Temporary Signs Will Be Placed By Village

At the regular meeting of the village council on Monday evening action was taken to have temporary signs, designating the direction to Chelsea, placed on the new US-12 highway. A sign will be placed at the west intersection of the old and new highways, one at the intersection two miles east of Chelsea, and two at the Manchester road intersection. These signs will serve the purpose of directing motorists to Chelsea until permanent signs can be obtained, and will be placed this week.

A delegation of about twenty business men attended the meeting on Monday evening to discuss with the council the matter of employing an other marshal, so that one police official could be on duty during the entire night, and also have the advantage of patrol duty during part of the day. At the present time Marshal Waldemar Grossman is serving long hours, but cannot spend all night on duty in addition to patrolling the streets during part of the day. Village officials are considering the employment of another marshal and definite action will no doubt be taken in the near future.

Another delegation, members of the Chelsea Public Library Board, attended the council meeting to discuss plans for moving the library to new quarters. This proposal is also being investigated by the council.
An ordinance providing for regulation of traffic on village streets was adopted by the council. This ordinance pertains to the designation of stop streets, and it also provides that it is unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to park, stop or stand a motor truck or commercial vehicle on Main street between its intersection with Orchard street and the Michigan Central railroad for the purpose of unloading or removing any material from the vehicles. The entire ordinance is published in this issue of The Standard.

High School To Present Operetta On Wednesday

On Wednesday evening, November 15, at 8:15 p. m. the music and dramatics departments of the Chelsea high school will present "The Chimes of Normandy," a two-act operetta written by Robert Planquette, French composer of light opera during the nineteenth century. The date has been changed from November 16, as announced last week, to the 15th because of interference with other local activities.

The setting of the operetta is in Normandy, a French province, during the seventeenth century. In Corne-ville, one of the old-fashioned villages, the great annual hiring fair is in progress. It is an assemblage of village gossip; Serpolette, the village cut-up (Joan Walworth) is one of the main topics of conversation. She comes in, however, just in time to "turn the tables" on them.

Gaspard, an old miser (Paul Schnelder) wishes to marry his niece Germaine (Janis Dancer) to the magistrate of the village, the Bailiff (Robert Welch). Germaine, however, is not pleased, since she has vowed she will wed no one except the young sailor, Grenicheux (Wesley McAttee) who pretended that he saved her from drowning at one time.

Henri, Count de Corneville (George Winans) who has been in exile since childhood, now returns to visit the old castle of his birth. He is told that it is haunted; this romantic legend stirs his heart, and he determines to investigate.

Germaine takes advantage of the privileges of the fair and engages herself as a servant of the count. Her example is followed by Grenicheux and Serpolette.

Henri is determined to learn the truth concerning the ghostly apparitions in the castle, and discovers that they are caused by the old miser, Gaspard, who has concealed his treasures there. This discovery drives Gaspard crazy.

Through an old document left by the Marquis at the time of his flight, it is learned that he has confided his daughter to Gaspard's care. Serpolette claims to be that child but it eventually turns out that Germaine is the true Marchioness, and Henri, not Grenicheux, is the one who saved her from drowning. They are united, and the romantic story is brought to a close.

There will be a matinee performance for grade school children Tuesday afternoon, November 14, at 1:30.

CELEBRATE 40TH ANNIVERSARY Mr. and Mrs. John Young of Lyndon were pleasantly surprised on Sunday when their children and their families arrived to help them celebrate their 40th wedding anniversary.
A Thanksgiving dinner was served.
The dining table was centered with a beautifully decorated cake in pink and green, bearing the inscription "Dad and Mother's 40th Anniversary." The guests were Miss Gertrude Young of Ann Arbor, Thomas Young of Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Merkel and family and Mr. and Mrs. Norbert Merkel and family.

Tax Delinquencies May Be Untangled By New State Law

By Gene Allemen
Lansing—Effective in Michigan this week is a new statute which strives once more to untangle the age-old problem of land.

It mirrors a major part of the history of Michigan itself. This history is written in the terms of human use of land and of exploitation by outside interests of the land's natural resources and by-products, such as fur, timber, iron, copper, oil and gas.

It recalls the hey-day of greedy speculation of land in the Detroit metropolitan area during the boom years of 1924, 1925 and 1926 when a wave of excessive and poorly controlled subdividing swept over the city and its environs, leaving in its wake a trail of tax delinquencies and overdeveloped realty.

It reveals a shameful neglect and indifference by state and local government in intelligent planning and conservation.

It reviews a re-occurring cycle of human ambition and disillusionment, success and failure, happiness and heartaches.

Here is a subject so commonplace that it is almost prosaic.

Yet there probably is no one other thing in Michigan which affects so many people. Consider then for a few minutes this paramount problem of land and how our state government is trying to solve it.

The New Land Plan Confronted with the cold fact that 1938 advertising of delinquent land in Michigan had disclosed the existence in tax default of approximately 1, 500,000 acres in northern Michigan and the Upper Peninsula and literally millions of dollars in undeveloped residential and business lots in the Detroit metropolitan area, the 1939 state legislature arrived at this solution:

(1) Tax delinquent land north of the south line of Aromoo, Midland, Isabella, Mecosta, Newaygo and Ocseaga counties would go to the state

Red Cross Roll Call Will Start Saturday

The annual Roll Call of the local chapter of the American Red Cross will start on Armistice Day, November 11, and will continue until Thanksgiving Day, November 28. Following the custom of the past few years a house to house canvas will be conducted to solicit funds and donations of clothing to carry on the fine work of the local chapter.

