Village President Asks Support for Scrap Drive

Urging every man, woman and child in Chelsea to hasten the day of victory by salvaging needed scrap materials, Village President Alfred D. Mayer pledges full support to the local salvage campaign.

"By turning over to the Salvage Committee of Chelsea every available pound of old materials, we all can make a direct and helpful contribution to our national victory effort," stated Mr. Mayer.

"Every 50 pounds of steel means another 105 mm. shell; a discarded doorknob will help make dozens of cartridge cases; 25 tons of steel will make another tank."

"I call upon every resident to search his home carefully from cellar to attic, looking for scrap iron and steel, copper, brass, zinc, aluminum, rubber, rope, burlap. Every one of these materials is needed today by American industry for manufacture into weapons and equipment for our armed forces."

"There are many tons of valuable scrap in Chelsea. We must collect every pound of it and see that it gets into America's war plants. Our steel mills, tank factories, shipyards, airplane plants and other war industries are already exceeding their former production records. We can help them attain even higher production by sending them all the scrap materials we can find."

"As you search for scrap in your own home, remember that the scrap you are looking for will give our armed forces more weapons to win a quicker victory."

A big junk-rally has been announced by the local salvage committee for Friday of this week when the public is asked to cooperate by taking their scrap metal to the Schanz yard on West Middle street for sale or contribution to the war effort.

Chelsea is lagging behind in this drive—do something now! If you have a quantity of metal which would warrant collection by the committee, call phone 7011 or 3581 and arrangements will be made to call for the scrap.

Club Speakers Include "Who's Who" Notables

The Young Mothers' Child Study Club of Chelsea has announced an outstanding list of speakers for their current season.

Services of twelve notables, including professors, lecturers, and educators, have been obtained to cover a very wide range of interesting subjects. Several of these speakers are of national prominence, two of whom are listed in the current issue of "Who's Who in America."

According to the program committee, the chairman of which is Mrs. Lawrence Kiemenschneider, there will be outstanding authorities speaking on "Therapy Used in Psychiatric Hospitals for Children," "Stability of the Family and Home," "Religious Training for the Child," "Speech Correction," "Allergy," "Story Telling," "Education for Living," "Sightseeing," "Homemaking and Nutrition," "Music Appreciation," "Development and Correction of Abnormalities of Teeth in Children," "Leisure Time Activities for Children."

In addition, the social activities will include an old-fashioned box social, musical entertainment by local musical organizations, a play written especially for the Young Mothers' Child Study Club, a "Yardstick of Nutrition Dinner" for the members and husbands of the club, under the direction of the Home Economics department of the local high school.

There will also be an outstanding personage who will preside at a benefit to be given in the Chelsea high school auditorium at which the public will be invited.

Treasury Dept. Lauds Local Bond Effort

The Chelsea Standard and Advertisers Commended By Official

Appreciation of the United States Treasury Department to The Chelsea Standard and its advertisers for promotion of War Bond advertising was expressed in a letter received by The Standard this week. The letter follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT
Washington

Mr. M. W. McClure,
The Chelsea Standard,
Chelsea, Michigan.

Dear Mr. McClure:

Your unstinted contributions to the United States War Savings Bond program, both in freely publishing columns of publicity and in devoting much of your time and that of your staff to securing sponsors for official Treasury Department War Bond advertising have been tremendously helpful to this important phase of our Nation's war effort. We think it only appropriate that we take this occasion to tell you of the Treasury Department's appreciation.

As you are so well aware, sponsored advertising is the only method the Treasury Department has for promoting investment in War Bonds through newspapers, and it is only through continued voluntary and patriotic contributions on the part of your advertisers that we can keep in front of the people the urgent necessity for "everybody saving at least 10 per cent in War Bonds every day."

From time to time additional materials will be released to you, and we feel sure you will present them to your advertisers as they are presented to you for careful consideration in the light of the Nation's need.

As it is impossible for us to express our thanks personally to all the sponsors of War Bond advertising, I should be very grateful if you would convey to your advertisers the Treasury Department's appreciation for the very real contributions they have made and will be making in the future to the success of the War Bond program.

Sincerely,
E. W. Sloan,
Executive Director,
War Savings Staff.

