Wilkinson Writes of 'Phone Development

In connection with the celebration of the 60th anniversary of telephone service in Michigan, which is being observed by the Michigan Bell Telephone Company, A. W. Wilkinson has written an article which tells of pioneer telephone service in Chelsea. The article, which is of special interest to the "old-timers" of the community, follows:

The forebear of the Michigan State Telephone Co. was induced to enter Chelsea about 1882, as I remember, or perhaps 1883, through the efforts of George P. Glazier. He induced the business men to buy coupon books containing coupons to pay for toll service and in five, ten and twenty-five dollar size. The purpose was to get enough money in advance to erect the line between Dexter and Chelsea. The office over the Glazier drug store was a toll station pure and simple. You went up the stairs, had operator call party you wanted by name and then a messenger would be sent out to locate party and bring them to central station.

The telephone station remained here until 1897 or 1898 and then moved over the Kempf bank. There was only one operator and the office was closed at night, or at any time operator was away. However, after hours the switchboard was connected with the office of Dr. Smith.

The operators between 1882 and 1902, at which time toll lines were taken over by Chelsea Telephone Co., were, first, Hattie Robbins, then Mina Geddes and Fannie Warner, Miss Warner being the operator when offices were merged.

The Bell had never catered for local subscribers in Chelsea and only had twelve or fourteen local subscribers as late as 1900 when local business was turned into the Chelsea Telephone Co.

In fact local service was not demanded by small villages that could sling the local dirt over the back fence. The demand came from the farmers who were the great developers of the telephone system. First through local connections among themselves on party-built lines without any station—just between a few neighbors. They then began to want to be connected with outside and that created a universal demand to local subscribers to connect with toll stations.

Pierces Celebrate 50th Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Pierces were pleasantly surprised Monday evening when fifty relatives and friends gathered at their home in Lima township in celebration of their golden wedding.

Program was rendered as follows: Greetings—An original poem by Mina Wiseman. Song—Long Ago—Assembly. Neighbors—Viola Lindow. Piano solo—Playmates—Joan Pierces. Reading—Fifty Years Ago—Fred Kennard. Reading—Mother Tells Her Story to the Children—Maie Prudden. Reading—The Golden Wedding—Herman Pierces. Reminiscences—Nova Prudden. Memories—Laura Eisenmann. Song—Put on Your Old Grey Bonnet—Assembly.

Mr. and Mrs. Pierces were presented with a lovely bouquet of mums in a yellow pottery vase. They also received many beautiful flowers and greeting cards during the day. Cards and visiting furnished further entertainment for the evening and a beautiful lunch was served, a feature of which was a white and gold cake presented by the children.

WARNING!
With the village literally buried in leaves, authorities wish to remind residents that it is unlawful to burn leaves on the surfaced streets, as the heat causes serious damage to the blacktop surfacing. Residents who do not have any place on their lots to burn the leaves are asked to take them down if they are dry, and they will be hauled away in trucks furnished by the village. It is asked that the leaves be kept inside the curb as large piles of them are a traffic hazard.

Amendments Which Will Be Submitted on Nov. 8th Explained

(By Gene Alleman)

Lansing—While the Murphy-Fitzgerald gubernatorial battle occupies the main ring of the political circus, Michigan voters cannot afford to overlook the sideshows. There are four in number—each featuring an amendment to the state constitution and proposing far-reaching change in state or local government.

Amid all the hullabaloo over the stars in the main tent, the average citizen may forget to consider the importance of the constitutional amendments. Yet, along with the big ballot on Nov. 8, he will have the opportunity to say yes or no to four revisions to our state charter. A special ballot is being printed for this purpose.

Four-Year Terms

The first amendment, in order of their appearance on the special ballot, would provide a four-year term for certain county officers who now serve two years.

These officers are: County clerk, prosecuting attorney, sheriff, treasurer and register of deeds.

The amendment permits the board of supervisors to unite the offices of county clerk and register of deeds in one office or to separate them.

The change would become effective January 1, 1939.

Appointive Court

The second amendment concerns whether justices of the Michigan Supreme court should be chosen according to the wishes of political leaders or should be taken "out of politics" (Continued on next page)

Chelsea Eleven Still Undefeated in League

Chelsea High's powerful football eleven stayed undefeated in Huron League competition Friday by downing the Tecumseh Indians, 29-0.

Chelsea took an early lead by blocking an Indian punt that rolled behind their end zone. The local boys tallied two touchdowns and one point after in the first quarter by successive line backs by Fullback Rabley and a 15-yard off-tackle run by Paul Schneider, who also place-kicked the extra point.

The local lads scored again in the second quarter by virtue of a ten-yard smash by Rabley over his own left guard. Schneider again kicked the extra point, with Captain Strieter holding the ball. The score at the half was Chelsea 22, Tecumseh 0.

Chelsea came back with new life and scored again in the third quarter by a 15-yard pass from Schneider to Bahmiller, who ran 15 yards for the score. Schneider again kicked the extra point.

Tecumseh opened up in the final quarter and reached the Chelsea two-foot line. Frank Novas then intercepted a pass and was downed near his own goal as the game ended.

Chelsea has not been scored on this season as they held the League champion Dundee team to a scoreless tie.

The local team has four home games and they would appreciate the support of the entire community. A Senior refreshment stand will be open at all home games.

STREETS WILL BE MARKED

As the result of action taken by the common council recently the village will soon have up-to-the-minute street markings at all intersections. Steel posts will be set and wooden plates bearing the name of both streets at the intersection will be mounted on the post. The equipment and name plates have been ordered and it is hoped the new signs will be in place by Nov. 1. (It has been suggested by some that a campaign be started for the numbering of all houses in the village, which would really complete the job of identification of houses so far as streets and numbers are concerned.)

