Alumni Will Oppose Chelsea High Team

By Wayne Van Orman
The Alumni of Chelsea high school have scheduled a basketball game with Chelsea High, to be played January 5 for the benefit of the Chelsea high school athletic fund.
It will give you a chance to see such old stars as "Charlie" and "Ned" Panarites, Onie Niehaus, Dud Foster and John Alber in action. The Alumni will be handicapped in that they will have very little practice, but they still have the same fire of old.
Never before have such stars been brought together on one team in this vicinity—the last game being in '31, when the Alumni defeated the school team. If there is enough enthusiasm shown in this game it will become an annual event.
The Chelsea high school team plays Flat Rock on December 15, when they will try to avenge their defeat at the hands of Michigan Center last Tuesday.

Kiddies' Party Will Be Held Next Thursday

The annual Kiddies' Christmas party, sponsored by the American Legion, will be held on Thursday evening, December 21, in the public school gym, starting promptly at 8 o'clock.
Included on the program for the kiddies will be entertainment by Curly and His Cassidy Ramblers, with Billy music, and community singing led by Jerry Niehaus, with Mrs. Niehaus at the piano.
This will be followed by the appearance of Santa Claus, and distribution of gifts to all kiddies of Chelsea and surrounding community, age limit 12 years.

CORRECTION
Due to information omitted in the report of the recent O. E. S. installation, the name of Mrs. Anna Hoag, retiring secretary, was not included in the list of honored members. Mrs. Hoag, who has served as secretary of the organization for 28 years, was presented with a beautiful gift in appreciation of her services.

SCHOOLS AND CHURCHES OF COMMUNITY COOPERATE

Chelsea schools and the churches of the community have found a new ground of cooperation. The schools have set aside Wednesday evening of each week for the young people's work of the churches, and there will be no school activities planned on that night.
This is a distinct advance in social relations in the village, since the school program has been so crowded as to make it impossible at times for the churches to find any time for the mid-week work of their young people. If the churches will now make a real effort to use Wednesday night to the fullest extent, and will earnestly try to limit the young people's activities to that evening, great good will accrue to both the churches and the schools.

Knights of Pythias Hold District Meeting

Chelsea Lodge No. 194 were hosts at the district meeting of the Knights of Pythias, held Monday night, December 11, at K. of P. hall. The meeting was preceded by a banquet served by the Pythian Sisters at the Congregational church to 65 members from Ypsilanti, Ann Arbor and Plymouth. The Past Chancellors of Chelsea Lodge conferred the Rank of Page, with the following officers in the chairs:
C. C.—Otto D. Luick.
V. C.—Herbert D. Witherell.
K. of R. and S.—Fred Broesamle.
M. at A.—A. Johnson.
M. W.—Wesley Smith.
I. G.—John Frymuth.
O. G.—William Bahnmiller.

Grand officers present were: George Cram, Grand Chancellor, of Pontiac; Ray Burrell, Grand Prelate, of Ypsilanti; Charles Andrews, District Deputy, of Ypsilanti; James Hart, committeeman for good of the order, Ypsilanti; and Otto D. Luick, member of the finance committee.
Six applications for membership were received by the Chelsea Lodge. Short talks were given by Grand Officers Cram, Burrell and Andrews, who commended the local lodge for their splendid work.
The next district meeting will be held in Milan on January 7, 1940.

SHEEP KILLED BY DOGS
The sheep on the farm of Floyd Rowe and son in Sylvan township were attacked by dogs on two occasions recently, their first visit being on Saturday, Dec. 2, when six sheep were so badly mangled that they had to be killed. On Friday, the 8th, as Duane Rowe was at work in the field, he saw two dogs again attacking the sheep. Getting his gun, he chased the dogs for two miles and succeeded in killing one of them. He summoned Deputy Sheriff Waldemar Grossman, who joined in the chase and wounded the other dog, which ran into a marsh and has not returned home. As a result of the last invasion by the dogs, five more sheep had to be killed, making a total loss of 11.

HARPER SHOWS MOVIES
Walter Harper, local Pontiac dealer, presented a series of motion pictures, produced by General Motors, at the Kiwanis meeting on Monday evening. The pictures purported to take mankind ahead many years into the transportation future, showing new designs for safe, high-speed motorways.

Next Monday evening the Kiwanis club will have its annual Christmas party. It will be ladies' night and Santa will have presents for all. The meeting will be held at Kolb's hall at 8:15.

CATCHES LARGE MINK
Wm. G. Luick of Lima caught a mink on Saturday that measured 32 inches in length and weighed four pounds. The mink was caught in a trap along the creek on the Luick farm. Mr. Luick states that this was the largest mink he had ever seen.

SYLVAN TAXES DUE
I will be at Chelsea State Bank every Tuesday, starting December 12, to collect Sylvan township taxes. Mrs. Lula Bahnmiller, Treasurer.

