ARMY RECRUITING TRAILER

WILL APPEAR IN CHELSEA

Like the old time "tea wagons" which plied the streets of smaller communities, bells tinkling and heavy scents of spices and fresh coffee lingering behind them, the U. S. Army's new recruiting trailers which are appearing in cities and towns throughout the country are designed for "direct selling" of the Army and its advantages to the young men of the Nation, according to J. L. Bachus, Lt. Col., Inf. (RO).

Lt. Col. Bachus explains that the trim-trailers, two of which are assigned to each of the Army's nine corps areas in the United States, are exactly what they are called: Mobile recruiting units. Each is towed by a powerful truck and may stay on the road indefinitely, setting up shop in communities which have no regular recruiting offices, or aiding local recruiting officers and civic agencies in recruiting campaigns and assisting public organizations on patriotic occasions.

Principal vacancies in the Regular Army at present are in the Air Corps, considered the most technical branch in the U. S. Army. The age limits for enlistment are between 18 and 35.

Any information in regard to the Regular Army may be had by calling on the personnel of this unit during the stop in Chelsea, June 7, 8 and 9.

'Michigan Days' Start In State On Friday

Offering an array of attractive merchandise and products at today's money-saving prices, merchants of Michigan will begin observance this Friday of a state-wide merchandising campaign, "Michigan Days for Michigan Prosperity."

Co-operating also are farmers, wholesalers, producers, manufacturers and processors. The drive, formally proclaimed by Governor Murray D. Van Wagoner, will close next Wednesday, June 11.

Cecil Taylor of Lansing, an independent retail grocer, co-chairman of the general committee in charge of the campaign, hailed the undertaking as "keynoting the advance toward a sounder market for our products right here at home."

Independents and chains alike are cooperating in this "Michigan Days" program. Various departments of the state government, from Governor Van Wagoner on down the line, along with trade associations and groups have joined the movement.

"Industry and agriculture have joined hands with retailers to show the public the way to a better Michigan," Taylor said.

Spearheaded by the Michigan Food Council, an organization of farmers, processors and distributors organized for the advancement of production and distribution of Michigan food products, "Michigan Days" has taken on a wide scope in the retailing field so as to include all types of retail merchants.

The Grange, the Farm Bureau, a score of agricultural organizations interested in some particular branch of the $225,000,000 industry, are cooperating in this campaign.

The executive committee in charge of the undertaking is composed of W. F. Doyle, manager of the Michigan Chain Stores Bureau; W. R. Keasey, manager of the Michigan Retail Grocers' Association; W. G. Armstrong, master of the Michigan State Grange; Gene Allen, manager of the Michigan Press Association; and C. L. Bolander, state marketing director with the State Department of Agriculture.

Serving with Taylor as co-chairman is M. J. Maynard of Lansing, general manager of the J. C. Penney Company store there. Other members of the general committee are: C. B. Lord, Detroit newspaperman, representing the metropolitan press; W. Webb McCall of Mt. Pleasant, representing the out-state press; Don C. Weeks of Traverse City, representing the Michigan Commercial secretaries; S. R. Dietrich of Lansing, representing the Michigan Hardware Dealers, and S. E. Whitfield of Pontiac, representing the wholesale grocers.

WENK-BURKHARDT WEDDING

Miss Edna A. Wenk, daughter of Martin Wenk and Carlton Burkhardt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Burkhardt, both of Freedom township, spoke their marriage vows at a ceremony performed at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon at the home of the bride's father, with Rev. M. W. Brueckner officiating.

Baskets of white gladioli formed a background for the ceremony, Miss Edna Horning rendering Lohengrin's wedding march as the bridal party took their places.

The bride was attired in poudre blue crepe and she carried an arm bouquet of Briarcliff roses, while Miss Elsie Loeffler, as bridesmaid, wore a dress of pink crepe and carried Talismans roses. Ernest Wenk, brother of the bride, performed the duties of best man.

A wedding supper was served to 30 guests, after which the couple departed on a motor trip to Yellowstone National Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Burkhardt will make their home with the bride's father in Freedom township.

