Volunteer Blood Donors Sought By Red Cross

One hundred men and women between the ages of 21 and 40 are being called by the Red Cross to volunteer as blood donors as a preliminary to a new aid to injured soldiers in case of war. Doctors at the University Hospital at Ann Arbor will take the blood and extract the plasma. It is planned to make careful studies as to the best method of preserving, transporting and using the plasma, so that in case of war no time will be lost by needless experimentation.

The plasma is the liquid part of the blood, with the corpuscles removed. It is a clear, faint yellow solution which contains many essential elements which cannot be duplicated artificially. In war, the plasma will be used to treat patients in shock. When a soldier is badly injured, his blood may become too thick as the result of shock. If plasma is injected into his veins, recovery follows quickly.

The process of preparing plasma is too complicated to be undertaken under the conditions which prevail in the front line hospitals, so that bottles of preserved plasma are of great value.

It is the problem of the University Hospital doctors to find the best methods for preparing the plasma. It is for this purpose that the Red Cross is appealing to patriotic citizens to offer a pint of their blood for study purposes. Each donor will be given a thorough physical examination and his blood will be studied. If, during this examination, any disease or abnormality is discovered, the donor and his doctor can have the report of the examination.

Volunteers can register with Miss Josephine S. Davis at the Red Cross Headquarters, 800 Wolverine Building, Ann Arbor, or at the home of Mrs. A. L. Steger, Chelsea.

Hunters' License Tags Will Be Ready In Sept.

Lansing—Resident hunters will wear orange back tags in the small game season, red ones in the deer season this fall. Seven hundred thousand have been printed for the shotgun army and 240,000 have been run off to supply the northwoods riflemen.

These figures represent a 25,000 increase in the number of small game license blanks printed, and a 10,000 increase in deer hunting license blanks. The conservation department prepares for continuance of the increase in the number of hunters that has occurred every year since the depression low point of 1932.

Together with game law digests from an edition that numbers more than a million copies this season, the license blanks and tags will be placed in the hands of more than 2,000 dealers throughout Michigan during September.

Provision for non-residents includes preparation of 10,000 southern Michigan and 10,000 all-state small game licenses, 7,000 deer hunting licenses, and 100 bow and arrow licenses. Also prepared for the coming season are 10,000 trapping licenses, 3,500 deer camp permits, 1,500 blanks for resident archers and 100 bow and arrow camp permits.

Last season 742,630 game and trapping licenses of all kinds were issued.

KOEBBE-GUEUTAL WEDDING

Miss Evelyn Koebbe and Harold Gueutal, both of Chelsea, were united in marriage Saturday afternoon, August 3, at a quiet ceremony performed at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Kathryn Koebbe, on Washington St. The marriage service was read by Rev. Fred D. Mumby. The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. James J. Munro. Mr. and Mrs. Gueutal left on a motor trip to Smoky Mountains, Tenn. For the present they will make their home in Chelsea.

ROD & GUN CLUB MEETING

The Chelsea Rod & Gun club will meet at the Legion home, Cavanaugh lake, on Tuesday evening, August 13. ### Death Takes Wm. Freer, Former Local Resident

William H. Freer, 63, for many years prominent in musical circles, died Tuesday night in Alma. The son of A. Mortimer and Della Calkins Freer, he was born in Chelsea, receiving his education in the public schools. Mr. Freer began his theatrical musical career at the age of seven, when he played in the opera house orchestra at Chelsea, where his father was leader of both that organization and the village band. He studied at the University of Michigan school of music and under many famous instructors, including Bernard Listman, a member of the Joachim quartet, internationally known for their music.

An outstanding violinist, Mr. Freer was a leader of well known orchestras and for years traveled with leading minstrel organizations. He spent 33 years of "grouping" during which he played in 774 cities in the United States, also appearing in Cuba and many foreign cities. He spent several years as musical director for Blackstone, the magician. He made his home in Jackson until the fall of 1939, where he had directed orchestras in the various theatres.

Before leaving Jackson, Mr. Freer donated his entire library of music, consisting of several hundred issues, to the Chelsea school for the exclusive use of the school orchestra. He also gave the school two violins, one suitable for a girl and one for a boy, to be loaned to students who might not be able to purchase a violin. These contributions will be of benefit to the school for many years.

Mr. Freer is survived by two sons, Walter and Howard, of Jackson, and a daughter, Dorothy, of Detroit.

Funeral services were held on Saturday at the Wetherby chapel, Jackson, and burial was in Oak Grove cemetery, Chelsea.

Tax Installments Must Be Paid Before Sept. 1

The county treasurer is calling attention to the fact that annual installments of 1935 and prior years taxes that are being paid on the ten-year payment plan are due this month and must be paid before September first to avoid an added penalty.

Any installment that is due this month and is not paid before October 1 will be listed on the tax sale for next May and fifty cents more added for sale expense. If any installment is past due on October 1 then the entire balance will be subject to sale and can no longer be paid on the installment plan.

Any 1938 real estate tax that is unpaid on October 1 will also be listed on the tax sale advertising list and fifty cents added for each description so listed.

Careless Operators of Motorboats Warned

Thoughtless motorboat operators whose noise and splashing have spoiled the fun of fishermen, bathers, and shore property owners are learning to beware of conservation officers. Empowered with other peace officers to arrest persons making a nuisance of themselves with their motorboats on Michigan's inland waters, the conservation men are nabbing numerous offenders, particularly on highly developed southern lakes.

As amended in 1939, the law forbids operation of motorboats without rudders, or "carelessly and heedlessly in willful or wanton disregard of the rights and safety of others, or without due caution and circumspection and at a speed or in a manner so as to endanger or be likely to endanger any person or property."

NEWLYWEDS HONORED

Postmaster Herbert D. Witherell and Mrs. Witherell were honor guests at a surprise party given Tuesday evening by the employees of the local postoffice at the American Legion home, Cavanaugh lake. The guests, numbering 23, included the husbands and wives of the employees. Cards and bingo furnished diversion for the party, after which lunch was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Witherell, whose marriage was a recent event, were presented with a beautiful floor lamp and a kitchen shower by the assembled guests.

Mr. Witherell has been postmaster of Chelsea since 1933, first as acting postmaster, and later receiving his appointment.

SPECIAL ASSESSORS APPOINTED

At the regular meeting of the village council on Monday evening, President Alfred D. Mayer appointed J. A. Conlan, John Frymuth and J. N. Strieter as a board of special assessors for the year. The appointments were confirmed by the council.

A notice requesting bids for the improvement of 32.9 miles of road in Washtenaw, Ingham, Shawassee and Livingston counties is being published in this issue of The Standard by the State Highway Department.

Included in the proposal is the surfacing of old US-12 highway which crosses Chelsea to the south. Although the legal notice published by the highway department designates only 3.5 miles to be re-surfaced on this highway, The Standard was advised by telephone from Lansing on Wednesday that this is an error and that it is planned to surface the road the entire distance between the east and west intersections with the new US-12 highway.

According to information received in a letter from Murray D. Van Wagoner, State Highway Commissioner, the work of re-surfacing the road will not be started until after Labor Day, so as not to cause any inconvenience during the period of heavy summer traffic. Weather permitting, the work should be completed in about thirty days, according to Mr. Van Wagoner.

The highway will be re-surfaced with black-top material with non-skid top layer for safe and smooth riding.

Although this section of highway has been turned over to the county road commission as a county highway, it is the policy of the state highway department to put any highway which they abandon in good repair before transfer to the county, so the re-surfacing has been included in their fall program.

This improvement will be welcomed by Chelsea motorists who have been inconvenienced somewhat since the relocation of US-12. A good highway will thus be provided to both the east and west intersections.

During the telephone conversation with the state highway department yesterday it was learned that the construction of a new road directly south from Chelsea to the new pavement is being considered, although it will not be on this year's construction program.

E. E. Gallup, Former Chelsea Supt., Dies

E. E. Gallup, former superintendent of Chelsea public schools, died Wednesday, July 31, in Lansing.

Mr. Gallup was born 66 years ago in Jackson county, graduating from Michigan State College and the University of Michigan.

Following his graduation, he was superintendent of schools at Monroe, principal of Adrian high school, superintendent at Chelsea from 1906 to 1909, and superintendent at Hanover. He served as state supervisor of vocational agriculture under the state board of control for vocational education from 1918 to 1927 and was supervisor of curriculum and research in agricultural education for the same department for two more years.

In 1939 he opposed Dr. Eugene B. Elliott for state superintendent of public instruction in the primary election.

