Favors Adequate Pay For State Workers

Harry F. Kelly, Secretary of State, this week made it clear that he does not consider $80 an adequate living wage for a married man living in Lansing. This issue came to the attention of the public when Ford Eastman, a young clerk in the Department of State, published his personal budget to show where his money went. Governor Dickinson, in discussing how many welfare clients of the state were frittering away money on nonessentials recently was quoted as saying that most employees from governor to janitor were overpaid. Secretary of State, Kelly made a personal investigation in his own department, interviewed Eastman, and upon finding 38 married persons working for less than $1,000 per year, stated that he would recommend that the minimum rate of pay for such persons should henceforth be $1,000 per year, stated that he would recommend that the minimum rate of pay for such persons should henceforth be $100 per month.

"I believe in a fair rate of pay and then a full day's work," said the Secretary.

"I do not believe in the regimentation of state employees or of those employed in private industry. I do not intend to interfere in any way with the private lives of my employees nor do I intend telling them how they shall spend the money they earn."

Two Thrillers Are Promised State As Probes Are Started

Lansing.—In this day of double-header movie attractions, Michigan's capital city is being enthralled by two sensational thrillers.

First—"The Mystery of Frank McKay, or Why Did He Get $92,000 for the Blue Water Bridge?"

Second—"The Enigma of State Buying, or Why Were State Orders Cancelled for Higher Prices?"

With investigations under way by order of Governor Luren D. Dickinson, the two thrillers promise to become serials. Capital citizens, accustomed to official probes, are wondering what the final chapters will be like. At any rate, the suspense here is breath-taking.

The McKay sensation involves two state administrations—Fitzgerald's term in 1935 and 1936 when the financing was arranged, and Murphy's term in 1937 and 1938 when the structure was built.

The bridge project was fathered by a special state commission and financed by a $2,500,000 bond issue underwritten by a Toledo bond firm, Stranahan, Harris and Co. The state highway department built the highway approach at Port Huron.

Why did McKay, former state treasurer, receive $92,000 in connection with the bond issue for this bridge? Or was this fee paid for other services? Governor Dickinson has ordered a complete investigation.

Read Asked to Probe

Attorney General Thomas Read has been given the responsibility of making the official inquiry into the McKay fee.

In making this assignment, Governor Dickinson found himself in the position of asking a McKay-endorsed state officer to investigate McKay. Capital observers recall that when Read was a candidate for lieutenant governor with the support of McKay, his chief primary opponent was Mr. Dickinson.

Like all mysteries, the McKay case has numerous ramifications. PWA Administrator Harold L. Ickes has jumped into the picture with a disclosure that he had rejected the bridge project in 1935 on the ground that the financial proposal was unwise. Counter to Ickes' boast is the untarnished fact that the Port Bridge is earning money faster than the commission anticipated it would and that the 20-year bond issue may be repaid.

SOW HAS TWO SETS OF PIGS

Paul Seitz of Lima reports that on March 31 one of his brood sows gave birth to 13 pigs, all of which died within a couple of days. Not being satisfied with such poor results the same sow gave birth to ten pigs on April 14, and so far they are all living. SEE FLORIDA MOVIES

Jim Parks, best described as an expert amateur movie photographer, entertained the Kinwanis Club members with a display of his art on Monday evening. A trip to Florida was the subject of the talk and pictures. The movies, some of which were gorgeously colored were taken on his recent vacation in the land of sunshine and flowers, and followed the Florida trail clear to Key West. Of course there were the usual fish stories, but these were accompanied by incontrovertible, or as Jim says, "substantial", evidence.

Children In Court

By Judge Malcolm Hatfield

Remembering One's Own Youth
An accident case involving a seven-year old boy demonstrated a very common situation. The lad had been driving his father's car for a year or more. On this particular occasion he coaxed the car from his father to attend a party in another town with the plea that other boys of his age had cars of their own or had access to the family car wherever they wanted it. Finally, against his better judgment, the father complied with his son's wish. The father's memory of his own youth was the determining factor, for he clearly recalled thwarted desires and the struggles he endured to keep up with his classmates. He was too much in sympathy with his son's desires to refuse him. But he did not take into consideration the fact that all pleasures must be earned before they can be appreciated, and that to teach his son the virtue of self-denial would have been a good lesson.

