Epidemic of Flu Closes Chelsea Public Schools

Because of the epidemic of flu in the village the Chelsea public schools closed on Friday morning, February 17. School was reopened for a short time on Monday morning but so many students were absent that classes were again dismissed with the announcement that school would reopen on Wednesday morning. However, it was announced Tuesday evening by Supt. Johnson that school would not open until next Monday due to the prolonged nature of the epidemic.

In the attendance report on Friday 128 students were absent and the report on Monday showed 199 students absent in addition to three teachers. This report does not include the absences in the kindergarten.

This week's forced vacation will eliminate the regular spring vacation with the exception of Good Friday and the following Monday, according to Supt. Johnson.

The only school activity this week will be the basketball game with Tecumseh, which will be played here Friday night.

Hunters Fail To Send In Required Reports

Lansing—What action may be taken against hunters who have failed to send in their 1938 season reports as required by state law is a question now under consideration in the law enforcement division of the department of conservation.

The deadline for making the reports, as fixed in the statute, was Feb. 15 but thousands of hunters have not yet sent in their cards. The number is even larger than the number who were tardy a year ago, notwithstanding a last minute rush just before the deadline.

Approximately 80,000 deer and bear hunters and approximately 150,000 small game hunters had met the requirements of the law by the deadline. A year ago at the same time, however, nearly 100,000 deer and bear hunters and more than 200,000 small game hunters had reported.

No action was taken last year against hunters who failed to report, but this year's decline in the number who have complied with the law, combined with the importance of the information sought in the reports, is regarded with considerable concern. Under the law, failure to report constitutes a misdemeanor, the maximum penalty for which is a fine of $100 or a sentence of 60 days, or both.

As explained by game investigators, the purpose in setting up the report system was not to create an annoyance for hunters but to provide a more reliable and comprehensive method of obtaining information regarding hunting and game conditions throughout the state. Such information, it is explained, is needed in the formation of wildlife management policies conducive to the improvement of hunting conditions and, for that reason contributes to the very sport the hunters enjoy.

No immediate action is likely, the desire being to give hunters all possible grace, but it is not likely that deliberate evasion of the statute will be countenanced.

NOTICE

All residents of the Elm street section who are now residents of the village as the result of last year's annexation proceedings are requested to re-register in order to be eligible to vote at the regular village election on March 13, according to James Munro, village clerk. The last day for registration is March 4, at Sylvan town hall.

Senior Play Postponed

Because of the closing of school this week the second presentation of the Senior play has been postponed and will not be held tonight as previously announced.

Fitzgerald Economy Realization Would Be a First-Rate Miracle

Lansing—How the Fitzgerald administration is going to rescue the schools, increase old age pensions and perform other heroic acts of financial generosity, while at the same time it effects that much-promised $8,500,000 payroll saving appears now to merit the classification of a first-rate miracle.

Six weeks of consistent economy efforts by the governor have achieved some headway, but the goal is still a long ways off.

Senator McCallum of Ann Arbor, who solemnly warned voters last fall that the state deficit was in the neighborhood of $66,000,000, took his legislative colleagues to task the other day by reviewing appropriation demands, already $55,000,000 a year in excess of anticipated revenue, and calling attention to the mounting cost of state institutions. It was a most gloomy talk.

Hospital Additions

The state hospital building program, conceded by everyone to be imperatively needed, will cost $2,000,000 more from the treasury before it is completed. The institutions will then cost close to $500,000 more each year in salaries and maintenance.

"Where is this money coming from?" Senator McCallum asked. "This is a question I want to have answered. We have a big deficit on our hands. If we appropriate large sums of money early in the session, we may have to deprive others later on of needed money."

The comment was voiced during consideration of a $150,000 annual appropriation to advertise Michigan as a tourist state. This amount, voted in 1937, gives $25,000 a year to each of the four tourist associations and $50,000 a year to the state administrative board. According to facts brought out by Senator Bishop of Alpena and Senator VanderWerp of Fremont, Michigan receives back in

Cassidy Lake School Visited By Kiwanians

The Chelsea Kiwanis club its regular Monday evening meeting as guests of the Cassidy Lake NYA Technical School. After the supper a program of music and speaking was presented by members of the camp, and replies made by Kiwanians. The club members were then taken on a tour of the camp.

Many of the visitors expressed themselves as amazed that such a splendid project with tremendous social implications for young men should have been developed in this immediate community without their knowledge of its value. A false notion is held by some citizens that this is a camp for delinquents. Nothing would seem farther from the truth. One hundred sixty boys are in camp, each of whom has been recommended by three responsible citizens of his own community. They come from all over the state. They come to live together, work together, study together and play together. Samples of their work shows high class workmanship. It is primarily a trade school.

The camp is a great economic asset to Chelsea. Each boy receives for his work at the camp $30 a month, much of which is spent in this village. In other words the major part of $4800 every month flows into the economic life of the village.

Each boy is expected to divide his work roughly into thirds: One for the further development of the camp, one for the maintenance and operation of the camp, and one in study and practical work in education. Discipline is under the control of a student council, and is maintained at a high level.

An invitation was extended to the club to visit the camp again, either collectively or individually. Any citizen is free to visit the camp at any time, and a guide will be assigned for a tour of observation.

HEAVY RAINFALL SUNDAY

Chelsea experienced a heavy rain which began early Sunday morning and continued most of the day and until 3 o'clock Monday morning. Some streets were running rivers as the result of the heavy downpour. The second thunderstorm of the season occurred in the afternoon. The thermometer went to 54 degrees on Sunday afternoon. Monday morning the temperature had fallen several degrees and continued to fall during the morning and in the early afternoon registered 27 degrees. Creeks overflowed their banks and it is reported that some roads were washed out.

