Children In Court

By Judge Malcolm Hatfield
No Curfew Law
Knowing that the health and morals of children can become undermined when they roam the streets at night, a judge attempted to arouse public opinion to a recognition of this problem. Due to the fact that several indignant mothers reprimanded him for his stand on the subject and informed him over the telephone that they intended to vote for his opponent at the ensuing election, this judge threw valor to the winds and confined his activities to winning votes instead of saving children from the dangers of delinquency.

Acquired Brutality

A small fur dealer was responsible for much grief in a community by offering a few cents for cat hides. As a result, dozens of pet cats began to disappear. Eventually several brothers were brought into court and confessed that they stole and killed scores of family cats. It was discovered that they had been selling the hides to the fur dealer over a period of several months. The boys had never been taught to respect other people's property or to develop a liking for animals. Their father had always done a great deal of hunting outside the regular season and not only neglected his own hunting dogs, but openly displayed great cruelty toward all weak and helpless creatures. Consequently, his sons felt no remorse in injuring a family pet with a stone or rifle, and then killing it brutally and removing its hide.

Benefits of the Depression

The last financial depression taught many worthwhile lessons in regard to raising children. It made parents aware that they should train their boys and girls to become self-dependent and reliant upon their own resources. Although sickness and temporary unemployment may deplete an individual's bank account, nevertheless, he should be imbued with a spirit of self-reliance and personal integrity that will make it distasteful to receive continual charity.

If our civilization is to continue, we must educate the coming generation to produce more than it consumes. To accomplish this we must recognize that everyone possesses talents different from those of his neighbor. We should not attempt to impel a person with limited capacities.

Seven Sons in War

Mrs. Frederick Swaffer of Hone, England, is a proud and happy mother, for her seven sons are all serving. She has just said good-bye to the "baby," who was called up in the last section.

Took Thirty Years

Young writers who think it is easy to write a novel will probably be interested to know that Sholem Asch, author of "The Nazarene," spent 30 years preparing himself in study and research before he wrote one of the greatest fiction works of modern times.

Learning to send an S.O.S. may be the answer to the S.O.S. of these young people looking for jobs in private industry. Twenty youth such as those shown above are getting practical experience and training in various phases of radio at the Cassidy Lake Resident Work Project of the Michigan National Youth Administration. Training in the fundamentals of commercial radio operation, amateur transmitting and receiving, radio construction and servicing is received on the project. Instructor Virgil R. Owens is shown in the foreground sending code messages while NYA enrollees transcribe them as they are heard over a loud speaker in the room. The Cassidy project has a total enrollment of over 200 unemployed youth gaining diversified experience designed to fit them for private jobs.

Lansing—The primary next month is exhibit A of the American belief, prevalent since the days of Andrew Jackson, that a popular election is a certain cure for all ills of government. Nine persons seek party nomination for governorship. Twenty others aspire for the lieutenant governor position on the ballot. Compared with the previous record of 190 aspirants for state jobs, this year's political crop brought 240—an all-time high for Michigan. In Wayne county the primary ballots, blanket-size, will contain 509 candidates! It prompted one metropolitan daily newspaper to wonder what was worse—a boss-ridden convention in which slates were fixed in "smoke-filled bank rooms" or a confusing primary ballot containing so many names that a voter was inclined to throw up his hands in utter helplessness.

It was the mid-time party boss, who hand-picked the candidates for state contract reasons that brought the party convention into ill repute and inspired the popular movement for selection of candidates by popular vote. Now, the other extreme is developing—a primary ballot of blanket size containing 509 candidates in one county alone. As the Detroit commentator wailed, "we merely jumped from the frying pan over to an equally hot griddle."

Democracy will have a tough test right at home!

A Compromise
And yet Michigan's system for selecting state nominees is a compromise between the primary election for all candidates and a convention for the same purpose.

Only two states, Rhode Island and Connecticut, retain the convention system of making nominations for all state offices. Utah in 1938 and New Mexico in 1939 adopted the primary plan, while both Rhode Island and Connecticut have bi-partisan state commissions which are studying the problem.

While many state primaries select all state nominees, Michigan limits its primary to the offices of governor, lieutenant governor, highway commissioner, superintendent of public instruction, and members of the state legislature. Following the primary election each party holds a convention to select, officially by delegates, the nominees for secretary of state, state treasurer, auditor general, and attorney general. At the highway commissioner and superintendent of public instruction are chosen at off-year elections, the 1940 primary will offer two chief state positions—governor and lieutenant governor—in addition to the United States senate nomination.

But even the lists for these positions are formidable. They place a heavy load on the intelligence of the voter, let alone an assumption that he is willing and ready to investigate the merits of each aspirant and to act accordingly.

Imagine the popular dismay if there were four more rows of candidates on the primary ballot for the remaining four positions! Yes, it could be worse.

Dickinson's Rivals
In the apparent belief that 1940 is a "Republican year" and that a popular pendulum will carry all party nominees to victory, seven Michigan men are contesting for the Republican nomination for the governorship. Gov. Luran D. Dickinson, seeking re-election after six terms as lieutenant governor, is opposed by State Treasurer Miller Dunkel, Attorney General

A CODE FOR FUTURE JOBS

Thomas Read, and State Tax Chairman Melville E. McPherson—all from the official family at Lansing. Others are O. L. Smith, Detroit attorney; Ernest T. Conlin, former state senator from Grand Rapids; and Charles Renaud, Detroit perfume manufacturer. Petitions of Roscoe Conklin Fitch of Ludington, a former newspaperman, have been held invalid. Murray D. Van Wagoner, state highway commissioner, drew a last-minute opponent for the Democratic nomination for governor in Eugene I. Van Antwerp, member of the Detroit city council. Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Grand Rapids is also practically unopposed, politically speaking. His ballot opponent for the Republican nomination is Bowen Gover, a Detroit salesman who ran three years ago for three offices, all at the same time. Democratic candidates for the Vandenberg seat are five in number: Ralph W. Liddy, common pleas judge; Frank Fitzgerald, attorney; and Sid A. Erwin, assistant prosecutor—all from Detroit; and Michael J. Hart of Saginaw, former congressman, and Louis B. Ward, of Pontiac.

Lieutenant Governor
Not in many a moon have so many people had the same idea at the same time—running for lieutenant governor. The woods are full of aspirants. Ten Democrats and nine Republicans are among the official hopefuls.