To acquaint the public with the activities of the local Red Cross in supplying the needy families of the community with some of the everyday necessities, a summary of expenditures for the past year has been compiled, as follows:

Shoes and repairs: 9 pairs, $20.11; groceries, $4.66; clothing—two gowns, two underwear, two blankets, nine coveralls, two overalls, seven sheets, twelve yards outing, two towels, four pairs hosiery, two shirts—total $27.39; Christmas bags completed, $10.40, each containing sewing kit, handkerchiefs, diary, tooth paste, tooth brush, comb, playing cards, writing paper, pencil, wash cloth.

In addition to the above expenditures, many donated articles were distributed. It is hoped that this year's contributions will be at least as generous as last year, which showed an increase over the previous year. The Red Cross supplies many needs which are not taken care of in any other way and only the loyal support of the community as a whole makes possible their acts of kindness to the needy.

School Receives Gift Of Music and Violins

Chelsea public school is the recipient of a very fine gift from William H. Freer of Jackson, a former resident of Chelsea where he attended school for several years. Mr. Freer, who has been a professional musician for many years, is leaving Jackson and has donated his entire library of music consisting of several hundred issues to the Chelsea school for the exclusive use of the school orchestra.

In addition to the gift of music Mr.
Freer is giving the school two violins, one suitable for a girl and one for a boy, with the stipulation that the instruments always remain school property, to be loaned to students who show musical talent and who might not be able to purchase a violin. The violins are not to be loaned to anyone who is not a student of the Chelsea school.

Mr. Freer states that it may be of interest to the residents of Chelsea to know that the boy's violin was owned and used by his father, A. M. Freer, and says that many of the older people here have heard him play it over a period of many years, and that if his father were alive he would be pleased to know that his violin is back in Chelsea and being put to good use by the children.

This violin has an interesting history, according to Mr. Freer. Many years ago an old gold prospector owned the instrument and took it with him via horseback transportation from St.
Louis to California and back, finally landing in Chelsea. He became very ill and was treated by Dr. Gates who was practicing here at that time. Dr.
Gates took the violin in payment of the bill, and sold it to A. M. Freer.
Previous to the year 1931 Wm. H.
Freer had spent 35 years of "troup-ing," during which he visited and played in 774 cities in the United States. He spent several years as musical director for Blackstone, the magician.

Mr. Freer began his theatrical musical career at the age of seven when he played in the opera house orchestra at Chelsea, where his father was leader of both that organization and the town band. He studied at the University of Michigan school of music and in Chicago for some time, and later played with the famous Boos Band in Jackson.

Members of the Board of Education and school faculty are very grateful to Mr. Freer for this fine contribution which will be of benefit to the school for many years to come. Robert Dunstan, director of instrumental music in the school, brought the music and instruments to Chelsea this week.

New Marilyn Will Open On Saturday, Nov. 11

Announcement is made in the advertising columns of this issue of The Standard of the opening, on Saturday, November 11, of Mr. and Mrs. Grant Schooley's new Marilyn Inn, located two miles east of Chelsea at the intersection of the old and new US-12 highways.

The new building, which was constructed to replace the building which was removed to make way for the new highway, is 30x60 feet, two stories in height, with full basement. The main entrance is on the west side of the building. There is a lunch counter in the center of the building, and the tap room is located at the north end, with a dining room at the south end. Living quarters for the family are on the second floor.

An arrangement which should meet with public approval is the location of the tap room, which will be used exclusively by those who do not care for meals, at the opposite end of the building from the dining room. The dining room is so constructed that it can be closed for private meetings or parties, and a piano is provided for use in this room.

Both the tap room and dining room are very spacious, with seating capacity for 46 people in each room.
Furniture in the tap room is of the old mission type, and that in the dining room is red cherry. The walls are in two-tone finish and there is indirect lighting with beautiful fixtures. There are modern rest rooms near the entrance to the building.

An advantage in the location of the building is the provision made for parking space, which is ample for the parking of a large number of cars. A large Neon sign, which can be seen for some distance, has been placed on the building.

Mr. and Mrs. Schooley have operated the Marilyn Inn for ten years, and have enjoyed a good volume of business. In connection with the Inn they have ten tourist cabins, and they expect to increase this number to fourteen by spring. They also plan to construct a service station building, which will be completed within the next few months.

STOCKBRIDGE—Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Reeves talked with Barbara and Glenard McLaughlin in New York City where they are staying at the Barbizon Plaza Hotel for a few days on their return trip through Canada to Quebec and the New England States. They attended the Fair on the closing day. They are expected home next Sunday.—Brief-Sun.

PARMA—Damage usually inflicted by Halloween celebrants was reduced even lower than last year in the village of Parma, but not at the Humphrey, Riceville, and Bathmill rural schools where practically all the windows were broken, which will amount to a large sum of money to repair the damage. State Police and sheriff's officers are investigating. School there will be completely closed until the windows can be replaced, which will be as soon as possible. The pranksters' minds must have been in the lowest ebb that night or perhaps they are allergic to glass and might be termed "glass-bugs".—News.

