FLAG WEEK JUNE 8-14---FLY YOUR FLAG!

Old Glory: 165th Anniversary

Here are some rules for the proper display of the American flag as suggested by William T. Kerr, founder and national president of the American Flag Day association:

Q. When a large flag is borne horizontally by a number of people, the blue field is forward and to the right.

Q. In a procession the flag's place is on the marching right.

Q. On a staff the flag's place is in the center and highest point in a grouping of other banners.

Q. In the channel of a church the flag staff should be at the speaker's right, other banners should be at his left. In the body of a church the flag's place is at the congregation's right.

Q. Do not use the flag as drapery. Use bunting.

Q. Give the banner briskly to the breeze in raising it. But lower it slowly and ceremoniously.

Q. When the flag is used on a motor car, the flag should fly from a staff.

Q. Never permit a fold of the flag to touch the ground—the skies are its place!

Village Gets Delivery On New Fire Truck

Chelsea's new fire truck, ordered last December, was delivered here last Friday. The delay was caused by government freezing orders following outbreak of war, but village officials feel very fortunate in receiving the truck at all because of the great demand for fire-fighting equipment throughout the country during the present emergency.

The new fire truck was purchased from the American Fire Apparatus Co., the chassis being furnished by Spaulding Chevrolet Sales & Service. This truck is especially adapted to fighting country fires, as it is equipped with a 400-gal. water supply tank, which can be refilled by a bucket brigade where additional water is available. It is also equipped with two 5-gal. water fire extinguishers with pressure capable of throwing water 50 feet. The motor driven pump is located on the front bumper.

Because of a delay in delivery of a few accessories the truck is not ready for use but it is expected the additional equipment will be delivered within the next few days.

According to village officials, both of the old fire trucks now owned by the village will be retained. The Dodge truck for use at any time, and the older Ford truck will be stored and kept in condition for use in case of emergency.

Sylvan township has voted to pay the village $800.00, which will give all rural residents of the township full fire protection for one year with the new truck manned by Chelsea firemen. It is expected that an agreement will be made with other nearby townships so that all rural residents in the Chelsea area will have the benefit of fire protection with this new truck.

Output of Surgical Dressings Declines

The surgical dressing class which has been working on Monday nights, has for the past year been commended by the county for its excellent output of dressings.

For the past three weeks the number of volunteers has noticeably fallen off. As a result, the output of bandages has fallen below the usual commendable standard.

Inasmuch as the quota for Chelsea has recently been doubled, it is quite necessary that a large number of persons report for work next Monday night. Out of 100 persons enrolled, only 15 reported for work on June 8. We need your help more now than at any time. Let's work for our usual scale of achievement.

INDUCTED INTO SERVICE

Among the young men from Wash-tonaw county who left for Detroit on Thursday to be inducted into army service were Donald J. Wheeler and Malcolm G. Novess of Chelsea. After passing their final examinations they were sent to Fort Custer.

Donald, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Justin Wheeler, was born Aug. 19, 1919 in Chelsea. He graduated from Chelsea high school in 1938 and had recently been employed as automatic operator for the Hancock Mfg. Co., Jackson.

Malcolm is the son of Mrs. Elsa Novess, and was born in Chelsea on May 11, 1920. He was employed in the dairy of Ehler J. Notten.

Canning Sugar Permits Available This Week

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday, June 11, 12 and 13, the Local Board for Sugar Rationing will be at the town hall, West Middle street, from 10 to 12 a. m. and 6 to 9 p. m. daily, to issue certificates for the purchase of sugar to be used for canning purposes.

Before leaving your homes, make a note of the number of quarts of fruit that were canned in your home during 1941 and how many quarts are still remaining from that supply. Your registrar will request that information. Also be prepared to declare the number of quarts of fruit that you plan to can between now and Aug. 1.

All sugar rationing cards now in the possession of any family regardless of number, must be taken with the person who represents that family when applying for the sugar certificate at this time.

The local board will appreciate having as many persons as possible register before the last day.

NATIONAL EDITORIAL
1942 ASSOCIATION
Active MemberTHE HOME FRONT IN MICHIGAN

The modern soldier stands at the apex of a pyramid—a human pyramid. He is placed there by the arms, hands, backs and shoulders of many who stand beneath him, the many—including Michigananders—who supply him with food, clothing, weapons and ammunition.

