24 YEARS AGO

Thursday, August 27, 1914
John Strahle of Sylvan has purchased the residence of C. E. Kart-lehner on South Main street.
Mr. and Mrs. Ashley Holden have moved to Detroit where they will make their home.
The firm of Eppler & Van Riper dissolved partnership last Friday. Adam Eppler has taken over the interest of Floyd Van Riper and will continue the business under his own name.

Frank Forner, Jr., who has been spending the past seven years in the western states, arrived here yesterday and will spend some time with his mother in Sylvan.
Mrs. Christine Gruner died at her home near Francisco on Thursday, August 20, 1914.
A number of Chelsea people had relatives travelling in Europe this summer. When war was declared the travellers sailed for home on the first boats they could get passage on. The majority were forced to leave their luggage in Europe.

34 YEARS AGO

Thursday, August 25, 1904
Louis C. Doh, youngest son of Mrs. Catherine C. Doll of Dexter township, died at the home of his sister, Mrs. Peter Wikner in Clatskanie, Oregon on Friday, August 19. The remains were brought here and funeral services will be held tomorrow with burial in Mt. Olivet.

The H. S. Holmes Mercantile Co. has been reorganized as a joint-stock company and will be incorporated. Its capital stock is $40,000. The firm will retain the old name.

Miss Gladys Mapes and William J. Wright of Tocco were married on Wednesday, August 24. The bride is well known in Chelsea where she attended school for several years and is a sister of S. A. and Fred Mapes of this place.

Between 400 and 500 people attended the Grange picnic at Cavanaugh Lake on Saturday which was sponsored by Pomona and Cavanaugh Lake Granges.

According to the census tabulation of Washtenaw county taken recently, Chelsea has gained 148 in population since 1900. We now have 1,783 inhabitants.

The Junior Stars have been reorganized and the personnel is as follows: Howard S. Holmes and John T. Upton, pitchers; L. BeGole and B. Steinbach, catchers; Dory Rogers, Arthur Raffrey, Russell McGuinness, Edgar Steinbach, Paul Bacon, Harry Conway, John P. Miller and Hubert Belsel.

OUR NEIGHBORS

PINKNEY—Mrs. Edna Donohue, postmistress at Gregory for the past ten years or so will resign her position on account of ill health. At present she is on her vacation. This is a fourth class post office and is filled by examination—Dispatch.

MASON—Ingham's dream of oil wealth was dimmed at least for the time being, Friday when the Hitzel-Land Development company and Darke Bros. of Detroit, the financial backers, ordered drilling stopped at the Royston Bros. test well in Section 23, Vevay township, three miles southeast of Mason. The drillers said that Dundee had been struck at 2517 feet and that the stratum contained black salt water instead of oil. County News.

JACKSON—With Ganson street the official highway while Michigan avenue is being paved, motorists were surprised Tuesday when they found a large box elder had fallen across the road. The tree was located between Seymour avenue and Gilbert street. Frank Smoyer, public works foreman, said he did not know why the tree fell, unless the rain-soaked foliage had made it top heavy. Its trunk was between 16 and 18 inches thick. Evening Star.

We have repeatedly mentioned in this column that the one thing needed by drivers today is more courtesy. Place a little more trust in your own ability to drive, and make that ability live up to the trust you have placed in yourself.

A great many of our traffic accidents could be prevented if people would only realize that they cannot depend upon the other fellow doing the thing which common sense, or the law, or courtesy dictates, should be done.

In other words, in driving today you cannot trust anybody but yourself.

WALZ-KAPPLER REUNION

There was a small attendance at the Walz-Kappler reunion on Sunday at Dexter-Huron park. In the absence of the president, Walter Tisch, the business meeting was called to order by Jacob Lehman, and Mrs. Emanuel Kappler was re-elected secretary-treasurer. The oldest member present was Jacob Lehman of Chelsea, the youngest, his grandson Richard of Brighton. The officers will decide on the place for the 1939 reunion.

BOHNET REUNION

The Bohnet family reunion was held on Sunday at Jackson County park, Clear Lake. At noon a pot luck dinner was served to 38 members, and a program of games and contests followed. Officers chosen were:
President—Eugene Widmayer,
Vice Pres.—Harold Widmayer,
Secretary-Treasurer—Mrs. Harold Widmayer.
Mrs. Julia Haas, 78, of Manchester, was the oldest member in attendance and Kenneth Widmayer, three months old, the youngest. Members were present from Stockbridge, Webberville, Manchester, Norvell and North Lake.

ARTZ REUNION

Ann Arbor, Stockbridge, Jackson, Bunker Hill, Vicksburg and Grass Lake were represented at the Artz reunion held on Saturday at Pleasant Lake, Jackson county, and Samuel Artz of South Dakota was an honor guest at the gathering.
Officers elected for 1939 are:
President—L. C. Morehouse, Jackson.
Vice Pres.—Wm. Artz, Waterloo.
Secretary-Treasurer—Miss Alice Walz, Jackson.

First Counterfeiting

The first New England and New York colonists found the Indians using beads and belts for money; white beads made out of the end of a peewinkle shell and black beads made out of the black part of a clam shell, the beads rubbed down and polished and arranged in strings or belts, with one black bead worth two whites. This money became the prevailing currency for a while, with the white man showing his superiority by counterfeiting it.

Jade Precious to Chinese

Jade to the Chinese is what diamonds are to many Westerners. It is to them the most precious of precious stones. Centuries ago this stone, carved in the form of bats and storks, was worn to insure long life. It varies in color from deepest kingfisher blue to white. In China they gauge the value of jade not by its color but by its texture—the experts "feel" it.

Coining Money, Declaring War

The United States Constitution says regarding the rights of coining money and the powers of declaring war: "The congress shall have the power: To coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin, and fix the standard of weights and measures. To declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal, and make rules concerning captures of land and water."

ESCHELBACH REUNION

The home of Christian Klein on Dexter Road was the scene of the annual Eschelbach reunion when 90 guests gathered on Sunday from Ann Arbor, Detroit, Wayne, Dearborn, Chelsea, and Cleveland, Ohio.
Dinner was served at tables arranged on the lawn and this was followed by games for the children and kenos for the elders. Officers were elected as follows:
President—Harold Eschelbach,
Vice Pres.—Julius Eschelbach,
Secretary-Treasurer—George E. Haist.