The sudden death of Frank Fitzgerald elevated 60-year-old Luren D. Dickinson into national prominence as governor of Michigan. The large lists for this office prompted Stuart Perry, editor, Adrian Telegram, to comment approvingly at the increased interest. Perry pointed out that Governor Dickinson, if re-elected, is mathematically more likely to die in office than a younger man would be. The logic is irrefutable.

Short Ballot
One obvious remedy for the overburdened primary is an appointive system for many offices and a resultant short ballot for those to be elected.

Theodore Roosevelt, speaking at the Ohio constitutional convention in 1912, said: "You cannot get good service from the public servant if you cannot see him, and there is no more effective way of hiding him than by mixing him with a multitude of others so that they are none of them important enough to catch the eye of the average work-a-day citizen."

A form of the short ballot is the commission or city manager form for municipal government whereby fewer persons are elected and are held responsible by the voters.

Imposing evidence can be cited for the belief that the public's ability to discriminate among candidates to select wisely is in inverse ratio to the number of choices they are required to make. The longer the ballot lists, the less intelligently the public should be expected to act.

Some authorities go so far as to advocate the appointment by the governor of secretary of state, state treasurer, attorney general and possibly the auditor general. Prof. Austin F. Macdonald, University of California, is of the opinion that the auditor general should be elective "for it is necessary to maintain his independence."

One immediate result of the flood of primary candidates was a movement launched by Emerson R. Boyles, following his appointment to the state supreme court, to have the State Bar of Michigan prepare amendments to the law making a felony the writing of false names on primary petitions. Harry F. Kelly, secretary of state, ordered the name of Roscoe Conklin Fitch withheld from primary election ballots on the ground that petition signatures had been gathered for a previous campaign.

"Open" Primary
One of the acts of the Murphy administration was to eliminate a test of party affiliation from the fall primary. This trend toward what is known

One letter says: "We are being rationed in many essential food stuffs, but despite shorter commons the rations are enough, and in this way rich and poor alike are on the same basis. We can build all of the fine roads that we do so like to see and use and have the proper police force to regulate the traffic on these highways. But we shall continue to have accidents unless our courts cooperate with the highway builders and the highway maintenance and police departments. A limping justice who lets violators go with a small fine and who does not exercise the powers that the law allows him to exercise is hindering the accident prevention work on our highways and contributing to our annual terrific accident toll. There is no excuse under high heaven for driving while under the influence of liquor. Even a first case should be treated sternly. Minor traffic violations appearing in court the first time might be shown some leniency, with the proper emphasis on the accident situation, so that a recurrence will not be brought about by that particular violator. Aggravated and repeated cases, regardless of how slight the offense, should be treated sternly, to the full measure of the law. We need courage in our courts, and citizens should demand it.

Five Divisions The war department general staff has five functional divisions—personnel, military intelligence, operations and training, supply and war plans.

Still Fishing

Worms and a pole cut in the woods are getting for many lads like this in Michigan fish that fully equipped anglers would prize. Continued hot weather sent fishermen out in full force on the state's thousands of lakes while fishing for bass, bluegills, walleyes and northern pike is reported good to excellent in inland waters of many districts. Fishing for panfish also is producing good croels on neighborhood lakes and streams.

This and That

By Gerald K. Miller Reading history is one form of using your leisure that is never boring. In The Forum magazine, published in February, 1897, is an article which brought to my mind that old saying that "History repeats itself." It was written by David Bennett Hill and entitled "The Future of the Democratic Party." Written after the defeat of the Democrats in November, 1896, his article brought out so many parallels to the present day I am going to quote directly from it. "The course pursued by the Chicago Convention not only offended thousands of veteran Democrats who had grown gray in the service of the party, but was especially obnoxious to this class of thoughtful citizens. While democratic usages were ignored at the outset there soon followed the repudiation of old and well established Democratic principles and the substitution of new and dangerous populist doctrines. Then Mr. Hill goes on to talk of the "unwise provisions" incorporated in the Democratic platform. "First, the Income Tax. Never before in Democratic platforms and never tolerated by the country, except in times of war. "Second, The attack on the Supreme Court. The platform criticizes the decision of that Court declaring the Income Tax law unconstitutional and declares it to be the duty of Congress to use all the constitutional power that remains after that decision to effect the imposition of the tax. A reckless Congress and a corrupt, ambitious or unscrupulous President can "pack" the Court and force an acceptable decision. Later Mr. Hill says "The Democratic party must disavow the numerous doctrines which were promulgated under its auspices. It is neither good politics nor is it honest to teach the people to expect Government to provide a living for them; nor to lead them to believe that all the ills to which the body politic is naturally subject can be cured by legislation; nor to attack vested rights, to inspire disrespect for courts, to rail at those in authority, to openly or covertly resist established laws; nor to encourage warfare upon chartered capital; nor to array classes against classes, and endeavor to sow the seeds of discontent everywhere. "There are pages more but the above will give you a very good outline of his thoughts. If I were a campaign manager for Mr. Willkie I certainly would study very carefully the whole history of the 1896 campaign. It might help to win an election 44 years later. Jehovah's Witnesses are becoming the latest thorn in our national flesh. Banned in Canada, listed as conscientious objectors in England, placed in concentration camps in Germany, the Order thrives on trouble. Trouble has arisen here because of two main factors. First, their religion does not permit them to salute our flag. Second, as a part of their religion they must distribute the booklets furnished them. And then to make things interesting the United States Supreme Court rendered two decisions this year, one favoring the Witnesses, one against them, which has been like adding oil to a fire. On May 20, 1940 the Supreme Court affirmed by unanimous vote the constitutional right of the Witnesses to distribute their propaganda and to play their phonograph records. On June 3, 1940, another decision of the Supreme Court gave school officials the right to force children to salute the flag. The latter decision coming at the height of the fifth-column scare, made the Witnesses obvious targets for persecution. But the Witnesses thrive on trouble, going out of their way to find it, but always in the interest of their belief. Let us hope that our Democratic leaders will not be "thrown overboard" in removing our latest thorn.

Eaton Tells How To Cut State Expenses

"I will never overlook a single opportunity to help reduce the costs of conducting public business," stated Elton R. Eaton, independent, progressive candidate for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor yesterday when discussing state problems with a committee of citizens who had called at his office in Plymouth to offer their assistance in his campaign. "The state has certain obligations that must be met. It must provide for its institutions, its departments, and its afflicted and its unfortunates. But there is no obligation upon the part of the state to keep a single person on the payroll who is not of real value to the state," declared Mr. Eaton. "I know just how and where these useless job holders hide out and I know how to get rid of them from the state payroll, and I assure you that I will never miss an opportunity to save a tax dollar wherever it can be done. "Some public job holders have the idea that the only thing they have to do to hold a public job is to live a life of luxury and ease at the expense of the taxpayers, cut up as many tax dollars as they can and do nothing in return for the money they get from the public treasury. I'm against that sort of business. A public job is more than a public trust. It is a golden opportunity for service to the public. "I know where and how to look for the leaks in state spending, and the people of Michigan can be assured that I will do a real job in trying to prevent the waste of a single tax dollar.