Sometimes soldiers scale high walls by forming human pyramids, and it is in this manner—but on a vastly greater scale—that we shall top the wall of victory. Because we must maintain this human pyramid of total war to support our fighting men on far-flung fronts with all we have, we have inaugurated the Manpower Mobilization program.

If we are to have more and better weapons for more and better soldiers and sailors (that's what it takes to win), then we must see that everyone in Michigan and the nation does a job of some sort.

Just the other day Manpower Commission Chairman, Paul V. McNutt, said a big step in this direction was the growing army of physically handicapped men and women now taking its place in war production industries.

Because this state and all others in the nation are pouring everything we have into the war effort, we are faced with shortages in vital materials—shortages which, according to the War Production Board's Division of Materials, will grow more serious as the war progresses.

This has meant and will continue to mean less and less for civilian use, widespread substitution, and an increasing necessity for getting scrap metals and other materials back to the processing plants.

Scrap salvage, more than ever before, indicates a spare-time job for each of us. Only by scraping the bottom of the barrel for old metals and rubber can we have enough for victory.

This state, and the rest of the nation, is going to have less melody; so that our aviators may sing a song of destruction over Germany and Japan. A recent WPB order stops manufacture of almost all musical instruments. The saving of 15,000 tons of war materials that went into these instruments in 1940 would have supplied iron, steel, brass, copper and aluminum for 11,500 six-ton army trucks, or 83 medium tanks, or 49,000,000 rounds of .30 calibre ammunition, or 600-155 mm field pieces, or 40,000 aircraft flares.

We're going to get along without new carving sets, pocket knives and manicuring scissors. WPB has decided they aren't necessary in wartime and ordered manufacture of them stopped after June 30. Making of tableware and other cutlery also has been reduced sharply. It all means a lot to the critical materials situation.

A special WPB committee is studying possibilities of cargo planes for swift, long-range transportation. The OPA reminds you that if you're still looking for a war ration book or a sugar purchase certificate the place to apply is your local war price and rationing board, not the schoolhouse where original registration took place. Canned citrus fruits and citrus juices have been taken out from beneath the price ceiling, and cat and dog food have been placed under it.

Typewriter production will end early next autumn. Rubber is in the news again—a plastic hose has been developed for use with air raid stirrup pumps, and the sale of rubber life-saving suits has been restricted to cargo ships and tankers. Zippers salvaged from worn-out clothing have a new value by a ruling which permits reconditioning and sale of used slide fasteners. Denim probably won't be as available to you as it has been; it will be helping to outfit the nation's war workers.

PLYMOUTH—Did some one dump poisoning in the Rouge river that killed thousands of fish in the river, and in Wilcox and Newburg lakes that are fed by the Rouge river, is a question Plymouth-Riverside park attendants are asking today. Wednesday evening people playing tennis near the Rouge river saw large numbers of fish floating down the stream. Some of them were dead, others were alive, but floating helplessly on top of the water. There were bass, suckers, bluegills and some trout. Many of the people took some that were alive. Park attendants say that there is no contamination of any kind which flows into the Rouge river or any of the lakes which would poison the fish. It is probable that an investigation will be made.—Mail.

Restrictions Curtail
Phone Extensions

While the Michigan Bell Telephone Company expects to be able to meet most requests for service at its summer resort exchanges this year, many persons still will be unable to get service because of war restrictions, officials of the company stated today.

Company officials also pointed out that new residential extension telephones will not be available at any point except when essential to the public health, welfare, and security.

Telephone installations may be curtailed, officials said, if they involve considerable line construction. Only party-line service can be provided in some localities. Service also will be difficult to obtain if traffic over telephone lines at an exchange already is approaching switchboard capacity. That will mean that, at some points at least, some summer homes that have had service in past years may be unable to get it this year.

Every application for service, the company said, will be decided on its individual merits and the available facilities, including lines and central office apparatus and capacity. In some cases, field investigation will be required to determine whether service can be made available.

Restrictions to date affect mostly those exchanges where service demands are greatly increased as a result of military or industrial activities arising from the war effort. Officials said the situation may become more severe should the War Production Board find it necessary to expand its restrictions in order to save even more materials than under present restrictions for the war effort.

HOLLY — Holly High's Seniors, ready to leave on their three-day boat trip to Buffalo and Watkins Glen, learned this (Thursday) morning that the employees of the D. & C. line are still on strike and that the boat they had passage on may not leave the Detroit pier today as scheduled. Only through news accounts was this information received, however. The company gave no notification to Seniors of the strike whatever, despite the fact that a reservation fee of $1 per student has already been paid. Contacting the boat company, the school office learned that they "may have some information by noon" on the strike situation.—Herald.

