Bumper Prosperity Promised Michigan For Next Few Years

...causes are complicating the plight of Michigan public schools. Dr. Eugene B. Elliott, state superintendent of public instruction, has been one of Michigan's most vigorous proponents for adequate state school aid. However, he is also aware of certain weaknesses in the school system. The one-room school, of which there are more than 5,000 in the state, is one of them.

study had been made of "before and after" costs of seven grade school districts in Barry county.
These districts continue as legal units. They merely pay pupils' transportation and tuition costs. Here are some interesting figures:
Before—Total cost of running the seven schools was $5,926.51, or an average of $846.64 per district.
After—Total cost of transportation and tuition was $3,611.45, or an average of $515.92 per district.

More Ducks for Hunters Is Goal of State Survey

More ducks for Michigan hunters is the goal of the conservation department's game division in undertaking an ambitious survey this week of duck habitats in the state. The survey will be carried on over a period of at least two years.
Major emphasis in the survey will be centered on nesting and feeding grounds of ducks in Saginaw Bay, Lake St. Clair, the Detroit River and the Monroe marshes in Lake Erie. Investigations, however, are likely to be extended to Munuskeag Bay, Houghton lake, the new Dead Stream development and other areas in Michigan which attract ducks in large numbers.

gan which attract ducks in large numbers.
The survey, to be directed by Herbert Miller, game division biologist, is expected to locate the more important nesting habitats in the state, and to determine to what extent big marshes are used for nesting, how successful the nesting is and whether there is a possibility of further development of marshes for duck breeding.
The game division also seeks to learn more about the condition of weed beds in larger lakes which are used extensively by diving ducks, such as the redheads, canvasbacks and bluebills, during migrations. Little is known at present about the size and location of such weed beds or the possible effect on migrating ducks should they disappear.

of shooting conditions on larger lakes, to learn more about hunting pressures and factors affecting hunting.
Considerable attention will be given in coming months to conditions affecting ducks which winter in open water in the Detroit River and Lake Erie. The game division each winter receives many reports about starving ducks in these localities and the survey is expected to determine whether duck losses really are important, whether there are food shortages or whether wounded ducks represent an important part of the total losses.

Tread Softly!
When you start talking about the rural school situation, someone is sure to warn, "Better go easy! You're going to tread on someone's toes."
The sentiment that encircles the community center where Mother went to school (and perhaps Grandma too) is one of the complicating things in this dollars-and-cents rural educational picture.
In the first place, folks just prefer to run their own affairs. And that goes for their schools.
In every neighborhood whether it be urban or rural you will find certain individuals who are possessed with ability for leadership. They yearn to assert their American rights. The school, an institution that is almost as sacred as the church, becomes the object of friendly concern. School leaders become elected commissioners, many of whom receive salaries or fees for their services.
The principle of home rule needs no defense in rural Michigan.
Among its staunch defenders has been Melville McPherson, for 38 years a school district officer and now chairman of the state tax commission. McPherson knows his taxes!

Wasteful! Dr. Elliott
Sympathetic as he is to the idea of home rule and the community school, Michigan's state superintendent of public instruction takes the position that waste in education must be removed.
Dr. Elliott is quoted: "To pay a teacher, pay the expenses of keeping up the school property, pay salaries or fees to three school commissioners—all for the purpose of providing a school for five or ten children seems wasteful to me. All the surveys on the subject have shown that most of these schools could be closed with advantage."
The above rural school situation is another illustration how times have changed. Good highways and comfortable heated buses have expanded the geographic radius. The modern school curriculum includes subjects other than reading, writing and arithmetic. To Governor Dickinson some of these courses may constitute "frills", but to many mothers of 1940 they are just as essential as the telephone, electric lights, radio and the family automobile. The difference in viewpoint is largely a difference in ages.
At a time when tax dollars are being called upon to do many duties—almost impossibly so at times—it is inevitable that these one-room schools of yesterday will be appraised anew in terms of today's needs.
Highway Department Insures Road Beauty
Under a new "two for one" policy, the state highway department is insuring the fact that even when roadside trees are removed because they are traffic hazards, highway beautification will not suffer.
Highway Commissioner Murray D. Van Wagoner ruled this week that roadside trees which are removed because they block vision, or in some other way are traffic menaces, must be replaced by two new trees in a safe location nearby.
He asked district highway engineers and foresters to report on the number of such replacement trees they will require for the fall planting season. Sapling shade trees must be used unless district foresters believe pine more suitable, he said.
In addition to this state-wide safety program, 1,600 shade trees will be planted this fall by the department in counties below the Bay City line.
The goal is 75 trees per-mile of state trunkline.
The stately American Elm is Van Wagoner's choice as the best tree for roadside beautification projects. It has the lowest mortality rate in transplanting, he said; has a long life, is remarkably free from disease, and gives good roadway clearance and shade.
Depending on soil conditions, in Lower Michigan the department usually plants American Elm, Hard and Norway Maple, Red and Pin Oak, and Ash. Further north, the soil usually requires Pine, White, Norway or Scotch varieties are favored.
In cases where trees cause serious accidents, Van Wagoner early in 1939 laid down rules for determining whether they should be removed and insisted that new saplings be planted in safe locations as near as possible to the spot of the removal.
Any newly planted trees that die must be replaced in proper season until trees that will live are located there, he said.

