Michigan motorists have no occasion for a smug "titter up the sleeve" as nearly 10,000,000 autos of the Atlantic Seaboard are placed on short rationing. Gasoline rationing isn't just an Eastern headache. Actually, it is only one aspect of a national transportation problem, which is growing more acute and soon may come home to all of us. There is plenty of gasoline. The difficulty is that already overburdened railroad lines can't get the gasoline from oil fields, to distant points, for distribution to the consumers.

We must save our transportation facilities for essential uses, just as we must save our materials, machinery and manpower. Without transportation, the whole war effort would fail. Railroads these days are highways along which men and munitions stream toward embarkation points, and raw materials stream toward the munitions factories.

That's why it may become necessary to ration train and bus space. That's why the continued operation of the taxicab is on trial. That's why, together with the national rubber shortage, we all must give up "motoring as usual" for the duration.

A stitch in time saves pinning, but ladies, you'd better start saving the pins. The common ordinary household pin has a new importance today as copper follows steel out of the home and into the arsenal.

The War Production Board has added more than a hundred consumer articles to those which no longer may be made out of copper and its alloys, including brass and bronze. A third of the household pins last year were made of brass. Other articles on the way out include Christmas tree bulbs and cords, dog collars, fountain pens and musical instruments.

To give an idea of what this means to our fighting forces, the copper that went into building materials for American homes last year will provide all the brass and copper fittings for twenty-three 10,000 ton cruisers. Copper that was used in costume jewelry, gifts and novelties will do the same for forty 1500 ton destroyers.

Ceiling prices now are in effect for most goods bought by consumers. Everyone should remember it is up to him or her to help the merchant put into effect his far-reaching program.

Remember that prices need not be the same in all stores for the same article. The maximum price is the price for which a particular store sold a particular article during March. Also, there are some articles on which there is no fixed maximum.

Give the storekeeper a break. Don't start yelling right off the bat. This is your program; it is for your protection; eventually, you will be called upon to help with its enforcement; but, right now, be tolerant, considerate and cooperative.

Preliminary figures show that 122,604,000 persons were registered for sugar rationing, or about 91 per cent of the total population. Not so pleasing, was the fact that 6,400,000 persons who registered didn't get their War Ration Book No. 1 because they had more than the allowable six-pound "hoard." They're advised to cut their sugar use to half-pound a week, for it'll be that long before they can get more sugar. Fruits can be canned without sugar, then sweetened as used. King Cotton hasn't been snubbed in the war effort. Cotton is being used, among other things, in modern camouflage. OPA offers a three-point guide for milady's wardrobe: "Buy Practical Outfits," "Mix Them Up," "Make Them Last."

Burdied nighties are out for the duration. By the end of next year, living standards will be at the 1932 depression level. Spices, such as black and white pepper, allspice, nutmeg, ginger, mace and cinnamon, have joined the sugar bowl in the "handle with care" status. The War Department has announced it can not answer individual queries as to the whereabouts of Army personnel or as to whether men are casualties or have been taken prisoner. Nearest of kin of casualties will be notified by official telegram immediately upon receipt of information from the field. It has been impossible to get mail through the Japanese blockade of the Philippines. No mail is being sent to and none has been received from American forces in the Islands since Dec. 8.

SCHOLARSHIPS AVAILABLE

The State Board of Education has made provisions to grant 400 scholarships to superior high school graduates of Michigan who are interested in preparing themselves to teach a rural school.

These scholarships waive the tuition during the two year college course at any Michigan College of Education or Normal College, leading to a State Limited Certificate.

Candidates interested in securing a rural scholarship should consult County Commissioner of Schools, Julius W. Haab.

No applications will be received after August 1, 1942.

By Gene Alteman

Mrs. Housewife, when you go to your favorite stores this week and find that prices vary for the same commodity, don't jump to a conclusion that someone is profiteering.

Price control, which became effective Monday (May 18), does not impose uniform prices.

Ceilings will vary from store to store, according to the highest prices charged in each store for commodities during March, 1942.

Likewise, you must take into consideration the element of quality as well as price. And you should know the exempted articles and services, too, before you talk disparagingly over the back fence.

Apprehensive that misinformed consumers might flood the local rationing boards with complaints of price violations, the Michigan Council of Defense through its committee of public information is taking steps this week to acquaint retailers and consumers with provisions of our revolutionary war system—federal price control.