LARGE PIKE BITING

Pike fishing in this vicinity is very popular just at present. Last Thursday Herbert Wallace landed an 11-pound pike at Cavanaugh Lake and on Saturday caught a three pound pike from the same hole in the ice. On Sunday Karl Kantlehner caught an 11½ pound pike on Blind Lake.

Some drivers feel that their ability to get out of a tight spot is a demonstration of skill. They drive recklessly, heedless of traffic rules, feeling secure in the knowledge that they know how to handle a car.

A driver may get a thrill from getting out of a tight spot by quick and expert handling of his car, but he should not boast about it or get "cocky", because a good driver rarely gets into a tight spot. He is always careful on the approach of intersections, schools, crossroads, and other places where there is a possibility of his meeting other drivers.

The anticipation of an accident at these spots is the practice of all good drivers.

It's smart to drive carefully!

Ideas Will Increase Safety In the Home

An old mariner sang "Safe, safe at home," in an old song. But the National Safety Council refutes that idea easily with figures that in a single year 23,000 persons are killed and nearly three million injured in home accidents, many resulting from carelessness.

More accidents are caused by falls than any other reason. Next come burns, scalds and explosions, then asphyxiation and suffocation.

These winter weeks are proper to look about the home for possible hazards and to correct them. Miss Evalyn Bergstrand, specialist in home management at Michigan State College, suggests projects for the man who is handy with the hammer and saw.

Some of the stairway falls could be averted if there were a strong handrail the length of the flight. Falls are more common on stairs that are badly lighted. It may be possible to put in a window or install two-way switches at the top and bottom of such a flight. Most people who have young children put up baby gates at the top of the stairs. But often children, too young to walk, climb up a flight of stairs nearly to the top and then topple backward. Top and bottom gates would be better.

Putting things on the top or bottom step to be carried down or up by the next person going that way, used to be recommended as a good step-saving idea. And it is, except that from the standpoint of safety it is a poor plan to use the step, for people are likely to stumble over such articles before they see them. A small shelf or table at the landing would serve the same purpose and would be safer.

On the cellar stairs it is a good idea to paint the bottom step white, and to provide for illumination. Outside the house, steps to porches and doorways are exposed to rain, and dampness. They may not reveal a rotted condition until someone has had a bad fall or a wrenched ankle. Frequent inspection and prompt repair when needed would avoid trouble.

Toys, cleaning tools, and other articles left on the floor also cause falls. This hazard may be due to lack of well-planned storage places and again offers a chance for winter work making the house more convenient and safer.

If the house does not own a sturdy stepladder, now is the time to buy or make one. Too many falls are caused by standing on teetery chairs or shaky boxes set on chairs to dust, change light bulbs, or hang pictures or curtains.

Another common kind of fall that always seems ludicrous but may be quite serious is a fall in the bathtub. A strong hand-hold on the wall helps to steady the user when getting in or out.

There seems no excuse for a fall out of an upper-story window, yet one occasionally hears of an accident of this sort. Metal screens, properly installed, will usually protect children from such accidents and at the same time will keep out flies and mosquitoes.

Our Neighbors

BRIGHTON — At the Appleton White Star service station Saturday morning, a stranger, who had made a small purchase at the station the preceding Thursday, drove up and anxiously inquired of Lawrence, if anyone had picked up a cuff link which he was quite sure he had lost there. As it happened, James Appleton had, the morning following the stranger's first visit, found a cuff link while sweeping up and possibly thinking it one of the "ten cent" variety, tossed it on a shelf among other odds and ends which accumulate in every home and business place. Remembering this, Larry went over to the shelf, rescued the link and handed it to the stranger who, after comparing it with one he took from his pocket, claimed it as his property. "I'm sure glad to find it again," the stranger remarked. "These cuff links were a present from my wife and cost $150." Diamonds—and lying on a shelf open to everybody for over 48 hours! With the remark that had he known it, the valuable would have had the dignity of reposing in the office safe instead of on an open shelf, Larry was handed $2.00 by the stranger, accompanied by his sincere thanks.—Argus.

MASON—Ray David Matull, 30, of Kalamazoo horrified a group of Williamston spectators Thursday evening when he leaped to his death from the top of the village's new 85-foot water tower erected last summer. Matsull had been around Williamston several hours asking for food and employment. He appeared to be mentally unbalanced. Finally he climbed to the top of the water tower. For an hour he climbed around the top of the tower and at one time apparently started to descend. He took his foot from the ladder and sat on top of the tower and then fell off. The identity of the suicide victim was not known until late Thursday night when fingerprint records revealed the man as Matull. The fingerprint record was made voluntarily four years ago, state police said.—County News.

PLYMOUTH—Officials of the Daisy Manufacturing company announced early this week the purchase of the American Ball company of Minneapolis, Minnesota. The acquisition of this large manufacturing plant has long been considered by the Daisy officials and in making the purchase announcement, they stated that the present excellent attitude of the employes of their company had influenced them greatly in the deal because the ultimate effect of the operation of the new company here in Plymouth will do two important things for the company and its employes.—Mail.

Cities Mobilize to Clean Up River for Parkway

Cities along the Huron Valley are mobilizing to clean up the river in anticipation of the passage by the Michigan legislature of a bill authorizing the creation of a Huron-Clinton parkway-playground area, according to Dr. Henry S. Curtis, executive secretary of the Huron-Clinton Parkway Committee.

"Most of the action has been spontaneous," said Dr. Curtis, who added that the work was largely concerned with the erection of sewage disposal plants and the acquisition of river-front park sites.