Table committee—Mr. and Mrs. Albert Eschelbach, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Schaible.
Sports committee—Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Koenigter, Raymond Eschelbach, Alma Desmond.

The date of the 1939 reunion has been changed to the first Sunday in August and it will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Duible.

Social Security Office Completes Year's Work

Work done by the Jackson Social Security field office in the first year of its operation was outlined Saturday as the anniversary was noted.

"The Jackson field office opened a year ago today," said Richard H. Hendrick, manager of the Old-Age Insurance Bureau branch in the Reynolds Building.
"During that period we have directed our activity along two principal lines. One has been to issue social security account numbers, while the other has been to file claims for lump-sum payments which are due certain individuals at this time.

"Since our office opened on August 20, 1937, we have issued social security numbers to more than 10,700 persons. Approximately 88 per cent of these numbers were the result of original applications from persons residing in the four counties served by our field office. The other 12 per cent were duplicate numbers issued to persons who had lost or mutilated their original numbers.

"During the first year of operation of our office we were notified that 293 claims filed through our branch had been certified for payment. The number and amount of these claims have been increasing steadily, our records show.

"In the last three months our Jackson office has had 75 claims certified. The average payment during that period was $44.52.

"Persons who reach the age of 65 after having worked in commerce or industry are generally entitled to payments of this type. The same is true of heirs of persons who have died after having been employed similarly. In either case the payment of 91 per cent of the wages earned during the period between Jan. 1, 1937 and the date when the worker or his heirs became eligible for the lump-sum payment," Hendrick said.

The Jackson field office serves the counties of Jackson, Washtenaw, Lenawee and Hillsdale. Hendrick said all matters relating to old-age insurance should be referred to his office by residents of these counties.

Soaring Gliders

Miles of sand beach and steady winds from the west have combined to create picturesque sand dunes along the east shores of Lake Michigan.
Next Sunday at Frankfort the dunes will be the scene of a national gliding meet, sponsored by the American Soaring society. Motorless airplanes will soar into the skies, borne aloft on westerly winds as they rise in crossing the dunes. Distance flights are achieved by using a succession of updrafts.

It's a brand new sporting attraction for Michigan.

Miss Frankenstein of the appointment. At Jackson the American Legion post went on record in protest.

Republican Feud

All may appear serene on the surface, but both parties in Michigan are having "family rows."

Among the Republicans it is the Toy-Fitzgerald feud which is becoming hotter every day. Fitzgerald charges his opponent as being anti-labor while Toy declares that "McKayism" is the real issue. When newspapermen phoned the Grand Rapids republican leader to give his views, he professed ignorance about it all and said that he had seen Toy only a few weeks before at the office of the Ford Motor company—a sly attempt to connect Toy with the automobile manufacturer.

The family row prompted James E. Davidson, national committeeman, to appeal over the radio for party harmony.

Comstock Haunts

Except for the Nowicki-Schroeder contest for lieutenant governor, the Democratic primary is going to be painless.

For a while it looked as if Governor Murphy would have opposition. Murray D. Van Wagoner, highway commissioner, was on the fence. Former Gov. William A. Comstock, Mayor George Welsh of Grand Rapids and others tried to push Van Wagoner into the arena.

Ever Nowicki himself was cool towards the governor, due to the latter's alleged favoritism to the C. I. O.

Van Wagoner finally declined to make the sacrifice. Comstock then announced he would run against Murphy in November as a Jeffersonian Democrat. He hasn't the slightest idea of winning, but he hopes fondly to get enough votes to defeat Murphy. Yes, both parties have their troubles.

One-Man State Fair

Michigan's state fair at Detroit, a 16-day event which opens this Saturday (Aug. 27) continues to be remarkable in more ways than one.

Frank Isbey, general manager, accepts no salary.

He examines every expenditure whether it be for a nickel pencil or for the $5,000 neon sign on Woodward avenue. He makes all decisions of importance.

Last year the fair attendance increased over 100 per cent. This year, with an extra week's showing, the state event may establish an all-time record. Isbey, a Detroit, goes in for entertainment in a big way—dance bands, radio and movie stars, Hollywood girls and the rest. A novel attraction this year will be "The Holy Land," an animated replica of Jerusalem.

PAUL REUNION
The 20th annual Paul reunion, held on Sunday at Pleasant Lake, Freedom township, was attended by about fifty relatives. At the business meeting following the dinner, Albert Paul of Jackson was elected president and Carl Braun of Ann Arbor was re-elected secretary-treasurer. Games furnished amusement for the afternoon. The 1939 reunion will be held in Battle Creek.

Habits of the Kingfisher
The handsome kingfisher digs holes in banks beside streams and lakes. Both male and female take part in the work and often the hole is five or six feet long. The birds use their bills as well as their claws while digging, and their purpose is to provide a passage to the nest where they will rear their young. The nest is placed in a hollow at the end of the tunnel.

Question And Answer Dept.

Problem—What period of time, the name of which is spelled the same both forward and backward? You win if you solve it in less than ten seconds. (Answer elsewhere in this department).

Ques.—How can flies or any insects walk on the ceiling or rest comfortably on the under side of an object as well as on top?

Ans.—Insects have tiny suckers on their feet by means of which they can stick to things the instant they light. There is no "up" or "down" in the insect world, so any position they take is the same as any other to them—they can move about with equal ease one way or the other. However, when they sleep or are at rest they prefer to be in the position which to us is known as upside down.

Ques.—Can you tell me how to lay out a baseball diamond correctly?

Ans.—It is so complicated that we haven't the space to detail the procedure. However, to all practical purposes you may be helped with the following: Procure a carpenter's square, and lay this square with the corner at the point where you want home plate, with one angle of the square pointing toward first base, the other angle pointing to third. In that position draw a line completely around the outside. Continue these lines out to a distance of 90 feet. Repeat the same operation at third and first bases. If measured correctly the line from first and the line from third will meet at second base, thus forming a perfect square. From home plate to the pitcher's rubber is 60 1/2 feet; then 66 feet, 3 and 3-8 inches from second to the pitcher's box. The pitcher's box thus will be 4 feet long and 2 feet wide. The rubber is two feet long by six inches thick.

Answer to problem—You say it cannot be done? Well, how about "noon"?

Ques.—What is a helicopter?

Ans.—A helicopter is a kind of airplane with the propeller directed upward instead of forward. The idea is that the propeller should pull the machine directly up into the air.

Ques.—What is the highest temperature that has been generated by man?

