above prescribed for the appearance of said defendant, or that said plaintiff cause a copy of this order to be personally served on said defendant at least twenty days before the time above prescribed for his appearance.
Dated July 19th, 1938.
Geo. W. Sample, Circuit Judge.

YOUR Driver's License

is a PRIVILEGE

... Drive CAREFULLY or You'll LOSE IT!

What is a driver's license? Something that you've got to show the traffic officer when you get in trouble? To many people, a driver's license seems to represent special privileges. As a matter of fact, the fact that you possess a driver's license is, in itself, a privilege. Stop and think. Why does the law require a motorist to carry his driver's license at all times? Is it a means of identification when the man is rendered unconscious in an automobile accident? If that's the way you do feel about it—that's very likely the way your driver's license will serve you. No! Your driver's license is issued to you as an indication that you are sound of mind and body—that you have completely familiarized yourself with traffic rules and regulations.

DO you know what is and is not permitted in driving? DO you strive to protect your own life and the lives of others when you drive? Unless you do—the day will come when your driver's license—a privilege granted by the people of this state to you, will be taken from you. Drive carefully!

Names Elbridge, Eldridge

Have Different Meanings
Differing by only one letter and sounding so much alike that it is difficult to distinguish them from each other, the names Elbridge and Eldridge nevertheless have entirely different meanings, writes Florence A. Cowles in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Elbridge is of Anglo Saxon origin and means "dweller at the little bridge," a place name which was first a surname and is now also used as a given name.

Elbridge Gerry (1744-1814) was a signer of the Declaration of Independence, governor of Massachusetts and vice president of the United States. His name gave rise to the political term gerrymander, denoting an unfair division of electoral districts. When governor, he signed a bill dividing the state into new senatorial districts bringing many Federalist votes into one district. One of the districts was shaped like a huge salamander and someone coined for it the word gerrymander.

Eldridge T. Gerry (1837-1927), grandson of the foregoing, was a lawyer and philanthropist, founder of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

Eldridge has two origins and two meanings. Its Teutonic meaning is "mature counselor" and its Anglo-Saxon meaning, "fearful, terrible," related to the adjective eldritch.

Eldridge, another form of Eldred or Eldredge and related on the Teutonic side to the word-elder.

Bible Facts
All book-lovers read the Bible for the beautiful, dignified English it contains, if for no deeper reason, says London Tit-Bits Magazine. Men who have made a very careful analysis of the Bible say that it contains 3,666,480 letters, 810,697 words, 31,175 verses, 1,189 chapters, and 66 books. The word "and" occurs no fewer than 46,627 times and the word "Lord" 1,588 times. Those who order their lives by the Bible could not choose a better set of practical instructions. The Book of Proverbs contains the sanest advice on behavior ever given to man. In the earlier books there are rules for eating and drinking, for sowing crops and the maintenance of bodily health. Historically, it is accurate; it contains a comprehensive list of the flora and fauna of Palestine and the surrounding countries, their merchandise and mineral products.

Easter Island Named for Day
Easter Island is situated in the Pacific ocean, about 2,000 miles off the coast of Chile. The island has an area of 50 square miles, and got its name from the first known white man, a Dutch navigator, who landed there on Easter day in 1772.

Highest Steam-Navigated Lake
Lake Titicaca, which lies between Peru and Bolivia, at an altitude of 12,045 feet, is the highest steam-navigated lake in the world.

Question And Answer Dept.

Problem—With a large beech tree having 10 main limbs, and each limb has 20 smaller branches, and each branch has 20 twigs, and each twig has 5 acorns, how many acorns did that tree produce? (Answer elsewhere in this department.)

Ques.—What is the distinction between the "world," the "universe" and the "earth"?

Ans.—"Earth" is the name of the planet on which we live. "Universe" is a term applied to the innumerable bodies of planets, suns and stars that are whirling through space. "World" applies more specifically to the heavenly bodies in the vast expanse of worlds, and to all these worlds and the limitless system of creation is given the general name "universe."

Ques.—Can you answer what a "geyser" is, and are there any in the United States?

Ans.—Geysers are eruptive hot springs found chiefly in volcanic districts. There are several of them in Yellowstone Park, most notable of them is the one named "Old Faithful". At intervals of about one hour it continually shoots up a column of hot water to a height of about 175 feet, and this column of water is about as large in circumference as an average-sized slip.

Ques.—How far into the past do we have any historic records?

Ans.—The earliest prehistoric records were obtained from the Egyptians which dates back about 5000 years before Christ. Corroborative records in Greece (Greek) show extensive excavations were made, revealing a prehistoric civilization existed before the Bronze Age.

