Waste Paper Collection Nets Almost Ten Tons

We'll bet our shirt that there are more clean basements, attics and garages in town than there has been for many a moon—all because of the waste paper collection last Thursday afternoon.

To say the drive was a success would be putting it mildly—it was such a gigantic success that many of the gallant helpers were nearing exhaustion before all the paper was ready for pickup by dealers at the end of last week and the fore part of this week.

Seven trucks were used in the collection of paper about town. Six of the trucks were manipulated by members of the public school faculty, with high school boys loading the paper. The other vehicle was the village truck, manned by none other than Otto (Old Faithful) Schanz. These trucks and their peppy crews covered the town in about two hours and at the end of that time old newspapers, magazines and cartons of scrap paper were piled almost to the ceiling in the town hall and the baling crew was sighing and groaning at the apparent hopelessness of the situation.

However, with large forces of volunteer men and school boys baling feverishly for two afternoons and evenings the job of condensing the waste paper and cartons was completed, in addition to securely tying the newspapers in bundles and boxing the magazines.

The net result was almost ten tons of paper, more than $90.00 for the Red Cross, and many aching muscles for the willing volunteer workers.

The Chelsea Council of Defense, sponsor of the drive, wishes to thank Merkell Bros., Chelsea Hardware Co., Chelsea Milling Co., Loefler & Son, J. E. Haggard & Son, E. J. Chandler and the Village of Chelsea for the use of their trucks; the Federal Screw-Works for the use of their baler, including transporting it to and from the town hall; and the public school faculty, school boys, and adult volunteers for their assistance in this drive which will aid materially in the manufacture of cartons and other paper products for use in the war effort.

It is planned by the Council of Defense to conduct a similar drive within the next few months, so all are asked to save their old newspapers, magazines and waste paper for future collection.

PROCLAMATION

To the People of Chelsea:
According to an ancient practice in Christian civilization, Christian people have reverently observed the anniversary of the death of our Lord. From time immemorial on the day called "Good Friday" they have reflected upon the truths connected with His death.

To make it convenient for all Christian people of Chelsea to attend their respective places of worship, and to lend encouragement to such a wholesome practice, I, Alfred D. Mayer, President of the Village of Chelsea, request that on Friday, April 3, in the year of Our Lord, 1942, all commercial enterprises discontinue business from twelve o'clock noon until three o'clock.

By Order of Village President,
Alfred D. Mayer.

Library Complimented For Its Achievements

A very complimentary letter was received by the Library Board from Orla B. Taylor of Detroit, concerning the annual report of the library which was published in The Standard several weeks ago. It is gratifying to know that a man of such prominence and widespread interest would recognize the qualities of the Chelsea Public Library and would write the Board regarding the same.

With Mr. Taylor's permission the letter is published herewith:

Mrs. Gertrude Daniels,
Secretary, Chelsea Public Library,
Chelsea, Michigan.

Dear Mrs. Daniels:
I have read with great interest the annual report of the library which appears in the Standard of March 3. You have all done very creditable work indeed and I am glad to see that you are getting the financial support of the village and the neighboring townships.

It was very good of you to mention my articles, and I am very appreciative.

At the time I took my desk and "paperweights" to Chelsea, I expected to return after school commenced, to have a talk with the teachers about its use. For instance, the lump of "blue ground" in which diamonds are found at Kimberly, South Africa, can be the subject of compositions extending from diamonds and their nature to Cecil Rhodes and his great work in connection with the mines.

The little piece of "imperial yellow" tile from the roof of a temple in the "Forbidden City" in Peking, suggests essays on the Old Empress and indeed the whole history of Imperial China.

I could go on with practically all of the "paper weights"; but a few days after I was in Chelsea in August, I was stricken with illness and have not been able to leave Detroit since.

I have in my library a few books of reference, especially in the line of history, which I hope will be of service to you, but I have not been able to pick them out. The few books which I did send to you were inconsequential, but I hoped would find a few interested readers. It may be that it might be well for some of you to come in and help me.

Wishing you a continuance of your success in your valuable work, and with kindest personal regards to all of you, I am
Cordially yours,
Orla B. Taylor.