YOUNGSTER DROWNS

Patricia Bergman, 23-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bergman, Ann Arbor, was drowned early Sunday night when she fell into an open cesspool in the yard at the rear of her home, 1680 Calvin St.

She had been missing about an hour when her mother found her. Artificial respiration was administered by Wilford Bonnewell, a neighbor and Boy Scout, but the girl was dead on admittance to St. Joseph's Mercy hospital.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at the Staffan funeral home, and burial was in Bethlehem cemetery.

Mrs. Bergman was formerly Miss Alice Quigley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Quigley of Sylvan township.

NOTICE

Village officials wish to call the attention of those who take tin cans to the village dump, on North Main St. that it will be exceedingly helpful in doing a better job of grading if tin cans and other rubbish is dumped over the edge of the bank rather than on top, with ashes, dirt, etc. being placed on top of the cans. A large space is now leveled off to make good parking ground and it will be greatly appreciated by village officials if this parking lot is used by factory workers, thus relieving the parking congestion on Main street.

SCHOLARSHIPS AVAILABLE

To encourage high school graduates to train for teaching in rural schools, the State Board of Education will grant teachers' college scholarships to a certain number of superior candidates. These scholarships will release the student from payment of the tuition fee to any of the four state teacher training colleges. A candidate accepting the scholarship must pursue the prescribed two-year course of study leading to the State limited certificate.

Applications for scholarships may be made with school superintendents or with County Commissioner of Schools, Julius W. Haab, and should be on file with the Department of Public Instruction not later than June 25.

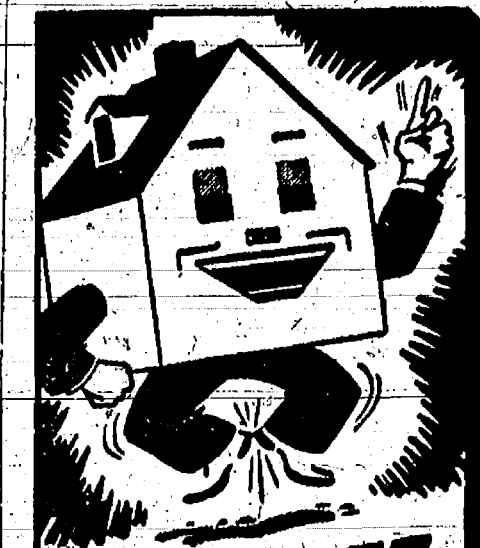

National defense calls for co-operation from everybody. Time lost by men injured as a result of accidents in industry is a definite hindrance to the entire defense program.

The same thing can be said about automobile accidents. What does it benefit a man to practice all safety rules and regulations in this particular work environment and then flagrantly violate all rules of common sense on his way home in his car? An accident on the highway is just as costly and sometimes more so, as in industrial work.

Someone has said, "It's patriotic to be careful," and I agree with that statement. It's patriotic and it's smart to drive carefully.

Softball News

By Rolly Spaulding

Our teams have been going along in fine shape (or otherwise, depending upon which side you're on) and some really worthwhile ball games have been played.

We have had several disputed games but at a meeting of managers held this week everything was ironed out, lists of each team's players were turned in, and the teams are definitely set for the duration of the season. The financial end of the league still remains by far the short end but with the help of an assessment levied on each player and a small donation by the village council we have managed to keep our heads slightly above the high water mark.

Negotiations for a donkey softball game again this year are in progress and I think you can look forward to another East Side - West Side donkey softball game.

Our fan attendance has greatly increased this year over last and there seems to be a steadily growing increase at every game. If YOU haven't seen one of our games so far this year, come out this coming Monday night and see two of our top teams meet for the first time this year—Federal Screw and Chelsea Spring. It will really be a game worth seeing.

Schedule

Thursday, June 5—Central Fibre vs. Federal Screw.
Monday, June 9—Federal Screw vs. Chelsea Spring.

Tuesday, June 10—Spaulding Chevrolet vs. Central Fibre.

Monday, May 26—Hankard's Hi-Speed 7, Federal Screw 6.
Thursday, May 29—CCC 7, Kimunity 2.

Tuesday, June 3—CCC 9, Spaulding Chevrolet 3.