The legislature has made the lieutenant governor a member of the state administrative board. In this position one can be of untold value to the people if he will exercise the full responsibilities of the job, which I propose to do. "The trouble during the past seven or eight years has been that while most folks have been living on fried salt pork, corn bread, boiled potatoes and the like in order to exist, a lot of political job holders have splenied against anything except menus consisting chiefly of boneless squab and other rich foods. "The time is here for public job holders to come down to earth and live like ordinary people; stop making useless, automobile trips about the state at the expense of the taxpayers, and devote the time for which Michigan pays them well, to the public jobs they hold. "The field for state economy is a big one, and much more can be done to cut expenses down to the bone. That's what I propose to do if elected lieutenant governor," said Eaton.

It will be recalled that the famous Plymouth Lincoln day banquets of fried salt pork, corn meal mush, corn bread, boiled potatoes, and buffalo stew held during the past few years, were originated by Eaton as a rebuke to the $25-per-plate banquets held by New Dealers in Detroit. Tickets for Eaton's famous Plymouth banquets never cost more than 50 cents each and as a result capacity crowds attend each year. Eaton told the committee that his candidacy has met with favor among voters in all parts of the state and he is highly pleased by the encouragement that has been given him.

Small Grain Used To Control Bindweed

Preparing a good seedbed in mid-August for the sowing of wheat, rye, or sweet clover at the normal time is the first step in effectively controlling bindweed, explains H. C. Rather, head of the farm crops department, Michigan State college. After the grain is harvested, the field should be plowed and kept fallow until seeding time again. This process may have to be repeated two or three times, but its worth as an eradication measure against bindweed has been demonstrated, Rather says. Other common names of a bindweed are creeping jenny and wild morning-glory. Recent work done at Michigan State college under the direction of S. L. Dexter, also of the farm crops department, has shown that summer seedings of sweet clover are also effective in controlling bindweed. One of the characteristics of bindweed is that the weed usually is found on soils that will naturally grow sweet clover.

Rather suggests, however, that farmers make the usual acidity tests before sowing sweet clover. The sweet clover should be cut in the early bloom stage for hay or silage and the stubble turned under. The field should be kept fallow until about the middle of August before being reseeded to sweet clover. This process, also, may have to be repeated two or three times before the amount of the bindweed is reduced so as to lessen its effects upon cultivated crops. Bindweed, a perennial with deep, heavy rootstalks, cannot withstand the competition of the small grain or sweet clover because of its relatively slow-growing characteristics in the early spring. Rather explains.

Everyone Employed

The tiny duchy of Luxembourg, with only 999 square miles, is much smaller than the state of Rhode Island and has a population of nearly 300,000 contented and fairly prosperous people. In the midst of world-wide depression, everyone in Luxembourg has been employed in agriculture, mining, iron or related industries.

Swan or Ugly Duckling?

Sammy, a black swan, has been banished from the Boston Public Garden lagoon because he left the water too often to go strolling. Park Commissioner William P. Long said Sammy's aptitude for getting into trouble made it necessary to keep him at Franklin park all year instead of moving him to the Public Garden with his brothers and sisters. It was almost impossible to keep Sammy in the water last summer. He would roam about the Public Garden walks eating pansies and tulips. Several times he chased children and is reported to have bitten one girl. One day he even wandered out onto nearby Boylston street and tied up traffic for nearly a half hour before policemen and park employees could get him back to the water.

The Chester Notten family had a picnic dinner at Portage Lake on Sunday.

Oat threshing is in full swing. Reports of 40 to 70 bushels per acre are coming in.

Miss Carolyn Kalmbach and the Schweinfurth sisters are attending a 4-H camp at Patterson lake this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kalmbach of North Baltimore, Ohio and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Kalmbach of Detroit visited at the Oscar Kalmbach home on Sunday.

Recreation Leaders On Duty In State Parks

Lansing—Helping folks with a week or so of vacation to enjoy to the full every day they spend in a state park is the job of 63 WPA recreation leaders now on duty in 31 state parks.

Arm-band insignia make them distinguishable in park crowds, to persons wanting to know about park facilities and activities.

Nature guides, one of three classes of the leaders, conduct parties on field trips over trails in and near the park. They also set up and maintain in some central park buildings a nature museum for display of rocks, flowers, tree leaves, birds, fish, snakes, turtles and other small animals that may be seen by the observant visitor somewhere in the park. Relics of local historic significance are collected for these displays.

Social activity directors, a second type of leader, supervise children's playgrounds; and for adults they organize ball games, horseshoe pitching tournaments, casting contests, treasure hunts, amateur acting, singing and story-telling about evening campfires, and, in some parks, square dances. Some also direct handicraft projects, and in three parks little mimeographed "newspapers" are produced weekly.

The third class of WPA leaders are life guards, who patrol beaches and conduct classes for beginning swimmers. (Many of the park life guards, however, are state park employees.)

Park visitors may learn from bulletin boards in central park buildings the schedule of organized events available.

Leaders will continue active in the 31 parks until the close of the principal season on Labor Day, and longer in parks that continue open after that date, for such activities as fall color hikes and winter sports.

WPA state park guides were first employed in limited numbers in 1938. This year they received a pre-season training course at the conservation department's training school in Pigeon River state forest. Charles F. Welch, of the department's education division is coordinator of the present program.

M. S. C. Fall Term To Open On September 23

Nearly every Michigan county will be represented in the 1940 freshman class in Michigan State College, according to Registrar Robert S. Linton. Already 1,815 new students have been approved for admission in the fall term, which begins Monday, September 23, and plans are being completed to accommodate approximately 2,500 freshmen and new students when school opens.

Last year's freshmen and new students totaled 2,469. Mr. Linton said, and present figures indicate the 1940 beginning class will be equally large. A total enrollment of approximately 7,500 is anticipated by College officials. Last year's enrollment of 6,893 students in the fall term was an all-time record high for the State College.

The fall term officially opens with Freshman Week on September 23, with upperclassmen registering on September 27-28. Classes will begin on Monday, September 30.