John Lamb Killed In Kelly Field Plane Crash

The first casualty among local service men was the fatal accident on Saturday afternoon in which Aviation Cadet John Jacob Lamb, 23 years old, was killed when his training plane crashed 15 miles northwest of Kelly Field, near San Antonio, Texas.

The son of Mrs. Jacob J. Lamb and the late Mr. Lamb, he was born Dec. 23, 1918, in Detroit. After graduating from Northern high school, he attended a Prep school at Holderness, N. H. and later completed a course in business administration at Dartmouth.

Active MemberAthletic Equipment Is Needed for Army Men

Under the leadership of Charlie Gehringer, beloved Detroit Tiger coach, a big campaign is going forward in southeastern Michigan this spring to provide Army and Navy enlisted men, stationed at points throughout the state, with badly needed athletic equipment of all kinds.

It all came about this way: Down in Lakeland, Florida, where the Tigers are in training, and the balmy air is redolent with baseball, Charlie recently got an idea. He put it down on paper. And it received the enthusiastic endorsement of his fellow Tigers.

"Speaking of baseball and other sports," he wrote, "there's a big job for the people of Michigan to do. It is that of helping provide athletic equipment for the fighting men in the state's Army camps and Navy stations. If we, the people, don't do something about it, the men in service in our state are going to have a mighty slim spring and summer season, so far as sports are concerned. Certainly, we owe it to the boys in uniform, who are making really big sacrifices, to do something they will like, to show them our appreciation. They need baseball and other sports as they need bread."

Charlie then got out a mailing—to every newspaper, daily and weekly in the six counties surrounding metropolitan Detroit and to every radio station in the area.

He explained that early this year he had been appointed chairman of the Sports Committee of the Army and Navy Recreation League, with headquarters at 1243 Washington Boulevard, Detroit, and that the league had been set up not only to help furnish barracks clubrooms in the state's Army and Navy camps and stations, but to help provide sorely-needed athletic equipment for service men. To date, he said, the league has sponsored or has found sponsors for nearly 80 of the 118 barracks clubrooms at Fort Custer. But there's a great shortage of athletic equipment, he pointed out.

"Here's how we are asking our newspaper and radio friends to help out," wrote Charlie. "We're asking them to run a campaign in their newspapers and on the air, appealing to the public to contribute athletic equipment of all kinds. This equipment will be distributed among the fighting men at Fort Custer, Fort Brady, Selfridge Field and at other camps and Navy stations throughout Michigan."

"I think I'm safe in thanking you in advance for your splendid cooperation in a movement that can mean so much to our fighting men," concluded Charlie's letter. "Besides the healthy pleasure they will get out of this equipment, they will have the satisfying knowledge that the folks back home are remembering them."

It is planned to organize a Chelsea committee to aid in collecting athletic equipment in this community.

Our Neighbors

MILAN—The first of the Milan boys to bring the news of what actually happened at Pearl Harbor arrived last Friday when Carl Sanders came home on a fourteen day furlough. Sanders has been serving in the navy for several years and was in the thick of the battles of early December. He arrived with his ship in a western port several days ago and was granted leave while the ship was laid up for some needed repairs. He is visiting his mother, Mrs. Rena Sanders, and is spending most of his time telling friends and relatives the stories of the attack and his experiences.

Good Friday

And when they were come to the place, which is called Calvary, there they crucified him, and the malefactors, one on the right hand, and the other on the left.

Then said Jesus, Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do. And they parted his raiment, and cast lots.

—Luke 23: 33-46

A LETTER TO..

Chelsea

from

A Caribbean Port

(Written aboard a ship at anchor). We shall turn our footsteps northward, telling of our experiences along the way. I shall attempt to answer most of the questions you asked last fall on the basis of the information we now have at our command.

The war has come home to us; it has become hard and real overnight in more ways than one.

The other night our ship lay at anchor in the harbor of Port-of-Spain, Trinidad. Around midnight we were suddenly awakened by the dull sounds of explosions near us, the rushing thud of feet on the upper deck. We don our robes and dash upstairs. Two ships lying near us have been torpedoed. The sky is bright and flaming with parachute flares dropped from military and naval aircraft. The excitement is terrific.

