Camp Waterloo Is Now Occupied By CCC Boys

Two hundred newly recruited CCC enrollees have moved into Camp Waterloo, 3895th Company, CCC, located seven and one half miles west of Chelsea, near Clear Lake, in the heart of the Waterloo National Park. James T. Stewart is commanding officer; Wayne A. Rosenbaum, educational adviser. Sam M. Cardone is acting project superintendent for the National Park Service.

The present company occupying Camp Waterloo was formed in Tuscola, Illinois, on July 1, 1938 and since that time has done considerable traveling. Shortly after its origin the group was sent to Camp McCoy, Sparta, Wisconsin for a short conditioning period, later being transferred to Camp Winnett, Winnett, Montana. After a two months stay a transfer was effected to Camp Winifred, Winifred, Montana, where it was located for thirteen months, and only recently being ordered to its present location.

New enrollees in Camp Waterloo are from Detroit, Michigan and Chicago, Illinois. They have enrolled in the CCC for a six months period. Their term of enrollment cannot exceed eighteen months or exceed their 24th birthday.

The men are at present engaged in construction work around the camp. However, the National Park Service expects to have the men working on the Waterloo project within a few weeks.

Michigan's Control Of Liquor Situation Outlined By Writer

Editor's Note: This is the first of several articles dealing with state control of liquor.

Lansing—Governor Luren D. Dickinson, arch foe of John Barleycorn, will have an important appointment to make within the next few weeks.

The term of V. F. Gormley of Detroit, member of the three-man state liquor control commission, expires on Friday, December 15. Other commissioners are Orrin A. DeMass of Detroit, chairman, and Muri H. Defoe of Charlotte, both appointees of the late Governor Frank Fitzgerald.

Following Fitzgerald's death, Mr. Dickinson announced that his fellow townman, Mr. Defoe, would be his "personal" representative on the state board. Since Defoe apparently enjoys the confidence of the governor and shares his general philosophy as to the need of liquor control, the conclusion is logical that Dickinson will have an opportunity soon to do something about the "evils" which he has so relentlessly deplored, year in and year out, for the past decade or two.

What is the liquor situation in Michigan today?

Here are some cold facts.

16,202 Outlets

First, it's easy to buy a drink in Michigan.

Today an adult can purchase alcoholic beverages at 16,202 different places in the state.

Of this number, 3,470 are public saloons (tap rooms or whatnot) where hard liquor is sold by the glass. Wayne county has 2,450 of these; it is possible under the present population quota system for Wayne county to have 270 more.

Taverns where you may buy beer or wine by the glass total 4,384.

Then there are 9,566 "special designated merchants" (of which 4,213 are in Wayne county) which sell bottled beer or wine for consumption off the premises. Most of them are grocers. Hard liquor by package may be purchased at 1,358 places of business, chiefly drug stores.

Private clubs where liquor may be served total 397. Hotels licensed to serve liquor are 206 in "Class A" and 827 in "Class B," the classification being (Continued on next page)

Amateur Hour To Be Sponsored By C. H. S.

By Roderick McDonald

An amateur program is to be held at the high school gym on Thursday, November 30, Friday, December 1 and Saturday, December 2.

Any persons in the surrounding area of Chelsea, or from any of the small towns nearby who think they are talented in some particular field are invited to come and lend their support to this worthwhile entertainment. For further information on entering, see Miss Pawloski.

Winners of the Thursday and Friday night programs will compete on Saturday night for final awards.

These programs are being held in an effort to raise sufficient funds to equip the high school gym with a long-needed addition—a public address system.

The need for one has been felt a great deal lately, because it is virtually impossible for a speaker to be heard throughout the gym, whether he stands on the stage or in any other part of the gym.

There is plenty of talent here in Chelsea, so why not take this opportunity of showing it?

St. Mary's Annual Fair Will Start On Tuesday

St. Mary's Annual Fair will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of next week in the school auditorium and basement rooms of the school.

People of the community look forward with pleasant anticipation to this annual event, where there is fun for all. The committees promise a bigger and better fair than ever for this year and plans are rapidly being completed for the festivities.

A special feature this year will be an entertainment period between 7:00 and 8:00 o'clock each evening, when several of the Cassidy Lake NYA youths will perform with music and antics for which they are noted.

The ladies of the church will not serve dinner on Tuesday evening, but they will operate a cafeteria where delicious lunches may be obtained on both evenings.

All local barber shops will close on Wednesday evenings at 6:00 o'clock until further notice.

Death Takes E. J. Claire While On Hunting Trip

Emil J. Claire, 69, senior member of the firm of E. J. Claire & Son, Inc., died suddenly on Sunday evening, November 12, at Batchawana Bay, Ont., where he had spent the week on a hunting trip with his son Olen of Pontiac, and Ed. Dahlman of Rochester. Mr. Claire had spent the day in camp and about 6:30 started with Mr. Dahlman to motor to a place where they were to get his son, who had spent the day in the woods. Mr. Dahlman was driving, and just as he was stopping at a gas station Mr. Claire was stricken with a heart attack. He was taken to a bed in the building and died within a few minutes.

Mr. Claire was born Nov. 2, 1870, in Archbold, Ohio, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Claire. He attended the public schools of that place, later conducting a grocery store and lumber business there for several years. For 16 years he was a veterinary at Ridgeville Corners, Ohio prior to moving to Michigan in 1920 where for two years he engaged in the farm implement business with R. L. Savory of Ann Arbor.

In 1922 Mr. Claire came to Chelsea and with his son, Olen J., started in the electrical appliance business. The firm was known as E. J. Claire & Son until 1927 when Mr. Claire's other son, Dale J., also entered the business. In 1930 Olen J. left the firm, which is now conducted as E. J. Claire & Son, Inc.