Space in this column will not permit me to conduct a long quiz program, but I am going to ask one question here and wish that readers would try and answer it honestly before looking at the answer. Here is the question:

What is the common reason that some cars veer to one side when the brakes are applied?

(a) Something is wrong with the steering mechanism.

(b) Brakes are not equalized.

(c) Rear axles are loose.

What do you think is the answer? This is it:

If the brake lining grips more firmly on one wheel than on another, the car is apt to veer to one side when the brakes are applied. The car should be taken to a competent service men to have the brakes equalized.

Two Thrillers Are Promised State As Probes Are Started

tired in the next ten years, if present earnings are maintained.

More Commissions

In the McKay serial plot is another figure, Stewart P. Blazier of Grosse Pointe, Detroit manager for Stranahan, Harris and Co.

It was revealed at Washington that Blazier had received $18,685 in "commissions" for services performed in connection with the $2,300,000 bond issue, in addition to salary of $4,800.

Blazier was a personal friend of the late Governor Fitzgerald. Incidentally, he was one of the pallbearers at the Grand Lodge funeral.

Throughout the entire matter, several facts stand out. The federal government is not concerned, as both McKay and Blazier have seemingly accounted for every dollar of income for federal taxation purposes. Unlike Pennington, the Kansas City political leader, McKay is reputed to have deep respect for the internal revenue department at Washington. Furthermore, no state funds are directly involved as the bridge bonds were sold to private investors. It apparently was a private business transaction between the Toledo bond house and the two Michigan men—McKay and Blazier. Hence it has all the earmarks of legality.

Hiking Prices

The second mystery thriller was uncovered by Auditor General Vernon J. Brown. It concerns the question: Why were certain orders cancelled by state buyers and substitute orders made out at higher prices?

The legislature recently transferred all accounting responsibility to the office of the auditor general who is a member of the state administrative board.

Digging into the records of buying done by the state since Jan. 1, Brown barred some startling transactions: Purchase of a tractor, selling at retail for less than $1,000 for a total amount of $1,350 including a traded-in tractor; purchase of a plow, selling at retail for $110, for a total of $150.95; cancelling orders for 15, 151 tons of coal and substituting new orders through another firm for 10,000 tons at higher prices and sale of alleged inferior feed for cattle at higher prices.

Brown summed it up: "Local dealers have been ignored and articles bought of distant sales agents at prices above open market quotations. Unless Michigan can display more intelligent buying than its central purchasing department has yet demonstrated, it had better hand the job back to heads of departments and institutions."

Barnard Involved
Edward Barnard, Wayne county Republican boss, and McKay, Kent county leader, virtually dictated the choice of nominees of the Republican party last fall.

In order to cripple Barnard in Wayne county, Rep. Elton P. Eaton of Plymouth introduced a bill calling for congressional district conventions, all on the same day. Encouraged by young Republican legislators who are itching for a "new deal" in Michigan Republicanism, the bill was rushed through the House.

In the Senate, however, it was killed in committee but only on the day following the spring election.

Senator D. Hake Brake, chairman of the judiciary committee, promptly introduced a new anti-Barnard bill and by precedent-breaking methods obtained suspension of rules for the particular measure, for the deadline for introduction of bills had passed.

Barnard's power in Wayne county, as the acknowledged ruler of county conventions, will be sharply curtailed if Brake's bill receives legislative sanction. The McKay fee exposure has greatly enhanced its chances of passage. It also sharpens the cleavage that is developing in Republican ranks.

Highway Patronage Raid

If Murray D. Van Wagoner were a Republican, the house of representatives would not have given a moment's consideration to a bill seeking to deprive the state highway department of maintenance of state trunk roads, returning this responsibility to the counties.