Ans.—The highest temperature actually measured or maintained for more than a moment is that of an electric arc furnace. The temperature of this was about 7,200 degrees Fahrenheit, and would melt or vaporize almost everything except supercrucible steel.

Ques.—Why is ice placed in the top or sides of the refrigerator instead of at the bottom?

Ans.—Ice cools the air around it. This makes the air heavier and the cooled air sinks, and this makes warm air come up from the lower part. Thus there is a continual circulation of the air and the cooling effect of the ice is distributed all over the refrigerator.

Ques.—When women are doing their ironing why do they wet the tip of their fingers to test the heat?

Ans.—They do this to get approximately the right temperature without burning their finger. If the iron is sufficiently hot the moisture instantly turns into steam, so that the finger does not actually come in contact with the iron and consequently does not burn the finger.

Michigan Farms Are Much Like Hungarian

Michigan had a visitor a few days ago. He was Imre de Razzo, mechanical engineer visiting the campus of Michigan State College as part of a study he is making on a year's leave of absence from the Royal Hungarian Academy for Agriculture.

What is more news, however, was his amazement in finding so many likenesses between Michigan agriculture and that in his homeland.

Land and population figures differ considerably, although the Lower Peninsula has about the same number of square miles as does the entire European state. Of 9,000,000 citizens, he says, 55 per cent depend upon agriculture, quite a contrast to Michigan where one in five is upon a farm.

But the climate and crops are surprisingly similar. Hungary grows considerable wheat and some rye, oats and barley. Corn is important in some portions. Alfalfa is a crop widely used, a crop in which Michigan rates top in acreage in the United States. Hungarian farmers grow sugar beets, vast quantities of fruit, much of which is sold to neighboring countries, has chicory and truck crops like onions.

As a mechanical engineer de Razzo studied small combine and small power tractors working on the Michigan State College farms. Hungary it seems, still favors horses for power. But the weather, he had never seen such sudden heavy rains in his life as he saw in this country.

He does believe his country, practicing soil conservation for centuries, has fewer erosion problems. Livestock farming, diversification, rotation all have been practiced although lately Hungarian farmers and engineers have begun borrowing American methods of modern power terracing.

CHILDREN IN COURT

Judge Malcolm Hatfield

Improper Discipline
After a hearing in juvenile court, two groups of parents learned to their amazement that they themselves were partly responsible for their children's disobedience.

A careful investigation by a court officer previous to the court hearing disclosed the following facts: The parents of the first child continually bickered with each other over the type of discipline to be applied. If the father gave a command, the mother invariably countermanded it and defied the child.

The parents of the second offspring frequently threatened her with a whipping, yet never actually wielded the rod. On several occasions they sent their daughter to bed because she misbehaved when guests were present. After the visitors departed, they contradicted themselves by permitting the girl to rise.

As long as parents revoke their own orders, or fail to carry out a warning, they must expect disobedience. When children do not learn obedience in the home, there is little the school can do to teach it to them. Eventually when they are brought into court they must pay the penalty for the failure of their parents to give them proper training.

"If your kitchen is like an oven here's the electric range you need."

We've had housewives tell us that there is no use dressing neatly every hot day they have to work over a hot old-time stove—for in half an hour they're as wilted as a faded flower.

Contrast how different it is cooking by electricity. No heat in your face—but lots for your food. Your kitchen is as comfortable as a dark, cool basement.

Cost much to change over? No—that's the beauty of it. For a few cents a day you can start now to enjoy working for the family and be the sort of a wife and mother that families enjoy talking to.

'International Lawlessness' Deplored by Secretary Hull

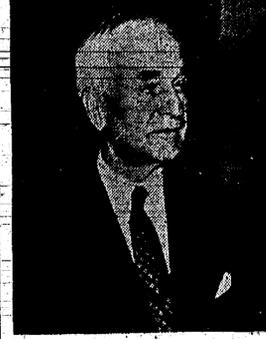

By Joseph W. LaBine

International

Last week as neurotic Europe jittered and shivered, Adolf Hitler led 1,500,000 troops through unprecedented maneuvers. In England, there were signs that Neville Chamberlain's "kid glove" policy toward Germany and England was breaking down. In Shanghai, Japan made bold advances on the International Settlement. (See below).

Business

Last week Secretary of State Cordell Hull reported satisfactory progress with his reciprocal trade treaty program whereby the U. S. becomes "most favored nation" with a host of governments. Then came a stumbling block, thrown in his path not by a foreign power but by Mr. Hull's next door neighbor, Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace.

CORDELL HULL

accomplish this aim: (1) economic reconstruction; (2) adherence to international law; (3) observance of treaties and their orderly modification when necessary; (4) abstention from use of force; (5) non-intervention with other nations' internal affairs; (6) disarmament; (7) collaboration for culture.

Though Shanghai itself now lives peacefully under Tokyo rule, the foreign-owned International Settlement houses 1,000,000 Chinese still loyal to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. Shanghai diplomats feared that Japan might attempt to seize the settlement, a move that would send U. S., Great Britain and France into an outraged uproar.

Meanwhile, Tokyo tightened its belt once more, taking more economy measures to speed up the war in China. Hankow, long-sought objective, still remained 100 miles away from war weary Nipponese.

HOLD SURPRISE GATHERING

Fourteen members of the Women's Relief Corps held a surprise gathering on Tuesday for Mrs. Katie Greening and daughter Nina at their summer home, Clear Lake. Following the co-operative dinner at one o'clock, cards furnished the diversion. Mrs. Lyle Christwell receiving high score in pedro, Mrs. Claire Rowe in euchre and Mrs. J. L. Kilmer in bunco.

Future Farmers Club Takes Northern Trip

Monday morning, August 15, the Chelsea Future Farmers club headed north for points in the Upper Peninsula. Twelve persons made the trip. Two cars and a trailer offered comfort and safety in transportation.

The fellows arrived in Manistique Monday evening for supper and located the State Park at Indian Lake, where three tents and equipment for camping were unloaded and arranged. Indian Lake offered an excellent site for camping, swimming and athletics. Other seasons of the year were claimed to have been better fishing, since some species of fish were losing teeth.

Within driving distance were located the great "Big Spring" or Kitchiti-Kipi, and two state fish hatcheries. The spring is 290 feet long, 100 feet wide and 40 feet deep. Various species of fish were seen and the fellows enjoyed watching the brook trout strike fresh grasshoppers thrown in the water.