Although numerous staff changes have been made in preparation of the fall term, only 24 of the new faculty members are additions to the staff. Others replace former staff members who have died, retired, or resigned. Two departments will be headed by newly-appointed professors.

Prof. Roy Underwood, formerly head of the Ward-Belmont Conservatory of Music, becomes head of the Music department, and Prof. C. C. Dewitt, formerly of the Michigan College of Mines and Technology, will head the Chemical Engineering department.

Reservations are being taken in the College's dormitories for both men and women, and while no rooms in dormitories will be available in September, students entering late will be accommodated in Lansing and East Lansing homes.

Germany Likes Music
War or no war, Germany certainly likes its music. It now has 181 large orchestras, according to the National Music Chamber. Most of the orchestras are engaged in opera and concert presentations.

Philippines
The Philippine islands were discovered in 1521 by the Portuguese navigator, Magellan. In 1542, a Spanish exploring expedition named the group in honor of Prince Philip, later Philip II of Spain.

Two KEYS to a CABIN

LIDA LARRIMORE

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Charming, wealthy Gabriella (Gay for short) Graham, engaged to Todd Janeway, returns to a cabin in the Maine woods...

CHAPTER II—While the girls talk the mystery man returns. Gay, surprisingly enough, introduces the man to her...

CHAPTER III—Before he leaves, John goes for a walk. When he returns he finds Kate sitting before the fireplace...

CHAPTER IV—The night before Gay and Kate are to return home to New York John gets an urgent request to call at a nearby cabin...

CHAPTER V—Meanwhile, worried by her absence, Kate has called Todd Janeway in New York...

CHAPTER VI—Gay and John, who have been traveling, return to the cabin, there to find Todd...

Houghton. We'll see you Wednesday evening."

"Good-night, Dr. Houghton." Janice Howard extended a slender hand. "It's been pleasant to meet you."

"Good-night, everybody," Gay said. "Merry Christmas. Good-night."

John was standing at one of the long windows when Gay came into the drawing-room. She went to him, moving swiftly, noiselessly over the rugs which Suki had replaced.

"What do you see?" she asked, standing beside him. "Are you watching for Santa Claus? He doesn't come in a boat."

He turned when she spoke, glancing at her, looked out and down through the window again.

"Maine is an island, isn't it?" he said in a detached, distant voice.

"I've never been able to believe it. But seeing water down under the windows..."

"John—" Her breath caught in her throat. He looked so unapproachable standing there with his back to the room in darkness, now except for the blue and silver dazle of the Christmas tree, the restrained glow of the birch-log fire...

"It must be colder," he said steadily. "The snow isn't melting. See it on the deck of that scow there under the light."

"John—Darling—I know what you're thinking. Don't!"

He looked at her then and she saw the unhappiness in his eyes. His lips moved as though he meant to speak but no sound came.

"John," she said quietly, "look at me."

He turned, silent, unsmiling, waiting for her to continue.

"Have you changed your mind?" she asked steadily. "Are you trying to tell me—" Her voice faltered, trembled, was stilled.

"Oh Gay, no!" He made a despairing gesture. "I'm trying to see this thing clearly. We can't rush into it blindly."

"Can't we be comfortable, at least," she said wearily.

He followed her to the davenport before the fire, sat at a little distance from her.

"Cigarette?" she asked.

"Thank you." He struck a match to light hers. As he bent toward her, she saw that his expression had softened. "You're tired," he said gently.

"A little."

He did not touch her, though she willed him to with all her strength. When his cigarette was lit, he sat back against the upholstery. "I don't wonder," he said bitterly. "You've carried me on your shoulders all evening and I'm a pretty heavy load."

"Don't be an idiot, darling."

"You watched me, you watched your friends, as though you were afraid."

"I was afraid."

"That I'd do or say something that would humiliate you?"

"No, John. That they would try to make you feel uncomfortable, an outsider, someone who didn't belong."

He turned to her, puzzled. "Deliberately?" he asked.

She nodded.

"I sensed something of the sort."

"You can't understand it, I suppose."

"I'm trying. I've been trying all evening. He crushed out his cigarette. "It's the assurance that wealth gives, I suppose. These friends of yours who were here tonight..."

"They can be loyal, too," she said quickly, more defensively than she knew. "It would have been loyalty to Todd if they'd been unpleasant to you, tonight."

"But what about you, and your cousins?"

"He—" She was silent.

"You broke the rule. It's like a labor union, isn't it? Only instead of skill in a trade you must have wealth to be admitted. Money you must inherit or marry it."

"Don't speak that way of money," she said, her voice sharpened by weariness, by a consciousness of the distance widening between them. "We've all lost a great deal and are likely to lose more."

"I've learned that. Your friend, Connie Belmont, told me that her family are 'practically paupers.'"

"It seems so in comparison with what they've had. Mother, Robert, Dad—they feel that their world is changing, that in their lifetime, perhaps, things will never be as they have been. Oh, why do we talk of them, my friends, who were here tonight, aren't important." She moved close to him and put her hand in his. "We're here together. It's Christmas Eve. Let's forget them."

His fingers closed around her hand but the pressure was negligent. "They are important. You defend them. You were afraid they wouldn't accept me."

"I was afraid for you—not for myself."

"Is that true? Would you be content to go away with me and never see any of them again?"

"Yes, oh, yes!"

"You think so now. But in a little while, when being with me isn't a novelty any longer, when I'd be at work and you'd have nothing to amuse you?"

"You have no confidence in me. You still resent me. How can I convince you?"

"Forgive me, Gay, I'm sorry."

His arms went around her, drew her close to him. His lips followed the curve of her cheek to her lips. She clung to him, conscious of a sort of desperation in the embrace, more of fear than of passion or tenderness.

"Gay laid down her crumpled square of heavy damask as Burton, at a signal from Aunt Flora, stepped behind her aunt's chair.

The gentlemen rose as the ladies left the table. Gay glanced at John, standing very stiffly beside his chair at Aunt Flora's right. She smiled and his face brightened. She felt him watching her a little forlornly as she, with her aunts and cousins, followed Aunt Flora's measured steps out of the dining-room, as studied as when, wearing the traditional train and three feathers, she had walked along a strip of carpet which led to a throne.