In 1925 a Republican highway commissioner, Frank Rogers, took over maintenance of state roads in 18 counties. His successor, Cassius C. Dillman, also a Republican, furthered this policy by taking over 14 additional counties. The trend was continued by Van Wagoner, a Democrat, and today the state department is responsible for snow clearance, ice sanding and general maintenance of state roads in 50 of the 88 counties, 18 counties being added in the past six years.

Should a severe spowstorm hit West Michigan the state department mobilizes trucks and plows from counties not affected by the storm. The mobility of the state's snow-fighting equipment is recognized generally as a distinct public asset.

Instead of one standardized maintenance for state highways, the thrust at Van Wagoner would create 88 varieties. The Democratic commissioner has 1200 maintenance employees—1200 jobs which could be distributed among deserving Republicans. The bill is undeniably political in purpose.

State Deficit Grows

While double-header mysteries are still making the headlines, Governor Dickinson and the administration are wrestling with a critical financial dilemma—a treasury deficit prospect of approximately $80,000,000 by June 30.

To pay current cost of operating the state government, Michigan is ripping into special ear-marked funds in an attempt to avert the use of scrip or outright bankruptcy. Ordinarily the treasury has a balance of around $15,000,000. Today it shows a red ink deficit of $18,000,000 with three month's bills yet to be paid.

The higher prices for state purchases authorized by buyers after low-price orders had been cancelled, were directly counter to the governor's economy program. Governor Dickinson's salary cutting statement was an indication of the extremity to which he is ready to go in order to restore sound fiscal government to Michigan.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Edward James Notten, who passed away April 17, 1926:

In life we loved you dearly,
In death we do the same;
We often sit and think of you
And wish you were here again.

We think of you in silence,
No eyes can see us weep;
But many, many a silent tear we shed
When others are fast asleep.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Notten and Family.

First Agricultural Co-operatives
The earliest co-operative organizations of which records have been found were in the dairy industry.

At least as long as four centuries ago, the Swiss and French peasants in the Jura mountains practiced a form of co-operation known as cheese rings. They borrowed milk of one another to secure enough to make a cheese. This led to pooling the milk and manufacturing the cheese at a common center, then to combined marketing. Two co-operative cheese associations in 1722 are mentioned in a bulletin of the United States department of agriculture.

The Philadelphia Society for Promoting Agriculture was formed in 1785, as was the South Carolina Society for Promoting and Improving Agriculture. Similar societies were organized in Maine in 1787, in New York in 1791, and in Massachusetts in 1792.

Porpoises Not Fish
Porpoises actually are not even fish. Members of the whale family, they are mammals, animals that spend their lives in the water. Out of water, they could breathe, but would soon die of starvation as they can not move about on solid ground.

Salvors of old-time windjammer days termed porpoises their special pets, as these six-foot "fish" followed and swam around a ship for days at a time. Porpoises once were caught for food, but today their greatest commercial value is their oil.

Aptitude Tests

This year the University of Michigan, through the Rackham Psychological Institute, has given tests to senior students of high schools for the purpose of helping the student select a college course he or she is best suited for.

Chelsea high school, being near Ann Arbor, was one of the schools this institute sent representatives to in order to introduce these tests and familiarize the students with them.

Miss Gordon and her assistant came to Chelsea to give the preliminary tests which consisted of two books of problems which were in reality a form of test for selecting your Intelligence Quotient.

After these tests were given, six students received the privilege of going on with more tests at their institute in Ann Arbor, which related to more specific ideas. These tests are very beneficial to the students who are graduating from school and are a little skeptical as to what courses in college they are best suited for.

This test stabilizes your confidence in yourself and is a means by which you can rely in case of difficulty in entering a college because of insufficient marks.

I believe these tests should be taken by every senior student in any high school because of the benefits and knowledge the student derives from them. They are given free of charge.

Any senior student wishing to take these tests should see the superintendent of their school.

Here and There
Senior—Is your girl friend having any trouble learning to drive?
Sophomore—Well, the road is beginning to turn when she does.