VILLAGE WIDENS STREET

A real improvement has been made by village authorities to the street adjacent to the public school athletic field. The street has been widened so that diagonal parking is possible on the north as well as the south side of the road, thus providing parking space for many more cars near the entrance to the field.

YOUNG REPUBLICANS DANCE

The Washtenaw County Federation of Young Republicans have completed plans for their annual Halloween dance to be held at Marnie's Inn, Pleasant Lake, next Wednesday evening, Oct. 26. A full evening of entertainment is arranged. Dancing is to start at 9 o'clock and during the evening a buffet lunch will be served.

DEMOCRATS SPONSOR DANCE

The Young Democratic club of Washtenaw county will be hosts at a district dance to be held at Huron Hills Country club on Friday evening, October 21, from 9 to 12. The public is invited to attend.

FARMERS' CLUB WILL MEET

The Western Washtenaw Farmers' club will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. I. Plankell on Friday evening, October 21. Program: Songs; Roll Call; "Where did you spend your vacation?" Moving pictures.

1939 AAA Officers Elected for County

Delegates from 18 communities in Washtenaw county met recently in Ann Arbor and elected the County Agricultural Conservation Committee for 1939. Fred Blumhardt of Bridgewater township was re-elected chairman; Emory L. Mulholland of Superior township was elected vice-chairman; Leo J. Heatley of Dexter township was elected third member, and Clayton H. Parr of Manchester township and William C. Pritchard of Sylvan township were elected alternate members.

After the election the county committee selected Harry M. Cole of Lodi township for its secretary-treasurer.

At community election meetings, community committees similar to the county committees were elected. In Sylvan and nearby townships these committees are:

Sylvan—Chairman, Wm. C. Pritchard; vice-chairman, Walter D. Wolfgang; third member, Reuben Lesser. Lima—Chairman, Fred Barth; vice-chairman, Arthur Koenigter; third member, Ralph Stoffer. Lyndon—Chairman, Max M. Kalmloch; vice-chairman, Homer Stoffer; third member, Guy A. Barton.

Freedom—Chairman, Wm. Uphaus; vice-chairman, Alfred H. Kuhl; third member, Gottlieb F. Horning.

Sharon—Chairman, Gottlieb Jacob; vice-chairman, Raymond C. Jacob; third member, Herman Kulenkamp.

The purpose and duty of the county and community committees is to cooperate with and assist the Secretary of Agriculture in the administration of the Agricultural Adjustment Act and other acts included in the national farm program.

All farmers who have participated in the 1938 Agricultural Conservation Program of those who plan to participate in 1939 were eligible to vote in the community elections. Those members elected committeemen for 1939 took office immediately upon being elected.

According to Mr. Cole, 3748 farms have been checked and the census of crops completed, and about 125 scattering farms in the county are yet to be completed by the farm reporters.

About 160 farms will have to be rechecked for additional soil building practices. These soil building practices have been performed and completed since the farm reporter first started the checking of performance under the Agricultural Conservation program.

Mr. Cole is again asking farmers to see that their receipts and certifications for sweet clover, red clover, alfalfa, and lime are sent to the county office.

Gov. Murphy to Speak in A. A. on Monday

Governor Frank Murphy will be guest of honor and principal speaker at a public luncheon which will be held at 12:00 o'clock Monday, October 24 at the Masonic Temple in Ann Arbor.

Following the luncheon, Governor Murphy and other state candidates will address the audience in the large auditorium of the Temple. This meeting is open to the public.

In addition to Governor Murphy, other nominees to speak will be Lieutenant Governor Leo J. Nowicki, Attorney General Raymond Starr, Secretary of State Leon Case, State Treasurer Theodore I. Fry, and Auditor General George T. Gundry. Senator Prentiss Brown also may be able to attend. Walter C. Averill, Democratic candidate for Congress, will be with the Governor's party and accompany them to Jackson and Adrian.

A nominal fee will be assessed. Approximately 600 people can be accommodated for the luncheon, Masonic Temple officials stated.

lame and couldn't climb the stairs, C. J. Snyder the union king, and five or six others. The interior of the boxes furnished the subscribers were all the same but some, instead of being on the wall, ran clear to the floor and were larger. There was an extra charge for the large ones and most every subscriber had a different rate. The books showed about four rates—business, house, little box and big box. The telephone business is a natural monopoly and has to be a monopoly or an intolerable nuisance. And in this way the Bell is a monopoly but in its dealings with other companies or combinations has never been monopolistic in character and in the local situation was always more than fair. As a very small toad in a big puddle I came in contact with the officers of the Michigan Bell Telephone Co. as secretary of the Chelsea Telephone Co. and was always used better than I deserved and granted all favors asked.

In 1896 there were several farm-independent lines centering in Waterloo where Lynn L. Gorton had a station, and to get access to Chelsea for those lines and connection between the merchants of Chelsea and Waterloo patrons, the Chelsea Telephone Company was born.

We started in with about 14 subscribers and the directory was printed on a 4x6 card and had to use large print for the names to fill that space. Outside of one or two subscribers to Bell we had their subscribers, two phones being installed. Ours was a purely gossip line as we had no way to get out of town except, of course, Waterloo.

The exchange was in the Standard office basement, corner of Main and South St. We had no operator, the switchboard being taken care of by the help. When they would get tired of it we would give them a share of stock and after they got fed up and we accumulated a few more subscribers we moved the office upstairs and a young lawyer, Nelson Freer, and his wife took care of the switchboard for rent of room he used for his office. Lynn L. Gorton was president, I was secretary, and his father treasurer. O. P. Hoover was the other member of the board of directors.