A wild bear was seen in camp and after many pictures had been taken of him the Chelsea boys enjoyed a good "bear-chase".

Leaving Friday for St. Ignace and setting up camp at the State Park, the group climbed and observed Lake Huron from Castle Rock. Some of the fellows visited Mackinac Island Saturday morning. Leaving Mackinac City in the early afternoon and driving through about 250 miles of rain, found Chelsea high and dry.

The following members made the trip: Joe Kastle, John Stoffer, Martin Merkel, Raymond Ives, Warren Hoover, Donald Cook, Roland Heim, Verry Hafey, Ormal Schiller, Arthur Lindauer, Vincent Ives (driver), and leader, Roy Wallis.

All meals except in travel were prepared on an open stove and the greater share furnished by the boys. A total of approximately 900 miles were traveled.

The Future Farmers club wishes to thank all parents and others who have helped make our trip a success.

Quotations "I think that the trip was swell, except for the sand."—Roland. "This trip showed me the value of education to all people and also furnished lots of fun."—Donald C. "The trip was okay as far as it went, but if we could have stayed in Manistique a couple of more nights it would have been much better."—Verry.

"Okay, swell trip"—Ormal. "Fine trip"—Art. "The conduct of the fellows was splendid and I enjoyed being their leader and learning to know each boy."—Roy Wallis, Vocational Agricultural Instructor.

Foreign

Last February 20, dapper Anthony Eden resigned as Britain's foreign secretary because he didn't believe in consorting with dictators. But Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain set out to make friends with Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini. Appointed as Eden's successor was Viscount Halifax.

Next came conversations at Berlin and Rome, a British-Italian friendship pact, a plan to take foreigners out of the Spanish war, an avowal of peace from Hitler. Until last fortnight Neville Chamberlain was a success at winning friends and influencing people.

But a few days later his house of cards collapsed. Italy began anti-British propaganda despite her "friendship" agreement. Hitler massed 1,500,000 men for war maneuvers despite his peace avowal. Generalissimo Francisco Franco, Spain's rebel commander, balked at eliminating foreign fighters, presumably on advice from Berlin and Rome.

What was still more disheartening, Viscount Halifax met secretly with opinionated Anthony Eden and was reported ready to resign. Some thought Neville Chamberlain might also resign, placing weather-beaten Sir Samuel Hoare in line for the premiership.

At Cologne an anti-aircraft gun was planted in front of the U. S. consulate, barking every 20 minutes at an imaginary enemy in the sky. Throughout Germany, troop trains pulled reserves to the borders of France, Poland and Czechoslovakia for Adolf Hitler's 15-day war maneuvers.

From many points, foreign observers sent word of wholesale rebellion among workers drafted for "state tasks." Nowhere was this fiercer than in little Czechoslovakia, where 400,000 troops were secretly mobilized to forestall a sudden invasion move

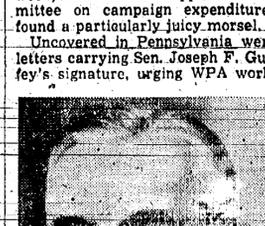

Politics

This year, more than ever, state primary campaigns have brought complaints of "dirty poker." In Kentucky, both Sen. Alben Barkley and Gov. A. B. "Happy" Chandler were accused of misusing federal and state funds to influence voters. Investigating such charges last week, Sen. Morris Sheppard's committee on campaign expenditures found a particularly juicy morsel.

Uncovered in Pennsylvania were letters carrying Sen. Joseph F. Guffey's signature, urging WPA workers to contribute to campaign chests of Gov. George A. Earle, running for the senate, and C. Alvin Jones, running for governor.

Section 208 of the U. S. criminal code forbids solicitation by a federal officeholder of political funds from any person receiving federal compensation. Vehemently denying the charge, Senator Guffey's secretary nevertheless sped word across the Atlantic to his boss, who is touring Europe.

In Wyoming, a quiet primary renominated Gov. Leslie A. Miller, naming Nels H. Smith as his Republican opponent next November. Also renominated was Wyoming's only representative, Paul R. Grever, who will face Frank O. Horton, personal friend of Herbert Hoover.

PENNSYLVANIA'S GUFFEY

He wrote too many letters.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Barbara Sentry, seeking to sober up her escort, Johnnie Boyd, on the way home from a party, slaps him, and attracts the attention of a policeman who arrests her. She is taken to the police station, where she meets Professor Brace of Harvard, who is the rescue and driver Barbara's father driving from the direction of his office at 12:45, but when he gets home he finds her in the car and that he has been playing bridge at the club. Next morning, while Barbara is telling her mother about her adventure, the argument phone call comes from Mr. Sentry's office after his departure.

CHAPTER II—Arriving home in the late afternoon, Sentry reports his office has been robbed and a Miss Wines, former temporary employee, killed. The evening papers further confirm the story, and Sentry is told that Miss Wines was a girl who had been with Neil Ray, young intern at the hospital where she works, goes off to dinner at Gus Loran's, Sentry's partner, with Mrs. Loran's brother, Jimmy Engle, Mr. and Mrs. Sentry call on old Mrs. Sentry, and Barbara alone, receives Dan Fisher, reporter, who advises her not to talk, but to refer reporters to her father.

CHAPTER III—Phil Sentry, son at Yale, disturbed at the possible implication of his father for three days during August, goes home to help Sentry in his arrest and to look for murder, and Dan Fisher explains the evidence against him—that the robbery was a favor he was asked to do by one who knew the combination, changed since Miss Wines' employment there—that a bank door key duplicated Sentry's, was found in the girl's purse, and that Sentry too had been away from home three days in August. Brace tells Sentry could have done it because of the discrepancy of time between the playing and their seeing Sentry.

CHAPTER IV—Phil, showing the police over his house, and his father, who has been in the jail, which only his father knew of, and Sentry, who has been in the jail, Mrs. Sentry sees her husband, who swears his innocence, and tells her he has been in the jail, but that he has been in the jail, and came home at 12:30. Both Phil and his mother are doubtful of Sentry's innocence, but keep silent, protecting each other, and especially Barbara.

CHAPTER V—Mary, taking it bitterly, quarrels with Jimmy Engle, the police, and Linda Dane, friend of Barbara and Phil's, who is coming to see Sentry, and the possibility that someone else might have done it all.