It isn't as simple as you may think. Retailers merit your sympathy and full cooperation, for they are going to be penalized severely—many of them, at least—under arbitrary freezing of wholesale and retail prices for the same base period of March, 1942. The bookkeeping load alone will be tremendous at a time when many stores are wondering how they can retain trained clerks in competition with nearby war plants and the selective service act.

Yet, interesting enough, leaders of Michigan retail trade associations say the average retailer is accepting the new order as part of numerous sacrifices to be expected from the home front.

It is all-out war, this time, and no mistake.

Consumers, likewise, realize that the soaring cost of living, unless checked in some effective manner, would continue upward endlessly.

As Price Administrator Leon Henderson explained on April 28, "a staggering excess of money over the supplies of goods available threatens disaster to the civilian economy and to the war effort."

Who is caught usually in inflation's squeeze? The little man with a fixed income; the small merchant whose margin of operation is small.

Posting prices of cost-of-living commodities was required of every retailer this week, starting Monday.

Every merchant must send a statement of these ceiling prices—highest prices which he charged during March—to the Office of Price Administration in Detroit not later than Monday, June 1.

Furthermore, he is given until July 1 to prepare a statement of the ceiling prices of all commodities or services which he supplied during March. Another reason why consumers should be patient during the next few weeks.

Price control will be administered in Michigan by Arthur F. Sarvis, Flint banker who has been rationing director of The Michigan Council of Defense. Seven regional district offices are to be established with executive staffs.

Because such organizations cannot be completed overnight and because retailers have been given a big bill to swallow, it has been suggested that consumer complaints on ceiling prices—except in cases of flagrant violations—should await July 1. Sarvis is convinced retailers can be relied upon to cooperate with the government wholeheartedly in an honest and equitable compliance of the act. It is no secret that many retailers are going to be penalized for not taking price mark-ups in March on merchandise which they purchased months before at lower wholesale prices. And as their stocks must be replenished at higher prices and as war priorities will gradually curtail wholesale deliveries, Michigan retailers are confronted with dark days, indeed.

To these people, economic victims of the war, consumer tolerance would be most helpful.

You can't keep politics out of 1942 headlines.

And you can't keep Elton R. Eaton out of a good fight.

That's why the entry of this militant anti-boss newspaper editor of Plymouth into the race for Republican nomination for United States senator is certain to afford additional reader relief from war communiques. Eaton will be opposed by Gerald K. Smith, social justice crusader of Detroit who received his reform baptism in Louisiana with the late Huey "Kingfish" Long. Both men are mean slingers of words, and colorful accusations are assured.

Judge Homer Ferguson, Wayne county circuit judge, was reported a few months ago to be on the edge of candidacy.

The latest reports are he may not declare.

Section nine of the Michigan state constitution says: "They (circuit judges) shall be ineligible to any other office than a judicial office during the term for which they are elected and for one year thereafter." Judge Ferguson, if elected, would risk a possible contest in the United States senate, and being a Republican he could not expect joyous seating by the Democratic majority.

Civil service, plus the federal Hatch act, will restrict activity of government employees in politics this year.

James Greenfield of Norway, associated with Auditor General Vernon J. Brown at Lansing, has been granted a leave of absence by the Michigan civil service commission to become a candidate for the Republican seat at Congress held by Frank Hook of Ironwood.

The Hatch act forbids anyone in the military service from running for public office. It is going to nip many budding candidacies.

WILLIAMSTON—The Woodmere Scrap Iron and Metal Co., of Detroit, successful bidders for the property of the Michigan Clay Products Corporation, settled in full with the Central Trust Company of Lansing, receivers for the corporation, last Friday, according to the statement of Harry Bennett of the Trust Company. $87,000 was the price at which the property was sold.—Enterprise.

MCD Creates Second Corps For Volunteers

Lansing—Organization of a Michigan Citizens Service Corps and formal recognition of and basic requirements for the Michigan Citizens Defense Corps and the Civil Air Patrol are provided for in orders issued this week by Lt. Col. Harold A. Furlong, administrator of the Michigan Council of Defense. The orders are effective June 1, 1942.

The orders also create a Michigan Citizens Service Corps and formal recognition of and basic requirements for the Michigan Citizens Defense Corps and the Civil Air Patrol are provided for in orders issued this week by Lt. Col. Harold A. Furlong, administrator of the Michigan Council of Defense. The orders are effective June 1, 1942.

Bond sales, salvage, education, health, consumers' services, and others, or to those who have completed certain prescribed training courses in volunteer activities. They will wear armbands with special insignia.