Doris—(In poetical mood) What are the wild waves saying?
Charlie—Sounds like splash.

Mr. Cameron—Your son has a great thirst for knowledge. From whom did he inherit this?
Mother—He gets the knowledge from me, and the thirst from his father.

Voice from eleventh floor—Smatter down there, have you no key?
Noisy one—Gotta key, all right, but wouldja jussason throw down a few key holes?

We conclude this week with a rather witty inspiration, obviously from a Junior's pen:
Caesar is a subject—
At least it used to be;
It killed off half the Romans,
And now it's killing me.
Caesar is deceased—
Cleero is too!

And where their dear old bones may be,
I wish their books were too!

Band and Orchestra
As far as band is concerned, there isn't much new news to be written this time. We're still hoping to see a crowd at the Festival on May 2.

The orchestra practices haven't been affected by the Band Festival yet, and every time we practice we find old mistakes and perfect them. In time we will have them "down pat". Eleanor Harper, the 1938-39 concertmaster, is doing splendidly in leading the first violin section while Betty Platt, first chair in the second violin section, makes the second violins effective. The orchestra and band will be playing a concert some time shortly after the Band Festival so that the public might see the progress of Chelsea Hi's music program.

The Dance Orchestra is doing all right I hear, and they expect to use their new music with the old when playing for an All-Hi party, the 28th of this month.

Better Markets Possible for State's Truck Crops

Improved markets for vegetable truck crops are probable in view of somewhat smaller prospective supplies and increased buying power, states the federal Bureau of Agricultural Economics in its March report.

Crops pertinent to Michigan agriculture include potatoes, celery, cabbage, asparagus, lettuce, onions, tomatoes, watermelons and vegetables for canning.

It takes considerable estimating to prophecy the 1939 potato crop. Intentions to plant, however, give an indication that it yields average about normal there may be a national crop of about 336,000,000 bushels or about 9 per cent less than in 1938. Michigan has indicated 6 per cent increase in acreage.

Late crop states are going to find increased competition in marketing asparagus. One sunbeam in the picture, however, is that appetites may be whetted by a somewhat curtailed early crop from southern states.

Low prices in the fall of 1938 are expected to lead reductions in cabbage acreages.

For celery the prediction is for a smaller crop with higher prices this spring. The report does not attempt estimates for northern acreages as yet.

Northern growers apparently are going to plant more onions in the face of a smaller Bermuda acreage in the south.

Lower consumption totals for canned corn and canned tomatoes are leading to a warning, interesting to Michigan farmers, that caution may be repaid in planning acreages of corn and tomatoes for canning. An anticipated reduction of 1.5 per cent is apparent in bean acreage nationally and white pea bean acreage is to be about 8 per cent less.

Kentucky's Fiddle-Bow District
Fiddle Bow is the name of the famous bridge-grafted black oak tree that once lived in Hopkins county, Ky., near Madisonville. The tree served as the fiddlestick, while a branch, fused into the trunk at both ends, took the place of hairs from a horse's tail. From the tree that part of Kentucky became known as the Fiddle Bow district. A schoolhouse also goes by the same name. This old land mark stood not far from the spot where a notorious highwayman, Micajah Harp, known as Big Harp, lost his head more than a century ago. This old tree illustrates how a freak of nature may distort or change the shape of a tree, making it so distinct that it becomes a land mark and is written into the pages of history.

Size of the Titanic
The Titanic was 852 1/2 feet long, 125 feet wide, 73 feet deep, gross tonnage 46,328. The vessel had Marconi wireless apparatus, in charge of Jack Phillips, who lost his life, and Harold Bride, who was saved. She was sailing west from Southampton to New York, struck an iceberg at 11:40 p. m., April 14, 1912, and sank at 2:20 a. m. next day. Capt. E. J. Smith went down with his ship. There was a loss of 1,513 lives, practically all of these representing passengers and crew who remained on board.

Diseases Among Indians
Measles and smallpox were the recorded diseases which prevailed among the Indians.