Saving Alfalfa Second Cutting for Seeding Use

Numerous inquiries about saving the second cutting of alfalfa for seed are coming to the agronomy department of Purdue university from alfalfa growers who have made enough hay from their first crop to meet their live-stock needs, according to M. O. Pence, extension agronomist. They are asking whether alfalfa will produce seed profitably and if it can be harvested and threshed satisfactorily.

Yields of from two to six bushels of alfalfa seed per acre from the second growth were reported by Indiana alfalfa growers in 1934 when 13,000 bushels were harvested for seed, Pence said. It will be remembered that the summer of 1934 was very dry and it is under such conditions that alfalfa seeds set in this state. Drought conditions should favor seed setting on the second growth.

By following the second growth, as outlined here, it should be possible for any grower to determine whether to let his alfalfa go for seed or cut it for hay. When the coils or pods which bear the seed have formed, farmers should examine them to see the extent of seed formation.

At the same time note should be taken of the number of pods formed from which the flowers have dropped without pod formation taking place. Heavy podding along with seed formation gives promise of a good seed yield. It is too early to determine the quality of the seed to be produced unless the most advanced pods are far enough along to rub out the partly matured seed.

Alfalfa that is podding lightly or filling poorly with seed should be cut for hay, as it will still make a good quality of roughage, although not equal to alfalfa cut in the bloom stage.

KIWANIS NEWS

John L. Perrier of the Michigan State Police addressed the Kiwanians at their regular meeting this week. The speaker has had a vast experience in the various phases of investigation and police work, and he enthusiastically explained how the State Police are attempting to prevent un-American activities in Michigan. He stated that police at the present time are cataloging and investigating all persons suspected of planning or engaging in activities which have a tendency to weaken or overthrow the government. The speaker maintained that they have compiled a large list of such persons, and in time of emergency, they will instantly apprehend and incarcerate those dissenters. Mr. Perrier concluded his interesting speech by urging the Kiwanians to aid this endeavor by reporting these persons suspected of participating in a plan to overthrow the government, as well as those persons who ardently advocate and prefer a foreign type of government for the United States.

Question And Answer Dept.

Problem—Get out your atlas or geography and see if you can find which is the most southerly capital city in the world. (When you think you have found it just look elsewhere in this department for the correct answer).

Ques—What did Zane Grey do before he became an author and writer?

Ans—In his earlier life Zane Grey was a practicing dentist, and during his idle hours he devoted his time to literary work. Thus he began to blossom out as a writer of short stories and an author of popular novels.

Ques—Can you tell me what is the meaning of the word "bra"?

Ans—Bra is a rare word and is a variation of brace, which is purely Scottish, and means a hillside; slope; hill. American manufacturers of ladies' garments have given the name to a certain kind of undergarment which is worn by women over the breasts to accentuate their femininity.

Ques—A recent survey shows that tons of sugar are wasted annually in the bottoms of tea and coffee cups. What can be done about it?

Ans—We don't know, but that's serious enough to cause a stir.

Ques—Is it ever proper to fly the flag of the United States with the field of stars in the lower left-hand corner?

Ans—No, with one exception, and that is when the flag is used as a distress signal; then it may be turned upside down and flown in that manner.

Ques—Can you give me a brief outline of Joseph Pulitzer who formerly owned the New York World?

Ans—Joseph Pulitzer was a Hungarian who came to the United States in his teens and with $75 in his pockets. He went to St. Louis where he got a job as a reporter on a German periodical which was under the editorial charge of Carl Schurz. Through his efficient service he became managing editor of the German paper. He was elected to the Missouri legislature in 1889; supported Horace Greely for President against U. S. Grant; was elected to Congress in 1884 as Democrat. In the meantime he founded the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. In 1882 he bought the New York World which had a limited circulation and was crumbling. Under his guidance the "World" became one of the most profitable and influential journals of modern times. He built the World building—the highest in New York at that time. He died Oct. 29, 1911, aged 64 years.

Answer to problem—The southernmost capital city in the world is Wellington, New Zealand.

Ques—Who was the victorious commander in the naval battle of Trafalgar?