ARMY PLANE FLIES TOO LOW TO SUIT CHELSEA RESIDENTS

Many Chelsea residents were badly frightened Monday afternoon when an army plane passed over the village at a very low altitude, almost taking the caps off of chimneys and practically brushing the treetops. The plane dived so low over the business district that it was necessary for the pilot to ascend in order to miss the treetops as he reached the residential district. It is said that this is a part of the pilot's training—picking out a target and making for it at full speed—but let us suggest to the army air force that Chelsea is a very busy place these days, with hundreds of people working at full speed in our industrial plants turning out the materials needed in the war effort, and we have no desire to take time off to fight fires and pick up wreckage which might result from an experiment such as that witnessed on Monday. We might suggest that army pilots pick out more deserted places in which to perform—Chelsea has no desire for this kind of a thrill. It is expected that village officials will register a complaint with proper army authorities in an effort to have this practice discontinued. Other planes have been flying low recently but the one on Monday took the most dangerous chances.

ATTEND LEGION CONVENTION
Mr. and Mrs. Paul C. Maroney, Mr. and Mrs. Howard C. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Barry, Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Christwell and Mrs. Julius Eisele attended the state convention of the American Legion and Auxiliary, which was held from Friday until Sunday in Kalamazoo. Mrs. Edna Alber of Ann Arbor was elected second vice-president of the auxiliary.

MARSHAL RESIGNS
Franklin Mead, village night marshal, presented his resignation, effective September 1, to the council at their regular meeting on Monday night. Mr. Mead has accepted a position as a railroad policeman.

Improvements Being Made At Public School

The Chelsea public school building is rapidly being made ready for the opening of school on September 8. Changes being made in the plant are the cutting of an outside entrance to the shop, addition of locker room space for boys, and the installation of a new electric fire alarm system.

The outside entrance to the shop is being made on the south side of the high school building and when completed will make it possible for machinery, automobiles, etc. to be taken into the shop. It will also be possible for the school to qualify for the teaching of farm shop and the opportunity to apply for reimbursement on the instructor's salary for that particular work. In addition it will help to make the shop courses more practical by permitting repair work on many types of machines.

An old storeroom for building maintenance supplies in the high school basement is being arranged so it will be possible to transfer boys' lockers from the basement corridor to this room.

The proper priority number to secure the wire for the new electric fire alarm system has been received from the War Production Board and the employees of the Chelsea Electric & Water Department plan to install the system as soon as possible.

A number of the rooms in the grade building are being painted, and also the boys' dressing room in the high school basement. Mr. Gentner has completed cleaning, sealing and waxing most of the floors in the building and expects to complete the others in a few days. The gym floor is being cleaned and sealed, and when the lines are painted it will be waxed.

Tennis Tournaments To Start Next Monday

Tennis tournaments for boys, girls and adults will be held at the tennis court on the public school grounds, starting Monday, August 24.

The tournaments will be open to all amateur tennis players in Chelsea and vicinity, and the participants will be divided as follows: Junior division for boys under 18 years of age; men's division for those 18 or over; and one division for all girls.

Anyone wanting to enter the tournaments is asked to call or send the entry form at the bottom of this article to Mr. Johnson at the school before Saturday night. Entries in the men's division are asked to pay an entry fee of 25c, and those who want to enter either the boys' or girls' division are asked to pay a fee of 10c. This money will be used to purchase War Stamps which will be awarded the winners and runners-up in each division.

As soon as all entries are in Saturday the brackets for each division will be made up and posted near the court. Entries are asked to observe the drawings and to make arrangements with their opponent for a time to play. Matches are to be determined by the best two out of three sets and umpires are to be selected by the participants. Tournament contestants have preference over all others on the court until their match has been completed.

TRAIN STRIKES STALLED CAR
Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Visel, Mrs. George Brettschneider and Mrs. Mina Troz had a narrow escape last Wednesday afternoon when the car that Mr. Visel was driving stalled on the Main street crossing of the Michigan Central railroad as the signals started the warning of an approaching train. Unable to start the car or push it from the tracks the occupants were gotten out of it. As the fast passenger train rounded the curve at the cemetery the engineer noticed that something was wrong on the crossing and had brought his train nearly to a standstill when the engine struck the front end of the car.

HOME EC. TEACHER DELAYED
Miss Julia Davies, the new homemaking teacher for the Chelsea public schools has notified Mr. Johnson that she will not be able to be in Chelsea for project supervision on August 17 as originally planned. Her sister has been very severely injured in an automobile accident near Petoskey in which two people were killed. Miss Davies plans to come to Chelsea as soon as possible and girls having homemaking projects can expect Miss Davies to contact them when she arrives.