No one got any pay for their work, physical or mental, for did they ever, and the gross income of the company at this time was under two hundred dollars a year but finally reached the sum of perhaps five hundred before we sold out to the Michigan Bell in 1904.

An independent company called the New State had started in Detroit in opposition to the Bell and they had a local toll station in Chelsea. To get into connection with the entire world or at least the very small part of which they had subscribers in, and in accordance with the statute made and provided, we connected with them, giving them their entire toll charges and making the collections and going good for all toll calls sent in through our office. All this we furnished to take care of our subscribers, then amounting to perhaps 25 or 30. But when the farmers begged to build lines with 12 or 14 on a line and then wanted free connection because they furnished so many customers for our merchants, that was a little too much. The brain staggered. There were independent companies, the Unadilla, the Lyndilla, the James Gorman, etc.

They were independent companies and rightly named, for believe you me they were independent. The situation was intolerable as we had a great deal of money invested, maybe as much as six hundred dollars besides what Lynn had been able to borrow of the farmers around Waterloo, maybe another two hundred. But about this time the sun came out and shone like a good deed in a naughty world about 1900. I got a letter from a gentleman named Pattengill (the present president of the Michigan Bell was then his secretary and could sign his name better than Pattengill himself) asking me to come to Detroit.

No one in the general offices of the Bell had heard of Pattengill, but getting to the general manager's office I located Mr. P. in an adjoining room. He had a stack of about forty contracts before him, one of which he presented to me. It was a contract between Chelsea Telephone Co. and Michigan State Bell. It provided for us to take over the local exchange, handle the local subscribers, do the exchange work and gave us a percentage of amount collected on toll business. We of course to be responsible for all toll charges outgoing. It was fine except that it provided that we should rent of them the telephone sets used by our subscribers and throw out our bootlegging boxes. Inasmuch as this rental would just about eat up our share of the tolls I could not use the contract. I told Mr. P. it was a fine contract but I was not a telephone man. He says, what have you got up there? I says a very large investment, maybe about $700. I says however don't pay up the new State, they have nothing to offer. (They did though, and afterwards reorganized).

He followed me clear through the office of the general manager and said, what do you do up at Chelsea anyway? The general manager says I know.

Mr. P. looked just like J. P. Morgan the elder, and as he treated me as an equal I felt just as big as Vail afterward (the head of American Tel. & Tel. Co.).

In a few days a gentleman by the name of Watson dropped into my office with the same contract. He was good. We sat down over the table to see (as we both wanted to do the same thing) what we could work out. I could get free exchange as far as tolls were concerned between Chelsea and our daddy company at the City of Waterloo but when it came to that monthly rental for the Blake transmitter boxes, that was a sticker. (They were still fighting for the patent, Beringer sausage case).

Our boxes were all bootlegged without any names on them of manufacturers. I finally said I would sign up for the rental if he would let me insert a little rider. He said, what is it? I said that rentals shall not be operative until the list of Chelsea subscribers exceeds 200. (Before that time arrived we had sold out to the Michigan Bell). The contract was signed by Mr. Pattengill on one side and Archie Wilkinson on the other. It was a little too big for the ordinary officers of either company.

This contract stayed in force without a disagreement until we finally sold out to the Michigan Bell four years later but it provided that whenever we attached to their poles or they to ours there should be a monthly rental of five cents. Inasmuch as they had about all the poles in town and they had no use for our poles, such as they were, the money would go their way. They had some system of counting up. We did not. So every time I would go to Mr. Lands, the general manager's office in Detroit, their auditor or treasurer would come in with an unpaid statement of this and the follow-up bill for slight error made in toll business after accounts were sent us and paid every month. We never did pay these charges and Land took a childish delight in seeing me bluff his treasurer or auditor. I was always too busy with important questions with Land to even consider the account. Mr. Land had his troubles in those days and I suppose liked to see his associates suffer.

The next day after signing of the contract they brought their local office over to our exchange and sent Mr. Saunders, their chief engineer, up to cable over their lines. We had a pole, with cross arms built out making a log cabin, just outside of the window on Park street.

The individual wires from every subscriber were attached to this work of construction and running right in to the switchboard—from subscriber to switchboard. When Saunders saw this pole all work ceased until he had a photograph of it. They ran this photo in the Telephone magazines for twenty years. Some of my friends sent me copies as late as 1923. It was a monument to what local Bells could do.

In 1904 the business, although mutually satisfactory, got too big for us and we sold out to the Michigan Bell Telephone Co. They did not force us to sell. They would have let us have the local business forever. We were the movers in the transaction and they wanted to do anything we wanted to do. Mr. Land, who was then general manager, came up to Chelsea to look over our plant and wished to get a team and drive around. I said no, it would be no effort to walk around. We could take it in without getting too tired. He said as we took in the town, "I wish I could stay all ways. You are rich." I guess he was right. Afterward I twice came in contact with G. M. Welch, now president of the company, and then general manager, and found him more than fair and always ready to come two-thirds of the way. But that's another story.

As I said at the commencement of this local history, the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. are, in the nature of things, natural monopolies. They have to be to give efficient service. They have to have rules, sometimes under some conditions exasperating, but if all monopolies were as fair to competitors or those with adverse interests as the Michigan Bell this would not be a bad country in which to live.

by an appointive system whereby the governor would select the justices from names submitted to him by a special judiciary commission created on non-partisan lines.

Advocated by leading members of the Michigan bar, this reform has incurred the hostility of certain political figures who are now influential in the selection of nominees for the state supreme court.