MASON—There may be a cold winter on the way but that doesn't prevent a double harvest of violets this year. G. H. Harrington brought in a bouquet of woods violets Thursday morning. He picked them in the Tanswell woods west of Mason. Mr. Harrington reported that he picked several big bouquets this week. He sent one of them to relatives in Ohio. The violets are not quite as deep in color as are violets in the spring.—County News.

DEXTER—Miss Emilie Steinbach and Miss Katherine Eldrid, who have been spending the past nine months with Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Steinbach, have gone to New York City, where they will make their permanent home.—Leader.

Tax Delinquencies

conservation department for disposal through its land division. Thus, suitable forest land (and unsuitable agricultural land) could be added to the state forests. Municipalities would be given an opportunity to acquire lots within their boundaries for purpose of school sites, playgrounds or parks.

(2) Tax delinquent land lying south of the above line which extends generally from Muskegon to Bay City would be offered for re-sale by a state land board at a "salvage" auction in May, 1940. All such land will be offered for sale at a minimum of 25 cents on the dollar of assessed valuation. Dispossessed owners may have the privilege of matching the highest bid and of obtaining the title again. Former title-holders may enter into an agreement with the state land board to pay such a redeeming price over a period not exceeding 10 years.

If the lands are not redeemed by former owners within the 30 day period, a deed will be issued conveying absolute title to the "salvage sale" purchaser.

Northern Michigan

In Northern Michigan and the Upper Peninsula the state conservation department may dispose of the delinquent tax lands in one of three ways:

(1) Reserve the land for state forests and other conservation units. This would recognize the character of the land as being unsuitable for agricultural use. Speculators could not obtain the land for exploitation after which the land likely would revert to tax delinquency and thus proceed once more through the process of being advertised, offered for sale, and so on.

(2) Offer at public auction after appraisal and establishment of minimum prices—owner at time of tax sale having 30 days following the auction to redeem for the amount of the auction bid. This corresponds with the plan for southern Michigan with one exception that while sale is discretionary in northern Michigan, it is mandatory in southern Michigan.

(3) Exchange with the United States and individuals when such procedure is for the best interests of the state.

In the place of speculation and spoliation, through which hundreds of millions of second-growth trees might be stripped by lumbermen and "timber skidders", northern Michigan land is to be carefully administered by a state department created in 1921 for the purpose of fostering conservation of natural resources.

Southern Michigan

The land problem that exists in southern Michigan is largely the result of a subdivision boom, quite like the Florida boom which developed in the mid-twenties.

Today, in the city of Detroit and in an adjacent area, enough subdivided lots are on the tax rolls to accommodate an increase in population of three million people!

The Michigan Planning Commission, in a survey completed in 1939, found that only 4.8 per cent of subdivision lots in four townships in Wayne county, immediately adjacent to Detroit, were being utilized. The commission also pointed out that a lack of coordinated policy of restrictions had produced "rural slums". Out of 5,323 residences constructed in four townships, 60 per cent are without furnaces, 58 per cent without bathrooms, and 64 per cent without basements.

In thirteen metropolitan townships studied, 65.1 per cent of all subdivision lots platted were advertised in the 1938 tax sale. More than three-fourths of all advertised lots were tax delinquent for five or more years.

The commission concludes: "The return of this land to private ownership, unencumbered by delinquent taxes, will not assure the payment of taxes in the future, unless the return is accompanied by a program which will bring this land into proper use." It would only mean a repetition of existing abuses, another turn in the land merry-go-round.

Responsibility for prevention of such abuses should be vested, the commission continues, with "legally constituted planning authorities having jurisdiction broad enough in scope to encompass the overlapping interests of municipalities, townships, and counties in the area affected by the plat."

Land Grants

Originally all land in Michigan belonged to the Federal government, and prior to that, of course, to the Indians.

In 1837, when Michigan was admitted to the Union, section 16 of every township was turned over to the state with the stipulation that sale proceeds would go to a state primary school fund. Later, the state colleges were given a grant of 30,000 acres for every representative in Congress. In 1850 Congress passed a swamp land act whereby six million acres came into state ownership for drainage development. The state would give swamp land script in payment for the building of roads and bridges, such script being discounted at banks and purchased by land speculators.

Then came federal land grants to builders of railroads, whereby belts of land six to eleven miles in width were granted outright to railroads. (1868, Lansing to Traverse Bay railroad). Builders of the Soo ship canal and the Keweenaw ship canal, for example, were given a choice of desirable timber lands.

Between 1870 and 1890 came the timber-cutting boom when lumber interests stripped much of the land of valuable pine and then left the idle cut-over land, tax delinquent, for the state to worry about.

It was not until the 1893 depression that the state, after trial and error process, established a sound general tax law which provided that five-year tax default lands could be sold to homesteaders and land companies.

Into the modern picture comes the 1929 oil and gas discovery in Midland and Isabella counties—an interesting story in itself.

Tax-Moratorium

In 1933, the year of the bank moratorium, the state legislature enacted a tax moratorium for relief of distressed property owners.

In May of 1936 a tax sale was to have been held to sell 1933 tax default land and any unpaid installments (10-year plan) on 1932 and previous tax years. The legislature later delayed the tax sale to May, 1938, when the accumulation of all tax defaults were compiled into one gigantic tax list. In metropolitan areas the tax delinquencies had mounted to astounding proportions, and the cost of publication in these counties (despite a 50 per cent reduction by the 1937 legislature) was abnormally large for reasons found in simple arithmetic.