In addition to his other business activities Mr. Claire was also interested in farming and raising of fine livestock, and still owned a well-stocked farm at Archbold. He has been president of the Dutch Belted Cattle association of the United States for the past three years. He was president of the Chelsea Community Fair association.

Mr. Claire was married in 1893 to Mary Elizabeth Cramer, who died in August, 1935. He is survived by two sons, Olen J. of Pontiac and Dale J. of Chelsea; two sisters, Mrs. Joseph Grime and Mrs. Emil Gushman of Archbold, Ohio; and two grandchildren, Frank of Ridgeville Corners and Patricia of Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Funeral services will be held on Friday, 10 o'clock at the Plankell funeral home, and 3 o'clock at the Archbold cemetery. Rev. Ray W. Barber will officiate. Because of unavoidable delay at Batchawana Bay it was impossible to send the body from Sault Ste. Marie until Tuesday afternoon, reaching Chelsea Wednesday morning.

Legion and Auxiliary Hold Armistice Party

Herbert J. McKune Post No. 31, the American Legion, celebrated Armistice Day November 11, in a little different manner this year than formerly. Not being able to get the use of the kitchen at the high school, due to extensive repairs which are being made there, the Post voted to have a pot-luck dinner for members of the Legion, Auxiliary and their families at the Legion home, Cavanaugh Lake.

About 70 were in attendance and enjoyed a splendid dinner. Rev. F. D. Munby gave a very inspirational talk on the subject "What Armistice Day Means To Us." Inasmuch as the theme of "Peace" was stressed this year, the talk was built around that thought.

After the dinner a program was given which had been arranged by a joint committee. Games and contests were enjoyed. Headed by Philip McKernan, director of music at NYA, an innovation was a group of NYA boys who formed a Hill-Billy band and played throughout the evening. Features of the musical program were vocal solos and several selections on the "saw." One of the NYA boys dressed to represent Dorothy Lamour, singing and all. Later there was dancing.

The committee thanks all for their cooperation.

Union Thanksgiving Service On Wednesday

The annual Union Thanksgiving service will be held this year in St. Paul's church on Wednesday evening, November 22, at 7:30.

Munby will read the Scripture lesson, Rev. H. Addis Leeson will offer the prayer, and Rev. Henry Lenz will lead the Lord's Prayer and pronounce the benediction.

This is a community service and the ministers urge all people to attend. The churches have always been crowded for this event, and an early arrival is necessary for good seats.

MRS. AUGUSTA C. ROMMEL

Mrs. Augusta C. Rommel died Friday, November 10 at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Martha Wood, on McKinley St. She was born May 5, 1849, in Germany. Funeral services were held at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the Plankell funeral home, with Rev. Fred Mumby officiating. Burial was in Oak Grove cemetery.

WHO WOULD believe it?

In Labrador, a man passing a neighbor's house must stop for a snack of bread and tea or he will be breaking an important rule of etiquette.

When passing, it's always delightful to stop in here for your favorite fountain dish. Our sandwiches and sodas in liberal portions are served just the way you like them. Our candies are also delicious. Add to the joys of Thanksgiving by having a box on hand for the occasion.

Michigan's Control Of Liquor Situation Outlined By Writer

ing set according to number of rooms. In addition to all this, the state operates exactly 100 stores of its own in larger communities throughout Michigan. (Note: There is some overlapping in types of liquor outlets as given above; hence the total, 16,202.)

Big Business

Second, sale of alcoholic beverages has become "big business" in Michigan.

Gross sale of liquor (distilled spirits and wines over 16 per cent in alcoholic content) were $37,252,502.92 for the calendar year 1938.

During 1938 a total of 2,627,854 net barrels of beer were produced in Michigan. Outstate breweries shipped 668,653 barrels to the state for sale here.

In terms of gallons—and this may stagger your imagination—the sale of alcoholic drinks in 1938 led to consumption of 5,236,589 gallons of distilled spirits—whiskey, rum, gin, etc.—and 102,873,748 gallons of beer.

It is estimated that approximately 100,000 persons receive full or partial compensation, directly or indirectly, as a result of this consumption. For example, the state itself employs 730 persons regularly to store liquor in state warehouses and to sell liquor at state stores.

In any man's language, this is a lot of money, a lot of liquor, and a lot of headaches both before and after. Keeping politics (and misuse of power) out of state liquor control is one of the leading problems that is inevitable when a state seeks to regulate liquor through a monopoly control. Sixteen states, in addition to Michigan, are trying to do just that.

Sales Rising

Third, as industrial centers hum again, stepping up the worker's buying power, more money is being spent for consumption of liquor.

Through September, the expenditure increase of 1939 over 1938 in net sales was 18.6 per cent. In payroll dollars, this was $6,929,500—again a lot of money!

Consumption of wine was 44.7 per cent greater through September in 1939 over 1938 for the same period. Michigan ranks 10th among wine-making states, according to figures for August, 1939.

Mr. Dickinson in his "inaugural address" this year as lieutenant governor portrayed an economic picture of millions of dollars being spent for liquor, while the state sought to raise other millions for needs of the unemployed and indigent. He observed tartly: "You will remember we were assured that the return of the liquor traffic would lower taxes, balance budgets, and relieve employment. Didn't the predictors get hold of the reverse end?"

Too Many Outlets?

Is there justification for the complaint that Michigan has too many outlets for sale of alcoholic drinks?

Pennsylvania, another liquor monopoly state, permits no private outlets for sale of bottled beverages. Retail profits are confined to state stores. Ohio licenses less than 75 private outlets other than state stores.

In contrast Michigan's 16,202 outlets stand out rather sharply.

Here is one of the many problems confronting the state commission. It is a mild statement to observe that the Dec. 15 appointment by Governor Dickinson may be of outstanding significance. The possibility of a past president of the State Anti-Saloon league being in a legal position to wield a state-wide whip for liquor control (within limitations of the legislative act) is certainly intriguing, to say the least.