It has been the practice in the past for certain legal firms, particularly those representing important corporations, to contribute substantial sums to party campaign funds. The appointive court, however, would remove them from possible influence through campaign contributions. The rank-and-file of lawyers are said to favor the appointive court idea.

Both Governor Murphy and Frank Fitzgerald are said to have personally endorsed the idea. To this extent it is non-partisan.

Judiciary Commission
 The special judiciary commission, which would pick the candidates and submit their choices to the governor, would comprise one supreme court justice, one circuit court judge, one probate court judge, three members of the state bar and three electors of the state not licensed to practice law.

It is assumed that the commission will function along non-partisan lines, and that hence the nominees will represent both the majority and minority party (depending who wins Nov. 8 and thereafter).

Under this setup, attorneys believe that the supreme court would not become top-heavy in membership from any one major party in Michigan. Interests of the minority party would be better served, they say, by such an appointive plan than by taking chances at the ballot box.

Against this theory is the known stand of such democrat leaders, as Senator Prentiss Brown who condemned the proposal. It is said that Brown's reaction to the amendment was somewhat as follows: "Why didn't you include the circuit court judges?" Sponsors explained that most of these now are republicans, whereas the supreme court personnel is rather evenly divided, politically speaking.

Gas-Tax Diversion
 Amendment No. 3 concerns possible diversion of gasoline and license plate tax revenue from the state highway fund.

If the amendment is approved, and a vigorous campaign is being waged in its behalf without organized opposition in sight, future legislators would be barred from dipping into this tax fund and using some of the money for other purposes.

Sponsoring the amendment is the Good Roads Federation of Michigan, an omnibus organization including tourist boosters, farm units, chamber of commerce officials, and road contractors and builders. Yelling loudly for the amendment is the tourist crowd who point out that the tourist business is No. 2 in importance to Michigan and that the annual volume of some 300 million dollars is dependent to a large extent upon good roads.

Gov. Murphy and Frank Fitzgerald have promised support to this amendment, thus removing it from political eddies.

Welfare Amendment
 Amendment No. 4 is the welfare re-organization act, passed by the state legislature but held up pending popular referendum Nov. 8. County supervisors are lined up against the act, while the Michigan Municipal League is for it.

Silo Idea Ancient
 The Romans had the idea of enclosing forage, and there is some evidence that allage was put up 2,000 years ago in what is now France. The modern silo seems to date from 1850, when August Gouffart, in France, began working with the idea. About 1875 he published the result of his experiments and was awarded the cross of the legion of honor.

CHILDREN IN COURT

Judge Malcolm Hatfield
 Don't Get Caught
 Today, many people in the United States are practicing, before their children, a code of ethics which teaches that a man can go to any extreme just as long as he isn't caught. Successful persons frequently boast that laws are made to be violated, and that they employ attorneys to find loop-holes and technicalities in the law to make them immune to conviction. This is widely evidenced, for instance, by the manipulations used by unscrupulous citizens to evade payment of income and inheritance taxes.

Not so long ago a wealthy man, who was noted for his ability to discover technicalities in the law, was forced to see his son serve a prison term on a manslaughter charge. His father's constant boasting led the young man to implicitly believe that he could get by with anything as long as the family could employ attorneys to protect him.

Mortimer, Latin-French Name
 The name Mortimer is of Latin-French origin and means "dweller by the still water" (or literally "dead sea"). As a surname it has been prominent in English history, being the family name of the earl of March, who became Edward IV.

Few Types of Poisonous Snakes
 There are only four types of poisonous snakes in the United States, the rattlesnake and its close relatives, the water moccasin and the copperhead and the harlequin or coral snake. There are a number of species of rattlesnake.

The Hi-Light

Edited By The PUPILS OF THE CHELSEA PUBLIC SCHOOL

Night School

I'm sure all the students enjoyed the change from day school. Many of us made mistakes in class that we wouldn't have made otherwise.

The parents were invited to go to the classes and we sincerely thank them for their cooperation and hope they enjoyed visiting our school half as much as we enjoyed having them. All we can say is, thank you, and come again.

After Friday evening classes a short program was presented before the audience. It consisted of the Band, and Girls' Glee club. It was opened by Mr. Johnson, who announced the program. A number entitled "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" was sung by the Glee club. The Band immediately followed with March R. M. B. Merryman, and El Capitán which closed the evening's program.

Editorial

Webster defines "merchant" as "one engaged in trade". The merchants of Chelsea are, of course, "engaged in trade" but they contribute much more than some of us realize to the welfare of the community. At any time when students are soliciting selling tickets, etc., the business men are among the first and most generous contributors.

Their cooperation with the school and especially with the Senior class in promoting its numerous ventures is greatly appreciated.

It is felt that all organizations, scholastic and non-scholastic, will join in visiting the merchants of Chelsea.

Organize Hi-Y Club

On Wednesday evening, October 12 a group of boys from the three upper classes organized themselves into a Hi-Y club. The business meeting consisted of a discussion of the meaning of Hi-Y and the outlining of a tentative program characteristic of the Y work. Officers were elected and the balance of the evening was spent in the gym, playing indoor ball and "bug in a rug." Anyone wanting information about the "bug" in the rug should consult Frank Novess. Light refreshments brought the evening to a close.

The new school club will be associated with the State and National Hi-Y movement and join forces with the many Hi-Y clubs in Michigan for the purpose of carrying out a program of varied activities of interest to boys. The weekly meetings of business and discussion of timely topics will be held during the activity period on Thursdays. There are two official publications for the club. One, "The Michigan Hi-Y News", published by the State Young Men's Christian Association, and the other, "National Hi-Y Ways", published by the National Organization of Hi-Y. These discussions of interest to the club papers contain program materials and members. Last week the school was visited by C. M. Drury and Bruce Tallman, Associate State Secretaries of the Y. M. C. A. These men act as advisors in the work and will visit the local club several times during the year, and keep the boys informed on the activities of the Y.