Ans—Nelson of England.

Try Indoor Wiener Roast

Wiener Roasts are a popular outdoor sport, but if the weather is too cold, you can hold them anyway indoors. A couple of bricks placed in the fireplace will hold a wire rack for roasting. Then, with an extension fork to turn them, you can roast wieners exactly as if out-of-doors. Set up a card table beside the fireplace for the picnic meal—potato salad, rolls, coffee, pickles, fruit and cookies. To keep in picnic character you should use paper plates, cups and napkins. It saves a lot of work afterwards.

Junior-Senior Reception Will Be Held Friday

The Junior-Senior Reception will be held in the school gymnasium on Friday, June 6. The Junior class was a little slow in making their plans for this annual event but under the capable guidance of Miss Leffer, the class advisor, the plans are rapidly taking shape.

Lawrence Dietle is chairman of the decorations committee. Due to his excellent suggestions and advice the committee has been very busy planning and making the decorations, which promise to be the best that have ever been used in the gymnasium.

It is against the principles of the Junior class to disclose the theme of the decorations, as the Juniors wish to surprise the Seniors on Friday night. This year the same theme will be carried out in the food as well as in the table and gymnasium decorations. The food will be prepared by the mothers of some of the students in the Junior class and members of the Sophomore class will serve.

The following program will be presented:

Toastmistress—Marian Elsie Meserve.
Toast to the Senior class—Jeanne Meserve.
Response—Grace Riemenschneider.
Address—V. W. Downing.
Music—Triple Trio.

Three Men and a Woman on a Whaler

The Strumpet Sea

By BEN AMES WILLIAMS

(BEN AMES WILLIAMS OF THE SERVICE)

He found a formula. He decided to believe that Peter, on his way back to the ship, had fallen into a pit like this one. He decided to believe that Peter too was a prisoner. The men must be hunting for them now. Night was coming on, but good Mat Forbes would keep the men hunting all night.

CHAPTER XX

Peter was in danger, and the men hunting for them would be in danger. As much to protect these others as to save himself, Richard decided to dig his way out.

He had for tools the stout club about four feet long, two inches thick, one end shod with iron; and he had his pocket knife. He whittled the end of the club into a flat, chisel-shaped blade, not too sharp, not sharp enough to break easily.

Then he began to dig steps up the side of the pit. For the first few feet, the sides sloped outward. That was easy; but above that, they became perpendicular. He began to excavate a sort of spiral gallery around the sides of the pit; a shelf wide enough for him to lie on, on his stomach, while he reached up ahead of him and loosened the soft stuff with the end of his club, and then scraped it out with his right hand, flinging it over the side of the shelf to fall to the bottom of the pit.

The dust of his digging through the charred, half-burned, peat choked him. He descended and drank water from the pool, and wadded his handkerchief and tied it across his mouth and nose. While there was still some light, he had been able to climb ten feet above the floor of the pit; but then the light failed and he worked in darkness. Some time later, the shelf on which he lay broke off under his weight, and he fell, rolling down into the water again. He guessed that he had reached a point where the walls of the pit began to slope inward, so that there was nothing to support the gallery he excavated so laboriously.

He would have to tunnel upward through the solid peat and reach the surface somewhere to one side of the hole.

He began to do so. Almost at once the texture of the peat became tougher. Till now he had worked in stuff half-burned, the life baked out of it by the heat of those old fires; but now it began to have substance and cohesion, held together by grass roots dead centuries ago. His task became increasingly laborious. Using the chisel-shaped end of his club like a narrow spade, he drove it upward, cut around blocks of peat, and then with his right hand clawed these blocks free.

He burrowed like a mole. The tunnel he dug was no larger than necessary. If he could wedge his body through it, and have room to use his club, he was content. There was now some moisture in the peat through which he tunneled, and not much dust; nevertheless thirst harassed him.

Once when he went down to drink, he saw that there was light in the hole at the top of the pit. The short southern night was ending. Dawn was near.