U. S. Uses Most Water
The U. S. citizen uses an average of 127 gallons of water a day, world's highest average.

She gave a strained little laugh. "A girl kisses a man, and it doesn't mean a thing! How strange! I always thought it did." She turned from him; the laughter died from her voice and her next words were tense with controlled feeling.

"I'm a girl, with a girl's view. Maybe we are silly sometimes, but no girl would kiss you like that without the right—some previous right. I suppose. Now, hadn't you better go back to her?"

"Louise," Breck pleaded, "you must understand me. I have known her a long time; once we were engaged. But it was not love and we found it out. You surely realize what happened tonight! Irene did that for a purpose."

He looked at her, smiling a little. "I'm a man and not supposed to know about women's technique, but still I'm not blind."

She would not face him. "Louise!" he begged, throwing one arm about her waist.

"Stop right there, Ranger! I've been waiting for that!"

The voice came from behind him, somewhere in the dark. Breck whirled, one hand falling to his gun.

"Hold it! Keep 'em up!" A mounted man burst from the trees. Breck looked up at Art Tillson towering above him, and then into the round black bore of a pistol.

The cowboy sat in his saddle unsteadily, his left hand gripping the horn; hatless, without a coat, and his horse was lathered from hard running.

"Louise," he said thickly, "you get back!"

Breck pushed her into the shadow.

ows. Then he faced young Tillson. "Art," he snapped, "you're drunk. Put away that gun and get out of here!"

"What's that?" Art leered in mock wonder, leaning far over until his face came close to Breck's. "You tellin' me to get out? So's you can go back to the dance? Nice, all right. You with two women—an idea what bit him?"

Breck shook his head, but he could reconstruct what had happened. Art getting drunk after Irene threw him down, brooding over it; driven at last to take it out on somebody standing here in the cabin, he could still see the distorted face thrust close to his.

Joe Scott came in, a big, dark-faced man. He held a lamp near the wound, probed a little, with his pocket knife, then straightened.

"Arm bone's broke, rib shattered some. Good thing the lead went clean through."

"I'll have to get him down," said Cook.

Scott wagged his head. "No; too much danger of that rib puncturing a lung. I'd say send for a doctor."

He bent again over the cowboy, adding, "Ain't going to bleed much, and he's passed out in a drunk. Get me some rags and I'll fix him up for the time being."

Louise went for them. Breck strode from the door, saying to Cook, "I'll tell Lone Tree to send a surgeon."

"By this time word had gotten out to the dancers, and he came at once among a knot of men beyond the shanty."

"What happened, Ranger?"

"A gun went off," Breck replied. "Nothing serious."

"Who's hurt?"

He mumbled a name indistinctly and passed on toward the telephone. There he rang Lone Tree, ordering the clerk to send up a doctor, and to make certain of getting the right man, told how badly Tillson was shot.

When he turned from the phone, Irene was standing at his back. "Gordon!" she gasped. Her face was blanched, eyes wide in a look of comprehension, as if she realized her part in this. "I heard what you said. Tell me—tell me what happened. Gordon, did you kill him?"

He put a hand firmly on her shoulder, turning her around. "Go back to your family, Irene. Don't frighten them. I'll come later."

"But tell me—"

"For God's sake don't say!"

Back at the cabin he found Joe Scott and Cook finishing the job of binding Tillson's wounds. Louise was not there. Sierra slouched toward him as he entered. "Pardner, show me the barbecue pit, will you? I ain't et since noon."

Outside he added less casually, "I want to talk. Come on."

Fire had burned to coals in the pit, and only strings of beef were left upon the bones hanging there. Sierra took off a rack of ribs while Breck found cups and poured coffee. They sat together on a log.

Breck drank his first cupful, poured another, suddenly aware of nerves beginning to let down.

"Seen Jud and Hep?" Sierra asked.

"They haven't been here all day."

"How do you figure that?"

"I don't. Neither does Cook."

Sierra tore two ribs apart and deftly secured the meat between his teeth; that finished, he said gravely, "What do you suppose Art was sayin' around alone for—actin' plumb loco that way?"