AM. LEGION INSTALLATION

Installation of American Legion of officers will be held Aug. 14, 8:30 p. m. at Legion home. A 40-ft. 8 drill team from Detroit have been secured for the occasion. All members of the team are Past Commanders of Detroit Posts and are fully qualified to put on a very interesting program. All Post 31 members and their wives and friends are urged to be on hand for the installation. Refreshments will be served after the business meeting. Make it your duty to be at this meeting. —Adjutant.

ESCHELBACH REUNION

Eighty-five representatives of the Eschelbach family assembled on Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gottlieb Horning, Pleasant lake, where a pot-luck dinner was served on the lawn. This was followed by a program of sports for the children. Officers elected were Elmer Eschelbach of Detroit, president; Fred Haist of Ann Arbor, vice-president; and Edna Horning, secretary and treasurer. Detroit, Dearborn, Ann Arbor, Grass Lake and Chelsea were represented at the reunion.

Our Neighbors

TECUMSEH—Mr. and Mrs. Chas. A. Pratt of Grangeville, Idaho, are spending the week in this vicinity. Mr. Pratt is a son of the late Edwin and Ida Baker Pratt, and this is his first visit here in 60 years. He left the community when 12 years of age and on his return this week could find no one who knew the location of his grandfather, Stephen Pratt's farm in Raisin township. So on Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Pratt made a tour of that area and finally he discovered the old home, proving its identity by a tree in the woods behind the house. When a child he had carved his name in the tree trunk where it still remains. Herald.

JACKSON—A bear scare once in a lifetime is one time too many—or at least that is what Mrs. Eldon Moore, 2101 East Ganson street, firmly believes. Mrs. Moore had her experience not out in the woods but right at home, as a matter of fact, right at the back door. Awakened at 2:20 a. m. Monday by a noise that sounded like the garbage can being overturned, Mrs. Moore rose to determine the reason. Rushing to the back door expecting to find a dog, she came face to face with a bear—which greeted her with a growl. Almost speechless—but not quite—Mrs. Moore finally managed a good scream, which sent the bear scampering off, but not until it had picked up a bag of fresh fish bones. The scream aroused husband and son, who made futile attempts to find the bear. Tracks were found around the garbage can at daybreak. Conservation officers suggested that the bear belonged to some tourist or that it lived in the marshes north and southeast of the city.—Star.

PLYMOUTH—Fred F. Fehlig, on Ann Arbor road just west of Ann Arbor Trail, has a field of corn—Pride of the North—which is now about 12 feet high. This isn't just one or two stalks, it is the whole field. The crop was grown from home-grown seed, certified last year, which was planted in March. Already the ears are a foot or more long and prospects are that it will develop even more before September or the first of October. This particular stand of corn was chest-high by July 4. According to tradition, normal corn should be "knee-high by the Fourth of July." Farmers from the vicinity who have come over to Mr. Fehlig's to view the corn, say that they have never seen anything like it before in Michigan. "Why, it is even taller than most corn when fully developed," they say. Mr. Fehlig believes that the stalks will grow to a height of 15 feet.—Mail.

Lansing—That's gold in a snappy sizzling heat wave!

And no one knows it better than the Michigan tourist promoter.

This individual is legion. He has a complete listing of other points of interest, the above swing around the "Roof Garden." This rather hurried itinerary leaves out such grand sights as the Huron peninsula and the Huron mountains; the Sturgeon river gorge; the charming Big Bay region; Gwin, the spotless town of Hiawatha land; gem-like Witch lake; Little Girl's Point, farther away from Detroit than in New York City; and many other things worth seeing.

It will be important to remember that the vast Lake Superior, extending 492 miles along Michigan's northern boundary, is the equalizer of the Upper Peninsula's summer climate. Hence take along your wraps! The evenings are always cool.

Summer Pruning Is Help To Berry Bushes

Canes of berry bushes, such as raspberries, blackberries, and dewberries, need summer pruning. R. E. Loree, of the Michigan State College horticulture department, reminds growers. Pruning not only induces sturdier cane growth, says Loree, but also increases the bearing surface of the canes.

Best time for pinching back the tips of the canes, says the horticulturist, is when they attain the desired height, varying from 18 inches to three feet, according to the kind and variety.

Black raspberries should be closest pruned, and purple raspberries and blackberries, longest. Pinching back the tips encourages growth of side branches, and consequent increase in fruiting. Another advantage of tip pinching is that the canes are sturdier, and can more easily withstand storms, weight of snow, and weight of fruit.

Preferred time for removal of canes that have fruited is a disputed question, but Loree advises that for most varieties, immediately after fruiting has ceased is the best time to take out these canes. Roots of bramble fruits are perennial, while canes are biennial. Removal of the canes after fruiting permits a better growth of the first year canes, while burning of the old canes may, in addition, destroy injurious insects and diseases. The canes are not tough, and are easier to remove at that time, and at the same time, removal makes cultivation easier.

Prompt removal of old canes immediately after harvest is especially important where the cane blight, gray bark fungus, or the raspberry mite is present. The mites are often found in large numbers on the old canes, which in case of serious infestation should be removed and burned, and the new growth sprayed three times with a good grade of summer oil. This oil should be mixed one gallon of oil in one hundred gallons of water, and applied five days apart.

Cane blight and gray bark are likely to attack Chief and Latham raspberries. Where these diseases are present the canes should be removed and burned. Cane blight cannot be controlled by spray, but gray bark can, by applying a lime sulphur solution in early spring.

After the removal of the old canes the field should be well cultivated two or three times; and after the last cultivation, a cover crop of oats, barley, millet or some other suitable annual plant should be seeded between the rows. The cover crop will check fall growth, induce early ripening of wood, and will hold leaves and snow. It also adds organic matter to the soil.

Children In Court

By Judge Malcolm Hatfield

Capitol and Labor

Many discussions concerning industrial disputes carried on in the homes of capitalists and laborers alike cannot be conducive to good citizenship when they are overheard by the children of those respective families.

Neither one of the parties concerned in these disputes can hope to make the relation of capital and labor a series of effects and causes which transpire outside the realm of the human will. The tragedy is that leaders on both sides sometimes ignore ethical obligations and attempt to avoid all reference to the personal moral problems which cannot be escaped in any private or public undertaking today.

As long as both capitalists and laborers ignore the difference between right and wrong, they cannot hope to instill in their sons and daughters the realization that those children owe a duty and an obligation to a Power that is higher and more eternal than any human squabble.

Threefold Responsibility

During the monthly meeting of a parent-teacher association, the question arose as to who was primarily responsible for the guidance of children? This question can best be answered by stating that the responsibility for guiding the child falls upon the community, the parents and upon the individual himself.

The community must provide children with decent surroundings, must set up institutions which will effectively cope with problems of education, health, recreation, etc.

Parents should not only provide children with the necessities of life, but should also see to it that they form correct ideas in regard to religion, conduct, tolerance, thoughtfulness and honesty. At no time should the attitude of parents be one of evasion or domination; this gives the child a feeling of insecurity. Parents should recognize the fact that many mechanical improvements, unknown when they were children, are now having their effect on the lives of modern youth. Many churches which no longer play a part in each community have been supplanted by other agencies. The modern child must confront greater temptations than those which beset his parents, who lived in small rural communities.

Each individual must assume the responsibility guiding his own destiny. He must be taught to differentiate between loose thinking and the truth. He must be trained to think in terms of his own responsibility towards the group of which he is a member; he must also be able to control his own secret urges and subject them to the best interests of the community.

New Ice Cream Flavors Developed At M. S. C.

Have you ever tried an ice cream flavored with root beer?

That was an experiment included in a series which the dairy department at Michigan State College has been conducting over a period of 12 years.

Frankly, the first test was a failure, admits P. S. Lucas, of the college dairy department. When the trial batch was tried out on students in one of the college dormitories he nearly had to leave town temporarily because the product tasted more like cough syrup than like root beer. The remedy was a different flavoring with less cassafra.

Scores of experiments with ice cream flavorings have been attempted and many of these have been adopted by the ice cream industry.

Some of the successful and popular recipes have included coconut cream, gooseberry, peanut butter, Brazil nuts and caramel, pumpkin and taffy.

In general any fruit eaten normally with cream makes a good flavoring for ice cream, but the more sour flavorings are not suitable except for use in ice sherbets, concludes Professor Lucas.

