

A minor war with Russia would mean the graduate of 1941, not now completing their scholastic careers but themselves a bit closer to the "top of the world" than their fellows of the past years.
 For while it's a tense, torn world . . . the very elements that have given it tenseness and that have ripped it apart are responsible for giving this class of 1941 many of its opportunities.
 First, long periods of unemployment do not immediately face the graduate. For actual jobs are to be found in defense and allied industries. There is the career military, the skilled trades and general upswing in employment to welcome the newcomer. I had the big-time most graduates of recent years have had to worry about finding jobs. Now the jobs are here. Men Wanted. Women Wanted. Help Wanted. And getting these jobs, graduates find themselves a bit further up the proverbial ladder that leads to "success".
 Then, too, the very discouraging aspect of civilization, 1941 style, with its wars, its aggressions and its unholy thirst for power on the part of some nations and individuals, offers to the graduates a challenge. A challenge to do great good, to repair devastated lands and to build anew.
 So, graduates of '41 . . . find work for your hands in helping to shape a new America, a new democracy and a new world; and work for your heart in the supreme effort to restore high human ideals.
 Thus with the "top of the world" be reached, and thus will "Success" mark your path.

The librarian will issue records books to all pupils upon request. The books read during the summer will be listed in the record books. The books will be turned in at the library in September. At a public assembly at the Chelsea public school in the fall awards will be given for the summer reading efforts. Graded book lists have been prepared by the teachers of the Chelsea public school. Copies of these lists will be found in the library. Pupils may consult these lists in selecting books. This year high school pupils will also be included in the summer-reading program. Lists of preferred books have been compiled by the high school English teachers. These may be found in the library. Pupils may select books from these lists or choose other books not on the preferred list. If a record is kept of the books read and turned in at the beginning of the fall term, special credit will be granted in the respective courses. Children of the rural and parochial school are invited to participate in this summer reading program.

This Week In Defense

Dr. Will Alexander of the OPM, speaking in Atlantic City, said defense industries will need 4,000,000 more workers by January. He said, as examples, the San Diego, San Francisco and Vallejo areas of California will need 31,000; Detroit, 66,000; Philadelphia, 70,000; northern New Jersey, 30,000; Dallas and Fort Worth, 17,200; and Wichita, 7,000. He asked employers not to discriminate against persons with necessary skills because of race, religion or color.

Labor Secretary Perkins reported 324,000 workers will be needed in the shipbuilding industry, 408,000 in aircraft, 294,000 in machine tools and ordnance, and 384,000 in other defense industries. She said the greatest single need is for 156,000 skilled machinists and 139,000 semi-skilled assemblers.

War Secretary Stimson announced that skilled workers in the Army will be released, if required in key civilian jobs, upon the request of former employers. Sidney Hillman, OPM Associate Director General, again appealed to all unemployed, all persons not in defense industries, and all persons who can do more highly skilled work than required by their present job, to register at local public employment offices so they may be trained and placed in defense work.

Prices

Bureau of Labor Statistics reported food prices increased for the sixth consecutive month and are now about 6.5 per cent above last November. Prices of all foods moved upward but the latest increase resulted from advances in prices for dairy products, fresh fruits, vegetables, pork and lamb, the Bureau said.

The Department of Justice announced Federal Grand Juries in San Francisco, New York, Philadelphia, Hartford, Denver, Dubuque and Washington have indicted 300 firms and individuals in a nation-wide drive to prevent unwarranted increases in food costs.

Prospective Oil and Power Shortage

Secretary of Interior Ickes, Defense Petroleum Coordinator, said a temporary restriction on the use of gasoline and oil on the East coast may become necessary because of the shortage of tanker transportation. He said a proposed $70,000,000 pipe line from Texas to ease the situation would require 12 to 15 months to build.

Selective Service

Selective Service Deputy Director Hershey asked Congress to approve legislation authorizing deferment of all men 27 or more years old last October 16. SS Headquarters issued regulations to permit review of classification at any time prior to induction.

Defense Financing

The Budget Bureau estimated the Federal deficit for the current year would be $747,000,000 less than previously estimated because of the higher tax collections and cuts in non-defense expenditures.

MRS. LUCY TUTTLE

Mrs. Lucy Tuttle, 84, died Thursday at the Methodist Old People's Home. She was born Oct. 6, 1856 in New York State and was married to Lyman A. Tuttle, who died in 1917. Their married life was spent in Strongsville, Ohio. After his death she resided in Unadilla, coming to the Home on Nov. 8, 1939. Funeral services on Sunday were conducted by Rev. L. I. Lord, and burial was in Unadilla cemetery.

Traffic Deaths Exceed Raids

More persons were killed in automobile accidents in the United States last year than have been killed in all the Nazi air raids on Britain.

Exempt From Toll

Government vessels of the United States and launches under 20 tons do not pay tolls in passing through the Panama canal.

Lansing—Michigan's second industry, the tourist business, faces the uncertainty of a war economy with its leaders determined more than ever to meet the challenge by positive action.

