Chelsea Triumphs In Close Game Tuesday

By Bunny Lyons

Chelsea High's quintet met Napoleon in a very exciting game Tuesday night at the local gym. Captain Alber led Chelsea's attack but was effectively repulsed by Captain Ettig and his squad. Fast playing rung up points on both sides. The score at the end of the first period was 7-7.

The Chelsea lads entered the second period with new confidence and doubled their score, making it 14-7 at the end of the half.

Both teams played hard in the third and fourth periods but Chelsea managed to maintain a lead over their rivals. The final score was Chelsea 19, Napoleon 17.

The line-ups were:
Chelsea: F. Smayer, K. Knisely, C. Schneider, G. Dingle, G. Alber.
Napoleon: F. Smayer, K. Knisely, C. Schneider, G. Dingle, G. Alber.

Substitutions were: Chelsea—Hasel-schwerdt and Fletcher; Napoleon—Carpenter and Browning.
Outstanding in Tuesday's game were Captain Alber, high point man (Alber was fouled out in the third quarter), Knisely, a new man on the squad this year, and Policht, a promising young forward. Captain Ettig and Transtedt and Rhodes were the chief threats on Napoleon's squad.

The next game will be with University high school at their gym in Ann Arbor on Friday (tomorrow). This is a league game and promises to be a thriller.

Farmers' Week Will Be Held Jan. 30 to Feb. 3

Announcement of the date for the 24th annual Farmers' Week program at Michigan State College marks the 1939 calendar for the week of January 30 to February 3 for a program that is becoming a tradition in Michigan agriculture.

R. W. Fenny, short course director at the college, and assistant to E. L. Anthony, dean of agriculture, and chairman of the event, promises that this next Farmers' Week is being fashioned to a new pattern. Poultry is to have top honors this time. In addition to programs from all departments in the agricultural division of the college, the place of poultry in Michigan is to be depicted and highlighted.

C. G. Card, head of the poultry department, agrees that poultry is important enough in Michigan to rate distinction.

"Income from poultry in the state ranges around 45 million dollars annually," says Card. "About five-ninths of this is from eggs, the other four-ninths from poultry sold as meat. As a forerunner to the 1939 World's Poultry Congress which is to be held in July at Cleveland, this Farmers' Week attention to poultry in Michigan should be worthwhile for producers and consumers as well."

Poultry is specialized on many farms. Production is widespread, however, as estimates from census figures show that 180,000 of Michigan's 196,000 farms have poultry at least as a sideline.

State Legislature Is Now In Session

Lansing—The state legislature convened Wednesday of this week at the tall domed capitol, ready for an eventful biennial session that should last four to five months. May 1st should see the windup of law-making activities of the Senate and House with adjournment taking place shortly thereafter.

The inauguration Monday of Frank Fitzgerald as governor for a second term brought to ardent partisans mixed feelings of satisfaction and apprehension. They were jubilant over the return of Republicans to power at Lansing, yet were frankly apprehensive over the dimming prospect of a harvest of tax-paid plums.

James Thomson, republican state chairman, hit the nail squarely on the head (for the partisans, at least) when he denounced the present civil service law as a device employed by Democrats to keep party workers in office. While Governor Fitzgerald was prompt to renew his devotion to civil service, Thomson's declaration was echoed by every job aspirant, and there are thousands of them eager to serve the people.

Coolly recalling the experience of his previous administration, the governor has been adamant to patronage pressure. If there is a "job purge" at Lansing, it will be done in the name of economy.

Appointments to Wait
For every person who gets a state job, 20 others are disappointed.

Governor Fitzgerald has announced a sensible determination to take his time in filling state appointive offices. Thus, no drastic turnover of administrative heads occurred this week, setting a new precedent in Michigan state government. The governor merely said that he had confidence in the willingness of Democrat leaders to stay on a few more weeks or months.

The hold-over policy, however, may put certain officials in an embarrassing position of being requested to reduce their own payrolls. One prominent Democrat has said repeatedly that he would like the opportunity to get rid of some expensive job-holders whom were forced upon him by higher-ups. He didn't get his chance.

Fitzgerald's campaign pledge that he would reduce the state payrolls by (Continued on next page)

NYA Shows Steady Growth for Past Year

Lansing—As the new year begins, the National Youth Administration of Michigan stands vigorous and powerful. Advancing steadily during 1938, it has today both strength and general public acceptance—it has become a great force in the lives of thousands of young people in Michigan. And nowhere, in the past year, has its progress been more clearly marked than in the state's six southeasterly counties: Hillsdale, Jackson, Monroe, Lenawee, Washtenaw and Wayne—which comprise NYA District No. 4 of Michigan.

One year ago the NYA in this district was little more than a theoretical government agency set up to combat the appalling youth problem. Today, under the energetic leadership of State Director Orrin W. Kaye and District Supervisor William F. Kinsey, it has developed into a huge program helping 2148 youths to obtain their education in high schools and colleges and aiding thousands more with job-experience after they have left school.

Foremost among the NYA's achievements in this area during 1938 was the establishment of three new work centers in Detroit, and the expansion of the resident work center near Chelsea. The largest of the centers in the city is at the State Fair Grounds. Started last January with 25 young men, it grew to employ over 500 in July. Since then, the economic upswing has cut this figure to 238, 30 of whom are girls employed on a sewing project, and the rest boys engaged in exploratory training in cabinet-making, draftsmanship, tin-smithing, metal-work, and sign painting, as well as complete maintenance of the fair grounds and buildings. The other two work centers, at Vassar and Vinewood on the west side, and at St. Jean and Harper on the east side, (Continued on next page)

Scout Activities Will Increase During 1939

With a slogan of "More and better Scouting for 1939", Scout leaders of Troops, Cub Packs and Senior Groups in Washtenaw and Livingston counties have already launched full programs of activities.