One of the problems as yet unsolved has been to get a satisfactory peach flavor. The oil carrying the flavor is largely in the skin. Lucas has put as much as three gallons of peaches in five gallons of ice cream mix and still the flavor has failed him. In another attempt he tried grated peelings but that failed to score.

Ice cream usually is eaten in bites which are at a temperature of 15 degrees Fahrenheit or 15 above zero. This desensitizes partially the taste buds in the mouth and adds to the perplexing problem of incorporating a pleasing and recognizable flavor.

RIEMENSCHNEIDER REUNION

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Riemschneider entertained 45 members of the Riemschneider family on Saturday for their 16th annual reunion, guests being present from Akron, Ohio, Stockbridge, Munith and Chelsea.

The address of welcome was given by Walter Riemschneider and the program following the cooperative dinner consisted of music by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Brossamle, and talks by Stanley Hewett and P. M. Brossamle. M. W. McClure was chosen president, and Mrs. McClure secretary, while the invitation to meet at their home for the 1941 reunion was accepted. Miss Betty Kalmbach was appointed chairman of the program committee.

SCHLICHT-FELDKAMP REUNION

The 23rd annual Schlicht-Feldkamp reunion, held on Sunday at Sedgwick, Pleasant lake, Freedom, was attended by 100 members.

A pot-luck dinner was served at 1 o'clock, games being played during the afternoon.

Officers elected to arrange for the 1941 reunion are:

President—George Buss, Manchester.

Vice-president—Glenn Feldkamp, Manchester.

Secretary—Mrs. Edwin Horning, Chelsea.

Treasurer—Mrs. Wilbert Buss, Manchester.

Sports Committee—Harold Buss, Mrs. Harold Eisenman, Mrs. Nathan Alper, J. C. Miller.

Table Committee—Mrs. Clarence Schlicht, Mrs. Walter Beutler, Mrs. Albert Feldkamp.

Mrs. Hattie Landwehr, 82, of Jackson, was the oldest member present; Pauline Buss, six months, of Manchester, the youngest.

The next reunion will be held at the same place.

MRS. MARY M. MULLEN

Mrs. Mary M. Mullen, a former Chelsea resident, died Friday, August 2, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Alice Girard, 3119 Crane Ave., Detroit.

She was born September 13, 1855 in Guelph, Ontario, the daughter of Martha and Catherine Ryan Breitenbach. In 1863 she came to Michigan with her parents who settled in Lyndon township. In 1873 she was married to James T. Mullen, who had come to Lyndon in 1845 from Staten Island, N. Y.

The family lived at Sugar Loaf lake until 1888 when they moved to Chelsea, where Mr. Mullen was employed by the Michigan Central Railroad until his death in 1908. For several years Mrs. Mullen had resided in Detroit.

To this union were born 11 children, five of whom survive. They are: John and Henry Mullen, Mrs. Girard and Mrs. Ross Newcombe of Detroit, and Mrs. Anne Barth of Lima township.

She also leaves two sisters, St. Mary of St. Winifred, San Jose, Costa Rica, Central America, and Mrs. Ella Sumner of Chelsea; two brothers, James Breitenbach of Battle Creek and Martin Breitenbach of Lansing; and seven grandchildren.

Funeral services were held at 10 o'clock Monday forenoon at St. Mary church, with Rev. Lawrence Derr officiating. Interment was in Mt. Olivet cemetery.

Eradication of Vermin Is Serious Problem

Vermin—bedbugs and body lice—are a cause of constant concern to the housewife who opens her home to transients, or who houses transient hired help. Vermin are difficult to control, since eradication, to be effective, must be complete. One or two specimens, or a few eggs, overlooked, will produce a new crop.

Adult bedbugs are mahogany brown and are usually about a quarter of an inch long, wingless, and the mouth parts are for piercing and sucking. They attack their victims at night, disturbing their rest, and in many instances, poisoning the system.

Entomologists at Michigan State College report it is possible to control a light infestation of bedbugs with kerosene impregnated with pyrethrum. To do so, they advise, use one half pound pyrethrum "Flora grade" to each gallon of kerosene, stir, and allow the mixture to stand for 24 hours. Then pour off the clear liquid to be used as an insecticide. Inject a liberal quantity of the liquid back of the woodwork and into the crevices of furniture. Thoroughly brush the tufts of the mattresses as well as the seams and folds, and treat with some preparation that will not injure the covering. Usually one of the commercial preparations of pyrethrum is recommended for this purpose.

Body lice and head lice can be controlled by an emulsion made by mixing kerosene and soft soap, or kerosene and olive oil. Shampoo the hair with the emulsion, and wrap the head with a towel. After about an hour remove the shampoo and wash in the usual manner, then wash the hair in water with enough vinegar to loosen the nits. Rub the hair dry and comb with a fine tooth comb. Hats, caps, and other head covering should be treated to prevent further infestation.

Co-eds "Take Chance"

A "desire census" taken on the campus of Pomona college, Claremont, Calif., revealed the fact that co-eds certainly get a kick out of taking a chance on a "blind date." Out of 292 women polled, only 58 opposed it on the grounds of "fear of the unknown." The other 234 expressed willingness to "take a chance."

For the past several weeks I have been writing about traffic signs. Knowledge of their meaning is very important in safe driving.

Some communities overdo the matter of traffic signs. Some authorities do not seem to realize that if a STOP or SLOW sign is really not needed, it just causes unnecessary delay and, what's more, leads people to become careless and disregard other essential signs.

Where there is carelessness and signs are disobeyed, accidents follow. Signs should also be kept up. Weather-beaten and poorly painted signs should be repaired immediately so motorists can readily see what the law asks them to do.

'Latest' Fashion in Dogs

Dates Back 5,000 Years

In an odd tie-up between the present and the distant past, archaeologists excavating near Mosul, in Iraq, have found exact carved depictions of a breed of dogs, the Saluki, which only recently has become one of the outstanding features of dog shows and canine clubs.

Shows and canine clubs, of "new" dog of fashion proves, therefore, to be an old breed, for the carvings found in the Near East are 5,000 years old.

Important persons in those far-off times in the Near East wore on strings around their necks small stone buttons or disks on which were carved the representations of some object. To "sign" their name they simply pressed these seals into the soft clay on which writing was done in those days.

The favorite among seal objects appears to have been the tall, slim and uncommonly graceful animal used in hunting, the Saluki. And this same Saluki today saunters behind the Arab as he strolls through the bazaars. Or as the Arab strikes his water pipe in the coffee house the Saluki lies gracefully at his feet.

This and That

By Gerald K. Miller

These next few years will tell the story of the continuation or decline of our great democracy. The chance of actual warfare is small. Hitler will have too much respect for our military forces to risk war but we do face an economic war, more terrible to combat and more fateful in effect because it is unseen.

Whether Great Britain stands or falls, the totalitarian states will attempt to secure the commerce of the whole world. Right now they control virtually all Europe, the richest market in the world, and by barrier, force and slave labor of the conquered nations, can easily compete with the United States in our own hemisphere.

Another stumbling block to the United States securing South American trade is our high standard of living. Being away above other countries, our prices are higher. As an exceptional example Germany, shortly before the war began, shipped munitions and farm machinery to South America to the value of $50,000,000. The same merchandise from the United States would have cost the South American country $200,000,000. For us to compete with this foreign trade this price difference must be reduced.

Therefore we must decide if we wish to export or not to export. If we decide not to export, we must prepare to take care of additional millions of workers and their families who will be thrown out of work by our loss of trade. Supporting these millions more of unemployed will take billions more of money; thus, lowering our standard of living and leaving us worse off than before.

If we wish to export in competition to the totalitarian states, we must either subsidize the exporting firms or lower wages. Subsidy or lower wages means the same thing to you or me. It takes our money from us. But subsidizing exports will not put additional men to work, merely keep us at the level we are now, and it will take billions of dollars yearly in taxes.

Too long have we attempted to survive by "getting something for nothing." The world or the United States "owes" no man a living. The quicker we rid ourselves of these false philosophies, the quicker we can face the facts. The only way we can save democracy is by hard work and sacrifice. If democracy is not worth saving, we may as well turn our government over to Hitler now. If it is worth while, we must do the following: First, lower wages so we can compete with other countries; second, increase working hours to 48 a week; third, increase income and excess profits taxes so those not on salaries shall be reduced the same as those on salaries; fourth, reduce public and private debts in same ratio as wages are reduced. Then, and only then, will we be able to compete with totalitarian governments and by increased production, put our millions of unemployed back to work.

