TECUMSEH—Lenawee county officers are seeking a band of motor thieves who, in the past few weeks, are said to have been responsible for the theft of some 60 five-horse electric motors, used to operate conveyors in coal yards. Last week, a motor was stolen from the Motrum Coal Company's yards here, and similar thefts were reported in Blissfield and Hudson. Sheriff's deputies said that the motors used are of a special make, and that the manufacturers recently advised officers that they had had inquiries from more than 60 concerns where thefts had been reported.—Herald.

Sheep Shearers Will Meet February 17-18

Approximately a million sheep get sheared each spring in Michigan, so the Michigan State College schedules another sheep shearers' short course for Monday and Tuesday, Feb. 17-18, at East Lansing.

Carl Hakes, Hanover, Michigan's champion sheep shear, will be on the program to assist beginners. He will help E. S. Bartlett, Chicago, internationally known professional shear. Custom shearers are invited to bring in their equipment for comments and suggestions.

First demonstration is scheduled at 1:30 p. m. Monday in the livestock pavilion with practice on shearing and tying of wool. Dr. L. B. Sholl of the college veterinary staff will perform diagnosis and post mortems on specimen sheep brought in to the conference. G. A. Brown, head of the college animal husbandry department, will aid in the discussion. E. L. Cole will outline record of performance work in farm flocks.

An evening meeting will be in the form of roundtable discussion, led by C. M. Harrison, college specialist on pasture management.

More demonstrations of proper shearing and practice are scheduled for Tuesday morning. There will be information offered on wool grades and flock management. In the afternoon the group will complete the two-day course with a program at the Union building. Subjects offered will include portable sheep dipping equipment, contest shearing, and custom shearing. E. L. Benton, specialist in livestock extension, has arranged program details.

Lizards Squirt Bloody Fluid
Naturalists visiting tropical South America report that some of the large lizards there have the habit, when on the defense, of squirting small jets of bloody fluid from the corners of their eyes to a distance of several feet.

By Gene Allenman

State Capitol, Lansing — Stalwart partisans who take their politics seriously and who, likewise, believe devoutly in party responsibility, find Michigan's 1941 state government to be downright disturbing.

The "good old days," verily, are slipping fast into memories. Whether for good or bad, better or worse, we are headed in a new direction, come what may. As every action brings a reaction, as the pendulum swings invariably from one side to another, so Michigan is undergoing a significant change.

And it is all the result of a steady trend in public opinion—how we look at things.

Independence

When voters went to the polls last November, they did not act deliberately with cool, calm forethought to create today's bi-partisan rule at Lansing. They merely voted for their favorites.

Privileges of a democracy made it possible for them to choose simultaneously three Republicans (secretary of state, attorney general, and auditor general), and two Democrats (governor and state treasurer) while maintaining a Republican majority in each branch of the state legislature. And that's scrambling 'em a bit!

And yet the old-fashioned idea of putting one cross in one circle at the top of the ballot has been fading in Michigan for the past decade or so. It is the time of independent voters.

F. D. R.'s New Deal
At Washington in 1933 a truly political phenomenon occurred.

Franklin Delano Roosevelt began his famous "New Deal" with the aid of Republican Harold Ickes as secretary of the interior and Republican Henry Wallace as secretary of agriculture.

In New York City a dynamic coalition candidate by the name of Fiorella H. La Guardia upset an entrenched Tammany.

Arthur Vandenberg, a man who has never been a politician in the true sense of the word and who has not been actively identified with party organization, became one of our outstanding independent leaders in the United States senate. The primary system, originally conceived as a remedy for boss-plagued conventions, paved the way.

In 1939 the voters of Michigan upheld in referendum a non-partisan judiciary, a reaction against a so-called political judiciary.

In 1940 the same voters stripped the legislature of its patronage powers and instituted a drastic and somewhat revolutionary program of civil service, jobs by merit.

Gymnastics

Concurrently, the independent voters in 1940 performed other mental gymnastics just as remarkable.

They cast a majority for Wendell L. Willkie, who was a lifelong Democrat until recently. They cast a majority also for Murray D. Van Wagoner.

Never in its history had the Republican party broke precedent nationally by crossing party line in its selection of a presidential candidate. The man, not the emblem, proved to be the irresistible magnet.

But this change in political thinking has not been the exclusive virtue for sin, depending on how you look at it) of any one party. Witness these acts: The late Governor Frank Fitzgerald appointed a study commission for civil service, and his successor, Frank Murphy, signed the legislative act. Governor Murphy then appointed a study commission to recommend reforms in parole and prison management, and when a Democratic legislature provided for a bi-partisan commission, Republicans did not move to revise it.

Bi-Partisan Trend

Today's current dispute over bi-partisan appointment of the state commissioner of agriculture is just another case at point.

An administration measure would take the commissioner out of politics through appointment by a long-term bi-partisan commission. Counter to this Van Wagoner farm reform is a McPherson-sponsored bill for the commissioner's appointment by the state board of agriculture, Michigan State college's elective governing body.

Also being kicked around at Lansing is the idea of letting bi-partisan boards appoint the state highway commissioner and the state superintendent of public instruction.

A 1941 legislative bill would have regents of the University of Michigan elected by non-partisan ballots.