The Civil Air Patrol is confirmed in the new order as an integral corps of the MCD. Civil Air Patrol is comprised of volunteer pilots and ground personnel operating in close cooperation with the military authority in Michigan.

Registration of civilian defense volunteers in Michigan climbed again during April, a tabulation of returns from 38 counties shows. The number of volunteers reached 323,932, an increase of 8,000 for the month. During the same period the number of volunteers who have either completed training or entered training increased sharply.

At the end of April, 132,211 persons were enrolled in the Citizens Defense Corps and 150,928 in civilian mobilization.

Michigan now has 42,054 air raid wardens in training or assigned to duty. Upon completion of the American Legion MCD training program for wardens, several additional thousand will be ready for service.

Michigan's program for the recruitment of a minimum of 25,000 high school students to relieve the farm labor shortage was singled out for praise by Gen. Samuel T. Lawton, of the Central Defense Command, at a meeting of civilian defense leaders from three states in Chicago on May 11.

"One of the most vital things we can do is secure farm labor," Gen. Lawton declared, "because men in the Army are influenced by what happens back home." He told of repeated instances of men in the Army in the Southern training zone, from which he had just returned, seeking long furloughs to enable them to help their families harvest crops back home. He pointed out it was impossible to grant all such requests, and showed how concern over conditions at home affects Army morale.

"Anything that can be done to help relieve difficulties back home helps the soldier and helps the war effort," Gen. Lawton assured the Michigan MCD officials.

Red Cross Sends Units To Caribbean Areas

Washington, D. C.—To strengthen its chapters in the Caribbean and Canal Zone areas, the American Red Cross is shipping 12 complete 50-bed emergency medical station units. These units, similar to those sent last summer to Hawaii and the Philippine Islands, include all equipment, supplies and medicaments necessary to care for 50 casualties each requiring temporary hospital care.

Puerto Rico will receive six units, the Virgin Islands three, and the Canal Zone three. Each is complete with cots, blankets, linen, drugs, dressings, surgical instruments and supplies, hospital appliances, buckets, brooms, and lanterns for emergency lighting.

In most cases the materials will be stored in buildings already surveyed for the purpose, where water and other facilities are readily available, but in case of need may be set up wherever the local chapter may see fit.

Red Cross chapters in the Caribbean area already have given aid to a large number of victims of torpedos. Both in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, survivors of these disasters have been given clothing, shelter and kits, cables have been sent to their relatives, and all their needs have been cared for.

These chapters have a complete preparedness program for all emergencies, and have organized and trained local volunteers in first aid, life saving, disaster relief and nurse's aide work.

BRIGHTON—The Brighton fire department was called to Hamburg Friday afternoon at 4:30 when fire broke out in the William Winkelhaus hotel. The fire, it is understood, was caused by a defective water heater. Due to prompt action by the firemen, there was but a small amount of damage. —Argus.

SALINE—A local restaurant was kept busy a few mornings ago when an officer stopped to ask if they could feed 35 men. They were driving a fleet of trucks through. Although alone at the time the proprietor decided to take the crowd. In they came. Soon tables, booths and counter were filled and the orders began to come thick and fast. The lone cook fried bacon and eggs, poured coffee and made roasts in double quick time. Still the crew were not all served. So the top sergeant offered his services. He soon was frying bacon and cooking eggs, pouring coffee and washing dishes while his men kidded him about doing k. p. duty. They had a lot of fun and seemed to enjoy the spirit of the hour as well as the food they ate. —Observer.

PLYMOUTH—The old days and the old ways are coming back! They are coming back pretty fast, too! Horse thieves, who passed out of the picture some half a century ago, are back to their old taking ways again. Monday night, a grey gelding, belonging to Ward Griswold, who lives at Lapham's Corners, corner Salem and Brookville roads, was stolen from a pasture field, loaded onto a truck and driven to some unknown place. State Police who investigated, tracked the horse through the gate that led into the road, and down to a place nearby where the horse was loaded into a truck. The tracks of the truck, as well as the tracks of the horse, indicated it had been loaded into a truck. The officers are without a clue. —Mail.

TWILIGHT LEAGUE

By Rolly Spaulding

Schedule

Thursday, May 21—Chelsea Spring vs. Cassidy Lake.

Monday, May 25—Federal Screw vs. Chelsea Spring.

Tuesday, May 26—Central Fibre vs. Spaulding Chevrolet.

Thursday, May 28—Cassidy Lake vs. Kimunity.