At the governor's office last Friday was held an unusual conference. Present were managers of the regional tourist associations, officials of state departments and leaders of the Mackinac Island city, state park commission and the newly formed harbor authority. Their objective was an aggressive program to lure out-state visitors to Michigan this summer.

Florida resorts experienced a good season last winter, but the volume of business was noticeably off. Families in the middle-class income bracket are beginning to apply their own budget priorities in order to meet increased federal income taxes. A new class comprises 1,250,000 families with incomes of from $1,000 to $2,000 a year to spend. These folk live in the industrial centers which are enjoying a temporary boom from national defense orders.

Competition

Another factor in the Michigan picture is the growing competition among states for a slice of the rich tourist trade. Nearby mid-west states—Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota—as well as New York, Pennsylvania, Tennessee and several others are vying with each other for vacation dollars.

The average tourist state advertises through a state-financed centralized office, while Michigan's eminence as a popular vacationland has been achieved through co-operation of private operators and the state government. The situation of four regional associations, each being financed in part by the state, is the exception to the general rule. These associations have succeeded in obtaining appropriations from state legislatures, session after session, because of the outstanding results which they have been able to show.

At a round-up dinner of travel editors and state officials held recently in Grand Rapids the chief suggestion voiced was a need for a centralized tourist program in Michigan, if we are to meet this augmented competition of rival states and to counteract any loss in business due to the war.

Mackinac Island

Michigan's most historic shrine, according to the Daughters of the American Revolution, is Mackinac Island.

Because it is situated between the upper and lower peninsulas and is at the crossroads of the Great Lakes, this rocky scenic spot belongs to all the state to a greater sense than does the average tourist attraction.

It is the plan of the tourist groups, voluntarily banding together for a 1941 "All-Michigan project", to stage a historical pageant on Mackinac Island during July. The pageant would be the spearhead of a national drive to lure out-state visitors to Michigan—and when they are here, to show them our many other points of interest from Greenfield Village at Dearborn to the Porcupine mountains near Ontonagon.

Due to a 1941 legislative enactment, the old business section in Mackinac City is being given a treatment of historical restoration. It will become the "Mid-West 'Williamstown'" with authentic colonial atmosphere. Several hundred thousand dollars are being spent at the island to create bathing beaches, parks and recreational facilities in order that visitors may have something to "do" on the island other than to climb hills and to watch ore-bearing boats go by.

Northwest Passage

In quest of the "Northwest Passage" to Japan, Jean Nicolet canoed through the Straits in 1634.

The rich fur trade there attracted both the French and British.

At the end of the American revolution, British troops refused for 13 years to evacuate the island.

When the war of 1812 was declared, the British on St. Joseph's island amassed a force of 1,000 soldiers, Indians and trappers. They landed secretly at night on the western side of the island, mounted two cannons on the promontory above the fort, seized the island without a battle and continued to hold it until news of the signing of the Treaty of Ghent reached America in 1815.

John and Jacob Astor of New York then formed the American Fur company with headquarters on Mackinac Island. As many as 3,000 Indians camped along the beach during July and August when they brought the beaver pelts to the trading post.

Frontier Scene

The "Michigan Guide," (Oxford Press) recently compiled as a WPA Writers' Project under the supervision of Harold Titus, novelist of Traverse City, gives this colorful picture:

"Woodsmen of various nationalities slept in tents and stables or wrapping themselves in pack bedding, spent the night in the open. Clerks and voyageurs, adventurers from the leading European countries, were quartered in tents, barracks, and the agency house. The American soldiers, of equally varied stock and lineage, occupied the fort and served as guardians of the frontier. Couriers de bois, unattached woodsmen who worked spasmodically, lived in a constant state of debauchery while their funds lasted and their credit remained stable.

Picturesque

"All the frontiersmen lived a rough adventurous existence, punctuated by drunkenness, brawling and not infrequent murders. Dances and banquets were given for traders on their return from the wilderness, and invariably the merry-making lasted until daybreak. The man or group thus honored would return the courtesy the following night.

"This round of activities, wealth of characters, and constant bustle made Mackinac an exciting and picturesque settlement during its heyday as a trading post. But, after 1830, the fur trade declined, and when Astor closed the company's office on Mackinac, the island populace gradually diminished, leaving only a few whites and Indians."

It is this historic setting, "restored" by paint and architectural veneer, which may provide Michigan with its national bid for tourist dollars in 1941.

NORTHVILLE—Three new industries were assured Northville in the business developments of last week. The old foundry is to reopen shortly; the creamery building on Base Line is to be replaced by the Brickcoke company, is to house an iron manufacturing concern, and the Norton building on Plymouth road has been sold to the Detroit Wire Die company, and will be occupied by that concern within 60 days.—Record.

PLYMOUTH—Low water pressure has reduced the supply of water in the northwest section of the city and necessitated the purchase of two new pumps of greater capacity at the city's booster station. The problem, City Manager C. H. Elliott explains, is not one of water supply but rather of distribution through the mains. A bottleneck exists in the water main system from the booster station to the city's water tank where the size of the mains is reduced from 10 to six inches.—Mail.