IN

We now are on the offensive.
For the first time in this war, American forces have moved against the enemy. This first offensive re-emphasizes the need for increased effort on the Home Front. The operations against the Solomon Islands at the very start cost us one cruiser and damage to other warships.

"Considerable losses, such as are inherent in any offensive operation, must be expected," said Admiral King, commander-in-chief of the U. S. fleet. We must go from offensive to offensive, if we are to win this war. We can win only by driving the Japs from the territory they have seized, by driving the Nazis from Europe and the Near East. To do this, we must accept losses on a great scale, and we must prepare for these losses.

— Unity, Sacrifice, Action —
Materials and more materials—that is the desperate need.

This is a war in which tanks are destroyed by hundreds in a single sector of one front. Yet into a medium tank must go about 25 tons of steel, 600 pounds of copper, 500 pounds of chromium and more than 500 pounds of manganese, aluminum, lead and zinc.

More than ever today, the emphasis must be on salvage and on further restrictions of an already restricted civilian economy.

— We Can Lose This War —
We must forget that we are the richest country in the world. Until the war is won, we must live as though the U. S. A. were a poorer country. Work clothes will have fewer buttons, fewer buckles, fewer pockets and less cloth. But what are a few buttons and buckles to us on the Home Front?

We're going to have to give up a lot of things—already have given up many. These many things, too, are unimportant in comparison to our liberty and our freedom, for which we willingly sacrifice to preserve.

"Materials! Materials! Iron, steel, copper, cloth, food!" cry the hungry. We must not only give up many things to meet this demand. We also must take the offensive on the Home Front and continue to save and salvage every bit of material we possibly can find, if that material is needed in our war effort.

— Everyone Must Help —
War time transportation is another of the many keys to victory. Production on a huge war scale is a matter of distribution—a matter of getting the materials to processing plants, thence to fabricating factories, to the points of final assembly and ultimately to where it is needed on the fighting fronts.

Our transportation systems can do their job only if civilian demands on these systems are cut to the barest possible minimum. This, we are doing. This, you must do. Don't make unnecessary trips.

Likewise, every time the big rubber tires of a delivery truck revolve, they bring nearer the time when that truck must be laid up. Whether our five million trucks serve America until the war is won depends upon the assistance of those on the Home Front.

Plan ahead when you buy, buy for as long a period as possible. This means fewer trips for the trucks. Carry your own packages. For years, we have depended on department stores and groceries, laundries and dry cleaners, bakeries and dairies and drug stores for all sorts of deliveries which were convenient—but unnecessary.

— We're ALL at War —
The Office of Price Administration denies it plans to add new commodities to the rationing program. The rumors arose from OPA's plan to prepare rationing machinery for future emergencies. Part of this plan is "a universal rationing book which, placed in the hands of every citizen in the country, could be used for the rationing of any commodity or article in which a shortage occurred."

— Share and Share Alike —
Admiral D. Leahy, the President's chief of staff, in a recent radio speech said: "This is the time to make our stand. We dare not be reckless with the fate of our own country. We dare not throw away the fate of the world."

NORTHVILLE—Northville and Plymouth expect to be using natural gas within three weeks.—Record.

BRIGHTON—Don L. Linsley, of Allegan, has been busy this past week obtaining oil leases in the southwest corner of Brighton township, preparatory to starting an oil well. He reports most satisfactory progress and states that L. L. Ferrine, drilling contractor from Allegan, will arrive this week and start drilling the test well, as soon as the rest of the landowners have leased.—Argus.

MILAN—Milan's only monument or memento of the first World War will go into the heap of scrap metal being collected in this community in the fight against the Axis in the second World War. The army field piece, which saw service overseas in 1917-18 which now stands in the Memorial circle in Marble Park Memorial Cemetery, will be dismantled, broken up and the metal will be turned over to the steel makers. For the second time in the memory of the veterans of the first World War, the steel and iron will be used to help defeat Germany in a war.—Leader.