Officers for the local club are: Maynard Oesterle, president; Richard Riemenschneider, vice-president and chairman of the program committee; Robert Roy, secretary; Frank Novess, treasurer; Wayne Van Orman, cook; and William Birch, assistant cook. The other charter members are Donald Alexander, Richard White, and Merle Barr. Additional members are to be received into the club this week. Some of the monthly evening meetings will include a Boy and Girl party, a Mother and Son banquet, a Father and Son banquet, fellowship meetings, and winter swims in one of the Ann Arbor pools. The boys are also making plans for leather-craft work in school and will promote other projects of interest. Most of the evening meetings will be characterized by a supper prepared by the cooks and a committee of boys from the club. These suppers will be followed by (dish washing), programs and games appropriate to the occasion.

One of the outstanding meetings of the year will be the 36th Annual State Older Boys' Conference at Grand Rapids, Michigan, November 18 and 19. It is planned that the officers and possibly some of the other members of the club attend this conference with Mr. Downing, principal of the high school, who will act as leader of the club. At this conference the boys will have the privilege of hearing such outstanding men as Dr. Frank Slutz of Dayton, Ohio; Dr. Samuel W. Graffen of White Plains, New York; and the nationally known song leader, George Campbell of Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Hi-Y is to be counted among the agencies in the community, aiming at character building. It should play an important part in the daily lives of these boys who become members and take an active part in the program for the year.

The purpose of the Hi-Y: "To create, maintain and extend throughout the school and community, high standards of Christian character" and its platform of "Clean speech, clean sports, clean scholarship, and clean living" are ideals worth the time and efforts of any boy as well as the cooperation of the school and the community.

Problem—If a piece of goods 8x12 inches cost $1 how much would a piece 4x6 of the same goods cost? (Answer elsewhere in this department.)
Ques.—What is the origin of the expression "feet of clay"?
Ans.—"Feet of clay" is figuratively applied to the earthly or baser part of human nature, and is founded on Biblical usage. In the 32nd and 33rd verses of the second chapter of the Book of Daniel these words in part: "This image's head was of fine gold, his breast and arms of silver, his feet part of iron and part of clay."

Ques.—Why are geographical maps made with north at the top and south at the bottom?

The Safety Man

What is the "Right-of-way?" Who has the "Right-of-way?" I will not attempt to answer these questions because conditions and circumstances are involved that make one answer inapplicable to all cases. However, the safest bet and the wisest course is to give the other fellow the right-of-way rather than argue or have an accident.
What does a delay of a few minutes mean compared to a safe journey? Why gamble on the possibility of a serious accident just for the satisfaction of having the right-of-way?
If you arrive at an intersection at about the same time another motorist does and he signifies his intention of crossing, let him, even though you know you have the right-of-way. It is much better to follow the safe course, and it leaves you in a better frame of mind.

It looks like Five Years from Now!

THE vast Buick factory is a grand place to visit, these days. Down the roaring aisles, throughout the sprawling bays there's a sense of great things happening. They're building something ultra, here at Buick, and they know it. It looks like five years from now, they'll say of this dazzling 1939 Buick, and they're not talking of appearance only. They're talking of "catwalk-cooling" that floods air under forced draft to ease the temperature of your engine. They're talking of BuCoil springing and the soft shock-smothering spirals that give you the true "full float" ride. They're talking of that Dynaflex great eight engine, instant with life and wringing good from every drop of fuel. They're talking of weight-balance and gravity-center that hold you to your line—of wheels that camber to let you take the curves more safely—of new visibility—up to 413 square inches more glass in SPECIAL and CENTURY models.

They're talking a thousand and one details of Buick that you'll never know, nor need to know but that to their schooled eyes spell a better built automobile. And they're thinking of now as they talk. For they know that no car sells spectacularly when it's merely up-to-date. They know that for big years a car has to be ahead—that a car which looks like the future means better times for today. You can see this car they're talking of at the nearest Buick showroom. When you do see it, think of what the men who built it are saying, not boastfully, but with quiet sureness. They know. And they're saying "Looks fine for '39!"

Local Community Fair Grows in Popularity

Chelesa's second annual Community Fair attracted large crowds to the public school gym last Friday and Saturday evenings, the ground floor and balcony of the gym being filled to capacity for the programs which were staged as added attractions to the Fair. The Fair was originated last year as a project of the local Kiwanis club, replacing the 4-H club events which had been sponsored for years by the Kiwanians.

Addition this year of the hobby and flower shows were of great interest. These were in the kindergarten room and every available space in that room was taken to provide a place for the exhibits.

Several business men of Chelsea displayed their goods and thus helped to make the fair a success.

The list of people winning prizes will be given in the next issue of The Standard. The list of contributors and exhibitors will also be given at that time.

The gym was not decorated in any particular manner, the displays being sufficient for this purpose. Exhibits of Smith-Hughes project members, 4-H club members, rural schools, individuals, etc. were neatly arranged on tables on the south side and ends of the hall, commercial displays being on the left side. Chairs were placed in the center of the gym to accommodate the crowds for the evening programs. The livestock and pet displays were in a tent at the south side of the school building.

The schedule of events was as follows:

Friday afternoon—Judging. Friday evening—Night school; concert by the school band and a number by the girls' chorus.