The present grand jury investigation at Lansing into possible mis-handling of state funds through the office of the 1937 and 1938 auditor general, George Gundry, and his assistant, Martin Lavan, attorney at Brighton, involves the metropolitan tax lists.

Thus, the land story unfolds a history of Michigan from the era of Indian fur trade to the present week. The state once again seeks a solution for an old problem in which speculation and exploitation have had such a prominent place.

Supervised Loans Made To Farmers of County

The Farm Security Administration, a division of the United States Department of Agriculture, has made more than 100 supervised loans to Washtenaw county farmers in the past several years.

Donald Kline, local county FSA supervisor, states that the majority of these borrowers have repaid their obligations to the government according to the date of maturity of the loan payments. He can point to a definite improvement of farm income as a result of supervised credit. Because of this supervision, the borrower has been able to increase his inventory in the form of more and better live stock, and equipment, and generally has been able to provide sufficient crops to feed this live stock properly. He has been able to make advantageous purchases of farm machinery and other equipment since these, as well as other items under the loan agreement have been made on a cash basis. Then too, proposed future purchases are planned out with the supervisor whereby definite arrangements are made for payment if it is deemed wise for such an outlay or expense to be incurred. In other words, once a borrower has made the needed purchases which he should have in order to run his business profitably, through supervised credit, he must keep his credit in a favorable condition.

Mr. Kline was born and raised on a farm in Genesee county and had the advantage of several years training in 4-H club work and F. F. A. projects. After graduation from Michigan State College he taught Smith-Hughes agriculture two years at Bellevue, Mich. and taught ten years at Howell.

Mr. Kline gives the following information which may be of help to those farmers in Washtenaw county who are eligible for a FSA loan.

Applications for loans are made at the county FSA office at 343 South Main St., Ann Arbor. If it is determined that the farmer is eligible, and because of his experience and location on a productive farm, will be in a position to repay the loan over a period of five years, references are then interviewed. The applicant is then investigated thoroughly and if found to have the necessary requirements, a farm plan is submitted to the district office together with a request for loan funds whereby live stock and tools may be purchased or old debts refinanced.

He shows a possible balance available for the farmer's loan payment and a definite repayment schedule.

The home supervisor plays an important part when home plans are made and works with the borrower's wife and family as to a suitable food supply, necessary clothing and efficient farm home management. Too many farm families do not butcher or prepare enough home grown meat, fruit and vegetables.

This farm and home plan is not just theory and the plan is followed to a very satisfactory extent. Barring crop failure, abnormal live stock losses, or other abnormal unforeseen losses the plans do work out to a close degree. As one man recently remarked, "You certainly have everything down in black and white."

Borrowers are supervised only to the degree necessary to bring about the proper technical guidance and are not placed under mandatory restrictions which unduly limit their freedom of operations.

The Farm Security Administration is not a relief agency but is a program to help farmers to again become self-supporting through loan funds which will be paid back and where supervisory assistance will be given.

Bookman's Paradise
The bookman's paradise is Leipzig, Germany, where there are over a thousand publishers and shops devoted to the trade, and where books have been the chief manufacture for 200 years.

LIBRARY NEWS

Children's Book Week, Nov. 12 to 18 is one of the November celebrations that we like to talk about. This year has been full of books of foreign tales that keep alive our children's honest sympathies for the people of other lands. Books that take the child into the "Land of Adventure" find a place as also the "Land of Make Believe." There are picture books that provide a type of enjoyment which may be shared by the whole family, yet it is difficult to calculate the possible effect of any given book. However, we must all agree that good books have a beneficial influence. Children's books provide a rich contribution to the imaginative life during the years when the mind is forming its patterns for the future as well as present enjoyment.

There is no greater delight in childhood than reading. The child who misses it never quite gains his full selfhood, especially his spiritual and imaginative self. Besides, books make up for so many other lacks. Even the sense of security which is so much talked about these days because we can no longer take it for granted that our children will have it—even that can be found in some measure through reading. Little children find it in tales of familiar, pleasant things. Older children in tales of adventure and accomplishment through which they can project themselves into the future of their own lives, unhindered by limitations, spurred on by endeavors.

We cannot begin to do justice to the Fall books lists but will make mention of a few that you may point out to your children for "National Book Week" and that may be found in your own Public Library. Perhaps you and the family may read them aloud for that, to my mind, is about the pleasantest thing families can do together.

A very young home book, one with drawings in black and white, is "Jonny", by Eleanor Frances Latimore, a particularly nice account of what happened to small Jonny all through the day, by an artist-author who has a small boy of her own. There's fun too in "Winnie, the Pooh" and "Now We Are Six", both by A. A. Milne.

The Junior Literary Guild brings us "Long Wharf", by Howard Pease. Another contribution is "Hobnail Boots" by Jeanette Nolan. Boys will especially enjoy these tales as well as "Silver Chief, Dog of the North", by Jack O'Brien, "The Chippewa Trail" from the always fruitful pen of David Cory, "Mozart, the Wonder Boy", and a bit of instruction-mixed with comedy in "Manners Can Be Fun", by Munro Leaf.

