Because of the lack of telephone service due to the ice storm it has been impossible to get reports on all caucuses held during the past week. These candidates will be published at a later date.

Michigan Bell Loss Heavy In Ice Storm

C. F. Schaefer, manager of the Charlotte area of the Michigan Bell Telephone Co., visited Chelsea Monday afternoon following an appraisal of the damage to the Michigan Bell equipment and service in the Jackson area during Sunday's ice storm.

Although the ice storm covered most of southern Michigan, Mr. Schaefer reported that the greatest damage to their lines was at Hillsdale and Adrian. He estimated that there were more than 700 poles down in the Jackson area and several thousand wire breaks, caused by the heavy load of ice. There were 27 exchanges in this area that were still isolated on Monday evening.

Telephone service was not crippled seriously in Chelsea, with only about 35 phones being reported out of commission on Monday. However, with rural lines the picture was decidedly different. There were breaks in 24 out of the 28 Michigan Bell circuits out of the local exchange, and 13 farm lines connected to this exchange were out completely. Chelsea was isolated so far as long distance service was concerned until Monday noon when it was possible to reach Jackson.

Telephone crews from other parts of the state were rushed to the Jackson area Sunday evening when it could be seen that the situation could not be taken care of by local crews in the area. 64 men came from Grand Rapids, 10 from Kalamazoo and 12 from the Saginaw area, with prospects of more arriving, according to Mr. Schaefer.

The Michigan Bell Telephone Co. plans to make allowances to customers for time that their telephones are out of commission because of the storm, and they ask that any adjustments which are missed be reported to the local office of the company.

TO HONOR PAST MASTERS
On Tuesday evening March 21, Olive Lodge 156, F. and A. M., will honor its Past Masters. Supper will be served at 6:30. The High School Dance Orchestra will play during the supper. Following this a speaker from the Michigan State Police will give a talk.

The following Past Masters will take part in the exemplification of the third degree: J. B. Cole, Floyd Rowe, Roy Harris, Ed. Brown, Jay Weinberg, Leon Shutes, and Lionel Vickers. Invitations have been extended to nearby lodges.

ANNUAL FISH SUPPER
The annual fish supper of the 2nd U. B. church, will be on Wednesday, March 22 at 6 o'clock, at Glenner hall, Waterloo. The committee welcomes you to all the fish and good things you can eat. Price 40c and 25c. Adv.

Legislators Cool Off On Outright Merit Law Repeal

Lansing—The ardor of legislators for outright repeal of the civil service law is cooling off.

Whereas outright repeal of this much-discussed statute appeared a fortnight ago to be certain, today sentiment is growing slowly for revision of the 1937 law, retaining most of its provisions and amending others to provide competitive examinations for all state employees except those in the lowest income brackets and executives at the other end of the scale, who help to shape administrative policies.

The so-called Pollock bill, recommended by the State Civil Service Study commission of which Dr. James K. Pollock of the University of Michigan was chairman, has been re-introduced in the House of Representatives. The state affairs committee has decided to use this 1937 bill (which was amended by the 1937 legislature) as its starting point.

If this movement receives legislative support, the administration then would be in a position to maintain that it had enacted a "genuine" civil service law and that the Republicans, instead of the Democrats, were the real friends of civil service.

Economy Still Is Trend

In the so-called modernization of the act, Republican legislators will see to it that many jobs are made available, just as Democrat law-makers in 1937 provided that only "qualifying" examinations had to be taken by job applicants prior to January 1, 1938.

The present act covers 17,000 state workers. If by exempting low income employees as well as policy-making executives this number would be reduced to 8,000 to 10,000 legislators say that a saving can be effected in the operating cost of the civil service department. The commission has asked $300,000 for the next fiscal year beginning July 1, 1939. House leaders want to reduce this to $100,000 on grounds of economy. Clipping of civil service wings thus would be justified. (Continued on next page)

Two Constitutional Amendments on Ballot

There will be submitted to the electors at the Biennial Spring Election, April 3, 1939, two proposed amendments to the Constitution.

Amendment No. 1 provides that in all primary elections and in elections of Justices of the Supreme Court, Judges of the Circuit Courts, Judges of Probate Courts and all County Judicial offices, provided by the Legislature under Section 21 of Article VII of the Constitution shall be non-partisan. Nominations for these offices will be made at primary elections. Nominating petitions for candidates shall be filed at least 35 days prior to such primary election. Nominating petitions for Judge of the Circuit Court shall be filed with the Secretary of State and for all other Judicial offices affected by this amendment with the county clerk. There will be a separate ballot used in the primary election for the election of these Judges. There will be no party designation used by the incumbent or other candidates. This proposal will add a new Section to Article VII of the State Constitution.

Proposal No. 2 provides for the vesting in Circuit Court Commissioners, such powers as exercised by Justices of the Peace. It gives the Legislature power to provide by law for the election of one or more persons in each organized county with judicial power, not exceeding those of a Circuit Judge at chambers with judicial powers of a Justice of the Peace with power to hold court and perform judicial acts anywhere in the county. This proposal would amend Section 21 of Article VII of the State Constitution.

Chelsea Bankers Hosts To County Group

The Washtenaw County Chapter of the American Institute of Banking will hold its monthly Forum meeting and dinner in Chelsea, today March 16th. Mr. Paul G. Schaible is in charge of arrangements.

The speaker of the evening will be Prof. Allen F. Sherzer of the Mechanical Engineering Department of the University of Michigan who will give a talk on his latest trip up through James and Hudson Bay on a Hudson Bay Company trading boat. The talk will be illustrated by moving pictures in color.

The Advisory Council of the Chapter composed of the active heads of the various Banks in the County will hold a business meeting at 4:00 p. m., at the Chelsea State Bank. Dinner will be served at Kolb's Dining Room.

Sleet Storm Damages Trees and Utilities

The sleet storm which was prevalent in Southern Michigan Saturday night and Sunday did considerable damage in Chelsea and vicinity. In Chelsea the shade trees, especially elms and poplars, were damaged. Tops were broken off and large limbs fell in some cases streets being blocked temporarily.

Electric power went off about 9:30 a. m. and was off until between 3:30 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Just west of the E. J. Weinberg home on US-12 the Consumers high tension wires broke under the weight of the ice and fell across the Postal Telegraph wires and burned them through. Homeowners who have oil burners to heat their homes, resorted to oil stoves, gas ovens, and fireplaces for heat.