Can we do it? The totalitarian governments believe that we are too soft. If we try they are all ready by means of their control of large groups of labor and by fifth column activities to start a revolution that will put the United States in their hands without them firing a shot.

Can we do it? We can if we believe everything our forefathers fought and died for, everything we have lived for and everything we have hoped for our children was worthwhile.

Marie Roland

Mme. Jean Marie Roland, nee Marine Jeanne Philpon, motioned one Lamarche to precede her to the French political guillotine in Paris, saying: "You would not have strength enough to see me die." Then, mounting the platform herself to suffer the fate of all nationalists in revolution, she looked over at a statue of liberty and uttered an immortal phrase that keeps the name of Mme. Roland alive: "Oh, Liberty, how many crimes are committed in thy name!" After her death her husband killed himself. "I would not remain any longer in a world so stained with crime."

Annual World Precipitation
The annual precipitation over all of the oceans amounts to 99,000 cubic miles of water, according to estimates compiled by Dr. George F. McEwen of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography at La Jolla, Calif. The annual evaporation from the ocean surface is 99,000 cubic miles, so that the runoff from the land amounts to 8,000 cubic miles. The energy consumed in the process involves an expenditure of 500,000 horsepower from the sun for every square mile of the earth's surface.

Church Ball League

(By William Rademacher)

Attention! Church softball games will be played on Friday of this week instead of the usual Wednesday.

St. Mary's, recent league leader and surprise of the first round of play in the league, was pushed further down the ladder by a spirited band of St. Paul players. It was a nip and tuck affair all the way, with St. Paul's scoring the winning marker in the seventh inning in this fashion—Earl Grieb, first up, grounded back to Pitcher Rademacher, who threw to first and Firstbaseman Policht dropped the ball. Grieb went to second on a passed ball. Schneider was passed intentionally, Strieter struck out and Novess dropped a short pop-fly into center to score the run that meant victory for St. Paul's, 18-17.

Congregational finally had a full team out at the field and, although they were defeated by the Methodists by quite a large score, they showed enough to merit consideration in the play-offs which start a week from next Wednesday.

Standings	W	L	Pct.
Methodist	6	1	.857
St. Mary	4	3	.571
St. Paul	4	3	.571
Congregational	0	7	.000

The play-offs, which start Wednesday, August 21, match the teams that finish first and fourth, and the teams that finish second and third. The winners of these two games will then meet on August 28 (Wednesday) to decide the championship.

There hasn't been many spectators at any of the games this year, and the fellows wanted me to mention it, and for the remainder of the league schedule and the play-offs we would like to see a goodly crowd out there. You'll see some fine fast games of softball free of charge, and at the same time show your loyalty to the boys of Chelsea.

NYA Baseball News

(By Charles Bahnmiller)

Winning two games this past week the local nine held on to the leadership of the league, with a standing of .910 per cent, having won 10 games and lost one.

Tuesday, July 30—Playing Dexter for the last time this season, the Chelsea nine went on a rampage, fattening their batting average to the tune of 16 hits, counting for 16 runs. The defeat was one of the bitterest lads from Dexter had encountered all season.

The game was a fine exhibition of team play on the part of Chelsea. The fielding held up good, and Rossbach and Policht, pitching for Chelsea, again turned in a masterpiece, allowing Dexter no runs and only 4 well scattered hits.

The big guns in the batting department were Mr. Miller, Policht, Schneider and Rossbach, the former three connecting for three well socked hits. The final score: Chelsea, 16 runs, 15 hits; Dexter, 0 runs, 4 hits.

Thursday, Aug. 1—Game scheduled with Manchester was forfeited to Chelsea as Manchester failed to appear on the field. It is too bad that Manchester failed to come over because the Chelsea lads were all keyed up to lick their very pants off, as is the usual custom when Chelsea encounters Manchester in the field of sports. The boys were eager to avenge the one and only defeat of the season suffered at Manchester, which Chelsea dropped 1 to 0, outplaying Manchester for seven innings, only to lose in extra innings on a very freak bit of play, in which the boys from over south pushed across a run to win the game.

Notice—Thursday night, the last game will be played at Ypsilanti. From there Chelsea goes to the State finals in Lansing. Players be at the school Wednesday, August 14 at 12:00 noon to go to Detroit.

Society of Friends
George Fox was 19 when he felt the call to preach which resulted in his arrest for disturbing the peace and his establishment of the Society of Friends (Quakers). "Priests, lawyers and soldiers were all obnoxious to him," says a biographer. Consequently, every type of persecution was practiced on the sect in England and the American colonies; for a long time it was a worse crime to be a Quaker than a thief. William Penn was jailed because he was a Quaker; this induced him to come to America. Numbers of Quaker men were put to death in Massachusetts; in New Hampshire Quaker women were stripped and whipped from one town to another, for Quakers were the first to acknowledge the equality of men and women in religion and allow women to preach.

Twilight Ball League

(By Roland Spaulding)

With the end of the season approaching rapidly and the final play-offs drawing near it looks as if the big battle for third place and the playoffs is on. Federal Screw, Chelsea Spring and Hi-Speed are about neck and neck. Any of the scheduled games from now on are sure to be real bang-up and drag 'em out games.

Incidentally, Spaulding Chevrolet and Cassidy Lake Tech. have a game coming up next Tuesday that is sure to be quite a game. Remember that Cassidy Lake Tech. is the only team that has been able to defeat Spaulding team. Just a tip—the fur ought to fly fast and furious at this game. You surely shouldn't miss it!

Schedule
Thursday, Aug. 8—Hi-Speed vs. Cassidy Lake Tech.
Monday, Aug. 12—Cassidy Lake Fac. vs. Federal Screw.
Tuesday, Aug. 13—Spaulding Chev. vs. Cassidy Lake Tech.

Rats for Serum Tests

The United States public health service, facing a shortage of imported monkeys because of the war, has successfully conducted infantile paralysis serum experiments on eastern cotton rats. "The discovery is especially timely since the war will interfere with the importation of monkeys, which to date have been the only susceptible experimental animals for infantile paralysis," Surgeon-General Thomas Parran said. Dr. Parran said that the virus which causes the disease has been carried through seven transfers in the rodents. Symptoms produced in the rats were identical to those observed in children in that one or more of the limbs or respiratory muscles were paralyzed, he said. "The discovery of a cheap, easily handled experimental animal that can be readily reared in captivity may be expected to facilitate further studies of infantile paralysis, including the search for a possible cure."

Removing Wallpaper Stains

Rather than allow unsightly ink stains to mar the appearance of a wall, it is well worth the trouble of attempting their removal. To do this, mix one ounce of chloride of lime, well pulverized, in two ounces of distilled water, let stand 24 hours, strain through cotton cloth, then add two to 15 drops of commercial acetic acid to each teaspoonful of the solution. Apply this liquid to the spots only, using a camel's hair artists' pencil. After a moment or two lay a piece of clean white blotting paper over the spot to absorb the liquid. If one application does not remove the ink apply the liquid again.

Insulated Wall Board

The use of insulating board in home construction lowers the surface temperature of the walls in summer and thus has an added effect on comfort, because the cooler walls the cooler one feels. In winter the phenomenon is reversed. The walls are warmer and consequently help to increase the sensation of warmth.

CHELSEA BAKERY

There
in an Emergency

Ships carry life preservers although they may never be needed and they are inspected at regular periods to assure their readiness in an emergency. There is a parallel in our Prescription Laboratory. We carry hundreds of drugs, herbs, and chemicals. Some are used daily. Others are needed once in a blue moon but they are there, ready for the emergency that calls for them. Our complete list is gone over regularly and those items that might be impaired with the passing of time are weeded out and replaced with fresh stock.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Charming, wealthy Gabriella (Gay for short) Graham, engaged to be married to a young doctor whom she had known in previous years. Soon after arriving at the cottage Gay discovered his identity through an old friend, Uncle John Lawrence. The two girls met immediately that someone had been and was living in the cabin. Kate suspects that Gay knows the identity of the mysterious occupant.

CHAPTER II—While the girls talk the mystery man returns. Gay, surprisingly enough, introduces the man to her. He is John Lawrence, a young doctor whom Gay had known in previous years. Soon after arriving at the cottage Gay discovered his identity through an old friend, Uncle John Lawrence. The two girls met immediately that someone had been and was living in the cabin. Kate suspects that Gay knows the identity of the mysterious occupant.

CHAPTER III—Before he leaves, John goes for a walk. When he returns he finds Gay sitting before the fireplace. They begin talking on a more friendly basis, and she asks him to reconsider his decision to leave. The next morning brings a different feeling, and John decides to remain for his vacation one more week.

