Food Crops Marketing
Big Problem of Year

In every case it hasn't been easy to solve the new problem of surplus and competition for markets.

Hence, the role of state government as an arbitrator in the milk industry and as a tax collector in the apple industry. Both roles were made possible by acts of the 1939 legislature, and they have occupied much time of Commissioner Elmer A. Beamer.

This extension of state activity, much of which is self-financed by fees, was accompanied, however, by the inevitable increase in payrolls—a fact which has been disturbing to Mr. Beamer amid all the administration's efforts at economy.

Food Inspection

The department's payrolls, increased approximately $75,000, are being offset more than $50,000 in fees collected for inspection services. The remainder is covered by legislative appropriations to permit continuance of testing of Michigan livestock.

Commissioner Beamer estimates that payrolls for the inspection of fruits and vegetables will be increased by approximately $27,000 during the present fiscal year. (As we pointed out two weeks ago, the administration's fiscal year began last July 1). This amount of $27,000 will be returnable in fees paid to the department for inspection of farm commodities.

During recent months the demand for service has been steadily increasing with payrolls for the first five months of 1939-40 fiscal year reaching $23,101.54 compared to $11,494.46 for the same period last year. Records disclose that a large portion of this increase was caused by requests for inspection of apples purchased by the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation. This federal agency required inspection of apples, and returned $8,000 in increased fees to the state for this service.

Compulsory inspection of onions likewise increased a demand for inspection with a corresponding increase in fees.

Poultry and Beans

Other food products which require inspection by the state in the interest of both the producer and the consumer are poultry products and beans. Poultry products alone were responsible for an added $6,000, while another $6,000 is expected on the basis of present expenditures for inspection of beans due to demands for grading of large quantities of colored beans.

In a discussion of inspection payrolls Commissioner Beamer pointed out the department attempted to provide this inspection service upon an actual cost basis with the producers and processors sharing the cost.

The apple commission, from taxes collected from apple growers, reimburses the state department for the cost of apple inspectors who are deputized by the commission to act in its behalf. The amount of money necessary for payment of this inspection staff is advanced to the department monthly.

Approximately $4,000 in the department's payroll increase will be shown as a result of the newly effective farm produce storage, which is operated upon a fee basis, with fees returnable to the department to make the service self-sustaining.

Milk Producers Gain

As a result of the 1939 milk marketing act, Michigan milk farmers' producers are $527,000 ahead in income for the year.

This amount represents the increase in price granted to producers on 177,000,000 pounds of milk since Sept. 1. In southern Michigan, for example, prices which ranged from $1.50 to $2.45 per hundredweight have been stabilized. Of the increased producer income, $496,600 went to producers in the Detroit milk area; $7,800 to Muskegon area producers; $8,000 to Ann Arbor and $25,000 to Grand Rapids producers, the latter increases being made voluntarily by distributors.

For the apple growers, the 1939 act has not had an opportunity to function as it has been challenged for constitutionality and is now in the courts.

The 1939 review shows clearly that marketing problems have occupied more time of the legislature and state officials than for many, many years. The trend is significant.

Children In Court

By Judge Malcolm Hatfield

Taking Himself Too Seriously

The parents of a young man came into court to ask for advice on how to regulate his behavior. They complained that ever since their boy began taking a course in psychology at a mid-western college he had become an introvert. This boy was formerly an introvert in work, athletics, and social functions, but now he spent most of his time trying to analyze himself—with the result that he lost all the ambition he formerly possessed.

The adolescent goes through many more or less serious phases of transition. During these periods, the young man or woman is more sensitive than at any other intervals in life. These phases pass, however. With proper parental guidance they leave no harmful after effects.

A Rowdy Football Game

A young man, who had always been regarded by his friends and associates as being perfect normal, was brought into court because he had assaulted a young woman after celebrating a high school football victory.

Previous to this incident a number of the youth's friends had substituted the harmless soda water that they had brought to the game with intoxicating liquor which they drank throughout the game. This liquor, coupled with the suggestive methods used by the young woman, so excited certain sensitive responses in the young man that he misinterpreted her actions.

During the course of the trial, the high school principal, as well as the parents of both students, heard the judge make the following remarks: "If the school and the family cannot control the conduct of pupils during and after a football game, then something must be radically wrong with our present system of character training."

Question And Answer Dept.