The Nazi has had the unutterable gall to come right into the harbor, past American and British bases, and torpedo two ships. And then he has the unutterable impudence to get away safely.

Next morning, the two ships, a British tanker and an American freighter, are still afloat, although their hulls are badly torn. It is more or less a miracle, and no lives have been lost.

The following night Port-of-Spain has a real blackout. The harbor is alive with patrol vessels scurrying excitedly about. Above, a swarm of aircraft buzzes like a swarm of bees. It is too late. The barn door is shut. But the horse is gone.

We lay in Port-of-Spain a few more days. Every precaution was taken. An American warship appeared upon the scene. Aircraft reconnaissance was ceaseless. Aboard the main light switch was pulled at eight o'clock each night. The fans were silent and it became impossibly hot and fetid. Every bit of glass or porcelain on our boat was crisscrossed with strips of paper, that there might be no splinters. I attempted to shave in front of a criss-crossed mirror and my face turned out like a checkerboard. The crews had special private lifeboat drills. The black passengers, and there is an infinite number of them, spent their days singing hymns, a very dismal sound, foreboding. Those days were not altogether pleasant.

Especially when we heard one day that two ships, a tanker and a freighter, had been torpedoed only six miles out of the harbor. The submarine allowed the crew of the tanker twenty minutes to abandon ship; it torpedoed the freighter without warning. However, again no lives were lost. We saw the survivors come in.

You doubtless read of that in the newspapers as well.

Yet these are not the principal reasons for this letter. While waiting to leave port, we received a cable from my father in Lowell, Michigan. It was terse and to the point.

"Advise return home; not forward; conditions warrant."

Are you as flabbergasted as we are? Panama, Chile, Peru, Brazil, Argentina—all seem extremely far away now. We no longer have the problem of getting further south; getting home will be a problem in itself.

I have no doubt we shall have many an experience before we hit New York or New Orleans or the bottom of the sea or someplace. We may yet have an opportunity to write "Life In a Lifeboat!"

Naturally, we are terribly disappointed, but there is nothing we can do. It is just a break of the game. We thought we had considered every angle, taken stock of every possibility on this jaunt. We had—all but one—Pearl Harbor. Wars are always cluttering up peoples' lives, aren't they?

Here are our plans for the near future, if it is possible to have plans:

we shall turn our footsteps northward, telling of our experiences along the way. I shall attempt to answer most of the questions you asked last fall on the basis of the information we now have at our command.

We hope you are not too disgusted at least more so than we. This trip has been enjoyable so far, we hope, and it will be intensely exciting from now on. With existing conditions, in this zone, so many submarines are in the Caribbean that our ship would have an easier time trying to steam down Grand River Avenue in Detroit!

Right now the sky is blue and devilishly innocent here. The heat is unspeakable and the mosquitoes are worse. Rumor is king and nobody really knows anything about anything. All one can do is sit in the middle of blackout and wonder.

And I wonder if it isn't cool and chill and slushy and March in Chelsea, with no mosquitoes and no blackout. And I wonder if being in Chelsea isn't infinitely preferable to being down here? I wonder if being anywhere else isn't preferable—even in the Army?

Nutrition Class Studies Balanced Diet Subjects

Did you know that Nutritional Diseases constitute one of the greatest medical problems of today, and that lack of proper nutrition does not confine itself, by any means, to the underprivileged? Did you know that despite all we read and hear about the balanced diet with its proper calories, minerals, and vitamins three-fourths of the nation's population are living on inefficient diet?

These, together with many more are the subjects that are being studied in the nutrition class which meets each Thursday evening in the Home Economics room under the capable direction of Miss Clark.

The class has gained a simple and practical understanding of food values to aid in determining what and how much to eat each day to provide the body with the essential food materials. It has learned that the one hard and fast rule in the game of eating for health is that all the essential food material must be provided somewhere in the three meals eaten daily.

The homemaker of today must not only do her bit in community defense, but she must also consider her first line of defense in the home. She must be made to realize that with an ever increasing shortage of medical aid, her task becomes greater; the health of her family depends upon her—she can guard and protect this health with proper diet.