Safetygrams
Last week I wrote about the importance of having proper and courageous courts enforce the laws pertaining to our conduct on the highways.
In one state the relative importance that judges attach to traffic violations may be gauged from the following table of average fines for common offenses:
Passing on curves—4.52.
Possession of short fish—10.78.
Inadequate brakes—5.32.
Illegal possession of a fur animal—18.15.
Hit and run—15.20.
Illegal nets—44.44.
Can you imagine such a thing? Traffic violations necessary to the preservation of your life and well-being are subordinated to illegal game practices. Will you, who depend on laws and courts for your protection, tolerate such an injustice?
We need respect for law and a widespread improvement in all court regulations and law enforcement pertaining to our traffic situations.
You can help, Mr. Citizen, by demanding that just laws be enforced.

This and That

By Gerald K. Miller

The failure of the Government to take the people of the United States into its confidence still remains a puzzle to me. Our unpreparedness can be traced directly to Congress reflecting the opinion of those back home. They, in turn, not realizing how closely war has been approaching the last few years have naturally resisted the spending of huge sums for armaments. Our unpreparedness lies directly at the feet of those who have believed that we are too young a nation to be told the "facts of life."

The trained military observers have been afraid to say too much for fear of being classed as war mongers, or of being laughed at. Now, however, with the collapse of country after country and England fighting a desperate uphill struggle to prevent invasion, they feel they can speak out with what they consider knowledge of what we may expect. The Pollyanna spirit must be changed to that of harsh reality.

At the War College military experts believe that England is doomed. Nothing outside of immediate intervention by the United States can save her, and now that would be too late. Also, that we are next on the Nazi war agenda. If England is invaded this fall we will be forced to meet the invasion of the western hemisphere in 1941. Laugh if you want to, or take it seriously, but that is what the majority of army and naval officials actually believe.

The first act would be the bombing of the Panama Canal, leaving most of our Navy in the Pacific Ocean. Japanese trouble would flare up in the East, keeping some of the fleet there. The rest would be delayed weeks circling the Horn, finally arriving to find nothing to defend. If the British fleet were immobilized, the Nazis would have the greatest armada in the history of the world. German, Italian, and French units together with the merchant marine of Holland, Norway, and other subdued countries would bring troops, guns, and supplies in huge quantities to the Americas. And right now there are huge depots of all forms of war supplies in Central and South America and many lands along our coasts. Fantastic, yes, but it is all in the plans of totalitarian war.

The official theory of the majority of military experts and high government officials of Washington is that inevitably we will be forced into the war. This explains the actions of President Roosevelt and high government officials in taking actions that many of us have deplored. It does not explain their theory of keeping quiet on issues of the greatest importance which seriously affect all of us. To have the fullest cooperation in a democracy, we must have intelligent knowledge of conditions as they actually are. We are entitled to know, and it is to our best interests to know the worst as well as the best. Once more I say, "Give us the facts, it is the sole hope of a united people."

Education Important in National Defense

Michigan State College has been requested to cooperate with President Roosevelt and J. W. Studebaker, national commissioner of education, in urging men not to interrupt their college education, by enlisting in the country's armed forces, according to a letter which R. S. Shaw, president of the college, received recently from Studebaker.

President Shaw, as executive of the college, has been urged to do all that he can to stress the importance of college education in national defense. At the same time the office of education, according to Studebaker's letter, will act through various channels to make both young people and their parents aware that emergencies require trained citizens.