Saturday morning—Completion of judging. Saturday evening—Program: Ford Dixie Eight; humorous demonstration by J. Hays of Michigan State College; talk by Henry Schneider, president of Community Fair; financial report by John Fletcher, treasurer; radio given away as door prize by E. J. Claire & Son, won by a Sophomore, Doris Schneider.

The 1938 Fair was a big success in all departments, and the public's hearty support indicates that the Fair is on the way to continued improvement each year.

Large Number of Needy Receive Aid from State

According to figures released last week by the Auditor General, George T. Gundry, nearly two thousand afflicted children, unable to pay for hospitalization, received treatment in Michigan hospitals in September. Many of these patients were hospitalized at the University hospital at Ann Arbor.

The law provides that the Auditor General in cooperation with the Michigan Crippled Children Commission, shall establish a fair schedule of rates and fees to be paid by the state to hospitals and physicians for the care and treatment of crippled and afflicted children unable to pay for themselves.

The procedure followed by the parents of a child in need is, first, to make application to the judge of probate. From the probate judge, the report is sent to the Auditor General's Department with recommendations for commitment to a hospital.

Applications are daily received by Mr. Gundry's department where they are given careful consideration. However, inasmuch as the Auditor General's duties in this matter are strictly prescribed by law, his activities are confined to the routine of careful audit.

Because of the improved business conditions of the past few months, and the good outlook for the future, Mr. Gundry expects the demands for free hospitalization to decrease, although he says that "no deserving child, in need of medical care, and unable to pay, shall go without aid."

What Next?

How did you like the Hobby Show? Fine! Didn't you think so? Weren't you surprised to find there were so many people in Chelsea doing such interesting things? Can't you just imagine the fun those people had collecting and mounting butterflies? Think of the hours of pleasurable work spent on needle-work, making those miniature models, painting pictures, etc. And someone thought even canning a pleasure. Too bad we can't share some of these happy experiences. We can, and at the same time work toward a bigger and better Hobby Show next year. Why not organize in groups? I'm sure there are plenty of leaders available. Let's get together and rub elbows with the other fellows who enjoy doing things we like to do.

Here's the plan: Anyone interested in helping a group do something is able to do well himself fill out the "Leader" application blank and send it to the Hobby Committee. All those interested in spending some regular time doing one of many hundreds of things, a few of which were displayed at our first Hobby Show, fill out the other application blank and mail to committee. Maybe ways and means cannot be found to help everyone in his particular interest, but surely some things can be started. Below is a suggestion of a few of the things which might be started—but if you are interested in something not listed here include that, too—Sewing, stamp collecting, nature collecting, novelty collecting, weaving, basketry, knitting, wood-working, needle-work, etc. Let's get for a bigger and better Hobby Show next year! Recreation Committee (Hobbies) Mrs. P. G. Schaible, Ed. Eaton. Leader Application I would be glad to help a group in Name of work Name I would like to spend some regular time working at Name FARM UNION NEWS A directors' meeting was held at the home of Philip Seitz on Monday evening, Oct. 10. After the business meeting a social time was indulged in, the hostess serving refreshments. The next meeting will be held at Mrs. Chris. Schneider's on Monday, Oct. 24. Cards will be the diversion. A good time is promised for all and lunch will be served by the hostess. Boost your Farm Union and it will boost you. Don't forget the date—Oct. 24.

TACHEZ CLUB MEETS

The Tachez club was entertained at the home of Mrs. J. V. Burg on Thursday evening. Four tables of 600 were in play. Honors were awarded to Mrs. F. W. Merkel and Mrs. Albert Doll. Refreshments were served by the hostesses.

STUDY CLUB MEETING

A meeting of the Child Study club was held Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. B. I. Plankell. The program opened with solos by Barbara Schenk, "From the Land of the Sky Blue Waters" and "I Haven't Changed a Thing", playing her own accompaniment. Miss Pearl Haist, county health nurse, gave a talk on the work of the County Health Unit, touching on the advantages of having such an organization.

Miss Evelyn Sprague sang two numbers, "Hark, Hark, the Lark" and "Ave Marie", with Margaret Harper as accompanist. The program was in charge of Mrs. Charles Meserva, and was followed by a business meeting.

Convention reports will be given at the next meeting, which will be held on Oct. 25, with Mrs. A. W. Wilkinson as hostess.

Prospects of New Court House Killed Thursday

Any immediate prospect of a new court house was killed last Thursday when the Washtenaw County Board of Supervisors by a vote of 18 to 15, formally rejected an offer from the Public Works Administration of a $180,000 grant to pay 45 per cent of the cost of the proposed $400,000 building.

Acceptance of the federal grant would have been a preliminary step necessary to re-submitting to the people the question of raising the county's $220,000 share. A two-thirds affirmative vote would have been required to accept the offer, but only three rural supervisors joined those from Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti in voting to accept the federal grant. Consideration of new financing methods was cut short by the board's action.

Advocates of a new court house had planned to ask the board to submit the question to the voters at the November 8 election. There now remains no need for another election.

He turned at last to Linda: "Well, Miss Dane," he said, a deep relief in his tones, "I shall see the Governor, ask him for a reprieve."

"What does that mean?"

"A postponement," he hesitated. "In fact, I may even suggest a commutation. This other bullet certainly creates a grave doubt that Mr. Sentry actually killed Miss Wines."

"But then won't the Governor pardon him?"

"I'm afraid not. Not yet, certainly. Of course, this means a further investigation of the case. The Governor—I'm speaking frankly, you see—may suspect that some of Mr. Sentry's friends have taken this evidence. But there must be a reprieve at least. I'll see the Governor this evening."