"Runaway Linda", by Marjorie Hill Allee is one of the lovely selections for girls. The distinguished author tells about the Quaker farm of her childhood and the emigrant trains turning up from the South after the Civil War. The Wee Ones also come into many more attractive bits, "The Pixies and the Silver Crown", "A Present for Auntie", "Safe All Day", "Whitie", "And a Duck-Waddles Too", "Our Friends at the Zoo", "The Gingerbread Man".

You will have a delightful time looking over this shelf of books for your children. But remember, also, that "National Book Week", Nov. 12 to Nov. 18, is for adults too and you will find interest in selections that have been made for you.

Cong'l Young People Convene In Chelsea

The semi-annual rally of the Pilgrim Fellowship of the Jackson Association of Congregational churches was held Sunday afternoon and evening at the First Congregational Church of Chelsea. The attendance exceeded all expectations, young people from about twenty-five churches being present.

The conference began at 3:30 with the registration of delegates and visitors. At 4:00 the business session was held with election of officers. Catherine Barber, president of the local Pilgrim Fellowship, was elected vice-president of the association. Her particular project for the year will be the raising of $100 in the association toward the budget for the state program.

At 5:00 the young people went to the high school where Supt. and Mrs. A. C. Johnson had arranged an hour of recreation for them. Mixing games and contests made up most of the program for the social hour.

Luncheon was served in the church dining room at 6:00, during which the group indulged in community singing led by that inimitable song leader, Jerry Niehaus, with Mrs. Niehaus at the piano. About 175 sat down at the tables, which were strikingly decorated with long rows of Michigan holly. The roll-call of the churches was held during the luncheon.

The evening program of worship and inspiration began at 7:00, to which were invited the members of the young people's societies of the Methodist, St. Paul's and Salem Grove churches. The sanctuary was beautifully decorated with an altar covered with cream silk. The communion table contained a raised copy of the Holy Scriptures with candles on either side of the book. A cross and branched candlesticks completed the altar arrangements. The pulpit was set to one side and forward of the chancel. Many plants and baskets of flowers decorated the front of the chancel and altar.

Dr. Horace White of the Plymouth Congregational church of Detroit was the speaker of the evening. He spoke of the difficulties inherent in the race situation. Race prejudice and hatred are not natural to either the white people or his own race, but bred into all because of economic pressure. Let any man beware calling himself Christian, said Dr. White, so long as he hates any man whatever his race or creed.

The worship service was conducted by Roland Spaulding and Wilfred Lane, assisted by a choir of local young people. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Fred Mumby and the members of the Epworth League.

A beautiful service took place Sunday morning in the Congregational church called "Our Day of Memories," in which all who had passed from this earthly scene during the ministry of the present pastor were remembered.

A Scripture verse was read and a candle lighted upon the altar for each member or friend of the church who had passed away. Flowers presented by families in remembrance of loved ones were distributed to the sick and the shut-ins after the service. Some fifteen persons were thus remembered.

The choir sang a lovely arrangement of Matheson's "O Love That Will Not Let Me Go," and the sermon for the day was on the subject, "The God of the Human Hands." There was a large attendance at the service.

Question And Answer Dept.

Problem—Two farmers had a given number of pigs. First farmer said to the second: "If you give me four of your pigs I'll have just as many as you have." "Yes," said the second farmer, "if you give me only four of your pigs I'll have three times as many as you have." How many pigs did each farmer have at the beginning of this little tete-a-tete? (Answer in this department.)

Ques.—Who was it that said "The public be damned?"

Ans.—This expression is attributed to William H. Vanderbilt, the erstwhile capitalist and railroad magnate. It is said that in about 1883 Vanderbilt was asked by a newspaper correspondent whether the public should be consulted about luxury trains. The magnate replied tersely: "The public be damned."

Ques.—Was "Mother Goose" in her rhymes a real character who once lived in Boston?

Ans.—There is nothing to the story that Mother Goose once lived in Boston or any other place. The origin of "Mother Goose" is rather obscure. The best theory seems to be that it got its origin in French folklore. Queen Goosefoot, the mother of Charles, was regarded as the special patron of children, and her festival is still celebrated in France. It gradually found its way into England and then to America. (In America "Queen Goosefoot" became "Mother Goose.")

Answer to problem—At the beginning, the first farmer had 12 pigs, and the second farmer had 20 pigs.

Ques.—To settle an argument, will you please state on what day of the week was it that the great Chicago fire started? Also the date?

Ans.—The great Chicago fire which wiped out the city began on Sunday morning, Oct. 9, 1870.

Ques.—Will you kindly answer what "pill-boxes" are which we read about in this European War?

Ans.—"Pill-boxes" are dome-shaped round miniature forts of steel and concrete, holding men and a number of machine guns, and are menacingly destructive.

Ques.—Was George Washington born in England or America?

Ans.—George Washington was born in Westmoreland County, Virginia. His grandfather came from England in 1657 and settled at Bridge Creek, Va., on the Potomac river, near the site of our present national capital.

Ques.—If West Virginia was once a part of Virginia why did they separate it?

Ans.—West Virginia was a part of Virginia until the latter State passed the ordinance of secession from the United States on April 17, 1861. The people of the western and northwestern part of the State of Virginia called a convention at Wheeling and formed a new State which they called Kanawha. Finally this new State was admitted to the Union on June 19, 1863.

Ques.—Why are German dirigible balloons called "Zeppelins"?