• This is a war of resources. And the housewife who saves tin and paper, uses up leftovers and remodels old clothes is helping make America's resources go as far as possible. So is her husband when he gets extra shaves out of a razor blade, saves old nails and hardware, and walks to work.

Like other folks, Michigan Bell employees are pulling together to win the war. By getting along with what they have they are helping conserve vital war materials. The girls in our offices keep extra vigilant watch over all supplies and equipment to make them last.

Telephone men are finding new ways to keep old equipment in service. They take extra care of the tools with which they work. They are careful with cars and tires. And they even pick up small scraps of wire after a job is finished—not because it's economical in money, but because the material itself is the thing that's important now.

TWILIGHT LEAGUE

By Rolly Spaulding

Standings	W	L	Pct.
Spaulding Chevrolet	3	1	.750
Cassidy Lake	2	1	.666
Central Fibre	2	2	.500
Kimunity	2	2	.500
Chelsea Spring	2	3	.400
Federal Screw	1	3	.250

Schedule
Monday, June 15—Cassidy Lake vs. Central Fibre.

Tuesday, June 16—Spaulding Chevrolet vs. Federal Screw; Kimunity vs. Central Fibre.

Thursday, June 18—Kimunity vs. Chelsea Spring.

During the past playing week two of the scheduled games were not played as scheduled—Spaulding Chevrolet vs. Cassidy Lake game was postponed from last Thursday night until Wednesday, June 10, which makes it too late to reach this week's press.

The Cassidy Lake - Federal Screw game which was to have been played Monday night turned out with Federal Screw choosing up sides and holding a practice game as, due to a slight misunderstanding as far as schedule was concerned, Cassidy Lake failed to show up. I believe this game will be played off this coming week but am unable to give exact date.

Tuesday night, Chelsea Spring and Spaulding Chevrolet had quite a battle. Chelsea Spring scored the first run and then Spaulding Chevrolet crossed the plate for 2 and the score remained 2-1 for the first 3½ innings. Then Chelsea Spring scored another run to tie and a new ball game was in progress. The score changed back and forth until the boys from the Spring Plant found themselves up for their last bat of the game, trailing by 2 runs—whereupon they proceeded to stage a rally and tie the score 7 to 7.

Spaulding Chevrolet, coming up in the last of the seventh, popped out first man up and it looked like an overtime game in the making but a single and a well tagged double scored the winning run for the Chevrolet team. The one bad point of the game was when "Whitey" Guest, pitching for the Spring Plant, struck out Spaulding Chevrolet's flashy new shortstop, Luther Kusterer—it has been a standard agreement on the part of our league this year that no batter let a pitcher fan him out but some of our new players weren't informed of this agreement so the Spring Plant is sure in for trouble. Why, when Joe Poch, pitching for Spaulding Chevrolet, struck out 4 men in the first 3 innings of one game he wanted to play the rest of the game alone.

Nation Honors Flag, Symbol of Our Freedom

Old Glory Is Visible Sign of America's Past and Present History.

On June 14, the flag of the United States will be 165 years old. Since that memorable day in 1777, when the Continental Congress passed the resolution which gave birth to the flag, it has stood as the symbol for all Americans' rights to liberty, justice and freedom.

The last changes in the flag were made in 1912, when Arizona and New Mexico were admitted to the Union. One star was added for each state, making a total of 48 on the blue field of Old Glory.

Now, in 1942, the people of this nation are more conscious of what their flag stands for than ever before. Today, while American soldiers—sons, sweethearts and husbands—are fighting the battle for freedom in all corners of the globe, their loved ones join with them in that spirit of determination best manifested on Flag day.

It was another war-time President, Woodrow Wilson, who bowed down with the weight of World War I—wrote, "The things that the flag stands for were created by the experiences of a great people. Everything that it stands for was written by their lives. The flag is the embodiment, not of sentiment, but of history. It represents the experiences made by men and women, the experiences of those who do and live under that flag."

In times of peace—and America has been more fortunate than other nations in this respect—Old Glory's day was taken as a matter of fact. Sometimes the matter-of-factness was viciously near indifference.

But look you today at even those who consider themselves hardened and unemotional. No longer is their flag just a representation—nothing else—of something intangible, yet vital. Now it is to them the unfurled spirit of democracy whipping in the good air of freedom.