CHAPTER IV—The night before Gay and Kate are to return home to New York John gets an urgent request from a mysterious man. Gay accompanies him while he goes for the patient. Returning to the cabin at a late hour, John stops the car. He tells Gay that he loves her, and she admits that it is necessary to her happiness.

CHAPTER V—Meanwhile, worried by their absence, Kate has called Todd, a janitor in New York. She knows that Gay and John feel a strong attachment for each other, and she wants to know where they are. He can talk to Gay. Todd arrives while Kate is alone. She breaks the news to him. Todd, warm hearted and generous, is heart-sick but refuses to become melodramatic.

CHAPTER VI—Gay and John, who have been canoeing, return to the cabin, there to find Todd. John leaves temporarily and Gay tells Todd that she has fallen in love with John. Todd, understanding that it is unavoidable, tells her he is still her best friend. Gay realizes that Todd will always be her friend, and that if she ever needs help she has but to turn to him.

He laid her hands gently in her lap, rose, walked to the fire-place, stood with his back to her, lighting a cigarette. When he turned, his face was peaceful.

"I like him, you know," he smiled wearily through the smoke from the cigarette. "That put me at a disadvantage. I can't offer to knock his head off. I couldn't anyway. He's bigger than I am. It's all right, Gay."

"Is it?" Her voice was wistful. "I'm so fond of you, I think of riding our ponies together and Miss Kitty's dancing class and your first boat and tea-dances and football games and skiing and house parties at Princeton."

His smile wavered. "And it doesn't do any good?"

Her eyes fell away from his face, less peaceful now, drawn with fatigue and pain.

"It only makes me more certain," she said, scarcely audibly.

He drew a long, shaken breath. "Well, that's that. Glancing up she saw the corners of his lips lift in a difficult smile. "I should say, now, in a husky voice but with a smile, that I'll always love you, little girl, and if you ever need me or want me—" His voice altered. "I do say it, Gay. I've had considerable experience getting you out of scrapes. If you ever need me—"

"You're a dear, Todd. I wish—" He flung the cigarette into the fire, went to the couch, dropped down beside her, drew her close in a strong embrace.

"Gay, darling, can't you?" his lips whispered against her cheek.

She put aside his eager arms. Her hands lifted to his face. Her eyes met his, bright, now, with a sort of despairing hope that moved her to pity, gentleness, poignant regret.

"Todd, Todd, darling," she said. "I wish I could—"

Gay opened the kitchen door, stepped outside, closed the door cautiously. John's figure detached itself from shadows at the edge of the clearing. She ran to meet him coming to meet her. His arms caught her, lifted her, set her feet on the ground.

"I hoped you would come," he said, his lips against her cheek.

"I shouldn't have. Kate heard me. I know, though she pretended to be asleep. And Todd feels so badly. I can't think of him. I can't think of anything except being with you." Her eyes lifted above his shoulder. "The moon," she cried softly, breathlessly.

Southampton, I suppose. They'll be moving into the city, though, now that there isn't to be a wedding. Dad and Aunt Flora may not open the town house this winter. They're thinking of staying on at 'Dunedin.' I want to be where time will pass quickly. I don't know."

"When you talk of your family—" John paused.

"What?" she asked quickly. "You sound—"

"I lose you," he said diffidently. "Here we are so close. When you go away—I can't even imagine what your life is there. If I could say every hour during the day, now Gay, she's playing tennis, now she's having lunch, now she's walking down town to get a soda—at the drug-store, I would feel closer to you. But I can't imagine your life. It wouldn't be more difficult if you were a Chinese princess. It's just—I've nothing to go by," he finished lamely.

"You still resent me, don't you?" she asked.

"Not you as you are here with me."

"My life, then. I saw it tonight, when Todd and I talked of mutual acquaintances, of things that were happening in New York."

"But I was afraid—Seeing him here with you—He's known you all ways. You have things in common. And he is attractive—I was jealous and I despised myself for being jealous. He gave a short, mirthless laugh. "I was—stuffy, wasn't I?"

"You were and it was silly of you."

"I know. I'm sorry, and ashamed."

"I can't discard the years before now all at once as a snake sheds its skin."

"Of course you can't. I'm unreasonable. But when I've nothing to go by—"

"I'll give you something. Every hour of every day we're apart you can say, 'Wherever Gay is she's loving me and thinking of me and wanting time to pass quickly.'"

"Sweet!" His voice trembled. "I love you so."

"And I love you. Remember that and nothing can spoil it. Nothing!"

CHAPTER VII

Gay roused at a touch on her shoulder. She opened her eyes and blinked up into the pleasant placid face of Mathilde, her mother's middle-aged maid. For an instant she lay drowsily smiling, not fully awake, then her eyes widened, she sat erect.

"What time is it?" she asked.

"Half past seven, Miss Gay," the woman said, smiling. "You asked to be wakened."

"There'd have been murder done if I hadn't been," Gay tossed back the covers and swung herself into a sitting position on the side of the bed.

"It's showing," Mathilde held a blue silk negligee embroidered with daisies, knelt with blue satin mules for Gay's feet.

"Grand! A white Christmas," Gay drew the negligee around her, wiggled her feet into the mules. "That makes everything practically perfect."

"Your bath is ready," Mathilde smiled at Gay's excitement. "Will you have a breakfast tray?"

"Orange juice and coffee," Gay disappeared into the bathroom. "I won't have time for anything else."

On the walls of the bathroom wild orchids grew lush among tropical trees. The alcove in which the tub was set was paneled with mirrors. Gay, splashing vigorously, made none of her customary mental observations upon the results achieved by the young interior decorator who was her mother's latest protégée. All of her attention was centered upon the fact, incredible but excitingly true, that John was arriving in New York on this morning of Christmas Eve, for a holiday visit.

"Noel, Noel," she sang, rubbing herself with a soft warmed towel, or an instant the song recalled the Christmas Eve she'd spent at school in Switzerland. She'd like to go into a Catholic church this evening, at twilight, a French Catholic church, where candle-light would shine on brightly-painted figures in the manger scene and a choir would sing the carol, running now, through her mind. That symbolized Christmas for her, had as far back as she could remember, before the school in Switzerland, since Made-moiselle Dupin, the governess of whom she'd been fond, had taken her, as a child, to her church on succeeding Christmas Eves.

Back into the bedroom again, Mathilde had laid out her underthings. "Noel, Noel—" she sang dealing hurriedly with chiffon and silk. She stood before the row of hangers in the wardrobe. "So the keynote is simplicity." How long ago that seemed! She selected a kit-ten's fur, the darker gray fur coat, the fur cap to match it which made her look like a Russian princess. As she sat at the dressing-table pinning red-brown curls in at the nape of her neck Mathilde came in with the tray.

"Would you like me to ring for Carl?" she asked, placing the tray on a low table beside the window looking out over the river.

"No, I'll use a taxi." She didn't want her first moments with John to be spent under the discreet but interested scrutiny of Carl's lively blue eyes, behind Carl's attentive whipcord back. The servants both here and at "Dunedin" were curious about John. No wonder, after what they'd heard and seen when she and Kate returned from Maine. Not that she cared, especially, but if it could be avoided—

"It's eight o'clock, Miss Gay," Mathilde, hovering, said.

"Is it? Good Heavens! I must fly." She slipped into the coat Mathilde held, tilted the fur cap over one eye, caught up purse and gloves, paused for an instant to admire her reflection in the mirror and went hurrying out of the room.

Lights glowed in the hall of the apartment. Her step-father called to her through the open door of the dining-room.

"Good-morning," she said, standing poised for flight in the doorway.

"It's the early bird that catches the worm," Robert-Cameron, in a silk dressing gown with a scarf knotted under his chin twinkled at her somewhat sleepily over a section of melon.

"Worm!" she exclaimed. "I hate you. Aren't you up rather early yourself?"

"I didn't heed the side," he said mock-tragically. "I failed to do my Christmas shopping early."

"Poor Robert!" Gay smiled. Though to her father's family it was a mystery, she understood very well why her mother had married Robert. He had, as her mother had, an ingenious zest for living. He was no longer the handsome figure of a man-about-town he had been when he became her step-father. He was getting stout and somewhat florid, and his blond hair was receding at the temples, but his spirit was buoyant, his nature restfully uncomplicated and his enjoyment of good food, good sport and gay company remained undiminished. He was kind, and fond of her. His expression, now, as he looked at her across a lace and silver and crystal flowers which splintered the light into glittering sparkles, was admiring and interested.