Better nutrition can make America stronger, so let's not only prepare, but repair for defense.

KIWANIS NEWS

The Kiwanians and their ladies commemorated Founder's Day at St. Paul's hall on Monday night of this week. The ladies of the church prepared and served a delicious chicken dinner to the Kiwanians and their guests and Charles Cameron arranged an excellent program for the entertainment of the attendants. The Dexter Kiwanis club and their ladies were guests of the Chelsea club and they contributed greatly in both wit and song to the success of the meeting.

James C. Hendley briefly discussed the ideals and aims of the Kiwanis organization while he inducted George Don, H. T. Moore, Hugh Lamley, Dr. E. J. Quirk and Arnold Steger into the club membership. He urged the new members to take an active part in the club in promoting its many worthwhile community projects during the year. Stanley Vaughn, of the Dexter club awarded attendance pins to five leaders of Chelsea who had attended at least 50 consecutive meetings during the past year. Carl W. Schwegler, one of the ablest pianists of this vicinity, played two fine selections for the gathering, and Charlotte Wheat sang several classical compositions which delighted the group.

The program chairman, selected Professor Harold M. Dorr of the University of Michigan to deliver the principal address of the evening. Prof. Dorr briefly and interestingly discussed the subject: "Lost Americans" in which he showed the urgent need on the part of all educated people to correctly evaluate our social institutions and to provide for our young people after the present war is over. He mentioned that, with our present natural resources and our American initiative, we should mold our institutions in such a manner so as to aid the young folk of this country who lose faith and courage when they are unable to find employment in days of depression. The speaker concluded his excellent address by urging the Kiwanians and their guests to consider what changes are needed in our social structure and institutions and to constantly work for the betterment of the young people of our own community and nation.

THE STORY SO FAR: Joan Leland is discharged and refused an explanation by her employer, Arthur Mulford. She accepts another secretarial post from handsome Karl Miller, owner of a night club. Fascinated, she permits his love-making, though her sister Sybil, with whom she shares an apartment, suspects Karl's motives. Paul Sherman, Karl's manager, warns Joan against Karl but refuses to give any reason. She delivers, at Karl's request, a mysterious message to a tramp steamer late at night, discovering that Paul is following her. She defends Karl blindly. Paul rescues her from Eric Strom, Karl's partner, who attempted to kiss her. Hearing a struggle, Joan later enters Karl's office in time to see him shoot and kill Eric. He asks her to pick up the gun from the door, then threatens her with blame for the murder unless she remains quiet. Paul enters and Joan is dumfounded when he backs up Karl, guarding her fingerprints on the gun. The men carry the body out and Joan wonders what will now be Karl's attitude toward her.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER IX

Karl seemed amused at her outburst. Once she had cherished that tender look. Now it was loathsome to her. With the madness of despair, she struck him full in the mouth.

Karl stepped back and his face was white with rage. "You little fool! Do you think it's as easy as that? Don't you know you'll be followed from the moment you leave this office? You will be driven to work every day by Paul Sherman. If you make a false move you will meet with an unfortunate accident. Shall we call it that?"

Silence. "There must be some way," Joan thought, "but what?" She would tell Sybil. Sybil would know what to do. Until then it would be best to pretend to Karl that he had won. He must believe that she was frightened.

"It seems that all the cards are in your hands," she admitted.

"Very clever of you to realize it," Joan wondered if she could really deceive Karl. Even if she were followed home, he would have no way of knowing what she told Sybil. She could tell Sybil to go to the police—yet Karl might have them both followed. Joan could not believe that Karl would take any chances.

"I'm going home," she said wearily, "straight home. You needn't worry about my going to the police tonight."

"I am not in the least worried," Karl said calmly. "You are young and beautiful, and I am sure that you are not yet ready to die."

She looked at him and for a moment she longed to see that other Karl, the Karl she had loved. Tears stung in her eyes. How could she have been so blind? A reckless, adventure-loving girl, laughing at Fate, moving blithely toward her own destruction. She had held open her arms to life, welcomed anything that was "exciting and different." But Sybil had been the wise one.

"You can't trust any man," Joan thought bitterly. Even Paul Sherman, who had warned her about Karl, was involved in the spy ring. He had warned her about Karl but he was no better.