"With the completion of sewage disposal facilities at Brighton, Flat Rock and Rockford, the whole length of the Huron river will be free from pollution," said Dr. Curtis. "Particularly noteworthy is the action of the Milford city council in adopting a resolution asking the city's senator and representative in Lansing to support the bill authorizing the Huron-Clinton parkland area."

Milford, South Lyon, Brighton, Chelsea, Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti already have sewage disposal plants or are making plans. Belleville has old disposal facilities which are to be renovated.

Brighton is now at work on a sewage disposal plant. Wayne county has granted an appropriation to take care of sewage at Flat Rock and Rockford.

Ypsilanti has cleaned up its water front, improved the channel at that point, and has bolstered the bank against erosion. The city also owns a large waterfront park site.

Dexter is negotiating with Henry Ford to obtain land along Mill Creek for a park site, and Milford has tentatively selected 20 acres of riverside parkland.

In the Clinton Valley area, Utica has completed a sewage disposal plant and Rochester and Pontiac are at work on disposal facilities.

Birmingham, situated on the Red Run, a tributary of the Clinton, and the Rouge, is also constructing a sewage disposal plant.

Fitzgerald Economy Realization Would Be a First-Rate Miracle

the form of sales taxes paid by out-state tourists ten times this appropriation every year.

$337,000 More Wages

An actual comparison of the state payroll in January, 1937, and in January, 1939, shows an increase of $337,000 on the Fitzgerald ledger instead of a decrease. The governor's office payroll, for example, was $3,225 in January, 1939, as compared with $2,365 in January, 1937.

Of course, these facts paint a gloomy picture, but they are incomplete to the extent that much of Fitzgerald's economy deeds could not take immediate effect. Employees are entitled to reasonable notice. Reductions of staffs can not be achieved always over night.

As the administration enters into its eighth week, it is becoming more and more clear that Governor Fitzgerald will be fortunate if he manages to balance the budget.

Labor Relations

Another plan in the administration's program is sound labor relations—giving every man a fair chance to get and keep a job.

Step No. 1 was to be a labor relations mediation board which was to settle strikes, if possible, without a loss of production for the manufacturer and a loss of wages for the workers.

Accordingly a bill was introduced simultaneously in the senate and house, known as the "governor's labor bill", which among other things would require a ten-day notice for a strike, would legalize picketing (now illegal), force manufacturers to hire back workers who went out on a legal strike and to pay them wages during the 10-day interum, and otherwise restrict both sides in the interest of the public.

Labor, Industry Critical

First, organized labor registered emphatic objections to the 10-day clause. While they liked legalized picketing, they opposed a requirement that only the workers of the involved plant could demonstrate. They spoke heatedly of their "right to strike" without notice.

They especially disliked the restriction that workers who violated the 10-day strike notice would make themselves liable to loss of their legal standing as an employee.

Both the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. joined in a loud chorus of protest. Governor Fitzgerald was booed at a labor convention in Detroit. Mention of Daniel A. Knaggs, former mayor of Monroe, who was appointed one of the state labor commissioners, evoked a noisy storm.

It became evident that labor didn't want restrictions on labor any more than the Michigan Manufacturers' association wanted restrictions on industry. John Lovett, counsel for industrialist, declared that a permanent labor mediation board would incite trouble instead of preventing it. He suggested that a state commissioner be empowered to appoint a special arbitration committee to fit the particular needs of each labor difficulty and that restrictions be few in number, if any at all.

Welfare Bill

Faced with a clash of interests between the cities and rural areas, Governor Fitzgerald has chosen to compromise on the drafting of provisions for the welfare reorganization bill.

Aimed to eliminate costly duplications of agencies handling relief and to promote efficiency and economy, the welfare measure follows closely the provisions of the welfare reorganization act defeated in last year's referendum. It provides for more local control which is satisfactory to supervisors, but allots welfare funds on the basis of need rather than of population, which suits city officials.

This is a controversial topic in Lansing, and the welfare bill will have tough sledding before it is enacted into law.

Children In Court

By Judge Malcolm Hatfield

The Problem of Adequate Discipline

A mother frequently complained that her children were shiftless; that she much preferred to wash the dishes alone than to shout herself literally hoarse in trying to get her daughter to help. This mother did not realize that industry is merely an acquired habit.

Parents who permit children to evade their responsibilities should realize that such a practice becomes a fixed habit. No child should ever be humored when he loses his temper or sulks when asked to perform certain duties around the home. The boy who learns to perform a specific task each day is not so easily side-tracked when he is forced to confront the realities that accompany his first steady employment.

No child who has failed to learn discipline and to form certain definite traits of character should be allowed to start on a career of self expression. Both the mind and the personality are developed by training and practice. Parents should take advantage of every opportunity presented in the home to develop industry and character in their children.

Scans Certified Seed Bins To Aid Farmers

Surveys of Michigan's seed bins to determine how much certified seed is available for planting some of the state's principal crops has been completed by R. E. Decker, farm crops specialist of Michigan State College.

Only a small percentage of each crop is planted annually from certified seeds, but the process is termed necessary. Farmers need to renew seed supplies every two to four years in order to maintain purity, high quality standards, and avoid disease injury.

Decker finds there is about 10,000 bushels of certified Michelite beans, sufficient only for about 5 per cent of Michigan's bean acreage.

There are approximately 7,000 bushels of certified oats, a smaller amount than usual and enough to plant only about one half of one per cent of the oats acreage. Barley certified for seed is about the same in volume, sufficient for about three per cent of the state's usual seedings.