District committee meetings in four districts of the Council will be held during January as well as a meeting of the Council-wide Executive Board. The Southern District, under the chairmanship of Dr. Harry L. Smith, held its January meeting on Tuesday evening, January 3, at McKenny hall, Ypsilanti. The Livingston District, Chairman William Cansfield of Howell, will hold its first meeting of the year on Tuesday evening, January 10, at Howell high school. The Middle District committee under the chairmanship of Dr. A. J. Logan will hold its first meeting of the year on Friday noon, January 6, at the Haunted Tavern. The Copeland District, of which Paul F. Niehaus is chairman, will hold its meeting on Monday evening, January 16, at 8:00 p. m. at Chelsea.

A Cub leaders' round table and a meeting of the Cubbing committee will be held on Thursday evening, January 5, at the Michigan League in Ann Arbor. Winfield Line, of Howell, is chairman. A round table for Scouters will be held on Monday evening, January 9, at McKenny Hall, Ypsilanti. While this meeting is primarily for Scoutmasters, all committeemen and commissioners are invited.

The January Green-Bar Conference for the training of key boys in various Scout troops will be held on Saturday, January 21, at Camp New-Kirk. A training course for the men of Scouting will open on Wednesday evening, January 11 at the Ann Arbor high school to be carried on under the direction of the training committee, of which Walter Holmlund of Ann Arbor is chairman.

LOCAL TAXES LOWER
Taxpayers of Sylvan township who reside in School District No. 8 E., Sylvan and Lima, are enjoying the lowest tax rate in more than 25 years, according to Fred Broesamle, supervisor. The rate for this year is $11.57 per thousand, compared with an even $12.00 collected last year. The school tax is the same as last year, but operating expenses of the township are lower. Some other districts in the township are paying lower taxes and some have a higher rate, according to the amount that is being raised for school purposes.

34 YEARS AGO

Thursday, January 5, 1905

Monday the new republican county officials, chosen by the voters at the election in November, all assumed their offices. This is the first time since the court house was erected in 1877 that all the county offices have been held by republicans.

The following real estate transfers in this vicinity were recently recorded: George L. Mount and wife of Ganges to Christian Houk of Grass Lake, land in Sharon township; Geo. E. Shepard and wife of London to Samuel N. Boyce and wife of Toledo, Ohio, land in Northfield township.

C. Watts of North Lake is planning to make 200 stone boats this winter for his many customers.

J. B. Cole has accepted a position at Lansing in the Auditor General's office.

Robert Toney, treasurer of Lima, was at the Chelsea Savings Bank last Saturday and collected $2,000 from the taxpayers of that township.

Irish Setter Native of Ireland

The Irish setter is a native of Ireland. It was first imported to America about 1875. It is believed to be a cross of English setter, spaniel and pointer. Originally red and white in coloring, and standards call for solid mahogany red or rich golden chestnut. It is essentially a gun dog. It is bold, hardy, yet of remarkably gentle nature and is noted for long life.

have only recently begun operation. They are smaller projects, and sheet-metal work and automotive mechanics are emphasized to a greater degree than at the fair grounds.

Cassidy Lake Technical School, the resident work center at Chelsea, developed rapidly during 1938. Over 160 young men live and work and study there today, and more arrive every week for the school is to be expanded in the next few months into one of 14 major regional work centers in the nation. Today the NYA youths take vocational courses in mechanical drawing, forging and welding, auto mechanics, machine shop and others, correlating this with extension courses from the University of Michigan.

As the young people in these work centers learn, they produce tangible and worthwhile articles for the donors of the materials they use. At Cassidy Lake they make stone drinking fountains, rustic signposts, roadside tables and shelters, metal refuse containers, etc., for the village of Chelsea, the National Park Service, Washtenaw county, the State Highway Commission and many other similar agencies. Similarly in Detroit, the Accident Prevention Bureau received a complete puppet stage, the Board of Education hundreds of new desks, and chairs, and the State Fair Commission benches, chairs, signs, and maintenance, without paying for anything except the cost of the materials used.

Only a fraction, of course, of the total number of NYA young people are enrolled at these work centers. Hundreds more are engaged in a bewildering variety of occupations, getting training, investigating trades, educating themselves and, at the same time, rendering invaluable services to scores of public and semi-public agencies and organizations. NYA girls work on sewing and weaving projects, work in hospitals, an occupation that leads many into the profession of nursing, and accomplish an immense amount of clerical and secretarial work. NYA boys' activities are even more varied, ranging all the way from social service work to the U. S. immigration service.

These accomplishments are none the less remarkable when considered in the light of NYA's rapid turnover. Apart from the total of student aid recipients, only a quarter of the 2295 youths on the rolls of District No. 4 today have been with the NYA for as long as a year, and of the number leaving during the year, the percentage of those finding permanent private employment increased from 17.1 per cent in June to 48.8 per cent in November.

Despite the comparative inexperience of its workers, there can be little doubt as to the tangible contributions that the NYA has made to District 4 in general and to Wayne county in particular during 1938. And while they cannot always be realized within the span of a single year, there can be little doubt, either, as to the tremendous benefits such a program affords in terms of training and experience to the thousands of young persons in this area.

CHILDREN IN COURT

Judge Malcolm Hatfield

Treating the Handicapped Child

Some years ago, the parents of a handicapped boy asked a court for assistance in meeting their problem. After hearing the story, the judge urged them to seek scientific advice to enable them to better appreciate their child and his needs.

The psychiatrist whom the court recommended finally advised the parents that there was little science could do to remove the disability, and that the best course for them to follow was to interest the youngster in things he could learn to do. The parents were cautioned not to show pity for the child openly or to deny him the right of performing certain tasks. The psychiatrist also warned the parents that great tact and understanding would be required, lest they develop an inferiority complex in the youngster. The psychiatrist closed the interview by impressing the parents with the importance of the fact that their son should never be reminded of his handicap, but should be taught to do the things in which he excelled.