Otto Schanz, village street maintenance foreman, was out at daylight with helpers and worked until dark keeping the streets and walks clear of falling limbs. Pedestrians who ventured forth on Sunday had to watch for falling branches as well as to watch their steps on the slippery walks.

The electricians worked all day Sunday repairing broken wires. This storm was not as severe as the one which Chelsea experienced on March 30 and 31 in 1922, according to the "semi-oldtimers".

Many phones in both Chelsea and in the country are out of order and toll service was disrupted until some time Monday afternoon.

Monday was a clear day and the trees sparkled brilliantly in the sunshine. By mid-afternoon the ice was gone from the trees and shrubs.

RECREATION NEWS

Boys, get your marbles out and practice the game. The recreation committee will sponsor a marble tournament this spring. The rules of the game will be available through the school in a few days and practice can begin. The tournament will be announced at a later date.

There will be boys' athletic class Thursday evenings, March 23 and 30. Report at the gymnasium and join the fun. A varied program will be offered.

The Young Women's Class bowls every Wednesday evening, beginning at 6:45. Reduced rates are offered. Any girls interested in bowling or other activities are invited to join at any time. Report to Mrs. Johnson or at the Bowling Alley, Wednesday at 6:45.

INDORSE MISS HAAS

The last meeting of the Chelsea group of Rural Teachers was held at the Sullivan School, Ruth Latson, teacher.

Aside from the scheduled procedure of the meeting, the teachers were addressed by Mrs. Mallory child psychologist of the Extension Department of the University. She offered much needed advice concerning their problems.

This group of teachers expressed their approval of the county program as it is being carried on under the direction of the present County Commissioner of schools, and went on record as unanimously endorsing the reelection of Miss Haas.

Senior Play

As you all know the flu epidemic prevented a second performance of "Is Zat So." A great deal of confusion resulted but by working overtime the cast has managed to get back in shape and promise an even greater performance tonight. The place is the gymnasium; the time eight o'clock. Tickets may be purchased from any Senior or at the door for 20 and 35 cents. Why not come? If you do we promise you an evening of delightful entertainment.

FOR MORE LOADS—EXTRA YEARS THE SPREADER WITH BEATER ON THE AXLE

THE additional years of service you get from a John Deere Spreader are due, largely, to mounting the beater on the axle—the famous patented feature of construction which has kept John Deere Spreaders out in the lead for more than 25 years.

Mounting the main beater on the axle permits building a simpler, stronger, longer-lived spreader with fewer moving parts—a spreader that's easier to load... easier to pull... that does better work... a spreader that gives you more dollar-for-dollar value.

FEATURES

- "Knee-action" front wheels
- Hardened steel roller drive chain
- Roller bearings on all three beaters
- New-type, non-wrapping spiral beater
- Renewable axle bearings and axle sleeves
- Steel pole and crossbar

JOHN DEERE QUALITY IMPLEMENTS AND SERVICE

Do you know about the danger in overheated radiators? Do you wait until the boiling has stopped before removing the cap?

Care should always be exercised in taking off the cap from an overheated radiator. Use a large rag to cover it and keep your face turned away when the cap is removed.

Be especially careful when pouring water into a radiator which has been overheated due to water running low. It should be allowed to cool. If water is poured in while the engine is still hot, the cylinder block may crack or a bad boil-over may occur, blowing the hot water into your face.

Check your anti-freeze liquid frequently to see that you have the proper amount.

Legislators Cool Off no Outright Merit Lay Repeal

in part at least, by the imperative need to avert a further deficit.

In the senate a tourist-farm advertising appropriation was reduced from $400,000 to $300,000. Instead of $50,000 a year for general state advertising, as granted two years ago, the amended bill provides for $25,000 a year.

Advertising of Michigan farm products was limited to $25,000 a year on a $5,000 matched aid basis for any one product—apples, potatoes, etc.

Because of the 1939 world fairs at New York and San Francisco, Michigan resort owners are apprehensive over summer prospects. Last year's business was 20 per cent off normal.

Defeat School Bill

Supported by the Michigan Education association a resolution to relax the present 15-mill tax limitation, putting a revision up to a spring referendum, was defeated by a narrow margin in the House.

Dr. Eugene Elliott had supported the resolution which he felt would permit local districts to undertake needed school building construction.

Only two issues will appear on the April ballot: (1) Nonpartisan election of judges; (2) To permit the legislature to extend to circuit court commissioners judicial powers similar to those of justices of peace.

Borrowing Problem

A bill to give Michigan cities borrowing power of 20 per cent of their current tax levies, instead of 10 per cent, has stirred a controversy in Detroit where the measure is backed by city officials headed by Mayor Reading.

The Detroit Bureau of Governmental Research, opposed to any increase in indebtedness, declared that to double the borrowing limit was but to multiply the "stableful of dead horses with which Detroit now is plagued."

Because of unemployment and a resultant temptation to undertake public work programs under the PWA's offer of generous grants, many Michigan cities have borrowed to the limit.

If recent legislative action is any index of Lansing's present temper, bills for more borrowing and more spending are likely to be carefully scrutinized. Chances of their passage are none too good, at this moment.

Fair Trade, Milk Bills

According to the Michigan Retail Institute, trade groups are "hopelessly at loggerheads" over the merit and constitutionality of any unfair trade practice bill which seeks to maintain prices.

"Rural opposition to the features which are claimed to center price competition on farm produce will probably grow in volume as the session progresses," states R. Wayne Newton, director of the retailers' organization.

A number of bills have been introduced, proposing to outlaw any prices "below cost" and otherwise to regulate retailers.

The present legislative "straws in the wind" are against any further extension of state regulation and control. This conservative trend also makes unlikely the passage of any milk price control measure at this session. Milk producers are still hopeful, however, that a compromise plan can be agreed upon that will afford some relief from the present low bulk price of milk at the farm—a price which, producers say, does not afford any margin of profit above cost of production.

Bricks and a Bouquet

Because many newspapers advocate retention of civil service and oppose outright repeal, some legislators have been inclined in recent weeks to grumble loudly about the press.