Open pollenated and hybrid corn certified for seed totals 17,000 bushels, enough for about eight per cent of the Michigan corn acreage.

Decker suggests greater use of certified seed by the average farmer. Potato growers seeking a high quality product for market might find it an advantage to use certified seed each year, he says. Grains such as oats, barley, wheat and beans can be guarded through careful production and clean threshing, but ought to be replaced with new seed each three years. Certified growers find their specialized industry holds two goals, to increase and perpetuate new varieties and to perpetuate purity in varieties.

Forced to Live on Boats

The Tanka of China are the only people, so far as is known, who were ever forbidden to own or to live on the land of their country. Until the downfall of the monarchy in 1912, observes Collier's Weekly, they were made to live on boats or in pile dwellings on the waterways in and around Canton. They were also prohibited from intermarrying with land people and attending land schools.

Question And Answer Dept.

Problem—In one inning of a regular baseball game the fourth batter up hit a terrific home run with three on, and still not a man scored. Well, well, how come? (Answer elsewhere in this department).

Ques.—Does Japan own any of the Hawaiian Islands?

Ans.—No. The Hawaiian Islands are owned by the United States. While the Japanese Mandate extends out into the Pacific ocean about two thousand miles, it does not reach to the Hawaiian Islands.

Ques.—In playing contract bridge, when is a team vulnerable and not vulnerable?

Ans.—Contract bridge is played in "rubbers". Three 4-deals constitute the rubbers. When one team wins the first round, then that team is not vulnerable; if the opponents win the second round, then both teams are vulnerable. Of course, at the beginning of the rubbers, both teams are not vulnerable.

Ques.—I wish to ask you what kind of meat is venison?

Ans.—Venison is simply deer meat.

Ques.—Why are the walls of a building usually blown outward by a tornado?

Ans.—In the terrific whirl of the big, black funnel-shaped tornado, the centrifugal force of the air creates a partial vacuum around the house, the air inside the house does not have time to escape through the windows and doors, and thus it blows the house outward.

Ques.—What does Rev. Charles E. Coughlin propose as a remedy for our economic ills?

Ans.—He proposes the adoption of 16 principles, the most important of which is the "abolition of the 12 Federal Reserve Banks (which are privately owned), and the establishment of a central, government-owned bank in Washington, with all other banks to be privately owned, and subsidiary to the Central Bank, and that the Government make and issue the money of the United States."

Ques.—How does a dog wag his tail?

Ans.—We don't know, but we might tell you how the tail might wag the dog.

Ques.—Why is it cooler on high places than it is on places lower down?

Ans.—The air on the earth is what holds the heat in, much like the glass of a hot-house holds the heat inside it. On a mountain top or other high places the air is thinner and does not hold the heat in so well.

Answer to problem—Both teams were composed entirely of girls—and, of course, no MAN scored.

Ques.—How do whales breathe under water when they have no gills like other fish?

Ans.—A whale is not a fish, but a mammal. They cannot breathe under water; they come to the surface for air. When they take on a load of air they are ready to sink and remain submerged for an hour or more before it is necessary for them to rise to the surface for another load.

Ques.—Who was Amerigo Vespucci?

Ans.—He was an explorer, after whom America was named. He was the first to discover that America was not a part of Asia. Discovered Venezuela in 1499.

Your University

PERSONS, PLACES AND ACTIVITIES YOU HAVE HEARD OR READ ABOUT AT THE UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN

Devoted entirely to the study and treatment of pernicious anemia and related diseases of the blood, the Thomas Henry Simpson Memorial Institute for Medical Research of the University of Michigan has been one of America's leading agencies in combatting this disease.

It was through investigations carried on in the Simpson Memorial Institute that the Ventriculin treatment for pernicious anemia was developed. This treatment is now widely used in fighting the disease.

The Institute was a gift to the University from Mrs. Christine M. Simpson as a memorial to her husband who died of pernicious anemia. Her gift included $150,000 for the building shown above and a $250,000 endowment.

Since the Institute was opened in 1927, over 700 patients with pernicious anemia, as well as many other patients with other types of the disease, have been examined and treated by the staff. The knowledge which has been accumulated by various investigators has been made available to the medical profession through 129 publications in various medical journals in the last nine years. Further, members of the staff of the Institute have collaborated in the teaching of medical students in the University.

'Blowing Your Own Trumpet'

When we speak of the fellow who "blows his own trumpet" we refer to his habit of indulging in self-praise. The phrase comes from the ancient custom whereby the name and rank of knights and other important personages were announced at banquets, balls and other functions by heralds, who usually preceded the announcement with a flourish on trumpets, says Pearson's London Weekly. Those who had no social standing were left to "blow their own trumpet," or, in other words, to make their presence known to one another without being announced.

The Three Pious Monkeys

The three pious monkey statuettes of Japan that "speak no evil, see no evil and hear no evil" are not good advocates of such a fine threefold moral. These animals are macaques, says Collier's Weekly, which are among the most quarrelsome, thievish and untrustworthy of all primates.

Amethyst Is a Quartz

The amethyst is a quartz of clear purple or bluish-violet color, due to the presence of manganese. The dark reddish-purple is the most highly prized. Wade's "Textbook of Precious Stones" says the chief charm of the Siberian amethyst lies in its large red component, which enables it to change from a deep grape-purple by daylight to a fine red by artificial light that is rich in red rays and poor in blue ones.

Band News

Due to the fact that school has not been in session this week the band will not play at the basketball game Friday evening.

The band and orchestra were both scheduled to play for the Band-Orchestra Parents' meeting Tuesday evening, the 28th. It will be necessary to leave out the orchestra on that evening, because there will not be time enough to get both organizations in condition before that date.