Today these parents have their reward in knowing that their son not only finished high school at the head of his class, but also graduated from a business school, and now holds a responsible position. Those who are thrown into intimate personal contacts with him are unanimous in their belief that he is the happiest individual they have ever known.

OUR NEIGHBORS

DEXTER—Wrecking of the original Judge Dexter home on Huron street here has been completed. Built in 1826, the structure was 112 years old.—Leader.

PLYMOUTH—A total of 388 tickets were issued for traffic violations for the fiscal year in the second season since the inauguration of the Violations Bureau in Plymouth, Police Chief Vaughan Smith reported to the city commission. Fines on these tickets totaled $1,406, of which only about $115 is still outstanding, he said. And the outstanding money doesn't worry the bureau, because a notice is sent to the secretary of state, who refuses to issue a driver's license to the offending motorist until he pays up his fine. Most of the tickets, 147 of them, were issued for speeding, Chief Smith said. In the improper parking classification—34 tickets were issued. The violation bureau, of course, does not cover drunk or reckless driving cases, which must go to court for settlement.—Mail.

HOWELL—Howell was visited by one of the most disastrous fires in recent years Saturday night when fire of undetermined origin destroyed a large warehouse filled with lumber at the Purdy and Woodruff lumber yard on North Barnard street. The warehouse was filled with shingles and other lumber and burned rapidly. The office was also badly damaged by the flames. The loss is estimated at from $8,000 to $10,000 and is partially covered by insurance.—County Press.

Shakespeare's Birthplace

Was Simple Gabled House

The quaint little village of Stratford-on-Avon in England is closely linked with events which took place there many years ago—the birth, life and death of William Shakespeare.

The most revered building in the village, writes Leslie Hartley in the Washington Star, is the simple gabled wooden house on Henley street in which the "Bard of Avon" was born in 1564—on April 23, many historians say. This house, which belongs to the British government, is restored to its original state and the ground-floor is used as a museum and library. Narrow, dark stairs lead to the little room on the second floor where the poet was born.

Shakespeare was a lover of nature and flowers, and in a garden beneath the windows of his room are grown many of the flowers mentioned in his plays, such as "rosemary for remembrance, pansies for thoughts."

Many other buildings in the village are restored so that they look as Shakespeare knew them. And his remains rest under the altar of Trinity church, where he was worshiped, with the following epitaph to mark the spot:

"Good friend for Jesus sake forbear,
To dig the dust enclosed here,
Blessed be ye man yt spares thes stones,
And cursed be he yt moves my bones."

A bronze statue of Shakespeare in the gallery of the reading room of the library of congress was cast in Paris in 1895 and shipped to the United States. It is by Frederick MacMonnies, sculptor.

Rosemary a Sweet Herb
Rosemary is a rather sweet herb used a great deal in Italian cooking. It grows in southern Europe. Many Europeans mix it with pine needles and stuff pillows with the combination.

Australia, the Shadeless Land
Australia has been called the shadeless land because the leaves of some of its trees always present their edges to the sky. Some of the trees have foliage composed merely of needles, while others are entirely leafless.

$8,000,000 in 60 days has come home to roost. It has been figured that such an accomplishment, within the time stipulated, would be a first-class miracle, at least in political history. Firing 4,000 workers is not easily done. Such is the number which is estimated would be necessary for Fitzgerald's economy pledge.

Conservative
In general, the legislature is expected to be conservative toward business, liberal as always in its desires to spend, and fairly progressive in matters such as labor, old age pensions, relief, and conservation.

Certainly there is no doubt about Fitzgerald's policy on sit-down strikes. He will neither condone nor tolerate them.
A labor mediation board, created along non-partisan lines, will be sought to eliminate many of the costly wild-cat labor strikes which have plagued both the United Automobile Workers and Michigan automobile manufacturers. A "cooling off" period between the announcement of intention to strike and the actual walk-out of workers would be highly desirable in the opinion of industrial leaders.

The U. A. W. union (C. I. O.) will continue to be active in legislative affairs, but with clipped wings. Homer Martin's dissent with John Lewis and the C. I. O. makes the U. A. W. less of a threat than it was in 1937.

Low Automobile Numbers

Leon D. Case, retiring secretary of state, will be remembered chiefly for his gift of low automotive license numbers.

Using letters to key each county, 1939 state licenses now run into fairly low numbers. Furthermore, state police can tell the approximate residence of motorists.

The craze for low automobile numbers is somewhat of a confession of human vanity, the universal desire to be considered important in the eyes of others. In 1937 Case started a policy of special numbers for his friends and those of the administration. Certain important people even obtained license plates consisting only of their initials.

About December 1, 1938, following the election, Case decided to call a halt to the practice. "I am not recommending its continuance to my successor," he said. The "LC" series will likely disappear in 1940.

Gambling Rumors

For many weeks there have been persistent rumors that gambling would "open up" soon in Michigan.

The slot machine ban, ordered by Murphy, Starn, and the liquor commission was never popular in the resort sections of northern Michigan and the Upper Peninsula. Across the Wisconsin line the liberal LaFollette administration permitted gambling "wide open."

At Mackinac Island, Petoskey and other favorite vacation spots the gambling casinos have always reaped a good harvest from the summer trade with local law enforcement officials fully aware of their activity.

Floyd Fitzsimmons, the Benton Harbor sports promoter, is reviving his dog racing bill which nearly passed the legislature two years ago. Floyd visited certain counties in southwestern Michigan before the primary and inquired discreetly about the availability of certain people for legislative candidates.

Fitzsimmons points to the licensing of horse racing as a moral precedent. Dog racing, however, like soft ball, is a night pastime that caters to the moderate income group, a class that can afford least to gamble. The price of admission is small. Profit comes from pari-mutual betting on the greyhounds.

For several reasons, the 1939 legislative session will be worth watching.