Problem—What's wrong with this statement: "Two football teams played a game to a 1 to 1 tie." (Answer elsewhere in this department.)

Ques.—Which side is going to win in the present European war?

Ans.—This is a matter of personal opinion. However, many commentators assert that the Nazis will make some headway in the first few months, but that the Allies will finish the job in the last few months of the war.

Ques.—Who are the two tallest baseball players in the two major leagues?

Ans.—Aside from some pitchers, the tallest player in either league is Frank McCormick of the Cincinnati Reds; he is 6'04". Hank Greenberg of the Detroit American League team is 6'03". Both men are first basemen.

Answer to problem—A score of 1 to 1 in football is an impossibility.

Ques.—Why do potatoes turn green in a cellar sometimes?

Ans.—This is caused by undue exposure to light. Potatoes keep best in the dark, and when kept as cool as possible without freezing.

Ques.—Will you please tell me what President of the United States wore the largest hat size?

Ans.—Ex-President Taft wore the largest-sized hat of any of the Presidents. It was size 7 5/8.

Ques.—To settle a dispute will you please answer on what day of the week John Winthrop was born? He was the governor of the Massachusetts Bay colony in the sixteenth century.

Ans.—John Winthrop was born on Thursday. The date was January 12, 1588.

Ques.—Is the Ukraine an independent country by itself or is it a part of Russia?

Ans.—Ukraine is technically an independent Soviet Republic, but it works in harmony with Soviet Russia, and is largely influenced by the policies of that country.

Ques.—I would like to know the name of the United States national flower.

Ans.—The United States has no national flower. The violet, the goldenrod and the daisy have all been suggested as a national flower, but Congress has never taken any action in the matter.

Ques.—If a person were to start at New York and follow the border all the way around how far would he travel when he gets back to the starting point—New York?

Ans.—On such a trip around the United States he will have traveled 13,156 miles. The border lines are as follows: Canada, 3,938 miles; the Pacific line, 1,740; the Mexican border, 1,744; the Gulf coastline, 2,422; the Atlantic coast line, 1,152. The United States territories are not included in these measurements.

Ques.—What is the furthest poem in the English language?

Ans.—The shortest poem in the English language, so far as we know, is entitled "The Original Microbes". It reads as follows: "A man had 'em."

NYA Accomplishments In County Are Listed

A great many improvements have been added to Washtenaw county during the last four years through the completion of many projects by the Michigan National Youth Administration. Pierson M. Grieve, county NYA supervisor, reports:

The projects are concentrated in Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti. In Ypsilanti, the outstanding project is located in the Ypsilanti high school. Youth workers have assisted the engineer in planning and improving the school grounds. Others have assisted in the library typing, filing, index cards, repairing books, and relieving the librarian at the circulation desk.

In Ann Arbor, clerical work is done in the Psychology department at the University of Michigan, at the WPA Nursery School, the Woodruff school, the Dunbar Community Center, and in city and county offices. These workers gain experience in general office practice that in many cases has led directly to private employment.

The major part of the program in Washtenaw county consists of school aid in the high schools and college aid in the University of Michigan. Needy students who have difficulty in meeting necessary expenses are employed on part-time jobs around the school for which they are paid by the NYA. This work has often been the only means available for many of these young people to continue their education.

An average of 1450 youth have been aided annually on the school and college aid program, and a total of 1625 have received assistance annually on all phases of the NYA program during the past four years in Washtenaw county. This represents an expenditure of over $800,000 in the county, the bulk of it being paid to youth in wages for actual work performed.

Pygmy Custom
When a band of pygmies in the French Cameroons in West Africa kill an elephant for food, they usually return home to get their tents and families in order to live close to the new meat supply, as it is easier to move the village to the elephant than the elephant to the village.

Wonder Windows

Winter egg production was stepped up 75 per cent in a New Jersey egg-laying contest, by the installation of cellulose glass windows in the poultry house, which allows all the healthgiving violet rays from the sun to pass through, reports the Country Home Magazine. The glass is now being widely used on poultry houses, porches, dairy barns, dog kennels, hog houses, and hotbeds. It is made with a strong, wire-mesh base, and can be purchased from any hardware dealer. It is easily installed, and not expensive.

Real Mythical Birds

Great mythical birds which once flew over Mt. Tamalpais near the Golden Gate at San Francisco, according to well-established Indian legends, have become a reality as giant "war birds" of the U. S. army air base at Hamilton field nearby maneuver around the mountain which stands as a sentinel over the southern gateway of the Redwood Empire.