First Grade News

The boys and girls of the First Grade entertained their mothers at an afternoon tea on Valentine's Day. Invitations were written by the children and Valentine decorations added an appropriate touch to the party.

Plans for the tea were made by the children. Corky Dreyer and Phyllis Munro received the mothers as they arrived. Each child served his own mother.

The mothers were entertained by inspecting some of the work which the children had done during the year. Following this the children were led by Miss Sprague in singing some of the songs which they have learned this year.

The mothers who attended were: Mrs. Wheeler, Mrs. Eschelbach and her mother, Mrs. Morea, Mrs. Maroney, Mrs. Schaible, Mrs. White, Mrs. McClure, Mrs. Eder, Mrs. Munro, Mrs. Weir, Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Dreyer, Mrs. Chrisawell, Mrs. Lantis, and Mrs. Vogel. Mr. Johnson was present also.

Chelsea Repeats Defeat

The Chelsea lads outplayed the Manchester quintet Tuesday night in a fast moving game at the latters' gym.

Policht, Dingle, Schneider, Daniels, Capt. Alber and Fletcher started for the Purple and Gold.

Our boys scored early in the first quarter but couldn't seem to forge ahead. The entire game was a series of rallies for both teams. It was a toss-up until the final gun sounded, when Chelsea led, 22-21.

Alber walked off with high score honors with ten points to his credit. Daniels, who hasn't been with the boys for the last few games, and Schneider made very good showings. Haselschwerdt, triple-threat forward, did not don the Purple and Gold because he is convalescing from a recent illness. Riemenschneider, up and coming Junior, did not participate in Tuesday night's battle but is one of Coach "Charlie" Cameron's chief prospects for next year.

Tomorrow night marks the close of the basketball season in Chelsea High. We meet the Tecumseh Indians at our gym at that time and a record crowd is expected.

The boys have played a hard schedule and, with your splendid cooperation, has been quite a successful one. Let's wind up the season with as nearly one hundred per cent attendance as possible—your way of saying "thanks" to the basketball boys who have worked so hard to make this 1938-39 season a success.

The loss of Alber, Haselschwerdt, Dingle, Daniels, Fletcher and Rossbach by graduation will be deeply felt by all who have seen these boys play.

TELLS ABOUT EXPOSITION

In a letter to her mother, Mrs. Faye Palmer, concerning the opening of the Golden Gate Exposition, Mrs. John V. Copren of San Francisco, made the following comment: Everyone here has gone completely crazy. There is a sort of hoodlum spirit in the air, and at night you hear people yelling and guns (blank cartridges, of course) being shot off. Lots of the men have beards and are wearing ten gallon hats and scarfs and plenty more are dressed in cowboy outfits. Of course all the youngsters are dressed in cowboy outfits. Occasionally you see a woman dressed up. You have probably read this in the papers or heard it on the radio, but it's all tremendously exciting to see. I wish you were here right now. The official opening of the fair was yesterday and there was a big parade for which we had a grandstand seat right on Market Street. It was a swell parade, too. We are going to see an electric parade tonight. I'm so excited; everyone is—the air just vibrates with it!

She was attended by Mrs. Paul Wells of Jackson, sister of the groom, who was attired in blue crepe and carried pink and white roses. George Buss, brother of the bride, performed the duties of best man.

The house was decorated with yellow and white streamers and a large white wedding bell. Yellow tapers illuminated the dining table, where a wedding supper was served at the close of the ceremony. The occasion also celebrated the 41st wedding anniversary of the bride's parents.

The Potholes lay some twenty-five miles to the south and a little east of Breck's station; a country of small round meadows sunk below steep ridges, connected by narrow ravines, and all occupying a hollow where the Sierra roof began to break into lower levels. Nesters had come there and settled, a man to a meadow, before the district was made a federal forest. Now government land surrounded them, yet they remained independent of the reserve.

This much Breck had learned from Cook when he first came on the job, along with the ranger's statement: "God knows what they live on! They don't graze cattle and they don't farm. They handle Tillson's bootleg some and get their thirty-five cents an hour fire-fighting. They'll bear a look any time you're in that part."

Leading his pack, Breck could make only four miles an hour along a trail that climbed and descended and climbed again. Long before he came within sight of the Potholes he saw a mushroom of smoke above that area. It grew steadily black at first, showing the fire was in brush, then took on the gray of burning timber. When he topped a rise about eleven o'clock, and looked into the hollow country, the whole basin was obscured in a cloud.

The main blaze seemed further east of the Potholes, centered on the flank of a cone-shaped peak. Here an occasional curl of red flame burst up through the smoke. He turned in that direction, dipping downward in order to pass the nester settlement. It came into view hazily; half a dozen weathered buildings, store, blacksmith shop, a few houses scattered at the forest's edge.

A group of men loafed in front of the shop. Breck rode there at once, saying as he halted, "Is Weller here?"

It took no more than a glance to put them down as a shiftless lot. They wore overalls mostly, unwashed since the day they left the counter, ragged shirts, and stared with sullen indifference from bearded faces. He repeated, "Where is Weller?"

One jerked a thumb toward the smithy. Breck dismounted, left Kit tied to a hitching bar and strode to the smithy's door. Immediately he was confronted by a thin-bodied, thin-faced man who appeared out of the black interior. His eyes were small and close, and his nose seemed wrinkled in perpetual animosity.

"What do you want, Ranger?" It was a blunt demand.

Breck spoke with sudden anger. "Are you Weller?"

"I reckon."

"Then what's the matter with you nesters? Why aren't you on that fire?" Breck whirled from the door. "Come on now and get a crew!"