"Coffee Shop" Clearing

Plan Used in the 1600s
The earliest ancestor of the clearing house was the crude "coffee shop" clearing system used during the 1600s by London banks. From each of the London banks, employees known as "walk-erks" would start on a tour of all other banks every day with bundles of checks drawn upon each. At each bank the clerks would deposit the checks drawn there and collect cash.

One day two clerks from different banks met in a coffee shop. Laziness, in this instance, observes a writer in the Chicago Tribune, was the mother of invention, and the clerks decided to make their exchanges there in the coffee house, each paying the other in cash for checks drawn on his bank. Other bank executives, discovering this, became interested. Thus was the original London clearing house begun.

On October 11, 1853, representatives of 52 New York banks met in a basement at 14 Wall street to settle claims against their institutions at a central clearing house for the first time. Clearings for that first day were less than $23,000,000 and balances were less than $1,300,000. By contrast, it may be noted that a single check for $148,000,000 went through the New York clearing house in 1925 and that clearings for 1928 totaled $457,000,000,000.

'WAY BACK WHEN

ARTIST WAS A LAWYER'S APPRENTICE

HENRI MATISSE, one of the greatest of modern French artists, whose works now sell for hundreds of thousands of francs, might have been a commonplace lawyer had not Fate stepped in when she did. He was born in a small town in Picardy in 1869, son of a wheat dealer. His childhood was uneventful and he became a lawyer's apprentice. Then, Fate came along with an attack of appendicitis which left him an invalid for many months. In order to keep occupied while convalescing, he took up painting, and it proved so fascinating that he never opened another law book.

Matisse's first paintings, in the early 1890s, brought but a few francs. He and the group with which he associated himself, all famous now, were called "the wild beasts" because of their mad style. Their paintings outraged conservatives of the art world. Matisse was accused of willful eccentricity, senseless disregard of nature, and a deliberate intent to advertise himself. His paintings were refused exhibition space in many galleries, but slowly he built recognition for his work. In 1927, his "Fruits and Flowers" won first prize in the Carnegie International exhibition. In 1928, the Luxembourg galleries bid 300,000 francs for his picture, "Sideboard," but the man who once could hardly buy enough bread with the few francs his work brought could now afford to donate the picture to them, accepting only one franc in order to make the transaction legal.

Circus animals and grain were the chief exports of North Africa during its Roman empire days.

Why Cats' Eyes Shine in Dark
The luminous appearance of a cat's eyes in the dark is due to the reflection of light by the tapetum lucidum, which is part of the membranous layer between the retina and the outer covering of the pupils of the eyes. This remarkable layer is distinctly differentiated from the choroid layer only in certain animals. It is the tapetum lucidum that enables members of the feline family and other nocturnal animals to see even when there is very little light. Some authorities believe this layer reflects the light rays through the retina a second time. In the domestic cat the tapetum lucidum is brilliant green or blue in color and has a metallic luster. The glare is especially noticeable when artificial light is thrown on a cat in a dark corner, or when a cat in a dark place is observed through an opening, light entering the darkness through the opening being reflected from the cat's eyes as from a mirror.

1939 is just before us. Many people who started out in 1938, who paid little attention to their driving habits or were reckless and careless in their conduct on the highways, were unable to see the end of '38.

Do not let this happen to you in 1939. Face the year with the determined effort to drive safely, to drive carefully, and to drive courteously.

A resolution such as this will not only stimulate your own interest in safe driving, but will be an example to your associates and friends.

Make 1939 the safest year!

CHAPTER I

Dusk fell softly over the High Sierras. Tom Cook, "Dad" Cook to the Inyo Forest, sat with boot heels on the edge of his desk and watched the play of light beyond his station door. A picture was framed there; Mount Whitney bold, forbidding, against a red and gold sunset. As Cook watched, blue eyes beneath gray brows squinted thoughtfully. His rugged form in khaki and flannel slumped a little to one side in that attitude a riding man often takes to relax saddle muscles.

It was the first of June, and although from this same office chair Dad Cook had witnessed some fifteen other first of June evenings, the scene held him spellbound as if his gaze had just now struck upon the mighty peak.

Fifteen years ago the Sierra Nevada had flung down their challenge to him, when, from the Mojave Desert, he had faced the sheer eastern slope and felt a grim defiance in the granite wall.

Whitney melted slowly into the darkening sky. Cook continued to stare at it, while his thoughts from long habit took to things brought about by the first of June.

This month marked the beginning of the field season. Headquarters must be moved from the winter station, here in the valley town of Lone Tree, and established some thirty miles up the pack trail. Soon he would sign on as summer rangers and scatter them over the area.

There would be fires to fight and cattle range troubles to settle; and this year there would be something more.

Cook surveyed his boot toes solemnly. "I'm sure going to miss Jim Cotter!" His brown fists tightened on the chair arms. He sat fixed, tense, his gray head bent. It was seven years since Jim Cotter had vanished, murdered somewhere up on top.

When Cook's eyes lifted and turned again to the door, a man was standing there, towering blackly in the dusk. He almost filled the opening, tall-figured, with close bronze hair beneath a limp Panama, a little stooped from the weight of a hand bag he carried.

He spoke at once. "Good evening, Dad."

The strong full-toned voice sounded familiar. Cook stood up; himself a big man, angular, erect, firmly planted on his feet, with only gray hair showing age. Suddenly he exclaimed, "Well, if it isn't you! Just a minute now I'll remember your name."

He looked into a young face, less than thirty, white, too soft, though strong brown eyes with a quiet humor made up for that. On the whole he liked what he saw.

"Breck!" he remembered. "That's it. Gordon Breck. Well, son, how's the movie business in Hollywood? Or was it ponies you were backing, down at Tia Juana?"

"A little of both," Breck admitted, grinning. "But I'm through."

"You?" Cook questioned, "through with the game? Why I thought the last time you were up here."

He ended abruptly. Gordon Breck had put down his hand bag and his hat, and now approached the desk where Cook stood.