Aunt Flora sat on the love-seat before the fire and Ernest, the footman, set a tray with the coffee service on a table before her. Aunt Lucy, Uncle James' wife, her fading prettiness extinguished by wise-colored satin and the jewels she wore, sat in a chair at the opposite side of the marble hearth. The younger women, Elsa Lancaster, Aunt Flora's daughter, Muriel Von Steedham, her daughter-in-law; Margaret Newland, Aunt Lucy's married daughter, and Janet Graham, her unmarried daughter, grouped themselves, respectfully or resentfully, around the room. Gay stood in the curve of the small piano, resigning herself to the half-hour of boredom which was Aunt Flora's tribute to tradition.

"Millicent and Grace were unable to be with us today," Aunt Flora's diamonds flashed as she poured coffee into porcelain cups set in cases of filigreed silver. "Grace has a touch of neuritis."

"The weather has been so changeable," Aunt Lucy contributed brightly.

Gay glanced at Kate, seated in a chair a little removed from the group about the fire. Kate's eyebrow lifted and her glance, meeting Gay's, twinkled with derisive humor. Aunt Flora had not invited Cousin Millicent and Cousin Grace, two elderly and impoverished spinsters who were, ordinarily, present at family gatherings.

She hadn't long to wait.

"Well, Gay," Aunt Flora said, as Ernest left the room. "I suppose you won't mind telling us your plans."

Gay felt the sudden hush that fell upon the room, felt her aunts and cousins watching her, though no one, except Aunt Flora, who had asked the question and young Janet, who admired her, looked at her directly. She felt a familiar resentment, an emotion which extended far back through adolescence to her turbulent childhood. She felt exactly as she had felt then, but she was too old for tantrums now.

"I have no definite plans," she said quietly.

Aunt Flora looked at her in silence. Then, "You mean that you prefer not to discuss them with us," shows great promise. With the family influence behind him, he might go far."

"He's really very attractive," Elsa Lancaster's bright competent glance moved around the circle, rested with especial brightness upon Gay. "If he gets the right start, I shouldn't wonder if he'd be popular, socially as well as professionally."

"I think he's swell," Janet said defensively. "I like strong silent men."

"He has a pleasant voice," Muriel lifted eyes-like brown pansies from contemplation of her slender white hand. "I think it's important that a doctor should have a pleasant voice."

"Such a sweet mouth," Aunt Lucy said. "I suppose that sounds odd in speaking of a man," she added, as though she expected to be contradicted; "but it is. I don't think that a young man with a mouth like that could be any of the things—" She faltered, flushing. "Could be other than kind and sincere," she finished in some confusion.

"And being Dr. Lawrence's nephew is an asset," Aunt Flora said. "It isn't as though he's just somebody Gay happened to meet somewhere. After all, Dr. Lawrence was Gay's god-father, though I could never quite understand why David was so fond of him."

Gay looked at Kate, who was looking at her. As their glances met, Kate smiled. The smile widened into an encouraging grin. Gay laughed.

"What's so funny?" Elsa Lancaster asked.

"You are, all of you. I'm sorry, Aunt Flora," she added, seeing her aunt's face assume an offended expression. "You're talking about John exactly as you would speak of a servant you were considering engaging. You're right. He has excellent references, but he isn't looking for a job."

The sun-burst of diamonds on Aunt Flora's bosom glittered as she drew herself erect. "I don't see what cause we've given you to take that attitude, Gabriella. We're merely trying to help you."

"I appreciate your intentions," Gay said. "I know that it seems important to you to whitewash a scandal. But John and I aren't having any, thank you."

"You have no sense of responsibility toward your family. It's only to be expected, I suppose. Your mother—"

"Leave Mother out of this, if you please. She, at least, has some respect for personal independence."

"But have you never heard of conduct?"

"I think I'm conducting myself very well," Gay made an effort to control her temper, rising now, flushing her cheeks, giving warmth to her voice, quickening her breathing. "I brought John here today because I—we—want to show you all deference and consideration. You aren't going to arrange our lives for us. John will make his own decisions and I will accept them."

She made a half-turn toward the door. "And now if you will excuse me—"

Mrs. Von Steedham stayed her with a peremptory gesture. "Something must be decided." She said, insistently. "We can't go on like this, making excuses, trying to explain—" She waited a moment, then, abandoning high-handed methods, "What are we to tell people?" she cried despairingly.

"Tell them, as you have been telling me; that I am my mother's daughter," Gay said and, holding her head very high, she went out of the room.

John stood beside the chair in which he had been seated while Gay's Uncle James, his two sons, James and Andrew, handsome Dirk Von Steedham and Reginald Lancaster, fled out of the study. The door closed. David Graham seated himself in his chair beside the hearth.

"Sit down, John," he said.

John sat in the chair at the opposite side of the hearth. He had felt fairly confident while the others were there, but now that he was alone with David Graham, constraint locked his jaws and made a vacuum of his mind.

The butler closed the door. David Graham cleared his throat.

"Gay tells me that you must return to Maine tomorrow night," he said.

"Yes, sir."

"You're located in Portland?"

"In Portland. Yes, sir. At present."

John glanced at David Graham and was surprised, almost shocked, to discover that he, too, felt a certain amount of constraint. His blue-gray eyes regarded him, John, kindly but with diffidence through the lenses of Oxford glasses which sat with scholarly dignity upon the bridge of his salient nose.

"I suppose I owe you an apology, sir," John said hesitatingly, wanting to David Graham's sake, as well as his own, to get on with the interview and have it over. The older man appeared to be as embarrassed as he, John, felt. He sat forward in his chair, his tall well-groomed figure fixed in an uneasy attitude.

"For falling in love with my daughter?" A twinkle of humor in his eye, John smiled. "I should have expected you to apologize if you hadn't."

The twinkle in the gray-blue eyes was reassuring. John realized, gratefully, that Gay's father, whatever embarrassment he suffered, bore no resentment against him. The constraint lessened a little. David Graham leaned back in his chair, John lit a cigarette.

"I meant an apology for my share in the great deal of unpleasantness," he said, smiling.

"It's a pleasure to meet someone who employs the use of understatement," Gay's father returned the smile. "The only apology you owe me, personally," he went on, "is for making me rush home from London before I'd had a chance to bid on a painting I very much wanted."

"I'm sorry about that, sir," John was beginning to understand the life-long friendship between this man and his Uncle John. He even felt that he understood why Kitty Schwyler, at eighteen, had married him.

"Perhaps it is I who owe you an apology," David Graham said, presently. "Gay calls my attention to the fact that I, originally, was at fault. I invited John Lawrence to be her god-father. Of course I had no idea that the nephew he spoke of so often was going to grow up into a menace, or I should have made other arrangements."