Weller followed at a slow pace. "Can't fight with no tools, mister."

"There's the box. Nothing to stop you." Breck waved a hand toward the service chest that stood under a tree not far off.

"Sure, there's a box," Weller agreed. "Help yourself."

Breck went to it and flung back the cover. Space inside was empty save for one shovel and a rusted brush-hook without a handle.

"Ain't that too bad now?" said Weller, casually stuffing his pipe. "We can't do a thing."

"How about tools of your own?" Breck demanded.

"Ain't got none, mister."

Weller lied and Breck knew it. He surveyed the groups of men, puzzled. Why this backing away from a fire when usually they wanted government money? It was certainly because someone else was paying them off.

A roar of fire burst from the mountain. Breck pushed the one shovel to Weller. "Take that. I've got an extra ax. Get a horse and come with me."

Weller shook his head. "No horse here. You see——"

"Walk then!"

Breck turned and mounted, deliberately ignoring what might go on behind his back. He heard a muttered conversation, then Weller's sullen call: "Kid, fetch Pete!"

In a moment a boy came from the blacksmith shop riding a dun burro and leading a brown mule. He halted near Breck, looking at him with serious, old man's eyes. Breck returned the glance, seeing a boy of perhaps ten, bare-footed, dressed in cast-off cow country shirt and breeches. But his face was not ten, having more the solemn lines of a long hard life.

The expression moved Breck. He smiled and reached one hand across to him. "Hello, son. Going to fight fire?"

His grip was returned sturdily. "My name's Jack. That's a Luger gun you got—ain't it?"

Breck laughed at the abrupt questioning. He drew the weapon from his holster. "Ever see one before?"

"Yep. I'd a window down at Lone Tree. A soldier brought it home from the war. Was you a soldier?"

"For awhile," Breck affirmed.

Two brown eyes surveyed him with unconcealed worship. "I'd sure admire to go fire-fightin' with ye, but Pap ain't allow'n it."

"Is Weller your Pap?" Breck asked, returning the gun to his belt.

Jack nodded.

"Then I'll ask him to let you go."

Instantly the solemn face lighted. "Would ye now?"

Weller approached from the group and mounted his mule without a word. Breck wheeled away. The boy started to follow, timidly, his eyes upon the other man. Seeing him, Weller snapped: "You, kid! Get out of here!"

Breck turned in his saddle. "I'm hiring him to tend camp." He met Weller's glare evenly. "Come on, Jack."

He had not realized the full extent of the job that confronted him until he came fully upon the fireline. Two men and a boy against more than a mile front of blazing timber. Don Quixote and the windmill!

The only way was the hardest one. Upon approaching as near as he dared Breck hated to go, but as quickly as possible he turned, threw off the pack and left the boy there to make camp. Then taking Weller, Jack and Pete, he circled the blaze and came to a belt of thin pine half a mile above it.

Weller had remained silent during their climb. Now he swung one leg over his mule's back and squinted down the mountain. "Figurin' to start your back fire here, eh?"

Breck studied the spot. It seemed right. An afternoon wind had not yet sprung up to carry the lower flames rapidly.

"Yes," he answered, "anything wrong with it?"

Weller shrugged. "Suits me. You're the ranger."

Breck would have given much for advice. This was his first fire. But the screwed-up expression of the nester's face foretold that any question would be useless.

Breck swung from Kit, tied him, and then with shovel and brush-hook went furiously to work. There was nothing furious about Weller's method. Breck presently began to realize the wisdom of slower effort. At the rate he started, his strength would be spent long before a sufficient back fire had been built.

Foot by foot they cleared a path and lighted it on the down side, until by mid-afternoon they had made considerable of a fireline. Resting a moment, Breck wiped the grime from his face and stared through burning eyes along the mountain. In a few hundred yards he would have the main blaze completely paralleled. A surge of victory swept him.

But at three o'clock the wind changed. He heard Weller shout from behind him. "Better get out of here! We ain't goin' to make it!"

A rumble like distant cannonading rolled up the mountain. Breck saw a wave of flame curl into the pine tops, though at his position the air was still motionless. The wave broke, spread, leaped high in its own draft and then swept up toward him in a solid red front.

In less than ten minutes his back fire was engulfed. The main blaze ran around the end where he had not yet completed a line, and watching from a distance, he saw his hours of labor overcome in a moment. A sense of defeat weakened him. Fatigue deadened his muscles. He realized his hunger. Yet the fire before his eyes, having become concentrated in a canyon bottom, was like a red monster writhing upward. Something that must be killed. He grabbed his ax. If he could cut off its head . . .

A plan came suddenly. He ran to Weller who had gone on to their horses. Pointing up the ridge, he shouted, "We'll begin there this time."

"Not me," the nester broke in. "I've got a bum foot and need rest."

"Man, you can't quit!" Breck retorted.

"Got to rest," Weller repeated doggedly, "done put in my four hours."

Breck stood measuring him with his eyes. "Weller," he said, "you aren't quitting because you're tired, and I know it. You're throwing in with the wrong side—all of you Potholers. Better come across the line before it's too late."

Weller shrugged. "I don't get your meaning, mister."

"And that's a lie," Breck answered. "Do you think I'm blind? You and the Tillsons can't hold off the government forever!"

He saw a look of apprehension cross the other man's face. Weller turned a little from him; his shoulders fell. In his whole attitude, with body slumped and mouth drawn tight, he seemed for a moment, driven, helpless before something beyond himself.

"Now do you know what I mean?" Breck urged. "I'm giving you a chance. Let's get onto that fire."