And so the signs multiply. Michigan's bi-partisan administration appears to be, in part, the culmination of a trend of popular thinking that has disregarded party labels in an insistent quest for more efficient and responsive government. What will be the voters' reaction to this? That answer is yet to be written.

GIRL SCOUT NEWS

Girl Scouts held a pot-luck supper and Court of Honor, Monday night, February 3.

Many were promoted to Tenderfoot Scouts. Others received Merit Badges and other honors.

If there are any girls that would like to become Scouts please come as soon as you can. We will be glad to have you.

We plan to have a camp this year and to do that we must (1) attend at least 20 meetings unless too ill to go to school, (2) Live up to the Girl Scout Laws and Teachings, (3) Have their dues of fifty cents paid by April 1, 1941, (4) Go from a Tenderfoot Scout to a Second Class Scout, or from a Second Class to a First Class Scout, or earn one Merit Badge, (5) Any girl who is eligible to be a Scout and who lives near Chelsea, who joins the Scouts after April 1, 1941, shall not go to camp this year. The Girl Scout Council made this rule because camp is a reward for a year's work in Scouting and has been earned by those who are faithful in attendance, persevering work, and should not be enjoyed by those who have waited until the last minute to join. (6) Camp will cost two dollars for the week. (7) The Troop will be expected to earn whatever is needed for camp this year, as there is nearly enough in the treasury for camp expenses now. (8) The Council expects that the girls shall each year do something to aid the community or other organization for which they will receive a material reward.

LIBRARY NEWS

Many people are asking: Why do we have to vote on a tax levy for the library again, when it was voted at the village election in 1938? It was believed that the original ballot would be sufficient. At that time the library expected to use only one-half mill of the one mill allowed by law and unintentionally it was stated in that manner on the ballot. The board was given to believe that the budget could be increased to the one mill tax levy as needed by the library. When an increase was instituted in the budget last spring it was found that the issue would have to be brought to the vote of the people again because of the ineffectiveness of the ballot. A one mill tax levy is allowed by state law for library purposes in municipalities such as Chelsea. No more can be levied.

The curtailment of funds has as yet not greatly effected the library service except in the purchase of new books. Very few books have been purchased since Nov. 1, 1940 and there is hardly enough money for the necessities such as rent, salary and maintenance.

It will be impossible to continue with the present funds during the next year without reducing considerably the number of library periods weekly and the purchase of books to a level far below that of the past years. These are the two largest factors which help to make the library.

Four hundred new patrons have registered at the library since it has been open every day. The library has received many compliments concerning the quality and standard of its books as compared with other libraries of its size. The community of Chelsea would surely wish to continue the same or better library service to its patrons in the future.

The approximate annual income of the library is as follows:

1/2 mill tax levy ..... $740.00
Sylvan Township ..... 100.00
Lima Township ..... 50.00
London Township ..... 40.00
Receipts from Library ..... 100.00

The estimated monthly expenses of the library, not including the purchase of a single book, magazine or book repair, are:

Rent ..... $35.00
Salary ..... 33.33
Maintenance ..... 6.00
Supplies ..... 5.00
Petty Cash ..... 3.00

$82.33

Here are FOUR NEW ADDITIONS to the BUICK SPECIAL Line that Compact
Motorcar Bigness into Handy Size

Buick SPECIAL 4-door
Sedan, model 47, $1021.*

TIME was when you measured a car's ability and standing by the yardstick distance from bumper to bumper.

But not any more — not since Buick made ready the four new additions to its 1941 SPECIAL series that are built for big-car travel tastes — and small-car garages!

They are cars to take the measure of almost anything on the road in the lift and life of their 115-hp.
Buick FIREBALL engines.*

*Add Compound Carburetion at slight extra cost and horsepower steps up to 125 while gasoline mileage goes even higher.

They are cars with room for all the family, with all the little Buick luxury touches, with the unrivaled comfort of Buick's all-coil springing and steady-going roadability.

But bumper to bumper they are shorter — so they fit your garage.
Their wheelbase is 118 inches, so they park like a bicycle and fit through traffic with ridiculous ease.

They go farther on every gallon — farther, even, than other Buicks.

So you can't take their measure with a yardstick.

You've got to measure them by what they do for you — in the easier handling, the bigger thrill, the extra convenience they add — and by prices made lower by their new compactness.

How about seeing them — now?

KIWANIS NEWS

On Monday evening Bert Parrish, Governor of the Michigan District of Kiwanis International, addressed the Kiwanians upon the patriotic subject, "Lincoln the Man." The speaker described Abraham Lincoln in a different light than various other historians have portrayed him. Mr. Parrish clearly explained that, in addition to his fine personal qualities, Lincoln had extremely good breeding and was an immaculate dresser when he was in Washington. He stated that the most remarkable feature of Lincoln's character was his intense human interest. The speaker pointed out that Abraham Lincoln had the admirable traits of cooperating with the group in order that they might attain all benefit the community and nation as well as retaining his own personal ideas and always striving to carry out his honest convictions. Mr. Parrish concluded his interesting talk by reading "The Human Interest," a poem which he said most completely illustrated the fine qualities of the man Lincoln.

