75th Anniversary To Be Celebrated By Masons

Tickets are now on sale for the 75th anniversary banquet of Olive Lodge, No. 156, F. and A. M., which will be held Friday evening, January 19 at the public school auditorium. The banquet will be served at 6:30 by the senior class of the high school, and it is expected that more than 250 will attend the event.

Francis B. Lambie of Midland, Worshipful Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of the State of Michigan, will address the gathering. Mr. Lambie is an interesting speaker and his talk will be a high-light of the program.

There will be a stage show lasting more than one hour by Haze Bennett and His Gang from Detroit, featuring the Texas Ranch Boys in songs and instrumental numbers. The group includes about 25 entertainers, among which are some juvenile singers and instrumentalists.

Following the entertainment there will be dancing, with music by a nine-piece orchestra from Detroit.

The hall will be appropriately decorated for the occasion, and there will be favors at the banquet tables and also for the dance.

Many guests are expected from Lodges in nearby towns, many reservations having already been received by the secretary of the local lodge.

Forecasts for Michigan Show Better Conditions

By Gene Alleman
Lansing—Although crystal gazing at this time of the year is apt to be done through rose-colored glasses, 1940 forecasts for Michigan have been in significant agreement by predicting:

1. Reasonable prosperity for wage-earners and farmers.
2. Improved financial condition for state government.
3. National spotlight on Michigan's political figures—Arthur Vandenberg of Grand Rapids, Thomas Dewey, formerly of Owosso, and Frank Murphy of Detroit.

All in all, they point to an interesting year for Michigan.

While the present European war makes the American scene subject to uncertain economic fluctuations, all signs now point to a long and exhaustive struggle overseas. The domestic industrial, business and farm forecasts are all predicated in a degree on the assumption that Hitler and Chamberlain will be calling each other names for many, many months to come.

Sales Taxes Soar Michigan Basked in Better Things During 1939

Proof is seen in the soaring sales tax revenue collected by the state. According to Walter F. Reddy, managing director of the state board of tax administration, a total of $7,700,000 was collected during 1939. (Continued on next page)

Golden Glove Training Starts in Ann Arbor

The 7th annual Golden Glove Amateur Boxing Tournament is now being developed in Ann Arbor by Co. K local guard unit. Dates are Jan. 29, Feb. 1 and 7. Proceeds go to Co. K.

Competition will be in both novice and open divisions. Novice division includes beginners and boys with little experience. Prizes of gold gloves to winner and silver gloves to runner-ups, golden glove buttons to all who participate. Winners in both classes will be taken to Grand Rapids on February 14 and 15 to the state finals there.

Expenses to Ann Arbor and Grand Rapids tournaments will be paid for by the Ann Arbor committee. Ann Arbor boxers are now in training at the armory every night but Tuesday, from 7 to 9 p. m., and Saturday afternoon, 2 to 4 o'clock. Chelsea boys are welcome to join these workout periods and use the facilities of the armory without charge. There is a floor ring and all other necessary equipment for training, also a coach to teach the beginners.

These contests have proved popular with local fans, and many Chelsea boys have taken part in the past, and in many cases have proved themselves to be very capable fighters.

SIGNAL LIGHT FOR MARSHAL INSTALLED ON FLAG POLE

Village authorities have had a red signal light installed on the flag pole at the southwest corner of Main and Middle streets, which will notify the night marshals when a call comes in for them. A telephone has been installed in the council room at Sylvan town hall, where the marshals will have their headquarters, and when the telephone rings the red light automatically switches on until the call is answered. The light is placed so it may be seen from any point on Main or Middle streets in the business section. This should prove to be a real protective service to residents of the village who may have occasion to call a marshal in case of fire or for other reasons.

Scholarships Will Be Awarded By U. of M.

Applications are now being received from Seniors in the local high school for University of Michigan Undergraduate Alumni Scholarships. Seventy-five of these scholarships will be given to students graduating from high schools of Michigan in June by the Regents of the University of Michigan. Students from the upper one-fifth of their class who lack sufficient funds for tuition are eligible to receive these scholarships.

Interested persons should apply immediately to Supt. Albert C. Johnson of the Chelsea high school, who has the necessary papers and details. These applicants will be interviewed about February 17 by the joint committee representing the University of Michigan Club and the Alumnae Chapter of Ann Arbor, who will recommend their quota to the University. Final choice of scholarship winners will be decided by University officials on the basis of a competitive examination.

Third Session Is Held By Evening Ag Class

The Chelsea high school evening class in agriculture held their third meeting of their series last Wednesday evening.

This class now has seventeen farmers enrolled and is growing each week. So far discussions have been held concerning problems in the feeding and management of sheep, horses, hogs and beef cattle. The meeting for next Wednesday night will be on dairy cattle feeding and management.

It is being attempted to make these classes as practical as possible in that the discussions are drawn largely from questions brought up by the farmers themselves.

In addition to meetings being led by the agricultural instructor, specialists will appear on the program from time to time. Mr. Shear from the poultry department at Michigan State College will be the first one to appear, on January 24.

These classes are held each Wednesday night at eight o'clock in the agricultural room at the high school. Anyone interested is invited to attend.

W. J. DANCER WILL BE HONORED

In February, 1880, William J. Dancer was made a Master Mason in Olive Lodge, No. 156, at Chelsea. Mr. Dancer has spent the greater part of his life at Stockbridge and on February 1, an anniversary banquet in his honor will be held at the high school auditorium at that place, beginning at 7:00 p. m. An elaborate program is being planned, the highlight of which is an address by the Grand Master of the Masonic Lodge of Michigan, Dr. Francis B. Lambie. Reservations for Master Masons are available with the local lodge secretary.