"Go ahead and say it," he urged. "The last time I was here to see Cotter I came like a young sport, all smoked up over spending a lot of money and the big things I was doing down below. I called Cotter a fool for wasting time in the forest service. I couldn't see any use in it. Maybe I can't now. No matter. That isn't the point. He paused, breathless from his outburst.

Cook resumed his chair, produced a pipe and began to fill it. "Of course you know about Cotter, being his friend."

"More than a friend," said Breck, controlled now. He dropped into a seat across the table from the ranger. "I owe him something. That's why I'm here."

Lifting his pipe to a lighted match, Cook glanced over the bowl and into the young man's eyes. Something was in them that had not been there before. They were narrowed, darkened, and behind that darkness was fire. It seemed for an instant to change the whole expression of Breck's face. He was no longer soft-looking.

scowling. "You aren't a mountain man."

"I wasn't raised here, if that's what you mean," Breck answered. "But neither was Cotter. I can ride a horse and pack a mule—at least I could once. I'm handy with a gun if necessary. Don't those things about make me a mountain man?"

"No," said Dad Cook, wagging his head. "You'd need something more. Look at me. I can go down to your city and jam myself in a fat and eat off a white tablecloth, but I'd hate to go and wouldn't get along with folks there. Just so a man has got to have his heart in these mountains or they'll get him."

He's got to love 'em and fight 'em and all the time understand that he wouldn't be happy anywhere else."

The old ranger hesitated, with a slow smile lighting his eyes. "Think I'm a simple fool, don't you?"

"Not quite," Breck laughed. "I don't have your feeling, Dad, that's all. Mountains are just rocks to me. Anyhow, as far as the job goes, I can learn and learn fast."

"Believe it," Cook asserted. "College man, aren't you? Traveled. Family money. What I don't see is why you want the job at all. It's short pay, hard work, and likely to be dangerous."

"You've just named my reasons," Breck returned. "Short pay but something I earn myself. Hard work—God knows I need it. Dangerous, the same danger Cotter faced. There's the truth of my coming up here."

"What do you mean, son?" Cook asked, his voice lowered.

For reply Breck extended one arm with the under side of his wrist up. There, close together, were three small blue dots.

"That's a fraternity mark," he said, "made when Jim Cotter and I were in college."

"Seems to me I did notice it on him," Cook offered. "But he never explained the meaning."

Through a moment of silence Breck sat with head lowered, eyes riveted on the three marks.

"Jim couldn't explain," he answered. "Neither can I, for of course it is a fraternity secret. Each dot has a purpose and the total of the thing, you might say, is blood brotherhood; stand by one another, here and hereafter."

Breck shrugged, dropping his hand upon the table. "I wasn't strong on this sort of tie. Cotter kept it up. We were pretty close and he was the romantic one. Then in the war he showed it was not all romantic talk. Understand? I owe him something. I never had a chance to live up to my part of the pledge until now. I'm looking for the man who killed him."

Cook's gray brows lifted. "Know the man, do you?"

"Good God, Dad," Breck replied tensely. "If I did, I wouldn't take this way to get on his trail! He's one of a certain gang. I do know that."

"How?"

Breck drew a letter from his coat pocket, folded it at one paragraph and stood up to switch on a light. "This is the last word I had from Cotter, seven months ago. I'll read a part."

"There's something brewing up here, Gordon. I mean that two ways. A white mule outfit is making straight poison by the barrel; but that's out of my department and I haven't gone to much trouble over it. I did make one arrest. The fellow was freed and back here in less than a week. All I got out of the deal was an enemy. So I'll let prohibition take care of itself. But when a gang of men find they can get away with one law, they throw down all of them. Things have been happening—too much to tell you in a letter. Anyway I'm not certain until I work it up a little more. I'm going out tomorrow on a live hunch and hope to know straight facts by night."

Breck folded the paper and returned it to his pocket. "Cotter was killed that day," he said quietly. "As near as I can figure it, his hunch was good and he found out too much."

Silent, rigid, Dad Cook sat with the pipe stem clenched between his teeth. Breck remained standing, face set, fingers running through his bronze hair then down as if to wipe a vision from his eyes.

"I didn't come as soon as I heard about it," he said at last, "because the season was ended and you were leaving the mountains. Now you're sending summer rangers up there. Am I going?"

Cook leaned back heavily in his seat. "Cotter didn't tell me as much as he put in that letter. Some of us could have helped."

"Jim liked to play a lone hand," said Breck.

"I know; and he acted a lot on impulse." Cook shot a stern gaze across the table. "If I read you right, you're some quick yourself."

"Perhaps."

"That trait is to a man's advantage sometimes," Cook continued, "but in this business he's got to think a long way ahead. Cotter was a good ranger. I didn't intend to waste another one up there in the forest until I had found out who killed him."

"You might as well put me on the job," Breck insisted.

"You're the only man who knows I am Cotter's friend—or of any bond between us. Someone would have to take his place. I'll learn the job and work at it. This other can be my own personal affair, if you like."

Impulsively, Breck bent across the table. "Dad, I've got to get busy! I'm pretty much at loose ends."

Breck paused to light a cigarette, striking the match savagely.

Cook watched him with concern. "In trouble?" he asked. "Money, drink?"

"No, not that. It's well—Oh, the devil! I've just fallen out of love."

"And that," the ranger agreed, his eyes twinkling, "is more of a shock than falling in."

Breck grinned. "Shock nothing. This was just a fade-out. Anyway, I want to work. Will you sign me on tonight?"

"Not so fast," said Cook. "You'll find this man-hunt is no personal affair to be settled on the side. It

CHAPTER II

There is still a spirit of the old untamed West about Lone Tree, that electric lights and gasoline filling stations cannot banish. The town itself is but a green patch set in a desert valley below the Sierra Nevada wall.

Yet it is not a mountain town alone. The desert, the mines, the cattle ranches pour their men upon its streets, and life, any time after dusk, is lived with frontier vigor.