Linda considered. "When you know what he decides, Mr. Flood, will you let me tell them? Tell Mr. Sentry's family? You can telephone to me at my home."

"Of course. You've certainly earned that."

"Mrs. Sentry isn't well," she explained. "The shock even of good news—"

Linda meant to wait, to hold her peace, till she could go to Phil proudly with this word; but when she came home, she found it hard to wait. In the end, despite her resolution, she telephoned the Sentry home.

Barbara answered. Linda asked for Phil.

"His with mother," Barbara told her. "They're outdoors somewhere. I couldn't bear to be with them. Barbara's tones were shaken. She said: 'I can't bear to see mother. She's so strange and still.'"

Linda said quickly, "Come over here, Barbara." She hesitated, then added: "Don't let them know you're coming. I've—something to tell you."

"Something about my father?"

Barbara cried, a quick hope in her voice.

"Come," Linda insisted. "You'll be here."

So Barbara was the first to know what had been discovered—and when, at last, the District Attorney telephoned, Barbara was after Linda the first to know the Governor's decision. Mr. Sentry's sentence was commuted to life imprisonment.

Barbara was still weeping when Linda's car they reached to the Sentry home; and Phil met them in the hall there; and the quick word was spoken, and the three young people for a moment clung fast together, half-laughing, half-crying, in a happiness almost too great to be borne.

Then Mrs. Sentry appeared on the stairs landing above them. "What a relief," she had heard Linda's car arrive. They did not see her till she was halfway down the stairs. They heard her then, and turned, and Barbara leaped up the two or three steps to her side. He caught her close and tenderly. "He caught her close and tenderly," he cried. "The Governor has commuted the sentence to life imprisonment!"

CHAPTER XIV

The newspapers were again filled with the story of the case. The Governor had to meet editorial and public criticism for his commutation of the sentence; but he met it silently, and without revealing the fact that the discovery of new evidence had been responsible for his change of mind. The secret of the bullet hole was well kept. The District Attorney believed that assuming Mr. Sentry was not the murderer—the actual killer, whoever he might be, would feel a false security if he supposed Mr. Sentry's guilt remained unquestioned. So except for a few individuals, no one knew the truth; but the District Attorney's office meanwhile was busy, checking back, following every line that promised a solution.

The secret was well kept; but Dan Fisher knew. Barbara wrote him the truth; and over the next weekend he came on from Cleveland, and he saw Falkran and saw Flood.

He told Mrs. Sentry and the others afterward, "You know as much as they do." And he said, abashed before them: "I feel pretty rotten. I thought he did it, you know."

Barbara said honestly: "So did we all, Phil. I thought so myself—but I never admitted it."

Mrs. Sentry remembered something Falkran had said at their first interview. "And just because everyone thought him guilty, everyone knows he is innocent now," she said. "Dan, when will they let him go?"

Dan confessed: "Maybe never, not yet, anyway. Really all this bullet hole means is that he might not have done it. But they'll never rest now till they get the answer."

"It's already been long," Mrs. Sentry said, half to herself. "But I can wait, now."

When the time came for Dan's departure, Barbara went with him; and days passed, and Phil's first hope for some quick proof of his father's innocence insensibly faded. Days ran to weeks; and hope began to die in Phil again. He and Mrs. Sentry, though they stayed at home, considered a North Cape cruise, and they thought of California, Canada, Europe; and Phil brought home travel folders and they studied them diligently, and at night they might be decided on an early departure. But in the morning Mrs. Sentry always reflected:

"You know, Phil, we're perfectly comfortable here. And I don't want to go away from him."

Yet toward the end of July, at Linda's suggestion, they decided on a fortnight in York. Mrs. Sentry would go a day or two ahead, with the servants, to open the house; and Phil and Linda would follow later. That Linda should go with them seemed a matter of course. Phil found as always deep happiness in her companionship. She demanded nothing—except to be with him. And he could give her nothing. If any dreams ever took shape in his thoughts, he remembered his mother's pleading cry: "Stay always with me, Phil!"

And more than ever she needed him now.

His mother and the servants left for York on Wednesday; and on Friday morning, Phil and Linda followed. In Linda's car. The girl drove, and as they picked their way through traffic toward the Turnpike, Phil said:

"Linda, I saw your father, yesterday. He suggested that he put my name up at his club. He added, 'It was mighty grateful to him; but they'd be sure to turn me down.'"

"Father wouldn't have offered, if there were any chance of that?"

"He's like you, Linda. He and your mother. So darned loyal. But others may not feel the same."

"Haven't all your friends been the same?"

"The Waring—the way they acted hurt mother," Phil confessed. "And then, she resigned from all her committees and things; and she accepted her resignation; and she was tough on her. She's been happier lately. Happy in just loving father. But she doesn't really seem well. I'm pretty worried about her."

Linda, grave eyes upon the road, changed the subject. "Do you hear from Mary?" she asked.

Phil nodded grimly. "She's married again, a South American, beefy, something of the kind. Their thoughts, as sometimes happens with two people as close to one another as they had come to be, ran together. Thinking of Dan and Barbara, they said aloud in a sort of chorus:

"But Barbara—"

"Then they looked at each other and laughed, and he said, 'We were going to say the same thing.'"

"Yes. Just the way married people do."

He protested: "Lin, do you have to keep—torturing me?"

"My dear," she said, "don't you know by this time that you and I are already married, in so many real, deep ways? And I'm not asking anything more than we already have, Phil." She added, half to herself, "At least, I don't think I am."

He said: "There's no help for it, Lin. I can't ask—"

She smiled, her eyes upon the road. "You wouldn't even have to ask me, Phil."