Standings

	W	L	Pct.
Central Fibre	2	0	1.000
Chelsea Spring	1	0	1.000
Kimunity	1	1	.500
Spaulding Chevrolet	1	1	.500
Cassidy Lake	0	2	.000
Federal Screw	0	2	.000

Last Thursday night Spaulding Chevrolet took on Federal Screw for the first game of the season for either team.

As this year's Federal Screw team is composed of new players to our league the general feeling seems to be: "Let's show the boys what kind of a league they're in!"

Therefore, Spaulding Chevrolet handed them a slight drubbing on the night of Thursday last and on the following Monday Central Fibre handed them another defeat that was more than I could tell you about.

Since then the Federal Screw boys have been practicing every night and I think things will be a bit different in a week or so—they have got some topnotch players and as soon as everyone gets his turn pitching we'll see just what they have got.

There is another team this year, name of Kimunity, that is turning out to be quite a headache for some of the rest of us. This team is composed of part of the old Kimunity team and partly of "factory throwouts" (but not the 2 for 5 variety). "Karmichael" Mahar, "Hefty Droop" Ball, Allen, George Sperling, Jess Parsons, Geno Coltre, Harv Lixey, Charlie Cameron, Bob Foster, Al Johnson, Tommy Bust—that's enough—they've got 'em!

P. S. Don't forget, there is a game every Monday, Tuesday and Thursday nights and they are really worth seeing.

P. P. S.—Kimunity defeated Spaulding Chevrolet last Tuesday night—well Sperling—if you want it up further in the writeup why don't you take over this column?

ANNUAL CHURCH MEETING

The annual meeting of the Methodist church, better known perhaps by the old title of Fourth Quarterly Conference, was held on Monday evening of this week, May 18.

Several persons attended the Faith Supper at 6:45 and the business meeting was called to order by Superintendent Harrison at 8:00 o'clock.

Written reports were presented by all responsible officers and the church was found to have had the best year in its history. Aided by the efforts of the Women's Society of Christian Service which reported an income of $956.00 last year, the art glass church windows were repaired, new equipment purchased, and a note at the Chelsea State Bank was paid, and for the first time in several years the church is out of debt. Officers for 1942-3 were elected and the Pastoral Relations committee presented a resolution asking for the return of the pastor who has completed eight years of service in this community, which was unanimously adopted.

Dr. W. E. Harrison's six-year term as District Superintendent closes at the June session of the Detroit Conference when his successor will be appointed. Dr. Leroy J. Lord gave a brief report of what he called "The Status Quo" at the Methodist Home and wished Dr. Harrison God Speed. This was supported by the pastor and members of the Board. Dr. Harrison responded graciously and dismissed the meeting with prayer and his final benediction.

The program chairman selected Prof. Hassel E. Vintema of the University of Michigan Law School to be the principal speaker of the evening, and he spoke briefly on phases of international law. Prof. Vintema mentioned that many legal concepts of international law have been changing during the past decade and that at the present time this legal system is in a state of flux. The speaker stated that certain laws dealing with alien enemies and the custody of their property in this country have been formulated recently and are being carried forth with a great deal of certainty. The speaker concluded his brief talk by urging the Kiwanians to consider the problem of the administration of alien property in this nation for the new laws enacted by the government are likely to establish precedents in this field.

THE STORY SO FAR: Joan Leland is trapped, when her employer, Karl Miller, with whom she is in love, shoots his business partner, Eric Strom. He asks her to pick up the gun, then threatens to accuse her of the murder unless she continues her work and remains silent. She is horrified when he confesses he is a German spy and has a wife in Germany. Warned against Karl by her sister, Sybil, and Karl's manager, Paul Sherman, Joan had blindly defended the man she felt in love with. Paul reveals he is really Paul O'Malley, an FBI agent trying to trap the Nazi spy ring. Sybil is missing and Paul believes Karl is holding her as a hostage. Karl dines with a beautiful young girl hired as a singer, in reality Paul's young run-away sister, Patricia, who innocently betrays Paul's identity. Joan and Paul discover a secret foreign radio transmitter belonging to Karl with bomber plans, but are captured by Karl, who imprisons them on a boat. They announce their love to each other and meet Thomas, another victim of Karl's. Paul succeeds in altering the bomber plans, then decides to try and get a radio message through the ship's set. Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XV

It was less than half an hour later when Thomas returned saying, "Come on deck. It's here!"

They followed him to the rail. The misty rain and gray sky and sea made it difficult to focus their vision but Joan suddenly saw the periscope of a submarine rising slowly from the water.

"There it is! I see it!"