PLYMOUTH—Did the boys of Uncle Sam's navy who were in Detroit last Saturday, have a "royal" feast on sandwiches and cakes? You may know that they did, for some 520 of the tastiest sandwiches ever made in Plymouth or anywhere else, disappeared as if by magic after they had been left at the USO center for boys in the navy located in the Barlum Tower in Detroit. It seems that every chapter of the Eastern Star in Wayne county has been designated one Saturday during the year to provide sandwiches and cakes for the boys in service who might happen to be in Detroit on Saturdays. Last Saturday, according to Mrs. Gustaf Lundquist, worthy matron of the Plymouth chapter of the Eastern Star, was Plymouth's day to provide one of the USO centers in Detroit with goodies for the naval fighting lads. And were the members of the Chapter busy last Friday night and early Saturday morning? Not only did they make 520 sandwiches, but they baked so many cakes that it proved a problem to get them down to Detroit.—Mail.

How good a driver are you? Can you answer this question?

If a pedestrian starts to cross the street at an intersection on the "go" signal but the light flashes "stop" before he reaches the other side, does he continue to have the right of way over vehicles until he gets across?

Many drivers make mistakes in this situation. Do you? Is the responsibility here entirely with the pedestrian or with the driver?

Here is the answer: It is the responsibility of the driver, in such a case, to see that pedestrians are permitted to get to the sidewalk.

Don't Pour Your Vitamins
Down the Sink

In a recent article on vegetable cookery, the Journal of Home Economics says: "Heed the warning about pouring your vitamins down the sink. If the maximum amount of vitamin C is to be brought to the table, vegetables should be cooked in just enough water to keep them from boiling dry."

Vitamin C is the vitamin needed to provide proper development for teeth and bones and to maintain the strength of blood vessels. Many vegetables are good sources of Vitamin C, but if not cooked with the thought of preserving the vitamin, a goodly portion may be lost.

To get precious vitamins and minerals in vegetables to the table, follow these four rules: 1—Cook in as little water as possible. 2—Cover while cooking to hasten process. 3—Cook the shortest possible time. 4—Use cooking water in soups, etc.

Every State Has Wild Roses
The distribution of the native varieties of wild roses in North America is extensive and surprisingly uniform. "Roses are found," says Thomas M. Little of the department of agriculture, who is a geneticist in the bureau of plant industry, "in every section from the Arctic Circle to Mexico. Not a state in the United States nor a province in Canada is without its wild roses. Therefore, there is hope that plant breeders may find the native species useful in developing roses ideally suited to all sections of the continent."

Deep Down
Scientists state that cosmic rays are felt 1,600 feet down in rock.

PITTSBURGH PAINTS

To Webster . . . the chrysanthemum is "an ornamental plant of the aster family". To us . . . it's a subtle blending of tawny, flaming color! We like our own definition better . . . just as you'll like best the subtle blending of famous Pittsburgh Paint Colors better. You'll like the tawny hues and the gorgeous greens for some of your rooms . . . and for others you'll want pastel blue, or dusty pink or sophisticated oyster white. Come in to see us sometime . . . soon. We're looking forward to your visit and to discussing your color problems with you.

TWILIGHT LEAGUE

By Rolly Spaulding

Standings	W	L	Pct.
Spaulding Chevrolet	12	3	.800
Kimunity	7	6	.538
Cassidy Lake	7	7	.500
Chelsea Spring	7	7	.500
Central Fibre	6	7	.462
Federal Screw	3	12	.200

Thursday, Aug. 13 — Spaulding Chevrolet 14, Cassidy Lake 2.

Monday, Aug. 17 — Federal Screw 12, Cassidy Lake 6.

Tuesday, August 18 — Chelsea Sp. 6, Spaulding Chev. 2.

Thursday, Aug. 20 — Central Fibre vs. Kimunity.

Friday, Aug. 20 — Central Fibre vs. Chelsea Spring; Kimunity vs. Cassidy Lake (unless already played).

PLAYOFFS start Monday, Aug. 23 with the managers of the teams making the playoff series to be notified of the spot and playing date this Saturday. In order to qualify for the playoff series the team average of wins and losses must be 500 or better and one look at the league standings shows that the three scheduled games are absolute counters.

Spaulding Chevrolet is in the playoffs for sure and Federal Screw is out. The rest are right on the fence.

Central Fibre must beat both Kimunity and Chelsea Spring to qualify.

Kimunity could drop one of their two scheduled games with Central Fibre and Cassidy Lake and still qualify.

Cassidy Lake has to win over Kimunity and Chelsea Spring must knock over Central Fibre to qualify.

From all indications the playoff schedule will consist of three teams: Spaulding Chevrolet, Kimunity and Chelsea Spring, but with two other teams like Cassidy and Central Fibre, indication means very little.