Ans.—They were so named after the inventor, Count Von Zeppelin. He was the first to employ engines of considerable size to propel dirigible balloons. In 1908 he made a memorable flight of 300 miles at 40 miles per hour.

Safetygrams
BY
FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

Much has been said about safe driving. Many lessons have been read, and also many lessons have been learned through bitter experience, disappointment, accident, and death.

The lesson of safety when once learned thoroughly should stick with us like our shadow. It should become a part of us like our arms or our legs.

Let's adapt these safety methods we read and hear about. It doesn't cost anything. The main job is to make up our minds once and for all that we will drive safely, and then stick to the resolution.

It's Smart to Drive Carefully!

Chipping Sparrow
The nest of the chipping sparrow, which is compactly built of grasses, weed stalks and roots, is invariably lined with hair. For this reason this bird is sometimes referred to as the "hair bird."

In this case, the court realized that the best method of correcting certain undesirable traits was to substitute worthwhile activities in place of the former unwholesome habits. When the court instructed the parents to praise the child's subsequent desirable behavior, it was not long before the undesirable traits were eliminated.

Authorities who have studied the case histories of men in our federal and state penitentiaries, find that a large percentage of convicts were problem pupils when they attended school. While such surveys have not been undertaken on an extensive scale, the meager facts uncovered reveal that mental retardation was the most frequent problem encountered. The majority of such prisoners could be classified as dull normals. Possibly they were "slow learners." The school's failure to adapt itself to the needs of such pupils was undoubtedly one of the chief causes for their later delinquency.

The majority of all problem children who will comprise our prison population in the future are not actually mentally retarded, but belong in the dull normal group. Our public schools are not adjusting themselves to the individual interests and needs of problem or delinquent children. Such children are, therefore, unable to make progress; they are continually discouraged and eventually turn to crime in an attempt to earn a livelihood.