Visibly the nester made an effort to draw himself up. He straightened, but then hesitated, shoving his hands into his pockets. "You ain't talkin' to me," he blustered. "Not any"

Breck knew further words were futile. It was not in his power to force the fellow. He sprang upon Kit, and wheeling away, rode alone into the red flood upon the mountain flank.

CHAPTER XV

The first back fire had failed because of poor judgment in gauging what distance the main blaze could advance. Breck would not fall into the same error twice and now rode far up the slope to where a granite ledge, thrown part way across the burning canyon, formed a natural break in the timber. He left Kit, and starting beyond the granite protrusion, once more plunged into the job.

Yet he had spent his strength on the fight that afternoon. Smoke strangled him. The ax weighed tons. He drank the last water from his canteen, believing the boy would soon come up with more. An hour passed without relief. Then time slipped from his memory.

He started as if in sleep when a voice called, "Ranger! Ranger!" Dusk had come. "Here!" he answered. Soon Jack rode his burro out of the smoke.

His old man's face was drawn with fright and a bloody welt lay along one cheek. He spoke breathlessly, throwing a pack of rations and two canteens from his shoulders. "Tried to get 'em here sooner. Pap whipped me. Goin' to whip me again if he finds out. Don't you tell him, will you?"

Breck dropped to the ground and drank before asking, "Where's your pap now?"

"Gone below. Says he's sprained a foot. Sure the devil he is, but he don't get drunk, he don't. Say, can I see the Luger gun again?"

Breck handed over the weapon and then broke into a ration bag. While he ate from a can of beef, Jack tried the Luger in his belt, squinted down the sights and at last returned it reluctantly.

"You won't be tellin' Pap?" he repeated.

"No," Breck promised. "I won't."

"Then I better be getting along. Someone's afollerin' me and I can't be seen." The boy moved off.

Breck gripped his arm. "Someone following you? Who is it?"

"Don't know." Jack stared up, fear in his eyes. "Let me go, mister."

But Breck held him. He believed Jack knew, and taking a chance, said confidingly, "I'm not going to let the Tillsons hurt you. Don't be frightened."

"Aw, I ain't afeared it's them," was the innocent reply. "They left yesterday." The boy hesitated, then turned a puzzled face. "Mister, how did you know they was here? You ain't supposed to."

Breck released the small arm. "Then you haven't any idea who this is?"

"Nary a bit. Just heard 'em. One horse I reckon. Yonder." He pointed north.

Breck considered. It might be relief from headquarters. "Jack," he said, "let's make a bargain. I won't tell your pap that you brought some grub to me, and you won't tell anyone that I know the Tillsons came to the Potholes yesterday. How about it?"

The boy's hand clutched his. "There's my mit, Ranger. Now can I go?"

Breck walked a few steps with him, adding, "And Jack, if you ever need help, come to me. Will you?"

The reply burst eagerly. "I sure will!"

Jack sent his burro scrambling along the mountainside. Breck returned to the fireline. There, again swinging his brush-hook, he considered what the boy had inadvertently told him. Things were plain enough. Even if Tillsons had not started this fire, they had ordered the nesters to keep out. What was their hold on the crowd down there?

Just before a new sound in the night cut short his thoughts he came to a definite conclusion. He'd go down among the nesters when this fire was out.

A horse nickered suddenly from a distance. Back on the mountain slope Kit answered. Breck held the brush-hook in mid-air and stood listening. Yet after the first call nothing came save the crackle of his back fire and the deeper roar of the main blaze below.

By nine o'clock he had reached the canyon bottom and was firing his line up the side. But strength was gone from his arms. Breath came in thin gasps, hot and lifeless. His body burned as if from some dry fever. He began to see red spots. Savagely he brushed them away, but one remained. It grew even as he looked, lengthening into a ribbon there on the canyon bank above him.

He stared, then suddenly knew. Relief had come! That was a back fire being built toward his position. He swung on with ax and hook. The line ahead advanced, until in the calm of ten o'clock, the two were almost joined. He shouted through the brush: "Slim! Cook!"

If there was an answer, the snap of flames drowned it. He cut through a wall of chinkapin. A voice met him and he halted, speechless, gaping into Louise Temple's smoke-lined face.

"You here?" he managed at last.

"On the job, Ranger! Cook telephoned to the Meadow asking for help. I came." Louise relaxed on her shovel handle.

Breck moved back from the heat and sat down, all at once sick and cursing himself for being so weak. The girl came to him.

"Don't mind me," he protested. "I'm a fine ranger!"

Louise held a canteen to his lips. "What do you expect, after a fight like this? Now sit here. It's all right. See? The wind has shifted at last."

Breck looked through half blind eyes. The change had come. His back fire was sweeping down, licking into the line below. A wave of flame shot up as the two met. It fell at once, broke into isolated sections and vanished with incredible swiftness. Only snags of standing timber were left to blaze against the night.

"And that's that," said Louise, beside him. "We won't even have to watch those snags. It's going to rain. I felt a mist when I came over the ridge." She held up her hands. "There!"

Breck turned his face to the sky, feeling a moist breeze descend as the heat of fire subsided. He stood up, taking the girl's arm. "I've got a camp lower down. We'd better get under cover."

Even as they reached their horses and rode to the stream, the mist became a drizzle. In camp, Breck hung a tarpaulin between two trees, pegged one edge of it back to make a lean-to, and built a fire in front. His bed roll he threw inside for a seat and then went down to the pool to wash.

When he returned Louise had started a meal, and though rain was falling about him he halted to watch her. She sat on a saddle close to the fire, the red light upon a pensive face, her small figure bent, with knees drawn up. A coffee pot steamed over the coals. Something fried in the pan she held.