SCOUTS URGED TO STEAM UP DURING THE SUMMER MONTHS

"In the summer time each Scout troop should speed up—not slow down," Fielding H. Yost, Commissioner, said recently in discussing summer Scouting and its many opportunities.

While the men and boys of each troop work out their own program, and no two troops carry on in exactly the same way, the general plan of the summer months is for a strong emphasis on outdoor activities—hiking, camping, cook outs and various other fun activities that develop self reliance and resourcefulness.

More than fifteen years ago a scout haven was established on the Huron River near Dexter—the Newkirk Scout Reservation which troops use on various week-ends throughout the year.

During the summer months the Newkirk Reservation becomes an organized camp—operated as three troops—in many cases actual year round troops in camp, accompanied by their own Scoutmaster.

Newkirk's 1941 camp opens Sunday afternoon, June 22 and continues through August 9.

FISH SPAWN EARLY

Lansing—Bass and bluegills have spawned early and are expected to be off the nests by the opening of the lake fishing season June 25, according to preliminary reports to the conservation department's fish division.

Excellent spring and early summer weather is believed to assure production of a good crop of bass and bluegill fry also. Department of Conservation bass and bluegill rearing ponds were stocked with breeder fish early, and now are in full operation.

ENTERTAINS ST. PAUL'S L. A. S.

Mrs. Philip Seitz entertained the members of St. Paul's Ladies Aid Society at their monthly meeting on Friday afternoon.

The program opened with a German song, after which Rev. P. H. Grabowski conducted the devotionals, and gave a talk on the topic, "I Believe, I Belong, I Serve." A poem, "The Christian Church," was given by Mrs. Seitz and Mrs. Fred Seitz gave a reading relating to the topic.

A play, "Pilgrim's Progress," was given by Mesdames Walter Mohrlock, John Oesterle, Julius Strieter and Waldo Kusterer. Nineteen members responded to roll call and there were seven guests.

Mrs. Fred Seitz was named as kitchen committee chairman and Mrs. Walter Mohrlock as dining room committee chairman to serve at the Alumni banquet.

Mrs. Adam Eppler invited the society to her cottage at Blind lake for their picnic on June 27. The picnic game committee will be Mrs. Walter Mohrlock and Mrs. Alvin Vail.

Mrs. J. Baveis and Mrs. George Gage assisted in serving the lunch.

Cassidy Lake Project Trains Many Youths

Nestling in the rolling hills of what is known as the Waterloo area of the National Park service, five miles northwest of Chelsea, lies the Cassidy Lake project of the Michigan National Youth Administration where youth through work experience are fitting themselves to take their places in the shops and factories of the far-reaching national defense program.

Lake Cassidy, a small body of water, lies almost in the center of the camp which comprises various shops, a dining hall, library, hospital, recreation hall and 32 cottages where the youth make their home during their stay at the camp, which is providing a steppingstone to better wages in industry.

Olaf W. Kaye, state NYA administrator, regards the camp as one of the finest of its kind in the country. The cooperation of the State Board of Control for Vocational Education, the local school district and the National Youth Administration enables the youth at Cassidy to obtain a much more closely related program of work experience and related training than otherwise would be possible.

Numerous fields of work are open under the direction of the NYA, the local school board and the State Board of Control for Vocational Education. They include correspondence work through the extension department of the University of Michigan, commercial, electrical, heating and plumbing, cooking, painting, forestry, landscaping, music, laundry, recreation and photography. In addition, well equipped shops directed by expert technical men in their line provide work experience in drafting, auto mechanics, aviation, machine shop, radio, sheet metal, welding, and wood and pattern making.

Regulation production orders are given to these shops and the work is all performed by youth. The production is for useful products and provides practical work experience under actual shop conditions. Youth are guided in proper methods of safety, cleanliness and work habits so that this experience will fit them for modern mass production techniques.

Each youth studies half a day and works in one of the numerous shops half a day. For this he is paid $30 a month by the NYA and of this amount he pays about $19.20 for room, board and laundry, leaving him a balance of $10.80 for recreation and incidental expenses.

To be eligible to enter Cassidy Lake, a youth must be a resident of Michigan, out of school, unemployed and must be certified by the Michigan State Employment Service junior division and must be recommended by the NYA supervisor in his county.

At the present time there are 172 boys at Cassidy Lake, which is below the quota of 250. This means that places are available for about 78 more boys than are now being accommodated there.

Among the 172 boys at the camp 33 are gaining work experience in the machine shop, 16 in the radio shop, 30 in aviation mechanics, 15 in aviation construction, 15 in mechanical drawing, 40 in welding and 12 in the sheet metal division.

With the wheels of defense industries whirling at top speed these days, these youth are finding that the experience gained at Cassidy Lake is providing a stepping stone to good factory jobs and excellent wages.

Youth are leaving Cassidy weekly to accept these jobs. The Buhr machine shop in Ann Arbor, for instance, is taking on two boys weekly from the Cassidy Lake project, boys who are sufficiently experienced to step into good-paying work. The Stinson Aircraft corporation has taken several other youth who have completed work at Cassidy Lake. One boy who went to the Stinson firm two months ago now is earning more than $1 an hour. Others have taken good jobs in the aircraft industry at Waco, Texas, and others with Roscoe Turner in Indianapolis.