Chelsea Rod and Gun Club Sponsors Exhibit

The Chelsea Rod and Gun Club will sponsor the showing of an exhibit that has been developed by the Michigan Department of Conservation, consisting of 120 specimens of birds, 120 specimens of fish, as well as fur bearing animals that are native to Michigan.

This exhibit will be shown in the gymnasium of the Chelsea high school on Monday, January 15, afternoon and evening. In the afternoon all school children are urged to visit the exhibit, as it is very educational.

In the evening there will be a public meeting at 8:00 o'clock, to which all residents of Chelsea and the neighboring communities are invited. R. J. Tinker of the State Conservation Department will speak and show moving pictures of Michigan conservation and actual wild life.

This meeting is the second of a series of educational meetings sponsored by the Chelsea Rod and Gun Club to present first hand information to the residents of this area so that the natural resources in game and wild life may be conserved and protected for future generations.

George Hart, president of the Rod and Gun Club, urges everyone to attend this meeting as he feels that the educational value thereof will be inestimable.

M. Coach Will Speak At Football Banquet

Earl T. Martineau, backfield coach at the University of Michigan will be the main speaker for the annual football banquet to be held on January 22 in the high school auditorium.

Mr. Martineau is a graduate of the University of Minnesota where he was placed on the All American football team in the backfield. He has coached at a number of large universities in the country and was assistant to Crisler at Princeton before coming to Michigan. During the late twenties he was head coach at Western State Teachers' College in Kalamazoo.

Under Mr. Martineau's supervision this year have been such stars as All American Tom Harmon, Forest Evashevski, Paul Kromer and Bob Westfall. Mr. Martineau will also show the pictures of the Ohio State-Michigan game which is considered to be one of the most outstanding games in the nation last fall. Local people are very fortunate in being able to see these pictures as requests have come from all parts of the country for pictures of this game. They will be shown in both fast and slow motion.

This banquet is sponsored each year by the local Kiwanis club and as in previous years the meal will be served by the seniors. The Kiwanians, in addition to purchasing their own tickets also purchase tickets for the football boys. The seniors have charge of the ticket sales and the proceeds will go to the senior class.

The public is invited to attend the banquet, the price of which will be fifty cents per person. The complete program will be given in a later edition of this paper.

Hunters Must Report To Conservation Dept.

Lansing—Most hunters furnish the game division of the department of conservation with reports of their success or failure, returning the cards which are attached to their licenses. Some hunters do not.

The law provides a penalty for failure to return the cards but the department in other years has invoked the law only infrequently.

Now, however, the department is preparing to list all hunters who fail to return their 1939 report cards. Last day for return, under the law, is February 15, 1940. Printed cards will be machine punched for all reports received before or on that date. Sorted in numerical sequence, the cards will be run through tabulator machines which will turn up license numbers of delinquent hunters automatically.

Given such a list, the department will decide how it can best impress delinquent hunters with the importance of prompt return of the cards. Such return is important because the department's game management effort, in large part, is determined by hunter success or failure.

CHILD FALLS FROM CAR

Bettie Carter, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Carter of Battle Creek, was thrown from the automobile in which she was riding with her parents, Sunday afternoon on US-12 highway, cutting a deep gash in her face. The family was enroute to Ann Arbor and Mr. Carter was driving about 55 miles per hour. The child, sitting alone in the rear seat, opened the door and the wind caught it, throwing her to the ground. Her injuries were treated at Chelsea Private hospital, after which she was taken to her home.

908,000 more was collected during the six months ending Dec. 31 than during the previous period.
Aside from efforts to effect economy in payrolls and department spending, the state administration is pinning its chief hope apparently on a continuation of good business in 1940 with a resultant rise in state revenues such as from the sales tax and liquor. As for the $26,896,000 deficit inherited one year ago from the previous administration, neither state officials nor the state legislature have agreed upon a definite plan to this financial problem.
Governor Dickinson has said repeatedly that he opposed the imposition of new taxes. But whereas his predecessor campaigned on a pledge to reduce state payrolls by many millions, Dickinson has been content to balance the budget—or practically so, at least—and to rest the administration's case on a stand that the constant rising curve of state government costs be leveled off.

LIMANEERS MEET

The Limaneers held a meeting on Thursday at the home of Mrs. Roy Koch, Lima Center. Twelve members and one guest enjoyed a pot-luck dinner at noon. In answer to roll call, each member gave an account of gifts that they received for Christmas, and told of resolutions they expected to make for the New Year.

PLEASANT LAKE GRANGE

The Pleasant Lake Grange met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Breitenwischer recently, with 25 present, beginning with a pot-luck supper at 7 o'clock. Each member was asked for their New Year resolutions, the best one being: "I will forget the past, live only for the present, and not worry over the future."
The songs, "We Are the Grange of the Future" and "All Through the Night" were sung, after which "Hearts" were played, first prizes being won by Ben Breitenwischer and Dorris Buss, and consolations by Mrs. Ben Breitenwischer and Armine Kuhl.

Loans By Federal Land Bank Doubled In 1939

New loans from the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul and the land bank commissioner in the four counties of Livingston, Monroe, Washtenaw and Wayne, more than doubled in 1939 compared with 1938.
R. A. Pence of Ann Arbor, secretary-treasurer of the five national farm loan associations through which the loans are obtained, summing up the year's activities of his organization this week, said that to December 15 there were 34 loans for a total of $86,200, compared with 17 last year for a total of $42,700. The loans were for a variety of purposes, improvements, payment of farm debts, refinancing of loans that carried higher interest, purchase of land and other purposes.
The five local associations in this area have a common headquarters at 808 Wolverine Building, Ann Arbor. Here under one roof all the records for the associations, which formerly maintained five different offices, are now kept and all business transacted. The "group plan", bringing contiguous offices together at convenient central points, was pioneered in Michigan and was found so successful that it has been adopted in the other three states in which the land bank operates—Wisconsin, Minnesota and North Dakota.
Breaking down the year's business, Mr. Pence said that this year there were 16 federal bank loans aggregating $58,800, compared with nine last year aggregating $31,100; and 18 commissioner loans for a total of $27,400 in 1939, compared with eight last year for a total of $11,600.