Horse Census

There are now 14,000,000 horses and mules in harness on American farms in addition to about 8,500 race horses, 7,500 trotting horses and 500,000 riding horses.

Export Figures

The United States is now exporting more than 300 times as much corn and 8,000 times as much wheat as it is importing, the Agricultural Adjustment administration reports.

Tombstone Copies

A Vermont woman has written to St. John, N. B., asking for "certified" copies of tombstones in the Old Loyalist burying ground there. She apparently meant copies of the epitaphs on memorials to certain ancestors.

LIBRARY NEWS

Here we are in the midst of "National Book Week," November 12 to November 18. The library is teeming with new and varied titles that will please your reading interest.

Last week we spoke of the A. A. Milne books for children. The "Autobiography of A. A. Milne," who gives us these appealing and valuable bits of literature, is one of the new books on the shelves for adults. By all means get acquainted with the author who gives so much to your child's imaginative world.

Not since "Gone With the Wind" have we found as compelling a narrative as Ethel Vance has given us in "Escape." It is unusual to find a book with two heroines but here it is, a continental setting, full of suspense and intrigue.

"Western Union" by Zane Grey follows the epic making enterprise that made history—the stringing across of a single strand of iron wire for the Western Union line through a thousand miles of wilderness. Personal adventures plus heroic achievement are interspersed with a thread of romance for added interest.

Throwing aside prejudices, you will live with Eleanor Roosevelt in her autobiography "This Is My Story." She discloses little niches in her life which are filled with battles—battles within herself during which she struggles to overcome obstacles which women of lesser stamina would view with alarm and failure. Through these forces, Mrs. Roosevelt built up a defense that gave her poise and spirit to meet situations, socially and politically. Lifted out of her youthful complex, she has become one of the greatest figures of her generation.

These suggestions provide a beginning of all the splendid new material that you will find all through this week for your inspection and enjoyment.

PINCKNEY—Supervisor Norman Reason has just completed appraising all property of the Grand Trunk railroad in Livingston county for the state tax commission. The Grand Trunk refused to pay their Oakland county taxes because they claimed their assessment was excessive and much higher in proportion than their assessments in other counties. The state went into court to collect the tax and ordered all the Grand Trunk property in the state reassessed. —Dispatch.

TECUMSEH—Tecumseh's already voted $7,500 bond issue to buy and equip a new athletic field in Tecumseh will shrink to $6,200, and a new election to gain voters' approval of the transaction as the result of a legal technicality discovered by the Michigan attorney general's department, invalidating the election of October 12, are the findings of the Michigan Public Debt Commission in a communication to the board of election. In accordance with the new Lansing ruling, the board has called another election, to be held on Wednesday, November 15, to ask the voters to approve of the changes made necessary by the decision. —Herald.

NORTHVILLE—Fire at noon on Sunday destroyed a barn on a farm located on Cooley Lake road, near Commerce, belonging to Gordon S. (Mickey) Cochrane, Detroit manufacturer's representative and former manager of the Detroit Tigers. The fire started in a part of the barn which was undergoing alterations, and destroyed quantities of hay and grain. WILLIAMSTON—It was eighteen years ago, last night, November 8, that nineteen inches of snow fell here. Children In Court

By Judge Malcolm Hatfield

Why Children Fail In School
When a child fails in his studies in school it can usually be attributed to his lack of interest, or to his inability to carry-on-the-work. If a child is unable to master the prescribed subject matter, the school should immediately set new standards of achievement, apply different methods of instruction, and permit him to study a subject in which he can become proficient.

Special classes for mentally retarded pupils is one method of meeting their needs. The child who has the capacity for absorbing the routine subject matter, but fails because of want of interest, is usually suffering from some deep-seated maladjustment. It is therefore the duty of the school to interpret and remove such a condition.

The percentage of maladjustment students in our high schools today is much greater than it was two or three decades ago. It is estimated that so many maladjusted pupils are in our public high schools now that only one out of every four could graduate if they were required to pursue the curriculum that was in vogue thirty years ago. While these figures may seem to be high, it is doubtful whether 40 per cent of our present crop of high school students could successfully assimilate such subjects as physics, chemistry, calculus and Greek. Many schools have so-called "fresh air" courses. The pupils in such an institution remain there simply because they are attracted by the social and athletic privileges which the school affords.

The Teacher Who Creates An Anti-Social Attitude In Pupils

Every school teacher who discovers a problem student should immediately arrange to visit its home, for it is possible that the child's reprehensible conduct in school may be eliminated after discussing its problems with the parents. Many successful teachers frankly confess that they have yet to encounter a single disciplinary problem which the parents themselves could not correct after they were made aware of the situation.

Harsh treatment on the part of the teacher invariably results in the child losing all respect for her. However, when a child clearly understands that the teacher has his best interests at heart and merely needs to stop to the telephone and report his misconduct to his parents, he will soon realize that both the home and the school are united in their insistence upon classroom discipline.

Recently the safety department of the Wisconsin Highway Commission stated that the "man on the street" is less careful about oncoming cars than the woman pedestrian.

The safety department reports these findings:

"The safest place to walk on a rural highway is on the left side, facing oncoming traffic."

"The most dangerous place to walk on a rural highway is on the right side, with traffic coming from behind you."

"The safest place to cross a city street is at a marked intersection, with the traffic signals."

"The most dangerous place to cross is in the middle of a block."

Statistics prove conclusively that these are the prominent places and some of the prominent causes of automobile accidents. Laws will not abolish them. It will require the definite safety conduct of each and every one of us to help eliminate some of these causes of accidents from our highways.

Sauerkraut History

Sauerkraut was introduced and popularized in this country by German immigrants, and of course the name is German, but there is evidence to show that it may not have originated in Germany. There is no definite information as to when or where the idea occurred to shred cabbage and leave it to ferment in brine made from salt and its own juice. One writer traces it to Asia, showing how the Tartars first passed on a sauerkraut recipe to the Slavic peoples of eastern Europe, who in turn gave it to the ancient Germans. There is evidence also that this food has been made in Alsace and in Holland from very early times.