To seasoned capital correspondents who have seen administrations come and go and who followed the 1938 campaign in which few newspapers rallied to the support of Frank Murphy, the present critical attitude is a sudden reversal in form.

While law-makers are now in a mood to damn editors in general and correspondents in particular, newspaper writers generally agree that the present membership of the legislature is distinctly above average in individual competency and ability. At the same time, viewing the Lansing scene as unbiased observers, they believe that any civil service action smacking of sabotage would react unfavorably to the party in 1940.

"Three months ago these legislators were praising newspapers for their fairness in the campaign," commented one Detroit writer. "Now they are damning us. It all has convinced me that the press is on sound middle ground, neither to the right or left."

We present these candid statements for what they are worth.

Many Courts of Honor Schedule

The work of the Washtenaw-Livingston Boy Scout Council includes many phases of community service each month, but one of the most interesting is the program of the Court of Honor Committee which operates under the chairmanship of Ira M. Smith, Registrar of University.

The following Courts of Honor will give some indication of the scope of the work of the Court of Honor Committee and its sub-committees in each district.

On Tuesday evening, April 4, the Southern District will hold its Court of Honor at Woodruff School, Ypsilanti, under the Chairmanship of Paul Ungrodt.

On the following evening, Wednesday, April 5, a Court of Honor will be held at the Bach School, Ann Arbor, with Dr. Karl Malcolm acting as Chairman.

On Monday evening, April 10, the Livingston District Court of Honor will meet at the Pinckney High School with Dr. Homer Noble of Howell serving as Chairman.

The Copeland District, comprising the communities in the western half of Washtenaw County, will hold its Court of Honor on Monday evening, April 17, with E. B. Clark of Dexter in charge.

On Thursday evening, April 20, a Court of Honor of the newly formed Southeast District will be held at the Milan High School with A. N. Squires serving as Chairman.

Before a boy appears at a Court of Honor, he is reviewed by his own Troop Committee which serves as a Board of Review.

Odd Street Car Transfers

Back in the old horsecar days, the transfers issued by the street railways in several cities were cleverly designed to prevent their resale and misuse. They carried pictures of four men and four women, says a writer in Collier's Weekly, and the conductor punched the one the passenger most closely resembled.

The Greatest Novelist

There is a wide diversity of opinion among even the greatest literary critics on the subject of the greatest novelist of all time, but John Cowper Powys in his "Enjoyment of Literature" says of Dostoevsky that he is as much greater than all other novelists as Homer and Shakespeare than all other poets. "For he is superior to the rest in all the main essentials of fiction. He is a greater artist, a greater psychologist, a greater prophet, a greater thinker."

Children In Court

by Judge Malcolm H. Hild

THE EFFECT OF RIDICULE
Many undesirable traits can be directly traced to parents' pernicious habit of ridiculing and needlessly embarrassing their children. A child needs sympathy and a feeling of security. To make fun of a child, even in jest, causes him to lose confidence in himself and to become self-conscious. Later in life he may develop an inferiority complex which will be a serious handicap.

The wise parent always encourages his child's feeling of confidence and security by judicious praise—not to the extent of glorifying the youngster's ego—but just enough to give him fearless self-reliance.

The Late Christopher Bean

A painter named Christopher Bean had died in a New England village leaving only a few dirty canvases to pay the doctor for his efforts to heal. It was a mild surprise to Dr. Haggert and his family when an old friend of Bean's dropped in and paid Bean's old bill and only took away a couple of pictures as mementoes. It was a bigger surprise when another friend of Bean's turned up on a similar errand and the biggest of all when a great New York art critic arrived to pay his respects to the memory of the dead artist. It was overwhelming when they learned that Christopher's daub's were worth a fortune—and how they scurried to find them. There was one in the chicken coop and the daughter of the house had painted some flowers on the back of another, and Abbey, the servant girl, had a portrait of herself in her room. A mad scramble ensued with Abbey in the thick of it. And always in the scramble, the effect on the characters of those involved is uppermost, always there in the flurry and distress of minds under the turmoil of action; always through it is the terrible simplicity of Abbey, to whom Christopher was an unnecessary memory of distant happiness.

This story will be presented by the Junior class on the 20th and 21st of April. The play is under the competent direction of Miss Florence Eddy.

F. F. A. News

Chelsea has emerged victorious from the last two regular games.

The first of these two with Saline on Monday, March 6, was a hard fought battle. The first team won by a score of 31-28 but not until the last quarter did Chelsea show its championship form.

The second game was with Pultenich. Chelsea won this game, 28-11. This ended a perfect season of six wins and none lost.

The second team not so fortunate, lost by a 10-1 score but looked promising for next year.

Chelsea will suffer the loss of Joe Kastl, John Stoffer, Leon Marsh and Wilbur Seeman due to graduation.

Basketball

The Chelsea lads met the Dansville quintet at the Regional Tournaments at Albion last Friday night. Starting for Chelsea were: Policht and Daniels, forwards; Schneider, center; and Alber and Fletcher guards. Both teams played hard and fast and the score at the end of the half was Chelsea 8; Dansville 10.

Back on the floor on the second half Chelsea took the lead and kept it until there were two minutes left to play when Dansville rallied and took the lead. The gun sounded with the score Chelsea 18, Dansville 21.

Schneider took high score honors with six points.

All members of the squad except Policht and Schneider will be last by graduation.

Band and Orchestra

Say, do you know the Chelsea High School has a band and orchestra. Why you should hear us go when we "get hot." We have no Stokowski Symphony but we have a lot of music.

We have a Band Festival coming up here on May 2; right here in the fair town of Chelsea. That's not until May but just the same it's a great event to look forward to. There will be bands from University High school in Ann Arbor, from Dundee and many other towns in the vicinity of Chelsea.

The Band has new music, and the players are working hard and taking an interest in getting ready for the Band Festival.

The orchestra's new music is the "real McCoy" as far as we're concerned. It involves many twists and turns that we are all eager to learn. We expect to put on a concert in near future, we can show you the equipment we have and haven't. We'll appreciate your attendance on such an occasion.

The thing that people appreciate most in this world of amusement is good music, played well. The Dance Orchestra is an organization which tries its best to play in this manner. The personal of this Orchestra have been working plenty hard on their music and plan on putting in some of their achievements between the acts and scenes of the Senior Play that is being produced Thursday of this week.