Eight other boys who gained work experience on lathes at the Cassidy Lake project have obtained good-paying positions with the South Bend Lathes company which supplied the lathes on which they gained their experience.

Another youth who left Cassidy Lake two years ago now is earning $1.70 an hour as a thread grinder on precision gauges.

Eight other boys who gained experience in cookery at Cassidy Lake now have lucrative jobs in private industry. Four are employed at a hotel in Plymouth, two are working at the University of Michigan, and two are working in Kalamazoo.

Sixty-nine youth left the project in March to accept jobs, mostly in industry engaged in national defense orders and 92 took similar positions in April.

The length of time a youth remains at the camp to gain his work experience depends largely upon the youth himself but the average period ranges from three to 15 months. Youth between the ages of 17 and 24 are accepted. The average age of those now at the camp is 19.

The National Youth Administration realizes, however, that all work and no play makes dull boys, and so a well organized recreation program is carried out at the camp under the direction of George Cletham, former University of Michigan football star. This program includes intramural sports, softball, baseball, badminton and volleyball.

Presiding over each of the cottages is a counselor. Boys are required to keep their quarters clean and to keep the camp spotless—and it is.

M. S. C. Sports Festival To Be Open To Farmers

Farmers of Michigan have opportunity to participate in the first annual Sports Festival sponsored by and for farm organizations in the state and to be conducted Friday, August 1, on the Michigan State College campus at East Lansing, the same day as the annual Farmers' Day program.

Softball and horseshoe pitching are the events of the tournament which will award banners and ribbons to individuals and county groups winning top scores. Announcement comes from a committee of seven state organizations and four college departments sponsoring the event.

Youth is to be dominant in the tournament, according to the four age classes listed. For each event, participants will be competing in four classes—Junior girls, under 18, on Aug. 1; senior girls, 18 or over; junior boys, under 18, on Aug. 1; senior boys, 18 or over.

Time will be provided in the day's program to permit inspection of the college farm and the experiment projects. Headquarters for the festival and for Farmers' Day is Agricultural Hall.

Contestants are to bring their own equipment. Diamonds and pitching courts are to be set up on various locations on the farm and campus. Entries are to be filed with county agricultural agents by July 1, it is announced by R. W. Tenney, short course director. The county agents then will report entries at the Short Course office of the college.

County teams and individuals will obtain extra points ranging from 5 per cent to 25 per cent according to distance of the county from the college. This is to encourage state-wide participation. Any who compete are to be members in good standing in any recognized Michigan farm organization such as the Grange, Farm Bureau, Farmers' Union, Farmers' Guild, Junior Farm Bureau, Future Farmers of America, 4-H clubs.

LT. K. M. BROESAMLE WRITES ABOUT HIS SOFTBALL TEAM

LT. K. M. Broesamle, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Broesamle of this place, who is on the cruises U. S. S. Honolulu, has written an interesting letter to The Standard concerning the activities of his softball team. The letter, written from Hawaii, is as follows:

Pearl Harbor, T. H., May 24, 1941.

Dear Mac:

In the last few issues of The Standard I have noticed with interest the accounts of the recently begun softball season. I sure would like to be back home with my team—believe we could make a creditable showing.

Of course out here the season never ends. Since coming out to Hawaii last November, we have played 88 games, winning 71 and losing 7. Besides the winning streaks mentioned in the clipping (newspaper clipping enclosed) we now have another of 15 which is not broken yet. Our grand totals at present are:

	Runs	Hits	Errors
Honolulu	905	824	189
Opponents	230	324	309

During the present winning streak, we played five games in a row without making an error nor being scored on. Also one of my pitchers, Bill Bryan, turned in two no-hit, no-run games. In one game, one man got as far as first on the pitcher's error; in the other, he never allowed anyone as far as the initial sack. In five games he gave up only three hits and no runs. In the last 52 games, we have won all but two.

My tour of sea duty is about up and I expect to be returning to the mainland in a few more weeks. Except for the long separation from my family, it has been most enjoyable and I have really traveled around considerably in the last three years. Have been up and down the east and west coasts, to England, West Indies, through the Panama Canal, and out here. Have yet to drive across the States.

Beginning about June 12, please change my mailing address to Naval Hospital, San Diego, Calif. That is my next station for duty.

Very sincerely yours,
Kenneth M. Broesamle.

Softball News

By Rolly Spaulding

Contrary to the general idea of you town folk living on the east side of Main, there was nothing going on at the local athletic field but our regular games during this past week. All that yelling and cheering you heard was for six local teams playing real close softball.

Last Thursday night Central Fibre and Federal Screw played with a tie score until the last of the sixth inning when Federal Screw scored 4 runs to win.

Monday night of this week Federal Screw and the Chelsea Spring met in a game that, as I promised you last week, was a real thriller. At the end of the seventh inning (the official end of the game) the score was tied up 7 all and 2 extra innings had to be played to decide the victor. Chelsea Spring hammered in a run to keep their all wins, no loss record intact.