To those millions of others who have always responded emotionally and vocally, the flag has for them, whether they are battling the foe, plowing the land, knitting sweaters, or producing tanks and bombers by the thousands—the same powerful impact and appeal that Julia Ward Howe put in the line, "As He died to make men holy, let us die to make men free."

Your flag is the symbol of all that is good and American. Give it an American reception, display and honor on June 14.

Campaign Planned To Enroll Farm Workers

Campaigns to enroll housewives, children, professional workers and others for farm work during the summer will begin in Michigan this month. Sponsored by the Agriculture Committee of the Michigan Council of Defense, the campaign will be concentrated in areas where the need for farm workers may be greatest.

"Anyone who can spend a day or a week helping on farms when labor demands are at their peak this summer will be asked to register," said C. V. Ballard, committee chairman. "Although the farm labor shortage is a state and national problem, we feel it can be licked almost entirely if the people living in the areas most seriously affected determine to do a job."

"Already hundreds have volunteered and this registration will give everyone an opportunity to show if he wants to keep our food lines intact. Moreover, the success of this program will eliminate the necessity for transporting farm workers over great distances and will conserve automobiles, tires and gasoline."

In another move to help the farmers of the state, Highway Commissioner G. Donald Kennedy, who is chief of the public works division of the Michigan Council of Defense, secured from Washington officials assurance that "any rationing of gasoline in the Midwest would be adjusted to the requirements of war production, including the transportation of essential workers."

Forms on which communities planning practice blackouts may make application to the Michigan Council of Defense for authority have been distributed to commanders of local Citizens-Defense Corps throughout Michigan by Capt. Donald S. Leonard, State commander of the Citizens Defense Corps.

In an accompanying letter, Capt. Leonard explained again that blackouts are not to be held unless permission has been granted by the Michigan Council of Defense, the regional office of the Office of Civilian Defense and the Army. Applications and detailed operations plans should be submitted at least 15 days in advance.

SHE LOVED A SPY

by SYLVIA TAYLOR

© BELL W-N-U-RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: In love with her employer, Karl Miller, night club owner, Joan Leland, secretary, is horrified and disillusioned when he shoots his partner, Eric Strom, and threatens to implicate her unless she remains silent and continues her work. He confesses he has a wife in Germany and is a member of a Nazi spy ring. Paul Sherman, his manager, reveals to Joan, he is really Paul O'Malley, FBI agent. Joan's sister, Sybil, is missing, and she agrees to help Paul secretly. Paul's sister, Patricia, innocently betrays his identity and Joan and Paul are imprisoned on a boat as they discover Karl's stolen bomber plane. They find love in each other as a submarine appears. Karl tries to murder Paul and Joan shoots him. They escape with Thomas, another victim of Karl's, to Mexico, where Joan meets Arthur Mulford, a previous employer, who offers to fly them to the U. S. and safety. He is recognized by Paul as the real head of the espionage system but remains silent, hoping to be led to the main hideout of the gang. Mulford flies them to a ranch. The wounded Miller is there. Karl wants Paul to join the spy ring.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XVIII

"I can't bear having anything happen to Sybil," said Joan.

"How do you think I feel?" Paul answered. His face was grim.

"Oh, darling, don't blame yourself," Joan comforted, taking his hand. "We'll think of some way out."

"Karl's clever," Thomas reminded them. "He always wins in the end."

"But he can't go on like this," Joan insisted. "As Paul has told us, even Karl must make a mistake sooner or later."

"Why don't you do it Karl's way, Mr. O'Malley?" Thomas urged.

"After all, what else can you do?" For a moment Paul looked as though he would strike him and then, sinking into a chair, he groaned.

"There are some things you don't understand."

"I understand!" Joan cried. "You mustn't consider me, Paul. You must do what you feel is right. I became involved with Karl through my own volition. It was no fault of yours. And I don't want you to feel responsible."

"But I love you," Paul said quietly. "You do believe that, don't you?"

"Of course I do, darling."

Thomas retired to one of the bedrooms so that they were alone now.

"I didn't expect Karl to arrive so soon," Paul said. "I've got to play for more time. If I can do that without making Mulford suspicious, my plans may come out all right."

"All right? Oh, Paul, then you do have a plan?"

"Of course I have, honey. You don't think I'd walk into a trap like this without planning some way out of it, do you?"

"Then what are you worrying about?"

"It's the time element," Paul explained.

"By the way, how did Karl get here anyway?" Joan asked curiously.