"Yes. That is it," Paul said quietly.

Karl appeared from the captain's quarters. They could see him descending the narrow flight of stairs. He was dressed in uniform and called sharp commands to three sailors who stood at the rail preparing to lower a small boat.

"Is Karl going to the submarine?" Joan asked.

"Probably they will come to the ship," Paul said speculatively.

"Yes, that's right," Thomas put in, nodding his head. "I've seen them do it before. Karl gives them the papers and they're gone again."

"You don't think Karl has found out that you changed those plans?" Joan said nervously.

"He doesn't seem to."

Men appeared from the hold of the ship. All stood at attention as the hatch of the submarine opened and two officers appeared. As Thomas had predicted, the boat carried them to the ship and they all went to the pilot house.

"What will they do now?" Joan asked.

"Get the papers and go back."

"And all those plans will be used?"

"Yes. Not only plans for bombing planes, but formulas for explosives and poison gas. This spy ring has connections in every part of our country. It's a powerful organization and the leader's the one we want. Getting Karl alone wouldn't do any good. If he were in jail the rest of his life, it wouldn't stop the rest of them."

"How terrible!" Joan shuddered.

"That isn't the worst of it," Paul went on. "They intimidate people who have relatives in Germany, threatening to harm them unless money and aid is given. Many people are drawn into it this way."

"Yes," Thomas cried. "That's what happened to me. Karl told me my wife would be put into a concentration camp if I didn't give him five thousand dollars. She was still in Germany, you see, so I tried to raise the money but I couldn't. So Karl offered to put it up for me if I would come on this ship. But I've never heard from my wife since."

"We may as well go inside," Paul said. "Apparently this conference is going to take some time."

"I don't like the look of it," Thomas insisted. "Usually they're here only a few minutes."

"Do you really think anything is wrong?" Joan asked anxiously as she and Paul went into the lounge.

"It doesn't look too good," Paul admitted. "Be ready for anything. If you want your purse, you'd better get it now. We may be off the ship before another hour passes."

Automatically Joan went into her cabin and gathered up her things. It seemed fantastic that they could escape from a boat in mid-ocean.

"All set?" Paul said as she stood resolutely before him.

"Ready for anything," Joan said bravely.

But almost an hour passed and nothing happened. The ship rested tranquilly by the side of the submarine. The rain continued; Thomas watched from the deck. Paul smoked endless cigarettes as he paced the length of the cabin. "I don't like this delay," he admitted. "Things aren't going as I had planned."

Thomas came into the cabin where Joan and Paul waited, with tea and toast. "There must be something wrong," he whispered. "Karl must have found out about those plans."

Paul frowned but said, "Not necessarily."

"But if he has, what then? How will we ever escape?" Joan put in.

Thomas poured the tea and his hand trembled. "He'll know I helped you. He'll kill me."

Joan, remembering Eric Strom, was filled with a vague terror. Her hand instinctively touched the gun in her coat pocket.

"Karl won't kill anyone," Paul said, calmly lighting a cigarette.

Joan had already noticed that Paul had the faculty of inspiring trust. Thomas seemed to be relieved by his assurance, vague and indef-

She had scarcely uttered the words when Karl Miller's powerful figure loomed in the doorway. He held a pistol.

It was a little after seven when Thomas motioned them to come outside. Karl and the officers were on the lower deck.

They watched as the officers descended the rope ladder and were rowed back to the submarine. In the darkness it was hard to distinguish them. It was like some evil mirage, as their vague shapes disappeared down the hatch, then slowly the submarine submerged.

"It's the most terrible thing I've ever seen," Joan said, moving closer to Paul. "It's symbolic of all the hidden terror in the world today."

"And it's my job to do all I can to stop it," said Paul.

"You'll never stop Karl and his kind. There are too many of them," Thomas said sadly. "It would take years."

"We'll stop them all right, no matter how long it takes, and every little bit helps. If we can get to the bottom of this unit, it will fight on the others. Every man in the FBI is working day and night tracking down these people. We'll catch up with every one of them eventually."

Joan's heart was full of pride in his words.

Paul caught her glance and smiled. She was clutching her purse and gloves, ready to depart, as he had said, "at a moment's notice."

"We're not going to get out of this as soon as I thought," he told her now as they went back into the lounge. "May as well sit down and relax."

"Not me," Thomas insisted. "I'm going to stay on deck. If Karl does come, I don't want to make things look any worse than they already are."

"Odd that Karl trusts you here with us," Paul meditated.