"Sure, sweetie, I love you too!" He kissed her, and she might have kissed Barbara, and she clung to him, and he said: "There! I've got you now. Mother and Barbara are alone."

"I'll walk back with you," she offered.

He chuckled. "That could go on all night," he pointed out; and she said triumphantly:

"There, you did smile. I knew you could. Good night, Phil."

He walked home straight and strong, thinking how sweet she was. Just a kid, no older than Barbara.

When he approached the house he saw a light still in his mother's bedroom; and upstairs he went quietly in to speak to her.

As he opened the bedroom door she signed to him for silence, and he saw Barbara asleep in his father's bed, her cheek tear-stained, her soft hair loose around her head, looking very young, like a child. He bent to whisper to his mother, and Mrs. Sentry said very softly: "Don't wake her. She's worn out."

"You're all right, are you?"

"She was so furious at Mary, and terrified, and desperate. I had a time with her. So I kept her here beside me. I've been waiting to hear you come upstairs."

"You've got a job on your hands, mother, taking care of Barb and me. I saw her eyes soft at his word, gratefully; and he thought how wise Linda had been. "Mind if I leave on down again?" he asked. "So I can call to you if I have bad dreams?"

"Of course not, Phil. Call me if you need me."

"I need you all the time, mother."

She held him close, her arms straining. She surrendered for a moment to her love for him; and she whispered: "Oh, Phil! Phil!"

And she said: "But Phil—we mustn't let Barbara know!"

Barbara stirred in her sleep, murmuring, and Mrs. Sentry released her son, and Phil tiptoed away.

She thought, alone in the darkness, if it had known how tonight, it might have helped Mary, might have saved her. And I must take care of Phil and Barbara. They're young, young! They need me so . . .

And she thought: I must be wise. She thought, like a prayer, with a humility new and strange to her: Oh, please, help me be wise!

CHAPTER VI

Mrs. Sentry knew in her heart that her husband was guilty. The fact that he had lied to her that night when she asked him what time it was might not in itself have been enough to convince her; but she had a deeper certainty. She remembered in retrospect so many circumstances, meaningless in themselves at the time, that now assumed a damning relevance. Any husband and wife whose days and nights for twenty-odd years are spent together do come to be akin; do come to do to one another that thoughts are shared. One speaks out of silence, of a certain thing; the other answers: "I was just about to say that myself. How strange!"

So, looking back, remembering the jewel on her birthday in September, remembering his constraint these last few weeks, remembering—as women will in moments of distress and hurt and anger—that wrong he had done her twenty years ago, she knew. He was a murderer.

And Mary knew; and made the more vulnerable by the very standards which had kept her head so high—the collapse of her life was complete. Defiantly, as a child which is hurt wishes to wound others in turn, she had cast herself away.

And Phil knew; and even Grandmother Sentry had refused to let her love for her son blind her to the probability of his guilt. Thus of those who had been closest to Mr. Sentry there was left only Barbara, enough a child to have a child's trust and to say despite the world's opinion: "No. He did not do it. No!"

She had seen him come home before the hour when Miss Wines was assumed to have been killed. On this peg she hung her loyal faith.

It was Dean Hare who, without intention, shook her. He came to the house next morning to consult Mrs. Sentry about plans for Mr. Sentry's defense.

"You know, of course," he said, "that the Grand Jury voted an indictment? We had to expect that."

"So there will be a trial?"

"Yes."

"How soon?"

"Well, the State will want time to prepare its case. He looked at her hesitatingly. "I want to talk to you about a lawyer," he said. "I thought of Mr. Crowninshield. He's an able trial lawyer, but he has never handled criminal cases. Nevertheless, if we could have had him—"

She asked: "You won't be able to do it yourself?" There was no objection in her tones; only regret. "I had hoped you might. You were Arthur's—"

She checked the verb, "You are Arthur's friend."

"That wouldn't be fair to him," he said. "I do very little trial work. Ellen, and no criminal work at all. You'll want a good trial lawyer, a good criminal lawyer."

"Will you speak to Mr. Crowninshield?"

He coughed. "I'm sorry. I have done so. He is too busy to take the case."

For a moment, silent, she thought: Mr. Crowninshield made excuses, but really he refused because he thinks Arthur is guilty. Probably he told Dean so, and Dean is sorry for me, trying to spare me; pitying me. Strange, to be pitied; I never needed pity before. I will not be pitied! Let me speak strongly . . .

And her tones were steady, almost casual, as she asked, naming other lawyers among their friends: "Who, then? Mr. Davenport? Mr. Reese?" She knew them both—able, respected men.

"Oh, they don't do trial work. Not in criminal cases. He's an able trial lawyer, but he has never handled criminal cases. Nevertheless, if we could have had him—"

"I thought of Falkner. He's a good jury lawyer."

"I don't think I ever heard of him," she suggested with a cold politeness. "Isn't there some one of our friends?"

He said slowly: "Well, criminal law is a field by itself, I'm afraid. But Falkner has been successful in that field. And he proposed, 'Suppose I bring him to see you.'"

"Very well, do," she assented, thinking: The man is probably a shyster of the worst type, but Dean would not recommend him if there were any better way. If Mr. Falkner will only believe in Arthur's innocence, I can accept him. Even if I don't like him. If he will save Arthur . . .

She heard steps on the stairs, and Barbara came in, hesitant for a moment, then valourously cheerful.

"Oh, hello, Mr. Hare! she said. "I didn't know you were here. How's father?"

"He sent a lot of messages to you all."

"When can I see him?"

"Soon, now. He'll be in more comfortable quarters."

"Why?" she asked, puzzled.

"They'll move him to the County Jail," Mr. Hare explained.

"Oh! Her color faded, and she confessed, "I thought for a moment you meant he was coming home."

Mrs. Sentry said: "Not right away, Barbara. You see, he's been indicted."

"I know," she assented. She appealed to Mr. Hare. "Does that mean he has to be tried?"

"Unless the District Attorney not presses the case."

Her eyes lighted, her tone quickened. "The District Attorney? Mr. Flood? Does that mean he can let father go?"

Hare shook his head. "He can't do that, Barbara, unless he's sure your father is innocent."

"But father is!" she cried. "And Mr. Flood knows it! I told him! You see, I saw father come home that night, just before one o'clock, and Miss Wines wasn't killed till after one."

Dean Hare looked quickly at Mrs. Sentry, remembering that she had told him Arthur was at home at quarter past eleven. She shook her head, warning him to silence, because, seeing him to protect Barbara's faith in her father, and saw his pupils dilate, and thought: His knees wobble, that I know. And she closed her eyes so that he might not read them.