John Lamb, co-chairman of the Washington Day Dance, announced that he had the tickets for this affair which is to be held at the Chelsea high school gym on February 22. He stated that his committee had selected Gordon Hardy and his Orchestra, currently featured at the Michigan Union in Ann Arbor, to play the music for this occasion. ## Informal Digest of Intangible Tax Law

(Published by the Michigan State Tax Commission)

This outline is in no sense a comprehensive review of the law, and no attempt is made herein to cover all provisions of the act. It is a plain English discussion designed to answer only those questions which most people ask. More detailed literature is available. The law is as simple as the taxation provisions of the State Constitution will permit.

The 1939 Legislature enacted the law which imposes annually, beginning in 1940, a tax on intangible personal property, reaching a form of wealth not heretofore taxed, for the most part. The tax is due on or before March 1, annually, beginning in 1940. Corporations keeping their books on a fiscal year basis not coinciding with the calendar year, may apply to the Commission for permission to pay their taxes on this basis. Taxes will be due annually within 60 days after the close of individual fiscal years.

Intangible personal property taxable under the act includes money, stocks and bonds, mortgages and land contracts, accounts, receivable, royalties, annuities—all credits or evidences of indebtedness.

If your average bank balance in 1940 was $3,000 or less, you can forget about the tax as far as bank deposits go. If, in 1940, you had an average of more than $3,000 in a bank or banks, then your tax is $1 for each $1,000 in excess of the exemption of $3,000. If the money was anywhere else, such as in a postal savings account, in a safety deposit box, or in your pocket, then there is no exemption, and your tax will be $1 for each $1,000 of your average cash-on-hand during 1940.

If your tax amounts to $7 or less, you have no tax to pay, and no return to make. This means that if bank deposits are the only intangible holdings you own, you could have $10,000 in the bank and still owe no tax.

Man and wife file individual returns, each taking both exemptions, which would mean $20,000 in deposits for which there would be no tax. Some banks are paying the deposit tax for their depositors.

What was your average bank balance in 1940?

The Tax Commission has ruled you may call your September 30 balance, the 1940 average. The date was set after September 30 had passed. Some date will be thus chosen each year.

If you think that September 30 does not fairly reflect your average intangible holdings for 1940, you may average by the month, quarterly, or semi-annually. But if you select one method of determining the average of one class of holdings, such as your bank balance, then that same method determines the average of all your taxable credits the value of which changed during 1940.

There are two kinds of intangibles under the act: non-income producing and income producing. For non-income producing, the tax is a flat $1 per $1,000 of face value per year. For income producing, the tax is 6 per cent of the income, but in no case less than $1 nor more than $3 per $1,000 face value per year. If you hold intangibles for less than a year, you pay proportionately less tax.

The tax is too low to justify anyone in trying to evade it. All federal income tax returns filed by those subject to this law, are open to inspection by the Michigan State Tax Commission. The state will get one-third the net revenues, informally estimated at from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 annually; cities and counties the balance, in proportion to population.

The stock of corporations, all of the property of which is wholly within Michigan, is not taxed. The stock of corporations, all the property of which is wholly outside Michigan, is fully taxable. Thus, to the extent that the property of any corporation is located within Michigan, its stock is exempt. The Commission has compiled a list of more than 20,000 corporations showing the percentage of taxability of their stock, and will furnish information concerning any company not on this list, of which ten thousand copies have been distributed throughout Michigan, to assessors, county and city treasurers, banks, building and loan associations and others who are asked for this and other literature.

Stock in banks and building and loan associations is taxable at rates which vary for each such institution each of which computes this rate by means of a formula furnished them. Your bank and building and loan associations can tell you the taxable portion of such stock you own.

Mortgages and land contracts are taxable unless the old mortgage tax of 50 cents per $1,000 had been paid on them previous to September 29, 1939, the effective date of the act.

Accounts receivable are taxed at $1 a $1,000 if non-income producing; otherwise at the rate for other income producing intangibles. Corporations may offset receivables with certain payables. Worthless notes are subject to bona fide charge-offs; securities are not deemed worthless unless the process of liquidation has been completed. Money in a closed bank is taxable without deduction until receivership has ended.

Persons with royalty or annuity problems not solved by study of tax return forms or other available literature should write the State Tax Commission, Intangible Tax Division at Lansing.

No tax is levied on intangibles owned by the state of Michigan or any subdivision of government, nor on intangibles owned by certain benevolent, charitable, religious, educational and scientific institutions incorporated in Michigan. Railroads, telegraph and virtually all insurance companies are exempt because they already pay other specific taxes, but the stock of such corporations owned by others is not exempt. Banks, trust companies, building and loan, savings and loan associations and credit unions are exempt, though their stock is not. Nor are, of course, their deposits.

Deposits of Michigan residents in out-of-state banks are taxable unless they are actually taxed outside Michigan and are used in connection with business where they are taxed. This applies to other intangible holdings as well.

In general, all intangible property having "situs" in Michigan, is taxable. To have "situs," it must be owned by a person living in Michigan, or it must be used in connection with business in Michigan, no matter where the owner lives. Corporations file lists of their stockholders with the Tax Commission.

The constitutionality of the Intangible Tax Act has been upheld by the Michigan Supreme Court.

Editorial

How many citizens of Chelsea completely understand the objectives set up by their public school system? Probably if some method of questioning could be devised to test the actual knowledge of the average citizen about the school to which he is sending his boy or girl, the score might not be as high as we would like to have it.