In the general store where Breck ordered his supplies, he questioned the man who waited on him. "Is Lone Tree usually as alive as this?"

"Yep, first of June," was the cryptic answer.

"What has June to do with it?" "New here?" he grunted.

"New in Lone Tree, yes." "One of Tom Cook's men?" A wave of his hand indicated the forest service badge.

"You're right," Breck replied brusquely, nettled by this cross-examination.

"Well," said the man, squinting again at his scales, "I guess Cook knows his business."

Breck waited for more. That was all. His cheeks felt hot and his jaw tightened. What the devil did the fellow mean? He turned angrily from the grocery counter and found himself scowling into a long mirror of the men's furnishing department. What he saw gave him a queer shock.

Among racks of coarse, serviceable clothing his tailored figure was ludicrous in contrast. His low shoes were like paper against the cowhide boots put out in rows upon a table top. Then he looked at his face, white and soft beneath the brim of his Panama hat. He disliked his own reflection and walked back to the grocery feeling more friendly. "I see what you mean," he laughed.

But that friendliness was not returned by the other man. It was some time before he asked, "Taking Cotter's place?"

"Yes. Did you know him?"

"Some. Too bad he went like that. But accidents do happen up there."

"Accidents!" Too late Breck cursed his ready tongue. By some indefinable change of expression he knew the storekeeper had baited him, and he had given himself away. It was a lesson to remember. Keep what you know to yourself.

Finished with ordering his supplies, he left the store and found that outside the street had become even more crowded. He hadn't yet learned what it was all about. Back at headquarters he asked Cook, "Is this circus right?"

"The town sure is full," the ranger agreed. "It's always like this the first two weeks of June. Cattle season, you know. They're rounding up stuff that has wintered on the desert and will show a big herd into the mountains when we open government grazing on the fifteenth. That will be about your first worry."

"Trouble in it?"

"Considerable, some years. A man is permitted only a certain number of animals. If the winter has been dry he'll crowd his permit in order to get everything he owns up in the high grass country. I've been sort of easy with them so far. This year is different. If we want to enforce one rule on the range, we'll have to enforce the whole lot."

"Have you anything to wear?" "I'll buy an outfit."

"All right. Rig yourself up in mountain clothes and order at least a month's supply of grub. The rest can come up later. Sorry I can't scout around town with you. Just one thing. Don't let that piece of bronze make you feel too important. On the other hand, don't let it slow you up when the time is proper."

Cook's slow smile considered Breck. "Yes, son, there'll be trouble in it. You will have to take count and settle disputes, and which ever way you decide, you'll be in bad with someone."

Breck gathered his bundle of work clothes and started to the bunk room, but stopped at the door. "If it's all right with you, I'm going to give my badge a rest tonight."

"Fair enough," said Cook. "Say, if you want to mix with the crowd and maybe get acquainted with men you'll have to deal with later, why don't you go to the cowboys' dance? It's in the old movie palace west of town. They'll be well liquored up by 10 o'clock and at their best about midnight."

"Will the Tillsons be there?"

"Sure enough. They run these shindigs as part of their business. Costs a man five bucks to get in. Liquor-free. There'll be Jud, Rep and Art; Jud being the oldest and the tallest, though they all run close to six feet. Rep and Art are mostly shadows for their brother. Jud's the he-wolf of that pack."

Cook paused, glancing at his watch. "It's sort of late to find a ticket. Usually they want to know who comes in. But they haven't been troubled for a long time, so you may get by. Worth trying anyhow."

CHAPTER III

Breck felt a rise of excitement as he pushed through a door and at once became a part of the crowd within the old building. The room was long and wide with raftered ceiling. A stage that filled one end showed its original use as the town theater.

Breck walked away from the door and stood against the wall, watching. He had come with certain preconceived ideas as to what he would find at a cowboy dance, his knowledge having been gained from moving picture sets. He was surprised now.

Pretty girls were plentiful. Breck had not intended to dance. Now he was not so sure of it. Sun-tanned faces slipped past him, cheeks flushed, eyes bright, red mouths turned laughingly up to their partners.

One girl in particular drew his survey. Soon after he entered she danced close by and met his gaze with a pair of strangely arresting brown eyes. She did not smile, yet he saw a shadow-like movement cross her lips. He knew she appraised him thoroughly. He believed she was amused.

As she danced on in her cowboy's arms, his eyes followed. She was small, with dark curly hair just above the fellow's shoulder, and had that free-mannered, out-of-door look as much as any of the men about her. Evidently she was accustomed to wearing a man's shirt, for the rounded neck of the dress she had on now showed a narrow, sunburned V over the whiteness of her throat.

Not exactly pretty, Breck decided, as in dancing, she again turned toward him. Her face in repose looked "little fired, though when she smiled at something her partner whispered, the expression vanished in a swift parting of her lips and an upward tilt of her head. At that moment Breck's decision not to dance left him and he only waited until he could meet this girl.

He leaned against the wall with the stream of people flowing by. There was a punch bowl on a stand at the end of the room opposite the stage. Here girls stopped often, but he noticed that the men shunned it, and went alone through a smaller doorway. The room was soon heavy with dust and cigarette smoke and the thick odor of whiskey—not good whiskey either.

From the clamor of voices an occasional distinct sentence drifted across to him. "Hi there, cowboy. What you all doing?" The answer was lost, but men burst into laughter and girls looked away. Came snatches of business. "Dry summer, you bet. . . . Two thousand head . . . My permit calls for . . . Add then something that brought Breck up with a start. "Hello, Jud Tillson!"

He turned toward the sound of the greeting. The speaker had danced on, but three men stood between himself and the door, their eyes leveled in his direction. They were tall, lean-bodied, all bearing the same characteristic of thin, sharp faces. Dad Cook had said he would not recognize the Tillson brothers. That was true. He would never have picked these three from the many that crowded the dance hall; for several others, talking loudly and swaggering with guns hung from their belts, made a better show of being hard.