School Will Present Christmas Program

2. "O Come, All Ye Faithful"—Intermediate, Junior and Senior High School Chorus.
3. "What Child Is This?" "Away In a Manger"—"It Came Upon The Midnight Clear," "Good King Wenceslas"—4th, 5th, and 6th Grades.
4. "What Light Is That?" "O Little Town of Bethlehem," "The First Noel"—(Junior High School Quartet), "Carol of The Shepherds," "Bring a Torch, Jeanette, Isabella"—Junior High School Chorus.
5. "Virgin's Lullaby" (Perry), "Joyous Christmas Song" (Gevaert)—High School Girls' Chorus.

Two Meetings Held By Evening Ag Classes

The first meeting of the Chelsea high school culture evening school was held Wednesday evening, December 6. The subject for discussion was "Feeding and Care of Sheep."
The second meeting was held last night with the main subject being "Feeding of Horses."
This will be the last meeting until after New Year's. The class will then meet every Wednesday evening at 8:00 o'clock and hold a discussion until 9:30.
It is hoped that more people will attend these meetings. The class is sponsored by the high school in connection with its agricultural department and is free to anyone who is interested.

Christmas Program at St. Mary School Sunday

Santa has encircled Sunday, December 17 on his calendar—why, he wouldn't miss Saint Mary School entertainment for anything—so, come friends, and encircle yours.
The program will be composed of Christmas Carols, songs, dances, a one-act play, "Christmas Eve with the Mulligans," and last, but not least, "Our Babies"—"We may be in our pajamas but we'll be there." The music will be furnished by a group of players from Manchester.
We furnish the entertainment—you enjoy it.
Program begins promptly at eight o'clock; tickets 25 cents.
—St. Mary School.

Santa Claus then made his appearance and gifts were exchanged.

Reporters: Eldore Carlson and Leroy May.

Anne Lamberton brought a book to school. It is about "Little Abe Lincoln". It was written by Bernie Babcock. Miss Canfield is reading it to us.

We have a new poster in our room. It is about a "Slow Motion Picture of Long Division." Walter Freysinger put it up for us.

We are reading stories and are giving reports on them that refer to Elson Basic Readers.

Nearly every week Miss Canfield puts on the board a proverb or a wise saying. We find them very interesting and some of us are keeping them in our notebook. This week she put the following one on the board: "One never loses anything by politeness."

We are studying planets and how the Solar System came to be.

We are going to draw names for Christmas presents when everyone is here in class.

We are learning new Christmas carols in music.

In the poster contest, which was promoted to persuade children to keep off the lawns, Norman Krontz has done the best of those in our grade.

We have been writing themes on Citizenship. Some wrote on "What Is Citizenship?" Some wrote on "Citizenship in Study Hall," and others on the topic "Citizenship in Home Room." We also have a series of posters about citizenship on the wall.

Those who have been neither absent nor tardy since Labor Day are: Norman Krontz, Earl Van Riper, Willard Eiseman, Willetta Lantis, and Ileen Loeffler. We realize that being healthy enough to be in school every day has some luck attached to it, nevertheless we congratulate these people.

LIBRARY NEWS

The month of December brings much of value and interest from the "Book World".

New material on Christmas Lore and stories are here. Among them are:

A Pint of Judgment—Elizabeth Morrow.

Others on the new list answer the call for Airplane tales. Allan and Lyman give us "Wonder-Book of the Air", along with "Flying the States", by Hutchinson.

"The Family From One End Street" by Eve Garnett comes to us from England and is a most entertaining and lively story of a dustman and a washwoman and their large family of children. "On the Shores of Silver Lake", by Laura Ingalls Wilder continues this author's Saga of Pioneer Life.

Older girls or adults will enjoy "Peggy Covers London", by Emma Bugbee. Peggy is a young New York news reporter who, in London, covers a garden party, a House of Commons debate and a pageant in which an aviator plays an important part. It is an accurate account of interesting

CONSERVATION

At a recent meeting of the Rod and Gun club new activities were launched for the winter months which will be interesting to all who may be conservation minded. Watch for announcements.

Also, at this time, as the winter hardships to wild life approaches, it is hoped that everyone will do their part toward providing food and shelter. Many people have partaken of good meals provided through the abundance of game. Conservation means more meals, more fun, more dollars to business.

Time of Death Undetermined

PROLOGUE TO LOVE

by

After a dip in the cool water and a brisk towel, he tied his robe about him and stood for a moment listening to the mountain voices that drew from the steps above him, plaintive, spaced in piquant intervals, sometimes all but unheard, the hoot-owl's reproachful enquiry, the sleepy, last note of a bird dropped like a soft jewel into the twilight, the scurry of some small animal into the underbrush, the sigh of a dying wind in the tall pines. But the beauty and significance of the night conspired against him, tore down the defensive structure he had erected about his being. It had all converged suddenly into an intense desire for Autumn Dean.

In a rage at himself, he turned brusquely and made his way back to the cabin, where he dressed hurriedly in the half-darkness. He was gathering up the things he had brought with him when he heard his horse whinny, and a moment later a sound at the doorway caused him to glance up quickly.