"He trusts me," Thomas declared, "because he knows I'm afraid of him."

But though neither Joan nor Paul would admit it, both thought that Karl was too clever to overlook the possibility that Thomas might aid Karl's prisoners. Had he deliberately planned it this way?

"Drink your tea, dear," Paul advised. "This may be the last food we'll have for quite a while."

They smiled, sending each other a message of courage.

The ship lay quietly. They had not moved since the arrival of the submarine.

Thomas stood patiently outside. The rain on his slicker gleamed in the darkness.

"I think he's more worried than we are," Paul commented.

Thomas' shuffling footsteps came suddenly to their ears; also a hard tread ascending the stairs.

"It's Karl!" Joan whispered.

She had scarcely uttered the words when Karl Miller's powerful figure loomed in the doorway. He held a pistol.

Paul and Joan faced him silently. Behind his back Joan saw the terrified eyes of Thomas.

"You amaze me, Mr. O'Malley," Karl said coolly. "A man in the government service should be more clever than you have been."

"Meaning what?" Paul inquired with assumed indifference.

"Do you really think me so stupid?" Karl smiled. "Do you think I would hand over important papers without checking them first?"

"Sorry to disrupt your little plan. You could see for yourself that they are quite worthless now."

"Quite," Karl said coolly. "But I feel that your government would have preferred to lose the plans and have you alive."

"No!" Joan screamed, sensing his meaning.

"Shut up! I will deal with you later. Perhaps you will learn that death is preferable to some things."

"If you imagine that I am afraid to die, you are wrong," Paul said calmly. "To die for a purpose like this could almost be called a pleasure."

Joan wondered how he could talk like that at a time like this, but Karl had a faint glimmer of approval in his cold eyes. "I admire your courage," Mr. O'Malley. Too bad that you fight on the wrong side. If you had joined with me, we might have gone far together."

His hand raised the pistol, his finger was pressed against the trigger.

Joan saw Thomas motion to her and she knew instantly what she must do. She snatched the gun from her pocket and fired it directly at Karl Miller. With an expression of complete incredulity, he crumpled to the floor.

The gun fell from Joan's hand as she stared with unseeing eyes before her. "I've killed him," she whispered.

Paul's arm was about her. "Don't think about it. We're getting out of here."

Thomas took a timid step forward. "It served him right," he declared with satisfaction.

"Where did she get that gun?" Paul demanded.

"I gave it to her."

Paul motioned to Thomas and together they helped her from the cabin. Outside, complete darkness, a slight wind and the misty rain.

"Do you think you can get those papers from the safe?" Paul asked Thomas. "I'll wait here with Joan."

Thomas looked fearfully over his shoulder.

"There's nothing to be afraid of now," Paul said. "Go quickly before the others find out what has happened."

Paul and Joan waited under the narrow ledge of canvas. Large drops of rain splattered down on the deck. Joan clung to Paul's arm unable to speak. "It won't be long now, honey," he said. "Try to bear up just a little while longer."

Thomas returned almost instantly with the papers and handed them to Paul. "I didn't see anyone," he reported. "This all seems too easy."

"Never mind that," Paul said. "Do you think we can lower a boat?"

"Sure. But we'll have to go down to the boat deck and one of them will see us. They all know what's what. They'd shoot us down like Karl would have. We haven't a chance of getting off this boat."

"There's no time to argue," Paul insisted. "I know what I'm doing. Now let's go."

As they descended the stairs there was no one in sight. The boat used to take the officers back to the submarine was still in the water.

"What luck!" Thomas said.

"Not luck," Paul replied. "It's there for a purpose. You go down first and I'll help Joan."

Thomas disappeared over the side. "Do you think you can make it, honey?" Paul asked Joan, looking anxiously into her white face. "I'll go first and you follow me."

Trémulously Joan obeyed. The ladder swayed with her weight and the rope scraped her hands as she

A LETTER TO.

Chelsea

from
NEW YORK

(Written aboard the "Wolverine" between New York and Detroit.)

Our ship reached Ambrose Lightship twenty miles out of New York a bit past midnight, Saturday, March 21. We had lost at least one full day in a storm, and it was a real storm. It reminded us of scenes we'd seen in the movies—grown men falling over in their chairs, dishes sliding off the table. During one twenty-four hour stretch we made twenty-five miles.

The last two hours to Ambrose were the hardest. Knowing we had come 1700 dangerous miles by sea safely, we realized full well that the cruelest blow might come at any time, even now. All hands sat playing bridge in silence, glancing furtively at the creeping clock hands. Finally we could stand it no longer, went up on deck to watch the lights on Long Island.