The Tillsons were dressed unobtrusively, each in a gray Stetson, flannel shirt unadorned by handkerchief, dark trousers, and cowboy boots with stitching on the black leather.

Two shifted their eyes when he turned to survey them. One held his gaze, stood motionless for a second, then strode casually across the intervening space.

Question And Answer Dept.

Problem—John Smith asked a friend to give him change for a dollar bill. The friend obligingly drew from his pocket all the money he had, which was exactly six coins that amounted to $1.15. But still he could not change the dollar. What was the denomination of each of the six coins? (Answer elsewhere in this department.)

Ques.—Can you tell me if there is any difference between a husbandry and a husband?

Ans.—Husbandry is either thrift or farming; and a husband is a man who has a wife.

Ques.—Will you please tell me how to figure batting averages in baseball?

Ans.—Add two ciphers (0) to the total number of base hits, and then divide this by the number of times at bat, using a decimal point before the result. Remember, home runs, three-base hits and two-base hits count only as "hits."

Ques.—Will you please answer in your good paper what Oliver Wendell Holmes did before he became known as a poet?

Ans.—The early profession of Oliver Wendell Holmes was that of a medical doctor.

Answer to problem—The six coins were: One half-dollar, one quarter and four times.

Ques.—What is a "philanderer"?

Ans.—A philanderer is a male flirt.

Ques.—What makes a dog go mad?

Ans.—Madness in dogs is caused by what is known as rabies. Rabies is caused by a germ that attacks the brain. It can be communicated to other dogs by the bite, and also to a human.

Ques.—Where does the sand on the seashore come from?

Ans.—The waves wear down the rocks and break them up. The silt that is produced is carried out to sea by the water and is deposited on the bottom, but the coarser particles stay on the beach and form what is known as "sand."

Ques.—Does Franklin D. Roosevelt have any official title other than that as President of the United States?

Ans.—Yes. He is also Commander-in-Chief of the United States Army and Navy.

Ques.—What test can I use to tell the difference between platinum and silver?

Ans.—Dip a toothpick or a thin match into nitric acid and touch the metal with it. If it is platinum, it will have no effect whatever; if it is silver, it will boil and turn brown. Wash off the acid at once or it will eat into the silver.

Ques.—What causes tires on an automobile blow out more often on hot days?

Ans.—Heat increases pressure, as well as pressure increases heat. If a tire gets hot, the air pressure inside it will increase. And if this pressure increases too much, or if the tire is weak anywhere, it is liable to blow out. If tires are not in best condition, it is best to deflate them a little.

In making long runs on very hot days.

Ques.—Why do flowers have bright colors?

Ans.—Because this helps to attract nectar-extracting bees, the same as the perfume of the flower does.

THE MICHIGAN CYCLOTRON

Above is shown Michigan's new cyclotron, or "atom-smasher," which has been rebuilt from the machine first constructed at the University over two years ago. Research with such equipment is uncovering a vast amount of new information on the inner structure of the atom and the effects of radiation on plant and animal tissue. Construction and operation of the Michigan cyclotron have been under the direction of Prof. James M. Cork and Dr. R. L. Thornton, who is shown with the new machine in this picture.

The cyclotron bombards a target element with particles of heavy hydrogen. Within a vacuum chamber, behind Dr. Thornton's right hand in the picture, the particles are given a spiral motion by an accumulation of high voltage presures and the action of a 30-ton electro-magnet, which is made up of the large oil-cooled coils above and below the vacuum chamber and the huge iron frame, surrounding the whole machine. Electrodes carrying alternating charges of about 50,000 volts are within the chamber itself.

Traveling at a speed of 18 or 20 thousand miles per second, the particles are discharged directly into the target, knocking off particles of that substance or being absorbed by it. In either case, a new substance or isotope is created.

Study of these atomic changes and of the effects of radiation from the bombardment process and from the artificially created elements is opening up whole new fields of research to the physical and biological scientist.

In the Famous Bahamas
The Bahamas lie across the Tropic of Cancer, a short distance to the east of the Gulf stream, and this location gives them the climate of perpetual June.Although not the largest island,
New Providence, about the size of Staten Island, is the most important, as it contains the capital, Nassau. The islands number approximately 700. The group is one of Great Britain's three self-governing colonies, sharing this distinction with Bermuda and Barbados. San Salvador or Watling Island, is generally accepted as the landfall of Columbus. It is 12 miles long and seven miles wide and much of its area is covered by a lake.The island of New Providence is about 21 miles in length from east to west and seven miles from north to south. It is mostly flat, though a range of rocky hills makes its appearance.The Bahamas have a population of about 60,000. The city of Nassau represents 20,000, of which two-thirds are colored. Next to New Providence the island of Eleuthera is the largest in population, having about 7,500 natives.The lowest recorded temperature in the annals of the weather bureau is 53 degrees.Popcorn in Aztec Times Popcorn is a peculiarly American crop. In early Spanish writings reference is made to a ritual of the Aztecs in which "one hour before dawn there sallied forth all the maiden, toasted and popped, the grains of which resembled orange blossoms, and looped on their necks thick festoons of the same which passed under the left arm."Falseness and Truth sage of Chinatown, "prefer falseness to truth when it is concealed in flattery."WATERLOOAnnabella Vicary returned home af-

Size of the Baltic Sea
Although the Baltic sea is smaller than the greater sister sea south of the continent, it is a sizable body of water. The distance from the Skag-errak around into the head of the Gulf of Bothnia is more than 900 miles, and the main body of the sea is over 150 miles in width. It will surprise most readers to know that the shores of the Baltic are governed by the same number of governments that control all the Mediterranean, ten in each case. A curious difference between the two seas is that while the Mediterranean is more saline than the ocean outside of the Strait of Gibraltar, the Baltic is almost as fresh as a lake.Canal Open to All Nations Conceived by the French, the Suez canal was at first approved by Egypt, but opposed by Turkey and Britain. Finally completed by the French, it was opened in 1869. In 1875 Britain secretly bought control of the Suez company. In theory the canal is open to ships of all nations, in war as well as peace. Ownership of the canal is due to revert to Egypt in 1988, since it was built on Egyptian land.NORTH FRANCISCOMr. and Mrs. John Miller spent