"Probably landed up the coast and flew."

"I have a hunch everything's going to be all right," Joan comforted, and Paul, kissing her tenderly, wondered at the supreme confidence of a woman in love. It was true he had made arrangements before he left the ship for a message to get through to his superiors, but Joan knew nothing about that. The message would not be received until tomorrow, which meant that help could not come until the following day. How long could he stand Karl and Mulford? If they suspected anything, they would make him pay through Joan, his only vulnerable point.

"She's so brave," he thought, holding her close. But she didn't realize the horrors that might be in store for her. She had a childish faith in him that wrung his heart. What if he should fail her after all? What if the message didn't get through? If flying conditions were bad, that would mean another delay. And each moment she was in danger—she and Sybil. Even Thomas would pay if his plan went wrong. Three lives depended upon his judgment.

"What are you thinking about, darling?" Joan asked.

Holding her closer, as though she were something very precious, Paul replied, "I was thinking that I love you now—more than I ever have before."

The next day dawned bright and cold. Joan, Paul and Thomas waited in the living room. Paul was staring out at the other house.

"I'd like to know what's going on over there," he said.

"Probably just as well you don't know," Thomas told him as he spread out a deck of solitaire cards on the table.

Joan went to Paul's side, said, "Don't worry, darling. You said last night that you had a plan."

Paul was staring out at the other house. "I'd like to know what's going on over there," he said.

The cards fell from Thomas' hands. "A plan? Why didn't you tell me? What is it?"

Paul frowned and Joan knew that he had not intended to tell Thomas. "I'm sorry," she said.

"It doesn't matter. He may as well know."

Thomas' face was lined with emotions. "Tell me!" he begged.

"Do you remember the radio operator on the ship?"

"Sure. He didn't speak a word of English."

Paul smiled. "He's played his part well. But he is a government agent just as I am."

Joan was as surprised as Thomas. She remembered the night Paul went to the radio room, not heeding a warning from Thomas, but she had not thought about the incident since.

"From the papers I obtained on the ship," Paul continued, "I guessed where this hideout was. I told Jim—that's the radio man's name—to send a message for help stating our location here. I had to guess the time element—how long we would be in Mazatlan and when we would arrive here. So the message didn't go out until today."

"Then they'll send someone after us?" Thomas asked eagerly.

"Yes. But help can't possibly come before tomorrow."

"Why did you tell him not to send the message until today?" Joan inquired.

"There was no use of their arriving before we did. In that case Karl and Mulford would not have been here either."

"But we're safe," Thomas insisted. "If help is coming, there's nothing more to worry about."

"It isn't as simple as that," Paul said. "Karl may have been suspicious of Jim, in which case that message did not get through. Even if it did, we must stall until tomorrow. There is still time for Mulford and Karl to close up this place and escape, or worse than that, take us with them."

"So now we must wait again," Joan said.

"If things look too bad," Paul told them seriously, "I'll have to make Karl think I am accepting his proposition to turn traitor. That will hold him for awhile."

"But if help didn't come, how would you get out of it?"

"That's something I'd rather not think about. The important thing is to get through this day."

But the day passed peacefully enough. Lunch and dinner had been brought, and now fresh logs were heaped upon the fire as the long shadows of night fell.

"If this goes on until tomorrow, we'll be safe," Paul commented.

But Karl Miller had no intention of letting it go on until tomorrow. It was shortly after eight o'clock when he arrived for his answer.

"You have been thinking over my proposal?" he asked Paul.

"I've been thinking about it, yes," Karl rubbed his hands together.

"Good. Then I suppose you are willing to come in with us."

"I haven't decided yet."

Joan and Thomas watched him, knowing that upon this interview depended their safety.

Karl's attitude changed immediately. "I've had enough of this! Make up your mind right now. There are important things to be done. We will not waste any more time, Mr. O'Malley."

"Suppose I do join you?" Paul parried. "Will you assure me of Joan's safety?"

"Safety, yes. But if you want her sent back to San Francisco, you are asking the impossible—for obvious reasons. You are not buying Joan's release; you are merely saving her from."

Paul silently clenched his hands. "Let us stop stalling," Karl said impatiently. "In a few simple words, this is the situation. If you do not give us your assistance and the information you have about your government's activities, Joan and Sybil, too, will be taken to the coast tonight and put aboard a ship for another country. Is my meaning clear?"

"All too clear," Paul said. "You leave me no choice but to accept."