We made it. We got a pilot immediately at Ambrose. Safety! We could take much-needed showers, turn on all the lights we wanted, breathe easily. It was like coming out of darkness into dawn.

In the morning we were anchored off Staten Island. We were questioned and examined by the immigration and our passport confiscated for the duration of the war. Coast Guardsmen came aboard and took pictures of the rescued crew of the Astrea. Finally we were allowed to proceed into New York.

Very few native-born Americans first come into New York by sea. It was a thrill. The speedy ferries bound for Hoboken passed us disdainfully; the Statue of Liberty, green with envy and tarnish, welcomed us home; two grunting tugs worried us against the current, past the Battery and lower Manhattan, eventually decked us right beside the Brooklyn Bridge.

Again we were questioned, this time by the Navy and the Customs. Our luggage was not particularly troubled but every printed and written word in my portfolio was read. That alone consumed half an hour. Through at last. We bade farewell to our Captain, the Chief Officer, the Chief Engineer, walked breathlessly down the gangplank, put our feet down solidly on—American soil—U. S. A.—home!

I hate to admit it, but we were not particularly impressed by New York. To us it was just another port. We saw the bulk of the Normandie, rode the subway, visited Macy's, did a few of the things tourists usually do in the short time we had. But Michigan was calling, and a train, a fast train called the "Wolverine" was waiting. We pulled out of Grand Central Station that same night.

Before I forget it, the Captain of our ship told us just as we left him: "When you see all those people walking up and down on Broadway, buying fur coats and silk stockings, going to plays and so on, don't forget anything, disillusion them. Don't tell them there's a war on!" In 1400 miles our ship hadn't seen one American warship, one American plane.

The trip is over. For us and for you. We have all come home to our America at war, come home to do our bit.

We have covered 8,000 out of an intended 18,000 miles, five months out of an intended twelve. And yet we have those five months—no one can ever take them from us.

Kate and I have to think of the questions we have had to leave unanswered of the plans gone amiss. But war changes all our lives, and we know you will understand.

If we can contribute one iota of value to our country's war effort, then coming home will be worth it.

We want to close with our gratitude to you, for we have so much of it. Gratitude to you friends in Chelsea for your interest, your questions, your cooperation. Gratitude to the editor of The Chelsea Standard for his faith in us. He has never let us down.

In spite of everything, we—and "we" includes all of you—we made a good try, didn't we? And we came awfully close. If the "Hill" yellers feelers had waited another week we would have made it.

Let us say goodbye this way. From now on, with us—with all of us—instead of "Keep Us Sailing," it'll be "Keep 'Em Flying!"

G. S. & K. S.

BE NOT AFRAID!

By Ruth Taylor

Too many of us are in the grip of fear today. It is a fear that is blind, unreasonable, devastating in its effect. We could not say of what we are afraid. One thing is certain—it is not a purely physical fear. It is a fear of the changes that war will bring, of the new hardships, the untried difficulties, the loss of old landmarks, of certain securities that were dear because they were familiar. It is a fear of being afraid.

There is no need to be ashamed of fear. Fear actually signifies a form of foresight—an ability to see ahead—to imagine a possible evil. But it is lacking the vision which enables us to see beyond the ultimate good. The half-versed traveller looking up at the lowering clouds sees bad weather, but the trained pilot thinks beyond to the upper sky and a clear passage above the clouds.

What is important about fear is the power to conquer it. It is this ability to be afraid and not give way to fear that lifts man above the animals. It is the power to pause and wait—not run in blind terror—to go ahead and walk steadily not only in face of danger but in spite of fear. To meet a fear face to face and not be dogged by its hot breath at the back of the neck—that is the mark of man.

Whenever I'm afraid—which is often—I think of an English lad who died twenty and more years ago. He conquered fear. He lost his life—but even in the dying, left a source of strength to others. He was a timid child—but he was taught to fight fear.

His sister told me how he would be the first to do the daring things—because he was afraid. He feared the dark—so he always went first. He feared grasped it heroically. Step by step she went down until at last she felt Paul's arms lifting her to safety.

Thomas loosened the rope that held them to the ship. "This won't work, Mr. O'Malley. They'll shoot us like dogs. We haven't a chance."

But he was wrong. They rowed away unmoored. The ship was like a ghost; not one of the crew was in sight. Later fatigue held her prisoner, and with her head buried in her arms, she fell into a deep sleep.