There is one stipulation to the playoff, however, and that being that each team must have one bat (not broken) and one ball (cover on and approved by umpire) to start the game. No implication to any particular team meant, George.

Also, all teams who haven't as yet turned in their spare disability fund must do so at once—no team qualifying for the playoff may take the field without attending to this little matter beforehand.

Therefore, let's have each player accompanied by one buck get in touch with his team manager immediately.

INVITATION to you three people who made through this column occasionally who are not playing on any of the teams—on behalf of the Twilight Softball League I want to invite you to be our guests at the playoff series, starting Monday, Aug. 24.

Haircuts for Lambs To Be a War Fashion

Michigan lambs will get extra haircuts months or weeks before they go to market if Michigan lamb feeders and shepherds fill the war production board request for shearing pelts designed to clothe aviators.

A shearing is the skin of a lamb having a short wool growth or the pelt of a sheep that has been shorn shortly before or after slaughter.

More than a fourth of the annual state crop of a million lambs, native and western feeders, will be clipped if the goal of at least 250,000 shearing pelts out of Michigan is realized.

From all states the demand is for more than 15 million such pelts to make 1,500,000 suits for aviators.

C. G. Randall of the Farm Credit Administration and member of the U. S. D. A. shearing committee co-operating with the federal War Production Board has named a Michigan committee to further the preparation of shearings within this state. Members are Paul Finnegan, manager of the Michigan Wool Cooperative Marketing association, and two Michigan State College men, E. L. Benton, extension specialist in animal husbandry and Don Stark, livestock marketing specialist.

Sheep grow from two to three inches of wool in 12 months. That gives an indication of proper shearing time, explains Mr. Benton. Shearing pelts carrying from a half to an inch of wool can grade No. 1 for use in the body part of the flyer's suit. Pelts grading No. 2 carry from a quarter to a half inch length of wool and are used for pants, boots, helmets and gloves.

Provisions to repay lamb producers for the extra work have been made. Freshly shorn lambs normally sell for a dollar to a dollar and a half under lambs carrying full wool. Pelts prices have been set at a maximum of $2.15 for No. 1 and $1.50 for No. 2 and the farmers will have the short-wool for marketing elsewhere.

Shepherds are urged to vary the shearing according to the time left before lamb marketing. Standard shearing combs shear an animal tight to the skin. A comb called "45" leaves about a half pound of wool on the animal and a Texas goat comb leaves approximately a pound of wool.

Michigan's sheep population numbers approximately 750,000, including ewes. These furnish approximately 700,000 market lambs. Another 200,000 to 300,000 lambs normally are imported into the state and fed out to market size. Representatives of the Michigan Cooperative Wool Marketing association are offering wool grading and marketing service at cost to Michigan farmers who clip lambs to supply shearing pelts.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I: Jeff Curtis and his wife, Lee, are already on their way to Terra Libre when he receives a note from Zora Mitchell warning him not to come. Jeff learns from a long distance call to his friend Jerry McInnis that Zora's husband has been killed under suspicious circumstances and that it is his job as chief engineer for a fruit company that Jeff has been called to.

CHAPTER II: When they arrive in Terra Libre, they are met by Jerry McInnis, who tells Jeff that the death of Zora's predecessor, Mitchell, was murder. Jerry also tells him that there is "something" going on, but "nothing that you can put your finger on."

CHAPTER III: They meet Jeff's employer, Senor Montaya, who tells them that Zora Mitchell has "committed suicide." Both Jeff and Lee agree that Zora Mitchell was not the sort of person you would expect to commit suicide.

CHAPTER IV: A talk with Montaya confirms Jeff's suspicions that Zora, too, was murdered and that Montaya is somehow involved. Montaya shows Jeff pictures of Zora's body. Her fingers, clasped in a German gun, are not as tightly closed as they would be if she had pulled the trigger herself. Photographs of Mitchell's body show that his wounds did not bleed much. Jeff knows that means that he was probably already dead before they were made. The situation is tense, but Jeff does not disclose his suspicions to Montaya.

CHAPTER V: On a tour of inspection with Montaya, Jeff meets Bill Henderson and Sista Monahan and, is surprised at their apparently friendly attitude.

CHAPTER VI: Jeff has a talk with Monahan after he finds a warning note in his bag. Monahan, too, expresses a feeling that there is "something" wrong, but cannot find out what it is.