"Gay has told you," John said, "that our meeting at the cabin was not pre-arranged?"

"But it was pre-arranged, wasn't it? Yes, Gay has told me. I refer to the arrangement John Lawrence made. No one ever suspected him of his genius for pulling strings. He had it, though, to a remarkable degree. I remember when we were in college—"

He went on to speak of John's uncle who had been his friend, quietly, appreciatively, in a pleasant, unhurried voice. The anecdote he told was familiar to John. Though he gave the appearance of listening intently, his mind was occupied with the task of fitting together from what he had heard of him, from what he had observed, a clear understanding of Gay's father.

As he thought of her, he heard her voice.

"Are you getting along, you two?"

"Splendidly," her father said.

"Have you been telling John disgraceful episodes in my past?" She came toward them, walking quickly and lightly through a shaft of sunlight, touched John's arm in passing, went to sit on the arm of her father's chair.

"The young are self-centered," David Graham said. "No, my dear, I've been talking about the days when I was young and not so handsome. I've enjoyed it but John has probably been bored."

"Not at all, sir."

"I expected that you'd either be leading John through the art gallery or that you'd be sitting here in utter silence."

"You underestimate the privilege it is to me to be permitted to talk without being interrupted."

"I suppose so," she was silent for a moment, then asked, "Have you told John, Dad?"

John saw David Graham's expression alter. The diffidence he had lost while he had talked of John's uncle returned. He glanced at John, almost, he thought, watching, in apology, then up at Gay, considering. "No," he said. "I haven't."

"It's about getting a place for you in the research department at Johns Hopkins," Gay said, eagerly.

"That is what you want?" John heard the hesitancy in David Graham's voice, saw the considering expression in his eyes.

"I'd hoped that I might work and study there," he said slowly. "It's seemed pretty far in the future to make definite plans."

"There will be an opening for you the first of the year. I've been in communication with the authorities. Your training and ability will be investigated, of course, but that's largely a matter of course."

"Grandfather had an operation there." Gay's voice was excited and happy. "Considerate of him, wasn't it?"

John looked directly at David Graham.

"I appreciate what you've done," he said; "but I couldn't accept a place there the first of the year."

"Gay has told me—" David Graham's embarrassment visibly increased. "But I—we—she seemed to think that some arrangement might be made."

"Isn't it possible, John?"

"I'm afraid not." He saw a little of the brightness go out of her face but continued, "I've given Dr. Sargeant my promise to remain in Portland until October. You see, Mr. Graham, I'm discharging an obligation. Dr. Sargeant made it possible for me to complete my medical course and that was the stipulation."

"But if it's only a question of money," Gay's color deepened and her eyes were very bright. "Couldn't you—" She paused at a warning glance from her father, looked down at her hand.

"I can't entirely. I've been working with Dr. Sargeant since October. He's leaving for a cruise the first of the year. There wouldn't be time to break in another assistant even if—"

"Even if you could swallow your—" She broke off, her eyes blazing, her chin held high.

"Gently, Gay," David Graham's face was very doubled. "This is a decision which John must make. They were staring at each other like strangers, John thought, antagonism humming between them in vibrations across the dignified furniture room. But he could not, he would not yield. It was not, he thought, entirely pride, nor only stubbornness. There was a deeper reason, something he was unable to analyze fully. It had to do with all the other pressures being exerted upon him by this life into which he had been plunged.

"I'm sorry," he said, conscious of David Graham's eyes fixed upon him in compassion. "I can't break that promise, Gay. Dr. Sargeant is depending on me. I can't let him down."

There was silence for a moment. Then Gay's expression softened. She gave a low shaken laugh.

"I'm as bad as Aunt Flora," she said. "I've just been despising her because she very kindly offers to arrange your life for you. I'm doing the same." Her breath caught on a sob. "Forgive me, I'm sorry." She slipped from the arm of her father's chair and came toward him. "I'll be patient. I can wait."

He looked down at her as she stood beside him, lovely in this changed and softened mood.

"You do understand, Gay?" he asked, wanting to take her in his arms, to heal the hurt he had been obliged to give her in the only way at his command. Diffidence held him motionless, self-conscious in the presence of her father.

Her eyes fell away from his pleading glance. "Of course I understand," she laughed too quickly, too brightly. "It's just that Grandfather's offspring have always had too much of everything, I suppose. We don't accept disappointments gracefully. Except you, Dad. You're the exception."

"I've been—Can you forgive me?"

"Oh, darling—Yes!" His arms held her but did not draw her toward him. "But," he said steadily, "you must understand."

"I do. I've been despising myself for—I'm hateful to you because I love you. That long stupid dinner and then Aunt Flora. I told you that we Grahams don't accept disappointments gracefully. It was a disappointment."

"But you knew I was obligated." She smiled ruefully. Her eyes were shy. "I wanted it so much," she said. "When I was away from you, I thought that when we were together again, you'd want it as much as I did, that being together would mean more to you than keeping a promise."

"I do want it. You know that, Gay."

"Yes, I know. But—"

"I could not love you, dear, so well I loved I not honor more—"

"You're making fun of me."

"No, John, I'm not. Have I quoted correctly? Dad told the 'Idylls of the King' to me when I was little. I thought the king was very noble, but even then—Humor shone fleetingly in the blue depths of her eyes. "That it was a little hard on the queen."

hope to have the pleasure of a prolonged acquaintance."

"At the moment, I mean. This house, swarming with relatives. No wonder we're all on edge. Will you excuse us, Dad? John and I are going out and walk five miles."

CHAPTER IX

The sun, dropping toward the horizon, laid a dazzling sheen on the snow, which covered the wide lawns sloping away from the gray stone towers and turrets and Victorian embellishments of the house, but when they entered the grove the glow was dimmed by the foliage of evergreens, striped and filigreed by the trunks and bare branches of trees. Rabbit tracks printed the path before them, whorls, scalloped indentations, like waves on sand, where the snow had been blown by the wind. They ploughed through, kicking up a fine white mist that sprayed their faces with stinging cold.

"It's like a Maine snow," John said, as Gay became silent.

"Yes, isn't it?" she said brightly. "Dry and like powder. We don't often have them like this."

"Do you ski near here?" Why wouldn't she look at him? Her arm, linked through his, was unresponsive beneath the thick fur coat sleeve. When he glanced sideways and down, he saw only tendrils of red-brown hair curling out under her cap, the curving line of her cheek half-buried in fur. He had thought that there, alone, out of doors, he would find her again, but she had ignored or deliberately misinterpreted his diffident attempts to effect a reconciliation so that he no longer made an effort to break through the brittle gaiety of her mood.