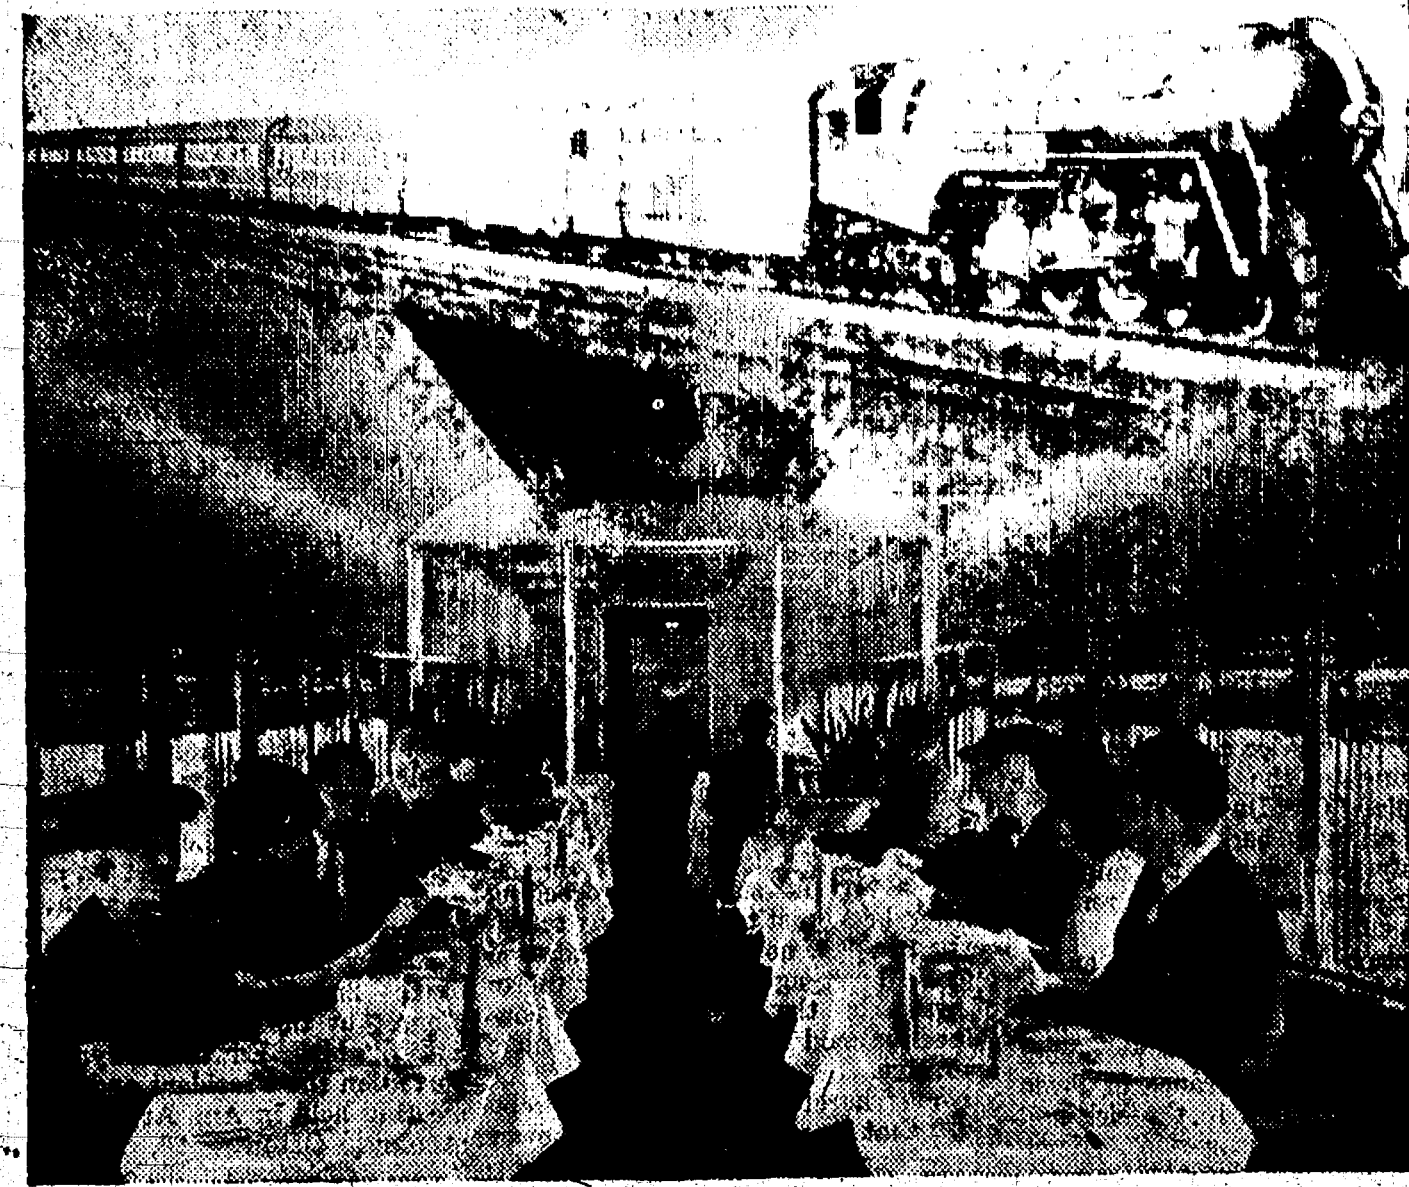

Truancy
Two boys appeared in court recently on a truancy charge. The first youngster's truancy could be attributed to the fact that he was unable to get along with his playmates. An investigation revealed that he was maladjusted because his parents had pampered him to such an extent that he wanted his way in everything. As the other children in the school were not hypocritical enough to conceal likes and dislikes, it did not take them long to relegate this child to a place outside their circle.

The second boy became a truant because his parents were not interested in his progress, and were exceedingly lax in compelling attendance at school. They did not belong to the parent-teacher association, nor did they encourage the boy himself to affiliate with the church, boy scouts, and other character building groups. Because they had no knowledge or understanding of the boy and his problems, they frequently applied severe and unnecessary whippings upon the slightest provocation. They not only refused to cooperate with the school, but also always took the part of the youngster whenever he was reprimanded by the teacher.

At least eighty per cent of all delinquent boys and girls have played truant one or more times, while approximately one-half of the same group can be classified as habitual truants. This conclusively proves that our present system of education is not holding the interest of such children. There are practically as many truant children coming from good homes and neighborhoods, as from poor homes. It is impossible to draw any conclusions from these latter facts, as groups of boys from both good and poor neighborhoods develop the truancy habit.

Coffee planting is unique as an agricultural process. The coffee plant comes to maturity in five years and yields for 30 years.

Central's Streamliner, New Mercury, Serves Michigan

At top, the new Mercury streamliner between Chicago and Detroit, snapped at 65 miles an hour. At bottom, the dining car, with banquettes seats in the middle section. At one end is a waiting room. The kitchen is in an adjacent car, with an "electric eye" door between.

When the luxurious new streamliner, The Mercury, built by the New York Central for daily fast service each way between Chicago and Detroit, goes into service, November 12, it will be the first streamliner to serve Western Michigan. The new train is regarded as probably the most beautiful day train in America. It was built in the Beech Grove Car Shops of the New York Central at Indianapolis.

The Mercury is a famous name in railroading, having been made so by the New York Central train that was placed in service between Cleveland and Detroit, in July, 1936, and which won instant acceptance, because of its innovations in luxurious furnishings, and beautiful color scheme. The new Mercury will provide a finishing touch to the Central's present service between Chicago and Detroit. It will make stops at Niles, Kalamazoo, Battle Creek, Jackson, and Ann Arbor. Mercury service between Cleveland and Detroit will be continued.

The outstanding features of the first Mercury, which was planned and styled by Henry Dreyfuss, noted industrial designer, have been reproduced in the new train, which, air conditioned throughout, also embodies new features and improvements, such as electric water coolers. An improved design of rubber draft gear, together with tight-lock couplers, prevents any slack between the cars, thus obviating jerks or jars. The train will start or stop as a unit.

For the new train eleven light-weight steel cars, painted in the Mercury's dark gray color scheme, with silver stripes along the window zone, have been constructed. Though lighter than standard cars, they are of full size and combine a maximum of beauty with the utmost of comfort and utility. The coaches, unique in design, have spacious vestibules that are semi-circular and warmly colored, making entrance and exit into the car with baggage easier. These vestibules have the welcoming air of a club lobby. Each coach has a handsome smoking lounge for the use of both men and women passengers. Floors, walls and ceilings of the cars are insulated against temperature changes and noise. All cars are equipped with roller bearings on the trucks. Dining facilities will take up the entire dining car, which seats 56, the kitchen being in an adjoining car. This handsome car, of unusual design, is divided by glass partitions into three inviting dining rooms, the center room having banquettes seats along the sides. An attractive waiting room, seating six, at one end is another feature of this car. An electric eye operates the head end door leading into the kitchen car.