A long while after that, he realized by the tougher fibre of the chunks he tore away that he had reached live grass roots. The realization, even though it proved he was near the surface of the ground and promised an early end to his labors, did not speed them. He worked slow and slower, tired without knowing it, sluggish with weariness. He thrust the pointed club upward with a heave of shoulders and back, his feet braced hard.

Presently one of these thrusts sent the club through into open air. There was still the mat of grass roots to rip apart; but five minutes later Richard dragged himself like a crippled mole through the opening he had made, and lay prone.

It was Corkran, following the broken trail through the tall grass, who hours later found him there.

Aboard the Ventura, George and Mary kept their vigil; George by the desk with the revolver and the bomb gun ready, Mary at the cabin window through which she could see the boats on shore. After a long time, George heard a voice on deck, a sudden cry; so he knew the truth before Mary spoke.

She turned with glowing eyes; she whispered: "They've found him! He's walking. Two of them are helping him. George, Richard is alive!"

George nodded. "Then they'll be at us," he reminded her. He knew what to expect. Since the men had found Richard, Peter must hold the Ventura and escape in her, or be damned. To hold her against the men in the boats, he must have the guns.

George did not stop to consider what means Peter had in hand. He meant to hold the cabin against any odds. If he could. But he might fail. In the sudden imminence of crisis now, like a revelation, he realized that even if he failed, he could still leave Peter weaponless.

He spoke to Mary, sharply. "Take all those cartridge boxes, the powder, everything. Break the window. Throw it all overboard."

She began to throw out the boxes of cartridges. "Someone on deck heard them splash in the water and looked over the rail and saw what she was doing, and shouted a warning."

"Stop that down there, you!" George shouted back.

"I'll shoot the first man who shows himself!" Looking up through the companion he could see nothing except the sky, and a segment of the rail.

Mary kept at her task, working fast and without pause, till it was done.

The sounds over his head kept George's attention fixed on the companion. No movement in the main cabin warned him; but it was from that quarter that the attack came.

Rannels, Gee, Hurd, and Peter were united by the greedy hope of reward. Peter had won them by promises, playing on each according to his appetite. For weapons, they had the edged tools of the whale fishery: harpoons, lances, spades. It was only necessary to find a chance to use them. With this in mind, Peter planned to draw George's eye in one direction, to attack from another. He set Rannels by the cabin companion with a cutting-in spade, the keen chisel blade six inches across, the handle long enough so that Rannels from the deck could reach the cabin floor.

He posted Hurd on top of the after house where from high overhead he could see down through the glass of the skylight and dart a harpoon at any mark that offered. He directed Gee to take an axe down into the main cabin and strike the door into the common room a smashing blow that would make George turn that way. When he thus turned, Rannels, at the companion, or Hurd, darting the great harpoon, would kill him from above.

When the others were in position the Negro went below. Peter himself would take no active part in the affray. Gee was barefooted, and he moved silently. He was accustomed to use an axe left-handed. The door he had to attack swung into the after cabin, the hinges on the port side. Gee stood on that side when he swung the axe.

He delivered that blow with a nervous violence which proved his own destruction. The axe hit the panels just beside the bolt, and the flimsy screws flew out and the door flew open so easily that Gee by his own weight was pulled forward, the axe and his swinging arms dragging him off balance, into the doorway.

George, when the Negro struck, was standing at the foot of the companionway, looking up, the bomb gun in his hands, the door into the main cabin ten feet away and behind him. At the crash of the axe blow, he whirled and saw the Negro in the doorway. Gee bawled in dismay, trying to leap clear, as George lifted the bomb gun and fired.

At the sound of the axe, Rannels stepped to the top of the companionway above George. At the foot of the companionway he saw George swing to face Gee, and as George lifted the bomb gun, Rannels stabbed downward with the long spade. He aimed at the nape of George's neck.

If the blow had struck fairly, it would have decapitated the man below; but the recoil of the gun knocked George off balance backward. He was already falling when Rannels struck, so the harpooner missed his aim. The spade that would have caught George in the neck, instead slid over his shoulder and down his left arm. It bit into his forearm just below the elbow. It sliced the flesh like a razor, grated on the bone.