"And—mother needs me. I'm all she's got to hold to now, with Mary and Barbara both gone."

Linda did not argue with him; but during the next few days at York, watching Mrs. Sentry and Phil together, she was sometimes secretly angry.

In the middle of the first week at York, business called Phil back to town; and Linda of course came with him. That night at home, her father, watching her, discovering her increasing distress, spoke doubtfully:

"I know how you love Phil, Lin," he said. "Your mother and I understand. But—we hate to see your life broken by it. If he feels he must be with his mother—"

"I'll wait," she said.

He shook his head. "That isn't fair," he urged. "Not fair to yourself—or to us, Lin. We've been sympathetic, but—we want you to be happy some day. Please."

"I'd rather be unhappy, loving Phil, even if I never can have him."

"It isn't even fair to Phil," he insisted; and Linda cried, her self-control for a moment cracking:

"Oh, be still! What do I care what's fair? There's no fairness in it, anyway. Fair? Was it fair for this to happen to Phil? To all of them? Is it fair to me that I can't have him now?"

And then, suddenly contrite, seeing his sorrow, she was in his arms, weeping. "Oh father, father, what am I going to do?"

He held her close. "There, Lin!" he told her. "Sorry. I didn't mean to make it harder. Whatever you do, we're standing by."

"So am I," she whispered. "So am I. But I'm awful sick of it. It's so long, long, long—"

Yet with Phil in the office next morning she managed as always to be steady, reassuring, calm. While he dictated, his eyes rested inactively on her head, bowed above her notebook; but his thoughts were on his dictation, till as the last letter was done he stopped in mid-sentence, staring at the hair above her brow.

She looked up inquiringly, and he finished the letter; but when she had gone to her typewriter and he was alone, he was troubled and full of a deep, protective concern. Unmistakably, in the dark masses of Linda's hair, there were threads of gray.

He thought, incredulously, that she was no older than Barbara Twenty-one? Twenty-two? She had been, through these months, so composed that it had not occurred to him to think of her as suffering, weary and torn and tired from giving herself without stint so long. She must rest, he decided, must give up the work here; and he considered how to tell her so. When a little after noon, in her car, they started for York again, he began to make an opening for this suggestion.

"You know, Lin," he said, "you've carried me through all this. I don't know what I'd have done without you to talk to. It has helped a lot, just—worrying out loud to you."

If there was bitterness in her smile he did not see it. "Of course," she said. "That's what I'm here for, isn't it, Phil? At least I can do that much for you."

He said, half-smiling: "You keep me going, and I keep mother going. That's what it amounts to."

Her glance flashed toward him almost angrily. "You enjoy feeling that you're indispensable to her, don't you?" Her tone was a challenge.

"I suppose so," he admitted. "At least it's a job to do."

"If she told you you were just a nuisance, you'd probably be angry, or hurt?"

"Yes, probably."

"You know," she said resentfully. "I think that's often the way. We hang on and hang on, telling ourselves we're important, when as a matter of fact we're just boring people. I'm not at all sure that we couldn't help more by taking care of ourselves, letting other people go their own road."

He smiled. "You can't mean I've—bothered mother?"

"Well, no one can learn to walk till they get rid of their crutch, Phil." Her tone was gentle now, yet she said: "You've been her crutch. It's about time she learned to walk alone."

"I couldn't leave her, Linda!"

"Oh, I suppose not," she assented briefly. They were at the moment stalled in traffic. When now the green light released them, she sheathed the gears with a clashing, rhapsodic that was somehow eloquent, and let in the clutch so sharply that the car leaped jerkily ahead. He said, trying to laugh:

"Whoa! Trying to break our necks?"

"Sorry!" But she did not sound sorry; and she spoke in a sharp decision. "Phil, you'd better tell Miss Randall to find you a new stenographer. I'll stay till she gets someone; but then I'm through."

He had meant, a while ago, to tell her just this; to tell her that he could not let her any longer sacrifice her youth and her happiness to him; to tell her that she must leave him. But now at her word he felt a deep hurt and loss.

"Had enough?" he asked in level tones.

"I'm tired, too tired to keep it up. I may go abroad, anywhere."

"Well, you're wise," he agreed carefully. "Summer's a hot, hard time. But of course, I'll miss you!"

"You'll find somebody easily enough."

"Oh yes, don't worry, Lin. We'll get along."

"People do, don't they?"

"Yes, yes, somehow."

She laughed mirthlessly. "I've

Area of Sahara Desert

The Sahara desert has an area of approximately 3,500,000 square miles. A portion was under water at one time, most likely in the Cretaceous period, but some of the surface was later elevated so that water remained only in some lakes near the coast of the Mediterranean. The belief in the marine origin of its vast quantity of sand has been supplanted by the theory that rock and soil disintegration occurred during the great Ice age, at which time the desert lay in a warm, moist climate. The recession of the ice brought about changed meteorological conditions which caused the winds to become dry and the soil to lose its moisture. Without this moisture it was impossible for vegetation to survive and the entire area became barren.

Fish Hook Is Alive

The sucking fish, or Remora, although a sucker in the literal sense, is really a very cute fellow and he can make "suckers" out of sharks and whales. On his head is a flat, oval sucking organ by which he fixes himself to the side of a whale, shark or large fish—sometimes even a ship—that will take him to the vicinity of food. But his favorite trick is to slip inside the mouth of a shark or whale, fix himself to the roof of its mouth and then as his host feeds, Mr. Sucking Fish grabs all the grub as it enters. Natives of the South seas use the sucking fish instead of a hook. They attach a line to its tail, throw it overboard and then, when it fixes its head on a fish or turtle, pull in the catch.