He remained silent until Louise announced, "If you're hungry enough, you can begin on this government mule. I'm starved!"

With tin plates on the blanket roll, they sat opposite each other, their saddles for seats. Breck tried to capture again the feeling that they belonged like this always. He wanted to forget the Tillsons, the nesters, and the troubles of his job. But a thought had come and would not be put down.

Wade's "Text Book of Precious Stones" gives the factors governing the value of pearls in this order: orient or luster, color, texture of skin, shape and size. The unit of weight is the pearl grain, which is one-fourth of a diamond carat. The value increases as the square of the weight, apart from other factors.

Indian Wars Depopulated Ohio

The Ohio country, once a rich hunting ground for 12,000 to 15,000 Indians, was virtually uninhabited for several decades about 300 years ago, according to Dr. Beverly W. Bond, University of Cincinnati professor of history. Ohio became a "no man's land" as a result of wars between New York state Iroquois and the Ohio Erie nation in the middle of the Seventeenth century. The Eries were defeated and almost destroyed. More tribes came to this area about 1680 seeking new hunting grounds, Doctor Bond said.

Abundance

It was a lonely place and there were five thousand to be fed. A lad had brought five loaves and two small fishes. But a disciple said John 6:9), "What are they among so many?" How different was the view taken by Christ Jesus! The disciples thought was fearful and their outlook limited. They saw a hungry multitude. Jesus saw hungering hearts; his thought was spiritual. With supreme confidence in the allurance of good he looked to Heaven, harmony, and gave thanks.

What a glorious proof was then given that divine law is ever operating in human affairs! The Master knew that supply is primarily spiritual, not material. In obedience to divine law, he turned away from sense testimony and demonstrated the truth of present abundance.

It is to be noted that in the demonstrations of Christ Jesus there was no hint of insufficiency or of incomplete demonstration. The need was always met. There was food left over after the five thousand had been fed.

The impotent man was so completely healed that he was able to obey the command (John 5:8), "Rise, take up thy bed, and walk." At the command of the Master, Lazarus came forth from the tomb, "bound hand and foot with graveclothes." And to those who stood by Jesus said with authority (John 11:44), "Loose him, and let him go." Thus every recording evidence of the claim of death gave way before Jesus' recognition, in Science, of the perfect man, God's image and likeness.

What is the human need? Food, shelter, clothing, money — these are legitimate human needs. The Master promised his followers that these necessary things should be added to those who sought first "the kingdom of God, and his righteousness" (Matthew 6:33). They were to be added, but these things in themselves do not constitute the fundamental human need. Humanity needs to understand God. There is need for spiritual knowing, spiritual living — for holiness. We need to labor to the end that sin, greed, fear, envy, and dishonesty will give place to honesty, unselfishness, purity, and love. We need to know that, in reality, we are God's children, and that we are held in the arms of everlasting Love.

Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, says (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, p. 494): "Divine Love always has met and always will meet every human need. We have only to be obedient to divine law in order to experience the fulfillment of this promise. The need may be for patience, strength, moral courage, honesty, confidence, or more kindness and gentleness in our daily contacts. Love supplies these needs. We can turn to Him in full assurance that the realization of Love overcomes envy, greed, criticism, doubt, and fear, which have no place in His kingdom.

Lack of any good or needful thing evidences error of belief. All lack arises from the belief that life, substance, and intelligence are material, hence circumscribed and limited. Limitation is always connected with the belief in matter. We need to acknowledge this fact and all that it implies. No amount of material goods will free us from the belief in limitation. The remedy for lack, want, and insufficiency lies in gaining the spiritual understanding of ever-present good.

The real man is spiritual and perfect. He is conscious only of limitless good. Understanding this, one can deny the material supposition of lack, in denying lack and insufficiency and acknowledging the presence of spiritual abundance, the seeker is conforming to God's law—the law of good, which is ever operative and available in human affairs.

So long as we look to matter for our supply, we find lack. Jesus looked away from the evidence of the senses to Spirit, God, when he fed the five thousand. The result was that there was enough and to spare. When we look primarily to a pay envelope, a bank account, or any other material thing for our supply, we throw the weight of our thinking on the side of limitation and lack. In managing our human affairs, honesty demands that we balance our budget; but we can claim persistently and joyously that our real income is not material, but spiritual. We can look away from a limited sense of supply, and thank God for the affluence of good. . . . —The Christian Science Monitor.

Mosque Where Ark Rested

The oldest of Cairo's mosques, Tulin, rises from the spot where the Ark rested after the flood; so local tradition has it.

Believe It Or Not--

But we have proof supplied by the Agricultural Engineering Department of the Michigan State College that our

is operating right now during January and February in unheated brooder houses at less than ONE-THIRD the cost of COAL or OIL Brooders.

You cannot afford to take the risk of fire and loss of chicks by brooding with the old fashioned brooder. Remember, this brooder is absolutely automatic. Set the temperature where you want it and forget it. Brooding chicks becomes a pleasure!

More than 30 of your neighbors around Chelsea have purchased this brooder in the last three weeks, some of which are now in operation. Names will be supplied upon request.

On reading and filing the petition of the Auditor General of the State of Michigan praying for a decree in favor of the State of Michigan, against each parcel of land therein described, for the amounts therein specified, claimed to be due for taxes, interest and charges on each such parcel of land, and that such lands be sold for the amounts so claimed by the State of Michigan.

It is ordered that said petition will be brought on for hearing and decree at the March term of this Court, to be held at Ann Arbor in the County of Washtenaw, State of Michigan, on the 6th day of March, A.