The standard departments teaching the fundamentals of the three R's have long since been established and their purposes have either been accepted or taken for granted. Education has expanded and developed beyond the realm of the three R's, many new departments have been established to meet the needs of our young people. One of the newer types of education is being offered our high school people in the form of vocational education. This type of education is a partial answer to the realization that on the average, only about one out of every fifty high school graduates ever wears the cap and gown of a college graduate.

In Chelsea we have two vocational departments, home economics and agriculture. The department of vocational agriculture is sponsored to help those of the remaining forty-nine who in our rural community might want to become established in farming. The philosophy of vocational agriculture is that a boy learns by doing. For this reason boys who enroll in agriculture are required to carry projects. Theoretically a boy should, through some arrangement with his parents, carry one of the projects such as a calf, hog, sheep, crop or other project and receive some actual experience in farming.

This, however, is often merely theoretical. A boy may be forced to care for an enterprise without receiving any monetary return. This in itself does not make for a desirable beginning for a boy who wants someday to become a farmer in business for himself. In addition, if the boy does actually own the project that he cares for and keeps records on, he may not be allowed to practice the things he is taught to do in the classroom. Fathers sometimes feel it easier to manage everything themselves and do not spend money to their sons. Would it not seem more logical that a boy who is given a small interest in the farming business of his home farm, be more likely to take a genuine interest and want to stay home after graduation? This interest need not be great. Any small responsibility the boy is allowed to take is learning in itself. If in addition he is allowed to use some approved practice on this project and receives some return from the enterprise, he might not only learn to farm better, but also would be earning some of the spending money "dad" has had to provide.

The effectiveness of vocational training is largely dependant upon the guidance and cooperation of the parents. The Chelsea vocational agriculture department welcomes suggestions from parents of its students that would make it a better department.

Office News

On Tuesday, February 14, Sam Grathwell spoke at an assembly at 8:30 a. m. His talk concerned the activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The Speech II class under the direction of Mr. Chandler went to Manchester on Wednesday, February 12 to present a program at the high school. On Thursday, February 13 (today), Manchester will come here and present a program for our students. This is sponsored by the student council.

The Hi-Y club of Ann Arbor high school held a joint conference with the Hi-Y club of our school on Tuesday, February 11 at Chelsea.

The Hi-Y club is sponsoring a dance for the students immediately after the close of the basketball game between Romulus and Chelsea on Friday, February 14.

The band will play at the basketball game between Romulus and Chelsea on Friday, February 14. This will be the first time the band has played during a basketball game this season.

The evening dance was still being held in Agriculture and Home Economics every Thursday evening at 8:00. Mr. Bust has charge of the class in Agriculture and the Home Economics class is under the direction of Miss Mozzall.

Dr. Courts of the University of Michigan will meet with the faculty of our school on Wednesday, Feb. 13. Mrs. Jeffers, an assistant to Miss Pearl Haist, the county nurse, will visit our school every other Tuesday, starting with the first Tuesday of every month.

Pep Meeting

A pep meeting, sponsored by the Juniors, was held last Tuesday morning, February 12 in the study hall. A new idea, very good too, was introduced by the Juniors. Instead of the usual performance, Dick Cheney turned on the radio and played tunes in from a broadcast.

Jane Schlosser acted as master of ceremonies. Miss McDonald, members of the girls' basketball team, members of the boys' basketball team and others all said a few words concerning the Manchester game. Afterwards Mr. Johnson gave a short talk and the meeting was concluded with the school song played by Margaret Harper.

Girls' Basketball

On February 1 the girls of the Manchester basketball team came to Chelsea for the basketball game scheduled for 8:00 p. m. The referee was Miss L. Clingman of Ann Arbor.

The starting lineup for Manchester was: D. Trolz, S. Chanely, B. Brown, forwards; R. Esch, M. Bueby, N. Wurster, guards. For Chelsea, B. Fletcher, Captain, V. Lucht, L. Palmer, forwards; G. Riemschneider, M. Harper, J. Leckman, guards.

Manchester received the center throw, but lost it to the Chelsea guards. Before the ball reached shooting position however, Manchester had proceeded to recover it and the Manchester girls scored a basket. At the first quarter the score was 8-0 in favor of Manchester. B. Fletcher succeeded in chalking up two points for Chelsea in the second quarter but Manchester got six more points, making the score 9-2 at the half.

Manchester did quite a bit of substituting but only two substitutions in the Chelsea line-up were made—W. Schweinfurth for V. Lucht and H. Miller for M. Harper.

The Chelsea forwards did not seem to be able to get in shooting position and at the end of third quarter the score was 11-2, Manchester's favor. The Chelsea guards, however, did a very good job of offensive playing and succeeded a great many times in taking tip-offs.

The Manchester squad is a very fast team and also has some very tall members. Manchester has had a team for quite some time and this is really Chelsea's first year. The final score was: Manchester 17, Chelsea 2. The local team expects to go to Pinckney February 13 (today) and will go to U. High on February 21.

Band and Orchestra

The Chelsea high school band will play Friday, Feb. 14 at the basketball game here, between Chelsea and Romulus and also the swing band will furnish the music for the dance to be held after the game.

All the music is here and the band has been practicing for the annual Huron League Band Festival, which is to be held at Clinton on March 4. In the afternoon each band will play separately and about forty or fifty people will be selected from each of these bands to make up a selected band which will play in the evening.