"You didn't have to go so far, did you, Karl?" Joan asked now. "You didn't have to pretend to love me, did you?"

"You are very charming," Karl said, bowing.

"And you are very clever, but if you hadn't asked me to marry you, I wouldn't have married you."

"That proved my sincerity?" "Yes, although I'm ashamed to admit it."

"Perhaps it would interest you to know that I already have a wife, then he added smoothly, "in my own country."

This was the first time Karl's announcement that he had married in Germany came as a complete shock to Joan Leland. She had attached so much importance to his desire to marry her that it had never occurred to her he should be insincere.

"If you are ready to go home," Karl suggested, "I will drive you."

"Very well," Joan answered expressionlessly.

"There must be some way," Joan thought desperately as she sat silently by Karl Miller's side. She could telephone the police from her apartment. Karl would have no way of knowing about that—until it was too late. Sybil could go to the authorities. Surely there was no way that Karl could follow both girls day and night, trace every phone call. Comforted by the thought of Sybil's wise advice, Joan felt more confidence in the situation.

"I will see you tomorrow as usual," Karl was saying. "Paul will drive you to work after this. You understand?"

"I understand perfectly."

For a moment they stared at each other. Sweethearts an hour ago. Now enemies forever. Swiftly Joan turned and ran up the steps.

In the living room she was greeted with darkness and silence. She switched on one small lamp and called, "Sybil, where are you?"

But only her own voice sounded in the high-ceilinged rooms. Strange that Sybil should not be home yet. Apparently she had not returned from work. Joan ran into the bedroom. It was undisturbed. In the kitchen there were no signs that Sybil had eaten her dinner. And then on the kitchen table Joan saw an envelope. Tearing it open, she found a note in Sybil's handwriting. "I'll be back soon. Something terrible has happened."

A cold chill of premonition swept

Tearing it open she found a note in Sybil's handwriting. "I'll be back soon. Something terrible has happened."

Joan. Instantly her mind leaped to Karl Miller. Had he suspected her plan of enlisting Sybil's aid? But how could he? And why would Sybil say, "I'll be back soon"? Surely it could not be so "terrible."

"I'm just nervous," Joan told herself. She tried to light the fire but it refused to burn and smoldered out, leaving the room in dismal silence. Clapping her hands, Joan walked around the room. "I've got to talk to someone," she thought hysterically. "I can't stand this any longer."

But as she drew back the window curtain she saw Karl Miller's car still in front of the apartment. If she left, he would surely follow her! The telephone! She ran across the room and seized it from its place on the table. With a trembling finger she dialed the operator. The silence of a completely dead wire was too obvious to be mistaken.

She was seized then by absolute panic. She must get out of here—how?

There was a fire escape on the side of the building that opened off the kitchen.

"Karl couldn't see me there," Joan said aloud, and the sound of her own voice frightened her.

It was then that she heard something, like the creaking of a board. It seemed to come from the kitchen. Joan stood still. She was afraid to move.

Her hand felt for the switch and the living room was flooded with light.

"That's better," she thought, and went into the bedroom to put on her hat and coat. Against the window-pane slow rain had begun to fall. Joan looked out a front window again. Karl was still there! The fire escape was her only chance. The apartment was on the second floor and there was a good drop to the ground, but a small garden made it safe to jump.

"I can make it," Joan said. "I must!"

She reached the kitchen where Sybil's note still lay upon the table. The shade was drawn over the kitchen window. Joan advanced towards it and stretched out her hand when another sound came from without—the unmistakable sound of footsteps upon the iron staircase.

There was a soft tapping upon the window. With a frightened gesture, Joan touched the shade and it flew to the top. She looked out but could see no one. Then she heard a voice. "Joan! Open the window."

It was Paul Sherman! Joan drew back and as she did so Paul's head appeared. Had Karl sent him to get her? She shrank against the wall of the kitchen, watching his pleading gestures for admittance. Then she saw that the window was unlocked. Paul could easily open it himself. He saw the change of expression on her face, and caught its meaning.

A moment later he was in the kitchen with the window locked behind him.