Small Principalities Have Wide Variety of Climate

Monaco is the world's smallest principality. Its 395 acres would scarcely be considered a good sized farm in western America. But within those acres is compressed a wide variety of both climate and activity. The outdoor activities include nearly all the modern sports—along with the custom of sitting in the sunshine for an apertif at the Cafe de Paris each afternoon, even in midwinter.

Every resort along the Azure coast has its battle of flowers early each spring, and Monte Carlo is no exception. Folklore festivals, sailing regattas, and tournaments take up the time until midsummer. Those who don't go in for such things get a thrill out of strolling through the medieval streets, or climbing the steep grades, or touring the art gallery, or visiting the gardens.

But the center of everything is, and probably always will be, the casino. The mere atmosphere of that palace of chance is melodramatic. In a funeral silence, broken only by the droning of the croupiers, the crowds follow their systems, work their good luck charms, and hang on day after day, week in and week out, in the hope of getting something for nothing.

Sea Piracy Attempted In America During 1870

Freebooters were believed to have long since vanished from American waters when a short-lived attempt to bring back the days of plunder and piracy was made on the western coast of Mexico in May, 1870.

Would-be buccaniers seized the merchant ship "Forward" and followed this action by raiding the custom house at Guaymas, forcing the foreign merchants to pay them large sums of money and compelling the American consul to supply coal for the vessel.

When he learned of this outrage, Commander Low of the U. S. S. Mohican, then cruising in those waters, took immediate action. Soon a game of hide and seek began between the Americans and the elusive craft. Eventually it was learned that the raiders were in the vicinity of Boca Teacapan where they proposed to land their plunder.

Commander Low ordered a landing force of United States marines and bluejackets to proceed up the river in six boats for the purpose of bringing the marauders to terms. Forty miles from Boca Teacapan they discovered the "Forward" aground and heading inshore.

Immediately the marines and sailors climbed aboard without opposition and arrested six members of her crew. At this moment a boatload of pirates attempted to leave the ship, and efforts to intercept them were met with a burst of fire from the shore which killed one man and wounded several others.

Unknown to the Americans the wily pirates had prepared a veritable ambush by landing about 170 men with artillery and rifles where they could rake the vessel from stem to stern with their fire.

Unable to release the grounded vessel or to rout the raiders with their limited forces, the naval party promptly set the ship afire and blasted it with shrapnel before returning to the Mohican, thus ending an abortive attempt to revive the profession of piracy in those waters.

CHAPTER XII

On an evening within a week of the time set for Autumn's departure, Florian Parr telephoned from Hector Cardigan's place and invited her to go with him to the Hospital Benefit Ball that night in Kalamazoo.

"Linda is here with me," Florian said. "I had to come up on business, but I see no reason why we shouldn't mix in a little pleasure with it. We brought our duds and we're all dolled up. We haven't seen anything of you for two weeks. I'll run out in the car for you if you say so. How about it?"

"I don't know, Florian," she temporized. "I'm not much in the mood for it."

"Oh, come on!" he urged her. "Where's your community spirit? The natives will never forgive you if you don't support the cause. Hector has promised to chaperon us."

Florian laughed in a meaningful naïveté which nettled her disproportionately.

"Ever you think I ought to have someone to look after me," she replied.

"Lord, Autumn, what's come over you?" Florian reproached her. "You need a shaking up. I'll be out for you around eight."

"Will Lin be along?"

"Not on your life—not with me," Florian replied. "She has made other arrangements."

"Of course."

"Bruce is coming in to look after her. We'll make it a nice little foursome when we get together. Any objections?"

"None whatever," she replied lightly. "I'll be ready when you come."

When she mentioned the affair to her father and asked him if he would not like to come along, he drew down one shaggy eyebrow and elevated the other humorously.

"Me? Scarcely," he said. "But buy me a ticket—buy me half a dozen. It's a worthy cause. You run along and enjoy yourself. It'll probably be the last spree for you in this part of the world. Put on your glad rags and show 'em what it means to be a Dean!"

Autumn laughed a little tremulously and kissed the serene and bristling eyebrow. "I'll do that very thing, Da," she told him. "Though you'd cast more glamor on the name than I can, if that's what you want, you old Roman!"

He tweaked her ear, and Autumn ran upstairs to dress.