"We have," she replied. "On the slope just beyond the grove, between the Janeway place and ours. It isn't very exciting though. Coast-ling there is more fun."

"The Janeway place is beyond the grove?" John asked. Why should the apology again? he asked himself. Gay had known that he was obligated to Dr. Sargeant until the coming October. She shouldn't have made plans for him to endow. She'd always been able to buy what she wanted. Well, in this instance, there was something more important than money. It was his services the doctor needed. Besides,

"Yes, Highcliff," Gay said in reply to his question. "It was a show-place until 'Dunedin' was built. Originally I don't remember, but I've seen photographs. People spoke of it as an Italian villa. It looked like a steel-engraving with terraces descending in a series to a lake and balustrades and urns and weeping conifers. Our family are parvenus in comparison with the Janeways. The land was granted to one of Todd's ancestors in 1830. That's why they can live simply now, without observing all the silly conventions that Aunt Flora struggles to maintain."

A hemlock branch, weighted with snow, cut across the path.

"Duck!" he cried and reached forward, too late, to thrust it aside. He caught her as she stumbled.

"Heavens!" she gasped and looked up at him, snow covering her face like a mask. She blinked, then laughed, a gay laugh, free from constraint. "You look like a snow-man," she said.

He blinked to clear his vision. "You look like a snow-maiden," he laughed with her. "No, that's too poetic. You look as though you'd fallen head-first in a barrel of soap flakes. I can't see anything but the tip of your nose. Here, wait."

His arm held her while, with the other hand, he brushed the snow from her face. As he bent toward her, he saw the laughter dim in her eyes. A half-smile trembled across her lips.

"I've been—Can you forgive me?"

"Oh, darling—Yes!" His arms held her but did not draw her toward him. "But," he said steadily, "you must understand."

"I do. I've been despising myself for—I'm hateful to you because I love you. That long stupid dinner and then Aunt Flora. I told you that we Grahams don't accept disappointments gracefully. It was a disappointment."

REGISTRATION NOTICE

For General Primary Election. Tuesday, September 10, 1940. To the Qualified Electors of the Township of Sylvan, Precincts No. 1 and 2, State of Michigan.

Notice is hereby given that in conformity with the "Michigan Election Law", I, the undersigned Township Clerk, will, upon any day, except Sunday and a legal holiday, the day of any regular or special election or primary election, receive for registration the name of any legal voter in said Township not already registered who may apply to me personally for such registration. Provided, however, that I can receive no names for registration during the time intervening between the Second Saturday before any regular, special or official primary election and the day of such election.

The last day for General Registration does not apply to persons who vote under the Absent Voters' Law. Notice is hereby given that I will be at my home, Ypsilanti Township, on WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 21, 1940—the twentieth day preceding said election, as provided by Sec. 3, Chapter II, P. A. 306, 1929 and Sec. 1, Chapter 3, Part II, P. A. 1939.

I will also be at my home, Lima Township, on Saturday, August 24, 1940—Last Day at my home, Lima Township—from 8 o'clock a. m. until 8 o'clock p. m. on each said day for the purpose of Reviewing the Registration and Registering such of the qualified electors in said Township as shall properly apply therefor.

The name of no person but an actual resident of the precinct at the time of registration, and entitled under the constitution, if remaining such resident, to vote at the next election, shall be entered in the registration book. Registration of Absentee by Oath. If any person whose name is not registered shall offer and claim the right to vote at any election or primary election, and shall, under oath, state that he or she is a resident of such precinct and has resided in the Township twenty days next preceding such election or primary election, designating particularly the place of his or her residence and that he or she possesses the other qualifications of an elector under the constitution; and that owing to the sickness or bodily infirmity of himself or herself or some member of his or her family, or owing to his or her absence from the Township on public business or his or her own business, and without intent to avoid or delay his or her registration, he or she was unable to make application for registration on the last day provided by law for the registering of electors preceding such election or primary election, then the name of such person shall be registered, and he or she shall then be permitted to vote at such election or primary election. If such applicant shall in said matter, wilfully make any false statement, he or she shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and upon conviction, be subject to the pains and penalties thereof.

Provision in Case of Removal to Another Precinct. Any registered and qualified voter who has removed from one election precinct of a Township to another election precinct of the same Township shall have the right on any day previous to election, or primary election day, on application to Township Clerk, to have his or her name transferred from the registration book of the precinct from which he or she has removed to the registration book of the precinct in which he or she then resides. Such elector shall have the right to have such transfer made on any election, or primary election day, by obtaining from the board of inspectors of such election or primary election of the precinct from which he or she has removed a certificate or certificate to the board of election inspectors of the precinct in which he or she then resides.

ORDER APPOINTING TIME FOR HEARING CLAIMS

No. 31279. State of Michigan, the Probate Court for the County of Washtenaw.

At a session of said Court, held at the Probate Office in the City of Ann Arbor, in the said County, on the 30th day of July, A. D. 1940.

Present, Honorable Jay G. Pray, Judge of Probate.

In the Matter of the Estate of Otto D. Luick, deceased.

It appearing to the Court that the time for presentation of claims against said estate should be limited, and that a time and place be appointed to receive, examine and adjust all claims and demands against said deceased and before said Court:

It is Ordered, That creditors of said deceased are required to present their claims to said Court at said Probate Office on or before the 10th day of October, A. D. 1940, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, said time and place being hereby appointed for the examination and adjustment of all claims and demands against said deceased.

It is Further Ordered, That public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Chelsea Standard, a newspaper printed and circulated in said County.

Jay G. Pray, Judge of Probate.

Warm Blankets. The warmth of a blanket depends on three things—fiber, nap and weave. A warm blanket is thick and firm enough to keep cold drafts from penetrating, and fluffy enough to keep the body's heat from escaping too rapidly.

WANTED 'EASY' Living. When two men 'confessed' to the murder of Jaime Lozada in the Estancia San Roman Department of Rio Negro, police Uruguay were puzzled. One Santos was the first to admit guilt and soon afterward Leon Freydenberg declared in Montevideo that he killed Lozada. Given the third degree, Freydenberg finally admitted that he had 'confessed' because he wanted to be placed in prison, where he could sleep and get three meals a day without having to work.

REGISTRATION NOTICE

For General Primary Election. Tuesday, September 10, 1940. To the Qualified Electors of the Township of Lima, State of Michigan.