Treasures in Indian Chapel
Among the treasures to be seen in the Indian chapel at Cagnewaga, opposite Lachine, Que., are a two-century old wampum belt and an osteosorium dating back to 1669.

IN MEMORIAM

In the loving memory of our dear mother Mrs. Margaret Titus who passed away one year ago on March 12, 1938.

Your gentle face and patient smile
With sadness we recall,
You had a kindly word for each,
And died beloved by all.
The voice is mute and stilled the heart
That loved us well and true,
Ah, bitter was the trial to part
From one so good as you.
You are not forgotten loved one
Nor will you ever be
As long as life and memory last
We will remember thee.
We miss you now, our hearts are sore,
As time goes by we miss you more,
Your loving smile, your gentle face
No one can fill your vacant place,
Sadly missed by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Reed and Alfred Titus.

MRS. FRANCES J. ROBTROY

Mrs. Frances J. Robtroy, 86 years old died Friday afternoon at the Methodist Old People's Home, where she had been a member for the past ten years. For eight years she had been confined to her bed. She was born November 30, 1852 on a farm in Superior township, a daughter of David and Abigail Moore and on December 25, 1877, was married to Mr. Robtroy. The couple made their home in Ypsilanti, where Mr. Robtroy died about 35 years ago. For many years Mrs. Robtroy operated a large rooming and boarding house on W. Cross St., and was widely known among alumni of the State Normal college. Funeral services were held at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon at the Methodist Home, with Rev. H. A. Leeson officiating. Burial was in Highland cemetery, Ypsilanti.

France's Error

When France claimed a section of Antarctica many years ago, it issued a proclamation against shooting polar bears within the territory, not realizing, observes Collier's Weekly, that no land mammal of any kind inhabits these vast South Polar regions.

UNITED EFFORT

Suppose the Michigan Bell Telephone Company maintained its own separate research laboratory in which to develop improvements in telephone service. And suppose each of the other 23 telephone companies of the Bell System did the same.

All these laboratories probably would be trying to solve the same problems; this would be wasteful duplication of effort and expense which would increase the cost of your telephone service.

In the Bell System, Bell Telephone Laboratories does the research work for all. Each company pays only a fraction of the cost, but gets full benefit of a research program that no one company could afford to maintain.

This economy is one of the advantages of our membership in the Bell System. It is an important reason why all America, including you in Michigan, enjoys the best, most reasonably priced telephone service in the world.

Built for ACTION—PRICED the same way!

FIRST time we saw the blueprints for this Buick thirty-niner we knew we had something pretty special for folks who like action in their travels.

It had eight eager cylinders in a mighty Dynaflex engine—and they could make a scared jack rabbit cut dust whenever the word was given!

It had a ride we promptly dubbed "full float"—its about coiled springs are now 15% softer in the rear, and hooked up, in front, with Knee-Action that banks curves for you.

It had a view, a gorgeous view, from windows and windshields as much as 412 square inches bigger—and it had style that has already altered the pattern on many another car-stylist's drawing board.

So we looked it all over—and went a step further. We decided a car so plainly meant for action needed to have a price that would get action for it!

Now it isn't easy to build such a traveler—rich in reliable Buick quality clear down to the metals it's made of—and still give it a price that rubs elbows with the sixes.

But just look!

300 in 4-H Scan State Deer Runs

Hunting without guns in midwinter in 13 of the most populous deer counties in Michigan is the newest 4-H boys and girls club project which has attracted 300 members.

The project is sponsored by the educational and game divisions of the department of conservation and by the Boys and Girls club department of Michigan State College.

What are they seeking—these hunters without guns?

They are after information to enable them to make maps of winter deer feeding yards, major problem of the conservation department now that deer population seems to exceed the winter yards' supply of browse. Other data will show food supply and extent of browsing including reports on starvation.

If deer could write history books, they would have aided immensely in writing the history of Michigan. At least the department of conservation links closely the size of deer herds with the changes that have taken place in the state.

When lumbermen opened up wide fringes in the state's timber, deer had greater areas for browse and winter feeding, it is pointed out by Charles Welch, conservation staff member. Deer increased. Then the forests dwindled, wide open spaces were all too numerous. Now the forest fire protection areas and forest reproduction are producing just the type of cover that deer like, although only one-tenth of the deer range is suitable for winter use.

So the 4-H members are cooperating in mapping deer yards in winter. Maps and reports are to be filed in April and May before county achievement day meetings, educating members and adding in some counties to information of the state conservation department.

PLYMOUTH

Mrs. Thomas Taylor, of Stark-weather avenue, in reading last Friday's Plymouth Mail, came across a paragraph telling of a man in Grand Blanc who owns a paper 139 years old. She went to her box of old papers and found a copy of the identical newspaper. She also has a copy of the Ulster County Gazette, which was printed on January 4, 1800 and contains a story of the funeral of George Washington.

CHARLOTTE

Klaus Mann, son of the well known author, Thomas Mann arrived at Olivet Monday for a short visit with President Brewer. Mr. Mann, who left Germany with other members of his family as a protest against the Nazi regime, spoke at noon chapel Tuesday before the students of Olivet college.

In speaking of the Germany of today he said that the majority of the people did not want a war and it was doubtful if they would support a war incited by Hitler as they did the World war under Emperor Wilhelm. Methods of education and the propaganda of the Nazi are poisoning the youth and in danger of ruining their character and souls. However, if Hitler were to be overthrown today, he has faith that the youth would soon forget the teachings of cruelty and brutality. Republican Tribune.

KIWANIS HEARS ALPENA PLAN

Ed. Eaton, chairman of the program committee, read a paper before the Kiwanis Club on the Alpena Plan, a program for boys work in that city.

Starting from scratch, Alpena now has a Boy's Club which enrolls 1200 a year, and costs but $3500 to operate. The club, largely through its "glummi" has bought and is paying for 68 acres of land for camp purposes. Buildings now completed on the project will accommodate 150 boys at a time.

Next Monday will be anniversary night for the Chelsea Kiwanis Club. A noted Kiwanian, Claude Dock, will be the principle speaker for the occasion. A delegation of visiting Kiwanians from the Jackson Club which sponsored the local group will be present.