Then Barbara asked insistently, "Isn't that so?"

Hare said reluctantly: "Well, as a matter of fact, Barbara, they're not sure about the time. There's some evidence which suggests that she may have been shot earlier."

Barbara paled; but then she protested, "Just the same, Mr. Flood's a friend of father's!"

"He must do his duty."

Barbara cried desperately, "Well, I don't care!" Her voice broke. "I want my father to come home!"

Dean Hare rose. "I must go," he said, hurriedly. "I'll bring Mr. Falkner to see you, then."

Mrs. Sentry went with him to the door, leaving Barbara alone in the living-room; and Phil came down the stairs as they stood in the hall, and Mrs. Sentry said: "Go to Barbara, Phil." He obeyed her; and when the door was closed behind Dean Hare, she stood with her shoulders against it, thinking in an inconsequent fashion, as though this somehow typified all the tragic confusion into which their lives had fallen, that now Arthur would be in the jail, and she did not even know where he was.

She wearily she turned back into the living-room. Whatever happened, the children needed her. She found Barbara sitting very still in a big chair there; and the girl's hands clasped the arms of the chair so hard that her knuckles were white. Phil was beside her, whispering some reassurance; but Barbara was like stone, and Phil looked at his mother appealingly, helplessly.

She tried to muster a tone of cheerful confidence. "Well," she said, "it's a relief to be doing something, planning something. Dean—"

Barbara said: "Mother! Are you going to let Mr. Hare be father's lawyer?"

Mrs. Sentry began, "There's a Mr. Falkner—"

But the girl cut in. "Because you mustn't! You mustn't, mother. Mr. Hare thinks father killed her. I know he does!"

Phil said gently: "Now don't be that way, Barb. You're just—strung up, and worried, and tired. Mr. Hare—nobody thinks that, Barbara. It's just what they call a prima facie case. They have to have a trial, but not even Mr. Flood—"

Barbara demanded: "Do you believe he did it, Phil?"

"Of course not!"

"Do you, mother?"

Mrs. Sentry even smiled. "Barbara! After all, I'm his wife, you know, don't you?"

"Don't be silly!"

Barbara came storming to her feet, shaking, trembling. She cried pitifully, "Mother, you don't do 'you' please!"

And Mrs. Sentry said, "Of course not, child!"

"Mary did! Or she wouldn't have run away!" Barbara cried pitifully. "Oh, tell me the truth, mother, Phil!"

And Phil said in a great voice: "Barb darling, we know he didn't do it. He couldn't! We all know that!"

Barbara held his eyes. "Then why haven't we all seen to see him, instead of just mother? He'll think we've deserted him."

Mrs. Sentry answered, "Mr. Hare advised—"

The girl cried furiously: "Mr. Hare! Well, I'm going to see father, right now! So he'll know that someone—"

But in the end she did not go. It was Phil who persuaded her to stay at home while he and Mrs. Sentry went, that afternoon. But she sent her father many messages.

Phil and Mrs. Sentry stayed not long with Mr. Sentry. Phil was shocked to see the change in his father. The older man's very voice was altered, was hoarse and hoarse as though from long disuse. And he said little, he thanked them almost humbly for coming; he said over and over, "Ellen, you know I didn't do it!"

And she said, "Of course, Arthur. And she told him Mr. Hare's proposal that Falkner be enlisted as defense counsel."

"He's a good defense lawyer," Mr. Sentry assented. And after that, there seemed no more to say. Mrs. Sentry was perfectly composed when she bade her husband goodbye; but when she and Phil had left the jail she trembled uncontrollably. A curious crowd stared at them as they came out, and Phil said, as they drove away, "You can wear a veil next time we come."

"I shall not wear a veil," she answered, fighting to forget Arthur, to forget how gray and lifeless the flesh on his cheeks had seemed, and how dull his eyes were. She must forget, so that she could be brave enough to come to him again.

At home, Barbara was waiting with questions. They told her he was fine; was cheerful, confident, and unafraid. They brought her back to comfort for a while.

Dean Hare, a day or two later, brought Falkner to see Mrs. Sentry and Phil. Phil was not at first favorably impressed. The lawyer was a big man, bald save for a fringe of red hair above his ears, with the wide, loose mouth of the natural orator; and Phil thought he studied the rugs and the furniture with a shrewd appraising eye, and he saw his mother visibly conquer her distaste for the man.

She asked, after introductions were done, "Are you familiar with my husband's case, Mr. Falkner?"

"I see the newspapers have convicted him?"

Her eyes hardened. "You think him guilty?"

Falkner, suddenly, smiled; and Phil at that smile felt a quick liking and trust for him. The lawyer said, "Mrs. Sentry, no man was ever electrocuted on a newspaper verdict."

Her eyes closed at that word, then opened again as he went on: "If I could have my choice," he said, "I should choose to defend men who have already been convicted in the newspapers. When everyone is convinced a man is guilty, the smallest grain of evidence in his favor has a tremendous effect in provoking doubt of his guilt." He added, "And from the practical point of view, such a situation makes it easier to disqualify jurors, easier to get the jury we want."

Mrs. Sentry had not surrendered her question. "You think him guilty?" she insisted.

"No man is guilty till a court has found him so, after a trial by due process, and till all appeals have failed."

"I asked whether you think my husband guilty?"

He smiled again. He said reasonably: "Mrs. Sentry, I haven't even talked with him. I don't know his side of the case at all. I only know the published facts. Mr. Hare has told me nothing. The evidence is damaging, difficult; but there are a thousand explanations that might meet the situation as it appears."

Phil saw that his mother too was being won to liking. She put her question in another way. "If you thought him guilty, would you defend him?"

Falkner smiled again. "Even a guilty man is entitled to his day in court, to a fair trial, to all the protection afforded by the law." Then he answered her directly: "Yes, Mrs. Sentry. Even if I knew Mr. Sentry guilty, I would defend him with all my powers."

Mrs. Sentry nodded, surrendered her point. "You said," she suggested, "that any one of a thousand explanations might cover all the evidence."

"An infinite number, yes."

"Have you anything in mind?"

"Mr. Sentry may suggest something." She started to speak; to tell him that Arthur had found the girl dead; then remembered Phil was here and caught herself.