Why the Housewife Wants to Cook With Electricity!

It is CLEAN. No smoke, no soot, no blackened pots and pans, no soiled walls and curtains.

It is COOL. The heat is used to cook the food, not to cook the cook.

It is HEALTHFUL. No fumes, no products of combustion in the kitchen atmosphere. Tastier, better cooked meats and vegetables.

It is ECONOMICAL. Not only is the cost of operation reasonable in comparison to other methods, but there are many other savings such as less shrinkage of roasts.

It is MODERN. Nearly every housewife would like to have an All-Electric Kitchen.

It is SAFE. No matches, no flame, no chance for tragic burns or asphyxiation.

It is FAST. Modern electric ranges will cook as quickly as any other type of range—for some operations they are faster.

It is TIME SAVING. Less bother, less watching and with the timer control meals can be cooked while the housewife is away from home.

It is ACCURATE. The electric range accurate temperature control makes possible absolutely uniform results.

It is SIMPLE. Electric Cooking is now the easiest and simplest way to cook.

War or Natural History?

If you think the "Battle of the Herring" was a great naval engagement, or that the "Pig War" was a matter of barnyard politics, you are mistaken. According to the National Geographic society, the "Battle of the Herring" was fought in the Fifteenth century between English and French forces when the latter were besieging the French town of Orleans. The fish name was given the battle because the English were attempting to transport Lenten supplies of herring to their troops when the French intercepted them. As to the "Pig War," this term has been applied to the tariff struggle between Austria and Serbia in the early 1900s, arising out of differences concerning the export of Serbian pigs across Austrian territory.

Question And Answer Dept.

Ques.—Who owns the hickory nut trees along the highway outside of the farmer's fence, and who is entitled to the nuts—the farmer or the public?

Ans.—In the State of Michigan if the tree is on the outside of the fence, it belongs to the State on State highways or it belongs to the township or county on their highways. All nuts falling inside the fence may properly be taken by the farmer. However, this is subject to a prior understanding or agreement.

Problem.—A miser had a pocketful of money. A friend asked him for the loan of a dollar. The miser replied: "I'm sorry, but I haven't a nickel." Was he lying—or how come? Look for answer elsewhere in this department.

Ques.—If the sun never sets for six months at a time in the polar regions why aren't the ice masses melted?

Ans.—That is because the sun only goes round and round the lower part of the sky. The heat from the sun therefore is almost nil, as the rays travel through the atmosphere in a slanting direction. In the polar regions the sun never beats down straight through the air envelope.

Ques.—Can you answer in your good paper what the population of the earth is?

Ans.—It is not known because many parts of the earth is still in a savage or semi-savage state. However, estimated figures the population is estimated to be approximately 2,000,000,000 (two billion).

Ques.—Why are policemen in London called peepers or bobbies?

Ans.—This nickname was originally applied to the Irish constabulary, which was organized by Sir Robert Peel—hence "peepers." After Sir Bob re-organized the London police force, the nickname of "bobbies" was given to them.

Answer to problem.—He was not lying, because he had only currency and silver coins in his pocket.

Ques.—What is meant by the terms "right" and "left" parties which we read so much about?

Ans.—These terms originated in European countries when it was customary for the Conservatives to be seated to the right of the speaker while the Liberals and Radicals were seated to the left. The moderate Liberals were called Centrists and sat in the middle. Hence in this country the Progressives, New-Dealers, Liberals, are termed Leftists and the Conservatives and Stand-Patters, Old Guard, are classed as Rightists.

Ques.—How much rain is meant when we are told an inch of rain fell?

Ans.—An inch of rain is the amount of rain which would cover a level surface one inch deep. For example, if you placed a can or tub outside when it began to rain and brought it in when the rain ceased, the depth of the water in those containers would determine exactly the number of inches of rain or fraction thereof.

Ques.—Who invented the radio? I claim it was Edison. Am I right?

Ans.—Guglielmo Marconi, the Italian, invented wireless telegraphy, which laid the foundation for the radio. It was then that Lee De Forest, an American, patented the audion or three-tube electrode vacuum tube which made it possible to transmit the human voice, music and other sounds.

Ques.—Do rabbits chew their cud like cows and camels do?

Ans.—No. Rabbits are rodents—not ruminants. It is true that ancient writers thought that rabbits chewed the cud because they kept their jaws ruminating. But modern scientists have discredited the theory.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Lovely, independent Autumn Dean, returning home to British Columbia from abroad without her father's knowledge, stops at the home of Hector Cardigan, an old family friend. He tells her that she should not have come home, that things have changed. Arriving home at the castle of the North, she is greeted lovingly by her father, Jarvis Dean, who gives her a letter from her mother, Mrs. Dean, who is ill. Her mother, former Miss Millicent Odel, has been dead for years. Autumn cannot understand her father's attitude, though gives him to understand that she is home for good. She has grown tired of life in England, where she lived with an aunt.

CHAPTER II—Riding around the estate with her father, Autumn realizes that he has changed. Between them they decide, however, to give a welcoming dance at the castle. When the night of the dance arrives, Autumn meets Florian Parr, dancing, educated young man of the countryside. Late in the evening Autumn leaves the dance, rides horseback to the neighboring ranch where she meets Bruce Landor, friend and champion of her childhood days. He takes her to see his mother, an invalid. His father, it is said, thought to have killed him. As soon as his mother sees Autumn, she commands Bruce to take her away. That death follows in the wake of the Odel. Autumn is both saddened and perplexed by the attitude of Bruce and his mother. She can offer no reason for his mother's attitude.