Assembly

The assembly, sponsored by the Juniors, was held in study hall last Tuesday, Feb. 4 at 12:45. First the whole assembly joined in the singing of various songs, led by Martha Barber. Then Roderick McDonald conducted a truth or consequences program. Victims for the program were selected from the assembled group in the study hall.

The assembly was concluded by all joining in the singing of another song.

Senior News

The Seniors have decided upon their play, which is "Who's Crazy Now." Try-outs were held Monday.

The Class of '41 has been debating whether or not they will hold the traditional class day exercises. Thus far they have arrived at no conclusion.

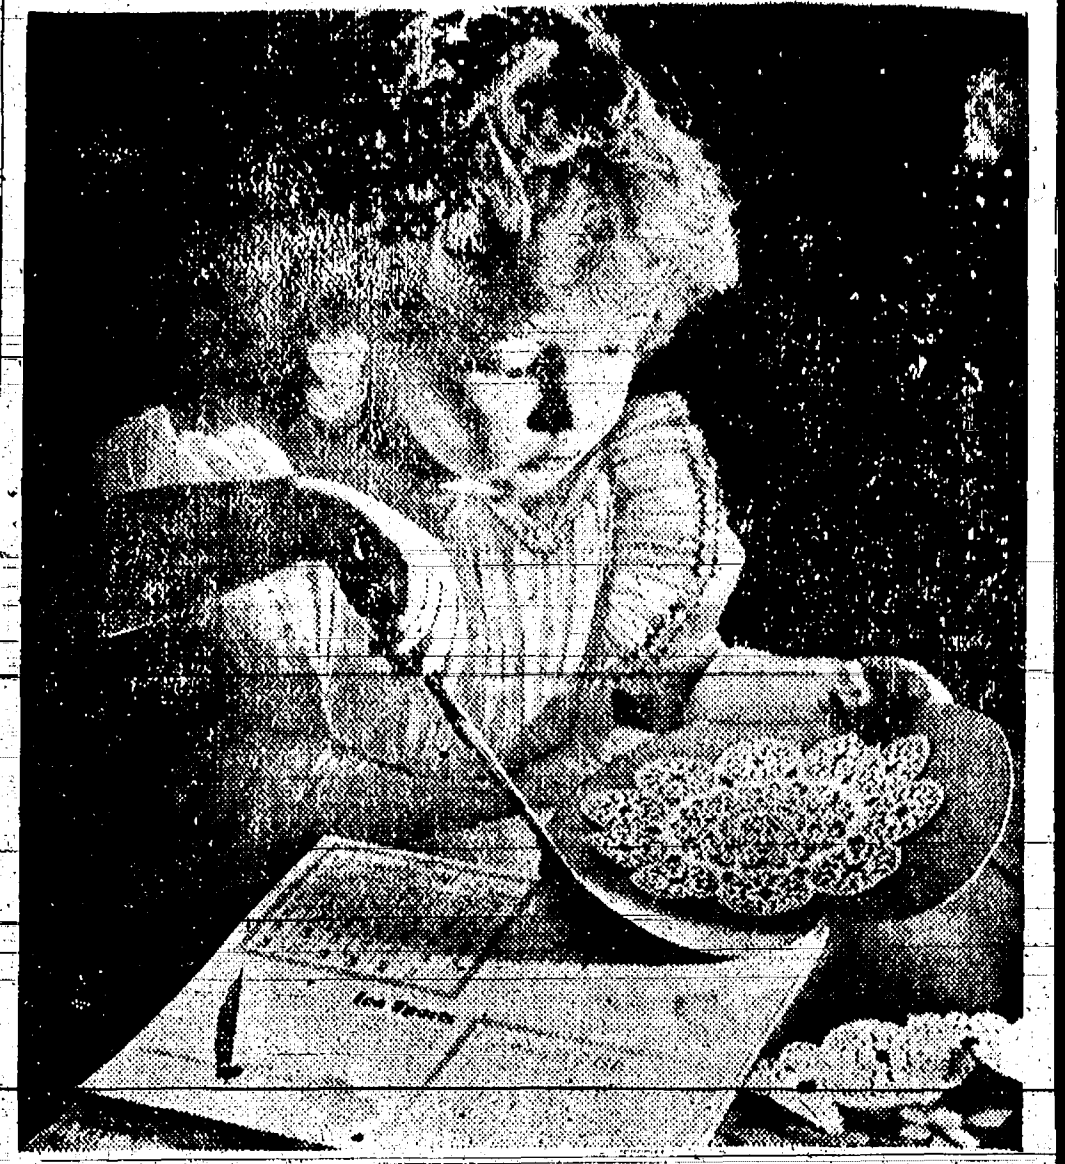

As a gentle reminder the Seniors again mention tooth paste tubes, in other words if you have any empty tubes give them to any Senior, and they will be "eternally" grateful as their treasury funds need swelling.

Will You Be My Valentine?

Just like Grandmother used to make—a 1941 version of the years-ago sentimental Valentine which young and old alike will stuff into mail boxes on February 14. Not elaborate or frilly in style, this year's Valentine nevertheless bears the quaint, old-fashioned "hearts and flowers" message of love. And letter carriers will, of course, receive their annual cordial doorstep welcome, for, after all, they deliver the sweetest merchandise in all the world!

to give to our parents and friends. We have a lot of fun making them.