Good Land Use Is Goal Of Soil Conservationists

Today's goals in soil conservation in Michigan are to put what's left of our poor lands to the best use, but more important, to direct attention to the conservation of the more valuable acreages in what still is comparatively good farm land.
With that statement, E. C. Sackrider, Michigan State College representative and state coordinator in the soil conservation service of the United States Department of Agriculture, uses total acreage figures, not to alarm landowners, but to prove points of the 1940 goal.
In the most accurate nationwide survey to date, Michigan is credited with a total of 619,000 acres on which severe erosion has made the land economically of no use for crops or grazing.
Contrast that with the state's total farmland acreage of more than 18 million. It doesn't seem serious. But on 4,497,000 other acres some serious erosion has occurred. Control measures must be applied to insure continued productivity.
Michigan has a total of 36,630,000 acres, but this includes forests and park areas and considerable acreage that is not properly farm land.
"Although the land picture in Michigan deserves close study and considerable better management, other states have suffered far more," says Sackrider. "For the nation with its total of 1,903,176,620 acres, the survey shows 775,678,000 acres seriously eroded, plus 282,218,000 with severe erosion and another 144,768,000 acres in mountains, badlands and mesas of which Michigan has none. Within this state, too many farmers still crop the toplands and hills but pasture the bottomlands. These fertile cultivable bottomlands likely have equal productive possibilities with less susceptibility to erosion, and the toplands can grow the pasture."

Hartman for Economy

By firm insistence on economy, Budget Director Gus T. Hartman has incurred the hostility of many special groups.
Realistic to the trend of increased centralization of responsibility at Lansing, Hartman recently declared:
"Once a tax is imposed, it is never removed. We have already reached the staggering stage under the burden of taxation. The time to fight for good, economical, practical government is now."
"State appropriations have increased $46,000,000 a year from 1930 to 1940. This is an increase of $40,500,000 in aid to local units and $5,500,000 in administrative and operating costs. The increase includes $27,000,000 a year for new activities, such as old age assistance, aid to dependent children, and aid to blind, and emergency welfare relief. The major increases of aid to local governments went to schools and welfare."
Hartman's views against new taxes have been echoed generally by other state officials. Even the proposal of Melville B. McPherson, state tax chairman, that the date for collection of the state intangible tax be advanced from January, 1941, to January, 1940 has met with widespread opposition. Vote-seeking officials didn't like the idea of collecting a "new" tax before the 1940 November elections.

High Wages

Michigan, manufacturing center for automobiles, furniture and paper, fared well industrially during 1939. Leaders predict sustained and even augmented production and sales during 1940.
Federal economists have been insisting that a slump would take place during the first six months—at least a tapering off from the high point of production following the declaration of war last Sept. 8. But the automobile industry, for one, is anticipating a good sales year for 1940, and that means much to the entire state.
Wayne county with its General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and Hudson plants led all counties in the United States during 1939 in industrial wages.
The automobile worker receives the highest wage per hour of any specialized group in the nation. Rubber workers are second.
As any Michigan resident well knows, the automobile industry sets the pace for Michigan prosperity. It reaches into scores of small towns where automotive parts are made, and it feeds thousands of dollars to tourist sections for fishing, hunting, and vacations.

Welfare Home Rule

While local officials were putting pressure on state officials at Lansing for more welfare assistance, Attorney General Thomas Read bolstered up administration resistance last week. He ruled that county welfare boards may refuse to provide relief for the poor in cities or townships that have failed to provide for funds to solve their own welfare problems.
Read said point-blank that the burden of relief, under the new home rule welfare act, was plainly a responsibility of local units of government. He opined that supervisors had authority to add a levy to the tax roll of any municipality or township which was not financing its own welfare adequately.

We are beginning a new year. What will 1940 hold for you as a driver and as a pedestrian as far as safety is concerned?
It is too early to tell definitely what the results of all safety activities in 1939 are, although from all indications, there is a possibility of a slight reduction in accidents. I will give you definite information just as soon as actual figures are released.
In the meantime let's forget 1939 and look forward to 1940, and let every today and tomorrow be a safe day, free from all types of accidents.

Elementary News

Sixth Grade

Reporters: Anne Lamberton and Bobby Robbins During Christmas vacation the reporters, Edwin Lantis and Anne Lamberton, took the news to the Chelsea Standard on time.

We forgot to thank Joanne Shutes for bringing a Christmas tree to school, and we forgot to thank Myra Townsend and Barbara Eaton for playing they gave after we came from singing. They composed the play themselves.

In our music books we are singing all the songs that we have learned, starting from beginning, to the end.

We have a geography reference book in our room. It is No. 12-Q. We are going to look up Cecil Rhodes and the Rhodes Se.

January 4, 1940 a letter was read to us from Orin W. Kaye, Jr., about transportation. He goes different places. He is in Europe and he writes letters about what he sees.

We are having Current Events in reading. We find in our Weekly Readers one short, interesting, and important article. Then we get up in front of the class and either tell it in our own words or the words of the Weekly Reader what the article is about.

Joanne Shutes brought an account on Eclipse and when they will come during the year 1940.