Falkner went on: "You see, Mrs. Sentry, until I talk to your husband, remind him of small circumstances he has himself forgotten, I can make no plan."

They talked a further while; and Mrs. Sentry said at last that she would let him know her decision next day. She used the interval to consult Arthur's mother.

Old Mrs. Sentry said: "Falkner? Oh, yes. I've heard of him."

Mrs. Sentry explained: "I should have preferred one of our friends, of course; I hoped for a certain dignity! But Mr. Hare says we must have a good criminal lawyer, and he recommended Mr. Falkner."

The old woman said harshly: "Dignity! Ellen, sometimes you—"

Then she caught herself, spoke at most in apology. "Of course you'd prefer some fine name; but Falkner's a clever man. Arthur will need a good lawyer. Better take him."

So it was decided; but Mrs. Sentry thought, driving home: Even Arthur's mother knows. The whole world knows, I expect. All my friends know; all of them are feeling sorry for me. Oh, hateful!

And she thought again, desperately: Perhaps Mr. Falkner can persuade some woman to say she was Arthur's mistress, that he went to her that night. Pay her to say it, perhaps. No price would be too high, to save him!

And she reflected that by thinking this, she was admitting to herself her actual opinion of Mr. Falkner; and she felt a contamination of the spirit. She felt herself unclean. To be pitied by her friends, to seek the help of scoundrels . . .

Nevertheless, for all their sakes, if Arthur was to be saved, Mr. Falkner it must be.

The weeks that elapsed before Mr. Sentry could be brought to trial were long, but they were curiously empty; and Mrs. Sentry, used to activity, came in the end to accept this emptiness, to understand that their world would hereafter be thus constricted, whatever the outcome of the trial. It was not so much that her friends dropped away. Some did so; yet others, upon whom she had not counted, surprised her by their understanding loyalty.

But the larger world in which she had been active, all the organized benevolence in which she had taken a vigorous part, now—though with polite expressions of regret—nevertheless closed its doors against her. The resignations which she felt it her proud duty to offer were accepted. She hid as she could her fierce, resentful pain.

She missed Mary dreadfully; clung passionately to Barbara and Phil. Linda came often to the house, and Mrs. Sentry thought: Perhaps Linda will marry Phil, even after this. I had hoped Ann Waring . . .

The Warrings are so fine. But Linda is nice. He might do worse. And she thought: Barbara will marry, too. She's a child. After this is over, she will forget, as children do. I must be sure she marries well. Especially for a girl. Once I get Barbara married, I can rest, can surrender. For me there can never be a new beginning. I am, too old, old. And I can never face people again without knowing their thoughts; imagining their whisp-ers . . .

She would have nursed her hurts in solitude; but certain friends persisted in their friendliness. Mrs. Dane came often, quietly loyal, never insistent; and when Mrs. Sentry suggested, in the tone of one doing a conscious duty, that Linda might better stay away, Mrs. Dane said simply:

"She's very fond of Barbara and Phil. And so are we. We're glad to have her come to you."

And Mrs. Urban, Mrs. Sentry had always thought of Mrs. Urban as a mouse of a woman, with no mind of her own; yet she found in her now strength and loyal understanding. Of the others, Mrs. Furness invited Mrs. Sentry to luncheon, but she declined. I will not be made a show of, she promised herself; and Mrs. Harry Murr's persistent advances likewise she put aside.

There was one loss which hurt her keenly. She and Mrs. Waring had been closest friends; and the families were intimate. The two mothers had even discussed the possibility that Phil might marry Ann Waring. But a week after Mr. Sentry was indicted, Mrs. Waring took Ann away to Europe to school there. The decision was sudden; Mrs. Sentry knew it had not been planned in advance. And Mrs. Waring left without even a note to say good-by.

Mrs. Sentry never spoke of this hurt to anyone. In the same way she ceased to resent the curious groups of people who drove past the house in cars, and even alighted to pluck flowers or break down branches off the shrubbery for souvenirs. Only when one night some one dug up a young tree in the front yard and took it away did she accept District Attorney Flood's suggestion that a policeman stand guard in front of the house night and day.

For all these things, Mrs. Sentry found strength and courage; but one thing she could not face. She could not read the newspapers, or look at the paper. Since the first few days, reporters had been kind. Carl Settles had been of service in that respect. He had put through with the publishers of the other papers an agreement not to print photographs of Mrs. Sentry or Phil or Barbara, and to use their names as little as possible in news stories. When Mrs. Sentry thanked him, he said:

"I don't deserve all the credit. One of our reporters, a young man named Fisher, suggested it." Barbara was in the room and he looked at her, smiling a little, and explained: "He had met you, he said. I think he had you particularly in mind."

Barbara nodded. "Yes, I like him," she agreed. "We've seen each other since, once or twice."

Mrs. Sentry protested, "See him, Barbara? Where?"

"In town," Barbara confessed. "He has tea with grandmother and me sometimes. It's perfectly proper, mother. Grandmother likes him."

"But a reporter, Barbara!"

Carl Bettie chuckled. "Whoa, there, Mrs. Sentry!" he protested. "Reporters aren't so bad, nowadays. You're prejudiced!"

"I'm prejudiced against any young man who meets my daughter secretly!"

Barbara cried: "Oh, now, mother, that's silly! It's not secret, with grandmother there; but even if it was—"

Mrs. Sentry said, yielding: "Of course, dear. I'm afraid it really is prejudice. Ask him to have tea here too, Barbara, if you wish."

"I'm at grandmother's now more than I'm at home," Barbara reminded her; and this was in fact true. Old Mrs. Sentry had since her son's arrest surrendered to physical immobility. Her mind was as keen, her tongue as sharp as ever; but she stayed in her room at the hotel where she lived, had her meals served there, even submitted to an indignity she had long declined, and hired a companion who was also nurse and masseuse.

And Phil had used the old woman's helplessness to disguise her father. "You and I have to make it as easy as we can for mother, Barb," he pointed out. "And mother can't be with father and with grandmother too, and she can't go to the jail without me, so grandmother's your job! Don't you see?"

So Barbara yielded—Phil thought she yielded very easily—and spent much time with her grandmother; and old Mrs. Sentry, by degrees, forgot to use toward her that tone of sharp disapproval which had so long been hers during these weeks some-thing deeply and justly apprehensive about Barbara. She was thin; her eyes seemed larger; her color had faded; she looked at people eagerly, anxiously, as though hoping someone would say—what no one ever did say. And Grandmother Sentry was very gentle toward her, warned Mrs. Sentry once:

"That child is ready to crack. Ellen. Look out for her."