Karl bowed slightly. "Congratulations! You have courage, Mr. O'Malley, and sense enough to know when you are beaten."

Paul's face was expressionless as he said, "One thing I must be sure of and that is Sybil's immediate release."

Karl laughed. "That is quite simple. She is waiting on the porch now. You see, I anticipated your decision."

"Sybil!" Joan cried as the door opened to admit her sister.

Laughing and crying, they were in each other's arms. Joan did not even see Karl and Paul leave.

Thomas was listening as intently as if it were his personal concern, and Joan felt sorry for him. He had nothing, nobody, to care about. So the three of them sat before the fire smoking and talking, explaining the chain of events that had taken place since the sisters were separated.

Thomas told how he had come from Germany and obtained a job, hoping to save enough to send for his wife. How Karl had put an end to his hopes by telling him that she would be put into a concentration camp. Thomas was sure now that his wife had died. As he talked, Joan was surprised to note that he was a man of more intelligence and education than she had thought. Before Karl Miller had broken his spirit, Thomas undoubtedly was a different person. He was an example of the havoc Karl had wrought in the human soul. Could he continue to dominate and destroy the lives of others? Tomorrow that question might be answered.

Joan and Sybil continued talking long after they had gone to bed. They could hear Thomas' shuffling about the living room, apparently too restless to sleep.

"He's really pathetic," Sybil said. "Karl has made him that way."

Oh, Sybil, when I think what a fool I made of myself over Karl Miller! How could I have been so dumb?"

"You were just inexperienced," Sybil said. "And now that you love Paul, you mustn't think about the past."

Joan wondered what Karl and Paul were doing. What was happening in that other house? "I wonder if he's all right now," she said uneasily.

"He can tell Karl almost anything tonight. Karl won't have a chance to find out before help comes, whether it's true or not. And tomorrow we should be out of here."

But Joan's uneasy feeling prevailed long after she heard Sybil's regular breathing at her side. Moving cautiously so as not to disturb her sister, she slipped into her coat and went into the living room.

"So you can't sleep either," Thomas said.

"No. I wish I knew what was going on. I'm so worried about Paul. Karl might do anything if his suspicions are aroused."

Suddenly there was a sound.

"What's that?" Joan cried, stepping back.

Thomas stood motionless, listening. The sound came again, followed by a soft clinking noise at the door. Joan extinguished the light. The door slowly opened and a figure entered.

"Paul!" Joan said in a tone whisper, reaching for the light switch.

"Don't turn on the lights!" Paul commanded. His flashlight broke through the shadowy night. "Well, they've come! Sooner than I expected, but I think we can make it."

"You mean help has come! But where?" Joan cried in amazement.

"A plane, several miles from here. Now listen to me very carefully. I want you to go out through the bedroom window and straight down the road to the gate. There's nothing to be afraid of. All the guards are out of the way. I'll meet you at the gate."

"You're not going back to that other house now?" Joan asked.

"I've got to, honey! There are some papers I want to get."

It's Berry Time For State's Sugar Savers

Strawberry days are coming into Michigan areas to offer the first real test for housewives bent on conserving the household sugar supplies.

Ideas offered by home economics extension authorities at Michigan State College indicate the ways in which the use of fresh fruits can aid health, provide variety for the table and still not tax the sugar bowl.

When the berries are eaten fresh, they can be served with just enough sugar and not too much. The ideal combination for flavor and sugar saving involves selection of ripe berries. Consumption of fresh produce relieves some of the nation's transportation problems and still provides plenty of food for the average family.

"But Karl and Mr. Mulford will hear you!"

"Karl and Mulford are out like a light," Paul said. "I put a couple of sleeping powders in their drinks. They won't come to for awhile!"

As Paul slipped noiselessly back to the other house, Joan went into the bedroom to rouse Sybil.

The small house was directly behind the larger one and no one could see the three figures as they went down the road. Paul was waiting. There were two other men with him.

"This way," he said, taking the girls by the arm and leading them to an automobile.

HOWELL—Striking with terrifying force at 9 o'clock Friday night, May 29, a windstorm of short duration resulted in the death of four persons, serious injuries to two others, and untold property damage in Livingston county. The fury of the twisting winds seemed to center here, damaging homes, barns, silos, tearing out hundreds of trees by their roots, breaking down electric power and telephone lines, and hardly a city block in Howell escaped without one or more broken trees or large branches tossed with abandon into the streets by the wind.—County Press.