We have had quite a few people in our room that have been absent. Most of them have had colds. Charles Slane is absent with a cold and we hope he will be in school Monday, January 8, 1940.

According to a boy in our room, England imports tin for smelting whalos. He meant "England imports tin for smelting in Wales."

Seventh Grade

We are sorry that Barbara Woods has moved back to Waltham, Mass. Sam Baxter has been absent for three whole weeks. The week before Christmas we put his name in the paper. We thought that would bring him back, but he didn't take the hint.

Marjorie Gilson came to school Monday for the first time in 1940. In geography we are studying the history of transportation. We are expecting to complete our geography work so that we can start our American history the second semester.

New Low Cost Brooder House Made at M. S. C.

"It's a surprise."

That is the promise of H. H. Musselman, head of agricultural engineering at Michigan State College. He has constructed a new poultry brooder house which he considers suitable for the average Michigan farm, but so surprisingly low in cost that he is saving it for inspection by rural visitors during the 25th annual Farmers' Week to be held at the college Jan. 29 through Feb. 2.

A decade ago the department designed a "Michigan brooder house." Plans were in demand for years. The construction cost was comparatively low, materials were available for less than a hundred dollars.

For Farmers' Week a year ago a new brooder-house was up for inspection. Hundreds demanded plans and received them and the countryside in 1939 began to be dotted with samples. By using sealed insulation board and reducing the weight—the materials could be purchased for $50 to $60.

Now Professor Musselman has a new one. It's still lighter, smaller and lower in cost.

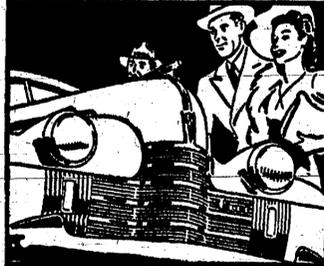

"Boys enrolled in 4-H club work or projects of Future Farmers' clubs could construct this new type house easily," says Musselman. Plans are to be available to those who ask for them during Farmers' Week. Details in the meantime, however, are to be kept secret. The department staff members want to see what happens when the unveiling occurs while the campus at East Lansing is holding its annual rural open house week.

Diamonds Used in War Diamonds are of special importance in manufacturing war materials—airplanes, ammunition, battle-ships and tanks. Great Britain controls, through the De Beers Consolidated Mines, Ltd., of Kimberley, South Africa, more than 90 per cent of the world's diamond output. Should Germany run short of the precious gems its war industries would suffer—and, for the want of a diamond the war might be lost.

SCOUTING-GROWS IN 1939

When Council members of the Washtenaw-Livingston Boy Scout Council gather for their annual meeting at the Michigan Union in Ann Arbor on Wednesday evening, January 17, at 6:30 p. m., they will learn that 1939 has been a year of some net growth, both in terms of the number of men, and of boys enrolled.
At some time during the calendar year more than 2000 different boys in Washtenaw and Livingston counties have been enrolled in the 55 Scout Troops and 20 Cub Packs. The net growth, however, as of January 1, 1940 over January 1, 1939 is from 307 Scouters (Scout men) to 322 Scouters, from 302 to 377 Cubs and from 1049 to 1108 Scouts.
"While this is not a spectacular growth," John S. Page, Council President, said "it shows that the troops of the Council are making progress. We are happy to see this growth both in the number of boys served and in the number of men at work."

Diamonds in Industry
Most people think of the diamond as a sparkling luxury. What is little known is that industry depends considerably upon this gem. Half of the world's output of diamonds are used industrially. The hardest substance in existence, they aid in turning grinding wheels, shaping the hard surface of emery and tungsten carbide; they are used in photographic needles, optical and dental drills, in tools for artistic etching on metal and for turning ivory, hard wood and bakelite into such things as billiard balls, bowling balls and doorknobs.

Alumni Stars Win

By Wayne Van Orman

The Chelsea Alumni defeated the high school, 25-23, in a very close game Friday evening. The "old stars" seemed to go strongest near the end of the game when they should have been tired out.

In the first half Chelsea outclassed the Alumni and there was evidence that the game would turn into a one-sided affair, but when the Alumni came onto the floor for the second half they completely dominated over the high school.

The high-light of the game came in the closing seconds of the game when Chelsea was unable to break up the Alumni boys who were stalling for time. Schneider led the attack for Chelsea, scoring 9 points, while Lennie Novess and "Chuckles" Fanarites each scored 6 for the Alumni.

In the second team game the Alumni won 23 to 13, with Kusterer as high point man with 4 points.

The scoring was as follows—Alumni: C. Fanarites 6, Tisch 6, N. Fanarites 4, Alber 2, Novess 6, Fletcher 3, Haselschwerdt 4, Winans 0, Niehaus 0. High School: Schneider 9, Riemenschneider 3, Birch 5, S. Policht 0, A. Policht 3, Miller 3, Knickerbocker 0.

New Year—New Leaf.

Why Not New Car?

THE slate's clean, the past is past, you're making a new beginning on a new year you hope will be happier and finer and richer—how about doing the job up right?

You spot the fun-possibilities in this brilliant and buoyant Buick just by watching it flash by, but have you been in to try it?