CHAPTER III—Autumn calls again on Hector Cardigan—this time to find out the reason for Mrs. Dean's attitude. In their conversation she inferred that Geoffrey Landor killed himself because he loved Millicent Dean, her mother. He was killed, Bruce Landor rides to the spot where his father's body was found years before. There he meets Autumn, who, leaving Hector, is searching for a lost child. Bruce had found the child, and these Autumn and the talk of their families. They agree that her mother and his father loved each other deeply, and that their love was the cause of present antagonism.

CHAPTER IV—Florian Parr, at the castle for dinner, proposes to Autumn. She refuses him. The next day Autumn rides to the landor ranch, where she meets Bruce in a herder's cabin. There they declare their love for each other, and determine to stand together against everyone who might come between them.

CHAPTER V—Autumn tells her father that she is going to marry Bruce. She is agitated to see his reaction, and is agonized to hear him whisper that Geoffrey Landor did not take his own life. He tells her the story. Millicent, his wife, and Geoffrey Landor had fallen in love with each other, but Millicent would not break her marriage vows. Geoffrey Landor one day in a decided mood, Jarvis Dean was killed with him. Landor is accidentally killed by his own gun.

Bruce spoke to the other men at the table.

"Buy a stack and sit in, Landor," one of them invited.

"Not tonight," Bruce replied. "I'm going home to bed as soon as I've had a word with Myers here."

"I'll be with you in a minute," said Myers.

Bruce lit a cigarette and watched the progress of the play. He was not sure just what had drawn his attention to a conversation at the table behind him, but presently the mention of Jarvis Dean's name caused him to glance around. Curly Belfort, a rancher from the Ashcroft district, was doing the talking while the others listened. Belfort had evidently been drinking. Bruce gave his attention to the game at Myers' table.

The click of the chips and the monotonous sound of voices lay drowsily upon his senses after a day in the mountains.

Belfort's voice thrust itself insistently upon his consciousness, however could not help hearing the words.

"—and, by God, if there wasn't old Dean's daughter standing up in the haystack, up at seven o'clock in the morning! An' I says to young Parr, 'Do you think I'm running a country hotel or something? Or is it like the way they do it in Europe?' I says, 'But I kept on tinkering with his car.' Belfort laughed heartily at his own joke. "Some gal the Laird's girl has turned out to be, spoiling the night in a haystack with—"

Bruce had got up abruptly and stepped over beside Belfort, his face gone suddenly white, his mouth fixed in a slight, contemplative smile, as he stood looking down at the rancher.

"You've had too much to drink, Curly," Bruce interrupted him.

Belfort's eyes moved in slow insulience up and down Bruce's body. Then his mouth twisted to one side in a drunken leer as he laid his cards down on the table in front of him.

"Who's tellin' me?" he asked.

"I'm telling you," Bruce replied. "Only a drunken swine would talk the way you're talking."

Belfort got to his feet with an oath, but Bruce pushed him back into his chair. Muttering to himself, Belfort sprang up and lifted Bruce's hand had shot out and the man staggered backwards and stumbled to the floor. The other men in the room rushed forward to intervene, old Sandy among them. Before they could prevent it, however, Belfort was on his feet and was rushing at Bruce.

"Stop this, now!" old Sandy ordered.

But even as he spoke, Bruce struck again and Belfort crumpled to the floor.

Sandy flung his arms desperately about Bruce. "Stop it, lad! he cried excitedly. "Stop it, or we'll have the law on us!"

Bruce shook him coolly off. "Better not step into this, Sandy," he advised. "Belfort has something to say to me or one of us has to take a licking, law or no law!"

Belfort had pulled himself together with painful difficulty. Bruce strode over to him, but old Sandy stepped between them and faced Belfort.

"Here, now," he demanded, "what's all this about? What's it about, Curly?"

"Ask him," Belfort snarled.

"What's it all about?" Sandy begged of Bruce, maintaining his position stoutly between them.

"Belfort knows," Bruce replied. "He has been talking about a certain young lady whose name—"

"There was another woman with her, damn you!" Belfort screamed, his face livid. "And another man! The car was broke down."

"What you said was a lie, then, wasn't it?" Bruce prompted.

"I told nothing but what I saw with my own eyes," Belfort retorted.

"What you implied was a damn lie!" Bruce challenged, stepping toward him.

Belfort's head began wagging to and fro as he watched Bruce. It was a sort of stupid fascination. Presently he nodded. "If you want to look at it that way," he admitted, "I was only talking."

"Think twice before you talk like that again," Bruce advised him casually, taking a cigarette from his shirt pocket as he spoke.

A half dozen of Belfort's friends had got around him and were urging him toward the door.

"I'll talk to you again," said Belfort, over his shoulder.

"Any time, Curly," Bruce replied, and lit his cigarette.

Sandy scratched his head in relief as Belfort disappeared through the doorway. Then he shook his head at Bruce. "You're a bad actor, lad," he said quietly. "I'd be lookin' out for him if I was you."

"I intend to," said Bruce and turned again to take the seat beside Myers.

CHAPTER IX

The Laird had asked old Hector Cardigan to dinner. It was rarely these days that Hector was invited to dine alone with Jarvis Dean. In the old days he had frequently been a guest at the castle, but that, as Hector knew, had been Millicent's doing. There had never been anything but the most cordial relationship between the two men, however, but Jarvis had liked too much to himself during the years since his wife's death.

It was not until he had left the castle, however, and had retired to his drawing room that his host gave any looking of what was on his mind. The Laird had paused in the hallway and asked whether they would go to the library or sit in the drawing room. Hector had not hesitated in making the choice. He had chosen the one spot in the castle that he had particularly liked. Jarvis Dean's drawing room, he had noticed, had been Millicent's and would tell some lingering aroma of her presence there. Besides, Hector's mind had done its best in making the room what it was.

"Of course," Jarvis said, when Hector had expressed his preference. "I might have known. Go in, and sit down. I'll fetch the brandy."