Sixth Grade

We have two new pupils in our room. Their names are Beulah Jones and Marion Craig.

At our Sports club meeting Thursday we elected new officers for the class. They are: President, Henry Merkel; vice-president, Loren Munro; secretary, Clara Miller; treasurer, Bob Daniels. We also drew names for secret-pals and for Valentine day.

We had two basketball games last week between our class teams. At the first game, the captains were Charles Popp and Ray Knickerbocker. The referee was Loren Munro. Ray's team won. At the other game Bob Daniels and Loren Munro were the two captains. Ray Knickerbocker was referee. Loren's team won.

We are glad to have several pupils who have been ill back with us this week.

Seventh Grade

(Jane Downey and John Wellnitz) The seventh grade has taken to ping-pong, and how! We play in the high school ping-pong room. Charley Stane and Leroy May are two of our flashiest players.

We are going to have a Valentine party. We drew names and appointed committees February 6. The program committee includes Ed Lantis, Joanne Shutes, Philip Tompkins, Jean Eisenberger; the food committee is Donna Perkins, Leroy May, Barbara Eaton. To make the box for our Valentines we chose Walter Freysinger, Robert Faber, June Vail. We all belong to the cleanup squad.

There are several Boy or Girl Scouts in the seventh grade; many of them have recently earned merit badges. John Wellnitz sold 43 tickets for the basketball game played last Saturday night.

We are doing a little geometry in arithmetic class; we have changed from public safety to science, and from geography to history. In English we are writing telegrams and letters; in home economics the girls are making scrapbooks on good grooming.

Our quotation is from Benjamin Franklin: "Sloth, like rust, consumes faster than labor wears."

Eighth Grade

Reporters: Naida Olson and Melva Myers.

The girls in 7th and 8th grade home economics are making scrapbooks on Personal Care.

We received our report cards last Wednesday and most of us are satisfied with our marks.

The Home Ec. club girls are putting a couch, a double dressing table, and a full length mirror in the girls' rest room. The 7th and 8th grade girls are helping them by making posters to hang in the rest room. We hope all the girls will cooperate.

A man from the Federal Bureau of Investigation talked here Tuesday, Feb. 11 at 8:30 in the morning. Many of our pupils attended.

Employees on Farms

On January 1, 1939, there were about 1,629,000 hired workers, in addition to 7,138,000 family workers on farms in the United States.

Check Spare Tire

Spare tires which are carried in the luggage compartment or behind seats, as is the case of late model cars, are often overlooked when the other tires are checked for air pressure, according to the Automobile Club of Southern California. Emergency road service men frequently report finding the spare tire flat or nearly so when called on to change a tire. Loss of life occurs in spare tires just the same as in those which are in use, and spares should be checked every time the other tires are given air.

State Police Find Fifth Columnists In Michigan

Michigan's potential fifth columnists—9,374 of them—have been spotted and catalogued by the Michigan State Police.

Commissioner Oscar G. Olander states that his list is growing every day. The 9,374 represent the roundup in the first five months by his new division to combat subversive activity.

Files the state trooper organization are building as part of its national defense protective system include not only names and addresses of potential saboteurs but the ways in which each suspect might assist the enemy if war comes—retard the state's preparedness efforts.

The aim is to be a jump ahead of developments and round up foreign agents at the right time, according to Commissioner Olander. He warned that a wave of vigilantism might frighten suspects into moving where state police could not apprehend them instantaneously.

The new state police division was organized last August and the personnel now includes 24 district detectives, a detective lieutenant and a sergeant plus one to two men at each post who are also assigned to investigation of subversive activities. This force has been engaged exclusively in defense work that embraced investigation of espionage and sabotage, plant intelligence work, surveys of law enforcement agencies, protection of vital points in the state essential to national defense, and cooperative work in these fields with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Naval and Army Intelligence, United States Bureau of Immigration, Federal communications commission and local draft boards.

Several hundred of Michigan's suspected saboteurs and subverters are known because of patriotic concern of citizens who keep an eye on their neighbors in perilous times. One man in each of the 41 state police posts is assigned to receive complaints relative to suspected subversive activities—and hundreds of these complaints, upon investigation, proved valuable in the roundup.

The report cites completion of arrangements whereby Michigan and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police exchange information on subversive activity and cooperate in anti-espionage work along 650 miles of border and within the respective boundaries of each.

An extensive file of information has been compiled, Commissioner Olander said. Information is available both in alphabetical order and also by counties. Thus subversive activity in any area can be checked against un-American individuals and groups in that section.

In connection with the 9,374 known disloyalists catalogued in Michigan, Commissioner Olander said there were 186 locations in the state where his men had investigated and had under surveillance the meeting places of subversive groups.

Commissioner Olander declared that all complaints reaching his men from citizens suspecting disloyal activity are investigated fully and confidentially. "We feel that when a citizen or organization has enough patriotic spirit and civic pride to offer us such information, it is our duty to investigate," he said. "We feel that as long as we can assure the state of Michigan that all of these complaints are being carefully investigated—this, in itself is a contributing factor in preventing hysteria and minimizing disloyal activity."