Jeff's man's name is Emilio Vargas. Tomorrow he will report to you. It is my wish that he go everywhere with you when you are out on the job. Everywhere. Please, Mr. Curtis, observe this closely: You will find him a competent stenographer and quite helpful in relieving you of minor details.

Curt still made no answer. He commenced to fiddle with his pipe. Montaya, after one sidelong glance, paid attention to the tracks before him.

Curt pondered. A bodyguard for himself? That seemed to hint at danger to the Chief Engineer. Danger with its roots in business rivalry? Danger, as he'd thought briefly last night, from a personal enemy of Montaya, striking through an important subordinate? That would be a subtle sort of vengeance.

Well, there was Henderson's visit Saturday night to look forward to. He'd make the man talk, and talk plenty. Curt leaned back in his corner of the seat and relaxed for the rest of the trip.

In the morning Emilio Vargas reported at Curt's office. He was a slick looking fellow, with sharp features, olive-tinted skin, snapping eyes. "He had pointed teeth, and perfumed pomade glued his black hair flat to his skull. A revolver, a fancy chased affair in a holster that had seen service, hung at his side. From his mouth dropped one of the native, sickly-sweet, brown-jacketed cigarettes.

Curt found Emilio a good guide and untiring in the saddle. Furthermore, the young man was as good at taking dictation in English as Montaya had said. So he was an asset. He was also company of a sort, and for a day or two. But looking ahead, Curt knew how irksome a bodyguard would become. In the two days allotted to it, Curt completed his inspection of the engineering work throughout the tract. On the drainage job he met two more old-timers he'd known when with Associated. They were cut off from contact and hadn't heard of Zora Mitchell's death until Curt spoke of it. However, Emilio was close at hand and there was no discussion to be had with either Steve Harvey or Herb Lawson aside from shop talk.

Friday morning he settled down in his office to a study of maps and progress reports, hydrographic charts, and various data of his own, hoarded from his tour of work north of the Negro a few years ago. Much of it appeared here.

By noon on Saturday he was ready to start dictating memoranda to Emilio. This took three hours, during every minute of which the native smoked his brown cigarettes. Loosely packed, they burned fast, ash flew about at the slightest breath of air. He ran through two packages of them in this time, and Curt marvelled that the man was able to work with his right eye constantly screwed against the smoke which curled up.

First impressions, suggestions, questions of the work at last on paper and out of the way. Curt phoned Montaya for an appointment early on Sunday, then went home. It was his first breathing space since arriving six days ago.

He played with the children for two hours. Curt took quickly to Zora Mitchell's small daughter. The shyness of her first few days had worn off in the lively company of Buddy and Chuck, and her loneliness for her mother was gradually fading. Lee had seen to that.

Very little was said during the run to Tempujo, which took scarcely thirty minutes. On the lower badly ballasted stretches the car rocked dangerously. Young Lister chewed gum incessantly, vigorously; Montaya smoked his oversize Turkish cigarettes, lighting one from another—he was on his third as they hit the many switches of the storage yards. Dr. Berry dozed.

Henderson was stretched out on an examination table in the dispensary, in charge of Dr. Fisher, a newly graduated interne from the States. Dr. Fisher's chief duties at Tempujo had been dishing out quinine or bandaging minor hurts of the laboring force, and the present case seemed to be beyond him.

But so was it beyond his superior, Dr. Berry, straightened up after an examination of only a few seconds, to shake his head.

"Hopeless," he said bluntly. "Both legs broken, and several ribs—at least five or six; a blow on the back of the head that has probably fractured the skull; the chest caved in, one lung punctured. It's a wonder he wasn't killed instantly—or that he's lived this long."

Bill Henderson was still alive, though unconscious, and frothing pink at the mouth in his wracking efforts to breathe. He'd lost a great deal of blood. Young Fisher kept swabbing the lips clean with gauze.

"He can't last more than a few minutes at most."

Still about Henderson was the smell of raw whiskey. Curt's thoughts were bitter. He'd seen so many men—good men, clean of heart—lose out here in the tropics because of drink. Now, Bill Henderson. And only a few days ago Bill had said he'd been on the wagon for some time. To be sure, "some time" with him might not mean what it would to another, but would he have gone to drinking to night, when expected for dinner at San Alejo? That wasn't like the old Bill.