When she awoke it was to brilliant sunshine streaming from a blue cloudless sky. Her muscles were stiff and cramped.

Paul watched her, smiling. "Feel better?"

She sat up and stretched her aching back. "I don't know how I could have slept like that."

"If you want the truth," Paul grinned, "I put a sleeping powder in your tea late yesterday afternoon. I figured on something like this."

horses—so he put his pony at the stiffest jumps. He would just say, "I'm the one that's afraid, so I'll do it!"

He hated war, suffering, blood—so he went out with the "Old Contemptibles" and was killed in the Mons retreat, staying behind with a wounded soldier. But he still lives. His brother, when praised for his own courage, would only say, "I couldn't let Ned down—and I was afraid."

It is that kind of courage we need today. The courage that will enable us to say, "I dread what is coming—but I can face it." Fear is never half so bad when you walk up to it.

Scouts Will Be Asked To Help In Emergency

Cleveland—Troops of Boy Scouts will be asked to serve as emergency crews wherever needed this summer to help save crops, according to E. L. Keenan, regional representative of the United States Employment Service for Michigan, Ohio and Kentucky.

"Farms, as well as industry, are facing the biggest labor demand in history," Keenan says. "Many farm boys have been called into the armed forces while many others have taken jobs in wartime industries. At the same time, the President has called for increased food production in the 'Food for Victory' campaign. Consequently, farmers need more help than ever before."

The Employment Service in Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky plans to recruit every available farm worker. We have set up a regional farm placement service under the direction of William V. Allen, a practical farmer, and we are making every effort to meet the demands of farmers for help. But, we want to be prepared for situations where extreme hot weather may bring sudden ripening of tomatoes and fruits. Here's where the Boy Scouts can perform yeoman service. They can hold themselves in readiness to serve as emergency pickers."

The Boy Scouts have established a tradition of service of the highest order. During the last war, they guarded water supplies, telegraph lines and other property. In the influenza campaign of 1918, the work of the scout organization was equalled by their effective national campaign for food growing. And all this was eclipsed by the work of the Boy Scouts in selling Liberty Bonds, $355,000,000 in Liberty Loan subscriptions being collected by the Scouts.

"The Boy Scouts have a definite place in Democracy's scheme of things, for if the Nazi threat succeeds, the Boy Scout movement will give way to a Hitler youth movement."

"We know the Boy Scouts will be just as eager to serve in whatever manner they can in this war, and that they will stand ready to do their part, wherever needed in the 'Food for Victory' drive."

TRAVELERS VISIT HERE
Mrs. Sumner G. Bush had as her guests over the week-end her nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Noyes Osborne of Omaha, Nebraska, who stopped in Chelsea on their way home after attending the graduation exercises of their son, Herbert, from Dartmouth College at Hanover. They also visited their eldest son, Melvin, who graduates next month from Harvard Medical School, and stayed in Poughkeepsie with Mrs. Osborne's sister, Dr. Helen L. Valliger, also visiting relatives at Amherst, Scarsdale, and New York City. They were much impressed by the beauty of the pink and white dogwoods and azaleas; contrasting with the bright Japanese maples throughout the New England States. They noticed as many as ten different classes of Dominion forces on one block at Kingston and Toronto. They experienced an hour's blackout in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and saw a German concentration camp in Ontario. Their 4000-mile automobile trip was cut short by the gasoline rationing in New England. On their way to Omaha, Mr. and Mrs. Osborne will stop for a short visit with Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Holmes at Battle Creek.

MRS. MARY A. LUSTY

Mrs. Mary A. (Foran) Lusty, 83, formerly of Chelsea, died Monday, May 18 at the Arnold Home, Detroit, where she had resided the past two years.

Mrs. Lusty was born Jan. 6, 1859, in Webster township. She married Frank Lusty in 1889 and they made their home in Chelsea until his death several years ago. For 19 years she had lived in Detroit.

Survivors include two sons, Stanley of Detroit and Frank of Jackson, and six grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 10 o'clock this forenoon at St. Mary church, with Rev. Lawrence Dorr officiating. Burial will be in Mt. Olivet cemetery.

DEXTER—Murray Merrill, Dexter's representative at the Detroit News spelling bee in Detroit last Friday battled valiantly in the final test of spelling ability. Twenty spellers "bit the dust" before Murray had to yield due to spelling "tasse" with an "ie" at the end. Only twelve were left on the platform when Murray made his exit. It was a good job for such a young man and Dexter may well feel proud of him. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Merrill of Dexter, leader.