President Roosevelt's statement, issued in a letter to the commissioner of education and quoted in the letter, and French units together with the merchant marine of Holland, Norway and other subdued countries would bring troops, guns, and supplies in huge quantities to the Americas. And right now there are huge depots of all forms of war supplies in Central and South America and many lands along our coasts. Fantastic, yes, but it is all in the plans of totalitarian war.

It is their patriotic duty to continue the normal course of their education, unless and until they are called, so that they will be well-prepared for the greatest usefulness to their country. During recent weeks requests for admittance to the college from prospective freshmen men have greatly increased, says R. S. Linton, registrar. Earlier in the summer, at the time the Burke-Wadsworth bill was first introduced, applications from men were slower than from girls, but the situation is now reversed. Whether or not speed-up in industry, and army and navy enlistments will affect up- perclass men will not be determined until registration begins September 26, according to Linton.

Our Neighbors PINCKNEY - With the arrest of some ten boys and one woman Sheriff Irwin Kennedy has cleaned up some fifteen different thefts, most of them being of farm tools, left in a field or out of doors, although some chickens were taken. Most of the stolen articles were sold to a Howell junk yard. The woman involved in the case and all but one of the boys has been arrested. Most of the boys are under 15 years of age. - Dispatch.

WILLIAMSTON - Although satisfactory water has not yet been found by the village of Williamston in the drilling of test wells here, one of the thickest veins of coal ever reported at that depth in this vicinity has been pierced. The first test well being drilled is on a lot owned by Mrs. Sue Greenaway on Bismark street, north of the river. Although the drillers are down about seventy feet, no satisfactory water has as yet been found. At a depth of 55 feet coal was found and although for about four feet it was mixed with clay and other materials, the drills have already pierced coal to a depth of ten more feet and are still in coal. How extensive this vein may be is not known, but a vein of this thickness at this depth is something new in this area. - Enterprise.

Parents Asked To Keep Sick Children At Home

School belts calling a million Michigan children back to school this week also brought a request from the State Health Department for the cooperation of parents in protecting the health of school children.

Youngsters showing any of the early signs of illness should be kept at home and the family physician promptly called, declared Dr. H. Allen Moyer, state health commissioner. Contrary to the former policy of emphasizing 100 per cent attendance, school and health officials today realize that the health of the whole school population will be better protected if the sick child is kept at home.

Communicable diseases are most rapidly spread during the early stages before a medical diagnosis is obtained. For this reason, youngsters should be isolated at home if they have the colds and fever which are frequently the beginning signs of many of the communicable diseases of childhood.

Dr. Moyer reported definite progress during the past year in the improvement of health instruction and health services in the schools. He attributed much of this improvement to the active leadership which is being given to the school program by the State Department of Public Instruction.

MICHIGAN BELL ADOPTS NEW TYPE FACE FOR DIRECTORIES

Adoption of a new kind of type for directories of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company that will make listings easier to read than now, has been announced by J. E. Johnson, local manager for the company.

The new type, known as "Bell Gothic," is to be used in virtually all forthcoming directories of the company throughout its territory, including the one at this exchange. Bell Gothic differs chiefly from the present type in thinner characters, allowing more space about the characters and thus making for greater legibility.

The next issue of the local telephone directory here will be published in December.

(Continued from last week) He would call the hotel. Miss Sprague was almost terrifyingly efficient. She would be sure to ask him if he had when she returned for the evening office hours. ... LIDA LARRIMORE 'Two Keys to a CABIN' ... 'You've torn several leaves off the calendar. This afternoon I was sure we were in for a blizzard.' ... 'I'm more polite than you were. It's nice. Looks like a halo. Have you had a pleasant winter?' ... 'Very pleasant, thank you. I got a little weary of palm trees and bathing suits, though. I wanted to see snow.'