Tuesday night Central Fibre started right out swinging in the first inning and took four runs from Spaulding Chevrolet. In the third inning the Chevrolet boys staged a rally and tied the score, but later in the fifth Central Fibre scored again and Spaulding Chevrolet was unable to find spark enough to even threaten to tie the score again.

Schedule

Thursday, June 12—Cassidy Lake Fac. vs. Kimunity.

Monday, June 16—Hankard Hi-Speed vs. Chelsea Spring.

Tuesday, June 17—Spaulding Chevrolet vs. Kimunity.

HIGHWAY TRAVEL UP 30%

As the touring season went into high gear this week, State Highway Commissioner G. Donald Kennedy reported highway travel up 30 per cent over that of 1940—and travel across the Straits at an all-time peak.

Kennedy stated that traffic tabulations from the Straits revealed that the state-owned boats transported a total of 10,538 automobiles over Memorial Day week-end, as compared with 8,716 for the same period last year. This was an increase of 184 per cent.

WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE—IT'S MONEY ISN'T IT?

"What would you say to buying some 'cash'—at bargain prices? Why not—It's money isn't it?"

But most people are too smart. They know good money is never sold at bargain prices—and close inspection reveals the bad.

But eye-care is different—Inspection before buying is impossible. Bargain eye-care should put you on your guard. Dependable eye-care is not at the value of your future happiness and welfare. It is your best assurance against discomfort, fatigue, accident—even permanent disability. Eye-sight worth having is worth all the skill necessary, to safeguard it. It deserves the protection that optical science has developed after years of proving through practical application—an invaluable gift to humanity within your reach.

SAVE YOUR CHERRIES!

Have you a sweet cherry tree in your yard? Do the birds take them before they are ripe enough for you to pick? If so, try S. P. Foster's remedy and maybe you will have a few cherries.

Mr. Foster, in despair over the way the birds were stealing his cherries, fixed a small radio on a platform in one of his cherry trees.

He turned the switch, then watched the fun. The birds left the trees and sat on the telephone wires at either side of his lot. They chattered and scolded, would fly into the trees and then Ty's voice would echo through the air "Out at the plate". Away would go the birds. Just as they would settle down in the trees a blaring swing tune would put them to flight. Now the radio has won out for the time being and Mr. Foster hopes to have a nice crop of cherries.

Class News

This year both the Freshman and Sophomore classes are going to Walled Lake for their annual picnic which will be held on Friday, the 13th of this year. (No bad luck we hope). After the final tests on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday everyone will most undoubtedly enjoy the picnic. The Junior class has not yet decided where they are going.

Office News

The classes have finished their plans for the picnic which are scheduled for Friday, June 13. The Freshman class and the Sophomore class are going to Walled Lake. The Juniors have decided that each member will go wherever they wish to.

All the students will assemble at 9:00 on Friday morning, June 13 to receive their report cards and final marks.

The Commencement exercises will be held on Thursday, June 12 (tonight) at 8:00 in the gymnasium.

Mr. Gentner will start his cleaning program as soon as school is closed.

Student Council

The Student Council has performed many valuable services for the school this year. They have brought many worthwhile assemblies to the students; they have regulated the use of stairways to prevent traffic confusion; they have conducted cleanup campaigns, thus improving the looks of the school, and they have helped to create friendlier relations between the faculty and students.

The school owes many thanks to the Student Council's outgoing officers—Wm. Rademacher, president, and Helen Miller, vice-president. We all are looking forward to the coming year with our new officers—Charles Lane, president, and Wilma Schweinfurth, vice-president.

STATE POLICE AND BUYERS TO GUARD AGAINST RAIDERS

East Lansing—The streamlined version of rural rustling in Michigan is going into the pages of history with the records of similar operations of the wild and woolly west.

The Michigan State Police constitute the keystone in a cooperative program that is fast erecting a wall of protection around the live stock, poultry and grain stocks of the farmer.

Safeguards are comparatively new and came out of an emergency created during the depression of the late twenties when foraging parties could realize quick and easy money from raids on the rural communities. A bag of chickens brought a dollar each at almost any market, and there was always a market for a head or two of livestock or a few bags of grain.

The raids became systematized and bold bands of rural raiders made life miserable for the farmer. Organized gangs who had prospered by racketeering in prohibition days turned readily to this new easy money thiefery.

The Michigan State Police, organized primarily as a rural protective agency, began combatting this development with night patrols. A watchful eye was turned toward granaries, chicken houses and cattle barns. The truck on the road late at night was stopped and the driver required to furnish more than a driver's license.

The night patrol was supplemented with a tightening of the check on markets for this type of merchandise. When motorized cattle rustlers drove up beside a farmyard at night and stole a few head of cattle, finding a market for them became increasingly tough.

The farmer who had the misfortune to lose his cattle or his chickens was as important a victim of crime to the Michigan State Police as the merchant who had come down in the morning and found his store had been ransacked during the night and a load of his stock taken out.