Florian, turned out flawlessly in evening clothes, was waiting impatiently in the drawing room below. His quick flush as she came down to meet him, the silver web of her evening wrap on her arm, would have been sweet to the light vanity that had been here in a day gone by. Now she heeded it only with a feeling of faint vexation. Florian came forward and lifted a cool and waxy corsage of white orchids from the small table near the door.

"Permit me, most beautiful!" he said, bowing elaborately from the waist. "And if you tell me you hate orchids, I'll make you eat 'em!"

Autumn laughed and brushed the delicate aristocrats with her finger tips. "Extravagant wretch!" she said, and fixed them to her gown. "They're beautiful, Florian. There! Thank you so much!"

She did, as a matter of fact, detest orchids, and in her imperious days at Aunt Moe's she had never thought twice about spurning them. But that was before this curious possession of pity had come over her. "You haven't seen father, of course?" she said as they turned to leave.

"I crashed the gates with Hannah's assistance," Florian said. "Is the Laird still peeved about the hay-stack episode?"

"No," she replied. "He has forgotten that, I think. But he has his bad days."

"Probably feels low about your leaving him so soon again."

"Scarcely that. He may be joining me in the fall."

"They had got into Florian's car. 'We're going to miss you like the deuce,' he said."

"It's something to know I'll be missed, anyway," Autumn murmured.

Florian put out a hand and crushed her fingers within his own, then let them go and grasped the wheel. "Damn, it!" he muttered. "If you would only listen to reason—"

The hall in which the dance was being held was packed when they arrived. Japanese lanterns and gay streamers festooned the ballroom and across the bobbing sea of faces came the giddy blare of a jazz orchestra. Autumn looked down from a balcony upon the throng, with heavy-lidded eyes behind which there was a searching glow.

"Some crush, eh?" Florian observed, standing close beside her. "Shall we go down at once and get our shins kicked? Or shall we wait awhile? They're using everything down there from the Ark gallop to the latest wobble of the rumba."

"Let us look on for a while first," she suggested.

As she spoke, her lashes swept low over her eyes. In the comparative freedom of the outer fringe of dancers, she had seen Linda and Bruce Lander. Above Linda's head, Bruce's eyes moved cautiously along the rim of the balcony, paused for an imponderable instant as they met Autumn's, and moved on in indifference.

"There's Lin and Bruce," Florian said suddenly, "down there near the wall—to the right."

Autumn looked, pretending not to see at once. "I see them now," she said finally.

"You could pick them out of a million," Florian said admiringly. "They make the rest of the crowd look like also-rans. Let's go down and give them a little competition, Autumn."

"So you got here?" It was Hector Cardigan speaking at Autumn's elbow. She turned upon him a radiant smile and extended her hands.

"Hello, darling!" she cried throatily. "How gorgeous you look!" She seized the lapels of his dinner jacket and surveyed him with wide eyes.

"Are you going to give me a dance?"

"You flatter me," Hector said in his courtly fashion. "Do you guarantee to bring me safely out of the melee?"

"She brings us all safely back—out of everything," Florian put in. "Are you so afraid?" Autumn asked, as if she had not heard Florian's remark.

"Those young things down there—they terrify me," Hector said.

"And you a soldier!" Autumn barked.

Hector smiled. "I was younger than I am now," he said. "And stepping all over one's toes was considered against the rules."

Autumn and Florian laughed, and the three made their way down to the dancing-floor, the men on either side of Autumn, her arms drawn lightly through theirs. They stood chatting for a moment beside a great potted palm, and then Autumn waved back at Hector as Florian swept her away into the dance.

"The next one, Hector, remember," she said over Florian's shoulder. "I'll meet you in the lounge."

Hector nodded, but when she was out of sight he frowned. Bruce Lander had just come off the floor with Linda Parr. They strolled toward him, saluting him from some distance away as they approached. It occurred to the old soldier then that Autumn's wish to dance with him had been merely a ruse. Her real desire was to avoid dancing with Bruce.

"Hullo, Hector!" Bruce said warmly as he came face to face with him. Linda, with a nod toward Hector, had been caught up by someone else and was already moving away into the crowd.

"Good evening, Bruce," Hector said with a stern smile. "You seem to be enjoying yourself."

"Immensely," Bruce replied with a promptness that brought a slight lift to Hector's eyebrows.