FLYING FINGERS CLUB MEETING

The Flying Fingers sewing club held their last meeting at the home of their leader, Mrs. T. G. Riemen-schneider on Saturday February 25. We finished with a 100 percent club, or as many members completing as enrolled.

Wilma Schweinfurth taking the "4-H club girl in wool" project, and Betty Wahl, the "Girls Summer Wardrobe" project, were in the style revue at achievement night in Ann Arbor on Tuesday March 7. Eunice Schweinfurth and Carolyn Kalmbach each finished the "Girls Room" project, and Nancy Every finished the first year project. Wilma Schweinfurth and Carolyn Kalmbach were named on the sewing honor roll at achievement night. Eunice Schweinfurth was named second in the junior division of the health contest.

We wish to thank our leader, Mrs. Riemen-schneider, and all our parents for helping to make our club a success.

Death Penalty for Most

Crimes in Aztecs' Land

The following facts, relative to the inhabitants of southwestern America before the arrival of the white man, are from a book by F. Martin

Brown, and retold by a writer in Everybody's Digest.

A large part of the Aztec's time was occupied with religion. Even gambling had a sort of religious significance for him. A game like dice was played with beans painted black on one side and white on the other, and the players pleaded with their dice to fall right.

The Aztec dances were very closely tied up with religion, and generally men danced with men and women with women.

The Aztec laws were extremely strict and death was the penalty for nearly every crime, whether major or petty.

The Aztec had slaves; but the slaves could own property. Frequently a man would sell himself into slavery to pay his debts, and it was possible for him to buy his way out of the hands of his owner.

The poorer Aztecs used the barter method in trading; that is, they swapped one thing for another. The wealthier Aztecs used cocoa beans for "pin" money. Sometimes sacks containing 400 to 8,000 of the beans were used in paying large bills. Tiny nuggets or flakes of gold packed in transparent duck quills were used for money where extremely expensive purchases were concerned.

Small irregular pieces of tin were also used as money.

New 4-H Accounting Covers Farm Crops

Account keeping takes on added interest for 4-H boys and girls with the announcement of the National 4-H Farm and Home Accounting Activity for 1939. In the past five years remarkable results have been obtained in an all-inclusive farm record keeping contest. Now it is offered in three divisions: regular farm accounts, home accounts, and crop enterprise accounts, under the supervision of county and State extension agents.

All boys and girls under the age of 21 enrolled in 4-H may keep books in any of the divisions. Farm and home accounts must be started not later than April 1, for they are required to cover a 12-month period between December 1, 1938 and April 1, 1940. Crop enterprise records must cover the 1939 production period.

A complete inventory of all farm possessions at the beginning and end of the 12-month period, a record of receipts and costs of farming for the year, and a summary analysis sheet showing how much money made or lost are necessary for entry in the farm account phase. Requisites of home accounts are a beginning and ending inventory on food, clothing and household equipment, a record of expenditures and estimated values of food, fuel and housing contributed by the farm, and a summary.

Crop accounts must show daily man labor, power, and equipment record, costs, returns, and a summary analysis. All three phases must be accompanied by a 1,000 word summary, enumerating difficulties encountered, changes made, and suggesting adjustments.

Appropriate certificates and $4,350 in cash awards provided by the International Harvester Company for the sixth consecutive year, will be distributed among the members in blue, red and white award groups in the state and nation.

HAROLD CHANNING WIRE

COPYRIGHT-HAROLD CHANNING WIRE W.N.U. SERVICE

CHAPTER XVII

Cook and Sierra rode back to headquarters that afternoon. Breck sent his message by wire, and then, turning into his bunk while it was still daylight, slept the clock around. His cabin was flooded with morning sun when he awoke. Even as he closed his eyes again, reluctant to leave the blankets, his telephone jangled from its post beyond the door.

He bounded out, barefooted. Cook's voice came over the line. "Hello, Rock House, how is the morning?"

"Haven't had a look at it yet."

"Then here's something to wake you up. A relay from Lone Tree."

"All right," said Breck. "Let's have it."

He heard Cook's low chuckle, then: "Saved my life. Will meet you Friday. Party of five."

The ranger paused. "It's signed," he continued presently, "but I reckon the telephone girl got it wrong, or I must have misunderstood in writing it down. Looks like 'Old Thing'."

Breck grinned into the little iron box, but agreed solemnly. "That's a mistake, Dad. The name is Sutherland, you know."

"Now then," Cook said, "we've got to work this so you aren't away from the station more than two nights. Understand me?"

"Easy."

"All right. Friday is two days off. You start out tomorrow morning and make Dick Divine's camp by dark. Then if your folks come any time at all before noon Friday you can pack them as far as Summit and camp. That will put you in Rock House again Saturday."

"OK," Breck answered.

After breakfast he dedicated his time to making tenderfoot tourists less tender. He could visualize the party of five arriving after their day and a half in the saddle—the Senator, padded in the worst spot and letting the whole forest know how he hurt; his wife suffering more and saying less about it; Irene a good sport if she cared to be. The other two would be a maid and a chauffeur, who was also the Senator's handy-man.

Preparing camp for them, he put up four tents near the stream and not too far above his cabin.

He was on the down-trail early next morning, for in the night he had realized it was only fair to stop at Temple Meadow and mention this party to Louise. The corral bars were open and the place apparently deserted when he came into camp. But in a moment Tom Temple opened his cabin door and hobbled out.

Almost his first words were, "Louie's gone sittin'."

"As frankly," Breck answered, "That's too bad. I hoped to see her. Anything you want from the valley? I'm headed out and will be here again Saturday."

Temple wagged his gray head. "Thanks, Ranger, but the boys are makin' trips every day now, bringin' up salt. The whole range has it trucked up as far as Divine's, you know, then we pack it. Takes a heap of salt while our stuff is on green grass."

Breck hooked one knee around his saddle horn and smoked a cigarette before starting on.

"Figurin' to be at the rodeo?" Temple asked.

"When is that?"

"About a week, soon as saltin' is done and the boys can get together. Better make it. I hear a couple of young steers and have dancin' to music from down below. Folks come up here from Lone Tree—some farther."

"Sounds like a big time," said Breck. "Count on me. And say, are outsiders allowed? Tourists I mean."

"Lord almighty yes! They won't be outsiders when they git here!"