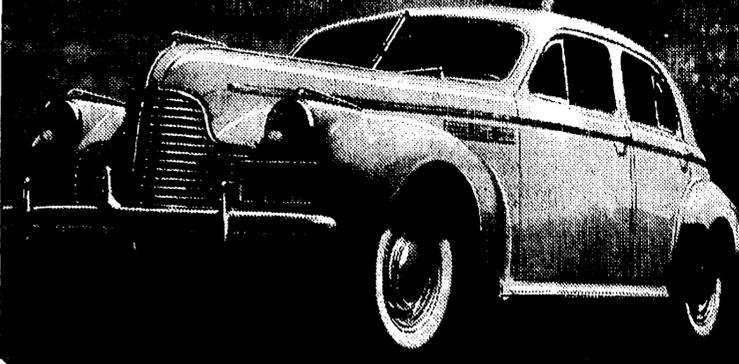

Do you know what it's like—first hand, we mean—to have a hundred-plus Dynafash horsepower waiting your treadle-foot's nudge? Have you sampled the thrill in such an engine micro-poise-balanced to smoothness a wrist watch can't hope to equal? Today's winter-roughened roads give you swell chance to try out Buick's gentle ride—raw weather emphasizes the stout snugness of Unisteel Bodies by Fisher and the convenience of the Flash-Way Direction Signal.

Now's when you most need firm new rubber—sure, soft, tiptoe brakes—Buick's automatic choke—stout, taut frames and rugged bodies, and why wait for spring to buy beauty that gives your spirits a lift? Then too, driving speeds are naturally lower now and driving distances shorter, making this the best time of all to get a car properly started in life. So figure it out! It's a new year. You've turned a new leaf. Ask your Buick dealer what a new Buick will cost you now—and let every month of 1940 contribute to a happy new year!

Unnecessary Humiliation

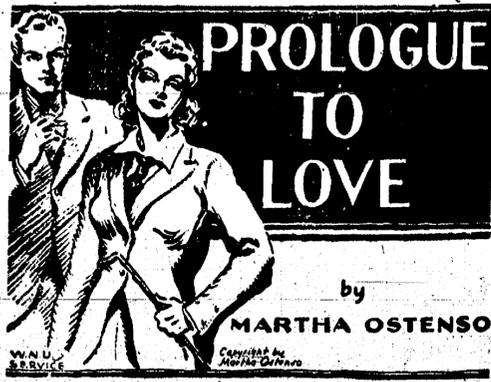

A high school principal forced a boy to appear before the entire school assembly and admit that he had taken a fountain pen which did not belong to him. In following this procedure, the principal reasoned that this boy's humiliation would serve as an example to restrain others from doing misdeeds.

We Are Still the Greatest Nation (On Earth)

"Least! Everything they teach here is lies!" shouted a young radical as he was led away by the police. Only a few minutes before, this college senior had addressed a meeting of his fellow students and was quoted as having said, "Do they think by pounding into our ears that old slogan—'My country, right or wrong, my country still'—that they are filling our minds with the hypocrisy and corruption of our present form of government? Such patriotism is what the war lords want for then they can graft from the government, while you and I are serving as machine gun fodder. That is what they always want—what they get in the end. If you don't believe it, study history. Not the kind of history that is taught here, but actual facts. Now, what will you find?"

"First of all, they won't tell how this government of ours secretly encouraged rebellion in Northern Mexico previous to 1846 so that we could grab Texas. They won't admit that the war between the states was fought because a few eastern manufacturers couldn't compete with the cheap slave labor that several southern manufacturers had just put in their factories. Nothing is ever said in history books about the manner in which we murdered, tricked and bribed the Indians so that we could steal their land. What's more, our history teachers never told us that Spain had agreed to every demand of the United States so that we wouldn't declare war on her. Neither did they inform us that twenty times more soldiers died from eating poisonous bully beef than were killed by Spanish bullets. What's more, my fellow students, the World War was

When the young student was dragged away in the middle of his sentence, the problem was not solved, for brute force and suppression are elements which cause any movement to spread like wildfire. The following day, when it was announced that the student had been dismissed from college, the problem was not solved, for his words were still ringing in the ears of his listeners. The only method of combatting radicalism is to teach the truth frankly and suppress nothing, because by this method it is possible to admit our errors and at the same time compare our government with that of other nations. While we have made grave errors in the past, our present system of government compares favorably with governments of other nations.

He took her gloved hands in a firm grip and stood looking down at her with a strange, inscrutable smile.

"Hello, Florian!" she returned, her voice a little unsteady. "Gosh, I've been driving like a fiend!" "Go on in," Florian told her and gave her shoulder a little squeeze with his hand from which she shrank with instinctive uneasiness.

He jumped into the car and drove it hurriedly into the garage cabin. Autumn started toward the lodge, but Florian caught up with her and opened the door for her to enter. Within the large room, familiar to her now with its antlered heads projecting from the walls, its bear and cougar skins scattered about the floor, its deep stone fireplace, its properly rustic but comfortable chairs and deep divan, its buffet littered with bottles and glasses which would be an eternal adjunct to any furnishings of the Parris—there was not another soul but herself and Florian.

Autumn turned upon him. "Where's Lin?" she demanded. "Florian had closed the door. He was leaning against it now, his hands thrust nonchalantly into the pockets of his corduroy jacket. His blond head shone in unruly picturesqueness against the stained log surface of the door. His dark eyes smiled at her, half closed in contemplative pleasure.

"Lin came down with tonsillitis this morning," he told her. "Why didn't you telephone me, then?" "We did, but you had already left home."

"Why didn't you have Elinor come along with you?" Autumn demanded, vexed at Florian's manner.

"Lord, Autumn, don't get all worked up over nothing," he replied. "Elinor doesn't go out with me. Besides, isn't it all right this way?"

"You know it isn't—as well as I do," she told him. He took a step toward her with easy indifference. "Don't be a simper!" he said. "Give me your things."

Autumn looked at him coolly, surveying him hostilely as he regarded her with his smile of assurance.

"Certainly not," she said. "I'm going back home right now. You know I wouldn't have come if I had known you were to be alone here." She moved toward the door, but Florian grasped the shoulders of her loose automobile coat and pulled it off her.