Paul looked sharply at her. "Sit down," he ordered. "You look like a ghost. Have you any whiskey?"

"There's some brandy in the kitchen," Joan said. Her teeth were chattering. She was shaking so she could scarcely talk.

Paul found the bottle and returned with it to the living room. He held a small glass to her lips. "Drink this!" he commanded.

The sweet liquor burned her throat but it warmed her.

Paul was bending over the fireplace stirring the logs, adding paper and kindling until the fire glowed with a bright blaze. She watched him in silence until he had finished.

"Now listen to me, Joan and listen carefully." Her green eyes regarded him with loathing. "Spies! But you can't get away with it. You can't keep me from going to the police! You're very clever, aren't you? Talking against Karl while you're just as bad!"

Her voice had risen hysterically. "Be quiet!" Paul ordered. "Do you want Karl to come in here?"

"What do I care?" Tears streamed down the white face and she buried her face in her hands.

"Will you listen to me for one minute?" Paul Sherman said in a low voice.

She did not reply. "My name is not Paul Sherman," he sobbed. "What's that to me?"

He took her nervous hands and held them tightly in his own. "It's true I speak German. My grandmother was German. But I am Paul O'Malley of the Federal Bureau of Investigation—the FBI!"

Silence. The fire crackled and the rain poured against the windows. "The FBI?" Joan repeated.

"That's right. We've suspected Karl Miller of subversive activities for a long time but we haven't been able to get conclusive evidence. I still haven't got enough to convict him. He's too clever for that, though I believe he trusts me. One reason is that I speak his language."

"But why didn't you tell me? Why didn't you warn me?"

He smiled ruefully. "This is government business, Joan. I'm risking my neck by revealing my identity to you. If Karl finds out who I am, you know what will happen. I had to pretend to agree with him tonight."

"You mean pretend to believe that I shot Eric?"

"That's it. Now Karl will be sure of me. He doesn't know that I am here now. I came ahead of you from the club and I've been waiting for you to come home."

Joan wiped her eyes. "I tried to telephone the police. The phone is disconnected."

Paul lit a cigarette. "I know. I did it myself. Karl's orders."

Joan shuddered and fresh tears filled her eyes. "Oh, what a fool I've been! But I loved him so much. I didn't know things like this really happened. I thought all the spy talk was just propaganda. What shall I do now? What can I do?"

"Do you know about Karl's wife?" Color flooded her pale cheeks.

"Yes. He told me tonight after you left the club. He seemed very amused by the whole situation."

"I wanted to tell you, Joan, but I didn't dare take the chance of Karl's finding out that I'd double-crossed him. You understand. This business is more important than either of us."

Suddenly Joan rose crying. "And Sybil! Paul, Sybil's not here! She left a note saying that something terrible had happened. I'm afraid!"

Paul glanced at his watch. "Almost one o'clock."

"Paul!" She seized his arm. "Do you think that Karl would..."

He shook his head. "I don't know. I don't honestly know. But I have a plan. Listen carefully."

Joan and Paul sat quietly together on the couch before the blazing fire and she listened as Paul told about the spy ring and the part he wanted her to play in the future.

PROFESSOR ADDRESSES CLUB

Prof. Harley H. Bartlett, head of the botany department of the University of Michigan entertained the members of the Child Study club and a large number of their guests on Tuesday evening, when he spoke at the library on "The Philippines".

His extensive travels in the Orient and his numerous trips to the Philippines have given him a wealth of experience from which to talk. He chose to contrast the life of the Philippines with that of the natives of Sumatra and he gave an interesting picture of the life in the two countries, pointing out the tribal characteristics of the natives and telling many humorous incidents in his experiences.

One of the interesting points which he brought out was the success of the American occupation of the Philippines during the last 40 years as shown by the devotion of the Filipinos to the American cause in the present crisis. "Their patriotism and love of the United States can never be questioned," he said, "and they are doing a marvelous job of fighting for our country as well as their own."

He closed his talk by saying that, in his opinion, the defenders of the Bataan peninsula could hold out for a long time to come, because of the strategic location of their defensive and the fact that water is always available.

Prof. Bartlett expects to leave in a few days on a government mission abroad.