"I guess not," Breck grinned. "I'm bringing a party of five back this trip, some friends who'll camp at Rock House. They'd get a big wallop out of your show."

"Bring 'em," Temple repeated. "More the better!"

Breck gave his promise, then rode on.

Twice on the way down he met salt trains coming up; cowboys with a dozen mules, each mule carrying two hundred and fifty pounds of rock in burlap bags. By evening he was on the last steep slope of the granite wall, with the Mojave Desert stretching away in a purple shadow of the Sierras themselves. At dark he came into the first corral of Dick Divine's pack outfit, and upon crossing a stream rode at once among firs at three cowboys camped near long piles of salt. Duck hid their faces. Some greeted him. "Then he passed one alone who glanced up from his solitary blaze of willow twigs, stared and said nothing.

Breck raised a hand, though he knew there would be no reply. "Howdy, Art."

Shortly after that he approached a small house, strangely neat and white in a garden of flowers, as contrasted to the mule corrals and rough life about it. Dick Divine came to the door, holding up a lantern as he peered out. His face showed wrinkled and toothless, with sharp eyes looking from under long gray brows.

"Who's yer?" he demanded.

"Ranger from Rock House."

"Well, howdy, Ranger. Are you puttin' up?"

"For one night," Breck answered. He swung to the ground, and presently, having explained what he wanted and turned his animals loose with hobbles, he came back to find a meal fixed for him on the packer's table.

Art Tillson was still in camp the next morning. Rigging saddles for the tourists to come, Breck saw other cowmen load their strings of mules and vanish up the mountain. But Art, single-handed, was later than the rest. It was almost noon before he had his salt train ready.

His mules were bunched, and mounted, he was trying to rush them into line, when abruptly a roadster shot through the willow thicket. His animals plunged from the car, bucking at their packs as they scattered. Art wheeled, his horse savagely as the car halted near him.

Breck had watched the swift scene from Divine's cabin, and now saw a girl's hand make a little gesture toward Art. The boy snatched off his hat, and then as the girl drove on, remained fixed in his saddle, staring after her.

He was still sitting like that, Breck knew, when the roadster slid to a stop at the house and Irene jumped out, laughing and reaching out her hands to him. Her words came in staccato gasps: "Gordon! My dear! I should never have known you! You're—Why—She paused, surveyed him, gazed helplessly.

"Why, Gordon?"

He watched her curiously at first, then warmed to spontaneous response. She stood before him as amazingly beautiful as ever; tall, dark, trimly outfitted in riding breeches, gray silk shirt, black tie, and polished tan boots, all of which were perhaps more stylish than comfortable, yet gave her figure magnetic grace. The sun had burned her cheeks on the drive across the desert, coloring them over olive skin, and the dry wind had cast a sparkle upon her usually languid, dark eyes.

Breck laughed out then, returned the pressure of her clasp, and they stood for an instant, wordless. Inwardly he had to admit some of the old feeling.

The Senator interrupted, boosting himself from the car. "You're looking fine, my boy. Fine! Say, I'd give something for your middle!"

Breck went to him. "You'll be this way if you live in the mountains long enough. I'm glad to see you, Senator."

Sutherland shook hands with a hearty campaign grasp, long and full of action. He was short and thick-set, past fifty, with a round face behind which lurked the humor of many good smoking-room stories. In clothes he had not followed Irene's example, but wore a thin suit of white and a limp Panama.

They were still in the first exchange of greetings when a second car swung around a bend of the road and burst through the willows, further scattering Art Tillson's mules. It halted near the roadster, a sedan scarcely showing its occupants in the piled-up baggage.

He opened the door, and a gray-haired, motherly face peered at him over a canvas roll. "How do you do, Gordon? You'll have to dig me out before I can reach you." The woman's voice came cheerily in spite of her cramped position.

The chauffeur came from in front to help him; a short, spare man who had been in the family always. In a moment they had the Senator's wife out. She gave Breck an impulsive hug, then stood off considering him from Stetson hat to service boots.

"You're a good-looking ranger, Gordon," was her verdict. "I must say that!"

"My thanks," he answered, smiling upon her. Of the Sutherland family she was the one who gave upon affection. She babied the Senator and spoiled Irene, and at one time would have spoiled him too.

Dick Divine came from his cabin, introduced himself perfectly, then added to Breck, "I've got something on the table in there. They can eat while we're packin'."

Glancing down, his eye fell on the array of luggage. A startled look crossed his face.

Breck laughed. "Can we put this on three mules, Dick?"

The old packer blinked hard. "I'd say it ain't all here."

"Oh no," Irene agreed. "It isn't. You'll find the rest in my roadster."

She unlocked the turtle-back and Breck looked in. Folding chairs, folding tables, folding beds lay there. He drew them out, uncovering boxes of fresh fruit, a tin of wafers, three bon voyage baskets of candy.

"Irene," he asked, "are you sure you have plenty of real food?"

"Oh yes! Heaps!"

"How much flour, rice and bacon?"

"No flour. I brought crackers. You know, Gordon, I never eat rice. And bacon—just a minute!—She turned to the chauffeur. "Toby, how much bacon?"

"Six half pound packages. I think."

Breck grinned. "No flour, no rice, three pounds of bacon." He waved toward the house. "You rest in there—all of you. I'll do the packing."

"And I'll watch!" Irene asserted with suspicion. "I know what you're going to do. I've got the cutest little mattress with springs that squish down. I must take it. And I suppose you would throw out an evening dress."

"You didn't bring one!"

"Of course. Won't we dance?"

"Yes," Breck promised, thinking of Temple's rodeo. "We'll dance. But the only evening gown you'll need is the one you sleep in!"

When the others had gone into the house, he and Divine sorted what little of the equipment there was that could be used.

"I've seen some right pretty camp junk," the packer observed, standing among the sets of furniture painted red and blue, with striped covers to match, "but this is plumb grand!"

They selected about one-fourth the car's contents and made up kyacks for three mules. Immediately Breck lashed on the bedding and drew cinches tight, and so had it all covered before the family returned. When they did come from the house he hustled them into their saddles.

He put the Senator in the lead and gave him a mule to tow. Then Mrs. Sutherland with her maid next; a middle-aged woman whose tight lips showed disapproval of the whole affair. Toby followed, surprising Breck with a good knowledge of horses. Irene chose her own place next himself at the rear.