Mrs. Sentry nodded. "I do all I can!"

Grandmother Sentry sought in her own way to serve; she welcomed Barbara; and welcomed Professor Brace, or Dan Fisher, when one or the other came with Barbara to be with her.

The old woman did not like Professor Brace, and she told Barbara so. "He's a Middle-Westerner, of course, but he's a rank Puritan at heart, Barbara. Believes in the mortification of the flesh or something of the kind. Believes in duty. The wrong kind. If he were a Spartan he'd nurse a gnawing fox to his bosom. Any man with sense knows that you ought to dodge suffering when you can. He's the 'grin and bear it' type."

"He's been sort of nice," Barbara argued. "Standing by."

"I know. The boy stood on the burning deck! Anyone but a fool would die overboard!"

"Whence all but him had fled," Barbara reminded her. "But there are a lot of us still on the burning deck, grandmother. And he doesn't have to stay. He's just doing it to be friendly."

"Like him, do you, child?"

"It's sort of nice to have friends."

The old woman saw in the girl's eyes a secret terror, a mounting fear she had seen there before; and she was silenced. Whenever they spoke of Mr. Sentry, and Barbara cried: "He didn't do it, grandmother!" old Mrs. Sentry always assented, always spoke quick reassurances. Barbara was grown so pitifully frail . . .

One day when Professor Brace was to meet Barbara here for tea, and arrived before the girl, the old woman spoke to him of Barbara's condition, said stoutly: "I wish someone would marry her and take her away from here! She can't stand much more. She hasn't the strength to go through all this. She shouldn't have to do it!"

He dissented gently. "People can't shirk such things, Barbara's sister did, I know; but she will accept our burdens, our responsibilities. Face them squarely."

She said grimly: "Maybe! No doubt you are a level-headed young man, but I suspect you're too level-headed for your own good!"

He smiled tolerantly. "I'm sorry," he said. "But—dear as Barbara has come to be to me—I can't advise her to dodge or to evade."

"Dear to you, is she?"

"Very."

"Then marry her," the old woman counseled. "Sweep her off her feet. Marry her and take care of her."

He said gravely: "I hope to, some day. But if I asked her now, she might come to me just to escape. I want her to come to me because she wants me."

"Fiddlesticks! If you want her, take her, on any terms at all."

He shook his head. "I shall have to be a witness at the trial, you know," he confessed. "The District Attorney has warned me to be ready. Barbara need not know yet; but if we were married, and then I testified, she would blame me, never forgive me."

"Get out of the reach of a subpoena while you can."

"I can't do that. I've given my word!"

"Pah! If you've the courage of a—"

But Barbara arrived, putting a period to their words; and after that Mrs. Sentry did not attempt him again.

She found Dan Fisher more to her taste. Between these two something came to her often, even when Barbara was not there. Once he came dispirited, and she saw this and demanded, "What are you so down in the mouth about?"

He grinned. "Been barking down a rat hole," he confessed; "and the rat wasn't at home."

"Talk sense!"

He hesitated. "Well, Linda Dane and I have been putting our heads together, trying to see some way out of this. I thought we had a lead. Old Mr. Wines, the dead girl's father, told me that in her letters home the girl spoke of a man's having asked her to dinner. I started to check on him."

"Who was it?"

"I can't very well—"

"Nonsense! I can keep my mouth shut when I choose."

"Well, it was Mr. Loran," she nodded. "He's an old goat," she agreed. "He never would have married that Endeavor woman otherwise. Go on. What about him?"

Dan Fisher said: "The thing looked possible at first. I found that Mr. Loran was away in August, at the same time Miss Wines was away. But that blew up. Two ways. It turned out that Loran was in Maine. I've talked with his guide. He has a camp on a lake up there. Files up, flies his own plane. He was there."

He added: "And just to make sure, I checked on him for the night she was killed. We know what time she went to Mr. Sentry's office. Mr. Loran boarded a New York train about the same time."

And he said: "And just to make sure, I checked on him for the night she was killed. We know what time she went to Mr. Sentry's office. Mr. Loran boarded a New York train about the same time."

And he said: "And just to make sure, I checked on him for the night she was killed. We know what time she went to Mr. Sentry's office. Mr. Loran boarded a New York train about the same time."

WAY BACK WHEN

BETTE DAVIS WAS AN USHERETTE

LIFE has a strange way, some times, of repeating a circumstance from our previous struggles, as if to remind us that what may have once seemed a difficult trial was actually preparation for a later triumph. I am thinking, particularly, of Bette Davis and the marvelous performance she gave as the waitress, Mildred, in "Of Human Bondage."

Bette Davis was born in Lowell, Mass., in 1908. Her mother had only a small alimony with which to support Bette and her sister, so she became a professional photographer. After attending the Mary Arden school of Peterboro, N. H., Bette went to Cushing academy of Boston. There, she waited on tables to earn her tuition. To the sixteen-year-old little girl, whose dramatic ambitions made her super-sensitive to her role in life, her occupation as waitress was humiliating in contrast to the advantages enjoyed by her fellow students. Miserable though her school days were, that occupation was to be the role of one of her greatest triumphs. Would Bette Davis have played such a convincing "Mildred" if circumstances had never forced her to be a waitress at school?

Recognition came to Bette Davis soon after school. She had always wanted to be an actress and her mother encouraged her, although her father thought she should take a business course in New York and prepare to be a stenographer. She attended a dramatic school in New York instead, and then obtained a job as an usherette in the Cape Playhouse of Cape Cod, Mass. Finally she was given a small part, and rose rapidly in the theater, going on to Hollywood where she rose to stellar heights in "Of Human Bondage." For her performance in "Dangerous" she received the Motion Picture award in 1935.

Naming of New York's Towns Many of New York's romantically named towns, such as Troy, Catskill, Niles, Carthage, are the inspiration of a deputy secretary of state in 1790.

Geranium Known as Herb Geranium in its wild state was known as an herb. It is supposed to commemorate the deeds of Robin Hood and still more believes that it commemorates Saint Robert, the founder of the Cistercian order. Robert was supposed to have cured Ruprecht's plague. One of the earliest versions of the geranium was that Mahomet washed his shirt one day and hung it out to dry on a lavender mallow. When the moisture evaporated the plant changed to a geranium.