scowled, then grinned. "You see," he said. "That never happened to me. The desk-clerk told him who you are." ... "Oh, nonsense. You attach too much importance to my name. No body in Maine ever heard of me." ... "I don't believe it. Well, if that's true, it's the way you look. They think you're a movie star. That golden-brown tan." ... "Don't you like it? I worked awfully hard to get it. Maybe I could have myself bleached." ... "Don't you dare," he said. "I love it. You're freckles scarcely show at all." ... She made a laughing grimace. ... "Not that I object to the freckles," he said. His voice softened. His dark eyes, regarding her across the table, were bright but fondly grave. "I love everything about you. You're a little breath-taking until I get used to you. I think I remember, but each time you're a shock. You have beautiful bones." ... "Good Lord! No, I can't." He glanced at his watch. "We must go—office hours." He halted in the process of pulling back his chair. "But you haven't eaten anything—" ... "Neither have you. The head-waiter will think the steak was too well done or too rare. And all these lovely French fried potatoes?" ... "I've got to go, Gay." He signaled the waiter. "You stay and finish and come up to Dr. Sargeant's in a cab." ... "I will not." Her voice was indignant. "I didn't come all the way to Portland, Maine, to eat French fried potatoes." ... His smile thanked her. He glanced at the check and took a bill from his wallet. Gay rose as he pulled back her chair. He cupped his hand beneath her elbow and they walked, circling tables where people, dining, glanced up as they passed, toward the arched doorway into the lobby. ... "Are your things ready?" he asked. "Do you need to go up to your room?" ... "Send a boy. I'll check out." ... "I'll take care of that." ... "No, John. Let me." ... "You're my guest." ... "But, darling—" Her eyes fell from his face. "All right," she said slowly. ... From the divan on which she sat she watched him cross the lobby to the desk, holding himself stiffly, his shoulders erect. Though she saw only his back in the dark Tweed suit, she knew how his face looked, a little grim, the jaw line pronounced, his dark eyes brooding. How silly of him. But how thoughtful of her, perhaps. She must be careful. She must remember— ... When he came back to her, a bell-boy followed with her luggage. John took her loose fur coat from the boy, held it, apologized for hurrying her, but avoided her glance. They went out through a revolving door. Cold wind struck them with unanticipated force. She was blown in a staggering half-circle. He caught her. They stood on the pavement in the light washing out from the hotel. Their eyes met. ... "I'm sorry," she said. "I thought—" ... "You were right." His eyes were penitent, his slow smile self-reproachful. "I was showing off. Forgive me." ... Gay laughed as John approached the open door of the second-floor sitting-room in Dr. Sargeant's home. Mary Adams' voice continued, then broke off as John called in from the hall. ... "The last patient gone?" she asked, glancing up from needles that flashed through scarlet wool. ... "I've padocked the office door." He went to Gay, settled comfortably in a corner of the davenport and dropped down beside her. ... "Mary, do you think that professional ethics would permit me to cut the telephone wires?" ... "I shouldn't hesitate," she replied briskly and stabbed an amber needle through the rolled length of knit wool. ... Mary folded her knitting and stabbed a needle through the bundle of wool. "There'll be a greater possibility of Miss Graham's liking me if I disappear tactfully now." ... "Don't run away, Mary." ... Her small brown face twinkled. "You aren't very convincing, John." She rose from the chair beneath the lamp. "You can have breakfast anytime you like," she said, smiling at Gay. "John has his pretty early." ... "I'll have breakfast with John. Will you call me?" ... "The children will probably attend to that. You've made a terrific impression on my son, Nat. He's a susceptible young man. Good-night." ... "Good-night, Mrs. Adams. And thank you." ... "I do like her," Gay said when Mary Adams had gone out and closed the door. ... "Mary's very fine." John dropped down on the davenport again. ... "She tells me that her husband is in Manila." ... "Yes, for two years. Mary had a bad case of typhoid last summer and Dr. Sargeant thought it unwise for her to go with him. She's not very strong and the tropics are enervating. Those two kids are a handful." ... "They're darlings. I helped her put them to bed. I want two boys and two girls." ... "Do you?" His dark eyes were amused and tender. "Do you want children, Gay?" ... (To be continued)

"GOLDEN RULE DAYS" ARE HERE AGAIN

DRIVE CAREFULLY
 THE GOLDEN RULE A GOOD RULE
 FOR AUTOMOBILE DRIVERS

By Fred W. Braun, The Safety Man

School Days are here again—"Dear Old Golden Rule Days" which mean extra careful driving for motorists who value the life of a child. Back-to-School brings many excited youngsters to the streets—many of them making their first trip to school and are ignorant of the dangers of traffic and extra driving caution is necessary for motorists wherever small school children are apt to be.

School-child auto accidents are decreasing—thanks to careful driving and safety education in the schools, but the number of them is still cause for extreme consideration and, while it does not seem possible to eliminate