The lounge car has a semi-circular service bar, located midway in the car.

At the end of the train is a parlor-observation car, having a solarium, with leather seats facing outward.

The new Mercury will be hauled by a huge streamlined Hudson type passenger locomotive of 20th Century Limited type, painted in the Mercury's own colors. This locomotive, 97 feet long with tender, will have disc wheels and will be equipped with roller bearings on its driving wheels, engine and tender trucks, rods, and valve motion parts.

The train will be put into service after being exhibited in Chicago, Detroit and in the Michigan cities at which it will make stops.

English Actor

Born in Dorchester, Maurice Evans made his stage debut at the age of seven with the Wessex players, an amateur group. As a youth he worked for a music publishing firm but was constantly engaged in dramatics. While playing in "St. Francis of Assisi" he attracted the attention of the manager of the Festival theater at Cambridge, who engaged him for his repertory company. In 1934 he played at the Old Vic and his performance of "Hamlet" led Guthrie McClintic to bring him to the United States to appear with Katharine Cornell in "Romeo and Juliet." His first starring role on Broadway was in "St. Helena."

Is Clean!

To have beautiful hands is a woman's delight, and electric cookery banishes the principal household task that causes rough, reddened hands—the constant scouring of pots and pans. Electric heat is just as clean and pure as sunshine and leaves no sooty, grimy deposit on utensils.

Old-fashioned flame cooking requires much air for fuel combustion and fuel ovens must have large quantities of air which pass off, carrying the fumes, laden, grease-freighted air that is deposited on your walls and draperies, with an ultimate heavy cost for re-decorating. On an Electric Range, the heating element takes no air and is completely enclosed in the oven, so that nothing is carried off. Not only is your home kept clean; the range itself has no stopped up, greasy burners. It is as easy to keep spotless as a china dish!

THE STORY

 Her lips quivered over clenched teeth. "You can judge yourself," she replied.
 He stepped toward her and se-her wrist. "Do you—mean that he asked.
 "She released her wrist with a lent jerk. "Don't touch me—touch me!" she cried—and shrfrom him.
 His voice was a shrill whirr-not loud, not the voice of one ut-beyond control. An incompre-ble pang smote Bruce, a pang of, of complete bewilderment.
 "Autumn," he said, "what's hind all this? I have a right know."
 "Right?" Her laughter was most sob. She crossed her arms over the shimmering bodice of gown, and her hands, clutched modically at her smooth, equal shoulders. Beneath her arms could see the vehement rise fall of her breast. Her russet fell back from her forehead, her eyes, were so dilated as to flared into his face that she had look of a person blind. He drew back from her.
 "You are not yourself, Autumn," he said calmly.
 "I was not myself the other night if that's what you mean," she pled. "You see me tonight—really am—as I intend to be from now on. Ask your mother what am—she knows what's in the blood." She made to pass him and stepped slowly aside.
 "As you will," he said quietly.
 He stood in the darkness and watched her as she walked toward the house. When she had gone, he made his way around to the front of the house and entered—

In the hall he met Linda.
"Let's dance, Lin," he said,

She looked up at him, and smiled slowly.
"I believe you're coming out your trance," she said, and drew him with her toward the butler's pantry.

CHAPTER VIII

May had passed, and June—now it was July, the month of wild-rose. Within its fortress mountains the valley lay besieged by a torrid heat.

Just a fortnight ago, after a day such as this, Jane Landor had dined quietly and unexpectedly in the presence of Bruce's sorrow had been somewhat by his melancholy realization that she was spared the pain and misery from an illness from which there could be no recovery, but his grief at her passing had been none the less deep and lasting.

He had seen very little of Autumn since that night in May when he had gone to the Parrr's and, encountered in her a mood which had left him bewildered and harassed every time he recalled the miserable occasion. Only once since that night had he spoken to her. He had called on Hector Cardigan one afternoon and as he mounted the steps to the door, Autumn had come hurrying out, passing him with a face strangely white and with only a swift word of greeting. He knew she had seen him from within a room and had rushed away to avoid talking to him.

with him. That visit with Hector had been a painful affair. The old soldier had been having words with Jarvis Dean's daughter—of that there could be no doubt in Bruce's mind. Hector's grumpy mood had refused to yield to Bruce's efforts at fascination. In a moment the old man had burst forth in a voice full of distress. "It's that girl! There's no talking to her!"

"Why get so worked up over it," Bruce had asked. "Why talk to her?" Even as he spoke, Bruce had known that his comment had been a defensive one. And then Hector had looked him for a full minute without speaking, his wrath cooling gradually, a droll smile coming. "There's lil' to choose between a young fool and an old one—save for a trifling equality years," he had said, and he poured a couple of drinks from the decanter of wine on the table. Bruce was thinking of that afternoon with Hector now as he climbed back into his car and started along the increasingly difficult track. The old fellow had reason enough to be distressed, or at least grave concerned, if Autumn's reputation in the countryside meant anything to him. And Bruce supposed it did. Hector Cardigan had looked after the girl from her earliest years.