"Manitoba" means "land of the spirit" and comes from the Algonquin word "manitowah," meaning spirit. It was a generic term for "spirit," identical with the term

Use of the Long 's'

The long 's,' which resembled the 'f,' was generally used for all but the final 's' from the earliest days of printing in the fifteenth century to the end of the eighteenth century, about the year 1800. John Bell of London, publisher of the "British Theater," printed in 1775, is claimed to have been the first to discard the long 's' and Benjamin Franklin wrote in 1786 that the "round s" begins to be the mode, and in nice printing the long 's' is rejected entirely. Oswald's History of Printing reproduces a proclamation of Governor Claiborne of the Mississippi territory in 1804, in three languages. The French and Spanish versions have the long 's,' while the English version has only the small 's.'

Calends, Ides and Nones,

"Beware of the Ides of March," said the soothsayer to Julius Caesar, but the dictator refused to heed the warning, and so on March 15, he was assassinated.

The Ides of March is the name by which March 15 is known in the Roman calendar. The calends, the Ides and the Nones—the only three names by which days in the ancient Roman calendar were known, notes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. The calends were always the first of the month. The Ides were the ninth day after the Nones, both days included, and fell on the fifteenth of March, May, July and October and on the thirtieth of all other months. The Nones were the ninth day before the Ides, again counting both days, and fell on the seventh of March, May, July and October and on the fifth of all other months. All other days were reckoned backward from the Ides, Nones and Calends. The Romans never reckoned forward from these dates. For instance, the Ides of June were June 13, and June 8 was referred to as the sixth of the Ides of June, not as the fourth of the Nones of June. Both dates were always included in the reckoning. January 13 was the Ides of January; January 12, the day before the Ides of January. But January 14 was not called the day after the Ides of January, but the nineteenth of the calends of February. This system of naming the days accounts for the fact that a certain number of days preceding the Ides, Nones and Calends are sometimes loosely called the Ides, Nones and Calends, respectively.

Use Much Cloth in Skirts

Torresco-Indian-Boles, descendant of a distinct old race that inhabits parts of Michoacan state in Mexico and is much admired by American tourists, beat the Dutch in the way of wearing skirts and petticoats. Their average every day skirt requires nine yards of cloth. With it are worn at least two and sometimes as many as five white cotton lace trimmed petticoats. Nobody has ever been able to ascertain why so much skirtage and petticoatage is worn.

Teak Tree Has Long Journey

In Burma the journey of a teak tree from forest to mill requires an incredibly long time. First the tree has to be girdled and dried, says Collier's Weekly, and then dragged to and floated down 1200 miles of river to Rangoon, a job that has been known to take as long as 25 years.

Earliest Corn Grown in Peru. Scientists Report.

Corn on the cob first appeared in the damp savannahs of South America and attained its present form under cultivation by the farmers of prehistoric Peru, the National Academy of Sciences reports.
The origin of maize, or Indian corn, long has been a puzzle to botanists and archeologists. It was due to a single gene mutation from a wild form of pod-corn, in the opinion of agricultural botanists.
Maize, no longer found in a wild state, must originally have had "the two essential characteristics" of pod-corn to survive in the wilderness. These are a protection for the individual kernel and a means of dispersal of the seed.
Troubled by the total absence of wild pod-corn in Peru, the greatest center for cultivation of maize, the scientists looked long before they discovered evidence that it must have grown there in very ancient times. In the Peabody museum at Yale they found a faithful replica of a prehistoric ear of pod-corn of Peruvian workmanship.
Their conclusion was that Peru's able farmers soon cleared their maize fields of the undesirable pod-corn, which appears abundantly in Central America, where the Indians were less civilized and less careful of the purity of their crops.

Builds Nest, Hunts for Bride.
The male stickleback, common in British ponds and streams, is a wonderful father—but a fickle husband, observes a writer in Pearson's London Weekly. He builds a nest, similar to a bird's nest, with decaying vegetation. Then he assumes his brilliant coloring and goes in search of a bride. He brings her home and she lays her eggs in the nest. Then she gets the "order of the boot" and Mr. Stickleback brings home another bride. Then another and another until the nest is full of eggs. He then fertilizes the eggs and mounts guard over them, fanning the water with his fins to keep it circulating. When the young hatch he is still the dutiful parent and watches over them until they are strong enough to fend for themselves.

Stinging Nettle Weeds

Among the Most Useful

Stinging nettles are among the most unpopular and, be it known, the most useful of weeds. From time immemorial, observes a writer in London Tit-Bits magazine, the fiber has been used to make cordage, coarse cloth, and even paper. Young nettle-tops, thoroughly boiled, make a tasty vegetable, and the juice of the leaves cures blood-spitting and other kinds of hemorrhage. Chopped nettleleaves mixed with their food makes fowls lay in the off season, and imparts a gloss to the coats of cattle and horses.
Boiled leaves of dandelion make an excellent substitute for spinach. Bleached they form an agreeable ingredient in a salad. The root has valuable tonic properties, and is particularly good in liver trouble. Many country-folk consider this the finest medicine in the world. They mash the roots in a mortar, and mix with one-third their measure of spirits of wine.
Camomile, another composite plant, is very common on waste ground. The flower-heads provide the familiar camomile tea. Besides being a pleasant drink, this is a fine thing for indigestion. Coltsfoot is another relative of the dandelion, and an excellent cure for coughs. The leaves are either made into a tea, or dried and smoked in a pipe.