Treat Clean Wheat Seed

Two of the most important things in growing wheat are to treat the seed for stinking smut and clean out the weed seeds before planting it, according to J. C. Hackleman, crops extension specialist of the University of Illinois. Loose smut, which doesn't reduce the milling value of wheat as does stinking smut, is not controllable with chemical dusts. Hackleman presents United States department of agriculture figures which show that in 17 southern Illinois counties all but four have had losses from dockage because of the presence of cheat, cockle and other weed seeds.

"World's Oldest Corn"

For 20 years, the Smithsonian Institution exhibited the "world's oldest ear of corn," a Peruvian treasure that was held by paleobotanists for several thousand years old. In 1922, it was re-examined by other scientists who found that it was only a clay replica of an ear of ancient maize with cavities containing pellets. It was a homemade rattle.

New Fashions Dignified,

More Natural Silhouette

Nellie was a lady—back in Victorian days—but not a bit more of a lady than her great-granddaughter Helen will be the winter of 1940-41.

The important note in women's wear news is the slimmer, more graceful—and more natural—silhouette. Shoulders and sleeves are straight—not exaggerated; skirts are slim-looking but sufficient for a natural stride. Untrimmed coats are important, fur is used less lavishly on dressy coats, collars are smaller, prettier and often detachable.

Costume suits, matching dresses and coats are top fashion, and the coats are made so that they can be worn with other dresses as well. Skirts stay at 15 to 18 inches, depending on the wearer, dress necklines are high, hats tend more to fit the head.

Gold is the leader in jewelry, but it is never bold or garish. It, too, goes for the quiet elegance that suits the lady of fashion best. Only on the Americana note does the jewelry style trend become bold, with jeweled military pins, insignias, lapel ornaments like medals, and the American flag over and over again for every belt, neckline and lapel, enameled or twinkling with true red, white and blue stones.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I—George McAnisland was 20 years old when he sailed from America to undertake his post as a missionary in the Fiji Islands. Since he had been committed to it of excitement had shattered all his confidence in himself. He felt forced to avoid pretty Mary Donahoe, who boarded the ship at Honolulu. She was en route to visit her parents, who were missionaries on Gilead Island. Mary was attracted by George's attempts to avoid her. One day George accidentally fell overboard.

CHAPTER II—Mary unhesitatingly dove into the sea to rescue George. Now George had to talk to her. His fears were realized when he began to fall in love with her. When the boat approached her home on Gilead Island, they learned that Mary's parents had both died.

CHAPTER III—George volunteered to take charge of the mission which had been vacated by the deaths of Mary's parents. He faced the necessity of losing Mary if he left her now. George forced himself to ask her to be his wife. Mary accepted his clumsy proposal, and she left the ship to live in her former home on the island.

"If I know you're safe, I'll be all right," he told her. "You can help me most by going into the hills."

So Mary consented; and since George thought the schooner might come into the bay tonight, he wished her to go at once. Jarambo put her into the care of two young men; and they took her far up one of the trails, that climbed steeply among the peaks, to the house of an old man whom her father had called Isiah, who was now called Itai, who lived like a hermit high above the bay.

When they came to his house the young men explained why Mary was there. Itai made sounds of assent; and he led the way to a bold promontory from which they could see the schooner south of the island, moving slowly on light airs.

At sunset she was still far away. Mary and the old man and the two young men her guardians slept that night on a great bed of heaped dry grass, with a coconut-log polished by long usage to serve as pillow for them all. The three men slept without sound, but she lay long awake thinking of George. George, she understood well enough, was always afraid; yet he never yielded to that fear, nor admitted it, except that he had now admitted that he was afraid for her sake. When she slept at last her dreams were troubled; and when she woke, it was with a leap of her heart as though some outcry had alarmed her.

When they had eaten, dipping together into the gourd, Itai led them again to the outlook to watch the schooner work her way into the roads and drop anchor there. No canoes went off to meet her; and Mary thought, happy in his victory. "George would not let them go."

Hours later they brought George to her, slung in a hammock of vines between two poles; his eyes closed, his lips white. He was unconscious, but he was alive.

Mary, when she saw that George was still alive, wept with grief because he was hurt, but with gladness too, because now she could tend him and keep him here secure. Four young men had brought him. They laid him down, and old Itai drew near.

Mary saw that a bullet had entered George's left breast near the side, coming out under his arm, tearing the thin muscles of his arm as it emerged. When the hurts were exposed, Itai leaned closer and touched the wound of entrance firmly. His fingers like claws felt along the ill-fleshed ribs to the spot where the bullet had emerged; and then the old man clicked his tongue, and stood up and hobbled away.

George lay limp and still, his eyes closed, his head on one side without strength in his neck, his hands limp on the mat upon which they had laid him.

Old Itai returned, mumbling to himself, with leaves fresh-plucked, and a bulbous fruit. He squeezed juice out of the fruit upon the wound of entrance.

Itai bade the young men turn the hurt man on his side while he applied the stinging juice to the torn wounds below the shoulder and on the arm. Then he bound leaves over these wounds with strips of torn petticoat which Mary offered him. When George was bandaged, Itai spoke to the young men. With- in the hour George had been carried deep into the forest; a shelter had been reared for him of poles bound together with vines and lashed with palm and breadfruit leaves, and he and Mary were hidden safe away.