"Go to it, kid," he said. "I'm all for romance myself. If you need moral support you can count on Uncle Robert."

He was a dear or maybe in her blissful state she felt tender toward all the world. She blew him a kiss and went on along the hall.

In the drawing-room Sukki was hanging wreaths made of silver leaves and bunches of blue glass berries. She knew it was Sukki because Togo's province was the kitchen. It occurred to her that it was a little incongruous that small heathen Sukki with his flat lemon-colored face and black bead eyes should be decorating the apartment for a Christian festival.

What would John make of it all, of Sukki and Togo who had been with Robert for years, of Mathilde whom her mother had brought back from France, of her mother, of Robert, of Christmas Eve at the apartment? What would he make of the Victorian elegance of "Dunedin" when they went tomorrow? Could he, as she did, ignore Aunt Flora's disapproval, the curious but premeditated coolness of the relatives who would be there? Panic seized her again. Her spirits sank with the descent of the elevator. She regretted, for an instant, that John was coming. Now, at this moment, while their meeting was still in the future, the feeling they had for each other was secure. Now—

But that was absurd. She shook off frightening fancies. Her spirits lifted when the Negro doorman opened the door for her.

"Merry Christmas, William."

"White Christmas, Miss Graham."

"It's nice, isn't it?"

"Luck to certain." The Negro's face was lit by an ivory grin. "Good times comin' pretty soon."

The train from Boston, unless it was late, was already in. Gay made her way through the concourse of the station toward the gate where John would be waiting. Expectancy gave wings to her feet. She hurried on, jostling and being jostled, heedless of admiring glances cast at her, impatient of any delay. Then through people passing, she saw him and reluctance checked her eagerness. Her flying pace slackened. She advanced slowly, caught in panic again, walking mechanically, all feeling suspended.

He did not see her. He stood beside the gate, his eyes searching through the groups that eddied past him. But was that John? She hadn't remembered it was the overcoat he wore which made him in the tall. She'd never seen him in the winter before. The new hat he wore was not becoming. She didn't know him. It wasn't that tall young man, obviously ill at ease, whom she had come to meet. She couldn't move or speak to him. She felt paralyzed, frozen inside.

He saw her and smiled. She started toward him as he started toward her.

"Hello." He removed his hat, smiling diffidently.

"Hello." Her voice sounded thin and unnatural. She felt her mouth stretch in a mechanical smile. He bent to kiss her. She lifted her face. A redcap, carrying luggage, edged toward him as he started toward her.

She felt paralyzed, frozen inside.

bumped into them so that his lips, gleamingly, touched her cheek.

"We must find a taxi." She did not look at him. "I didn't bring a car."

His hand cupped her elbow but she led the way. A porter followed with his luggage. "Did you have a good trip?" she asked after an interval of silence.

"Not bad. We were on time."

"I'm sorry I was delayed. I left the apartment in time but traffic was heavy."

"That's all right. I haven't waited long."

They stood waiting for the porter to call a taxi.

"How are you?" he asked.

She glanced up at him, then quickly away.

"Splendid, thank you. Isn't it nice to have snow?"

"If it keeps on like this the trains won't be coming in on time."

"No, probably not. Have you had breakfast?"

"No. It doesn't matter, though. I'm not hungry."

A taxi slid in beside them. The porter opened the door. John put her in, supervised the stowing of his luggage, sat beside her. The cab moved out into traffic. She glanced up at him. He was looking at her. The hurt bewilderment in his eyes, the difficult smile that moved across his lips, restored warmth and a feeling of tenderness.

"Hello!" she said softly.

"Hello!" His arms went around her. Their lips met and held. Presently she drew away.

"Is this scandalous behavior for New York?" His voice sounded happy, relieved.

"Who cares?" She winked to clear her vision. "Oh why are we always such idiots?"

"I didn't know you. You looked—I was terrified."

"Don't you like it either?" He turned to open the window. "We'll throw it out."

"Idiot!" She pressed close to him, her face against the rough cloth of his coat. "It's all right, isn't it?"

"The hat? You change your mind?"

"Us, I mean—Your being here—We're going to have fun."

"Of course we are. Breakfast first, though. I wasn't hungry when you asked me, but I'm starving now."

"Are you?" She laughed. "So am I. Let's send your luggage out to Mother's apartment and stay down town all day. We'll have breakfast at Child's and walk in the snow and drop quarters in all the Santa Claus kettles and sing carols on street corners and—"

"You darling! I'm so happy, so glad to be here."

"Are you? Darling! John!"

John got up as Gay's mother rose from the love-seat on which they sat.

"So I suppose I'll have to forgive you," she said, smiling up at him with Gay's smile and Gay's trick of crinkling her eyes. "I was prepared to dislike you intensely."

"Now, Kitty," her husband said with indulgent fondness, "you've never disliked anybody. It's your all-inclusive love for your fellow-men which keeps getting you into trouble."

"That's unkind of you, Robert," she linked her arm through her husband's. "What will John think of me?"

"I think you are very kind," he said, realizing that the reply was inadequate, seeing and resenting the amusement in her deep blue eyes, so like Gay's.

"Kindness is an endearing trait in a mother-in-law," Robert Cameron said cheerfully. "He consulted his watch. "My dear, we must be on our way."

The Japanese house-boy came into the room. She spoke to him about calling for the car. John watched her pleasant manner with the servant. She was prettier than Gay, he thought, but less beautiful, smaller, softer, more rounded. Her hair, which had been dark was, prematurely, turning white. Cut short and curled, it looked like a wig for fancy dress rather than a symbol of age. Her skin, in the diffused light which filled the long high-ceilinged room, had a honey-colored tint and her small pretty mouth was painted the exact shade of the coral azalea against her shoulder. She didn't look like anybody's mother. It was difficult to realize, in spite of certain points of resemblance, that she bore so close a relationship to Gay.

She turned to him as the house-boy slid noiselessly out of the room. "We must get acquainted tomorrow," she said, laying a small jeweled hand on his arm. "But no—I you and Gay will be leaving for 'Dunedin' fairly early. Christmas dinner, there, is always at two." She glanced up at her husband, smiling through narrowed eyes.

"If we're to see any of the first act at all—" her husband said a trifle hastily.

"Yes, darling," she turned again to John. "Perhaps we'll see you later. If not, good-night. Sukki will take care of you. You are very welcome here. We want you to feel at home."

He would like to feel at home. But how could he, how could anybody feel at home in this room? It was as artificial as the silvered wreaths which hung in the windows, as the Christmas tree, silvered too, reflecting its fantastic dazle of blue lights and twisted glass icicles in a wall formed by strips of chromium.

"Well, what do you make of it?" He turned, guiltily, conscious of some possible rudeness, then relaxed. Gay was walking toward him, so lovely in the dress of deep blue velvet she'd worn at dinner that his breath caught in his throat. She came up to where he stood and slipped her hand through his arm.

"What were you thinking?" she asked, smiling up at him with amusement in her eyes. "You looked startled when I spoke to you."

"I was afraid someone had caught me being critical of the decorations." He turned again to the panel above the fire. "What is it?" he asked. "Flowers? Fruit?"

"It's a color note," her smile deepened.

"Then it doesn't mean anything?"

"Not to me. Don't puzzle your head over it, my sweet. If you do, you'll go quietly mad." She led him to the davenport which stood facing the fire. He sank down beside her into soft leather upholstery. "Mother had all this done to occupy her mind when she found she hadn't a wedding to arrange. Besides Cedric needed the money."

"The earnest young man who had the brainstorm. It has made him. He has more commissions than he can handle. He regards Kitty as a cross between Lady Bountiful and a fairy with a wand, which is very flattering, of course. Now did you get on with her?"

"She asked the question lightly, but he felt her waiting a little apprehensively for his reply."

"She's lovely to look at," he said guardedly, "and very kind."

Gay looked up at him. "But—I want you to tell me what you think of everything. No reservations. They lead to misunderstandings." Her face was grave. "Be frank with me, John."

"I'll try to be frank. It sounds ridiculous, I know, but I think I'd feel more comfortable if she hadn't received me so courteously."

"Why? By gracing myself to face the opposition I expected, it's a fit the disconcerting to have your mother, figuratively, at least receive me with open arms."

She laughed in genuine amusement. "Did you want to fight dragons, darling?"

"I suppose I did." He laughed with her.

"Well, cheer up. There's Aunt Flora in the office."