Stolen cattle resulted in a close check of all the live stock markets in the state. Repeatedly, the stock was located, the farmer notified to appear and claim his property and the buyer was left holding the bag on purchases he hadn't been particular enough in tracing legal ownership.

The next step was to organize these buyers to protect themselves. A sort of mutual protective society was set up, the farmer did his part to protect his stock and the buyers at the markets did their part in protecting themselves against the losses involved in buying stolen property.

The result is that today the buyers at all the available livestock markets are properly inquisitive when a stranger appears with a truck load of stock. They take his license number without him being aware of it and while he awaits his check, a long distance telephone call to the state police is establishing something about his identity and the record of his load is being checked against thefts reported.

There have been five meetings held during the past year at the headquarters of the Michigan State Police at East Lansing at which state police, live stock buyers and representatives of the state department of agriculture have set up rules and regulations for purchase of livestock and have worked out ways and means of identification of purchases and sellers that will protect the interest of all concerned.

Likewise, protective steps have been taken in the interest of the poultry man. Weeks have been spent by the Michigan State Police in running down the guilty ones in a poultry house raid. The buyers of poultry, like the buyers of livestock, have felt the pinch of giving good money to sellers and then having to turn over to the owner poultry they had purchased in good faith. But it is such experiences, brought about by the diligence of the state trooper in running down a thief, whether he snatches a purse or steals a bag of chickens, that tightens the net against the profitable operation of a chicken stealing ring.

Grain might seem to be grain and a bag of wheat or oats pretty difficult loot to identify. But hundreds of Michigan farmers who have been the victims of raids by grain-barn robbers have had their property recovered through operations of the state police night patrol and through the investigation given the report of such a robbery.

The result has been that virtually every market for live stock, poultry and grain in the state is a checking agency aiding the state police in reducing rural thefts. The car numbers of buyers are carefully noted and when the suspicion of the prospective buyer is aroused, he usually communicates with the state police before making his purchase and is pretty sure that he isn't being drawn into an illegal transaction.

The state police are now engaged in a similar campaign of cooperative protection with metal buyers of the entire state. The high price of iron under war economy is making raids on farm machinery left in the fields or even in farm yards a profitable source of endeavor for night raiders.

Tractors and all manner of farm equipment has disappeared in recent weeks and been traced to junk yards where operators were sufficiently inquisitive as to the ownership and source of such metal. This field is rapidly being closed, however, by cooperative protective measures.

Three Men and a Woman on a Whaler

By BEN AMES WILLIAMS

The thinning smoke made George cough. He heard a faint sound that seemed to be far away, and realized it was a voice, and saw Mary on her knees here beside him.

Mary was trying to hold him. He pushed her away. He had not meant to do this violently; but under his thrust she staggered backward till she collided with the corner of the desk. He shook his head regretfully. Too bad to hurt her; but he had business in hand.

He looked for Gee, and saw him with a calm surprise. George had not heard the bomb explode; but it had exploded. There was no doubt of that. Gee was in the main cabin, on the floor by the table. Something had flung him backward; but what lay there had been Gee. It must have been. The skin was black.

Mary was here again, ripping at his coat, trying to tear away the sleeve, trying to tend the terrible wound in his arm. Weakness swept over George in a slow, sick wave; yet his mind was clear enough. Rannels was dead, and Gee too; but in a minute, now he, George McAusland, would collapse from loss of blood, and lie helpless here, and then Peter could come down and get the guns.

That had to be stopped. He must kill Peter while he could.

George decided to go through the main cabin into the steerage and thus reach the deck. Mary was trying to hold him, but he put her aside. Whatever she was saying did not matter. It could not matter. He must reach the deck somehow, and manage Peter. Mary hindered him. He said to her in an elaborate whisper, loudly, so that she would be sure to understand: "Stay here. Talk. Make them think I'm here."

He pushed her aside, and she was thrown three or four steps backward against the wall and fell. He thought, why, I must be strong, really strong, to do that! Too bad, poor Mary.

He went through the after 'tween decks. He moved briskly, the revolver in his right hand, his left arm hanging. He remembered to cock the revolver before he started to climb to the deck. He could not help himself with his left hand, because it would not do what he wanted it to do; and he had to hold the revolver ready in his other hand; so he went up the companionway very slowly, pushing himself with his feet, his body leaning forward against the treads.

The housing looked aft. When his head rose above the deck level, he faced the mizenmast. He crawled out of the companion with his hands and knees; and the revolver in his right hand thumped on the deck.

Peter heard that sound and turned and saw him.

Peter was on the starboard side of the cabin companion, by the door of the potato room where Tommy Hanline slept. He had a boat spade poised ready to slice at anyone whose head appeared in the companion. George saw him. George did not see Hurd. Hurd was on the port side, beyond the door of the galley, where old Willie Leeper, as though blind to all that went on aboard here, persistently banged and clattered at his work. Hurd had a boat spade too.

But George did not see him. He saw Peter, and Peter saw George and leaped toward him. George fell on his face and rolled on his side and lifted the revolver and shot.

Peter ducked and dodged; and suddenly he screamed like a woman. Panic fear broke him down. He turned to run aft toward the companion, squalling as he ran.