The start was made noisily, with Dick Divine grinning from his door. Breck turned and waved, at the same time seeing they were not to be alone on the upward trail. It was plain that Art had waited deliberately. Now he was getting his salt train into line.

CHAPTER XVIII

Much could be read in this act, but if Art had a definite purpose he was in no hurry to show it. For two hours Breck pushed his tourist string up the wall, ascending in short, hair-pin turns directly over the pack camp. It was hot when they started. Soon the Senator took off his white coat and tried to sit on it. A moment later he removed his tie and hung it on the saddle horn. He seemed inclined to dispose of his shirt also when Mrs. Sutherland spoke to him.

At the end of two hours they came onto a shelf where the first long-needle pine offered shade and a spring trickled from the rock. Breck called a halt, telling everyone to get off and stretch their legs.

It was while they rested on the shelf that Art Tillson came swinging up the trail, driving eight mules and leading two. He made a strong, rugged picture. His mules, stalwart, lean-legged fellows, bore the weight of salt bags with no effort and marched past in close formation, furry ears flopping with each step. Art himself rode with all the unconscious grace of a born horseman, with broad-shouldered body rolling to the animal's gait, his gloved right hand, holding the lead rope, braced against his thigh.

From the moment he cleared the bend of the trail his eyes were upon Irene. He held them there until he was almost abreast, then looked away for a time but turned in his saddle before passing out of sight further on.

"Well!" Irene gasped. "Who is that handsome beast?"

Breck scowled. "He's a cowboy with a herd of cattle here in the mountains."

"Did he never see a woman before? Those eyes! Was he looking at me or through me?"

"It's hard to tell," Breck answered vaguely, preparing to move on. "That boy is a character up here. You won't see him again."

"Won't I, though! My dear, when a man looks like that, must I be blind?"

Breck paused in gathering up his reins. "Yes, Irene, you must."

"What? Why, Gordon! Is this an official order—I mustn't want to see him again?"

"Don't use any of your tricks on him, that's all. I can't explain now."

"But, my dear," Irene smiled, "he's such a fine animal!"

Breck laughed but put sincerity into his warning. "You mind the ranger!"

After starting the party upward again, he rode in silence, deep with his thoughts. At this moment he would rather have been bringing a load of dynamite into the mountains than Irene. She was ruthless. He knew it was not beyond her to take a curious interest in Art, play him until that was satisfied, then cut him.

Once more that afternoon she turned their talk to him, asking, "What will you bet that I don't see my cowboy friend before night?"

"You won't," Breck asserted. "He'll be halfway over the roof by the time we reach the summit."

But woman's instinct was better than man's reasoning. When they came into Summit Meadow at dusk, a campfire was burning at the further end. Tillson's mules grazed nearby, and the cowboy sat cooking his supper over the flames.

Immediately Breck turned off toward a stream of water that emerged from a snow marsh. He saw Irene's eyes smiling at him in feminine triumph. Halting, he drew packs from the mules at once, then spread canvas covers on the pine needles.

"Now all you folks rest," he said. "Lie around and enjoy the sunset. I'll have grub for you in a shake."

"Enjoy the sunset," the Senator groaned. "My God! If you say something about a feather mattress, I'll listen!" He climbed stiffly from his horse and slumped onto one of the canvases.

Supper of steaks he had brought from Divine's was a wordless affair, and immediately afterwards all save Irene vanished into their tents. She insisted she was not tired. Breck knew better and so left only the coils of their fire. She would have to follow the others when that scant heat died and the cold night wind sprang up.

They two sat cross-legged with fading light between them, the forest whispering overhead, the crunch of animals grazing just beyond. Once another sound came into these. Breck stood up, and moving from the glow, waited in the shadows. Tillson's camp was dark. Art might have turned in; and still he might not. That sound had been too much like the snap of twigs higher up the meadow bank. Yet it was not repeated and in time Breck went back to Irene.

She put up a hand when he approached, drawing him down beside her. Her fingers trembled.

"Are you frightened?" he asked.

"Of what?"

"The forest; the noises."

"Not a bit." Impulsively she leaned to him, lifting up her face, giving herself to be kissed.

But he refused. She drew away with well affected indifference and for a moment kicked her boot heels at the dead coals. Presently she asked, "Do you like your job?"

"Never liked one better. It has done wonders for me."

She surveyed him with speculative eyes. "It has changed you, Gordon."

Breck smoked in silence. Changed him? He had not thought of that.

"I suppose," Irene said at last, standing up, "I might as well—what you call it—turn in. Good night."

He started to rise with her, but she tapped his shoulder lightly and was gone. Long after she had vanished into her tent he sat watching one faint red eye that blinked from the ashes. He thought of Louise Temple and realized that Irene had spoken more truth than she knew. Yes, he had changed. In one way, at least, he had changed completely.

Breck's train was late to start the next morning, for stiff bodies were hard to get on the move. He was up at dawn and saw Art Tillson pull out at daybreak, but it was eight o'clock before his tourists could take the trail.

Breck fell in at the rear of the string as usual, but Irene did not resume her place with him. Instead she took the lead, and maintained that aloof distance throughout the morning. He was both amused and troubled; for it was always a danger signal when Irene felt exclusive.

They came into Temple's cow camp at eleven o'clock, and the old man, hobbling from his cabin, heartily invited them to get off and eat.

"Louie just rode in," he said, "hungry as a coyote. I'm puttin' steaks on the fire."

The girl had not appeared.

"Where is she?" Breck asked.

Temple waved a hand backward. "Yonder. Fixin' up."

In a moment Louise came to the door of her own cabin and Breck rode to her. He wanted a word alone. But almost at once Irene called sweetly from close behind him.

"Oh, Gordon. My left stirrup is terribly low. Can you fix it please?"

She urged her horse abreast of his, looking very troubled, and altogether innocent.

With difficulty Breck masked annoyance, saying, "Miss Temple, this is Mrs. Sutherland."

The two girls could not have been more in contrast; Louise standing in her work clothes of blue jeans, cowboy boots, coarse gray shirt, while Irene still retained her fresh from the store look.

Louise nodded. "How do you do?"

Irene inclined her head slightly, having an advantage from her mounted position.