And now the two men sat on opposite sides of the empty fireplace, their old-fashioned brandy glasses in their hands, pledging each other's health in stately and ancient fashion. The Laird trimmed and lighted a cigar, turning it round and round in his fingers as he contemplated it pensively. Hector drew a cigarette from his own case and lighting it, extinguished the match and placed it carefully on the tray beside him.

"It isn't often," the Laird began, "that I ask a man to help me consider my private affairs."

"It isn't often you have required the advice of another," Hector encouraged.

Jarvis blew a thick cloud of smoke from his lips and sighed heavily. "That's a polite remark, sir," he said as if he were talking to himself, "but it's a prodigious lie, just the same."

Hector knew his host. To be called a liar by Jarvis Dean was no offense, unless the mood itself were an offensive one.

"I know of no law against a man being polite to his host," Hector countered.

"There ought to be, then," said the Laird. "A man would be better off if he heard the truth now and then—even across his own dinner table."

Hector coughed lightly. "The average man is no better off, sir, no matter where he hears the truth."

Jarvis seemed to consider that matter for a moment, then dusted the gray ash lightly from the end of his cigar. "Have you heard about this fracas in old Sandy's back room a night or two ago?" he asked abruptly.

"I was told about it," Hector admitted cautiously.

"Aye—and the whole country knows about it! It's a dirty business."

"But one over which we have little control, I'm afraid."

Jarvis' look sharpened. "We have something to say on what brought it about," he said. "In my day a young woman's name—if she was a lady—wasn't mentioned in such a place."

"I have no doubt young Landor feels much the same about it—even in these days."

"That's not the point, sir. In my day a young woman gave no reason for having her name bandied about over a poker table."

"The times have changed, it seems," Hector murmured.

"It's our own fault, then. We've let these youngsters get out of hand with their racing about the country in automobiles and their abominable cocktails and the like. Where is it going to stop?"

Hector sighed, half-amused, and yet thoroughly aware of what was troubling the Laird's mind.

"They'll probably all marry and settle down and have children of their own to plague them in their turn," he said lightly.

Jarvis leaned forward in his chair and looked fixedly at his guest. "I want your opinion about that girl of mine," he said frankly. "What's she like?"

Hector smiled. "She's your own daughter, sir," he replied. "You ought to know her better than I."

"I don't. She was never anything but a child to me—until now. Since she came back, she's been a stranger in the house. More than half the time she's not here at all. She'll be back here tonight from the Parr Lodge—not alone, either. I'll warrant—and the place will be like bedlam until she goes again."

Hector got up and tossed his cigarette into the empty maw of the fireplace. He walked to the French windows and looked out upon the garden that glowed palely under summer starlight.

"I have been wondering about the girl," he said at last. "I have talked with her, too. She is not happy."

"Happy?" Jarvis grunted. "What does she want that she cannot have?" But his eyes were half closed in self-concealment.

"She hasn't told me that," Hector replied. "I can only guess, at best."

"What's your guess, then?"

Hector returned to his seat and selected another cigarette. "It is my opinion, Jarvis, that the girl has been in love—ever since she came back here."

The Laird frowned. There was no escaping the meaning of Hector's words. "You mean—this young Landor?"

"Certainly," said Hector.

Jarvis shrugged impatiently. "Puppy love!" he exclaimed. "She'll get over that—if she isn't already over it."

Hector looked steadily at the Laird for a moment without speaking.

"What you see," he said at last, his voice very low, "is probably the process by which she hopes to get over it. And it would not surprise me to learn that she finds it as painful as you do."

"Tommyrot!" the Laird exploded.

"You have asked my opinion," Hector said with dignity, "and I am giving it."

"If I thought there was anything to that," the Laird replied, "I'd sell up and get out—and take her with me."

"I know you would," Hector observed, "and accomplish nothing."

"What do you mean by that, sir?"

Hector smiled patiently at the Laird. "You ought to know the breed better than to ask that," he said. "If Millicent's daughter is in love, there's very little that either you or I can do about it, I think."

There followed a long silence at the end of which Jarvis helped himself to another drink and poured one for his guest. They toasted each other as cordially as if there had been no disagreement between them, and then the Laird turned abruptly to talking of things that left no room for difference of opinion.

It was almost midnight when Autumn finally came home, bringing Linda Parr with her to stay for a few days at the castle. The girls came upon the two old men seated before the fireplace, their brandy glasses in their hands, their eyes grown heavy from sitting up long past their time for bed.

"Why, Da—we had no idea you'd be waiting for us at this hour!" Autumn exclaimed, after greetings had gone around. "You should have been in bed hours ago."

She laid aside her hat and gloves as she spoke and seated herself in one of the Queen Anne chairs, her feet curled up under her, her elbow resting on the arm of the chair, her chin pressed against her palm. Linda sat near her, comically prim, her hands folded in her lap, her feet placed very precisely on the floor—the image of discreet propriety.

"The hour is no later for me than it is for you, my girl," Jarvis replied, his voice betraying a little impatience as he spoke.

Edited By The PUPILS OF THE CHELSEA PUBLIC SCHOOL

With this issue we introduce to you the 1939-40 edition of the high school paper, "The Hi-Light." Because the staff has been busy working on a paper printed and published at school we have neglected our duty to inform the good people of Chelsea of the doings and achievements of the school.

Freshmen-Soph Party

Say!—the Freshmen really outdid themselves Friday night. The first part of their return party to the Sophs was spent in playing cards and various games. Dancing came next and then, "Winkles" and "Spies" the bottle were played. The refreshments were then served. The Sophs more wish to thank the Freshmen for a very enjoyable evening.

Chelsea Hi-Y Club Boys Celebrate Anniversary

The Chelsea Hi-Y club celebrated its first anniversary last month. In this short period of time the young men in the high school here in Chelsea have attempted to "create, maintain and establish throughout the school and community high standards of Christian character."