"Who is Aunt Flora? Is she a dragon?"

"She's my father's sister, a widow. She's lived with him since Mother's defection. No, she isn't a dragon. She's pathetic, really. She persists in observing the convention of a polite world of society which is past and gone. And she expects other people to observe them. She won't receive you with open arms. Not that she blames you for the recent catastrophe, though. She tells me that I am my mother's daughter."

"You aren't like your mother, except in certain superficial points of physical resemblance."

She looked at him, considering, looked away.

"Have I offended you?" he asked, realizing that he had spoken with more warmth than the comment required. "I didn't mean—Your mother is charming."

"I wasn't offended," she took his hand in hers. "I was wondering how I could explain Mother to you. No, I'm not like her. I wish I were. Mother is really very logical. When places or people bore her she sees no reason why she should pretend that they mean anything to her. She was bored with Dad and so she divorced him and married Major Summerfield."

"You mean—Mr. Cameron is her third husband? I heard her speak of a Major Summerfield at dinner, but I had no idea—"

"She's on friendly terms with both Dad and the Major," Gay said, but her smile wavered a little. "She doesn't dislike them because they bore her. She was very sorry to have had to hurt them but she saw no reason in continuing a relationship which was no longer agreeable. You look horrified, John." She dropped his hand. "I don't suppose you can understand."

"I was, thinking how—confusing it must have been for you," he said slowly.

"It was, until I was old enough to understand Mother's point of view. Now, it's all very simple. Mother has never cared deeply for anyone. It isn't in her nature to cling to things, though she's loyal in her way, and generous and kind. That's why she looks as she does. She has no regrets for anything that has happened. She gave Dad a great deal of happiness while she was his wife, the Major, too, I suppose, though I was with them very little. Robert adores her. She changed her position and laughed. "How solemn we're being! We weren't solemn today. Did you enjoy seeing New York in a snowstorm?"

"I enjoy being with you wherever you are, though 'enjoy' is much too polite a word."

"Those first few days at the cabin—We were so polite to each other."

"I can barely remember. I wish we were there now."

"So do I. Thinking of the woods in a snow-storm makes all this seem like a stage-setting, doesn't it? Do you remember when you asked me if I would love you when we were together in New York?"

"Yes—" He held her closer. "I was afraid to come."

"But you aren't afraid now."

"No. But I can't believe it's true."

"Dear, dear!" She lifted her head from his shoulder and, smiling, drew an exaggerated sigh. "Convincing you is certainly up-hill work. You're the most obstinate person I know."

"I guess you're right. I loved you pretty stubbornly for six years."

"It has its advantages, hasn't it?" She looked at him gravely, her eyes soft and bright. "I love you," she said.

He drew her close to him. "I love you," he said, his lips against her cheek.

At a repeated sound from behind them, Gay drew away somewhat hastily. John, too, turned. The Japanese house-boy, his face discreetly expressionless, stood just inside the room.

"What is it, Sukki?" Gay asked.

"Compliments, please. Gentlemen, ladies call up from below. Say send down elevator, please."

"Good-Heavens!" She looked at him in dismay. "I might have known—I should have told them we were going out to the country."

"Tell them now."

She shook her head. "Who is it, Sukki?"

"Miss Wales. Mrs. Howard Lady not say gentlemen's name."

"Send the elevator down."

The house-boy bowed himself out of the room. She turned to John. Her face cleared. She laughed. "You look frightened."

"I'm terrified."

"If I refused to let them meet you, they'd think you weren't presentable. I want them to meet you. I'm proud of you. You look grand in evening clothes. You ought to wear them always."

"I might get a job as a waiter."

He caught her hand. "I won't know what to say to them."

"[Idiot] What do you say to me?"

"I tell you I love you."

Her brows lifted. "You can omit that. Don't be frightened. They're really quite harmless."

"If you would coach me a little—"

"Oh, John!" She kissed him, but absently, he thought. Her expression was thoughtful, a little apprehensive as she pulled him up from the davenport, as they walked through soft glow of concealed lighting, through the frosty glitter of the Christmas tree toward the door to greet her friends.

CHAPTER VIII

The last record in the electric Victrola whirled to a stop. John led the small vivacious brunette with whom he had been dancing to the davenport facing the fire where he had sat with Gay.

"You're a wonderful dancer," she said, settling herself in a swirl of scarlet chiffon.

"You sound surprised," John smiled. "We aborigines who live in Maine don't confine our amusement to war dances, by any means."

She glanced at him doubtfully, then laughed. "The mystery is clearing up," she said.

"Mystery?"

"Well, we have wondered, you know," she went on with an air of artless frankness too deliberate to be entirely sincere. "Mean, Gay goes dashing off into the wilds and then comes home and breaks her engagement and won't tell us anything about you except that you're a doctor and her god-father's nephew. You can't imagine how curious we've been to meet you."

Here it was again. John had been obliged to respond to that approach many times during the evening as Gay's friends had arrived and departed in restless, animated groups. "You must find me very disappointing," he said, making no effort to rephrase a reply which, so far, had appeared to be adequate.

"Not at all." Her bright brown eyes sparkled at him through curling lashes. "Of course most of us met you at Gay's debutante party but we didn't—"

"Pay any attention to me?" He felt that his smile was becoming fixed.

"I'd meant to say that we didn't dream all this romance was brewing. It is romantic, you know. I mean you never expect such a thing to happen to one of your friends."

On the surface, at least, it was all very friendly. Perhaps he only imagined that under their apparently casual acceptance of him, these friends of Gay's were deliberately making him feel an outsider in subtle ways of which he was conscious but which he could not define. That was natural, he told himself. Todd Janeway was one of them. His name had been mentioned, during the evening, in connection with Christmas Eve of last year, with reference to the Army-Navy football game, in casual reminiscence. Todd's sister, Ellen, was here, the slight graceful girl in the tailored hat who, coming in with the good-looking red-haired boy in tweed,

On the surface, at least, it was all very friendly.

had explained that they were on their way out to the Janeway country place for Christmas.

"Don't you adore this apartment?" she was asking when he gave her his attention.

"It's very unusual."

"I'm crazy about it. I've been trying to persuade Mums and Dads to take a pent-house but they say they can't afford to sell the family museum even if anybody could be persuaded to buy it. We're practically paupers," she added cheekily. "Dads is loaded with foreign bonds and you know what they're worth now."

John wanted, very sincerely, to understand, if he could the point of view of these sleek, young people; though she was more intelligent than the girl who chattered beside him, it must, of necessity, be Gay's. It was a rare person who remained uninfluenced by the thought and behavior of his or her companions. You never entirely escaped the environment in which you had been reared. You were bound to the past by a thousand tenacious ties of habit, prejudice, affection, ties of which you were unaware, perhaps, until, confronted by some opposite idea, you felt them tugging you back into the safety of familiar ideas, values, habits. He'd felt them tugging when—

"I beg your pardon," he said, warned by a sustained upward inflection in his companion's voice that she had asked a question.

"It doesn't matter," he thought that she looked a little bored. Her eyes flicked past him toward his piano where the girl with auburn hair was singing, apparently for her own amusement since the group clustered about her continued to talk in staccato tones which carried across the room. "I asked you if you and Gay were spending tomorrow here or at her father's place in the country."

"In the country, I think," he wanted to add something to that. He wanted to apologize more fully for his inattention. What a dull lot she must think him. Not that he cared, except for Gay. He was as relieved as he felt his companion must be when he saw a group of four people come in from the hall and cross the room toward the davenport.

"We've been out on the terrace looking at the view," Tony Wales said as she came up to them. She dropped down on the davenport and a white fur coat, so soft that it crumpled like velvet as it fell, slid down over her bare brown shoulders and back.

"Your slippers are wet, Tony," her companion, the burly, well-groomed young Englishman who was her fiancé, said.

"Don't fuss, Hal. You can't yell an Indian with a little snow." She leaned back against the apricot leather of the upholstery and held up two fingers. Her fiancé put a cigarette between them.

The girl in red laughed. "Don't you talk the same language?" she asked.

"Well, you must admit that my English is a little different from Hal's," Tony Wales said, her light eyes, starting in contrast with her skin, twinkling with devious humor which reminded him of Kate. "When his family was here in October we practically had to use deaf and dumb signals. I'm—learning, though." She glanced up at her fiancé who smiled as though he found her very amusing, raised against the upholstery, graceful legs crossed, and made a half turn toward John, seated between her and the girl in red, who, now that reinforcements had arrived, showed no inclination to leave. "When are you planning to locate in New York, Dr. Houghton?"