Mary sat beside George. Itai squatting a little way off, mumbling to himself.

She asked one of the young men for Jarambo; but he shook his head, not filled her thoughts, excluding all else. She must have seen a tautness in these young men, as though they were waiting, listening. But she thought only of her husband; and when in midafternoon he opened his eyes and looked at her, she spoke in a quick tenderness, close beside him.

"Quiet, my dear," she said. "You're all right. We're safe. Quiet. Rest, my dear."

He stared past her, stared straight up at the thatch above them. She thought he did not know he spoke. He said: "They were angry because no canoes met them. They smashed their boat against the rocks getting ashore, and that made them more angry. One was a red-headed man with a red beard and red hair all over his chest. They all had guns. I told them we didn't want them here, and the red-headed man put his hand against me and pushed me over backward. One of the others shot me before I could get up." He looked at her with a deep shame at his own weakness. "I faint, Mary, like a woman."

"You couldn't do anything against their guns, George. Now rest, dear."

His eyes closed. "Like a woman," he muttered again, and sighed, and slept.

In the morning George was stronger, able to sit up with Mary to support him, her arms around him, his shoulders leaning against her breast. The young men were gone when she woke, but later they returned, and Mary saw a red gleam in their eyes, and their eyes would not meet hers. She wondered, and her heart began to beat hard with a sort of premonition, but she was not afraid of what would happen. She thought that in some strange way she was terrified by something already past; but she decided this was merely the reaction from her alarm of yesterday, now eased, and put the fear aside.

"What has happened?" she asked. His eyes flickered with something curiously like dismay; and he looked at his companion, then at Mary again, without replying. She insisted: "Is the ship still there?"

She realized that he was confused by some strange sense of guilt; and her pulse pounded in her wrist. She looked back at George. He was asleep; so for the moment he no longer needed her. She said firmly to the young men:

"Take me to Jarambo. Or bring Jarambo to me."

After a moment, one of them turned and darted off through the forest. The other spoke, bidding her come. Presently ahead of her she heard a call go down the mountain, summoning Jarambo.

Soon Jarambo spoke at her elbow and she turned.

The old man met her eyes and waited. She had never been afraid of him, but she was afraid of Jarambo now. There was that in his eyes she had never seen there, a blaze like a leaping fire, a drunk fury, a reckless intoxication. But this was not the drunkenness of rum. Nevertheless he was drunk with something. She looked at him intently; and suddenly her head rose.

She said: "Jarambo, tell me."

He said, under his breath: "Long time we were men."

She waited.

He spoke explicitly, from the beginning. When the schooner anchored, George's insistence kept the canoes ashore; but presently a boat put off from the vessel with three white men in it. Those white men did not know the landing place, and they went toward the beach, but they saw that the surf there was impracticable, so they came along the shore and they shouted, and some of the children went out of the jungle to the landing place, and then some of the girls. When the white men saw the girls they tried to land, and their boat was broken against the ledge; but they climbed ashore. They were angry because of the loss of the boat, and when George came down the path and spoke to them, one of the men struck him down and then shot him, and he lay like a dead man. But one of the children, a little boy who loved George, bit the hand of the man who had shot. That man caught the boy, and he broke the child's arm across his knee.

The white men could not even catch the girls; so they came to Mary's father's house and profaned it, shouting and breaking things. The child with the broken arm was screaming, and the people were angry.

Jarambo sent young men to carry George away and that was done; so when the white men returned to the landing, he had been borne to safety.

When they were gone, Jarambo and the other old men decided what to do to these white men who had hurt the child. So by and by many of the strongest girls swam off to the schooner, with flowers in their hair, laughing.

"And it was night," Jarambo told Mary, squatting at her feet. "In the dark, many canoes went quietly on the water, and many young men. The white men on the ship were busy with our girls; and then we came aboard in the dark, the girls held them lovingly while our war clubs cracked their skulls."

"That was a bad thing, Jarambo," Mary said.

He answered, "It is done." He said slowly, intoning an ancient tale: "The white men came in old times and killed my woman, and my mother, and my father, and my two sons. Also they took my daughter. Before that, I was a man. Now I am a man again."

When she could speak, her senses clearing, she asked: "Jarambo, did the white men with the talking bird help you kill those men?"

He answered, with a shrewd glint in his eyes: "No one knows what a white man will do about killing white men. That white man with the bird which talks was given sleep to drink, and he sleeps now. He did not see the ship come. He will not see it go. Soon it was never here."

His eyes as he spoke looked down at the schooner in the roads; and Mary saw that some sort of sail was set on her, and that she now moved slowly toward the sea.

When the schooner was now outside the bay, a little skein of blue smoke had begun to rise from her hatch. It became a black and growing cloud.

She whispered: "They

The Safety Man

Many state legislatures will meet during the next few months. Already proposed laws are being drafted.

People interested in the traffic problem in communities should see their representative about one very important item that should be included in a good state traffic code. That is the revocation of licenses where drivers are convicted of drinking or of driving while drunk. A politically-minded or weak court cannot help a community eliminate the causes of accidents, especially that of the drunken driver. State laws should require a judge, justice of the peace, or official charged with the administration of the law to revoke the licenses of drunken drivers.

When the licenses of drunken drivers are revoked, we shall have contributed something to the safety of persons who respect the rights of others.