Among the numerous enterprises the Hi-Y has sponsored, have been the swims at the Union pool in Ann Arbor. About 20 boys have these swims and have enjoyed them very much. The Hi-Y is having another one of these swims this Monday night at the Union, with about 40 boys attending.

Following is a letter written by V. W. Downing, the club leader, and addressed to the parents of these young men:

Dear Friends:

The Chelsea Hi-Y club was one year old last month. Since your son is a member, the Cabinet thought you would be interested in knowing something about the organization.

The Hi-Y is a local branch of the State and National Y. M. C. A. Its membership fee is 25 cents per boy. Fifteen cents of this amount goes to the State and ten cents goes to the National office. To help promote Hi-Y in the State and to receive the benefits of the various publications; the assistance and visits of the State secretaries; conference and camp privileges; the local club has pledged to the State Y. M. C. A. fifteen dollars for the school year. Five dollars of this pledge was paid by one of our business men. The twenty-five cents membership fees will be credited toward the pledge. The club dues for the year are seventy-five cents, sixty-five cents of which will be used locally and ten cents will balance the club pledge to the State Y. Most of the boys earn their own money to meet this club obligation.

A program of Hi-Y objectives for the Chelsea club was discussed at its last meeting. Briefly the objectives are:

1. Weekly meetings during the school Activity Period. This time is devoted to business; talks by visitors; discussion of boys' problems; religious devotions; and to work of interest to boys in general.
 2. Dues paid, one hundred per cent for this, the second year.
 3. Assist the Kiwanis club in the Halloween celebration for youngsters at Chelsea.
 4. Three winter swims in Ann Arbor. First one Nov. 13.
 5. Evening meeting with Hi-Y club from another city.
 6. Sponsor an assembly program for the school.
 7. Joint meeting of the Hi-Y and the F. F. A. club.
 8. Sell Christmas cards to raise club funds.
 9. Build up the Hi-Y library of books for boys.
 10. Entertain the Kiwanis club at a supper in the gym.
 11. Send our quota of Hi-Y boys to the Michigan State Older Boys' Conference at Flint, Dec. 8 and 9.
 12. Be represented at the Fall and Spring Hi-Y Conference.
 13. Serve refreshments free to our basketball team and their opponents after several of the home games.
 14. Attend the Christmas Eve church services at the Catholic church.
 15. Meet the parents of the Hi-Y boys at supper Nov. 28.
 16. Sponsor a leathercraft project for the school.
 17. Take part in the high school carnival.
 18. Strive to live up to the purpose and platform of the Hi-Y. "To create, maintain, and extend throughout the school and community, high standards of Christian character." "Clean speech, clean sports, clean scholarship, and clean living."
- The Cabinet and Club will need the assistance of both father and mother to attain the objectives for the year. We count on you.
- Cabinet of the Chelsea Hi-Y.

Editorial

Friday's game at Manchester marks the close of the 1939 football season. Do we want a victory? Why, of course! Please show this by supporting the cheer leaders. Many students asked why our cheer leaders are so weak compared to other schools. This can easily be answered, because the student body will not stand together when the cheer leaders ask them to. It is not fair to them because when they try to cheer the team on to victory there is no support. They should not be blamed for the weak cheers. We know you can yell when you want to. Come on! Everyone save your extra energy for the game Friday, and support your cheer leaders.

Band

(Last week's items)

On Monday the band, including Mr. Dunstan, was very surprised when two gentlemen came and asked if they might record the band's playing. On such short notice the band was "on the spot" but as usual they came through.

The two pieces they played were: "On Parade," by G. E. Holmes; and "Under Escort," by George Douglas. After we were through the records were played back to us. They sounded quite "fuzzy" but we were told that they must soak in a certain solution for 24 hours before they can be reproduced and this will clear the tone, also.

Since the band has finished marching for this season it is now going to start rehearsing their concert music which they will play at the usual "clime" in January and at the spring festival.

Elementary News

Sixth Grade
Reporters: Anne Lamberton and Shirley Platt

The sixth grade secretaries were late in getting the news to the Chelsea Standard office, so we couldn't have any elementary news in last week. We hope they don't forget this week.

June Crawford found a screech owl. Many of the children of our room are interested in it. Some of the sixth grade boys are going to catch mice for it to eat.

We are fixing up our notebooks for the British Isles and hope it will be completed soon.

We have been studying about taxidermy in our "Story Basic" reading book. In the story about Carl Akely brings jungleland to America.

We are going to help Mr. Downing with the campaign against throwing gum-wrappers and sticking the gum on our desks.

Miss Sprague is having an operetta and some of the sixth grade boys are going to be in it. They are: Robert Faber, Edwin Lantis, Marion Dietle, Eldore Carlson, Robert Breitenwischer, Bobby Robbins and Leroy May.

We think the girls should be more careful with the bat, because if one of the girls brought the bat and something happened to it by flinging it they wouldn't want to bring it again. Another reason is that the bat might hurt somebody by flinging it.

The sixth grade boys can't use their football until the fence is fixed because the fence might tear the football.

was a wreck in town last night?"

Joke—Ques: "Did you hear about the fire in town?"
Ans.: "Yes there was a fire in my stove."

So far this year we have had nine people neither absent nor tardy. Their names are: Marion D., Jane D., Walter F., Leroy M., Doris N., Arthur P., George S., June V., John W.

Myra and her mother were very kind to invite the sixth grade to their home for a party. Mrs. Townsend served hot chocolate and cookies.

Laverne H. brought to school a carrot worm chrysalis. Instead of a black swallow-tail butterfly coming out of the head of the chrysalis, an Ichneumon fly came out of the side. The Ichneumon fly is a parasite and a bad enemy.

The sixth grade boys' football has been torn, and so the boys use the high school's football.

Barbara E. told the class about how wooden shoes were made. She showed us how wooden shoes look.