CHAPTER VIII

Also present were a lieutenant and uniformed aid from the Tempujo comandancia. During the entire scene they said nothing aloud, only whispered to each other as they made notes. Extraordinarily respectful, these two hombies. Of the presence of death, or Senor Montaya? Curt was aware of them only subconsciously. He stared down at Bill Henderson. A severe blow on the back of the head; Dr. Berry had said.

An ideal! Reaching out, Curt rolled back one eyelid of the unconscious man, then the other. Both eyes were clear. One pupil was contracted, the other dilated; that was the concussion. But the whites were clear! Curt compressed his lips. He lifted the square of gauze that hid the mangled chest. The stain of the linia versicolor was there, but it wasn't red—it was scarcely copper pink.

When Henderson was drunk this area of his skin became fiery, his eyes bloodshot. But he'd just lost a great deal of blood. How much would that affect the skin? And if he'd drunk only a few minutes before the accident, perhaps there wouldn't have been time for the eyes and the skin to betray the fact.

Curt became aware of the surprise of the doctors; that Montaya was eying him closely. The two men from the constabulary had ceased whispering in mid-sentence to watch. The photographer alone paid Curt no attention. Still champing on his gum, he was setting up his equipment.

"How did it happen?" asked Curt, bitterly.

Dr. Fisher gave them the story. Henderson lived at Tempujo in the same building which housed the young doctor, a bachelor quarters. It was a sort of hotel for the single white men working here. Fisher knew that Henderson had shaved and showered after coming in from work, then changed into whites; that he planned to run up to San Alejo.

"He asked me if I wanted to go along," Fisher said. "But I couldn't, not having arranged previously for relief. I don't think he'd had a drink at that time, when he went to the shower room."

However, doors were never locked here, and were carelessly left ajar more often than closed. Passing Bill's room later, after Henderson had gone, Fisher had noticed a half empty bottle and glass on Henderson's table.

"That didn't seem strange," he said. "I thought nothing of it at the time."

From there on Fisher had to reconstruct the unfortunate man's movements. Henderson first went to the dispatcher's office for an okay on his trip; that much was fact. But the truck wasn't clear. So Henderson drove to the end of the yard, threw a switch, and backed his motorcar onto a siding to let the incoming train pass on into the yard.

"out the track would be clear for him."

Apparently his drinking had befuddled his brain so that he'd forgotten to throw back the switch. The incoming train, a locomotive and three flats, took his siding and plowed head-on into the motorcar, telescoping it, throwing its engine back against Henderson.

Young Lister had by now got his pictures here. The others followed him soberly out into the yard where he took pictures of the wrecked car, now a mass of junk. There was nothing more to be done, so the four men headed back to San Alejo.

Of accident. There is no excuse for drinking to excess. More than once I have thought of establishing a rule that any employee becoming drunk on the grounds shall be let out at once. But I can't do that," he shrugged.

No one answered. Suddenly Curt remembered the two khaki-clad police representatives. He wondered. Did their whispering and note-taking constitute an "investigation"? Was this kind of inquest held in the cases of Mitchell and his wife? More than likely, he thought. Without a doubt Montaya "owned" the police, and it wasn't to his advantage to stir up any fuss.

Curt told Lee about the accident without dressing up the story. Gave her the simple facts without the gory details. She was silent for some minutes.

"Then," "Jeff," she said quietly, "I'm no fool. What's the answer? This is the third death by violence here in less than three weeks!"

Curt was sitting on the low couch-hammock on the porch, bent forward, elbows on knees. His hands were busy with his pipe. Lee dropped into the hammock beside him.

"What's strange about it?" he returned at last. But he didn't lift his eyes to hers. "There's always a lot of drinking and sometimes sudden deaths among construction workers in a place like this. You know that. It was so in the earlier days of Associated across the river."

He reached for her hand, pulled her closer to him.

"But—" There was a catch in her voice. "Oh, darling, darling, be careful, be so very careful. If anything should happen to you—" "Don't worry your head about that, sweetheart. There's no danger of anything happening to me. I can stay out of trouble."

His lips brushed her brows, her lids. He roughed the hair at the base of her neck and held her close.

"Nothing's going to happen to me," he whispered again.

There was a Catholic church at San Alejo, and a small nondenominational chapel; between them a burial ground. It was here Mitchell and his wife now lay side by side. Service was said over Bill Henderson's body early Sunday morning, and he was lowered into the ground before the sun was high.