"Don't be such a fool!" he said. "Now that you're here, sit down and be pleasant about it. I'm not so old-fashioned as to make any assaults on your virtue, if that's what's on your mind. My God, I had to come up here to tell you, didn't I?" "Now that you've told me—I can go," Autumn replied.

"You're not going to get out of here till we've had a drink and a bite to eat. After that you may do as you please."

Autumn seated herself and took a cigarette from her case. She lit it and sat without speaking while Florian carried her coat to a closet and hung it up. When he came back he poured a couple of drinks at the buffet, one of which he handed to Autumn. Then, glass in hand, he stood before her and laughed sardonically.

"So little Autumn was afraid her Florian was going to stage a regular old-time, knock-em-down-and-drag-em-out scene, eh?" he observed.

"I wasn't afraid," Autumn told him. "As a matter of fact, I really should do something about it," he went on. "Come to think of it, you've succeeded in making a fool of me all summer."

"I see," said Autumn. "You'd like to get even. I didn't credit you with being vindictive."

He flushed darkly. Then a pathetically boyish and disappointed look came over his face, so that for a moment, in spite of herself, Autumn felt sorry for him. Perhaps it had been un sporting of her to play with him all summer when she had known from the first how he had felt about her. Florian threw himself into a chair and sat with his hand shading his eyes.

"No," he replied slowly. "You've got me wrong, Autumn. I'm not saying anything about what I would do if I could. But—not against your will, my dear—I admit I was glad when Lin found she couldn't come out. I was glad of this chance of being alone with you. I was silly enough to think that perhaps—alone with me for the last time—you might relent a little."

"I'm sorry, Florian," she said wearily. "I have tried to make it clear from the first that we could never be more than friends."

"You have your reasons for that, no doubt," he said. "Am I so—so absolutely impossible?"

Autumn sighed and turned her eyes to the window. "I seem to have made a mess of things, all around," she said.

He shot her a quick look from beneath lowered brows. "It's Bruce Landon, of course," he said, with a sharp inflection bitten with hopelessness.

Autumn avoided his eyes, her gaze upon the window where, the curtains drawn back, the redolent, piny air of the mountains drifted gently inward.

"I knew it," he said disconsolately. "I've known it for weeks. That's why you're going away. You're running away from him."

Autumn got up and stood by the window, looking out across the hills where evening was already settling down. She had been standing there a long time, neither of them speaking, when Florian got impatiently out of his chair.

"Let's eat!" he said suddenly. "You're probably starved."

She looked at him and smiled dimly. "I could do with a little something," she agreed. "What is there? I'll get it ready."

"You'll do nothing of the sort," he retorted. "You'll sit down and have another drink while I fry the bacon and eggs."

Fifteen minutes later, they were seated amicably across from each other at the little table before the fireplace, feasting on bacon and eggs, bread and butter and marmalade, and the really excellent coffee Florian had made. Florian, remarking with a derisive smile that they might as well have it as romantic as possible, had made a fire in the fireplace and had moved the prosaic lamp to a secluded alcove.

Their talk was desultory and was concerned chiefly with the Parris, since Autumn was reluctant to speak of her impending journey. Linda, he told her, had found herself a new passion, the object of which was a bemedaled war veteran who had come to the Okanagan and bought himself a fruit ranch.

"Just a matter of changing from sheep to fruit for Lin," he remarked. "It's great to have an easy conscience."

And so they talked in quiet amiability, while the freight flickered pleasantly on the ruddy pine beams of the ceiling and coquetted with the shadows that lurked about the furnishings.

Autumn looked at him coolly.

Ever since Autumn had left that morning, an inexplicable sadness had lain upon Jarvis Dean, a heaviness of heart that was more than mere regret at her going. She would be back again tomorrow, he told himself, and they would still have a few brief days together before she left the Castle for good. It would be for good this time, and when he joined her in England in the fall, that would be his own farewell to this land in which he had known the heights and depths of all passions. Searching his heart for the cause of his melancholy, he came with acute anguish upon the truth. Jarvis Dean had reached an end—an end of everything that had really mattered in life. An abyss of nothingness yawned before him.

Without these stark hills and unguessable valleys that had witnessed with silent compassion the drama of his life, he would be as a player upon a stage without an audience. Frequently during the day, his eyes had roved hungrily over the noble prospect that had been his for more than a quarter of a century. By toil of mind and body and soul he had made it his own, and his being, in turn, had been delivered over in its entirety to the magnitude of this earth.

All that he had known of joy and sorrow, hatred and love, the saga of his failure and triumph, was written across the bright tablet of this land, inscrutable to all but himself; when he left it his epitaph would be graven there.

The sun marked noon, and the less explicit hours of the west. Toward the latter end of the day Jarvis went on foot to the temporary camp where his young Irish herder, Clancy Shane, was tending the few hundred sheep he had brought down from the range to be sold. It had been a matter of great pride to the boy that he had brought the band down single-handed and Jarvis had expressed his dry pleasure by raising the lad's salary.

In a wooded hollow before he reached the rise from which the flock could be seen, Jarvis halted abruptly to listen. An unwonted clamor of excited barking was coming from the direction of the flock, mingled with the mad bleat of sheep. In alarm, Jarvis scrambled up through the woods to the crest, where a furlous spectacle met his eyes.

The low, red sun shone obliquely across a turbulent livid sea of gray bodies, a sea which, while Jarvis stared at it aghast, seemed to become a vortex spinning closer and closer to the brink of a deep arroyo, a sandy cleft in the ground that had been washed deeper by freshets of the last spring. The dog, in a frenzy, was striving to head the crazed flock away from the danger. Suddenly the Irish lad leaped into the maelstrom and began beating his way toward the churning center. Jarvis shouted a hoarse warning and began to run.