Breck hastened to explain; "Senator Sutherland is taking his vacation up here. I hope to show him something of the Forest Service."

Louise smiled knowingly.

"Oh dear," said Irene. "Gordon, this stirrup

Great Saber-Tooth Tigers

No smilodons, as the great saber-tooth tigers were named, have roamed the earth for thousands of years, but the story of their reign of terror is one never to be forgotten. Instead of biting or tearing a victim to death, the smilodon stabbed it time and again with curved, dagger-like tusks that stuck half a foot and more beyond its jaws. Mammoth, mastodons and even armor-protected giant ground sloths fall prey to this beast. Roaming over North and South America and Europe, these terrible tigers grew as large as grizzly bears.

The Good Neighbor

WE HEAR much today of the "Good Neighbor" policy. One of the most encouraging signs of the progress of social justice in the world is the increasing sense of responsibility concerning the welfare of our fellow beings. Between governments and nations the "Good Neighbor" attitude should be encouraged. Community welfare campaigns often adopt the slogan, "Be a Good Neighbor." In times of disaster, organized agencies spring into action to alleviate distress regardless of race, creed, or color. Men are definitely awakening from callous indifference to the suffering of others to a desire to relieve these sad conditions and remove their causes.

In view of this awakened consciousness we may well ask ourselves, "Just what is a good neighbor?" Jesus eloquently answered this question in the parable of the Good Samaritan. But it is well to remember that he prefaced his description of true neighborliness by first emphasizing the two great commandments (Luke 10:27), "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself." Then followed his story of the man who fell among thieves and was left by the roadside in his distress, and was passed by until rescued by the Samaritan, who thus proved himself a good neighbor.

Therefore, in striving to be a good neighbor to one's fellow men one must start with love for God and man. Intelligently to love God requires a correct understanding of His nature. In the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, God is defined (P-567) as "the great I AM; the all-knowing, all-seeing, all-acting, all-wise, all-loving, and eternal; Principle; Mind; Soul; Spirit; Life; Truth; Love; all substance; intelligence." Thus God must be acknowledged as the only power and presence, the All of man's existence. One must turn to Him in childlike trust, confident that His law of ever-operative good is sufficient to meet every human problem. This is truly loving God supremely.

Problem—A lid is put on an empty box, and therefore is said to be empty. If that is not true, what is inside the box? (Answer elsewhere in this department).

Ques.—What is the life of a patent? And can a person get a patent on the same thing when the time expires?
H. H.

Ans.—The life of a patent is 17 years. The article cannot again be patented nor renewed. However, improvements may be patented, and infringements on the improvement are unlawful also for a period of 17 years.

Ques.—If the Ohio River empties into the Mississippi River will you please tell me where it begins?—T. R.
Ans.—The Ohio River begins in Pennsylvania (at Pittsburgh) at the junction of the Allegheny and Monongahela Rivers.

Ques.—On what day of the week will the Fourth of July come on in the year 2039?—K. G.
Ans.—July 4, 2039, will fall on Sunday. Wait and see.

Ques.—What has become of the ex-kaiser of Germany?—G. V.
Ans.—The ex-kaiser is still a self-imposed exile in Doorn, Holland, where he lives in a castle.

Ques.—Will you please answer in your good paper what kind of government has Finland? And what is its capital?—F. J.
Ans.—The government of Finland has been a republic since 1919. Formerly Finland was ruled by Russia. Their independence from the czar was proclaimed in 1917. The capital is Helsinki.

Ans.—to problem: Air is inside the box.

Ques.—Does a person have to be a citizen of the United States to enlist in the United States army, navy or the marines?—B. N.

Ans.—No. Any person who is not a citizen of the United States may enlist in any branch of the military service.

Ques.—Is the word "fortnight" a good word? And what does it mean?—L. E.

Ans.—"Fortnight" is a perfectly good word. It is a contraction of "fourteen nights", and means two weeks.

Ques.—I wish to ask you if golf balls will float?—M. H.
Ans.—The ordinary golf ball will not float. However, there is a special golf ball called "floaters", which are used on courses where there is much water hazards.

Ques.—Did the Indians have horses and ponies before America was discovered by the white man?—N. F.

Ans.—No. When America was discovered, horses were unknown to the Indians. The horses were imported from Spain, and a large number of them were abandoned by De Soto in Texas, while running wild over the State the Indians readily took to riding them.

Ques.—What is the weight of the Liberty bell?—S. Y.

Naming Red River
Red river, which separates Oklahoma from Texas on the south, got its name through being fed in part by the waters of Red creek, Mud creek, Muddy Boggy creek and Deep Red run.

The Fountain of Tears
The Fountain of Tears in Bakhchisarai in the Crimea, constructed by a Tatar ruler to perpetuate the memory of his Polish princess, has a figure that has shed a tear—a single drop of water—once every minute for over 300 years, according to a writer in Collier's Weekly.

First White Men in Chicago
Father Jacques Marquette, a French missionary, and six companions paddled their canoes into the Chicago river in 1674. They were the first white men to set foot on the soil that later became Chicago.

Has Lincoln Memorial Tower
A Lincoln Memorial tower surmounts the New York Avenue Presbyterian church in Washington, D. C., which Abraham Lincoln attended. The tower with its chimneys was presented to the church in 1923 by the family of Robert Todd Lincoln as a memorial gift.

PFEIFFER QUIZ

HOW MANY OF THESE QUESTIONS CAN YOU ANSWER?

- 1 How is the President's salary paid to him?
- 2 Approximately how long is Long Island?
- 3 How much space would it require to hold 1,000,000 silver dollars?
- 4 Is it possible to light a cigarette or set a fire with steam?
- 5 What is the most abundant metal yielded by this earth?
- 6 What is the definition of a bachelor?
- 7 What two states are touched by eight other states?

Look for the correct answers to these questions in the Pfeiffer Quiz appearing in this paper next Thursday. SUGGESTED QUESTIONS ARE SOLICITED.

You may be puzzled about the correct answers to some of these questions, but you will never have any doubts about the quality of PFEIFFER'S BEER.

The well-earned reputation of Pfeiffer's dates back to 1899. A brewmaster of national fame carefully guards this reputation and only hops, malt and other materials of the finest quality—first tested in our completely equipped laboratory—are used in brewing this uniform and outstanding product.