Softly outlined against the deepening dusk, Autumn Dean stood, as she had stood one other night, in her black riding clothes, her manner half diffident, half audacious.

Bruce tossed the dressing-gown and towel down upon a chair and came with slow deliberateness to the door. He placed one hand against the door-frame and the other on his hip, and stood looking down at her, a contemplative half-smile about his mouth that drew his right cheek up into a quizzical long hollow—that hollow that she had pictured in all her tormenting thoughts of him. He was waiting for her to speak.

"Bruce—" she began, and knew how desolately her voice faltered—"Mr. Gilly told me I should find you here. I've been wanting to talk to you."

"You too?" Bruce remarked.

"The Dean family has suddenly acquired a vivid interest in me, it seems."

She fumbled with her gloves. She raised her head and looked at him with blank eyes. "I should like to come in, if you please," she ventured.

Bruce laughed caustically as he opened the door for her and stood well to one side. "You are quite welcome," he said. "It happens I have no kerosene in the lamp. I wasn't expecting a guest."

He lighted a cigarette and offered the package to her. Autumn shook her head. "As you will," he said, and replaced the package in his shirt pocket.

Autumn seated herself in the dim light close to the door, while Bruce leaned against the table's edge with his feet crossed idly before him.

She could see him looking at her reflectively through the dimness, and the half-smile did not leave his face. "You were over to see father this morning," she began.

"At his invitation," Bruce replied. "He wished to reimburse me for some sheep I lost."

"He told me so."

"He should have told you, also, that we were to have nothing to say to each other in the future."

"He told me that, too."

"Is this visit, then, just another little gesture on your part?"

"A gesture of what kind?"

"Disobedience to the Laird—and contempt for me," Bruce supplemented.

"Father has no suspicion that I have come to see you," Autumn explained. "And if I wanted to show contempt for you, I should have stayed away."

"As you have done all summer," he observed.

Autumn clenched her fists in her lap as she felt her anger rise. She had not come here to have him bait her. "I should hardly expect you to understand that," she said.

Bruce's smile was sardonic. "It isn't so difficult to understand," he replied. "You found people of your own kind. I am not blaming anyone for that. It was just my misfortune that you should have called on me here that night—before you found the others."

"That was a misfortune?" she asked him.

"Not a serious one," he admitted with a smile. "It was rather good, while it lasted."

She was on her feet at once, confronting him with eyes that burned in a face gone suddenly white.

"Bruce Landor," she cried, "I came over here tonight to ask you if we couldn't be friends, in spite of what my father said to you this morning!"

"Your pride must have suffered before you came to that decision," he returned coldly.

"That is my own affair," she retorted. "Why don't you tell me at once that I'm wasting my time?"

"I could have done so," Bruce said quietly. "If you had told me at once what had brought you over. I decided, long ago, that you and I cannot be friends, Autumn."

She threw back her head in a proud gesture. "I shall not ask you the reason," she said, and turned toward the door.

Before she was aware that there had come any change in the immobility of his posture, he had seized her wrist and turned her about so that she stood facing him.

"I should like you to know, just the same," he said.

As he spoke, he drew her violently to him. For an electrifying instant, she knew that all her resistance had crumpled within her and that she was responding to his almost brutal kiss with a fierce and overwhelming joy. Then, with all the strength of her arms, she beat against him, striving to tear herself away from his crushing embrace.

With a low laugh, Bruce grasped her shoulders and lunged her from him, so that she reeled backward against the wall of the cabin. She stood, gasping in rage and terror, unable to speak, while he lighted another cigarette and lounged indifferently again on the table's edge.

"Now—you have the reason," he said. "You had better not come here again."

She looked across at him, unable at first to give place to the terrifying conviction that had come suddenly upon her. She had done more than cure him of his love for her—she had destroyed even his respect for her.

In a moment she was out of the door into the blindness of a dying sky, a dying world, into a forlorn space that was hollow with the moan of death.

CHAPTER XI

Autumn had gone to the drawing room immediately after dinner and had seated herself at the piano. During the hour she had sat at the table with her father, she had done her best to bring him out of his solitary brooding. But her own frame of mind had been too desolate to make the task easy. She was sorry for him, inexpressibly so.

For weeks Autumn had watched him fighting alone, retreating before the heartless bludgeonings of his own conscience, recovering himself again and beating his way back to a position of self-reliance and renewed faith in himself. And always Autumn knew that his love for her was the one precious thing in his life.

It was because of her, the daughter of Millicent, that he refused to give up the fight, and because of the memory of Millicent that lived in her.

It was only natural, perhaps, that he should be blind to the fact that by his stubborn struggle he was drawing his daughter into the conflict. He had thought to avoid that by keeping her where she would never have known of it. Had she been content to remain in England, he would have fought through to the end and died in the comforting knowledge that she could at least begin her own life and live it as she pleased, without the unhappy heritage of the past.