George thumbed back the hammer of the revolver and shot again. Peter seemed to trip and fall, and he no longer screamed. George, lying on his side, his cheek against the deck, the revolver flat on the deck at his arm's length, pulled the hammer and shot again and again, slowly, laboriously aiming through eyes half closed.

After a space, the hammer clicked on an empty cylinder. He could do nothing more. He rolled on his back and looked up; and then his eyes opened wide in clear recognition of what was about to happen to him. Hurd, the little Cockney, stood over him in silhouette against the sky and the web of rigging. Hurd was lifting his boat spade to strike. He seemed to stand there motionless; and time had stopped, and instants were eternal.

CHAPTER XXI

Behind Hurd—George could see him under Hurd's upraised arms—Willie Leeper was holding upraised a heavy cleaver. Before Hurd's spade stopped going up for the downward blow at George, the cleaver, already lifted, began to descend. It came slowly against Hurd's neck, on the side under the ear, at an angle inward. The broad keen blade went far in and in.

The spade in Hurd's hands dropped to the deck. The blade of it brushed against George's side, and stuck in the planking; and the spade stood erect for a moment, and then fell over sideways as the blade, for lack of any deep hold, broke out of the planking. The handle fell across George's body.

Hurd fell the other way, making choking sounds. Willie Leeper looked down at him. Willie said in a piping, thin voice to Hurd dying on the deck: "There, drat ye!"

George laughed. That was funny. He had never heard Willie speak before. Willie had a thin, squeaking voice that was completely absurd. George was much amused.

Then he forgot Willie, for here was Mary. George rolled his head sideways to look at Peter lying on the deck aft; but Peter had not moved, so everything was all right. He told her so. He said carefully: "Everything's all right, Mary."

He tried to nod, to reassure her. "It's all right, Mary," he repeated. She said fiercely: "Hush! Oh, my brave dear!"

"It's all right," he insisted, and smiled. Something was running out of him. His life. It was running out through his arm, fast; but he must be sure Mary understood, so that she would be happy, afterward. He tried to tell her that he knew she loved Richard, that he knew she and Richard were fine, that it was all right, that she was not to feel badly about him, or about anything.

But so much of him had already run out that there was not enough of him left to say what he wished to say; and while he lay happy in Mary's arms, the rest ran out in a dwindling little stream.

On a day almost four months later, under all sail, the Venture moved serenely upon a white-capped sea. Richard had for the moment gone below. Mat Forbes was aft, Tommy Hanline proudly taking a turn at the wheel. Corkran and Mary stood together by the starboard rail amidships; and the parrot nibbled at Corkran's ear, and whispered wheedlingly. Two or three miles away, a whaler, bark-rigged, was outward bound; and Corkran nodded toward it and said quietly: "That one left New Bedford no longer ago than yesterday, ma'am."

even then, you'll mind." He chuckled. "Now why will a woman that likes a man as he is be always wanting him changed into some other manner of man altogether?" He demanded; and then he said: "I was a pagan ashore, it might just be; and I might be again, for all either of us can be knowing now."

"You're certainly different aboard ship."

"Well, the sea has a way with a man," he reminded her. "It'll make him or mar him, one way and another. Give it long enough and it will show you what's inside him, every time. Look at Peter Corr, for one, ma'am, and himself for another. Not but what I knew from the first that himself was a man under all."

After a little, she asked: "Corkran, what do you think Peter meant to do?"

"Meaning, ma'am, any kind that offered. He was one would do anything for love, if he could find the spine for it, or get other ways to take the risk for him. No knowing now what all was in his black mind. It's sure he tried to talk Reverence himself into killing the Cap'n. With the Cap'n dead, all else would be in Peter's hands. He would have figured so."

"Do you think he meant Cap'n Corr to fall into the pit that day?"

"Like as not! He'd been up there his own self the day before, after pig; and he must have seen many traps of the like sort in the tussocks. While we were hunting the Cap'n, we found a dozen pits like that one, or less, or maybe bigger; and there was a pig that had fresh fallen in, squealing and grunting in one of them. Aye, the mate might have meant it; but more like he just hoped it. If he'd seen the Cap'n standing on the very lip of the pit, I doubt he'd have had the heart to push him in. It was a trouble to that one that he had not the insides in him to do all the black things he could think of that he'd like to do. He's dead, rest him; but he was a bad one while he lived." He said in sober judgment: "Let that one be forgotten by every decent man forever Amen. Himself is the fine one to remember, and us be the better for remembering."

"I always will," she whispered.

"Aye," Corkran looked at her wisely; but then he said in a new tone: "Himself knew more than most, ma'am. A wise one, that. He knew always more than you might think."

She met his eyes. "You mean more than you say."

"That I do, ma'am." His smile was reassuring.

"What do you mean? Tell me."

"Well, for one thing, I'm meaning it was a fair fine word he said, to bid me go back and find Cap'n Corr that night; and a brave strong one he was to say it. If he had not bid me go, I'd not have gone; and well he knew it, for well he knew I was his man. And if I'd not gone, Mat Forbes would not. So it was himself sent us back to fetch the Cap'n, and him knowing what he knew about the true thing between the two of you. Aye, it was a grand fine thing for him to do."