STATE OF MICHIGAN

In the Circuit Court for the County of Washtenaw, In Chancery. Nathan Nixon and Orpha Nixon, his wife, Plaintiffs, vs. James Jones, William E. Johnson, Augustus Weidman, Augustus Widenmann, Augustus Widenmann, J. J. Widenmann, Jacob Kern, and their unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns, Defendants.

Order of Publication. At a session of said court held at the court house in the city of Ann Arbor in said county on the 23rd day of July, A. D. 1940:

Present: Honorable George W. Sample, Circuit Judge.

On reading and filing the bill of complaint in said cause and the affidavit of Orpha Nixon attached thereto, from which it satisfactorily appears to the court that the defendants above named, or their unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns, are proper and necessary parties defendant in the above entitled cause, and it further appearing that after diligent search and inquiry it cannot be ascertained, and it is not known whether or not said defendants are living or dead, or where any of them may reside if living, and if dead, whether they have personal representatives or heirs living or where they or some of them may reside, and further that the present whereabouts of said defendants are unknown, and that the names of the persons who are included therein without being named, but who are embraced therein under the title of unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns, cannot be ascertained after diligent search and inquiry;

On Motion of Burke and Burke, attorneys for plaintiffs, it is ordered that said defendants and their unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns, cause their appearance to be entered in this cause within three months from the date of this order, and in default thereof that said bill of complaint be taken as confessed by the said defendants, their unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns.

It is further ordered that within twenty days plaintiffs cause a copy of this order to be published in the Chelsea Standard, a newspaper printed, published and circulated in said county, each publication to be continued therein once in each week for six weeks in succession.

Question And Answer Dept.

Problem—In a recent baseball game in the Pacific Coast League there were three men on bases, with no outs. On the next ball pitched, an infielder executed a triple play unassisted. How was it done? (Answer elsewhere in this department).

Ques.—How can a person start a fire if they have no matches?
Ans.—There are two ways to start a fire if you have no matches. First, with a burning glass you can concentrate sunlight through it and set fire to paper or wood shavings. Second, with a piece of steel and a flinty stone you can easily strike a spark just as people did before matches were invented. With a little thin paper or very dry cotton to serve as tinder you can nurse this spark into a flame.

Ques.—What is it that makes butter when milk is churned?
Ans.—Cream makes the butter. Milk contains millions of little droplets of oil and fat. These are lighter than water but because they are so very small they float up in it very slowly. When you churn the milk all these little droplets get together and make the butter.

Ques.—I like your "Questions and Answers" very much, and now I would like to ask you to tell me on what day of the week I was born.
Ans.—Sorry, we cannot tell you, for the very obvious reason that you did not give us the date of your birth. Come again.

Ques.—How is the Associated Press news handled?
Ans.—The Associated Press is an organization of daily newspapers numbering about 2,000. Its news-dispatches are syndicated simultaneously to all its members and to appear in print on the same date.

Ques.—What is the origin of the expression "the ghost walks"?
Ans.—This phrase originated among theatrical people. Many years ago a company of strolling English players were rehearsing Shakespeare's "Hamlet." The actors had not received their pay for some time and were becoming rebellious. When the actor playing the part of Hamlet said of the ghost, "Perchance 'twill walk again," the man playing the ghost part replied: "No, I'll be d—d if the ghost walks again until our salaries are paid." Since then "the ghost walks" has meant that salaries are being paid.

Answer to problem—The batter makes a terrific line drive to the shortstop who was playing just a few feet from second base. He held on to the ball, stepped on second ahead of a runner who was trying to get back, and then ran down a runner who was trying to get back to first.

Ques.—Did the Federal Government ever borrow any money from foreign governments?
Ans.—Not since the Revolutionary War. In 1783 the last foreign loan was from France, and also about $175,000 from Spain. The Continental Congress borrowed some money from private bankers in Holland, but none from that government. During the Civil War, Secretary Chase tried to sell U. S. bonds in London and France, but the exchanges turned them down as it was too great a hazard.

Roll call: Yeas: Adam, Ahnemiller, Riker, Schenk, and Spaulding. Silent: Beach. Motion carried.

A motion was made by Adam and supported by Ahnemiller that the Adrian Building Company be granted a license to construct a retail gasoline station on their property at the northwest corner of the intersection of Main and Buchanan streets, provided, however, that such station be according to the plans and specifications submitted and further that such station be at least 25 feet from the curb line of Buchanan street and at least 40 feet from the curb line of Main street.

Roll call: Yeas: Adam, Ahnemiller, Riker, Nay, Schenk, Silent: Beach and Spaulding. Motion carried.

A motion was made by Beach and supported by Riker that the President be and is hereby authorized to purchase land in the name of the Village, which land shall be deemed necessary for a parking area, provided however that the Finance Committee shall concur with the President in approving the price to be paid for the said land.

Roll call: Yeas all. Motion carried.

A motion was made and carried to adjourn. 9:30 p. m.

Approved August 6, 1940.

W. Arnold Steger, Village Clerk.

Alfred D. Mayer, President.

New Fire Hose Nozzle

Developed primarily for use where water will be directed on or near live wires or electrical apparatus, a new fire-hose nozzle projects a stream that will not conduct electricity.

Moose Increase

A closed season on moose for the last two years has been having the desired effect. The big animals are increasing in number and last winter many young moose were observed by Nova Scotia rangers.

Slats' Diary

Sunday—1 and Jake and Blisters had a convulsion this p. m. and held a discussion of school which is so far off that it isn't a series. We adopted a platform that it is a bad and worse thing. But dissatisfied they insist on nothing we can do about it. If Mister Wilky or Mister Rosenfelt are again it we are for him.

Monday—They are going to be a leekshen which they call a pry mary here in are city before a long time. I don't know no thing for or vs. the thing but they is about 2 doz fellows a running for this and that with 1 wooden vote for none of same on a bet. No wonder the U. S. gets in to a bad fix.

Tuesday—1 and Jane have finely disassembled to get married when I get 21 provided she runs a neck and neck race with me in the matter of old age. So that is settled. Except that my asphelly have been that they are off apt to change there minds and be gone tomorrow from where they are at the day before.

Wednesday—The wedding have been declared off all redly. I met Elay and walked along by her and when we arrived at the drug store she said it are off hot and she are offe thursty and etc. So I bot her a sody and tuk a pop with my 16c. Then Jane hart to drop in and what could I do I ast you. So she dont even speak to me no more.

Thursday—The how hilde girl that helps Ma and Ant Emmy with the house isent as dum as she looks and scets. She busted a plate and when Ma told her that plate cant be match- ed no wheres she replide and sed well then she wont hart to buy a nother 1.

Friday—Ma awoke Pa up at 3 a. m. this morning and sed to him They is some boddie trying to slip into are house. What time it is sed he and when she told him he sed Well it aint me this time so let it go. I xpect she hard a mouse or some thing. As they wasent no thing at all missing this a. m.

Saturday—Blisters made a offe brake at his new girls house whiche pare a Dr. Her pa ast Blisters what are a spinel collum and he up and sed it are a mouten range of bones that keeps you from being laigs all the way up to your neck. Sure a dum crack. A speshelly to a Dr. of medd- sin and etc.

Sanitary Resorts To Be Marked for Tourists

Tourists looking for sanitary resorts in Michigan's vacation land will have an easier time of it starting this week when the first of the new black and white roadside signs will be posted at approved resorts by state and local health departments.

The sanitary inspection of cabin camps, trailer camps, resorts and other summer recreation centers in Michigan is rapidly being completed, according to John M. Hepler, engineering director for the State Health Department. The camps and resorts meeting the safe sanitary requirements outlined by the state will now be marked by a large black and white roadside sign reading "Sanitation Approved" in order that visitors will know where sanitary accommodations are available.

The various resorts are being classified in three types according to the quality of the sanitary facilities offered. Type 1 resorts include those having complete modern facilities, including hot and cold running water, flush toilets, electric lights, etc. Type 2 resorts may have some of these modern facilities, but not all. Type 1 resorts will have safe water supplies and sewage disposal systems, but these need not be of the most modern type.

All of the resorts posted with "Sanitation Approved" signs will be safe from a health standpoint, Mr. Hepler declares. Resorts which do not meet sanitary requirements will not be given an approval sign. Resort owners have been most cooperative in making improvements to comply with sanitary standards. A directory of approved resorts will be compiled later and made available to the public.