Ques.—Does coffee grow on plants like beans? And why are some of the grains green while most of them are brown?

Ans.—Coffee is grown on trees ranging from five to fifteen feet high. The fruit of the coffee tree is a red berry about the size of a cherry, and has two kernels in it. When this fruit is harvested and dried it is an apple-green. The roasting process changes the color to a golden brown. Since the roasting system was perfected we see but very little of the coffee in the green state.

Answer to Problem—None; acorns do not grow on beech trees.

Ques.—Will you please answer what a ziczac is?

Ans.—The ziczac is a rare tropical bird about the size of the English sparrow. It is a voracious bird in habits, but feeds chiefly by picking the food from between the teeth of crocodiles. The crocodile's interlocking teeth are always exposed, and the ziczac can pick the food from the teeth while on the wing, much like a hummingbird gets nectar from the flowers of plants.

Ques.—How did President Roosevelt get his middle name of "Delano"?

Ans.—"Delano" was the maiden name of the President's mother.

Ques.—What is the size of the Dead Sea? And how did it get its name?

Ans.—The Dead Sea in Palestine is 46 miles in length and 8½ miles average in width. It is called the Dead Sea because its water is too intense, salty for fish to live in or to sustain other animal life.

Colorful Sicily

Sicily is a land of color, of flowers. Greek ruins, old monasteries and bells. The flower vendors carry their blooms in one huge bouquet, on a long pole high above the crowd. A number of them together makes the street quite a festival. But the greatest color comes from the painted carts, usually drawn by a pony or donkey. Every inch of surface is covered with shades and tints of color before undreamed of. In truth Sicilian traffic is a gay and brilliant pageant, with no two carts alike.

Firemen's Quadrille Realistic

On the night of June 15, 1884, in the Crystal Palace in New York city, Louis Jullien and his orchestra presented "The Firemen's Quadrille." Suddenly and without warning, windows crashed, flames burst through the roof, fire bells rang and scores of firemen rushed in and turned on hoses. It was so realistic, says Collier's Weekly, that many women fainted. Four years later, oddly enough, the palace was destroyed by fire.

Confectioner's Shop of 79 B. C.

Some years ago, when the town of Herculaneum was excavated after having laid hidden for 1,900 years beneath ashes and lava that Mt. Vesuvius poured upon it in 79 B. C., one of the shops disclosed was a confectioner's shop and store. The most surprising thing about it was that the tools, apparatus, molds and other equipment were similar to those in use by later-day candy makers.

Kuvass Hunting Dog Was Product of Transylvania

The Kuvass dog was originated sometime in the Fifteenth century by the nobility of Transylvania and was used for hunting in the mountains of that country. For the last few centuries the breed has been used extensively in Hungary as a shepherd and is often referred to as the "Hungarian Sheepdog," according to George Berner in the Washington Post.

In disposition, they are very friendly, will never pick a fight with man or animal but when aroused or when they are guarding the flock they can be vicious and well able to give a good account of themselves.

The word "Kuvass" means "Armed Guard." The breed is uniform in type and general appearance. They are either white or ivory in color. The coat is long and wavy and the tail is carried low, even when the dog is excited. When grown they are about 27 inches at the shoulder and weigh about 100 pounds.

A large, powerful, muscular dog, he is keen to his surroundings, always on the alert and ever ready to be of service in guarding his master or his master's property.

If Earth Stopped Revolution

The United States coast and geodetic survey says that the absence of rotation and revolution of the earth would change the whole system of tides, currents, rivers and, in fact, the general configuration of the earth's surface, that conditions would be unimaginably different. As to the possibility of the sudden cessation of revolution, the late Camille Flammarion, the noted French astronomer, said: "Were the earth suddenly stopped in its course, the shock would be transmitted by recoil, so to say, to all the constituent molecules of the terrestrial globe, and as if each received a stunning blow, the whole earth would be instantaneously luminous and burning, and an immense conflagration would devour the world."

Thomas Jefferson's Versatility
Summing up his versatility in other fields, one writer observes in part that when Thomas Jefferson "spoke of law one immediately thought him a lawyer; when he talked of mechanics you thought him an engineer; at the mention of medicine one was sure he was a doctor, and in a discussion of literature your mind was made up that he was a college professor." Fifty years to the day after the signing of the Declaration of Independence, Jefferson died and at his request this simple inscription was placed on his tombstone: "Here was buried Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence, of the Statute of Virginia for religious freedom and father of the University of Virginia."