She said quietly: "In my arms, at the last, he kept telling me that everything was all right."

"Aye, he would. A man, that." There was a movement aft and he looked that way. Richard had come on deck. Her eyes followed Corkran's, and rested on Richard, and Corkran added quietly beside her: "That was what himself meant when he told you everything was right. I tell you, he knew."

"Did he, surely?" she asked.

"Aye. He knew. When he told me we must go back, he paid the Cap'n a great compliment, ma'am; and yourself too. But you've deserved it, both of you."

She looked at him for a long moment. "How have we deserved it?" she asked slowly.

He smiled at her. "Has the Cap'n said yet one word to you of the thing you're both thinking, every minute that you live?"

"No, Corkran."

"Nor you to him, I'll be bound."

"No."

He touched her arm. "That's how you've deserved the way himself rated you. But let you not wait too long, nor the Cap'n either. Himself would not want you to wait longer than a fair decent time, and that you've done. And when she did not speak, he said quietly: 'Be not uneasy, ma'am. If the Cap'n has not yet said his mind—and his heart—he will.'

She met his eyes honestly, smiling a little. "Yes," she said. "I know he will. When we're home." Her eyes were warm and deep. "I know what he will say, Corkran."

"Aye," he assented. "And what you'll say, I'll be bound." He chuckled. "Not that words will be mattering to either one of you."

Richard came toward them, his eyes quickening on Mary as he drew near; but before he reached them, Big Pip called from the cross-trees: "Land, land, Cap'n! Richard looked up, and Big Pip swung his arm to point. "Dead, ahead!" he cried.

A great shout rose, and men went swarming into the rigging to see for themselves the dim blue line on the horizon. Corkran moved forward; but Richard stayed with Mary, and he looked down at her, not speaking. The parrot on Corkran's shoulder watched them standing together, their eyes embracing, forgetting all the world. Head on one side, the bird drawled: "Mighty pretty."

Corkran lifted the parrot down, held it in front of him so that it would not see them, "And why not,"

Father's Day

Fathers throughout the nation will receive special recognition on Father's Day, June 15, for the many sacrifices they make to raise their families. Being men, and men being what they are, Father will say he doesn't want to be thanked; but there's a general suspicion that they really like a little recognition despite their crusty exterior. Two fathers who deserve special recognition for their accomplishments are pictured below.

1. The Honorary "D.D.T." This fellow has completed a special course offered to prospective fathers by a New York hospital to prepare them for jobs to come and has been awarded the degree of "D.D.T."—Doctor of Diaper Technique. Intricacies of bathing or diapering Baby without dropping it or breaking any bones hold none of the terrors for this foresighted father.

2. The Typical Father. Awarded special recognition by the National Father's Day Committee for his portrayal of a father in the movie short, "The Forgotten Man," Robert Benchley is pictured experiencing an inconvenience of a typical father. He has deserted the favorite chair in the living room for another in the basement while Daughter entertains her beau.

No Prizes for Winners
In six-day bicycle races, which are held in about 20 of the nation's largest cities, no prizes are awarded to the winners as in most other kinds of races. The contestants ride for a stipulated salary, based on their popularity, and that is all they get—win, lose or draw—except some small premiums that are offered by local politicians, merchants and fans.

1,000 Nickels for Pay
Dr. Hubert J. Prichard's daughter, of Catlettsburg, Ky., is richer by 1,000 nickels because of the stork. The nickels were paid to the physician for delivery of a son to Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Callihan. The doctor immediately turned them over to his daughter.

Philatelists Had Food Stamps
Food stamps, with which the U. S. government supplies relief clients for the purchase of surplus commodities, are comparatively new. But philately has had food stamps for years. Pitcairn island issues stamps picturing oranges; Iceland and Japan supply fish; U. S. has ducks on hunting stamps; Argentina offers beef; Australia has lamb; Bulgaria has chickens and eggs on the same stamp and there are numerous stamps picturing wheat, butter, salt, strawberries, pepper and sugar.

WITHOUT A CLUTCH TO PRESS!

100,000 OWNERS HAVE DRIVEN THEIR HYDRA-MATIC* OLDSMOBILES 300,000,000 MILES without ever pushing a clutch!

Left! Left! Left! Left! That's the chant of men on the march—and the lament of drivers with clutches to push. But not so with the army of owners of Hydra-Matic Oldsmobiles. Their left feet are left with no work at all to do. And their right hands are right where they belong—on the steering wheel—with no gear-shift levers to manipulate.

No wonder 100,000 Olds Hydra-Matic owners are so highly enthusiastic! In three hundred million miles on the road, they have found new freedom in driving.

Why not join the ranks of "freed" Hydra-Matic drivers! Hydra-Matic, remember, is the only drive in the world that eliminates the clutch pedal completely—the only one that provides fully automatic shifting. You enjoy the world's simplest, easiest method of driving. You thrill to new performance. You get new savings in gas.

No doubt about it, Hydra-Matic's the coming way to drive—come in and try it!