Before he reached the arroyo, however, the outer fringe of the band had run off tangent-wise and were plunging headlong into the gaping earth. Instantly the whirlpool broke, the main body of it following the mad course of the first few into the arroyo. When Jarvis came at last and looked over the edge of the cleft, he found the pit filling with writhing, kicking, screaming bodies. A few had escaped and were straggling up the steep bank, bleating dementedly, their oblique, crazy eyes aglare.

In the thick of the struggle, falling out with both arms and sobbing frantically, Clancy Shane hobbled about, with hideous ludicrousness, like a cork. Jarvis yelled to him and plunged down the embankment, hurling out of his way the few half-stunned animals that rushed up at him. With all the strength of his powerful frame he fought his way to the boy, lifted him bodily above the descending stream of gray forms, and flung him free. As he did so, a dozen grizzled shapes came down upon him and Jarvis fell back among them.

Bruce Landon was driving home from town. On a sharp decline in the road where it approached the Dean place, his gaze was arrested by a wild figure that rushed frenziedly toward him, apparently from nowhere. Bruce drew to the side of the road and stopped his car. The madman was young Clancy Shane.

The boy collapsed against the running board, his breath a raucous wheeze. Bruce leaped from his car and lifted him to a sitting position. "What's wrong, Clancy?" he demanded.

The boy flung out an arm toward the pasture. "Over yonder!" he gasped. "The master—in the gully! Go quick!"

With only a swift glance of horror into the blood-stained face of the youth, Bruce sped away.

The sight that met his eyes in the arroyo froze his veins. There was a scattering of sheep, running and bleating idiotically still, with the dog valiantly struggling to bring them together. But across the gap in the earth there had risen a solid lethum of dead or dying bodies. Of Jarvis Dean himself there was no sign. Bruce stood in stony horror. The sheep lay in the arroyo, ten deep.

Two men came running from the direction of the Dean place. A strange quiet seemed to have fallen upon that land, when it seemed to Bruce a eternity later—the western sky drew down an emerald curtain upon the glory that had been there. Three men stood back from their work, their bodies hunched, and lowered their heads. The water, still form of Jarvis Dean lay where they had placed it on the ground at their feet.

Clancy Shane had told them the brief and tragic story of what had occurred. An eagle had flown down on the flock and terrorized a few stragglers that had wandered a short distance from the others. They had raced back and spread the contagion of fear in the flock. The rest of the story they could read for themselves in the havoc that had been wrought during the brief moments of the hopeless struggle.

Hannah, in the kitchen of the Castle, lifted her tear-drenched face from her hands. "You will have to go and fetch her, Bruce," she sobbed. "She is stopping the night with the Parris at their lodge. You know the place?"

Bruce looked down at her. "Yes—I know where it is," he replied. "Will you go then?"

His lips tightened. "I'll go," he said.

In a few moments he was on his way, the dusk thickening about him as he sped along the winding trail that led southward into the mountains. Two hours later he climbed up out of the troublous dark heat of the valley into the sheer, cool starlight of the hills. Now the road became narrow and capricious, and the black spires of the dense pines made a cathedral ominousness against the sky. How like Autumn, Bruce thought with frowning admiration, to have driven over this road alone! One false swerve of the wheel and she would have been at the mercy of this solitary wilderness until someone found her and brought her out. He strove to keep his mind on the deviousness of the way so that he might be possessed of a measure of composure for the difficult task that lay before him. He was glad, with a self-effacing bleakness, that her friends were with her—Linda Parr and Florian. They would be able to offer her comfort, as he himself was not qualified to do.

He had telephoned to Hector Cardigan from the Dean place. It had seemed proper that Hector should be the first to be informed of the tragedy—and, if possible, to break the news to Autumn. Bruce would have given much to have had the old friend of the family with him on this sorry mission, but Hector had not been at home and Hannah had urged that the tragic news should be carried to Autumn without delay. The road began to steepen treacherously as Bruce approached the comparatively open shelf on the mountain where the Parr Lodge stood. From somewhere in the shrouded darkness far above him came the sinister, feral wail of a cougar, a trailing sound of wounded malevolence. Closer at hand an owl hooted as though in mockery of that other more menacing cry of the wild.

A gleam of light through the dark web of the pines, and Bruce was driving in at the open gateway to the lodge. He turned his car about, deferring for a painful moment the duty that was before him, and formulating in his mind, with all the gentleness he could muster, the dolorous words that he must speak. As he got down from his car he could hear a door opening in the lodge behind him. A moment later he was face to face with Florian Parr. Even in that instant, when his distress of mind was uppermost, Bruce detected embarrassment in Florian's manner.

"Hello, Florian," he said as he extended his hand. Florian took the proffered hand in a brief clasp, then seemed to draw back hesitantly. "Bruce!" he exclaimed softly. "You're the last person I expected to see here tonight."

Bruce glanced toward the house. "I've come with some pretty bad news, Florian," he said in a low tone. "Autumn's father was killed this evening."

Florian fell back a step. "Killed? Good God! How?" "He was over visiting the flock young Shane brought out to be sold.

The boy says an eagle frightened the sheep and they got to milling. Shane tried to break up the jam and they got into a ditch on top of him. Jarvis jumped in and saved the boy—but he never got out of it himself."

Florian ran his hand across his brow, speechless from shock. Bruce saw him glance abstractedly toward the house. (To be continued)

Gibraltar as Resort
More than a fortress, Gibraltar is a widely favored holiday resort visited annually by thousands, with splendid hotels, bathing beaches, gay Spanish cafe life, and regular excursions to "the Rock," and across the narrow straits to North Africa.