Hector toyed with the ribbon guard of his glasses. "The hospital ought to benefit from this," he remarked. "It's the best crowd I've seen for years."

"Everybody's here," Bruce agreed.

They stood for a moment and watched the dancers swirl past them.

"I think I'll get out of the crowd a bit," Hector said at last. "What would you say to a smoke, my boy?"

"I'd be all for it," Bruce replied. "Let's go to the lounge, then," Hector suggested.

They made their way to a corner of the lounge where there was a measure of privacy and seated themselves in two chairs that made an angle facing the entrance.

"I haven't seen much of you lately," Hector said as he offered Bruce his cigarette-case.

"I haven't been out much, except on business," Bruce replied. "I've had a busy summer of it, one way or another."

"Yes, yes, of course. I was sorry to hear about your prize Merinos. There was underhand work in that affair, eh?"

Bruce lit his cigarette and blew a cloud of smoke as he settled back in his chair. "I can't talk about it, Hector," he said. "It makes me want to fight when I even think of it."

"Naturally, naturally," Hector said. "The less you think about it the better, I should say." He smoked a moment in silence, then cleared his throat softly.

"I understand you are going to lose your young neighbor soon," he remarked casually.

"You mean Autumn, Dean?" Bruce said without a flicker of expression revealed to the shrewd look that Hector turned upon him.

"Yes."

"Lin told me tonight that she plans to go back to England," Bruce said. "Next week, I believe. And you are letting her go?"

Bruce cast a quick glance at the old man. "I'm letting her go? I wasn't aware that I had anything to do with it," he said in an off-hand manner.

Hector smiled slowly as he looked at Bruce, then sighed reminiscently. "The age of chivalry seems to have passed," he said, shaking his head.

Bruce gazed at his cigarette smoke with narrowed lids. "I don't follow you, Hector," he said. "I can't see what chivalry has to do with it when a girl takes it into her head to run off to Europe."

"Do you know, my boy," Hector replied, after a moment of silence, "I suspect that this younger generation they talk about so much nowadays—I suspect they're a pretty faint-hearted crowd compared with their fathers—or their grandfathers, for example."

"I'm not in a position to question you, Hector," Bruce said. "If your reference to the faint heart has anything to do with the fair lady—"

"Of course it has!" Hector put in. "In my day, if a young man had notions about a young lady, she wouldn't get a chance to run off to England and leave him in the lurch."

Bruce laughed lightly. "Hector," he said, "you're barking up the wrong tree, old boy."

Hector bristled immediately. "I don't bark—" he began, then halted abruptly and got to his feet. "Here comes Autumn herself," he said, his pleasure and annoyance making a curious gnome-like mask of his face.

For an almost imperceptible instant, Autumn paused in her approach to them. Hector saw her quick pallor and put out a hand toward her. Bruce rose and made a slight, formal bow with an ease that was disconcerting to Hector.

"After a brief 'Good evening!' to Bruce, Autumn turned at once to Hector.

"Our dance, Hector!" she announced. "Or haven't you finished your smoke?"

Hector waived her question and then drew himself up sternly. "You are planning to leave for England next Saturday, I understand," he said to Autumn.

"Next Saturday morning, Hector," she replied.

"I am inviting you two"—he said, and looked aggressively from one to the other—"to dinner at my house next Thursday evening. Will that suit you both?"

There was a silence in which Hector, the spectator, saw the clash of humorously blue eyes and clear, stricken sea-green eyes. Bruce thrust one hand idly into the pocket of his coat and stood in a lounging attitude, looking pleasantly down at Autumn as he replied:

"Thursday will suit me, Hector."

"Why, certainly, darling," Autumn said breathlessly, turning to Hector. "How sweet of you! Shall we dance now?" She took Hector's arm and led him away.

Bruce watched them go, then smiled as he seated himself.

Poor old Hector, he thought wryly. Making a last gallant effort! And how gamely she had taken it! Came right back at him, her eyes flaming in rage. Oh, well—what the devil! He buried his cigarette angrily in the earth of a potted plant that stood near at hand, then got up and strolled out, the leisurely figure of a young man who had no scar on his spirit.

The evening was no more than half spent when Autumn begged Florian to take her home. She pleaded a headache from the noise and the heavy air of the place. Florian protested, but finally agreed. They found Linda and together arranged for one last night at the Parr hunting lodge before Autumn would drive up from home and meet them at the lodge. The day was set and the girls kissed each other good night. For once, it seemed, Autumn was more languid than Linda.