Lee clung close to Curt during these last rites, and Curt could feel her trembling. She dabbed at her eyes and turned homeward as Curt went on to his office where Montaya was to join him for their first major discussion of the engineering work Curt had taken over.

While waiting for the Spaniard, Curt pawed over in his mind this chain of deaths. All three were so apparently what they seemed to be—a grudge killing, a suicide from grief, a drunk's accident. Yet there was that telltale coincidence among them. All three victims had known something. There were, too, a few details which just didn't fit. They haunted Curt.

One was the fact that Montaya's letter offering Curt this job was written before Mitchell's body was discovered by a trackwalker.

Another, not only was Zora Mitchell very definitely not a neurotic type, but where would she get hold of in the Mitchell household—a foreign make of gun?

And, though it was not out of character for Bill Henderson to have taken a drink, it was certainly out of character for Bill to forget that switch even if he'd been rolling drunk! Bill was a railroad man!

Curt's thoughts harked back to Mitchell. What was it the man had "known"? He'd done some muttering about sitting on a "powder keg." He couldn't have meant revolution, for that wouldn't have upset Mitchell. He'd been through them before in this country. No American who with his tobacco pouch. He now flung it to the desk, angrily and jumped to his feet.

"I'm an engineer, not a sleuth. Maybe Mitchell did know something, but I don't, and the whole thing is none of my business!" But it was, and he knew it. Walking in at that moment, Montaya raised smoothly clipped brows as he saw Curt's congested face.

"I was only thinking," said Curt, in violent explanation, "what a shame it is that liquor can't be outlawed."

"I quite agree, Mr. Curtis," said Montaya gravely. "I will not permit drunkenness among my key men at any time, on the job or off, as you know from your contract. Of course, among construction workers I've shrugged."

"But let us get to work. You have not had much time with your so charming family since arriving. You will want the day with them. I have gone over your memoranda carefully."

One of Curt's suggestions had been to bring in some additional draglines and bulldozers, and to speed up the work in two shifts per day, using flood lights for the few hours of darkness they'd overlap.

"Two shifts of work, it is a good idea," Montaya agreed. "As for more equipment, I have two three-yard shovels now on order. They should arrive soon."

"You'll need more," Curt answered. "But when the work for such equipment is completed? It will be a lot of money to have tied up."

"There's more work here for such machines than you think. You're going to install overhead irrigation when the more important work is out of the way. You plan to pump from the rivers, but I can show you a better way."

Curt strode to the huge photographic map and picked up the pointer.

SCOUT PATROLS ASKED TO PLAN FOR STRONG PROGRAM

All of the scout patrols in Chelsea are being requested to prepare themselves for a strong autumn program, including recruiting in full strength. Each patrol should have at least six members and may build up a membership as large as eight. Each patrol is under the direction of a scout patrol leader and three or four patrols are supervised by a scout master and troop committee.

Special stress is being laid on scouting organization this fall because of the great number of calls to assist in war effort. The opportunity of scouts to aid their community and country in various defense tasks is greater now than at any time in history.

Training courses for messengers will be announced soon, as well as other specialized and basic training courses for scouts and leaders. Scout masters and commissioners will meet at the Michigan Union on Wednesday evening, September 16, to arrange final details for ushering at the home games at the U. of M. stadium.

The first game will be held on Saturday, September 26. While definite assignments have not been arranged it is estimated that about 12 scouts from Chelsea will assist at this first game. The Chelsea Scoutmaster is H. H. Moore.

"Shooting Fish"

In the waters adjacent to the East Inlet there is a fish which the natives call "the shooting fish" because from a distance of five or six feet this fish can eject from its mouth a drop of water which will knock an insect from its perch on a leaf or reed into the water.

Nero Fiddles While
Rome Burns

This modern parallel of the Nero escapade is found in a front page story of the Ann Arbor News dated August 13, 1942 under the heading "Blackout Test Mixes Success and Failure." Supposing that Marshal
Timoshenko won on a vacation during the present battle between the Russians and the Germans. How long would Marshal Timoshenko be a Marshal or how long would it be before the Germans took over all of the Caucasuses? In the parallel above mentioned our County Commander of the C. D. C. was on a vacation near Iskandard during our Tri-State Blackout. Do you think that is the proper place for a commander to be during a battle? As your next Sheriff of Washtenaw County I will be on the job during every blackout whether it is a test or the real thing. Vote for A. C.
Gaston for Sheriff, Sept. 15.

Let's reopen the Briggs murder