Screen Door Grilles
The possibilities of decorative effects of ornamental grilles used in connection with screen doors are frequently overlooked by home owners. In front doors having leaded glass side lights, a grille simulating a leaded effect in the screen door would carry out the general character of the entrance. Aside from their ornamental qualities, the grilles also serve to protect and strengthen the screening.

Youth Passes Too Rapidly; Use It Well!
By PATRICIA LINDSAY
© Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.

LITTLE sister at the age of three, loves to wear mother's high-heeled shoes and powder her nose. A few years later she wants her curls "done up" or cut short like big sister's. When she is entering her teen age she is so eager to be an adult that she gets unruly, and causes herself, and those around her, a lot of trouble.
Are you a little sister? Why do you suddenly want to be old? It's no crime to be young! Youth is glorious—being young is thrilling, if you will just take it in your stride at the pace you should.

You think mother and daddy are old meanies for keeping you away from some parties and asking you to get home early from others. You get simply furious when mother insists on low heels and clothes which you think of too sweet, simple and girlish. Big brother is a downright nuisance when he suggests quietly that you lay off heavy make-up and putting in dark corners, "or else." "Oh, you snail," will they ever let me grow up!
Of course they will, sister, just as quickly as you convince them that you are not a reckless, heady little tadpole, so eager for adult life that you are missing today. They know the pitfalls, and because they love you, and so want to be proud of you, they seem over-cautions when they try to steer you clear of them. Why don't you help a bit?

Quit hating the fact that you are still young.

Quit hating the fact that you are still young. Glory in being your age and live each day joyously. Delight in your clubs, your frivolous parties, your many privileges—all yours because you are young! And every minute, sister, cherish and protect your fresh loveliness, for once you lose it, or mar it, you can never recapture it!

These Things Are Essential

Begin right now keeping yourself healthy and lovely. Eight or nine, even ten, hours of sleep each night (see why mother wants you home early?). Use little make-up, for young skins have a definite beauty, which should not be covered. A rosy lipstick, a speck of good powder. No mascara, eye-brow pencil, rouge. Why hide that pixie allure with cosmetics meant for fading beauty? Isn't big brother right after all? Let your skin breathe unhampered, and keep your cheeks and mouth rushing with color by exercising. Walk in low-heeled shoes whenever you can to develop true and glorious posture, and eat your meals regularly with few sweets on the side!
Don't be stubborn about your clothes. Simple sports frocks for day wear, full-skirted gowns (never too revealing) for evening.
Instead of pouting, and trading against proper restrictions, spend those moments keeping yourself fresh as a daisy, and nicely groomed with hair brushed to shining glory and your nails manicured.
And above all, my dear, live proudly! Don't cheapen yourself through thoughtless acts (like putting indiscriminately e v e a though you see other girls being foolish! A few years from now when Prince Charming comes along you will be awfully glad you didn't!

HINT-OF-THE-DAY

In your own home are materials for bath which beautify and invigorate. A pound of sea salt, two cups of starch, oatmeal, bran, almond meal or a small package of baking soda thrown into the tub are of great benefit in relaxing the nerves and reviving the spirits. If you have no shower under which to rinse, then put the meal in small cheesecloth bags which you can shake yourself. A quarter of a pound each of oatmeal and almond meal mixed is a good combination. Soak your bath if you wish with any scent you have on hand.

Question And Answer Dept.

Problem—Davenport, Iowa, and Rock Island, Ill. are opposite each other on the banks of the Mississippi river. On which side of the river is Davenport located—north, east, south or west? (Answer elsewhere in this department).

Ans.—First you must identify the pole-star. It is the star apparently hovering over the north pole. It is the only star in that vicinity which is visible to the naked eye. That direction is true north. This pole-star is commonly used by surveyors to find
the north.

Ans.—How can true north be determined by the stars?

Ans.—First you must identify the pole-star. It is the star apparently hovering over the north pole. It is the only star in that vicinity which is visible to the naked eye. That direction is true north. This pole-star is commonly used by surveyors to find
the north.

Ans.—My grandfather wants to know on what day of the week he was born. The date was May 6, 1849.

Ans.—May 6, 1849 was on Sunday.

Ans.—Can you tell me where the Catalina Islands are?

Ans.—The Catalina Islands are off the southern coast of California.

Ans.—Why do the leaves of trees turn red in the Autumn?

Ans.—When frost or winter comes on, the lower temperature and the smaller amount of light stop the manufacture of sugar in the green leaves.

Ans.—When and where was Helen Keller born? And how did she lose her sight and hearing?

Ans.—Helen Keller, the deaf, dumb and blind woman of the world, was born in 1880 at Tuscumbia, Ala. When she was two years of age she was totally deprived of her sight and hearing by a severe illness. At that age she had acquired the use of only a few words, all of which she soon forgot except the one word "water."

Ans.—About twenty years ago it was reported that Easter Island in the Pacific ocean had totally disappeared due to a tidal wave or volcanic eruption. Have heard nothing since about it. Was it true or not?

Ans.—The report was false. Easter Island is still doing business as usual.
Vessels so seldom touch at this small volcanic island that it was a long time after the report was published before its correctness could be ascertained.

Ans.—What is the meaning and origin of the expression "the goose hanks high?"

Ans.—This is a slang phrase, meaning "the prospect is good" or any similar intimation. The origin of the expression is obscure. Many stymologists and lexicographers are agreed that the expression is a corruption of "the goose hanks high," referring to the noise made by wild geese in flight, especially when the weather is fine.

Ans.—Who was Priscian that many grammarians refer to?

Ans.—Priscian was a famous Roman grammarian who lived in the early sixth century. His name became almost synonymous with "grammar" and he was regarded as supreme authority.