Fifty miles southward, and ten more off the straight trail to Kalamazoo, was the distance that Autumn must go to the Parr hunting lodge. She had left home early to attend to some business in Kalamazoo and to assure Hector that she would be on hand for his dinner party on the following evening. It was a matter of indifference to her that Florian would be at the lodge, too, but the thought of meeting Linda warmed her heart. It would be difficult to say good-by to her. In her frivolous, unsentimental way Linda had shown her more unobtrusive sympathy than she could ever guess.

It was barely dusk when Autumn drove her car in through the rustic gate that led to the lodge. She got out promptly and glanced about, anticipating that Linda and Florian would be on the lookout for her.

"Hello!" Florian came hurrying toward her from the doorway of the lodge.

I RESOLVE

● Made your resolutions for 1940? Here's a few you can make and break without much trouble—just for the sake of resolution-ing!

"Candy? No, thanks, won't touch the stuff in 1940. Oh, well, I guess just one piece won't hurt."

"Going to (puff!) take this (puff!) stomach off me this (puff!) year if it kills me. Gotta (puff!) do this every (puff!) day."

"Lemme see... if I save 10 cents every day in 1940, that makes... m-m-m... thirty-six dollars and 50 cents a year."

"I feel everyone should do her best to improve her mind in 1940 with good reading material. Let's see... what did that say? Kinda dry book. Guess I'll go to a show."

"Gotta quit smoking this year... yeah, right now. I'll just toss these stogies in the wastebasket. Er... maybe I'll want to fish out a last smoke after dinner tonight."

Last year the Arizona department of agriculture caught 50,000 grasshoppers and branded them with an indelible red pigment to trace their migrations. This year the experiment was not repeated because none of the red-branded grasshoppers ever came back or ever were seen afterward.

Fruit Growers Meet At M. S. C. January 15-19

Promise of a peek at what Michigan's fruit industry may see by 1950 is offered in announcement of the annual fruit growers' conference to be held at Michigan State College, Jan. 15 to 19.

As part of the first afternoon's schedule, V. R. Gardner as head of the horticulture department and members of his staff will offer discussion on recent developments that may be applied to commercial practices.

The leading professional man in pomology in eastern states, Dr. H. B. Tukey, chief of research at the New York experiment station at Geneva, is scheduled for three talks in the five days.

Staff members at the College sponsor the course for commercial fruit growers who seek modern developments in fruit production, says R. E. Marshall, staff member who planned the program details.

Guest speakers will include Robert Anderson, fruit grower at Covert; H. B. Detsel, Huron Farms company manager at Ann Arbor; Russell Braman, fruit grower at Grand Rapids; W. C. Dutton, East Lansing, horticulture director for the Dow Chemical company; George Farley, fruit grower at Albion; Fred L. Granger, manager of the Producers' Service corporation at Benton Harbor; Edwin Klenk, fruit grower at Sparta; and C. C. Taylor, Albion fruit grower.

In addition to horticulture department staff members, the program will include material from the College department of botany, entomology and soils.

Would you gamble 17,000,000 minutes to save one minute?

The average person 35 years of age has approximately 17,000,000 minutes left in a normal life. We should guard those minutes and not gamble with them.

How often, however, have you seen motorists go through stop lights, pass on hills and on curves, and do one of fifty reckless things on the highway to save a minute? If they win, nothing is said about it; if they lose, they have thrown away millions of minutes simply to save one minute. Doesn't it seem foolish and downright silly to do these reckless things when we look at it in this way?

Poisonous Snake Lore
Poisonous snakes usually can be distinguished easily from non-poisonous because the harmful ones, except small corals, have triangular heads much broader than the body. Heads of non-poisonous snakes are about the same width as the body.

Armored Wood
A tree, intended for use as posts, poles, sills and other farm construction work, can be rendered rotproof and insectproof, if it is "embalmed" while still alive. Saw a notch entirely around the tree, place a rubber collar below the notch and fill it with a solution containing six pounds of copper sulphate or zinc chloride dissolved in three gallons of water. The upward movement of the sap will carry the preservative from the notch to the topmost branches within two weeks. When the tree is cut, it is thoroughly saturated with the preservative. Carriers can be treated any time of the year except during freezing weather, but are best preserved during the active growing season.