"He was loco," Breck answered, "over a girl, and that explains a lot. He went out of his head over this girl I brought up. She made a fool of him and he came back at me."

Sierra nodded. "That's about what I might a-knowned."

Breck said nothing. Through the pines he saw figures moving again about the dance fire. Voices were lifted to a higher pitch of excitement. His eyes went to the cabin where a light showed in one window. Presently Sierra expressed Breck's own thought. "Well anyway," he drawled, "Art won't cause us no trouble for a long time."

Breck nodded. But there were still the other two.

A breeze stirred the coals into a burst of flame. Light added distance to the circle of vision. Breck's gaze moved up the slope behind him, passing slowly through the black tree trunks. It halted upon one spot. He stared, half-rising, then suddenly caught Sierra's arm.

turned into the back trail. The gunshot had either gone unheard or was accepted without interest by the dance crowd, for no one had moved from the clearing. But before the party reached Temple's cabin, Cook stepped from a fringe of trees.

"What's up?" he began, then his eyes fell upon the form they carried, and he strode ahead with no further question. As soon as they had Tillson on a bunk, he closed the door, saying, "No need to have anyone find out if we can help it."

"His thick brown fingers went with unexpected skill over the boy's body, stripping off his shirt, exposing a rash through his right arm and across his chest. Abruptly he turned to Louise. "Go get Joe Scott. He's a horse doctor, but it's all the same."

The girl ran out. Breck poured a basin of water and gave it to Cook. Behind him, Sierra rolled a cigarette and looked on unperturbed.

"I been followin' Art since afternoon," he offered. "Found him bustin' round up on the ridge, ridin' like he was loco. He'd come down here, sit lookin' on for awhile, then hear that poor critter of his back beat the slow, drunk, sure. Then about dark I saw him start spottin' you, pardner. Maybe you've got an idea what bit him."

Breck shook his head, but he could reconstruct what had happened. Art getting drunk after Irene threw him down, brooding over it; driven at last to take it out on somebody standing here in the cabin, he could still see the distorted face thrust close to his.

A breeze stirred the coals into a burst of flame. Light added distance to the circle of vision. Breck's gaze moved up the slope behind him, passing slowly through the black tree trunks. It halted upon one spot. He stared, half-rising, then suddenly caught Sierra's arm.

Sierra looked. A figure was coming down toward them, stumbling, one hand groping as if in blindness. Though the face was smudged and partly covered by long strings of hair, Breck recognized the boy from the Potholes.

"It's Jack Weiler," he said quietly to Sierra. "Something's wrong. I've seen that look—we mustn't frighten him."

The boy approached with glazed eyes staring at the fire. His jaw hung slack. Bloody scratches showed through torn clothing. One hand outstretched in front of him held what had once been a barn lantern. Now there was left only the wire bail.

Breck stood up slowly when the boy came within a few feet, but he did not speak. The glassy eyes rested upon him, moved off, strayed back. A tight fist lifted the lantern ball as if to cast its glow higher.

Gradually his lips parted to form soundless words. Breck held out his hand, saying, "Hello, Jack. How are you?"

The boy hesitated, took a step nearer, yet no sign of recognition came into his face.

"Let's get him some whiskey," Sierra advised.

"No," said Breck. "Wait a minute." He took the boy's arm and drew him down to the log, then spoke in an even, questioning voice.

"Well, Jack, been bear-huntin' lately? Here, I'll blow out your lantern."

He unclenched the small fist and went through the action of extinguishing a light. "Cold, isn't it? Have some coffee? Bring us a cupful, Slim."

Jack drank in gulps and gasped one long breath when he finished. For a moment Breck looked away, thinking, knowing he must establish some contact in the little fellow's mind. It was plain he had been through a terrible experience, and then had been fighting through the woods—no telling how long.

In moving, Breck's hand touched the Luger. He pulled it out, turning it over in his palm as he looked at Jack.

The boy was staring with the first sign of sane comprehension. He reached for the gun. "That that's a Luger, ain't it?" he stammered.