George, thrown backward by the recoil, fell on his left side. The smothered discharge had instantly filled the cabin; but through this smoke as he lay on his side he saw Rannels at the head of the companionway recovering the spade to strike again. He rolled on his back, dodging that blow, and he dragged the revolver, already cocked, out of his belt and fired it upward blindly. The heavy slug struck Rannels in the breast bone. He slid feet first down the companionway and lay in a huddle on the cabin floor.

Helium Cheap to Produce

For 27 years known to exist as an element on the sun, helium finally was found on the earth, but only as a chemical curiosity so rare it was valued at $2,500 a cubic foot. Now it is produced at a cost of less than 1 1/2 cents a cubic foot. Besides its unique property as a buoyant, non-explosive gas for airships, helium makes both deep-sea divers and asthmatics breathe more freely, and helps the weather man in his study.

Grade School Library

This picture of the Grade School Library, Chelsea public schools, was taken during Book Week, Nov. 1940

The Grade School Library was organized during the winter of 1938-39. Evidently the various teachers had been ordering a good selection of books year by year suitable for the needs of their grade, but there was no adequate place for housing and caring for them once they were received. It was finally decided to bring them together as a library in the room on the second floor then used as a supply room. They were weeded of the mutilated and out of date copies, the remaining ones being repaired, classified, and cataloged. Placed on new shelves built under the windows, they were accessible to the children.

Being a children's library, it was logical that children should assume the responsibility of caring for and managing it, and Fifth Grade children fell heir to that much coveted task. Some six or eight boys and girls, showing the qualities of punctuality, accuracy, and a fine sense of responsibility are chosen each year. Not all who are capable can work because of home duties, paper routes, music, etc. interfere with the hours—8:00-8:30, 12:30-12:45, recesses, 3:30-3:45—that they must work. Each child works one week at a time, though each one is eager to help out the other fellow or take his place should he be out of school. Should you ever doubt the place the library has in your child's school life, come some morning and watch unobserved as the children bring back their books, choose others, and have them checked at "the desk."

The selection of books is becoming well-rounded, though, of course, largely of a reference nature to supplement the subjects of class work and further the child's interest in any topic that has caught his fancy. For instance, one boy in the Fifth Grade has read some sixty Indian books during this school year and is recognized by his fellow pupils as quite an authority for his age on the subject. Another boy is as well informed on the subject of aviation. At present we have some 82 myths, legends, and fairy tales; 37 books of biography; 47 Indian stories; 84 histories; 129 books of geography and travel; 43 books on the useful arts; 92 on science and nature study; 168 books of fiction, besides encyclopedias and books on music, art, poetry, etc. The total at present is 990, some 104 having been added during the past year. Next year we hope to build up our collection of pioneer stories, for children of that age never tire of the tales of boys and girls, men and women who risked all to explore and build this great country of ours. What better way to inspire our little folks with a love of country and the democratic way?

Best of all we are in complete accord with the city library. Most of our books, of course, are peculiar to our needs as a school; but in choosing books of fiction, we cooperate to the fullest extent, comparing purchase lists so that we do not overlap but supplement each other and thus widen the field of choice.

Believing that parents should know about this phase of influence in their children's school life, this article has been written.

Ida C. Brown, Librarian.

"Here's an adventure! What awaits beyond those closed, mysterious gates? Whom shall I meet, where shall I go? Beyond the lovely land I know? Above the sky, across the seas? What shall I learn and feel and be? Open, strange doors, to good or ill! I hold my breath a moment still Before the magic of your look, What will you do to me, O Book?"

Church Has 'Bank Night'
By adopting movie house methods, the Methodist church of South Pasadena, Calif., is solving its financial problem. It holds "weekly bank nights," only those attending give rather than receive—a penny each.

False Security of Cleanliness
People gain a sense of false security, either by wiping the rim of a glass off on their shirts before placing the rim between their lips or by wiping utensils with their napkins. The idea that glasses in cocktail bars need not be sterilized because "the alcohol kills the germs" is reported to have been exploded. Bacteria make beer, and the alcohol content of both beer and most wine is not too low to influence virulent organisms. Also, the liquor doesn't touch the outside of the glass rim on which the penetrable mucous lining of the lower lip usually presses.