Notice is hereby given that in conformity with the "Michigan Election Law", I, the undersigned Township Clerk, will, upon any day, except Sunday and a legal holiday, the day of any regular or special election or primary election, receive for registration the name of any legal voter in said Township not already registered who may apply to me personally for such registration. These tests, which were conducted at the General Motors Research Laboratories, show that the new safety plate glass is 100 per cent stronger than the report of the gun, in mid air; (3) Professor Edgerton, standing beside his photographic apparatus, views the result of the test. Question And Answer Dept.

Ques.—What was the day of the week that Capt. John Smith was captured by the Indians? A says it was on Saturday, but B says it was on Sunday. Thank you.
Ans.—A is correct. John Smith was captured on Saturday, Jan. 5, 1608. As that year was a leap year, it may account for B being confused concerning the day of the week.

Ques.—Was the West Point Military Academy founded during the Mexican War? Or was it during the Civil War?
Ans.—Neither one. This military academy was founded on March 16, 1802. Graduates of this institution served in the Mexican War, as also on both sides in the Civil War.

Ques.—Are there any wild monkeys in the United States?
Ans.—No, there is no species of native monkeys in America north of the Rio Grande. Many species of monkeys inhabit Mexico, Central America and South America.

Ques.—Would you please tell me how old a boy should be before it is proper to call him "Mr."?
Ans.—The title "Mr." is now applied to young boys as well as to adults. Formerly it was customary to address a boy under 19 or 20 as "Master". This title is heard to some extent in our time, but it is fast dying out.

Ques.—Was the name of the Roman soldier in Caesar's time "Mark Antony", or was it "Mark Anthony"?
Ans.—Neither one. Strictly speaking, his correct name was "Marcus Antonius". The correct English for this Latin name is Mark Antony—there being no "h" in the name.

Ques.—I would like to know what is the meaning of maelstrom, as used in the following sentence: "He was swept into the maelstrom of vice." What is the origin of the word?
Ans.—In the sentence quoted, "maelstrom" means "whirlpool" as a figure of speech. The word is the name of a famous whirlpool between two islands which lie off the northwest coast of Norway in the Arctic Ocean. In early times it was considered extremely dangerous, and navigators believed that the Maelstrom would engulf any ship which came within its reach. Therefore, the word has come to be used as a figure of speech for any overpowering movement of wide-reaching influence.

Ques.—When an alien becomes naturalized, does his wife also become a citizen because of that fact?
Ans.—No. If she is eligible for naturalization she may be naturalized in the regular way. However, the woman need not file a declaration of intention, and, instead of the five-year period of residence in the United States, she is required to have lived one year continuously within the United States.

Ques.—Is there a place where there are six straight months of night?
Ans.—Yes. In the Arctic and Antarctic regions.

Papete Quiets Down
Papete, Tahiti, sometimes pictured as a place of perpetual whoopee, actually quiets down as completely as any other spot. By government decree all noise stops at 10 p. m. That goes not only for bars, rooms and streets but even for radios and phonographs in private homes.

Slats' Diary

Sunday—I seen in the noosepaper whair it sed the army otto all volunteer and not haft to be drafted. Mebby the sojers feel like yrs. trooly on that subjec. I am redly to volunteer any time. Xcept when it looks like they might be a war coming and I haft to fite. A sitchaehen like that dulls my fighter disposition.

Tuesday—Ma told a good 1 on Ant Emmy. Both of them went out Saturday night to cool off at the hotel at the lake by registering all night. The clerk sed to them do want a inside room or a out side 1. So Ant Emmy sed they better get 1 inside as it lookt like rane.

Wednesday—Pa sed he rimarked to the editor of the noosepaper wher he works at that the campane this yr. seams to be making some strange bod fellows. And the editor witch didn't even look up from what he was a setting down on his copy paper sed Yap they are learning to use the same bunk. Unkel Hen got a big kick out of it but I faled to see nothing funny.

Thursday—I seen in the paper about a wizard at some thing and so I ast Pa what are a wizard. He sed it was a man witch have got his better 1/2 trane so she can keep up with the naber ladsy and not get behid with the groserie store and etc. bills. I dont know just what he meant but I think Ma must of. From the verrie serise look she give him.

Friday—Blisters was down to the R. R. yds. wher I dont xpect he had no busyness of being at and got into a fite and got a eye black. When his Mom ast him how come he sed he got it fiteing for a littel boy. What dear littel child was it she ast him and he haft to admit it were hisself. And all most got a licken becos it wasnt some other kid that he fit for.

Saturday—Jakes' Mom sent him to the groserie store to get 2 lbs of brown shugger and when he arived back he brang onley 1 and 1/2 lbs. Jakes' Ma kicket to the groserie man. He said he knows his scales is correct and sed he thot Jake otto be put onto them. Jake told me confidently that he et the absent groseries.

Iranian Racial Group
The existence of a fourth fundamental division of the white race is reported by Dr. Henry Field, anthropologist for Field Museum of Natural History in Chicago. He said the discovery of the race—the Iranian Plateau people—was made during a five-year study of mankind in Iran (Persia) just completed. The findings are included in a 708-page report of the expedition. Dr. Field said the Iranian plateau race hitherto was unknown to anthropologists. It is distinguishable, he said, by lean bodies, light skin, dark wavy hair, elongated heads and brown eyes. Outstanding is the convex nose, a characteristic of the race which Field contends was later diffused among several racial stocks.

Not Bullet-Proof But Tough Enough
To Resist Shotgun Fire at 15 Yards
TESTS to show the strength of the new laminated high test safety plate glass developed for automobile use are recorded by Prof. Harold E. Edgerton, of Massachusetts Institute of Technology. and contain 3 1/2 drams of smokeless powder, the heaviest duck load obtainable. (2) Triggered by the sound of the shot striking the windshield, Professor Edgerton's stroboscopic light illuminates the scene with a flash lasting 1/1,000,000th of a second and having a peak intensity that would exceed 50,000 one-hundred watt lamps if they could be concentrated in a small area. Note that the camera has caught some of the shot, traveling 100 feet per second faster than the report of the gun, in mid air; (3) Professor Edgerton, standing beside his photographic apparatus, views the result of the test. The shot has cracked the glass, but has failed to penetrate it, despite the concentration of fire and the vicious effect of the wad at short range. (4) Shaughnessy and Professor Edgerton examine the pane after its removal from the windshield. Though cracked on both sides, it still clings to the newly developed polyvinyl acetate resin, the "meat" of the laminated glass "sandwich". Safety plate glass of this type is