A boy in our room was astonished to receive a note saying "Hey will you please close your mouth?" We are getting a draft.

Seventh Grade

We are practicing every day to improve our penmanship. We feel that we are really making progress.

James Gaunt left for a two weeks' visit to Florida, taking his assignments with him.

Marjorie Gilson is going north with her family when they go deer hunting.

Since the new traffic rules about "up-stairways" and "down-stairways" have gone into effect the seventh grade feels less worry about traffic accidents. We like the new rules.

(Last week's items)

Correction: It is Willard Eismann instead of Philip Tompkins as reported last week, who will represent the seventh grade in the school operetta, "Chimes of Normandy."

Our clock has been repaired.

We are studying forestry and lumbering in geography. We put up for display a collection of woods made by ex-seventh graders who are now juniors: Betty Platt, Frank Novess, Mary

May, Ralph Dingle, Grace Riemen-schneider, Lois Palmer, Ethel Hale, Doris Ashfal and Ruth Kettah. Frank Langowski and Walter Oesterle deserve our thanks for fixing a door which shuts off some of the noise from the gymnasium.

We have some new Indian pictures on the bulletin board.

The seventh and eighth grade girls are going to sing five songs in the Armistice day program in the gymnasium on Friday.

Livestock Pasturing Is Damaging To Woodlot

Farm woodlots that dot rural Michigan continue to lose trees faster than Dame Nature replaces them—all because livestock is turned into the sparse growth found in woods used as pasture.

Pointing out that a woods pasture really offers little in volume of actual feed, W. Ira Bull, extension forester at Michigan State College, suggests instead attention to the net profits that can be obtained from a well managed woodlot not pastured. It ought to average $4.50 an acre annually by producing one standard cord or three stove cords each year.

A pastured woodlot will grow less than half as much wood, says Forester Bull. There also is the ultimate effect of losing the stand because young trees are not permitted to develop.

Michigan in the last census was credited with four million acres of woodlots on its 196,000 farms. The census also revealed that despite lowered production, three million acres of these woodlots were used for pasture, however scant most of them proved. Fuel for the farm home can be obtained easily and at low cost this fall by cutting the cull trees from the woodlot, the forester points out. One standard cord of oak, hickory, beech or maple wood is considered the equal to approximately one ton of coal in heat value.

A pastured woods can be restocked with young trees. If livestock is kept out for several years there will be a growth that ultimately will take care of tree replacements.

Band to Attend Michigan-Penn Game

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN'S crack band, which appears at all the home games of the football team and at least one out of town game each year, is packing its instruments and uniforms in readiness to accompany the Wolverine varsity to Philadelphia where Michigan meets Pennsylvania on the gridiron Nov. 18. The band trip is being made possible through the courtesy of the Bulck motor division and the Michigan Alumni Association at Flint, Mich. Bulck's home town. Michigan's marching band, numbering 180 pieces, is credited with being one of the finest in the country. It has a wide reputation for its intricate and well executed formations and the ability to produce, at the same time, really good music. The bandmen are all students of the university who devote many hours to this activity. They are under the direction of William D. Revell, conductor. Photo shows one of the famous formations, a block "M" formed between halves at the University of Michigan stadium. Following the Pennsylvania game, the bandmen will be featured guests at a banquet of the Philadelphia University of Michigan Club.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
Rev. Ray W. Barber, Pastor

A unique service was held last Sunday morning. It was in the form of an Armistice Day program. On the altar were the flags of all nations arranged in rows, back of which was draped the flag of the United States. On the communion table were the cross, the Bible and candles. A beautiful chrysanthemum plant completed the decorative arrangements. The minister spoke on the subject, "National but Christian," from the text of Paul, "Whatever happens, show yourselves citizens worthy of the good news of the Christ." The choir sang a lovely anthem, "Our Native Land." A large congregation was in attendance.

Next Sunday morning at 10:00 is the time for our regular church Thanksgiving service. At the service the choir will sing, "Seek Ye the Lord," and the sermon will be on the topic, "Thanksgiving—Pride or Prejudice."

The annual union Thanksgiving service will be held at St. Paul's church on Wednesday evening, Nov. 21, at 7:30 o'clock.

Army of Hunters Cover State's Deer Territory

Lansing, Nov. 15—Zero hour today finds hunters deployed over most of the 34,500 square miles of Michigan deer territory, greatest invasion by a red-coat army in the state's history.

Early indications are that 170,000-odd hunters are in the north woods or will move into the deer country before the season ends November 30.

Reports from conservation officers indicate that deer are fairly plentiful in most of the major deer areas and in good condition. Hunting prospects are considered excellent.

Seven state game refuges that have been closed to deer hunting for from six to 19 years are expected to prove attractive to many hunters.

To protect a herd of semi-tame deer in the Ogemaw refuge, 2,000 acres near the refuge headquarters have been kept closed and have been well posted to warn hunters using the remainder of the 6,432 acres against invading the area reserved. The Ogemaw refuge was established in 1926.

The six other refuges thrown open to deer hunting by action of the conservation commission last July are: Alpena, Alpena county, 1,852 acres, closed seven years; Cusino, Schoolcraft county, 5,220 acres, closed seven years; Lunden, Montmorency county, 2,688 acres, closed 13 years; Pigeon river, Cheboygan county, 11,193 acres, closed 10 years; Molasses river, Gladwin county, 4,715 acres, closed six years; and Midland, Midland county, 2,457 acres, closed 19 years.

Refuges have been opened to hunting because the deer herds in the vicinity have become sufficiently large to withstand hunting pressure without endangering the breeding stock. In practically all of these refuges, also, the deer have increased beyond the deer food supply available in these regions in winter. Game refuges are normally of a temporary nature, established to protect and develop a game supply for hunting.

Early reports on bear forecast a favorable season. Some 600 bears were taken last year while the 1938 legal buck kill totaled almost 45,000.
